EDISON—The Awakening of John Bond (Dramatic)
ESSANAY—The Madman (Dramatic)
GAUMONT—Jimmy Tricks the Landlady (Comedy)
GAUMONT—The Challenge (Dramatic) 525
C. G. P. C.—The Secret of the Confessional (Dramatic)
SELIG—A Frontier Girl's Courage (Dramatic)
VITAGRAPH—The Hypnotist (Comedy)
VITAGRAPH—A Slight Mistake (Comedy)

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 6th, 1911.

EDISON—John Brown's Heir (Comedy)
ECLIPSE—The Luckless Banker (Dramatic)
PATHE—Hobo Luck (American Comedy) 1000
KALEM—The Long Arm of the Law (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—Sins of the Father (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Black Chasm (Indian Dr.)

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 7th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—The Failure (Dr.)
ESSANAY—The Long Strike (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—Love's Labor Lost (Comedy) 1000
MELIES—A Western Girl (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—The Poisoned Arrow (American Drama) .....
C. G. P. C.—French Cuirassier Maneuvers (Military) ....
SELIG—The Maid at the Helm (Dramatic) 1000

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 8th, 1911.

EDISON—The Heart of Nickette (Dramatic)
ESSANAY—Getting Even with Emily (Comedy) .....
ESSANAY—Stray Bullets (Comedy)
KALEM—Too Much Realism (Comedy)
C. G. P. C.—Eva's Faithful Furniture (Comedy) .....
C. G. P. C.—Gathering and Preparing Cocoanuts in the Philippines (Industrial) .....
SELIG—The Plumber (Comedy) 696
SELIG—A Day with a Circus (Novelty) 400
VITAGRAPH—War (Military Drama) 1000

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9th, 1911.

EDISON—The Daisy Cowboys (Comedy)
ESSANAY—A Frontier Doctor (Western Drama)
GAUMONT—Camoens, the Portuguese Shakespeare, Lisbon, 1578 (Historical Drama) 619
GAUMONT—Important Scenes in Paris, France (Sc.).. 320
LUBIN—The Teamster (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Her Little Slipper (American Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—His Wife's Secret (Dramatic)

FILM FOR SALE 300 Reels Independent Film—Imp—Bison—Nestor, Etc.—No Junk—Renovated—Fine Condition—10 to 25 Posters—Price $10.00 to $12.50.

FRENCH FILM RESTORING CO., Columbus, Ohio

EXHIBITORS' CORNER

Watch this space every week

It will always convey a new message to you Mr. Exhibitor that will help you increase your Box Office receipts

Special Litho Posters for Licensed Features Arrah-na-Pogue, Blackbeard, Cain and Abel, Love At Gloucester Port, Colleen Bawn, Two Orphans, The Battle, Foul Play and many others. One sheet (28 x 42) 15c. each. Three sheets, 30c. each, 8 sheets, 75c. each.

COMPLETE STOCK OF A. B. C. AND ALL OTHER LICENSED POSTERS, 15c. EACH; VITAGRAPH, 10c.
AMERICA'S POPULAR PHOTO-PLAYERS. COMPLETE SET OF 10 (full sheet size) FOR $2.00 POSTAGE PREPAID

Send money order or N. Y. Draft. No personal checks or C. O. D.

Exhibitors' Advertising & Specialty Co., ARTHUR D. JACOBS, President; BEN TITLE, Secy. and Treas. 105 East 14th St., N. Y.

"TOO MUCH REALISM" (Kalem).

Whether the Kalem players were in earnest, or whether they were pulling a bit of sarcastic comment upon the "Western photoplay," those who see the Kalem picture entitled "Too Much Realism" will have to decide for themselves. Aside from that it might be characterized as a fine bit of horseplay and, as such, probably more in keeping with the spirit of the West than most of the so-called "Western pictures."

The idea is that one of the cowgirls with a picture company gets tired of the usual method of making Western pictures and determines to make a real one. While the company is rehearsing a regular picture, she goes to the property wagon and appropriates a stock of wigs and stuff and then gets the rest of the girls in on the sport. They make up as cowboys and break in on the rehearsal of the regular picture, lassooing the camera and the director and demoralizing the whole outfit.

Scene from "Too Much Realism" (Kalem).

The sheriff is there and, thinking this part of the picture, almost laughs his head off. Some expostulation is required on the part of the regular company to convince him that the interlopers are really outlaws. When he gets the idea he organizes a posse and goes after them. In the meantime the masqueraders are starting things all over the county, finally kidnapping a woman and making away with her. But the sheriff overtakes and brings them all back prisoners to the county jail, where they are put away for thirty days.

Joke or not, there is a lot of fun in the picture.

FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL FILMS.

The Feature & Educational Film Company, of Cleveland, recently incorporated in Ohio, has entered the importing and manufacturing field as an independent concern, and plans to handle only feature films of from one to four reels each, to be released at the rate of one a week. The president of the concern is Mr. E. Mandelbaum, a widely-known picture man. He has been in the film business since its infancy and at present also is president of the Lake Shore Film and Supply Company of Cleveland.

The first two feature subjects released by the F. & E. Company are "Zigomar" and "The Aviator." The first is in three reels, depicting the life of a noted criminal who terrorized every country in Europe by his daring acts. The pictures for this subject were taken in nine different countries. "The Aviator" is a thrilling dramatic story in which a well-known French aviator, Flarion, performs remarkable aerial feats with a woman in his biplane as a passenger. These two subjects are being sold by the state and territory system. The F. & E. Company's method of disposing of its products will be the state and territory rights method, and its plan is to supply exchanges and managers throughout the country with features, for which there is a big demand.

WIRELESS, HERE'S YOUR INFORMATION.

In reply to a request from "Wireless," Boston, Mass., Clarence E. Sinn wishes to say that the "Indian War Dance," by Bellstedt, is published by John Church & Co., Cincinnati, Ohio. It ought to be on sale by local dealers. Ask yours to procure it for you.

LOS ANGELES.

Motion picture manufacturers, as a whole, ought to be grateful to Mr. W. N. Selig, who was the first to discover the photographic advantages of Southern California. Operating there this winter will be the American, Biograph, Bison, Vitagraph, Essanay, Kalem, Melies and Nestor companies. The World has received a letter from Dave Horsley, of the Nestor, praising the climate and scenery and stating that he has decided to permanently locate there. The Nestor studio is in Hollywood, a suburb of Los Angeles. A developing plant has been rushed into operation and work is being pushed forward on other buildings. The Nestor Company have already made several negatives and will continue with the "Desperate Desmond" series, which has caught the public fancy. World readers may expect a review of the first Nestor pictures from the Los Angeles studio in next week's issue.

Mr. C. O. Baumann, president of the Bison Company, is also in Los Angeles, and has organized an entirely new stock company. A World reviewer was shown the first sample print from the new company and does not hesitate to say that it is the best he has ever seen bearing the Bison trademark. Tom Ince, the new director, deserves to be complimented on the way he handled a rather threadbare scenario, "The New Cook of Bar Z Ranch." The skill with which the actors are handled and the amount of "business" that is introduced make a lively and convincing reel out of an apparently trivial incident. The photography also is excellent, some of the scenes being of really fine pictorial quality.

On the Los Angeles Rialto.

From left to right: David Horsley, Stanley Nestor Horsley, Thos. Ricketts, Mrs. Ricketts, Miss Ada Baumann, Mrs. Baumann, Chas. O. Baumann, Mrs. Horsley.

Mr. G. Melies leaves New York this week with a retinue of new faces. It will be some time before we can see any of the work of this new company, as we are told that when Mr. Melies disbanded his old company and came East he had over six months' supply of negatives ahead.

Mr. Horsley sends us a batch of snapshots of Los Angeles scenery, one showing him in the company of two well-known chicken fanciers. The picture reproduced herewith shows a number of faces well known in the vicinity of Fourteenth Street, New York.

PERSONAL.

W. T. "Pop" Rock, accompanied by Mrs. Rock, left New York on Saturday, Nov. 18th, for an extended trip to the coast. They expect to be away until the middle of December, returning in time for the Christmas holidays.

Ingvald C. Oes, of the Great Northern Film Company, New York, made a flying trip to Chicago and other Western points last week.

F. A. Apfelbaum, of the Levi Co., went to Chicago, Sunday, Nov. 26, on business.

Next week we will feature in a special article the Belasco of moving pictures. Who is he? Who is entitled to that distinction?

To Whom It May Concern—and It Concerns You!

To all admirers of Art, and those who will be after our first release, to the thousands of my friends and the millions I am going to make, Love and Greetings:

People—I am engaged! Cupid's (not Cupidity's) arrow finally hit the target! Many suitors and wooers I've had—modesty forbids me to specify the number. There's one born every minute, but one particular minute about sixteen years ago (now, stop laughing!) it so happened that one was not born. "Mari" was "on" and didn't want to weight herself with a burden whose greatest asset was its own load. So—I just weighted! Until—a Gem came along!

Yes, everybody, the Gem Motion Picture Co. captured my heart, as it will yours. Its aim was true—and its aim, by the way, is to give the bestest and brightestest in pictorial art. I hope—and predict—you're going to like us!

I'm theirs—and yours

Truly,

Marion Leonard.

A PROMISSORY NOTE!

$ to dough-nuts Nov. 25th 1911

On and after date of our first release we Promise to Give to the Order of Any Exhibitor Films with interest

at All Exchanges

No. One Due Pretty Soon The Gem M. P. Co.

U. Kill See.

INQUIRIES

Correspondents are advised that no attention will be paid inquiries which do not give the name and address of the writers. For the purpose of reply, initials or noms de plume may be used.

Inquiry as to the private affairs of photoplayers will not be answered. This includes the question as to whether or not they are married.

No inquiries of a general nature will hereafter be answered by mail and only in special cases when a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Many correspondents ask the same question and we have initiated this department to save our own time and yet help out our readers when we can.

ELIZABETH S.—Scenarios command from $5 to $50 according to their value to the company purchasing. The stories most in demand are comedies and simple heart interest stories. Comedies must look funny when they are pictured and should not depend upon their wording for their humor.

V. G. B.—Wants to know why this paper never mentions American films, which he thinks are the best on the market. The gentleman from Maryland is invited to read his paper more closely when he will discover that these films are mentioned frequently.

JINK.—We do not know where you can get photographs of Miss Marion Leonard, but we are seeking the information, so keep your eye on this column. We do not recall that she was ever with the I. M. P.

MABEL N.—Players do not "play for the independent companies while playing for licensed pictures," nor is the reverse true. The same applies to companies under the same flag. As we have pointed out it is possible to see some players in two or more brands of film the same day, but this does not mean that the player is associated with two companies at the same time (2). The Dan in Biograph's "Dan the Dandy" must have been John Doe. It's the only name we have for Biograph players, "the real and true name being unknown" to complete the legal fiction.

ANXIOUS—In view of your glowing appreciation of Mr. Warren Kerrigan, we think it is safest to say that the studio is in California—just that.

TRAVIS RAUCH—AND OTHERS.—The "C. G. P. C.," which has recently made its appearance, stands for Compagnie Generale Pathe Cinematographique and is employed to distinguish the European product of the Pathe company from that made in this country. This is how it happens that you will sometimes see a Pathe and a C. G. P. C. on the same reel.

R. T.—Almost any company will purchase a photoplay in synopsis form if the subject is made attractive. You probably will not receive quite so much for the idea as for the same idea developed, but the difference is not always appreciable, and it might pay you to try some. The Pathe Freres (who ask that photoplay material be addressed to their studio, 1 Congress Street, Jersey City Heights) sometimes advise authors that they prefer the synopsis to the scenario. The idea is the main point.

CONSTANT READER.—The Sheriff and his brother in the Bison film of that title are George Gebhardt and Chas. E. Inslee. The picture was made in California, presumably in the vicinity of Los Angeles.

X. Y. Z.—The Edison company states that Miss Ethel Jewett is still a member of their stock company.

CLARK AND J.—Miss Sue Balfour played the Mother in "The Anonymous Letter." The Imp answers are not in yet. Look next week.

A FAN.—Mrs. Clarke, of the O'Kalem's, is the mother of Jack J. Clarke. We will locate the Vitagraph film later.

AUTHOR.—The best way to locate your produced photoplay is to watch the advertising of the company for its release date and then ask your photoplay theater manager to book it. If you are in a hurry he may learn from the exchange what house gets it for a first run. But don't look for the title of your story, look for the story itself. It frequently happens that the original title is discarded in favor of one more apt. If you can't get in touch with your local manager try and locate some exchange handling licensed or Independent films as the case may be.

J. N. C.—There are too many good riders between here and California to encourages the belief that you'll be able to get a job with a stock company. You might try the Lubin company, as they make some Western productions from the home studio, but your chance is slight at best since riders experienced in picture work are to be had in plenty.

AGNES M.—We do not handle scenarios, and wouldn't know what to do with one if we had one except to send it back to you, so save postage. You will find the advertisements of several sales agents in this paper.

M. M. R.—Last summer, in these columns, George Rockhill Craw gave directions for making a scenario into a dramatic production within the meaning of the Copyright law. He abundantly demonstrated that the trouble was more than the scant protection afforded was worth. Sometimes a dishonest employee does appropriate an idea, but it seldom happens, and you are wasting your time seeking iron-clad protection. Just send your scenario in and if it's wanted it will be paid for.

T. B. A.—We have not seen the terms of the Imp contest, but we believe that comedy scenarios found available, but not winning prizes, will be purchased by the company if the price offered is accepted by the author.

T. D.—We think the record for film production is held by the Vitagraph with "He Fell in Love with His Wife," done in about four hours, but this was a half reel with all outdoor pictures, the story being written on the spur of the moment to take advantage of some unusual garden scenes. In the way of a full reel straight production Arthur D. Hotaling seems to hold the record. He has twice made a full reel with changes of setting in less than twenty-four hours. The "Nearsighted Chaperon" was made in twenty hours, the players working all night. Another picture was recently made between 3 P. M. and 7 A. M., the title of which is not yet decided.

EDNA.—We presume that Mr. Costello would be glad to autograph one of his photographs if you send it to him, but better write and find out, first. Enclose a stamped envelope for reply and cover return postage on the photograph.

R. L.—Charles Ogle was the Sir Daniel and Harold Shaw the Nephew in Edison's "The Black Arrow." Miss Natalie Jerome was the ward. Miss Fuller is not cast in this production.

SUE.—Maurice Costello is not dead. He hasn't even been killed the last couple of weeks. No one has been killed lately by the rumor club.

PRISCILLA.—Miss Irene Shannon was the Priscilla in the Kalem "Priscilla and the Pequot." The Biograph's "Priscilla" is unnamed.

H. P.—Miss Pearl White and Crane Wilbur had the leads in Pathe's "The Power of Love." This also disposes of your question as to Mr. Wilbur.

SCENARIO.—Send a stamped and self addressed envelope to this department for a list of addresses of companies buying scenarios.

L. P. D.—You are in too much of a hurry. We believe that Mr. Cumpson will join the I. M. P. company in a week or two. He is not yet working with them. The report that Miss Lawrence is to return to the I. M. P. is incorrect.

V. B. T.—We decline to state which of the three ladies mentioned is "The most popular motion picture actress in America" because we do not know any one who does know and do not know any way of finding out short of a census. And just think of the letters we would get from the admirers of the other two! We got six pages the other day just because we said that one player was not the only good actress in the films. You don't realize what you were trying to do to us.

EVA.—There is no practical home projection machine on the market yet, but there will be presently. The Edison company has one almost ready to be presented to the public.

S. K. D.—If you could prove that you can make better pictures than those you see there is an opening for you in most of the studios, but the trouble will be that you'll not find it easy to get the chance. And why so certain that you can excell the rest? We've seen one or two first class stage managers fail miserably when they tried to adapt their ideas to the camera stage, and one was a man who gets a lump sum in four figures for staging a dramatic production at that. It would be well to make your claims less sweeping in making application to the companies, and we would suggest that you offer to make a trial production gratis.

I. D. M.—Mr. Charles Kent was the father in the Vitagraph's "Madge of the Mountains." He also directed the picture.

BERT.—The reason your earlier question was not replied to is that we do not regard matrimonial inquiries as questions, but as aggravations.

C. W. M.—Mr. Anderson not only has been an actor, but just the other day he and the company under him presented "The Man from Mexico" at the Columbia Theater, Santa Rosa, Cal. He never was a sheriff except in pictures, but he's some sheriff in the pictures.

D. E. L.—The peculiar halting stride seen in the pictures you mention has its origin in the projection room of the theater where you witnessed the presentation. Contrary to the more common fault, the operator was running the machine too slowly. Pictures are made to be shown at the rate of sixteen each second. If you see but twelve you see but three-fourths of the action really happening in that second. Usually the players seem to race through scenes because the crank is turned too quickly.

E. M. R.—There is nothing to prevent you from making adaptations of Shakespeare's plays and there is notring to compel the manufacturers to purchase them. Use your own judgment.

DOUBTFUL.—Helen Costello is the little daughter of Maurice Costello, of the Vitagraph. She has not displaced Adele de Garde but has her own line of parts.

G. D. F.—John R. Cumpson (Bumptious) goes to the Imp, not the Majestic company.

C. B. A.—Gilbert M. Anderson plays the heroes in most of the Essanay Western productions. He is also director of the western section of the company and a member of the firm. Miss Gladys Field is the girl who usually plays his sweetheart. (2) Warren Kerrigan is the American player. (3) A Biograph player.

R. S. F.—Miss Storey is not a cowgirl trained to act, but an actress who can ride.

J. A. F.—William Robert Daly played the professor in "The Co-ed Professor," and the Imp places him with the other subjects, but states that he has not been with the Essanay company in the interval. As you do not mention any of the Essanay plays in which is supposed to have appeared we cannot place that actor for you. Mr. Daly has been an Imp right along.

P. V. L.—Get-Rich-Quick Hall and Ford may have been intended as a play upon Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford, but it is evident that you did not see the Essanay film or you would know it was not a steal. It was a tramp comedy of the good, old-fashioned sort.

X. Y. Z.—Jeff in the Mutt and Jeff series is a dwarf and not a small boy, though we have seen some pictures that make him look like a youngster. The company has not announced who will play Desperate Desmond.

L. J. D.—There is nothing to prevent you from making a scenario of "Three Weeks," except the copyright on the story, the Board of Censorship, the carefulness of the manufacturers and public opinion. Outside of that you've a good chance. Your letter suggests that you would make more money writing jokes for the comic papers.

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and any one can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of three dollars ($3) cash with order, we will send by express, charges not prepaid, or $3.50 by registered mail, prepaid, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A FEW WORDS ON QUALITY

New York, October 25, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—During the past few years of my active connection with the moving picture field I have given my closest attention to photographic quality. I studied the ideas of that high-class weekly, Leslie's, and I know the value of the market by the quality of the film on the exhibition. It is natural of projection rooms such as was naturally with the product of the Association Motion Picture Manufacturers. The stability of [illegible] makes however, have not created the high quality aims. The Lubin Manufacturing Company stands supreme for excellence of independent quality that is uniform quality, and so I take my hat off to the Lubin Manufacturing Company as a credit to the Lubin name.

Now then, the question may arise as to what quality is and there no two critics may judge alike. I will give my views on the matter, as follows: freedom from granulation and lack of dust specks, sharpness of focus, a long black development with proper gradation and detail in shadows and a lack of halo effects and intrinsic and last but not least steadiness. The proper [illegible] of the moving features is an important thing, especially in the case of emotional and [illegible] comedy.

H. LAYMAN BROENING.

A "CRANK TURNER" WANTS TO KNOW.

Thomasville, Ga., Oct. 8, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—Will I am not at this stage of the game a motion picture operator. I take the liberty of writing you this letter as I have been a constant reader of the Moving Picture World long before it absorbed the Film Index. At present I am merely what one would call a crank turner, but I hope that by close application and hard study I will make an operator, for I love the game.

The Moving Picture World was not known here until I induced a local manager of a news company to handle it and now even the kids buy it to read the film synopses. One man said: When I go to the opera house I have a long time telling me of the characters, etc. In a picture show there is nothing but the pictures, so every day at noon time I glance at the titles of the pictures I have and get a one of the Moving Picture World read the synopsis and at night I enjoy the photoplay immensely, as I am familiar with the characters and scenes. I would not be without a Moving Picture World and have my newsdealer lay mine aside for me."

Why don't the manufacturers introduce the characters on each of their productions? We have only one picture house in a city between 6,000 and 10,000. But it certainly delivers the goods. It is owned and managed by M. B. Bates, operator Heywood Cone, popular Edwin Lutcher. The house was built at a total cost of $15,000 and runs only Licensed pictures. We had to-day releases. The house is the Broad Street Theater. A remarkable [illegible] is projected by Mr. Cone, using a new improved Edison.

The moving business is great in this part of Georgia and bids fair to be more. Of late Miss Lawrence has made the Lubin productions immortal in this city. Even the babies know her the minute she enters a picture and [illegible] for more. It is amazing to know the scope of her popularity. I have never seen but one Lubin picture poorly received in this city and that was "Gypsy Love." Did Miss Lawrence play the gypsy girl? I say she did and several persons discuss it. Should Miss Lawrence ever need friends she has only to come to this country to be social the rest of her life. Arthur Johnson is another person who enjoys unlimited popularity here.

Here's wishing the World the best luck in the world. Will send for a hand book soon. As ever yours, and an ardent admirer of the picture game and the Moving Picture World, I am

Yours truly, A. C. SMITH,
324 Colton Avenue, Thomasville, Georgia.

MORE RELIGIOUS TRAVESTY.

Emporia, Kan., Nov. 18, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—In the Kalem release of November 3, "The Price of Ambition," we have another one of those subjects that has religion mixed in it. When will the manufacturers learn to let religion alone when they do not know how to handle it? What is the Board of Censorship doing that they let such subjects pass? Is it composed of narrow-minded bigots that enjoy a slap at the Catholic Church?

The synopsis of this film would lead one to believe that the priest was acting as any Catholic priest should; but the film shows him in the act of kissing and hugging the woman, another man's wife. The husband appears, the wife is killed and the next scene shows the priest in the cemetery, bowed down with grief for the loss of his love. Truly a scene that would not be liable to cause a man's Catholic patrons, or any broad-minded person, to rise up and cheer. The manufacturers may say that such things happen in real life. I admit they do in some rare cases, but should it be flaunted to the public by a photoplay exhibitor? That should be left for the "daily press" and "yellow journals" that are howling themselves hoarse about the iniquity of moving picture shows. They enjoy chewing such sour morsels.

If we want to insult and disgust our Catholic patrons, as I stated before, we could put in better way than to run such subjects as this. If you can find room for this in the Moving Picture World, please publish it.

Yours truly,

P. J. CONCANNON.

A SOUL IN SYMPATHY.

Santa Cruz, Cal., Nov. 14, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World, New York:

Dear Sir—I have been appointed superintendent of Purity in Literature and Art, by the local W. C. T. U., and the moving pictures come in that line of work, so I have talked with the gentleman who runs two of the houses here, Mr. Mangelsdorf, and he advised me to write to you for any suggestions you may like to make. I wish to work in accord with all interested, to secure a constant improvement in the educational and moral character of the pictures. I wish to do this work in a way which will tend to increase the popularity of the pictures, and do not wish to do anything that could in any way infringe on the rights of others.

One way in which I thought of working was to write to each company producing pictures, praising the best pictures and [illegible]

[illegible]

HATTIE TRUESDAL,
[illegible]

TEN THEATERS DISAPPEAR—WHERE ARE THEY?

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—I am a constant reader of the World and [illegible] interested in the letters from all over the world, [illegible] and every one telling [illegible] Now, in your issue of October 21 there is a letter by [illegible] entitled, "The Movies Are Ruining Us," in which [illegible] there are on Market Street [illegible] with a distance of four blocks and he says he used to [illegible] in this city twelve years. I [illegible] to be sure, and if I could find [illegible]

E. M. WILLIAMS.
San Francisco, Cal.

THE WINNER OF THE PRIZE

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—I [illegible] to you some [illegible] I hold a piece in my hand in front of the eye. [illegible] an air bubble and [illegible] it expanded. The [illegible] well, nearly as [illegible] but is not the definition of expansion. A boosting [illegible] any objects third [illegible]

Make my check payable to the Motiograph [illegible] them. I'll pay expressage from the S. F. branch. Very [illegible]

C. Y. BAISLY,
Art Director, 1911 [illegible]
Los Gatos, Cal.

AN ERROR THAT SHOULD BE CORRECTED

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 30, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—I notice in your November 4 issue that you have a [illegible] the Gem. As I own this theater, I desire to draw your attention to a misstatement that has been made in your [illegible] ford's Vaudeville Exchange appear in this house. Now Mr. [illegible] nothing whatever to do with my theater, and all [illegible] by F. Q. Doyle, of [illegible] of this city. Your correspondent seems to have been [illegible] all through his write-up, and his mistakes might prove rather inconvenient for me.

I desire to thank you for your courtesy [illegible] trust that you will give the other matter your attention.

Yours very truly,

FRANK H. TALBOT.

WOES OF THE SCENARIO WRITER

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—On September 13 I submitted a scenario to a prominent film manufacturer, and, but a few days later, it was returned, with the remark that it was an old idea. Thinking that it would be useless to attempt to sell what was considered an old idea, I laid it aside.

On November 2, which, I believe, is ample time to put a photoplay on the market, a film, with the basic idea of my scenario, was released by this company. I do not suppose that the company is hard up for "new ideas," and I don't think that they should use any idea, new or old, without letting the author have the satisfaction of knowing it is his own work.

These statements, or whatever you may call them, may be incoherent and seem to come from a raging mind, maybe it does, but it does seem strange that this same company should get out an old idea after condemning it as such. This may have been caused by coincidence, but I fear not.

Thanking you for your valuable space, I am, yours respectfully,

"DISGUSTED."

COMET COMPANY OFF TO VIRGINIA.

George LeSoir and his company of Comet players have left for Norfolk, Va., for several weeks' stay, to make use of the southern and historical country for a series of pictures which are soon to be released by this company. Mr. LeSoir has but recently been engaged by the Comet Film Company. With the fate of Comet pictures in the hands of Mr. Gray and Mr. LeSoir, we can assure our readers that the productions of this new company will compare favorably with the best on the market. It is the intention of Mr. Gray to take his company of photoplayers south, as soon as Mr. LeSoir's company return from their trip.

Song Slide Releases.

A. L. Simpson, Inc.

"Boot Black Rag"—Pub. by Song Writers' Music Pub. Co.
"Bring Me Your Message of Love, White Dove"—Pub. by J. Fred Helf Co.
"I'd Like to Take a Chance with You"—Pub. by Charles I. Davis.
"Just You and I"—Pub. by J. D. Shipman.
"Pretty Montezuma Maid"—Pub. by C. I. Davis.
"Tell Me Sweet Rose"—Pub. by F. B. Haviland Pub. Co.
"I'm Going to Take the Train for Home, Sweet Home"—Pub. by Shapiro Music Pub. Co.

Levi Co.

"When a Girl Whose Heart Is Breaking Loves a Boy Who Doesn't Care"—Pub. by Shapiro.
"Sweet Old Rose"—Pub. by H. A. Weymann & Sons.
"Two Letters"—Pub. by Shapiro.
"The Quaker"—Pub. by Shapiro.
"Sarah's Hat"—Pub. by the Shapiro Music Pub. Co.
"They Don't Speak to Each Other Now"—Pub. by Shapiro Music Pub. Co.

"Lovie Dear"—Pub. by Rogers Bros. Music Co.
"If I Had You"—Pub. by Jos. Morris Co.
"Gee! But It's Tough When There's No One Around to Call You Dear"—Pub. by J. Fred Helf Co.
"Heart of My Heart"—Pub. by Leo Feist.
"Won't You Come Back Lucinda"—Pub. by F. B. Haviland Pub. Co.
"Under the Old Oak Tree"—Pub. by Tell Taylor.
"I Just Met the Fellow Who Married the Girl I Was Going to Get"—Pub. by Leo Feist.
"Treasures of the World Are Mine"—Pub. by J. W. Stern.
"That's Some Honey Moon"—Pub. by Bostonian Pub. Co.

Excelsior Slide Co.

"Soul of Love"—Pub. by Blood, Koehler & Co.
"Welcome Home"—Pub. by Rogers Brothers.
"Jungle Glide"—Pub. by Kendis & Paley.
"Roll a Little Pill for Me"—Pub. by M. Witmark & Sons.
"Light Up Your Face with a Smile"—Pub. by Gus Edwards Company.

DeWitt C. Wheeler.

"Send for Me"—Pub. by F. A. Mills.
"My Irish Girl"—Pub. by J. H. Remick & Co.
"Child Love"—Pub. by J. N. Stern & Co.
"'Way Back in Tennessee"—Pub. by F. A. Mills.
"That Haunting Melody"—Pub. by Jerome & Schwartz Pub. Co.
"Get Wise!"—Pub. by Up-to-Date Music Co.
"That's How I Want to be Loved"—Pub. by Theo. Morse Music Co.

IT IS THE POWERS WAY—AND IT'S GOOD.

A trip to the new Powers Duplex Studio reveals the sanctum of the scenario editor, who is responsible for the latest upward tendency in the scenario market. He can prove by his records that scenario writers whose material is not accepted are not kept waiting more than a few hours. In fact, he says that an inspection of his books will show that he reads an average of 40 stories a day, but that each rejected manuscript is in the mail, on its way back to the author, on the same day that it is received.

In view of the many complaints received by the Moving Picture World from writers whose material is held up for a few weeks this promptness should win for the Powers Company the co-operation of the most responsible people who are submitting scenarios to the film makers.

Mr. Powers says: "My aim is to receive sure-fire offerings from writers of acknowledged ability. This will, in the course of time, save me the labor of wading through a sea of amateur offerings. That, of course, will save me a great deal of time and I am willing to give successful writers the benefit of this economy of time in the form of dollars and cents. In other words, I look forward with pleasure to creating a rise in the price of successful manuscripts."

THE MOVING PICTURE BOY SONG.

Exhibitors who are featuring illustrated songs have a good opportunity to gain some revenue through the sale of the Kenneth Casey song, "The Moving Picture Boy." Kenneth is a member of the Vitagraph staff and has become very popular with picture fans. The song in question features Kenneth and is considered clever in both words and music. The song sells for 10c to 25c and can be purchased in lots of 100 for 6c per copy, or for 5c per copy in lots of 500. Address the publisher, M. A. Casey, 2897 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Up-to-date Advertising Ideas in Slides can be procured from the
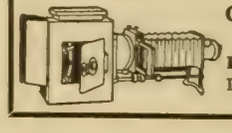
EXCELSIOR SLIDE CO.
61 West 14th Street New York, N. Y.
JUST YOU TRY IT.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
Stereopticons, Slides, Accessories


CHAS. M. STEBBINS
1028 Main St.
KANSAS CITY, MO
Large Line of Edison Goods
Established 1899

Simpson's Celebrated Slides
THE BEST MADE
A. L. SIMPSON, Inc.
113 W. 132nd St., New York

WE ARE STILL PUTTING OUT
The Best Slide Service
AT THE REGULAR RATE
If you are dissatisfied write us
THE CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE
Dept. I
6th Floor, Powers Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

The Slides that Please the Eyes
Scott & Van Altena
Special Slides for Scientific Purposes
59 Pearl Street New York City

THE IMPROVED
SPIEGEL MOTION SLIDE
Bringing out the life and action in the fullest detail. Over 200 new subjects just added to our stock. Most catchy and attractive slides on the market.
THE SLIDE THAT MOVES
Write for our Special catalogue
American Motion Slide Co., 611 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago

New improved Spot Light Song Slides feature the singer,
Patent applied for
MADE EXCLUSIVELY BY
LEVI CO., Inc. 1560 BROADWAY New York City
Demand them from your exchange.

Correspondence

NEW ENGLAND.

Manager Victor J. Morris, of Marcus Loew's Orpheum Theater, Boston, Mass., had a very exciting time of it when he found that two burglars were caught red-handed in the act of robbing the Orpheum Building Night Watchman Henry Robinson, caught the robbers and managed to keep them from getting away before the police arrived. It is learned by Mr. Morris that the same two men had been in the theater after the performance.

Mr. W. R. Rothacker, the general manager of the Industrial Moving Picture Company, has returned to Chicago, after an extended trip through the New England States. Mr. Rothacker secured a contract from a large shoe manufacturer to take a series of reels of the latest methods of making shoes. The films will be used as an advertising medium for the manufacturer and will also be of an educational character. Several other large deals were put through by Mr. Rothacker during his New England trip.

"The Golden Song Revue," which is being advertised by the Levi Company, 160 Broadway, New York City, was introduced by Marcus Loew's Orpheum Theater, Boston, Mass., and was found to be a big success. The Revue, as seen at the Orpheum, consists of singing and a chorus of the choruses of the most successful of the latest popular songs. Numerous slides, appealing to a man's funny bone are used in connection. This writer noted that these choruses were sung by a good portion of the audience a few which does not hold good when a popular ballad is rendered and the whole song is used. Managers who find themselves confronted with illustrated song trouble (a very common complaint), should look into Levi's Golden Song Revue. It is seldom that anything of this nature brings out as much genuine applause as did the Revue at the Orpheum Theater.

Mr. Charles Beaney of the Providence Opera House, Providence, R. I., is now well on the road to recovery, after an operation recently performed, and will soon be back "on the job" once more.

Mayor Fitzgerald, of Boston, Mass., has just issued a statement to the effect that any theater posting bills on walls without express permission, will be prosecuted. The mayor will also "get after" theaters placing advertising matter in vacant doorways. This applies to theaters of every kind.

The Tripoli Film Department, of 5 West 104th Street, New York City, who are showing vivid reels, depicting the scenes of the Turkish-Italian War, have sold their sole Boston rights to A. A. Kaufmann, of New York. The reels were exhibited by the Comique, Premier and Palace Theaters, Boston, all operated by the Automatic Vaudeville Company, of New York.

The reels are extremely sensational, and are proving to be business makers in Boston.

Mr. George A. Hill, of Fall River, Mass., has left that city, in order to take up the management of the Opera House, Woonsocket, R. I. The Opera House was owned by Messrs. Sheedy and Donovan, but the latter, who also managed the Opera House, sold out his share to Mr. Sheedy, and has gone to Maine. Mike E. Sheedy then decided on Mr. Hill as manager for the house, a well-known theatrical man, who should do well in his new position.

Mr. John L. Russell has received a permit to erect a moving picture theater at Belfast, Maine. Work will be immediately started, as the plans have already been passed. Mr. Russell is a Maine exhibitor.

Colonel W. G. Stanton, manager of the Central Square Theater, Lynn, Mass., has added a few "fixings" to the upholstery of his Theater. Vaudeville and daylight pictures are attracting good-sized audiences.

The Star Theater, Dover, N. H., playing vaudeville and pictures, has closed because of lack of business. The Star will probably not reopen. Manager Jack Dolan's Lyric Theater proved to be too strong a competition for the Star, as a big show is always presented.

The Park Theater, Taunton, Mass., managed by Marie Kearnes, and playing to "legitimate" road attractions, finds that big audiences cannot be had every night. Mr. Irving Moore has leased the Opera House from Marie Kearnes for three days each week, and will present a bill of vaudeville and photoplays. There is no doubt but what Mr. Moore has picked a winner, as the park is the best house in town, and will give the Music Hall, Casino, Columbia and Star, all photoplay houses, strenuous competition.

Manager T. R. Waugh, manager of the Opera House, St. Albans, Vt., found business very good in response to the Rainey-Follette Arctic pictures. These reels are playing practically the whole of New Hampshire and Vermont, and expect to cover the entire New England territory.

Mr. B. Redding is now nearly ready to have work started on his New Photoplay [illegible] West Springfield, Mass. The house is expected to seat 1200.

The Palace Theater, Boston, Mass., seems to be having a somewhat checkered career since it was purchased by the Automatic Vaudeville Company, of New York. The house opened as a vaudeville and picture house, with admission at ten cents. The price was later boosted to ten and twenty cents and twenty-five cents. Last spring the vaudeville was entirely cut out, and Independent pictures and songs were given for five and ten cents admission. This fall the same policy was continued.

The Riverside Company, which is controlling the Columbia reels for the fourteenth week of the Empire Theater, Boston, gave a special performance Saturday morning, November 16. All seats were priced at ten cents, and the performance was especially designed for children and teachers. As the prices are ranging up to one dollar, the management made considerable stir due to raise the price to ten cents. The favorable comment on this move by local business men made up for the loss.

Mr. Mat Raferty, of the Casino Theater, Providence, R. I., has resigned his position and has not as yet made any future plans.

Mr. E. H. Chandler, secretary of the Twentieth Century Club of Boston, spoke on the subject of "Children and the Moving Picture Shows," at Waltham, Mass. The lecture was given under the auspices of the Parents' Association. Mr. Chandler stated that all children are fond of theatrical entertainment, and that it was the duty of the parents to decide as to what the young folks should attend in the way of theatrical diversion. Mr. Chandler remarked that the parents of the city of Waltham should confer with the moving picture managers as to what sort of reels should be exhibited, and that the managers would be quick to respond to the parents' request for pictures that "enlighten and elevate." Mr. Chandler characterized the discovery of the cinematograph as "the key to gratifying all tastes," as it meant the ability of putting "simple life into pictures." Mr. Chandler attacked a Massachusetts moving picture law which says that, "no exhibition of pictures should be presented continuously longer than 20 minutes, to be followed by 5 minute intervals of something not a picture." Mr. Chandler called this bill the reason for the cheap vaudeville that has been introduced in Massachusetts, in order to hold the audiences over the 5 minute period. This is all absolutely true. This bill, passed by the activity of a woman without real knowledge of this industry, has done much damage to Massachusetts photoplay houses, as it is from this law that the inception of cheap vaudeville is to be traced. However, the bill is no longer a live one, and no attention is paid to it, by either managers or police. The reason given for passing the bill was that the films were tiresome on the optics, and that a 5 minute relief should be given, to relieve the strain. During this time, vaudeville in photoplay houses, was firmly planted, and it is extremely difficult to force Massachusetts managers to wean themselves from its use, stating that the public has grown to expect it, and that they dare not throw it into the discard. The above mentioned law was strictly enforced for one year, and, during that time, the damage was done.

Josephine Clement, manager of B. F. Keith's Bijou Theater, Boston, has sent Mr. W. H. Foster on a tour of inspection of several New York and Philadelphia moving picture manufacturers. Also to the Nicholas Power Plant, for the latest projection and newest ideas in animated photoplay.

A new theater, to be devoted exclusively to photoplays, is now being erected at Torrington, Conn. The owners are Messrs. Mackintosh and Strickland, who expect to use Licensed service.

A fifty thousand dollar blaze visited the Medford, Mass., Opera House and Odd Fellows Building, on Saturday, November 4. For the past year or more, the Opera House has been used bi-weekly as a moving picture house by Mr. Doherty. The fire, however, is not thought to have had its inception in the theater, but in one of the adjoining clubrooms.

In and about Boston there have been a number of "near" fires in moving picture theaters lately. This writer could name four houses at the very least, which have burned films, with a range of from 50 feet to an entire program of 4 reels. None of these facts have been in the local dailies, but it seems as if there is a lot of negligence somewhere. It would be useless to enumerate the names of these houses, but a general warning seems needed. We haven't had a disaster of this sort around here as yet that did much damage, but at the rate reels are being burned lately, something bad will occur, unless greater pains are taken in the booths.

The new scale of wages put into effect by the Boston, Mass., local operators' Union 182, is meeting with some opposition from the managers, and, so it is said, a strike of the operators is within the range of possibilities.

An Opera House for Saint Albans, Vt., is promised in the near future. The house is to seat 800, and will be of concrete, and throughout modern. The house will be used as a photoplay theater five days weekly, and as a dance hall on the sixth. At present, St. Albans has only a couple of small picture theaters, of the store show variety, and is easily able to support a first-class theater, such as is now being planned.

[illegible] has [illegible] from vaudeville and pictures to a stock company.

[illegible] Theater, Maine, which is to be [illegible] for all sorts of amusement [illegible] Lewiston Auditorium [illegible] Lewiston Square [illegible] Association, [illegible] annoyed by the [illegible] annoyed by the [illegible]

Poli's Theater, Meriden, Conn., has changed its [illegible] from vaudeville and pictures to a stock company.

[illegible] Theater, Maine, which is to be [illegible] for all sorts of amusement [illegible] Lewiston Auditorium [illegible] Lewiston Square [illegible] Association, [illegible] annoyed by the [illegible] annoyed by the [illegible]

Mr. H. Douglas Campbell, owner of the Cambridge Theater, Cambridge, Mass., has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of nearly $20,000, and with the roof [illegible] Cambridge Theater, which, by the way, has [illegible] mortgages on it. The [illegible] the theater are among the [illegible] The house has been open for less than a year [illegible] business, although it [illegible] to photoplays, and is now using the films as its program.

The Congress Hall Theater, South Boston, Mass., is to be managed by Manager [illegible] expects to use about $700 in alterations. Congress Hall is doing well with a picture program.

The Broadway Theater, Lawrence, Mass., has changed its policy from vaudeville and pictures to a stock company.

Manager Jack Watt, the picture man of Woburn, Mass., has left for Florida. Mr. Watt and his friends expect to open a string of vaudeville and picture houses along the Florida coast, and Mr. Watt is now "scouting."

The National Theater, Boston, one of the largest theaters in the world devoted to [illegible] Universal pictures, has again [illegible] the [illegible] of pictures, the second time [illegible] The prices now range to [illegible] The house started out at five, [illegible] After a spell [illegible] twenty-five cents for the front [illegible] quickly followed by a boost to [illegible] this week. Hyperion [illegible] at the National.

The B. F. Keith Interests, [illegible] the Nickel Theater, St. James, N. Y., [illegible] a new house which will seat [illegible] to be known [illegible] and will offer vaudeville and pictures. The Nickel will be torn down, to make room for the large theater. Work is to be started immediately, and it is hoped that the new house will be ready by early spring.

Local picture theaters, using [illegible] in connection with the films, are [illegible] what the recent activities of the actors will mean to them. A strenuous effort is now being made to organize the "acts" who play in New England, with a view to establishing a minimum wage scale. A meeting was held in Boston of the White Rats Actors' Union, and plans were devised to accomplish this. Besides establishing a minimum wage scale, under which scale no White Rat must work, the Union, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, wishes to unionize the New England theaters from cellar to manager, and actors who are "Rats" must only work in all union houses.

Nat Burgess, who has been in charge of Sheedy's Theater, Brocton, Mass., has left, to manage a Hartford, Conn., theater. Mr. Rodney McDonald, formerly stage manager of Sheedy's, has been promoted to manager.

Manager Greely, of the New Portland Theater, Portland, Me., found the Kinemacolor pictures to attract large business.

Jeff Callan, manager of the Lynn Theater, Lynn, Mass., has returned to his house after a short trip on business. Vaudeville and pictures are doing well at the Lynn Theater, under Manager Callan.

Manager Monk, of the Comique, Lynn, Mass., [illegible] his [illegible] to Buffalo, N. Y., [illegible] the pictures of a trip to Niagara Falls, produced under the direction of the Larkin Company, of Buffalo, soap manufacturers.

Mr. Henry Engel, manager of the Middlesex Theater, Middletown, Conn., played the Lyman Howe pictures recently, to excellent returns.

Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Hathaway, of Hathaway's Theater, New Bedford, Mass., returned to that city after a vacation in Vermont.

Messrs. Cowan and King, managers of the City Opera House, Dover, N. H., had a bad piece of luck, when, after filling their theater to the limit, they were forced to dismiss the audience and return the money. Pictures of the Rainey-Follette expedition were to be exhibited, but the projecting machine became disabled just before performance time and it was impossible to repair the machine that night.

The Raney Pictures were also exhibited by Manager H. T. Eaton, of the Opera House, Claremont, N. H.

The Savoy Theater, Washington Street, Boston, was closed Monday, October 30, but reopened Tuesday. No reason has been given and it is rumored that the Savoy is soon to close, and will be reconstructed into a Sea Grill. The house has never been anything like successful, as has been stated before in these columns. HENRY.

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

The Walker Amusement Company of Indianapolis, Ind., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000, to operate theaters and other places of amusement. The directors are: E. H. Reed, E. T. Walker and Charles Alcon.

The Fairview Amusement Company of Cincinnati, Ohio, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $6,000, to conduct a moving picture theater. The incorporators are: O. W. Kennett, Henry Siebel, Karl Lueders, John J. Hickey, George C. Kolb and Oscar E. Frenzel.

The R. and F. Company of Cleveland, Ohio, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000, to conduct a moving picture theater. The incorporators are: P. R. Forbes, B. A. Round, L. D. Round, R. L. Round and Ethel D. Round.

Kennedy Brothers, who have been proprietors of the Nickelodeon Theater, at Galesburg, Illinois, have sold the house to a Galesburg company. John B. Mayes, a student at Knox College, will be manager. The Kennedy Brothers will devote their time to pushing a new safety rail in which they are interested.

One of the most unique pieces of municipal legislation in regard to moving pictures has been introduced before the city council at LaSalle, Illinois. This city has three photoplay houses, the Royal, Colonial and Family, and the ordinance provides that no more moving picture shows shall be opened until the official United States census shows that La Salle has a population of 15,000.

Moving picture shows in Elwood, Indiana, are declared to be hard hit by an ordinance introduced into the city council providing that signs must be attached to buildings, and must not extend over eighteen inches from the structure to which they are attached, and must be at least eight feet above the sidewalk. The press dispatch says that shows have their signs next to the curbstone, each show using several spaces equal to the ordinary barn door.

Roy McMullen has purchased the Colonial Theater at Joliet, Ill., from the Colonial Theater Company. William D. Moore, one of the vice-presidents of the First National Bank, was one of the principal owners of a string of moving picture theaters in the Middle West, and the Joliet Colonial is the last one to pass from his management. The new proprietor is said to have had experience in managing photoplay houses.

J. LeRoy, of New York, has leased the Lucier Opera House at Murpheysboro, Illinois, and will manage it.

J. Jordan, of Bunker Hill, Ill., has leased the Henry Hall at East Alton, Illinois, and will give picture shows four times a week.

W. A. Holmes, owner and manager of the Holmes Opera House, at Nokamis, Illinois, has opened a moving picture show with a five-cent admission. There are now two photoplay houses in Nokomis.

The Lorain Amusement Company of Lorain, Ohio, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000, by G. A. Resek and others.

The Cincinnati Theater Company of Cincinnati, Ohio, has increased its capital stock from $25,000 to $200,000.

Adolph Pufahl and Fred Williams of Wenona, Illinois, who recently started a moving picture show at Washburn, Ill., have sold the business to John Fitschen and Hugo Stranch, of Washburn.

Joseph Roberts and George Dunkel, of Pleasant Plains, Ill., have leased the opera House at that place.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Sam Robinson, manager of the Princess Theater, at Peoria, Ill., and Miss Roscine Jones, a talented singer of Chicago.

When a Pittsfield, Ill., alderman suggested before the city council, that moving picture theaters be charged a license fee, David Halbauer, chief of police, arose and called the attention of the municipal law-makers to the fact that the streets were quieter and there was less disturbance with the picture shows than without them. Burr Swan, editor of the Pittsfield Republican, is running a show in Pittsfield, extending to the photoplay business some of the live wires, qualities which have made his weekly paper distinctive among Mississippi Valley publications.

The moving picture theater in Chillicothe, Ill., which figured in the bankruptcy case of R. E. Lawrence and Peoria hotel men, was sold at auction sale to N. W. McGown, of Chillicothe, for $750, subject to the interest of W. L. Davis, who gave his consent to the sale of the whole enterprise in consideration of receiving $175 for his share.

G. C. Hamilton, owner of a moving picture show at Assumption, Ill., has engaged a six-piece orchestra to play at his theater every Thursday night.

Quincy, Ill., moving picture theaters have tobooed the illustrated songs, pianos, and pianists. It was announced that probably electric pianos will be substituted for the instruments now in use. This decision made it a conference of the managers, and cannot be attributed to economy they say. Good singers are hard to get and still harder to keep. George Geanetos and John M. Sanople are said to have leased a building on Fifth Street, Quniey, Ill., and will open a moving picture show.

Eugene Justi has leased the Wall Street at New Berlin, Ill., whose moving pictures are the pride of that community.

Views of a recent disastrous wreck on the Illnois Central Railroad were a feature at the benefit entertainment for striking Illinois Central employees, given at the Star Theater in Clinton, Ill.

A Joliet, Ill., newspaper tells of a drummer in the moving picture theater in that city, who is great on sound effects, but nearly lost his job when he uncorked a bottle of odorous gasoline every time an automobile showed up in the film.

F. H. Von Cleave recently begun lecturing for the pictures at the Barrymore moving picture theater, in Moline, Ill.

The Joliet Theater Company of Joliet, Ill., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000, to do a general theatrical business. The incorporators are: John T. Henderson, E. E. Henderson and Charles Lamb.

The Aurora Grand Opera House Company of Aurora, Ill., has been incorporated with capital stock of $10,000, to do a general theatrical business. The incorporators are: John T. Henderson, E. E. Henderson and Charles Lamb.

The Liberty Motion Picture Manufacturing Company of Kansas City, Mo., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are: E. H. McManus, J. W. Collier and John D. Ormond.

The York Theaters Company of Chicago, has increased its capital stock from $24,000 to $50,000.

The Mogler Amusement Company of St. Louis, Mo., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2,000, to do a general amusement business. The incorporators are: Joseph Mogler, Frank and Mollie Mogler.

The Thread Lake Amusement Company of Valparaiso, Ind., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $35,000. The incorporators are: J. M. Sullivan, W. H. Labb and E. E. Samuel.

Acting on instructions from City Commissioner Atterbury, Manager Manderback, of the Schwartz Theater at Wautegan, Ill., has cancelled the engagement at the theater of the James Boys in Missouri film, it is reported.

The Gaiety Theater, at Jacksonville, Ill., has installed a pipe organ.

Mrs. A. Sigfried, who has been managing Mr. Sigfried's Minneapolis moving picture show, recently visited in Decatur, Ill., while on her way to Hot Springs, Ark., to spend a month. It is said she may remain in Decatur upon her return and a new manager will be chosen for the Minneapolis show house.

A new theater will be erected at Decatur, Ill., which will be on the Sullivan-Considine circuit.

The Court Theater, Kankakee, Ill., gave away Hallowe'en masks to children between 4 and 5 p. m., on the days preceding the festival. The Court Theater has a convincing argument for its ventilating scheme, which it loses no opportunity to get before the public.

W. W. Snyder, proprietor of the moving picture theater at Mt. Pulaski, Ill., announced that for five nights he would donate ten per cent of the gross receipts of his house to a fund to help purchase school books for needy children.

The three-story concrete business building and Opera House at Plymouth, Ill., has been traded by Thomas F. Payne of Fairbury, Ill., to I. J. Edwards of Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

The Cozy Theater of Harvard, Ill., has installed a stage, and announces vaudeville will be given in connection with a picture performance.

Frank Edwards, a moving picture operator, at the Billiken moving picture theater, in Elkhart, Ind., recently received a severe shock when he came in contact with an exposed electric wire at the theater. Persons in the theater heard the noise of Mr. Edwards falling to the floor, but none of them left their seats. Theater attaches went to his aid. He was unconscious for twenty minutes.

Mrs. Raymond Colvin, who has been playing the piano at the X-Ray Theater, at Lincoln, Ill., has resigned to accept a similar position in Decatur, Ill.

Chris Jackson, owner of the Scenic Theater of Bloomington, Ill., has leased the Broadway Theater at Lincoln, Ill., and after some remodeling, vaudeville and moving pictures will be given. A four-piece orchestra will be maintained.

W. Schnert, who recently sold his five and ten-cent store in Havana, Ill., announced that he would open a moving picture show in the suburbs of Peoria, Ill.

Wilbur Mitchell of Peru, Ind., has been secured to manage the Royal Theater recently opened on State Street, at Litchfield, Ill., by Gallagher Brothers, of that city. Their operating booth is fireproof and there are four exits for safety. Independent service is used.

Elmer Hahn's new theater building in Shelbyville, Ill., will be completed soon. Thirty-six glass doors with mahogany casings, are a feature of the front. These doors may be folded back during the times that the building is open.

The Billiken Moving Picture Theater has opened on East Court Street, Paris, Ill., and is doing a good business. Miss Edith Elston is pianist, Miss Alice Reynolds, formerly of Terre Haute, Ind., is violinist, and illustrated songs are sung by Miss Stella Jeane Lamb.

Manager Gus Cook of St. Charles, Ill., expects to have the new Gartner Theater Building on East Main Street, which will house the Star Theater, ready for opening about January 1.

The new Sangamo Theater has been opened at 1319 South Adams Street, at Peoria, Ill. The color scheme of the interior is ivory and gold.

Miss Martha Russell, recently took the theatergoers of Springfield, Olney and Beardstown, Ill., behind the scenes at the Essanay studio. Manager W. W. Watts, of the Vaudette, South Fifth Street, Springfield, found her a very profitable attraction, and capacity houses all the time showed that the people are interested in learning how moving pictures are made. She appeared at the Gem at Beardstown, and the Odeon in Olney. Her talks are straightforward, simple and informal. She announces her intention of trying to tell the things that she would want to know if she were in the audience and knew little of picture-making. Carrying some of the best reels in which she appeared, there are no complaints by patrons because of the extra five cents charged. The extra pictures and her interesting explanations will make the program over an hour of good entertainment. This is the first venture of any weight in the Mississippi Valley except the visit of Miss Florence Lawrence, when she was with the Imp company, to St. Louis, and the producer, as well as the theater manager will, without doubt, profit by the publicity.

William Stephenson has moved his picture show from the airdome at Jerseyville into winter quarters in the Smith Building. The show is known as Wonderland.

The Streator, Ill., Free Press, tells of the commendable action in a film fire as follows: "Nothing but praise was heard on the street this morning relative to the recent action of the city council ordering an investigation of the various moving picture houses in this city with regard to fire protection. As a result of this, Fire Chief Owen, and Chief of Police Hopkins, made a tour of inspection the early part of this week. Each show house was investigated and in each instance the film rooms were pronounced fireproof, and are built to comply with the regulations of the city ordinance relative to the matter. To substantiate this official report, about 8.45 last evening, one of the films at Dreamland blazed up. It was an accident, pure and simple. The blaze, as was predicted, was confined to the film room section of the theater over the entrance. It took just about a minute and a half to extinguish the flame with the aid of chemicals, always kept in the theaters for that purpose, as well as the regulation fire extinguishers. The fire department was called, but its services were not needed."

The St. Louis Film and Supply Company of St. Louis, Mo., has been incorporated with capital stock of $2,000. The incorporators are: Fred Schwartz, Henry E. Bert and H. R. Mason.

William Carroll has sold the Majestic Theater, East State Street, Jacksonville, Ill., to Green M. Littrell, formerly manager of the Grand Opera House, who announces a high-class picture show.

Nash & Bixby, who have been in the picture show business in Indiana and Ohio for several years, have purchased the Electric Theater at Fairbury, Ill., which has been conducted by Lough & Ellis. E. E. Bixby is local manager. Licensed pictures will be used. F. H. M.

TEMPLE, TEX.

Al. Dunlap, who for a long time has been the singer at the Majestic Theater No. 1, has resigned. Mr. Dunlay will enter another line of business. He is succeeded by Mr. Elmer Fisk.

W. E. Russ is now stage manager at the Exchange.

The Airdome has closed for the season.

Much interest has been manifested here since the announcement of the Majestic Motion Picture Company releases. Miss Mary Pickford "Little Mary," is a great favorite here.

The Colonial Theater is a popular amusement resort here, which is doing a good business.

The Lyric, Sulphur Springs, under the management of M. L. Moore, has been remodeled, and is one of the nicest little houses in East Texas, and has been playing to its capacity.

R. S. Pryor, manager of the Princess, at Austin, is once more around and at his post, after a very bad spell of sickness.

Owing to public sentiment, for some time, theaters now run on Sunday at Fort Worth.

The following employes of the different theaters of this city, constituted a party who visited the State Fair at Dallas: Mesrs. Dunlap, Carter, Gray, Rodgers, Hatcher, Wilson, Wright and Wall.

R. C. RODGERS.

STATE RIGHT BUYERS!

"Remember the Maine"

GRASP THIS OPPORTUNITY QUICKLY and secure this thrilling two-reel feature, taken by special permission of the United States Government

ENTITLED

"The Mystery of the Maine"

THE BIGGEST AND SUREST MONEY-MAKER IN EXISTENCE

Because it is the only feature film that appeals to all the classes from the newsboy to the millionaire.

Every American with red blood in his veins will go to see these pictures.

A Production of International Importance!

WIRE BIDS IMMEDIATELY!—TOMORROW MAY BE TOO LATE!!

RAISING-THE-MAINE FILM COMPANY
145 West 45th Street (Suite 804) New York City

LICENSED Film Stories

MELIES.

THE BETTER MAN (Dec. 14).—Doris is up a tree as to which of two suitors to accept. Tom is very companionable and Fred is very noble, each equally lovable. She is in the throes of despair, when an idea comes to her to test which is the better man.

To the postmistress, her friend, Doris gives two letters, one of which each of the lovers is to call for the next day at noon. Meanwhile, she instructs her faithful old servant Pedro, in the part he is to play in determining the better man.

Both letters contain the same—"To prove who is the better man, deliver this letter to me as soon as possible," and upon reading, the rivals mount their steeds and race for Doris' house. It is a desperate ride in which Tom shows no pity for his horse. He is far ahead of Fred when he comes upon old Pedro, who is lying on the road, apparently hurt. But Tom determines to win, so rushes on. When Fred sees the old servant in distress, he is touched, and even at the risk of losing Doris, helps the old man home.

Scene from "The Better Man" (Melies).

Doris and her folks have observed the whole thing through a pair of field glasses. When Tom arrives, he rushes to claim his bride, but is met with an indifference hitherto unknown. His horse drops from exhaustion. Fred arrives with Pedro, fully expecting he has lost the prize. Pedro gets suddenly strong and laughs, which makes Fred all the more mad at himself for having stopped, but when Doris explains her little plot, it does not take either long to understand which has proven "the better man."

SELIG.

A DIAMOND IN THE ROUGH (Dec. 4).—Elisa Darrow, only daughter and regarded as a chattel of old Yell Darrow, when told she has to become the wife of Jake Muggs, refuses in an emphatic manner and rushes for consolation to the big trees—her only friends, and refuses to return home. She hears a cry and goes in its direction and discovers Ralph Stuart, who has become separated from his companions. She starts to run away, but Stuart catches her and disregarding her apparent hostile attitude, asks her where she lives.

She takes him to her cottage, where Stuart, explaining his predicament, asks for food. Darrow, though, still irate over Eliza's disobedience, chastises her, and when Stuart interferes, he orders him from the premises.

Ralph is well nigh overcome with hunger and fatigue when Eliza brings him some food which she has obtained, and further directs him to the station.

Later, Ralph is exceedingly bored by his numerous social duties, and as his thoughts are ever of Eliza, he resolves to return to her. He does so and arrives just after Eliza has finally submitted to the seeming inevitable—a marriage with Jake. Learning of this, he asks Eliza if she really loves Jake, and receiving a negative answer, asks Mrs. Darrow for her, and obtains her consent. Darrow is inclined to be obstinate, but is soon "brought around" to their way of thinking, while Jake Muggs is otherwise disposed of. Stuart returns home with Eliza as his wife, and a year later, when the couple receive a visit from her people, the old people are more than convinced that they have done the right thing.

A FRONTIER GIRL'S COURAGE (Dec. 5).—Bad luck with crops necessitates the removal of John Wilson, with his family, to the West. Traveling in an emigrant train, they proceed uneventfully, and finally make camp in the Indian country. Mary, Wilson's daughter, is given some washing to do, and she makes her way to the stream to complete her task.

In the meantime, the Indians have sighted the party, and give chase. They lose no time in sneaking up, kill the brother, who is pasturing the horses for the night, stampeding the animals, and massacreing the rest of the family, but Mary. She, hearing the shots and shouts, is terrified and rushes into the brush.

Jim Hawkins, a prospector on his way to the gold lands, also hears the shots, and takes to the river to hide his tracks. While there he is seen by Mary, who rushes to him, explains the catastophre, and is taken on behind. But Indians are no easy proposition to "lose" and they easily find Hawkins' tracks and follow him. Hawkins and Mary take refuge in a canyon and barricade themselves behind the rocks. Thus, the Indians can only attack from the front. But, one, more sly than the others, leaves the main band and creeps up behind Hawkins. Mary sees him and protects Hawkins with her own body, receiving the wound herself. Hawkins makes short work of the Indian, as well as several more and they, being none too brave or anxious for an open fight, escape as best they can.

Then Hawkins attends to Mary's wound, and after assisting her to his horse, she is taken to the nearest ranch house and taken care of by the farmer's wife, Amanda White.

Later, Hawkins' gratefulnes to Mary for saving his life, has turned into love and he entrusts it into her keeping for "all time to come."

THE MAID AT THE HELM (Dec. 7).—The voyage of the "Minnehaha" ends in disaster, and every one, with the exception of Captain Barker, his daughter Elizabeth, and the mate, Bill, perish. These three are picked up by the whaler "Dakota."

Bill, the mate, who is infatuated with Elizabeth, and is half-crazy from exposure, becomes insanely and unreasonably jealous of Capt. Treavor of the "Dakota." He accosts Elizabeth in a way which compels her to ask the captain for assistance.

Later, a whale is sighted, and Bill, who is mutinous, is disciplined, and made to work with the crew. At his first opportunity, he jumps overboard and swims back to the vessel. There, he easily overpowers the remainder of the crew by taking them unawares and orders the ship to be put under way. He forces his attention on Elizabeth again, who, by telling him she loves him, succeeds in escaping from the cabin. Once out, she releases her father with the help of the crew, and retakes the ship.

Bill arrives on the scene too late to prevent the release of Capt. Barker, and is himself, captured and bound with ropes. And so the night passes.

The next day, Elizabeth shows her grit by taking the ship into her own hands, and guides it back to the deserted boat, containing Capt. Treavor and his men. Explanations follow; Bill, now thoroughly crazy, is taken from the cubby and confined forward, and the men give rousing cheers of thanksgiving for preservation from an untimely death.

THE PLUMBER (Dec. 8).—Accidents will happen in the best regulated families. A water pipe bursts in the Householder kitchen and consternation reigns supreme. Mrs. Householder 'phones in a hurry call for a plumber, and then hurries back to the bursted pipe, where she attempts to lessen the flood of water by holding her hand over the break. The plumber arrives at last, but discovers that he has forgotten his tools. He goes leisurely back to get them. He meets some friends and joins them in a wee drappie. They become so enthralled in a discussion of politics that many drinks are consumed before the plumber remembers his mission and starts again shopward. He has only proceeded a short distance when he notices two boys fighting. He stops to show them some new kinks in the manly act and then goes on. When he reaches his shop it is noon, so he eats his lunch. In the meantime the Householder domicile is rapidly becoming a swimming tank. The plumber starts out again with his tools over his shoulder and proceeds some blocks without interruption, but finally meets a young lady with whom he flirts. Later, his attention is switched to a group of boys playing ball. He joins in the game. By this time Mr. Householder has arrived at home and is acquainted with the situation. Donning a bathing suit he attempts to repair the damage, but the water is too deep. At last the plumber arrives and needless to say his reception is a hot one.

A DAY WITH A CIRCUS (Dec. 8.)—Picturing intimate and unusual scenes incident to the daily routine of a large circus. Extremely interesting.

GAUMONT.

JIMMIE TRICKS THE LANDLADY (Dec. 5).—When the landlady calls for the rent, Jimmie's mother cannot pay, so Jimmie comes to the rescue. The clever youngster pretends to be a palmist and offers to tell the landlady's fortune. Knowing some of her little indiscretions, he whispers them in her ear.

The proud lady is so confused that she rushes out of the house in great haste. The rent will not be collected for a long, long time.

THE CHALLENGE (Dec. 5).—Harry makes the mistake of being rude to a lady well versed in the art of fencing, who, to his surprise, challenges him to a duel.

He finally accepts the challange but proves no match for his skilled opponent, and receives a serious wound.

The lady is broken-hearted at her deed and tries to atone in every way. After caring for him through his convalescence, she accepts his offer of caring for him for the rest of her life.

CAMOENS. THE PORTUGUESE SHAKESPEARE, Lisbon, 1578—(Dec. 9).—Because of his seditious poems and his unfavorable reputation at court, Camoens is forced to live the life of a refugee from his native city, Lisbon.

He passes his last days in a humble cottage, deserted by all but his faithful slave, Barbara, who is forced to beg upon the streets to provide a scant living.

Want and discontent finally overcome his indomitable spirit, however, and the great poet breathes his last, unhonored by his king and countrymen.

IMPORTANT SCNES IN PARIS, FRANCE (Dec. 9).—A fine series of views of the city of Paris.

We are first shown the exterior of the Louvre and the Stock Exchange, and then taken on a short trip down the Seine, from which we can see the Notre Dame Cathedral, Arc De Triumphe and many other places of interest.

ECLIPSE.

THE LUCKLESS BANKER (Dec. 6).—Financial ruin and the death of his wife cause Robert Campbell, a banker, to place his three-year-old son in the care of friends and go to seek his fortune in the gold fields of South Africa.

Twenty years later the son starts out to join his father, and after a long search is successful. Father and son prospect with unfailing energy. One day they discover a rich vein but the sight of gold is too much for the old man, causing him to go insane.

The son, however, manages to bring his father and plenty of the treasure back to the old home. There among friends and familiar scenes, Campbell is gradually restored to reason and lives to enjoy what he worked so long to gain.

ESSANAY.

THE MADMAN (Dec. 5).—A young man confined in an insane asylum believes he is a great actor and that his father is his worst enemy. The asylum authorities humor him in his delusion and provide him with wigs and theatrical make-up in order to indulge in his whim. One day he overpowers an attendant, strips the man of his clothes, dons them and escapes. He goes directly to his father's house, where he overpowers the old man and thrusts him, half unconscious, into a closet. Then masquerading as his father, he makes himself at home until the guards of the asylum arrive, when he again escapes from them. A thrilling chase follows. The madman bolts into a military balloon camp where an ascension is about to be made and when the balloon is cut loose the madman runs on, grabs a rope and sails up into the sky with the balloonist. Then follows a thrilling fight in the clouds which finally results in the balloonist overpowering the maniac and casting him off to death on the rocks a thousand feet below.

THE LONG STRIKE (Dec. 7).—Alex Readly, President of the Readly Steel Mills, is seated in his handsome office when he receives a telegram from the superintendent of the mills, stating that the men are about to strike. Bert Readly, a young man of twenty-two, is sent to the mills to endeavor to make terms with the men. On his way he meets Jane Williams, the daughter of one of the mill employees, who directs him to the mill offices. A committee wait on Bert but he refuses them everything and the strike is called. In danger of his life Bert flees to Jane's house and is hidden by the girl from the mob. While hidden there he hears a plot to burn the mills and after he escapes from the house has Jane's father, the ring-leader, arrested. Jane goes to Readly, Sr., and pleads with him to grant the men their demands. Readly soon sees the justice of their pleas and calls the strike off with the promise of better pay and hours.

GETTING EVEN WITH EMILY (Dec. 8).—Emily's friend goes to Europe and makes her a present of Toodles, a poodle. Thereafter, Emily's husband suffers neglect, while the dog gets all the luxuries of the house, and he plots to get even. He has a friend send "Butters," a goat, to the house. He then proceeds to make it so unpleasant for his wife, that she finally concludes they must get rid of the pets, which he promptly proceeds to do.

STRAY BULLETS (Dec. 8).—A young boy is made a present of a rifle. He sets up a target in front of an apartment house. He seldom hits the target but causes a panic in the apartment building and the enraged tenents give chase. He is finally caught and receives a much merited chastisement.

A FRONTIER DOCTOR (Dec. 9).—Dr. Jameson, a widower, has a daughter of five, who he feels is sadly in need of a mother. After some thought the doctor decides to propose to Nan

ANNOUNCEMENT No. 17

Exclusive Talk No. 8

EVOLUTION and PROGRESS

The Cinematographic Art is a Record of the Evolution of Events

THE evolution of events forces either a progressive state or obliteration. Our commercial life is subservient to this broad principle. Action is imperative, for stagnation is Death. Your show world does not live upon the past; its life is of the present and its hopes of the future. We are irresistibly driven forward and in the Nature of Things we must expand.

To blindly accept the old, means blocking progress or an invitation to destruction.

Amusement commercially means a progressive study of life and the picture business is life in pictures.

Bound up in our business (the picture business) then is this cardinal principle of being—Evolution—Progress;

To preserve the art we must protect it commercially.

The old does not meet the new. The wild scramble for trade is not a proper measure of the possibilities of this art commercially. An intelligent exhibit tops thousandfold a brainless effort to gobble patronage. Show us where any other plan but the National Exclusive Programme makes possible an intelligent exhibit: Show us under any other plan where a man even has opportunity to exert any thought as to how he should present his programme, and then finally show us a man so blind that he cannot see the all-topping value of the National Exclusive Programme. The first determined effort to protect the commercial needs of the art and the Exhibitor.

EXCLUSIVE PROGRAM

MONDAY
Plantation, Clarendon, Mono.
3 Reels

TUESDAY
Rose, Deutsches Biograph
3 Reels

WEDNESDAY
Federal, Mondia, Latium
3 Reels

THURSDAY
Washington, Hepwix, Film d'Art
3 Reels

FRIDAY
Mohawk, Cricks & Martin, Aquilla
3 Reels

SATURDAY
Oklahoma, Deutsches Bioscope, Savoy
3 Reels

SUNDAY
California, Messters, Comerio
3 Reels

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING COMPANY

145 West 45th Street, New York City, N. Y.

Warren, a young Western woman, working a claim alone on the hillside. His courtship is successful as she accepts him but hardly has he left the house when a young man, an old acquaintance of the girl, enters and tells her of his love. Jameson finds them making love and realizes that he must give up his claim to the girl. A month after the marriage Nan's husband is hurt at the mine and the doctor is sent for. He refuses to go. Nan herself comes and pleads with him and he finally consents to go. It is a difficult operation and temptation comes when he realizes that the slightest slip of the scalpel will cause the man's death. Why not? The doctor suddenly realizes the enormity of the crime he is about to commit, sets resolutely to work—and the operation is successful.

LUBIN.

A HEAD FOR BUSINESS (Dec. 4).—John and Harold Watson were in the railroad-constructing business. Harold's taste, however, ran more to heart than to railroads. Whenever he could slip away from the office he spent his time at the studio of two girl friends, Agnes and Phyllis Moore. Several times John found him there when important matters should have been engaging his attention at the office. Sometimes the girls would cal at Harold's office and then they would talk art, forgetting everything else.

One day Phyllis was there when John came into the room to consult with Harold. John was angry and their short but violent interview ended by John offering to buy Harold out for $10,000. Harold accepted. When John had gone Phyllis looked at the blueprint map of a new line of railway which John had brought in. She noticed one piece of property on the right of way which had not yet been secured. She pointed out to Harold how they might turn a nice penny. Harold jumped at the chance.

In the shortest possible time he and Phyllis had found the owner and after some shrewd negotiations they acquired the property, which was placed in Harold's name. A short time afterward John's agents arrived, only to find that the property was sold. This they reported to John. He determined to assume charge of securing the land himself.

Now, Harold and Phyllis and her oldest sister, Agnes, had decided to stay at the farmhouse for a while. When John arrived he met Agnes, whom he ddin't know and she conducted the negotiations and finally agreed to sell for $50,000. While John was making out a check the young lovers appeared and a moment later John was surprised to see his brother's name on the deed. Then he admitted that there was another head for business in the family beside his own.

SINS OF THE FATHER (Dec. 6).—The evil habits of George Williams had brought sorrow upon his wife and young son, Rupert. Williams went from bad to worse and finally died following an attack of delirium tremens.

Twenty years later Rupert had made a name for himself as an artist in Paris. He returned home on a visit. His health had broken down and he complained of severe pains in the back of his head. His mother did all she could to comfort him and showed her great pride in his success.

The young man attempted to resume his painting at home, but his physical condition became worse. Finally, his mother called in a physician, the same who had treated Rupert's father. The doctor examined him and looked serious. He ordered that Rupert must discontinue all work and explained privately to his mother that his illness was due to his father's dissipation. He asked Mrs. Williams to explain this to her son but she refused. Then the doctor broke the terrible news to him.

While the physician was in the next room he abstracted a bottle of poison from his medicine case and concealed it in his pocket. A few days later his mother discovered him flirting with her maid, the daughter of the maid whom his own father had flirted with and she realized with horror that he was following in the same course.

Rupert tried to resume his painting, but found that the power had gone from him and threw down his easel, tore his canvases and confessed to his mother his utter failure. He showed her the bottle of poison and begged her to promise to administer it to him in case he became an imbecile. To quiet him she consented. After this violent excitement he sank into a chair and it was apparent to his mother that his reason was being dethroned. She remembered her promise, searched with great agitation for the bottle of poison, found it; then she hesitated, recoiling in terror from what she was about to do and here the pictures dies out, leaving her undecided what course to pursue.

LOVE'S LABOR LOST (Dec. 7).—John Hopkins and Walter Stull were deep, deep in love with Peggy Glenn. It happened that they both called on the same evening. They could not conceal their hatred of each other. The first word led to the retort courteous and then swiftly to the quip modest—the reply churlish—the reproof valiant and finally to the lie direct. Pretty Peggy left the room and then the two young men left the house.

They went to their respective clubs, where they told their respective friends of their respective hatreds. John's friends advised a duel. The challenge was sent and Walter readily accepted. Both arrived with their friends at the duelling ground by the old mill.

It so happened that that same day Harry Myers, an old admirer of Peggy, returned unexpectedly from the West. He lost no time in calling on the girl he could not forget. He had the pleasure of seeing that he was not forgotten.

Just at this moemnt a stable boy rushed in to tell Peggy about the duel. Harry seized the psychological moment, proposed and was accepted. Then Peggy sent the stable boy with a note to the duellists announcing her engagement.

THE TEAMSTER (Dec. 9).—While lying sick in the military hospital, Teamster Jim Logan was waited upon by a visiting angel, Clara Myers, who was visiting the hospital and distributing flowers, magazines and smiles. A flower passed from her pretty hand to Jim's hard one and at the same moment poor Jim lost his heart.

After he was discharged from the hospital Jim found that Clara Myers was engaged to marry Lieutenant Cotter and that she was, therefore, above him in the social scale. Jim carried her image faithfully in his heart, even after she was married.

Her husband one day was drawn into a quarrel with a Mexican half-breed who was connected with a gang of desperadoes. A few days later Lieutenant Cotter was ordered to a new post 50 miles away. The wagon in which the Lieutenant and his wife traveled was driven by Teamster Jim Logan. The Mexican saw them depart, quickly summoned his evil comrades and they waylaid the party on the road. Then Teamster Jim Logan made his great sacrifice. He cut loose the two mules and insisted that the Lieutenant and his wife escape upon them while he—Jim Logan—held back the Mexicans. Soon after the Lieutenant and his wife had ridden away they met a troop of cavalry with which they hurried back, hoping to save the brave teamster's life, but it was too late. With a kiss of the woman he had vainly loved upon his dying lips as his only reward, Teamster Jim Logan passed over the Great Divide.

BIOGRAPH.

WHY HE GAVE UP (Dec. 4).—Hubby is anxious to get away for a little time at the beach with the boys, and works up a quarrel with wifey over a new hat, the bill for which he is asked to pay. Making this excuse, he goes off with his chums. The wife is an expert swimmer and diver and is invited to attend a meet of the ladies' swimming club, of which she was formerly a member. Her husband's treatment induces her to accept the invitation. The affair takes place at the very beach to which the husband hied himself. One may imagine that hubby has not only plunged into the cooling waters of the surf, but into domestic hot water as well.

ABE GETS EVEN WITH FATHER (Dec. 4).—Little Abe wants a nickel, but papa not only denies him the coin, but spanks him for his presumption. Murphy, the janitor, likes Abe, but despises Cohen, the father. Abe plans a mix-up between the two, by painting a black eye on himself, saying Murphy did it. Cohen goes out to do Murphy, but is done instead, so Abe, instead of getting a nickel, gets a dollar to make it appear to his mother that father nearly annihilated the janitor.

THE FAILURE (Dec. 7).—A man's a failure through his own fault, for he who is bound not to give up is sure of success. The hero of this Biograph story gives way under the pressure of bad fortune, instead of fighting against it. His sweetheart, disappointed in him, turns him aside. Down the hill he goes until he is finally a singer in a low dance hall. Here he meets a young woman, who, through the want of strength of will power, has gone about the same downward road as he. She, however, realizes that it is impossible for her to turn back—'tis the way of the world—but for him—but for him, yes. He gets a chance if he will marry and settle down on a farm, and while he is willing he hasn't even the money to get him the place. The girl, unknown to him, helps him to take advantage of the offer. He goes to seek his former sweetheart, only to find himself forgotten, so he reasons that as it was the dance hall girl's persuasion that influenced him to brace up—he, of course, still ignorant of the extent of her aid—she would be the one with whom to begin the new life.

EDISON.

THE AWAKENING OF JOHN BOND (Dec. 5).—John Bond, a wealthy politician, ignores the tenement inspector's warning to make the necessary repairs to conform with the city's laws, and refuses his support to the Tuberculosis Committee when asked to assist in legislation that will provide funds for sufferers of consumption.

Living in one of his tenements is the O'Brien family, consisting of four children. The oldest of these is George, aged twenty-one, who is the only bread-winner. Descended from consumptive parents, the entire family is more or less affected with the disease, their wretched surroundings hurrying them to an early grave.

John Bond marries and takes his bride on a honeymoon cruise on his yacht "Sylvia." It so happens that George O'Brien obtains employment on the "Sylvia" and, during the cruise, is taken ill. The surgeon pronounces him in the last stages of consumption. His condition arouses the sympathy of the bride, who nurses the patient daily. He steadily grows worse, despite her attentions, and, just before he dies, entrusts his watch and what little money he has to her for delivery to his sister, Nellie.

Through her nursing, Mrs. Bond has become infected with tuberculosis. Arriving home, she sends for Nellie and gives her the brother's trinkets. Here Nellie comes face to face with Bond, and, recognizing him as the owner of their wretched home, bitterly denounces him, telling him that, indirectly, through his neglect, his wife has contracted the disease. Bond tries unsuccessfully to place his wife in a sanitarium, and is at last obliged to apply to the Tuberculosis Committee for aid. By trying to bribe the official, he is brought to realize the great good that is being done by the association; whe n confronted by his own tenement, now in the hands of one of the committee's nurses, his awakening is complete, and he writes out a substantial check.

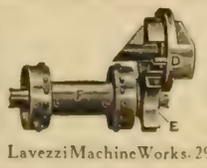
Later on we see Mrs. Bond and the O'Briens recovered and Bond the accepted candidate supporting the crusade against tuberculosis.

JOHN BROWN'S HEIR (Dec. 6).—As soon as it became known in the gold mining district that John Brown, a prospector, had made a rich strike, a newspaper reporter was dispatched to his cabin for particulars. After getting them, he next interviews Sam Thompson, an old pioneer of the camp, who is suffering from an incurable malady and cannot live six months. These two articles get their headings mixed in the composing room of the newspaper, through the stupidity of the printer's devil, and when published the next morning, the story of John's lucky strike reads as follows: "John Brown, of Valley Camp, discovers a rich gold mine. He came here a year ago in good health, but now he is suffering from an incurable malady and cannot live six months." The item is copied by other newspapers, and finds its way to each of Brown's relatives, who, believing that it will be to their financial benefit to show some little concern, send him pressing invitations to visit them. At first John is inclined to be displeased with the false newspaper report, but on second thought he decides to keep up the joke by accepting the invitations. Accordingly he visits his relatives, pretending to be as sick as the newspaper represented.

In making the rounds of his kinfolk, John's good luck does not forsake him, for he makes another strike, not a gold mine this time, but a comely little housemaid with whom he falls in love. After a brief courtship they are secretly married. He then returns with her to the mining camp and extends an invitation to his relatives to call at the cabin on a certain date, that he may impart to them the contents of his last will and testament. On the day in question, the relatives are promptly on hand in keen excitement and anticipation, but to their surprise they learn that Brown is enjoying the very best of health, is married and has bequeathed his entire fortune to his wife.

THE HEART OF NICHETTE (Dec. 8).—Mlle. Nichette is a dancer, supported by a Parisian ballet and beloved by a young physician. Early in the story we see her refuse to leave the stage for his sake, and the quarrel which ensues.

The young physician does a certain amount of charity work and stumbles upon the case of a small child with a low fever which may become dangerous. He warns the child's father to keep her quiet and tells the neighbors on the floor below of her condition. But the father, who is a drunken brute, drives the little one out to beg for pennies, which



IMPROVE YOUR PICTURES

Intermittent Movement complete, as per cut, installed on 24 hours' notice, $12.00

Two-pin machines rebuilt on 48 hours' notice.

Lavezzi Machine Works, 2949 Herndon St., Chicago, Ill.

Exhibitors

We can supply you with new and unique ideas to increase your patronage.

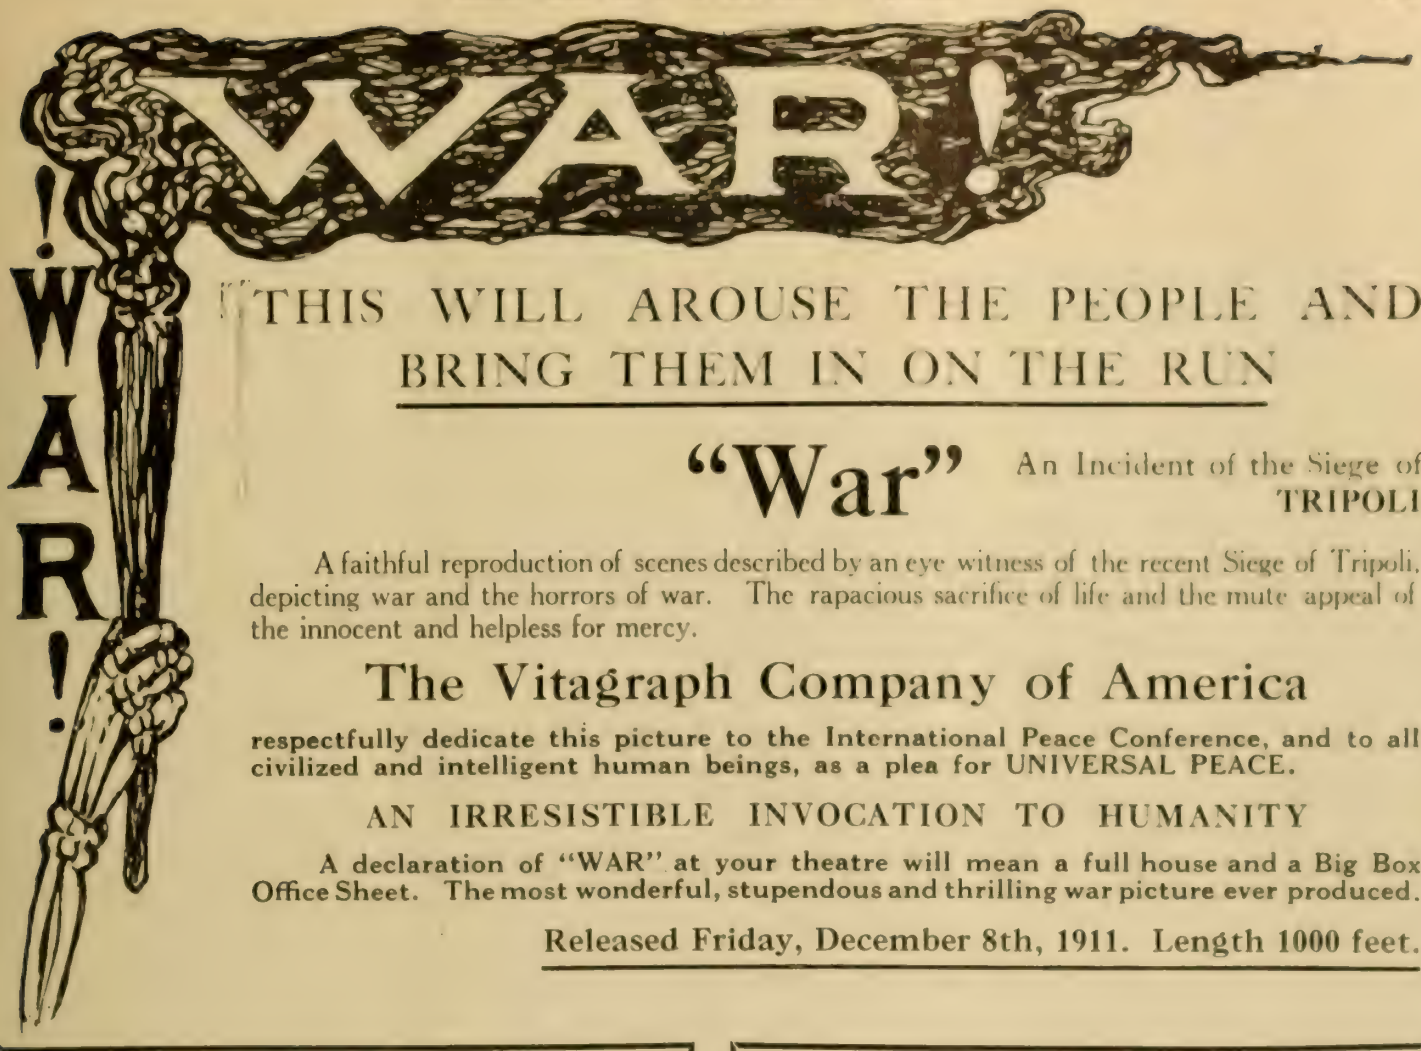
MOVING PICTURE IDEA COMPANY

740 Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

ITALY—TURKEY WAR

20 SLIDES COLORED $7.00

J. WILSON, 61 W. 14th St., New York, N. Y.



"THIS WILL AROUSE THE PEOPLE AND BRING THEM IN ON THE RUN"

"War"

An Incident of the Siege of TRIPOLI

A faithful reproduction of scenes described by an eye witness of the recent Siege of Tripoli, depicting war and the horrors of war. The rapacious sacrifice of life and the mute appeal of the innocent and helpless for mercy.

The Vitagraph Company of America

respectfully dedicate this picture to the International Peace Conference, and to all civilized and intelligent human beings, as a plea for UNIVERSAL PEACE.

AN IRRESISTIBLE INVOCATION TO HUMANITY

A declaration of "WAR" at your theatre will mean a full house and a Big Box Office Sheet. The most wonderful, stupendous and thrilling war picture ever produced.

Released Friday, December 8th, 1911. Length 1000 feet.

ATTENTION
Ohio Exhibitors

Dantes Inferno

Will reach you soon

Beware of Imitations

Wait for that thrilling, exciting, marvelous, original and genuine

5-Reel Milano Production

Half of the State played with a record-breaking success never before equaled. Pleases patrons, advertises Theatre and swells Box office receipts.

JOHN W. ERB, Sole Owner
c/o H. E. & G. Co. Newport, Ky.

HAVE YOUR

POSTERS MOUNTED

IN

POSTER STYLE

They are mounted on muslin and Tacked on Roller and Moulding. Hundreds of Thousands of similar Paper Sheets have been mounted in this way. Some call it Roller or Map Style, as they hang on wall.

Poster, Show Card and Map Mounter E. C. BRIDGMAN
86 Warren St., N. Y. City

he uses to satisfy his craving for drink. And so it happens that the little one goes to the stage door to beg for her father.

Her heated imagination fastens itself upon the poster showing Mlle. Nichette and her ballet, and in the child's imagination the poster apparently comes to life and performs for her benefit. When it fades out she drops her little senseless head upon the sidewalk and there the doctor finds her. Picking her up he carries her back to her dingy tenement and finds that nothing will quiet her but the dance which she thinks she has seen. He is torn between the desire to save his little patient and his intention never to see the dancer again. His humanity wins and going to the theater he tells the dancer simply the story of the little waif's malady. Her large heart at once responds, and taking her chorus and musicians with her, she repairs to the place. They climb the dingy stairs and enter the garret room where the little one lies upon her pallet of straw, and then, beginning softly, they perform the splendid Parisian ballet for their solitary, pitiful little spectator. The little one's brain is satisfied and she soon falls into a deep, healthy sleep. Then it transpires that there was a purpose beneath all this that neither the doctor nor the dancer understood, but which brought them together and resulted in the renewal of their love story to a happy conclusion.

THE DAISY COWBOYS (Dec. 9).—There was some excitement among the cowboys on the Walworth cattle ranch when it became known that Millie Easton, Mr. Walworth's beautiful niece, was coming direct from New York for a few weeks' stay. Millie arrives in the old stage coach during a downpour of rain, but that doesn't in the least dampen the ardor of the cowboys. Among them is bashful Joe, who falls head over heels in love with Millie, but is too timid to tell her so. He does muster up courage enough, however, to write her a note confessing his love, begging her to meet him at a given hour and signs himself, "A Cowboy Admirer." The girl, inclined to be romantic, writes an agreeable note in reply, requesting her unknown cowboy admirer to wear a daisy in order that she may distinguish him from the others. By some hook or crook this epistle does not reach bashful Joe, but instead, falls into the hands of th erest of the cowboys. They surmise for whom the message is intended and see an opportunity to have some fun at Joe's expense. The next day each one provides himself with a daisy and one after another appear at the trysting place to the utter consternation of Millie, who suddenly finds herself in a very uncomfortable and yet most laughable predicament. Her discomfiture and final breakaway give the boys no end of amusement. The laugh is on bashful Joe, who at the very moment of all this hilarity, is contemplating the easiest mode of suicide in a secluded spot in the woods. But Fate ordains it differently, for Millie happens by chance to come upon him at the vital moment. Explanations follow which prove that they secretly admired each other for some time. Joe now boldly declares his love for her and is accepted. Joyfully they hasten to her uncle's house to announce the engagement, and thus the laugh is turned on the rest of the boys.

KALEM.

ARRAH-NA POGUE (Dec. 4).—Beamish McCoul joined the Irish insurrection and had become a leader in the movement when he was arrested and placed in Wicklow jail. His property was confiscated by the authorities. When his followers learned of his imprisonment, they perfected a plot for his escape, which involved a rope, a fast horse and a boat to carry him from the country.

Arrah Meelish, the prisoner's foster sister, volunteered to carry the idea of their plot to him. She approached the armed sentinels and begged permission to kiss her brother farewell, as the next day would bring about his execution. While kissing him a note was slipped from her mouth to his without being detected by the wardens. Later the guards were seized and Beamish made his escape from the prison, hurried to his sweetheart, Fanny Powers, bid her farewell and left for France.

Four years Beamish spent in reckless exile, and, unable to endure it longer, returned to Ireland. He learned that Fanny was still true to him, having refused Colonel O'Grady, the magistrate, and her legal guardian. Beamish, on his arrival, quickly gathers together his old friends. He robs Michael Feeney, collector of the Government Clerk's Office of his gold and banknotes and of his free pass across the mountain, because they had confiscated his property. Arrah, who has promised her hand to Shaun, a postman, secretes her foster brother in her barn and informs him of her imminent marriage. Beamish gives her as a wedding present a number of banknotes, which he robbed the collector of.

Feeney, who is also a suitor for Arrah's hand, tells her that he suspects Shaun is the man who had robbed him. She is surprised and tells him she has plenty of money, at the same time showing him the banknotes which her foster brother gave her. These are recognized by the collector, who says nothing.

The following day Shaun and Arrah are wed in the old barn in which Beamish is secluded. Major Coffin, an English officer, brings Colonel O'Grady information that a rebel had made a bold robbery and was at present secreted in Arrah's barn. They set out at once for her house, in company with Feeney, the informer, Fanny and soldiers. The gaiety is stopped and the searching party begins its work. Beamish makes his escape through a window, and, grasping a branch of a tree nearby, lowers himself to the ground and hurries away.

Arrah is accused of harboring the rebel as Feeney had found McCoul's coat, which contains the mountain pass. Her husband takes the blame of Beamish's robbery, and says the coat is his. He is arrested and taken to prison.

(Reel 2.)

Beamish goes to the place where he is supposed to meet his sweetheart. He is greatly distressed at not finding her there. As he sits in solitude, a messenger arrives fith a letter from Fanny, saying that she had been at Arrah's cottage and knew all. He replies, stating that he has left for Dublin to visit the Secretary of State and secure, if possible, a pardon for Shaun.

Fanny returns home and announces to Colonel O'Grady that she is now prepared to become his wife, but before their marriage he must obtain a pardon for the release of Shaun, who is ignorant of the whole affair. The colonel consents to do his best.

Arrah is now seen at the prison, hopefully awaiting a word from her husband. Feeney enters Shaun's cell, accompanied by Fanny. Feeney starts to heap insults upon Arrah, and although Shaun's hands are tied, he pounces upon him, causing him to cry out for help. The guards order Feeney from the place. Fanny tells Shaun that she is going to denounce her affianced husband in order to save the postman from unjust punishment. Arrah, at this time, comes to the door and falls into her husband's arms and confesses that it was Beamish she had concealed in her barn. Everybody is ordered out of the room as the guards conduct Shaun into the courtroom to await trial. The verdict handed down is to the effect that Shaun must die the following day.

(Reel 3.)

Beamish McCoul arrives at the Secretary of State in Dublin and proclaims his identity with a written confession of the affair. Colonel O'Grady arrives a few minutes later and the secretary hides McCoul behind the curtains, while O'Grady makes a plea for Shaun's release The third person to put in an appearance is Fanny Powers, and the secretary conceals the Colonel in another place about the room. During her interview, the two men, each unconscious of the presence of the other, finding it impossible to restrain themselves longer, slip from their hiding places and confront the young woman. The old secretary reunites Beamish and his sweetheart, writes a pardon for Shaun, which he hands to the colonel, and the three depart on their missions.

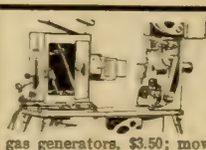
Meanwhile Shaun's hour approaches. Arrah climbs to the battlements of the castle in the hope of seeing her husband for the last time. Shaun discovers a loose stone in his cell and with almost superhuman strength, breaks the barred window, thereby effecting his escape.

Feeney meets Arrah upon the battlement and tries to induce her to forget Shaun and become his wife. She refuses. He is infuriated. In the meantime Shaun is stealthily climbing up the ivy on the outside of the jail, and when he reaches the top he enters into a fierce struggle with Feeney, who is finally overpowered and thrown into the waters below. At this moment the colonel, Beamish and Fanny arrive with Shaun's pardon. Beamish asks Shaun to pardon him for all the trouble he has caused him, which is joyfully granted, and the story ends showing Shaun placing his arms about his wife's neck.

THE LONG ARM OF THE LAW (Dec. 6).—Sancho, a Mexican outlaw visits his old haunts and is recognized by Sheriff Armstrong. The recognition being mutual Sancho quickly makes his escape pursued by the sheriff. Sancho lays in wait for his pursuer, lassos and drags him from his horse, sending him back home a sadder but wiser man. Two weeks later Sancho crosses the Mexican border into California and under the name of Pedro applies for work on the De Guerra ranch.

Dave Carlton, manager of the De Guerra ranch, pleads his cause and is accepted by his employer's daughter, the pretty Olivetta. Sancho tries to make love to Olivetta, but is repulsed. While sending out invitations to the betrothal festivities, Carlton invites his old friend, Sheriff Armstrong, to join them in their merry-making. A week later the festival taeks place. Armstrong arriving with other guests sees Sancho among the men. Telling Dave that he is a notorious bandit a plan is laid to effect his capture, but the alert Mexican foils them and makes his escape. Making a quick rush he takes the girl, Olivetta, around the waist and holds her as a living shield to cover his flight. After a long running pursuit the desperate Mexican is finally at bay on the summit of El Capitan. Fighting for his life before the advance of the posse, Sancho is finally driven back to the edge of the precipice. With a wild cry he loses his balance and falls to his death.

TOO MUCH REALISM (Dec. 8).—Lyn, a cowgirl disapproves of the manner in which Western life is portrayed in motion pictures. While the actors are busy rehearsing a scene Lyn decides to play a joke on them. Selecting three or four pairs of chaps and various articles of wardrobe, she rides to a neighbor's house and secures, the assistance of a bunch of pretty girls to aid her in her scheme to give the moving picture people a little realism for their pictures. Arriving at the scene, where the players are hard at work the gils break into the picture and stir things up generally. The village constable, a quiet onlooker, thinks this is all in the play and enjoys a hearty laugh. As the cowgirls ride away the manager explains the situation and Mr. Constable goes for help and the mischievious girls are eventually rounded up and placed in jail, but although they find themselves in durance vile, the girls all pronounce it a huge joke.



20,000 roll tickets, $1.40; 50 5-8 cored carbons, $1.15; stereopticon objectives, 50c to $3.00; stereopticons, $15.00; rheostats, $3.00 to $5.00; arc lamps, $1.75, $2.00 and $3.25 Condensers, 50c; calcium jets, $2.80; acetylene jets, $2.50; gas generators, $3.50; moving picture objectives, $2.75; jackets, $2.75. List of moving picture repair parts at fair prices. Sprocket wheel, 85c; films, 1c a foot. Catalogue on request. L. HETZ, 300 E. 23d St., N.Y.

"AGFA" DEVELOPERS

Have the Sanction of the

MOVING PICTURE PRODUCERS

Write for Prices, Etc.

Berlin Aniline Works

213-215 WATER STREET

NEW YORK

Managers and Their Audiences Demand Features

HERE THEY ARE!

Two Gigantic Three-Reel Productions

STATE AND TERRITORY RIGHTS SELLING FAST

"The AVIATOR"

A three-reel subject full of sensational and wonderful Aerial feats and one of the most realistic film subjects ever produced.

"ZIGOMAR"

Great French Detective Story. Dealing with one of the most desperate criminals ever known. Wonderful transformation scenes. Bound to hold audiences spellbound until the finish.

Lithographed Posters — Photo Lobby Display

These pictures are copyrighted and we will protect all those buying state or territory rights.

Write for Descriptive Illustrated Booklet

THE FEATURE & EDUCATIONAL FILM CO.

Sole Owners Columbia Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio

COMMON SENSE and science have at last solved the most important problem in the moving picture business.

If you are interested in moving pictures you will be interested in this.

You have wanted us for years—we want you next week.

Announcement and illustration with full description will appear in this space next week.

Inventors Specialty Mfg. Co.

401 Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.

PATHE.

HOBO LUCK (Dec. 6).—Two miserable, down-trodden specimens of humanity on the hike, stopped at the mouth of a little grove to lounge, one, out gathering sticks and leaves to build a fire, finds a piece of paper, on which Amelia Maiden-blush, in a moment of great anguish, discloses the fact that she has buried her treasure beneath the old chestnut tree. Highly excited, he joins brother hobo, and starts to dig up the ground around the chestnut tree. A load of buckshot raises both off their feet; when they touch the ground they are in full cry and seem to be most enthusiastic about getting away from there at a gait that would do credit to any New York business man. At the speed they are traveling they were due to reach the Gulf the following morning, but are interrupted in the pursuit of life, liberty and happiness by the sheriff, who locks them up in jail. They make their escape from calaboose, however, and finally, after many thrilling experiences, find themselves back in the original spot under the old chestnut tree. Here, with great ceremony, they dig up the treasure—and what do you suppose it was? See the film and find out.

POISONED ARROWS (Dec. 7).—In the army post the soldiers are all being vaccinated. Over behind one of the tents the seargeant's little son has a little Indian girl in tow, and opening his daddy's kit, he extracts an arrow from it and proceeds to vaccinate the little Indian girl, much to her discomfort. Nothing much is thought of the incident when discovered, until the next day, when the Indian girl dies—the arrow being poisoned at the end. The little Indian victim is buried on the edge of a grove not far from the army post. The next day the little chap who has caused the trouble is playing near the scene of the burial with his little sister. The mother of the Indian child visits her baby's grave. She steals the little girl, and running to the Indian camp, claims a life for a life. The little white girl is about to be burned to death when the soldiers, summoned from the post by the little boy, arrive and rescue her.

HER LITTLE SLIPPER (Dec. 9).—On an old plantation, works Uncle Jim, a slave. His one joy in life is the daughter of his mistress, and through her efforts he becomes a house servant. When war breaks out, Colonel Tremere, the father of the little girl and owner of Uncle Jim, fights under the Confederate flag. In an engagement near his home, he is fatally wounded in a charge and Old Uncle Jim, running out on the battlefield, rescues his dying master. The war closes. The slaves are freed and Uncle Jim wanders to the North. Thirty years later, he goes back to his old home at Lynchburg, carrying with him the only possession he has cherished through life, the little slipper of the little girl. The final meeting between Uncle Jim and his "Li'le Missis," who now is grown and has a little child of her own, is very affecting.

C. G. P. C.

SECRET OF THE CONFESSIONAL (Dec. 5).—The Duke of Bracciano is away at the wars, while at home his wife amuses herself with the attentions of a troubadour. One day the wars are over and the duke returns to his chateau. On entering his ancestral pile, he reads posted on a blank wall an anonymous declaration regarding the outrageous conduct of his wife. Hastening home, he tries to surprise his wife's secret, but fails. Determined, however, to learn her secret, he decides on a wily scheme. Although this scheme involves a sacrilege, he does not shrink, but, with a determination which has made him a famous warrior, he sticks persistently to his plan. He enters the church when he learns that his wife is going to confession—there he learns all. Following the duchess home he kills the woman and then sends a letter to her lover saying that she awaits him. When he arrives, the duke dispatches him also.

EVA'S FAITHFUL FURNITURE (Dec. 8).—Eva is dispossessed. Thrown out, sold out and chased out. After the auction, while she is wandering disconsolately along the streets, she comes across her late possessions, stacked up outside of a second-hand dealer's shop, and when the furniture sees Eva, it dances for joy. The piano runs the whole scale, and the chairs fairly dance for joy. Down the street runs Eva and after her flies the furniture, th echairs making good time, because they have four legs to walk on. Two oil paintings lead the procession and the piano brings up the rear, smiling broadly. Eva leads the excited furniture to her old home, where the whole tribe triumphantly gallop up the stairs and assume their old positions in Eva's room.

VITAGRAPH.

WAR (Dec. 8).—In the gray dawn of an October day, as the inhabitants of a village street in Tripoli are engaged in the enjoyment of their several pursuits of life, an Arab rushes upon the peaceful scene, announcing that Italy has declared war against Turkey and that the Italian warships are now in the harbor, shelling the city. Arna, an Arab girl, upon hearing the announcement, tremblingly clings to her sweetheart, Midas, who reassuringly tries to calm her.

The Italian transports load their troops into the small boats, preparatory to landing upon the shores of Turkey, where an Arab fisherman immediately suspects their purpose and rushes madly inland to spread the warning to his countrymen. The Italian soldiers, with guns, cavalry and infantry, enter the Arab village, mowing down everything before them. Arna's father is dragged through the streets. Arna, tenderly sustaining her mother, learns that her father has been taken by the Italian soldiers, and frantically makes her way in search of him, accompanied by Midas, only to find that her father has been ruthlessly slain. Arna and Midas stand side by side and face to face with the enemy until their helpless resistance is mercifully ended by the murderous bullets of the desecraters.

Mad with the frenzy of the spirit of war, the beseigers, not content with the desolation and slaughter with which they have strewn their pathway, apply their torches to the pyre of misery.

Among the Exhibitors

Rome, Ga.—Interstate Amusement Company awarded contract to Wilken & Johnson to remodel building as moving picture theater.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Atlas Theater Company will erect a new moving picture theater at 20th Street and Fond du Lac Avenue, to cost $20,000.

Ley, Ia.—Smith & Campbell have sold their moving picture theater to Porter L. Wilborn, of this city.

Antioch, Cal.—H. M. Deede will erect a new theater here.

Wakefield, Mass.—A new theater is to be erected by C. W. Hodgdon, of the Princess Theater, on Mechanic Street.

Houston, Tex.—Mr. Siman, manager of the Princess, Royal and Lyric Theaters, in Houston, has recently opened three more theaters in Dallas, Oklahoma City, and Waco.

Houston, Tex.—Mr. Billings, owner of the Vaudette Theater here, has recently sold out to Mr. Exidius, of the Star picture house.

Parsons, Kan.—John H. Kamm has sold the Gem moving picture show to Niles Moore.

Waverly, Ohio.—Mr. Stillwell, of Springfield, has purchased the New Waverley Theater from Mr. Hays.

Covington, Ky.—Plans are being completed for the building of a new vaudeville theater at Madison Avenue and 7th Street.

Portland, Ore.—John Sullivan will erect a theater at 703 Powell Street to cost $5,000.

Chicago, Ill.—Big Four Amusement Company. Capital, $12,000. H. M. Rosenblaum, S. Spitzer, and E. Mayer.

Chicago, Ill.—Pritiken & Hemmelstien will erect a new theater at 1320-22 Northwestern Avenue, to cost $15,000.

Laporte, Ind.—Plans have been prepared for the new $20,000 theater to be erected here.

Westgate, Ia.—A new opera house will be erected here.

Detroit, Mich.—A new theater will be erected at Grand River and Trumbull Avenue.

Galva, Ill.—The Columbia Theater here has been sold to the Princess Theater.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Work will soon start on the new theater to be erected on the Plankinton site.

St. Cloud, Minn.—The Princess Theater Circuit Company has been organized here with a capital of $25,000.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Ground has been broken on New Market Street for the erection of a gorgeous picture house, which will cost $25,000 and be under the ownership of Charles Feinler.

New York City.—Mr. A. Cantor has filed plans for the erection of a moving picture theater at 55-59 Chrystie Street for S. H. Katz Realty Company, to cost $15,000.

Bridgeton, N. J.—Assemblyman Chris Kand has leased a building in Melvilleland and will convert it into a first rate picture palace.

Springfield, Ill.—Leonard & Gardner will erect a one-story building at Virden, Ill., to be used as a moving picture theater.

Duquoin, Ill.—The Majestic Theater, erected at a cost of $30,000, has been purchased by local capitalists.

Olin, Ia.—A new opera house will be erected here on the site of the old one.

Manhattan, N. Y.—Henrietta Crosman Company, to operate theaters. Capital, $10,000. Maurice Campbell and H. C. Campbell.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Mr. M. Stutz's new picture theater situated on Main Street, between Sixth and Seventh Streets, has opened with first class Independent service. The seating capacity of this new enterprise is 250. An electric organ has also been installed. Licensed pictures are to be used in the new picture theater, The Butler, which is being erected at 6th and Hill Streets. Another nickelodeon to be reopened is the Star, on East 5th Street. This place is running Independent pictures. The Pearl Theater, on 1st and Alabama Streets, has changed its film service from Licensed to Independent service.

New York City.—J. Arthur Fischer has leased to the New York Photoplay Company the six-story building at No. 683 Sixth Avenue, adjoining the west corner of 39th Street, for $150,000, which they will convert into an elaborate and commodious picture and vaudeville theater.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Mr. Samuel Morrison has filed plans with the building inspector for the erection of a high class moving picture theater on Longshore Street, west of Hegerman, to cost $4,100.

St. Peter, Minn.—F. E. English, who has a moving picture theater in New Ulm, will establish a new house in the Rinkel Building, on Minnesota Avenue.

New York, N. Y.—A new theater is to be erected at 220-228 West 48th Street.

Middleburg, Pa.—The New Lyric Theater, on Market Street, has been sold by Mr. Ramig to Geo. Motz.

Reading, Pa.—Plans are being prepared for the improvements to be made to the Grand Opera House.

West Duluth, Minn.—Plans are being prepared for a new theater, to be erected on Central Avenue, at a cost of $5,000.

Rochester, N. Y.—J. Van Overbake has sold his moving picture theater to Elray G. Brown.

Louisville, Ky.—A lease has been taken on the property situated at 226 West Market Street, which will be converted into a high class moving picture showhouse.

Pasadena, Cal.—Messrs. McDermott & Stone are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here, which will be known as the Crown.

Freehold, N. J.—Plans have been filed with the building inspector for the establishment of a high class picture theater on Main Street for Messrs. Clayton & Danahay.

New York, N. Y.—The New York Photoplay Company has leased the building situated at 683 6th Avenue and will convert same into a high class picture palace.

Santa Anna, Cal.—Mirror Theater Company. Capital, $25,000. A. E. Bird, T. H. Fowler and H. C. Brown.

Pittsburg, Pa.—The Consolidated Moving Picture Company has bought the Geyer Opera House, at Scottdale, Pa.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Vaudeville Theater Construction Company will erect a new theater building at Vandeventer and Maffit Avenues.

Millville, Pa.—A new theater is to be established in this town.

New York City.—A new moving picture theater is being planned, to be built on the east side of Third Avenue and 59th Street, which will cost $15,000 and be under the ownership of W. B. Cockran.

Logansport, Ind.—The remodeled motion picture theater in Third Street, now known as the Cozy, is playing to capacity houses under the management of Harry B. Elliott.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Two permits for moving picture theaters have been taken out. The first has been for a $10,000 building at Thomas and Murray Avenues and will be built by J. D. Borum. The Crowley Investment Company will expend $10,000 on National Avenue, between Thirtieth and Thirty-first Avenues.

New York, N. Y.—Geo. W. Lederer and Harry H. Frazee are the ones who will erect a new theater at 220-228 West 48th Street, to cost $225,000.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Smith will erect a new moving picture theater at 719-21 Tenth Street, South, to cost $9,500.

Bangor, Me.—New Exchange Street moving picture house and dance hall to be built by Pepe & McKinnon, on Exchange Street, will be commenced next week.

Reading, Pa.—The National moving picture theater on State Street, which has been successfully operated by Louis Mees during the past few years, has been purchased by Brua C. Krammes.

Savannah, Ga.—The Montgomery Amusement Company will enlarge the Odeon Theater.

Kansas City, Mo.—Breyfogle Bros. will erect a moving picture theater, to cost $3,000.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—B. H. Powell and E. Cook will erect a theater, to cost $50,000.

Waterloo, Ia.—Ed. Croak and B. H. Powell will erect a new theater at a cost of $55,000 at Oklahoma City.

Gulfport, Miss.—The Elite Theater, at 27th Avenue and 13th Street, is to be remodeled.

Chicago, Ill.—A new theater is to be built at Ellston and California Avenues by Gustav A. Gottschalk and C. H. Kussel.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Louis Friedman will erect a Yiddish theater at 6th and Aldrich Avenues.

Sacramento, Cal.—A Japanese theater will be built at M and 2d Streets.

Winona, Minn.—Mott & Rossner will erect a new $50,000 theater on Main Street.

Virginia, Minn.—The contract for the construction of the new Lyric Theater building has been awarded to L. F. Ursin, of Duluth. Will cost $50,000.

Port Richmond, S. I., N. Y.—A new picture theater will be erected at Richmond Terrace and Maple Avenue, Staten Island.

Lexington, Ky.—James B. Haggin is making preparations to build a first-class theater here, at Limestone, on East Short and Main Streets.

Oakland, Cal.—Plans have been completed for the erection of the new Oakland Photoplay Theater, to be erected on the H. C. Capwell lot on Broadway.

LUX FILMS

Speak for Themselves

Released Friday, Dec. 1, 1911

BILL AS A VETERINARY SURGEON

COMEDY

Length, 488 feet

The Making of An Aeroplane

INDUSTRIAL

Length, 419 feet

A most interesting subject on the making of an Aeroplane, giving in a concise manner the details of the work while the concluding views are of the Aeroplane—higher and higher into the clouds.

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th St. New York City

Telephone 3427 Stuyvesant

Sold Only Through
MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING and SALES COMPANY
ONLY EASTMAN RAW STOCK USED

CINES CO. of ROME

Studios and Factories, Rome and Padova

CAPITAL { Preferred Stock Lire 2,000,000
Ordinary Stock, 3,750,000

Fully Paid-up Lire 5,750,000

ITALIAN-TURKISH WAR.

The first series are now all sold and the next shipment expected about end of month, showing Aviators in Warfare, Episodes of last engagement, Insurrection of Arabs. Approximately 1000 ft.

Orders executed in strict rotation.
Posters.

Branch for the United States of America

445 Broome St., cor. Broadway
New York City

TELEPHONE, SPRING 9232

TELEGRAPHS, CINES NEW YORK

The Power Behind the Thrown is a harsh and unpleasant force. Why be one?

Run Rex!

The wise all know the value of wealth but the wealthy do not all know the value of wisdom. Be wise and rich!

Run Rex!

There's no use in being that kind of an optimist who, when the rain does come, borrows some one else's umbrella.

Run Rex!

On Thursday, Thanksgiving Day November 30th

we are giving you one to be thankful for:

"THE STRANGER"

A Picture with Genius and Ginger!

It will be a "sauce" of-profic. Get the gravy!

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO.

573 Eleventh Avenue
New York City

Sales Co. Rex ability is strange, but its consistency is "STRANGER"

Independent Film Stories

NESTOR.

HAPPY HOBO'S HELP (Nov. 27).—James Carlington, better known as "Happy Hobo," belongs to the Knights of Trampdom. It's night and the knight removes hat and coat and makes himself comfortable in a haystack to sleep.

"Rolling Pete," also a Knight of the Road, does not hesitate in taking Happy's hat and coat. Happy puts on Pete's ragged garments. He pauses before a pretentious mansion, and the lady of the house furnishes the poor man with some discarded clothes of her lord and master, the Rev. Goodson.

Wilhelm Blitzen does not like to have Harry Raverly pay court to his daughter, Johanna, and the two young people elope. "Happy Hobo," looking every inch a minister, is pressed into service by the runaway lovers, and "papa" arrives just as Happy has completed the marriage ceremony. Blitzen departs, vowing punishment to poor Happy, who tells the young folks the truth.

Harry and Johanna rush in search of a Justice of the Peace, who promptly reduces two to one. Papa Blitzen receives the "glad" tidings over the phone and then goes forth to chastise the pseudo minister. In the meantime, Happy discovers Pete in the arms of Morpheus under a spreading tree, and soon comes into his own (clothes) again. Pete rejoices over the sudden change and admires his new "get-up."

Down the road comes Blitzen. Poor Pete suffers the result of mistaken identity till the newlyweds come on the scene and set things to rights. Papa is finally induced to say, "Bless you, my children."

WHEN THE WEST WAS WILD (Nov. 29).—Young Jack Wheeler was delighted with the settler's family—Fred Newton would make a dandy pal, and as for Miss Newton—here Jack mentally determined to see as much of Louise as posible.

So the next day, spying her from an adjoining cliff as she hurried to the spring, Jack quickly urged his horse forward, arriving just as four Indians surrounded Louise, endeavoring to persuade her to part with a long string of beads she was wearing. But the girl, badly frightened, and unable to understand the Redskins, screamed for help. Instantly Jack fired, killing Little Wolf, the chief's son, and scattering the others, but not until they had wounded Jack.

Helping the young man with the saddle, Louise hurried him to their tent, where, after making him as comfortable as possible, Mrs. Newton mounted Jack's horse and hastened away for Doc Farley. But in the meantime, Chief Running Water and his braves had gone on the warpath to avenge Little Wolf's death; so as soon as Mrs. Newton appeared on the trail, the Indians gave chase. The woman would have gotten safely away, had her horse not gone lame, and, therefore, was forced to abandon him. Seeing no other means of escape, Mrs. Newton quickly tied her lariat around a large boulder and let herself down, intending to flee by the ledge below. Unfortunately, the rope was too short, for instead of the forty feet she had imagined, the ledge proved to be at least eighty, and the terrified woman hung dangling in the air, a target for the Redskins above.

Taking a firm hold with her left hand, Mrs. Newton reached for her revolver; at the first shot, Arthur Hastings, who was out hunting and had stopped to speak to Hank Martin, looked across the canyon. Sending Hank for the cowboys, the hunter took careful aim, picking off a Redskin just as he raised a huge rock to throw down upon Mrs. Newton. And so he kept them at bay during the wild ride of the cowboys to her rescue. Then, while part of the men drew the exhausted and almost unconscious woman up, the others gave chase to the Indians, and when they returned with Doc Farley to escort Mrs. Newton, not one of the attacking Redskins had been left to tell the tale.

Jack's wounds proved to be only serious enough to cause Louise anxiety, that seemed to please the young man.

A WESTERN FEUD (Dec. 2).—John Randell and Bill Canby have been neighbors since boyhood, so that when the former's son and the latter's daughter announced their intention of being married in June, great was the rejoicing in both families.

It was thus that matters stood when Canby called to see his friend in regard to buying a bay mare, which in Randell's eyes was a perfect little animal. In this respect, however, Canby was forced to contradict him, and as a consequence, a heated argument arose.

Hurrying home, Canby surprised his daughter, Nellie, by ordering her sweetheart, Jack Randall, from the place. Nevertheless, no sooner did she find the coast clear, than the girl mounted her horse and started for the Randell ranch. On the way however, she met Jack, who had been using every argument in his power with his father, but to no avail. So, after talking the matter over, the young people decided to be married at once, and accordingly set out for the minister's.

It was then that an exciting chase followed, for in the meanwhile, both son and daughter had been missed; so shrewdly guessing their whereabouts, the two angry fathers, accompanied by the boys from both ranches, started in pursuit. But thanks to the swiftness of their horses, the young lovers not only reached the minister's, but had actually been pronounced man and wife before the pursuers burst into the room, to be confronted by two smiling faces, before which, after a little coaxing and a few well chosen words on the part of the good clergyman, the fathers' anger gradually melted, and to the intense relief of the happy bride and groom, they clasped hands.

MUTT & JEFF'S SCHEME THAT FAILED (Dec. 2).—Broke as usual, the two friends are wondering where the next meal is coming from. Unable to withstand the pangs of hunger, Jeff goes out to waylay a friend of his and make a touch. He keeps watch and supports himself by leaning against a saloon door.

The "barkeep" receives the tip that fly-cops are watching his place, and tells the bartender to slip some mazuma to the first fly-cop he sees. Jeff is seen first and gathers a crisp ten-dollar bill, with which he starts for "home."

The saloon proprietor, believing himself safe from the police, allows the boys to gamble openly. A Police Inspector comes on the scene, and after some excitingly funny stunts, departs with everybody's cash.

Mutt is anxious to make some easy money, so he repairs to the saloon and does the leaning act, The "boss" spies him. Ha! Here's another pesky fly cop! Let us fix him up! Unsuspecting Mutt is invited to enter the liquid emporium and have a drink—a sort of an appetite tickler. He boldly enters the trap; the "bunch" fall on him and it's "good-night" for poor Mutt.

The best that Jeff can do is to visit the hospital where his partner is temporarily domiciled and take some flowers to the unfortunate fellow. The best that Mutt can do is to eat the flowers, which act he performs with lightning rapidity.

REPUBLIC.

THE SAVANNAH AUTO RACES (Dec. 5).—The greatest sporting event of the year, to be released by the Republic Film Company, consists of one reel of the most interesting parts of the Third International Road Race under the auspices of the Savannah Automobile Club for the Grand Prize of the Automobile Club of America, to be run at Savannah, Ga., Thursday, Nov. 30, 1911.

The Grand Prize—The length of the course is approximately 17 miles, which will be covered 24 times, making the distance of the race about 408 miles. The award of the trophy carries an additional award of $7,000 in cash.

W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Cup Race—The length of this race is about 289 miles. To the car covering the required distance in the shortest elapsed time, there will be awarded the William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Cup. The award of the cup carries an additional award of $2,000 in cash. To the winner of the cup and cash there will be awarded a special "donor's trophy" for permanent ownership.

Tiedman Trophy Race—The length of this race will be about 170 miles. To the car covering the required distance in the shortest elapsed time, there will be awarded the Tiedman Trophy. The award of the trophy carries an additional award of $1,000 in cash.

The Savannah Challenge Trophy—The length of this race is about 221 miles. To the car covering the required distance in the shortest elapsed time, there will be awarded the Savannah Trophy. The award of the cup carries an additional award of $1,000 in cash. To the winner of the cup there will be awarded a special "donor's trophy" for permanent ownership.

SOLAX.

A TROUBLESOME PICTURE (Nov. 29).—Psychologists say that dreams are the reaction of one's thoughts during the day. This is strikingly true in the case of the hero in "A Troublesome Picture." He is an ordinary business man, is successful in his enterprises, and as a recreation he dabbles in art.

He buys a life-size painting of a reclining Egyptian princess. The pose of the princess arouses the displeasures of his wife and mother-in-law. In spite of their protestations, however, the picture remains in the household, much to the chagrin of our hero's wife and her mother. He gets tempting offers from a friend to sell the picture, but he brushes them aside.

One evening our hero comes home from a trying day at his office. He sits on the lounge and soon falls asleep. He dreams that the Egyptian painting has assumed life. The princess comes out of the picture and disturbs him with embarrassing embraces. While in this predicament his wife and mother-in-law enter, and they are scandalized. His mother-in-law goes after him, with the result that he is minus a good part of his hair.

A great number of complications arise, but it all terminates with our hero's awakening; he finds himself struggling with the house cat, which had found a perch on top of his bald spot.

FUN ON BOARD THE "U. S. VERMONT" (Nov. 29).—The pastimes of Uncle Sam's tars are always interesting. These rovers of the sea have their own peculiar way of killing time, which usually does not hang as heavily on their hands as it does on the hands of landlubbers. The picture shows the deck of the "Vermont" with the sailors at a boxing match and other sports.

THE REVOLUTIONARY ROMANCE (Dec. 1).—A young girl visits at the home of friends, where she meets a dashing young man, who falls in love with her. Shortly after his proposal to her she receives word from her father in Trenton that he had met with reverses, and that her immediate return home was imperative. She leaves her friends and returns to her father to help him start life anew.

In the meanwhile Congress declares war on England. Her lover joins the British ranks as an officer. He is dispatched by his general to spy on the American forces entrenched near Trenton, and if possible get plans of their entrenchments. A sentinel overhears the instruction given to the spy. He is punished for his curiosity, and later deserts and makes his way to the American lines.

The spy, on the road to the American encampment, meets and holds up a courier of the American army and takes from his his dispatches. The spy rides off after strapping the courier to a tree. The spy goes to a tavern and here, to his surprise, he meets his sweetheart and her father, they having decided to earn a living by running a wayside inn.

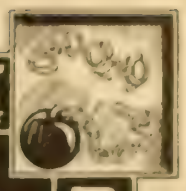
American soldiers are soon in pursuit of the assailant of their courier and trace the spy to the tavern. The spy makes his escape with the connivance of his sweetheart, but before she lets him go, she demands at the point of a revolver, the return of the papers.

There is an interesting counterplot interwoven with the action which geographically brings out the atmosphere of the times. The deserter in the counterplot is both the undoing of himself and the spy. The British spy and his sweetheart are happily reunited, however, and presumably live in bliss ever afterward.

MAJESTIC

LOVE HEEDS NOT SHOWERS (Dec. 3).—Mary has been invited by friends to officiate at a charity bazaar as fortune teller. Her brother invites his artist friend Jack to pay them a visit, with covert match-making intentions regarding him and his sister. On the way home from the bazaar the auto breaks down and Mary in her gypsy costume decides to walk on. Jack arriving by train also decides to walk. On the way he spies a gypsy camp. Further on he encounters Mary, who has hurt her ankle. He is smitten by her beauty and asks her if she belongs to the gypsy camp he has just seen. She says no and escapes, dropping a sidecomb. He picks it up and decides to find her again. He comes to the house and meets the family, including Mary, but does not recognize her in her ordinary costume. He goes in search of the camp, but it has obeyed the calling of the highway, and flown. Mary by this time learns to love this handsome guest, but cannot understand his strange conduct. By accident she finds her comb in his pocket and divines the delightful truth. She therefore plans a masquerade party. He attends and on a seat under an ancient tree pops the ancient question in a deluge of rain.

STATES RIGHTS FOR SALE—FOR THE GREATEST MOVING PICTURE EVER MADE



REAL PRISON LIFE

REAL FEATURE FILM

EVERY THING IS FREE AND THE Attraction Framed Ready For the Road

LOBBY DISPLAY
HALF SHEETS
ONE SHEETS
THREE SHEETS
SIX SHEETS

Photograph Frames DISPLAY BOARDS
POSTERS BANNERS
TACKARDS
LECTURE STREET DRIVE

20 YEARS IN SING SING

SAY!

When we tell you that this production is one of the best ever offered, and we are ready to prove it, why not drop us a line and let us explain? Or better still, come to Chicago and convince yourself.

HOW DOES THIS APPEAL

as features in the picture. THE SAW MILL IN OPERATION. THE COUNTY FAIR. THE EXCITING HORSE RACES. THE ARREST. REAL LIFE IN THE FAMOUS PENITENTIARY. THE SENSATIONAL ESCAPE THROUGH THE SEWER. THE MAN HUNT. TRAILED BY BLOODHOUNDS. THE LEAP FOR LIFE. A GREAT WRONG RIGHTED. Even when you consider the fine line of advertising matter is sure to draw business, is not the proposition well worth careful thought? Therefore we extend an invitation

TO YOU, MR. STATE RIGHT MAN,

to come to our office and talk the matter over. We are sure you will not regret it. If you purchase a state right we will refund your fare to and from Chicago.

AMERICA'S FEATURE FILM CO.

403 SCHILLER BLDG. CHICAGO, ILL.

THERE IS

ONLY ONE

BIO RECOGNIZED STANDARD CARBON

Try it and you will forget the names of all other brands. Then it will be

"BIO" FOR YOURS

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

NEW YORK 165 Greenwich St. MILWAUKEE 114-116 Huron St. SAN FRANCISCO 19 Sutter St

AND ALL LIVE FILM EXCHANGES

RELIANCE.

A HAPPY THANKSGIVING (Nov. 29).—Jimmy is a little, motherless boy, whose rich father neglects him. Jimmy pleads with him to eat Thanksgiving dinner at home. Father is called out of town, however, and phones to the governess. At the depot he changes his mind and decides to go home to Jimmy, but the lad has already received the message, and, grief stricken, runs away. A farmer who had unsuccessfully tried to renew his mortgage with Jimmy's father finds the boy, while the police of the city are looking for him. The father is notified and comes out to the farm as the family is sitting down for its Thanksgiving dinner. The boy and his father meet in an affecting scene, and the man realizes how he has neglected his child. He is asked to dine, and, obsessed by the Thanksgiving spirit, tears up the farmer's mortgage and happily joins the gathering.

THE POISON CUP (Dec. 2).—Mary is married to John Adams and discovers that he is a drug fiend and a thief. She surprises him and his pal dividing their plunder, and in her anger threatens to expose him. He threatens her with a revolver, and in the strguge that follows he is shot. She thinks he is dead and becomes mentally deranged, wandering about till a wealthy woman finds her, who gives her a home. Mary recovers her reason but suffers a loss of memory. The benefactress is taken sick and dies, and Mary marries the doctor who attended her. The first husband discovers her and calls upon her during the doctor's absence. The shock of meeting him brings back her lost memory and a realization of the awful situation she is in. Adams tries to blackmail her, and to get rid of him she makes an appointment for that evening. As the times approaches she loses her self-control and decides to commit suicide by poison. She mixes the draught and goes to say a last good-bye to her child in another room. Adams comes in and after waiting a little while his rum-scorched throat moves him to drink the poison, he thinking it is water. The doctor comes home as the wife enters the room. Brokenly she explains to him the situation. He forgives her and leads her away from the lifeless body of the man who caused her so much woe.

BISON.

A WESTERN ONE-NIGHT STAND (Nov. 28).—A one-night stand company coming to a western town sends its female impersonator as advance agent. He arrives attired in his stage make-up and Broncho Bill falls in love with him. The next day the actor discards his wig and makes himself known to the boys, passing out hand-bills for the show that evening. Broncho Bill is ridiculed by the cowboys, and determines to be revenged. He persuades the boys to load up with old eggs and vegetables, and a crowd attends the performance. When the female impersonator comes out he is met with a perfect hail of missiles, and the whole company makes its escape pursued by the howling cowboys, firing in the air.

AN EASTERNER'S PERIL (Dec. 1).—Charlie Harris goes out West to visit his friend, Adams, who owns a ranch, and falls in love with Adams' sister, Ethel. The girl returns his affection and dismisses Wheeler, the foreman, who theretofore had been a suitor. Wheeler and Harris have some words, ending in a fist fight in which the cowboy is beaten. He nurses his grievances, fearing to harm Harris, and finally decides on a plan to get rid of his rival without having suspicion pointed toward himself. With a couple of rough characters he holds up Harris and carries him to the edge of the quicksand. Pointing a gun at him he forces Harris to run, and he sinks into the treacherous sand and is unable to extricate himself. He is discovered by the girls, but having no rope they are unable to rescue him. A wild race against time and death is undertaken by Ethel who secures help at the ranch. Harris is lassoed as he has sunk to his neck, and with difficulty pulled out. Wheeler tries to make his escape, but the cowboys pursue and capture him.

COMET.

BILLY'S LETTERS (Dec. 4).—Billy Graham decides to marry and takes May Tenner for his wife. The nuptials are secret and the first one to learn of it is Gaby de Rose, an old sweetheart. She sends a note of congratulations, in which she also requests the return of her letters. She says that if Billy will do this she wil send back the ones he wrote. She winds up by informing him she is engaged to wed Count de Gassac. Of course, when Billy gets the note he tears it up, but wife finds the pieces, and putting them together, learns what is what. She searches through the house for the missives, but naturally fails to find them, for by this time they are on their way to Gaby, who is a vaudeville performer, and who is appearing at one of the local theaters. Mrs. Graham learns her whereabouts, sees her and demands an explanation. She finds the letters in Gaby's room and a stormy scene ensues. Gaby gets into trouble with the count, who has heard of Gaby's letters to Billy, and promptly calls off the engagement. His decision, however, is only temporary, for on the next day he comes back to Gaby, who is ready to receive him. Billy, during the entire storm, is at the club. When he comes home there is a cold reception for him. Mrs. Graham locks herself in her room. In order to win his wife's sympathy, Billy starts a phonograph going in another room. The instrument plays "All Alone," and hearing the song, and appreciating its sentiment, Mrs. Graham relents, takes hubby to her heart and forgives him.

THE DEAD CANARY (Dec. 8).—Miss Starr, an actress, at the advice of her physician, goes to the country, her only companion being a pet canary. The place selected by her is very rural. On her arrival all the characters of the town make fun of her.

After a few days the canary dies. She finds a taxidermist who is quite glad to make her pet appeal as life-like as possible. His simple nature makes an impression on one whose life on the stage is anything but simple. For no other reason than love he becomes as deeply impressed and soon we find them taking love strolls in the shady lanes. The vilage scandal takes fire. The school board meets and most of the wiseheads insist on Miss Starr making an instantaneous departure for the Great White Way. They are about to present their paper to her at the hotel, when the village parson appears, and on reading the scandalous document, he sends them all home very much ashamed of themselves, and the next day he calls a special meeting in his church to reproach them for their conduct and want of justice. He teaches them a lesson in love for all sorts and conditions of men and women.

The actress and the taxidermist become engaged, and while they sit in love's silence, the clergyman stands on the threshold of the humble cottage and is invited in to seal the tie.

POWERS.

THE LITTLE THIEF (Dec. 5).—It's peculiar, how the human brain conforms itself to abnormalities, under the influence of abnormal conditions or environment. It simply proves for the millionth time that matter cannot master mind. Take a community that is wrought up over a series of mysterious burglaries; the residents are in a state of continual feverish excitement, the talk is always of burglars and the marvelous human thinkery, conforming, refuses to take its allotted rest at night.

With children it is more so, the brain being more impressionable. We prove it by the case of little Freddie, whose imagination carries him so far, that he actually carries a firearm with him, and he blazes away promiscuously. This should earn him a paternal slipper, but the child does actually get the mysterious burglar.

Result, avaunt—slipper! Entree, much kissing and many dainties!

THE SECRET ORDER OF HORNS (Dec. 5).—You're right on the first guess—we show a real imitation. It is taken from the actual experiences of a novice who joined one of the biggest secret orders in the country. You might be a member of it this very minute. If you know your signs, you'll recognize it immediately, and perhaps you'll remember when you were in the place of the poor fellow whom we show being put over the jumps.

TWO MEN AND A GIRL (Dec. 9).—That the evil that men do lives after them, and that the good is oft interred with their bones, we can only prove occasionally, and that by having a fellowman as the example; that is, we must wait for somebody to die to judge whether Shakespeare's axiom applies. To learn it in our own case, we must first die, but then—we can't learn. But there is a way, and that is to pass out of this world by report, only. That's what happened to Ralph Bixby, though, and when the sea cast him up it also gave him a rare opportunity to see the stuff his rival in love was made of; also, he learned something about the woman he took unto himself as a wife before he made the fateful voyage to Australia. He arrives in a home that is his, yet now another's—an interloper within his own threshold. But the two men recognize each other, and a fierce struggle with broadswords relieves the situation—it's a dress-suit against a wanderer's rags, and the field of combat is a magnificent drawing-room. Yet—it's all in life, true as Gospel.

THANHOUSER.

THE NEWSY AND THE TRAMP (Dec. 5).—Ragsy was a plain newsboy. He wasn't even a newsboy with a house; he had been "sellin' papes" from the day his drunkard father kicked him into the street and his abiding place was wherever Unkind Providence permitted him to hang his cap. Often it was in the park, where a bench made a bed of a sort, and where he always had lots of company. Tramps were thick in that park that year. Ragsy came to know the tramps. One of them was named Connors.

Ragsy asked if he couldnt go out on the road with him. Connors laughed, but the newsy persisted. In the end, Connors yielded.

Their wanderings are without adventure until they fall in with some tramps who feel that the newsy is just small enough to squeeze into a neighboring hen roost and pass out some fowl.

Ragsy will not become a thief! The tramp takes his little chum away from the men who would make him a criminal, and resolves to resume his blacksmithing, and keep Ragsy nearby where he can keep watch over him. He finds work in a smithy and puts the boy to school.

Here is where his attentions to Ragsy began to earn dividends for Connors. The head of the little country school is the prettiest schoolma'm in all the country, and when the blacksmith enters the building with Ragsy he meets Her.

Finally, he weds her. Ragsy, let it be said, spurred him on. Newsy knew a good thing when he saw it and he took care that Connors got the girl. So from being his teacher, the girl becomes Ragsy's mother.

BROTHER BOB'S BABY (Dec. 8).—A bachelor, with plenty of money and not a care in the world, suddenly finds himself involved in a sea of trouble. It all starts when his brother, who lives in Trenton, wires that his wife and baby are on their way from the mountains and that he will appreciate it if "Brother Jack" will meet them and see them across town.

The bachelor, with a sigh, prepares to be gallant. He meets the woman and child, also much luggage, and escorts them across town to the Pennsylvania station. There he takes them aboard a train, and believes that his task is over.

But the mother suddenly remembers some purchases she must make, and the good-natured bachelor is prevailed upon to stand guard over the child until she returns. The mother forgets the time and misses the train and the baby and its bachelor uncle start off together.

But the mother is a woman of resource. She wires tips on caring for the baby to various stations along the line, and all would be well were it not for the uncle's awkardness. But he annoys the other passengers, fights with the conductor when that official remonstrates with him, and is finally thrown off at a little station far from Trenton.

It is a hot day and that, together with the necessity of singing to the baby, had made uncle thirsty. He sees a saloon nearby, but does not care to take baby there. Furthermore, the baby will not remain quiet all by itself. But finally fortune smiles on the uncle, although, as afterwards deveops, it is a hypocritical smile.

A dog is being shipped to Philadelphia in a dogbasket, and is left on the platform near the pair of unfortunates. When no one is looking, the thirsty uncle ejects the astonished dog, and places the baby in a place of security. Then he goes off to the cafe and enjoys himself.

Time passes rapidly in joy parlors, and trains do not wait for highballs. The car pulls in, the dogbasket starts on its journey, and uncle is still in blissful ignorance of what is transpiring.

The baggageman finds that instead of a live dog he has a squalling baby on his hands. Being a matter-of-fact individual, he hunts through the train, hoping that some woman will relieve him of his burden. One of the passengers is the baby's mother, and she greets her offspring with glad surprise and delight. And mother and child are reunited. The uncle sent his apologies by wire and then went for a long trip abroad.

IMP.

PERCY, THE MASHER (Dec. 2).—Percy, a masher, is looking out of his window one day when he notices a prepossessing-looking young woman on the opposite side of the street, waving a handkerchief. He thinks that he has attracted her attention and answers to the signal.

He writes her a note to the effect that he desires to meet her. The woman is indignant and shows the letter to her husband. The spouse makes an appointment to meet Percy, and goes heavily veiled, attired in the clothing of his wife. Percy is gallant and spends his money prodigiously, giving his guest a good time.

On the return to the house of Percy's fair charmer, the masher meets with a surprise, for the husband suddenly turns on the young man and gives him a sound thrashing. Percy whines like a whipped cur and an officer is attracted to the melee. He is about to arrest the husband when he removes the disguise and pours his tale into the ears of the interested officer of the law.

When all is explained the sympathies of the copper are all with the husband and Percy seeks his room and meditates on his folly. (Copyrighted, 1911, by the Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.)

PRESIDENT TAFT DEDICATING THE NAVAL TRAINING STATION AT CHICAGO, ILL. (Dec. 2).—President Taft ,with military pomp and splendor is seen dedicating the splendid naval training station at Chicago, the pride of the West. All the important details of the ceremony were taken with many views of the head of the Nation. The ensemble is a large one, thousands of marines and military sailors and soldiers taking part in the elaborate, but solemn and impressive ceremony. (Copyrighted, 1911, by Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.)

THE DUMB MESSENGER (Dec. 4).—Hathaway reads that a valuable necklace has been delivered to Mrs. Darrow, a wealthy woman, who is an invalid.

Susie Leslie, the fiancee of Mrs. Darrow's son, Will, is visiting her. Susie has a dog which is the especial friend of Will.

The butler and the maid at the Darrow home decide to steal the necklace in a bold manner.

Helios Dante's "Inferno"

Has proven to be the biggest money making film ever produced in two reels.

SPECIAL 1-3 and 8 sheet lithographs at 5c a sheet.

The following territory is still open and will be sold at the prices quoted, which are the lowest at which a real FEATURE was ever offered.

Write or wire quick and send a deposit for the states you want.

HELIOS DANTE'S "INFERNO"

(TWO REELS). Approved by National Board of Censors.

Maine New Hampshire Vermont Massachusetts Rhode Island Connecticut	$800.00 including two sets of film.	New Jersey Delaware Maryland Dist. of Columbia	$800.00 including one set of film.
Eastern Pennsylvania	$800.00 including two sets of film.	Oregon Idaho	$600.00 including one set of film.
Utah Arizona Nevada	$600.00 including one set of film.	Wyoming Montana	$600.00 including one set of film.
Texas Oklahoma New Mexico	$1,600.00 including two sets of film.	Missouri Iowa	$1,000.00 including two sets of film.
Nebraska North Dakota South Dakota	$800.00 including one set of film.	Quebec Maritime Prov. Ontario	$1,000.00 including one set of film.

$500.00 REWARD

For information which will lead to the arrest and conviction of anyone infringing our copyrights on DANTE'S "INFERNO" (5 reels) Milano-Films and DANTE'S "INFERNO" (2 reels) Helios make.

Owners of state rights for DANTE'S "INFERNO" will show authority from this company to exploit the same. All others are imposters.

MONOPOL FILM COMPANY

145 West 45th Street - - - NEW YORK CITY

Hathaway also resolves to become the possessor of the bauble and he strolls out to the house of the invalid in a nonchalant manner.

Mrs. Darrow is wheeled into her room and examines the necklace. Susie is with her and is somewhat apprehensive. The butler binds the maid in a chair just outside the room to make the robbery look genuine and to divert suspicion from himself and, masked, he makes an onslaught on the door. The women are terrified, but the door is locked and does not yield. In the meantime, Susie ties a note to the collar of the dog and bids him to go to Will, her lover. He reaches the young man just as he is about to board a train at the station. Darrow reads the note and is horrified. Hastily summoning assistance the rescuing party starts on a run for the house. Before they can reach it the butler has forced the door and springs in and covers the women with his gun.

Just at this juncture Hathaway steps in, turns the tables on the servant and had him captured when Darrow and his men arrive. The butler is unmasked and turned over to them; the maid is released, but her connection with the attempted burglary is not divulged. Hathaway walks away, chuckling to himself, well satisfied with his part of it. (Copyrighted, 1911, by Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.)

TONY AND THE STORK (Dec. 7).—Tony, a young married Italian, finds his purse depleted and hunts in vain for a job. He talks imperfect English and that is a handicap as well as his ignorance of the work he seeks. After many trials, to return home almost distracted, he accosts an agent who is hiring men to work on the construction of a railroad many miles from his home town. Tony insists that he be given work and is finally taken on. He runs to his home to convey the glad tidings to his wife, who is overjoyed at the prospect. Tony packs his belongings in a bag and joins the gang.

The story reverts to his employment and he receives a letter, informing him that his wife is an inmate of a hospital and that he is a father. The Italian is wild with glee and draws his wages and hastens home. Arriving, he starts for the hospital all expectation. On the way he childishly invests a goodly portion of his savings in a baby carriage, a doll and other toys to carry to his child. When he reaches the hospital, he rushes in and begs to see his wife. He announces his name and the kind-hearted nurse sorrowfully takes him to the superintendent.

Tony, hat in hand, is ushered in and the man in charge reluctantly tells him his wife has died during an operation. He is wild with grief and throttles the superintendent in his agony. When he has calmed down he begs to look upon the dead form. He is taken to the sheeted figure and gives one look. It is not his wife, a mistake in the name being responsible for his temporary grief. Tony dances about in the exuberance of his joy and is impatient to see his wife. She enters with a baby, and he is beside himself with joy, but he is further surprised when another baby is brought and he is told he is the father of twins. Then he explodes with merriment and gazes at his perambulator, which has a carrying capacity of but one.

The story closes with Tony happy in the possession of two bouncing babies, trying to embrace his whole family at one and the same time. (Copyrighted, 1911, by Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.)

CHAMPION.

YANKEE DOODLE (Dec. 4).—In this story of "Yankee Doodle," Mother Goose plays an important role, for with her wand she conjures up from the past, for the benefit of the little ones, and grown-ups, too, some of the august personages of history, whose names and presence inspire young and old with feelings and sentiments of deep patriotism. There are the little ones with their drums and swords marching about and singing "Yankee Doodle." The mothers of the wee ones are charmed by their innocent sincerity, but there is another onlooker in the person of Mother Goose.

Mother Goose decides to lend a hand and teach a lesson in patriotism. As the little marchers proceed, beating their drums and blowing their horns, "Yankee Doodle" appears in the form of Uncle Sam, riding on a pony, with comic dignity, his long legs reaching the ground. As the procession goes on, its numbers are swelled by children of all ages and descriptions. But presently, into the scene comes the redoubtable Stonewall Jackson, to please admiring Southerners. But Mother Goose has children of the North as well as of the South, and so the next celebrated hero is General U. S. Grant. Then, on. See that tall, majestic character, with snow-white beard and military aspect. That is Robert E. Lee, of Virginia. There, now, is Lincoln, the martyr. And this grand assemblage of our country's vanguard form a living lesson from history.

OUR NAVY (Dec. 4).—Coming in juxtaposition to "Yankee Doodle's" patriotic ensemble what more fitting portrayal could be advanced than the stately grandeur of our Navy? The monster procession of battleships on the Hudson, the greatest assemblage of Uncle Sam's fighting men ever gotten together at one time, are shown in imposing defile. These huge dogs of war, whose bark and bite are dreaded and respected by the Foreign Powers, are seen pasing by before our view in grim war color. As we gaze upon the scene, we ae made to realize the greatness of our Uncle Samuel. High upon the Hudson Palisades stands Uncle Sam, himself, looking down with benign countenance, his hands extended in deferential pose.

THE INDIAN FORTUNE TELLER (Dec. 6).—This story has to do with an Indian seeress; that is to say, the large part she played in the life of a young Western cowpuncher. Sam Houston was the young fellow in question, and a better puncher of cattle could not be found. But Sam had his failings. He loved cards and drink, though not excessive for the latter.

On one occasion, Sam had won a little pile. The loser, a fellow named Bud, was a vicious-minded brute, who swore quietly to regain his losings by foul means, knowing naught of fairness. At this juncture the Indian woman came into the gambling saloon with a kasket containing trinkets which she was peddling. Her face was engaging. You could see at once she was above the average of her people. She only met with rebuffs from the saloon loungers until Sam's table was reached. His big heart ever kept his purse strings open and he tossed her a large coin.

In return for his friendly words the woman offered to foretell his fortune. She then warned him of a grave danger which would beset him upon a contemplated journey of his. Sam admitted the contemplated journey but did not mind the danger as he trusted to his gun to forefend him against harm. But Bud was plotting hard against him. He interviewed the Indian guide, who was chosen to lead Sam over the mountains, and bribed him into arranging for the betrayal and ambush of Sam, before he could reach his destination.

of Sam, before he could reach his destination.

Traversing his silent way, and trusting his guide implicitly, Sam was surprised to see a form leap from behind a boulder, and recognized the Indian seeress. His guide, divining the woman's object, and knowing it would be his undoing, threw himself suddenly upon her, and thrust his knife home. It was all done in a moment: then he was off, but, speedy as he was, a bullet from Sam's gun brought him down. He paid the penalty. The Indian woman then informed him of Bud's plot, and of his danger, and though wounded, led him from the fatal trail, and thus foiled the dastard plot of Bud.

Her noble task accomplished, the seeress gave up her spirit to the great Manitou, dying with the consciousness of having saved the life of her friend. This great sacrifice lodged deep within Sam's breast. Inscribing a heartfelt inscription on paper, and pinning it with a little pectoral cross on the Indian fortune teller's breast, he interred her in the sod.

GREAT NORTHERN.

THE PENALTY OF HER AMBITION (Dec. 2).—Johnson and his wife are happy in the possession of their only child, until Mrs. Johnson aspires to become a prima donna. For the cultivation of her voice, Leoni, an Italian tutor, is procured, and he soon worms his way into the woman's affections. When the pair should be conducting themselves as tutor and pupil, they are billing and cooing like turtle doves. The unsuspecting Johnson has introduced a serpent into his paradise. One day, whilst the mother and child are in the drawing room, the tutor sends a note asking Mrs. Johnson to come and meet him and to tell her husband she is going to the theater. The wife consents, and places the note in a book she is reading, where it is found by the husband, who follows her, and finding her clasped in the arms of another, casts her adrift. She attains fame as an opera singer, whilst her child, after a year, missing the loving care of a mother, becomes ill. Leoni, too, has tired of his flame, has transferred his affections to another, and casts his first choice off. In Johnson's home, the little girl is lying at death's door, repeatedly crying for her mother. A kind-hearted nurse pleads with the father to gratify his child's wish. He does so and finds his erring wife. A mother's care conquers the grim angel, Death, the child lives, and by its means husband and wife start a new life together.

ECLAIR.

THE FIVE DAUGHTERS OF MR. DURAND (Nov. 30).—Mr. Durand is the happy father of five charming girls, who lay siege to the heart of a son of one of his old college friends. This friend writes Mr. Durand that his son, George, will pay him a visit, and he expresses the desire that the young man should fall in love with one of his daughters and win her as his bride. The letter falls into the hands of Marietta, the youngest of the daughters. Although only twelve years of age, she enters joyously into preparations for the reception of the Fairy Prince. They all endeavor to give him a royal time, with the exception of Renee, who seemed timid and disinterested. This timidity is, however, assumed, as her sisters discover her one day, when George is asleep, sketching the object of her silent adoration. Her sisters make sport of her bashfulness, and each one tries her utmost to captivate young George, but all to no avail, as Renee wins the day, and George asks Papa Durand for her hand in marriage.

GUSSY'S CONGRATULATIONS (Nov. 30).—Gussy, desiring to pay his respects to his maiden aunt on the anniversary of her birthday, bought a beautiful bouquet of flowers, and starts to deliver them in person. He found after he had started on his journey that he had forgotten his gloves, so drops into a haberdasher's to purchase a pair. He gave the bouquet to a man to hold for him, and after making his purchase, finds that the scoundrel had decamped, having sold the flowers for 40 cents. Gussy is dismayed and searches for a florist. He is disappointed, and was about giving up in despair, when re arrives at the apartment house where his aunt abides. A servant is entering with a beautiful bunch of flowers. He persuades the latter to let him take the bouquet, and greets his aunt with effusion, handing her the bouquet, not knowing that a note accompanied it. The bouquet was intended for an actress on the first floor, and when the aunt reads the letter she is indignant and cuts Gussy out of her will.

LUX.

BILL AS A VETERINARY SURGEON (Dec. 1).—Bill sets up in business as a "Vet." He cures horses, he cures cats, and in fact is endowed with the power to sustain the life or revive the departing spirit of every imaginable animal. His operation upon a rabbit, which he massages back to life, causes much merriment, and in the capacity of a dentist to a big brown bear, he comes off very lucky, and does not require the attention of a doctor.

THE MAKING OF AN AEROPLANE (Dec. 1).—The interest which the science of aviation has aroused has given the Lux Company an opportunity to produce a most interesting subject on the making of an aeroplane, giving in a concise manner the details of the work. A good opening view of the huge workshops is followed by pictures of the cutting, mounting, and the covering of the "ribs." The process of regulating and improving the various parts of the machine, the finding of a defect, testing the motor, are all shown, while the concluding views are of the aeroplane soaring higher and higher in the clouds.

AMERICAN.

THE MAN HUNT (Dec. 11).—Pursued by the sheriff's posse, the outlaw seeks refuge at the home of a young ranchman. The ranchman's wife conceals him from his pursuers, and when they are gone she makes him promise to lead an honest life. A year later we see him leading an exemplary life and is a member of the rangers' organization.

The woman's life at the ranch becomes more and more lonely as her husband's duties takes him away for weeks at a time and she hungers for romance. A stranger comes to her home and in her troubled state of mind it is easy for him to convince her that she is abused and neglected and that her husband no longer loves her. He persuades her to elope and they make hurried

In the meantime the ranger receives a warrant for the arrest of an outlaw and the trail leads to preparations for departure.

IF YOU USE NASOLIA CEMENT SPLICE CAN'T PULL APART
For all kinds of Film in 25c. $1.00 and $2.00 sizes
NASOLIA CO., 30 W. Lexington St., Balto., Md.

FILMS FOR SALE
Will sell my ten reels of Moving Picture Films.
GOOD SUBJECTS. GOOD CONDITION.
H. MASON, Room 11, 142 W. 125th Street, New York.

HEADQUARTERS FOR ASBESTOS
Curtains and Picture Booths
SEND FOR BOOKLET
C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
39 Pearl St., BOSTON

STOP!
supplying your patrons with dirty, rainy films. Have them Redeveloped, Cleaned and Softened before sending them out, by the Ortho Film Company
40 East 12th St., N. Y. C.

G. W. Bradenburgh

Cinematograph Films

233 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa

Phone, Market 334

Cable: Brad-Films, Phila.

Code: A. B. C., 5th Edition

Italy-Turkey War

980 ft., price 8 cts. ft.

One-sheet four color posters

The Only Film Showing Actual War

Scene 1—Governor-General of Tripoli.

Scene 2—Turkish gunners in the forts.

Scene 3—Italian cruiser shelling coast, showing exploding shells, etc.

Scene 4—Havoc of shell striking on board R. N. Carlo Alberto.

Scene 5—Italian squadron shelling Turkish camps at Derna.

Scene 6—Sinking of Turkish cruiser Aka-Bey by Italian cruiser Prevesa.

Scene 7—After the Ultimatum: Bombardment of Tripoli; destruction of Benghazi, showing customs house being destroyed by the ten-inch shells of the R. N. Roma.

State Rights given away on orders in quantities.

Photography perfect; will allow examination.

All films cash with order.

Next week's release:

Capt. Fox and The Chinese Rebels

Posters? Yes!

ANOTHER WAR FILM

Independent Film Service
231 North 8th Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

EXHIBITORS:

We have contracted for the EXCLUSIVE AMERICAN RIGHTS for a series of film productions conceded to be the GREATEST NOVELTIES EVER ATTEMPTED IN MOTION PHOTOGRAPHY, BAR NONE. Correspondence solicited from first-class houses only, as the prices of these features will be prohibitive for the smaller exhibitor.

HAD TO STOP ADVERTISING

Swamped with orders working day and night filling orders for McNamara Trial lecture. Send your name for our catalog of feature lectures. They're money getters.

A. J. CLAPHAM, Fine Art Slides

130 WEST 37TH ST., NEW YORK

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The Decorators Supply Co.

2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL.

When Answering Advertisements kindly mention the Moving Picture World

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing

Why don't you send it to us?

We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

We buy second hand machines.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

THE ENTERPRISE (Portable) CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Price with carrying case, $35.00

Is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the

ONLY SATISFACTORY PORTABLE OUTFIT

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most satisfactory for the production of oxygen gas.

For Sale by Dealers Everywhere.

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS 564-572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

[illegible] Woman's Lodge. He finds his man in the person of the woman's tempter, and places him under arrest. He recalls to the woman what part she played in his own reformation, and when the husband returns he forgives his frivolous wife and a close understanding is reached after years of misunderstanding.

THE SMOKE OF THE FORTY-FIVE (Dec. 7).—A cattle rustler's daughter meets the ranger and falls in love with him. She confides her secret to her sister, who is in sympathy with her, and when her father demands that she marry his lieutenant, and places her under restraint to force the marriage, the little sister rides to the rangers and arranges an elopement. They are captured and the revengeful rustlers determine to shoot the rangers. His sweetheart throws herself before her lover and pleads for his life. While this is in progress, the little sister slips away and warns the rangers of their leader's plight.

The crafty father tells the girl that if she will marry the man he has selected, they will permit her lover to go free. Refuse, and he will be shot instantly. To save his life, the girl makes a supreme sacrifice and agrees to marry the father's choice. The lover pleads to be shot rather than accept the sacrifice.

In the meantime, the rangers ride to the rescue of their chief. Forcing the girl to make good her promise, the rustlers ride with her to the nearest ministry and hold the ranger until the marriage is consummated. The rangers then arrive and rescue their leader from the outlaws and in the fight that ensues, the "forty-five" of a ranger speeds the leaden messenger that frees the girl from a distasteful union and returns her to her lover's arms.

FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL FILM CO.

THE AVIATOR (Nov. 20).—This is a film which the Feature and Educational Film Company, of Cleveland, releases as a special attraction. It is in three reels and one of the striking incidents which occur is a series of remarkable feats by a noted French aviator and a woman in a biplane. It is a clever story, in which the wife of a well-known journalist becomes infatuated with the aviator. The journalist, learning of this, damages certain parts of the biplane, thereby plotting the death of the aviator. The aviator discovers the defects before he starts on the flight and repairs the machine unknown to the journalist. In the meantime his wife makes a flight with the aviator and when the journalist hears of this he becomes frantic at the prospect of his wife being dashed to death. The aviator brings her back safe, and realizing that the journalist truly loves his wife, sends the woman home to her husband.

ZIGOMAR (Nov. 20).—A sensational detective story, founded on the romance of Leon Sazie. The noted criminal who terrorized all Europe is shown in these three Zigomar reels in a dramatic and intense struggle for supremacy with Paulin Broquet, the celebrated detective, who takes the two in the most varied and finest resorts. It is literally a chase through the entire continent, with Broquet now having the upper hand and again Zigomar in its possession. Zigomar is the leader of a band of men who persist in plundering rich and poor. They know Broquet is on their trail and set a trap for him. However, he escapes, and in the melee which follows, when he nearly captures Zigomar, the latter also flees. A wonderful feature of this production is the "Will o' the Wisp," dance which the noted dancer, Esmee, performs at a ball in the Moulin Rouge in Paris. The festival begins by a magnificent procession, in which the dancer, Esmee, is carried in a litter, bedecked with jewels. In the succeeding darkness, tiny flames light up and Esmee appears clad in white veils. She appears in the semi-darkness as a white apparition. Then the dance becomes gayer, the dancer turns faster, like a flower with changing colors, and finally sinks exhausted to the floor. There are effects of colored light in this picture that never have been seen before. Immediately following there is a scene of great contrast when Zigomar sets fire to the place and the scene ends in wild disorder.

ECLAIR.

THERE FELL A FLOWER (Dec. 7).—Her mother came to spend a fortnight and her husband was compelled to endure almost constant fits of temper and the daily berating usually devoted to noble man by the unconquerable mother-in-law.

At a soiree, given by the Governor, this same firey feminine was caught making eyes at a sleek, well-groomed old gentleman, and who should interrupt their subsequent tete-a-tete but daughter's husband, who brazenly suggested it was time to go home.

The young man realized his error the following day, when a peace offering, in the shape of a fine bouquet of roses, was forthwith hurled from the window by the vigorous mother-in-law.

An innocent passer-by receives the basket and its contents exactly on his head, thereby arousing his anger to such a point that he quickly mounts the stairway and rings a bell on the first landing. Mother-in-law alone dares to face th esputtering man outside while the rest of the household await developments.

To their amazement they hear no dispute. Only regrets and mutual congratulations. Reassured, husband and wife quietly steal into the room and find the sleek gentleman of the soiree clasping in his arms the once woman of trouble, but now transformed into a harmless and much loved "tootsie-wootsie."

MANNERS AND TRADITIONS OF PIEMONT (Dec. 7).—The spectator is taken on an interesting journey through Italy's most unique atmosphere. Glimpses of mountain life may be seen then through a typical village street with its odd types in close proximity.

An unique Harvest Home is shown, contrasting strongly with our American ideas of our native farm dwellings. We hurry along to a military fête, an event in the section and to which the inhabitants for miles around are wont to attend.

REX.

THE STRANGER (Nov. 30).—Other men have wandered, others have found the trail, lost it again, and crawled back, worn and wearied, to find it a path of thorns, as did Phil Stanton, the Stranger. He meets Nell, who is the pianist at a café, and the music her fingers create steals into his soul and steals his heart. Timidly he asks the old question, tenderly she gives the answer and herself.

Soon after, Phil becomes infatuated with another girl in the town. Her lover becomes aware of the situation, meets the man, and compels him to leave the town at once.

Dazed, in despair, the trusting wife hears and realizes: just another aching heart, just another sundered soul passing into the night, once again man's ruthless hand, and the destruction and devastation resultant. At last, through the Salvation Army, she obtains a position in a near-by town. The months go by; she meets another. It is now two years since Phil's departure. She is certain he has met with disaster, death. The man asks her to marry him; she consents.

The months go by, and one night a heavy storm forces a wanderer to seek shelter. Phil comes to the home of Nell, entreats lodging for the night. The woman looks at the man—and knows! Her mind conjures up a grim shadow, like a child painting phantoms upon the darkness. The man looks at the woman, and recognition dawns!

And with recognition, the privilege he had owned and forfeited, the desire for his own, returns. She tells him of the other man, and weeps in the telling. In his fury, he attempts to push her away from him, and a little white ruffled thing falls to the ground. He stoops to pick it up, and finds it to be a child's dress. A moment he stares, looks quickly at the woman, and in her blanched face he sees the answer. An unborn child, his wife's child, whose father he is not! And in the death struggle of vengeance and despair, the right of things triumphs. Slowly he turns and walks from the room, into the storm and the night.

A few days later Nell and her husband come across a frozen body on the silent, snowy wastes, the man dead with his secret, the silent heart as white at last as the driven snow that was his tomb.

Among the Exhibitors

Chicago, Ill.—Thomas Maremkowski will erect a two-story brick theater at 4408-10 Milwaukee Avenue, to cost $12,000.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Silver City Amusement Company will erect a $10,000 theater at 28th and National Avenues.

Turton, S. Dak.—Campbell Bros., who owned the opera house recently destroyed by fire, will rebuild a new opera house.

St. Louis, Mo.—Elmer Coudey is reported to erect a new theater, to cost $100,000.

Aiken, S. C.—Aiken Theater Company has plans for an opera house to be erected here.

Big Stone Gap, Va.—Jim Taylor will erect a theater, to cost $20,000.

Shelbyville, Ind.—Rembusch Amusement Company. Capital, $5,000. F. J. Grace and George Rembusch.

Minneapolis, Minn.—W. B. Fiske, 1403 E. Franklin Avenue, will erect a theater, to cost $4,500.

Baltimore, Md.—A new $175,000 vaudeville theater is to be erected on Lexington, between Liberty and Howard Streets.

Stevens Point, Wis.—N. B. Hackett, of Wausau, has purchased the Ideal Theater, at this place, from Mocogni & Bartkowiak.

Milwaukee, Wis.—M. C. Hensel is preparing plans for a new theater for the Silver City Amusement Company here.

Butte, Mont.—The Montana Amusement Company will erect a new theater, to cost $96,000, on Park Street.

Virginia, Minn.—Work has just begun on the new Lyric Theater, to be erected here.

Wenatchee, Wash.—The Wenatchee Realty Company will erect a new theater at Mission and Palouse Streets.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Paul Biel will build a $3,000 addition to the theater at 2604 N. Broadway.

Cleveland, Ohio.—The Gordon Square Realty Company will erect a new theater at Detroit Avenue and West 65th Street.

Akron, Ohio.—The Pastime Theater, at South Main Street, will be remodeled at a cost of $500.

Butte City, Mont.—The Montana Amusement Company will build a $50,000 theater on W. Park Street.

St. Joseph, Mo.—Work of converting the Scholtz cafe building into a moving picture and vaudeville theater has begun, and the new house will be opened December 2, under the management of T. Saxe, who has eight theaters in Minneapolis. Cost of practically rebuilding the structure to adapt it for its new use will be about $20,000. The lobby of the theater will front on Edmond Street. The entire end of the building is to be torn out and the facade will be built higher than the present roof line. The lobby proper will be of a general half-dome shape, and at the sides and above will be immense symbolical figures of stucco. Large ornamental globes will surmount the building on the Edmond Street corners, and the entire frontage will be covered with electric lights. The lobby will be forty feet in width, and finished in marble and stucco. The first floor seating capacity of the new theater will be 650, and 350 other spectators will be accommodated in the balcony. Loges will extend along the sides of the building at balcony height, as far as the stage. Two stairways will lead to the balcony, and there will be two balcony exits and numerous ground floor exits, independent from the entrance doorways.

Chicago, Ill.—Frank H. Sonkin has purchased from Louis Bomash the Douglas Hall building and ground at 207-209 East Thirty-fifth Street for $35,000 and will convert it into a high class picture theater.

St. Cloud, Minn.—The Princess Theater Circuit Company, recently incorporated, have plans for a photoplay theater to be erected in St. Cloud. The new theater will seat 600 and will cost a total of $12,000.

Savannah, Ga.—The Arcadia Theater, the latest addition to the amusement houses of Savannah, is now open. Vaudeville and motion pictures of a high order are presented.

Dorchester, Mass.—John Williams, of 447 Dudley Street, has placed the contract for a new $15,000 moving picture and vaudeville theater, to be erected at 530 Dudley Street.

Buffalo, N. Y.—A Buffalo syndicate has leased the Odd Fellows Hall and is remodeling it for a moving picture theater.

Gulfport, Miss.—L. L. Chevalley will erect a building to be used as a moving picture theater.

W. Chester, Pa.—The Everhart Bulding, at Market and Church Street, will be remodeled as a moving picture house.

Brooksville, Fla.—Robert Bracey awarded contract to L. B. Varn and L. S. Petteway to erect opera house.

Bridgeport, W. Va.—The new Family Theater has opened. James Velas is in charge.

North Adams, Mass.—William Lock and Frederick Campbell will open a moving picture theater in this city.

Modesto, Cal.—A. Richards has secured plans for a new moving picture theater in this city. It will be called the Isis.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Two permits for moving picture theaters have been taken out, the first for a $10,000 building at Thomas and Murray Avenues, to be built by P. J. Borum, and the second for a $10,000 theater on National Avenue, between Thirtieth and Thirty-first Avenues, by the Crowley Investment Company.

Lynn, Mass.—The Olympia Theater, enlarged, renovated and rebuilt, has opened. The new house has a capacity of 3,200, ranking it as one of the largest and handsomest moving picture theaters in the world. The dimensions of the stage are 45 x 89 feet. A. E. Lord is in charge as manager.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A $4,500 moving picture theater is being planned to be built on East 5th street, South of Olney Avenue, to be under the management of Frank C. Koenig.

Springfield, Mass.—Wm. A. Locke & Co. have secured a lease on the Columbia Opera House here and will remodel and convert it into a high-class picture theater.

Palestine, Texas.—Mr. E. A. Opetz has opened an elaborate motion picture theater in the Cronin Building, which measures about 25 x 100 feet and has a raising floor with a seating capacity of 400. Opetz has installed a new Powers No. 6 Cameragraph. The films which are operated here are furnished by the Wheelan Fisher Exchange.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Kensington will shortly have another fine moving picture and vaudeville house, a permit having been issued to the Allegheny Amusement Company for the erection of a fireproof, three-story theater. It will measure 80 x 200 feet, and will cost $45,000. There will be a large balcony, the front will be imposing, being built of terra cotta, stone and brick, and will lead into a handsome lobby. The seating capacity will be 1,600.

Seattle, Wash.—Casper Fischer has bought the Pastime Theater at First and Cherry, and reopened it under the name of the Fischer Theater. He will manage the house personally, offering three first-run picture films.

White Plains, N. Y.—A moving picture house has been opened in Tuckahoe. The shows are to be held in the Tuckahoe Lyceum.

Milwaukee, Wis.—A $10,000 moving picture theater is to be erected for David J. Borun on Thomas and Murray. Architects Schultz & Seeler are drawing the plans.

Cent. Moriches, N. Y.—Walter Smith has sold the moving picture business here to Frank E. Berry, who will run the show on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights.

Middletown, Ohio.—Arrangements have been made for the opening of the Bijou Picture Theater on Bundy Block.

BIGGER and : : BETTER

SEND YOUR

SUBSCRIPTION

TO-DAY FOR

The Moving Picture Paper That Is Worth While

Domestic	-	$3 00 Per Annum
Canada	-	3.50 " "
Foreign	-	4.00 " "

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Box 226 Madison Sq. P. O. N. Y. City

Musicians Wanted! "Knack Reading Music at Sight" booklet, mailed for 10 cents. Celebrated Knack System of Playing Vaudeville and Dramatic Music—Transposing—Faking—Arranging—taught by mail. Particulars Free.
KNACK STUDIO Dept. 4 DANVILLE, ILL.

Sunlight, or any other light, has no effect on

MIRROROIDE

Proven by actual tests to be the world's best rollable curtains and screens.

MIRROROIDE

will more than double your patronage

MIRROROIDE

means perfect projection, perfect pictures, besides saves one-third of your juice bill

NO HAZE, NO FLARE NO EYE STRAIN

Used on our battleships and cruisers. The Government standard. Universally adopted in the largest theaters the world over, churches, etc. The Rev. Frederick Stockwell, of the First Presbyterian church, Newburgh, highly endorses Mirroroide as producing the finest pictures he ever saw.

MIRROROIDE

is also highly endorsed by Mr. Chapman, Gem Theater, Utica. He tells us his pictures are the talk of the city. He can't accommodate his increased patronage. Hundreds of other testimonials.

MIRROROIDE

Is the cheapest the best? Mirroroide don't lose the picture close up at a side angle.

MIRROROIDE

is a necessity to an illuminated theater and perfection in projection. Demonstration samples free. ⅓ yd. samples, 50 cents.

LET US SHOW YOU

BENJAMIN-GENTER CO.
Newburgh, N. Y.

EXHIBITORS will benefit if they rent or buy FILM from the best equipped EXCHANGE

Ask for our Big Rental List. We sell you films as cheap as you can rent them elsewhere, and guarantee they are in A1 condition.

Ask for our Feature Lists. Prices are all right

ARE YOU IN THE MARKET for Moving Picture Machines? We sell them on the right installment plan. Get our terms.

Exhibitors Film Exchange
23 E. Jackson Blvd.
Chicago, Ill.

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the United States

International Film Traders
Incorporated
5 West 14th St., New York City

LISTEN, MR. EXHIBITOR!

When you get all the Independent Films released by Thanhouser, Nestor, Reliance, Bison, Imp, Rex, Solax, Powers, American, Eclair.

2	reels	6	times	per	week,	$14.00
2	"	7	"	"	"	15.00
3	"	6	"	"	"	16.00
3	"	7	"	"	"	17.00

WHY HESITATE

NATIONAL FILM BROKERS, 186 N. La Salle St., CHICAGO

SPECIAL FEATURE FILMS

Wolgast-Moran Fight, 3 reels $150.00
Nelson-Moran Fight, 3 reels $50.00
Morris-Schreck Fight, 2 reels $30.00
Johnson-Ketchel Fight, 2 reels $100.00
James Boys in Missouri, 1 reel
White Caps, 1 reel
The Great Bull Fight, 1 reel
Custer's Last Stand, 1 reel
McKinley at Pan-Am. Exposition, 1 reel
All Films in A-1 Condition

W. H., Care of Moving Picture World
New York City

YOU ARE THE VERY ONE

Mr. Theatre Manager, to you I am [illegible] Local Motion Picture making outfit, which [illegible] get at it. It's so easy. I give you all advice. You have to do it, or your neighbor will. This cheap and perfect outfit enables you to take pictures of your local [illegible] Show your patrons their own familiar faces. Show the film from time to time. Quite a nice [illegible] and prosperity you certainly will gain. Write immediately for full description and catalogues. Take my word, you are getting 1,000% of your invested money back. This outfit is a jewel, and the missing link in your business.

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER
Optical Works
219 Second Avenue NEW YORK

FREE

Send postal card with name and address plainly written and receive free of charge sample pages of "Orpheum Collection" of Moving Picture (dramatic and descriptive) music. Until further notice these splendid collections will be offered at the following special prices:

No. 1 (post paid).....58 cts.
No. 2 (post paid).....58 cts.
Both numbers post paid for $1.15.

Clarence E. Sinn
1501 Sedgwick St. Chicago, Ill.

LECTURES

The MOVING PICTURE WORLD has prepared the following Lectures by W. STEPHEN BUSH, in Booklet form, at $1.00 each postage prepaid

How To Put On THE PASSION PLAY
Second Edition.
For Pathe Freres' World Renowned Production

How To Put On THE CRUSADERS
OR JERUSALEM DELIVERED
For the World's Best Film Co., Feature Film (Copyright, 1911).

KEY and COMPLETE LECTURE for
DANTE'S INFERNO
For Monopol Film Co.'s Five-Reel Production of the Milano Films Co. (Italy).

Copyrighted and Published Only By
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 East 23rd Street NEW YORK CITY

INDEPENDENT Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Oct. 26—The Trail of the Eucalyptus (W. Dr.).1000
Oct. 30—The Stronger Man (W. Dr.).....1000
Nov. 2—The Water War (W. Dr.).....1000
Nov. 6—The Three Shell Game (W. Dr.)....1000
Nov. 9—The Mexican (W. Dr.).....1000
Nov. 13—The Eastern Cowboy (W. Com.).....1000
Nov. 16—The Way of the West (Com.).....1000
Nov. 20—The Test (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 23—The Master of the Vineyard (W. Dr.)1000
Nov. 27—Jolly Bill of the Rollicking R (W. Com.) 1000
Nov. 30—The Sheriff's Sisters (W. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 4—The Angel of Paradise Ranch (Dr.)..1000

CHAMPION.

Nov. 1—The Cowboys' Pies (Com.)..... 950
Nov. 6—Folks of Old Virginia (Dr.)..... 950
Nov. 8—The Moonshiner's Trail (Dr.)..... 950
Nov. 13—The Redemption of a Coward (Dr.).. 950
Nov. 15—The Passing of Sal (Dr.)..... 950
Nov. 20—National Guardsmen and Regulars at Fort Riley, Kansas (Top.)..... 950
Nov. 22—When the Sheriff Got His Man (Am. Dr.) 950
Nov. 27—The Mother Goose Series (Juvenile).. 950
Nov. 29—The Two Browns (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 4—Yankee Doodle (Juvenile)..... 950
Dec. 4—Our Navy (Naval)..... 950
Dec. 6—The Indian Fortune Teller (Dr.)..... 950

COMET.

Nov. 20—The Office Boy's Dream (Com.)..... 960
Nov. 24—Diamond Locket (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 27—Grandma's Toothache (Com.)..... 955
Dec. 1—The Late Mrs. Early (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 4—Billy's Letters (Com.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Dead Canary (Dr.).....1000

ECLAIR.

Oct. 23—Youth! "Queen of Hearts" (Com.).. 740
Oct. 23—Percy Gets Tired of the Theater (Com.) 260
Oct. 30—A Father's Heart (Dr.)..... 920
Nov. 6—Willie Challenges Jim Jackson (Com.)
Nov. 6—Life Under the Sea (Educational)....
Nov. 13—The Legend of the Eagle (Dr.)..... 925
Nov. 21—Hands Across the Sea in '76 (Am.-Dr.) 2000
Nov. 23—Portguguese Centaurs (Military)..... 600
Nov. 23—The Automatic Lighter (Com.)..... 400
Nov. 28—Miss Masquerador (Am. Com.).....1000
Nov. 30—The Five Daughters of Mr. Durand (Com.) .....
Nov. 30—Gussy's Congratulations (Com.).....
Dec. 5—In Humanity's Cause (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—There Fell a Flower (Com.)..... 660
Dec. 7—Manners and Traditions of Piemont (Educational) 660

GREAT NORTHERN.

Oct. 14—Secret of the Underground Passage (Dr.) .....
Oct. 21—His Fidelity Investigated (Com.).....
Oct. 28—The Vicissitudes of Fate (Dr.).....
Nov. 4—The Actor as a Soldier (Com.).....
Nov. 4—Through the South of France (Sc.)...
Nov. 11—A Woman's Wit (Com.).....
Nov. 18—A Rendezvous in Hyde Park (Com.-Dr.)
Nov. 18—High Scotland (Scenic) .....
Nov. 25—The Theft of Mona Lisa (Com.).....
Dec. 2—The Penalty of Her Ambition (Dr.)..

IMP.

Oct. 30—His Dress Shirt (Dr.)..... 800
Oct. 30—A Few Minutes With Steeple-Jack Lindholm (Topical) 200
Nov. 2—King, the Detective (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 6—Waiting at the Church (Com.).....1000
Nov. 9—The Wife's Awakening (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 13—The Fallin' Out (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 16—Breaking the Seventh Commandment (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 20—From the Bottom of the Sea (Dr.)..2000
Nov. 23—Executive Clemency (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 27—Uncle's Visit (Com.).....1000
Nov. 30—Over the Hills (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 2—Percy, the Masher (Com.)..... 750
Dec. 2—President Taft Dedicating the Naval Training Station at Chicago, Ill. (Topical).. 850
Dec. 4—The Dumb Messenger (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 7—Tony and the Stork.....1000

LUX.

Nov. 8—Bill and the Bear (Com.)..... 554
Nov. 3—Tommy's Camera (Com.)..... 393
Nov. 10—Bill Taken for a Ghost (Com.)..... 426
Nov. 10—The Diversions of a Nursemaid (Com.) 495
Nov. 17—Saas Grund, a Village in the Alps (Sc.) 295
Nov. 17—The Mystery of Beaufort Grange (Dr.) 695
Nov. 24—A Passing Cloud (Dr.)..... 655
Nov. 24—Bill and Bertie's Wedding Day (Com.) 325
Dec. 1—Bill As a Veterinary Surgeon (Com.) 488
Dec. 1—The Making of An Aeroplane (Ind.).. 419

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

BISON.

Oct. 27—An Indian Hero (Dr.).....
Oct. 31—The Cattlemen's War (Dr.).....
Nov. 3—A Young Squaw's Bravery (Dr.)....
Nov. 7—A Race for a Bride (Dr.).....
Nov. 10—Wenoma's Broken Promise (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—The Winning of Wonega (Dr).....
Nov. 17—The Ranchman's Mother-in-Law (Com.-Dr.) .....
Nov. 21—The Broken Trap (Dr.).....
Nov. 24—White Fawn's Escape (Dr.).....
Nov. 24—A Bad Man (Com.).....
Nov. 28—A Western One-Night Stand (Com-Dr.)
Dec. 1—An Easterner's Peril (Dr.).....

AMBROSIO.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Oct. 18—The Conversion of St. Anthony (Dr.)
Oct. 25—Salambo (Dr.) .....
Nov. 1—Judas (Dr.) .....
Nov. 8—Dolly's Doll (Dr.) .....
Nov. 8—Tweedledum's Motor Car (Com.).....
Nov. 15—The Convict's Song (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—The Golden Wedding (Dr.).....
Nov. 29—The Little Duke (Dr.) .....
Nov. 29—Tiny Tom, Apache (Com.).....
Dec. 2—Tweedledum Goes Into High Life (Com.) .....
Dec. 2—The Accusing Dog (Com.).....

ITALA.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Oct. 28—Toto and the Dummy (Com.).....
Oct. 28—The Rearing of Pheasants (Edu.)....
Nov. 4—Foolshead's Holiday (Com.).....
Nov. 11—A Victim of Competition.....
Nov. 11—The Effect of a Racket (Com.).....
Nov. 18—Foolshead, a Professor of Innocence (Comedy) .....
Nov. 18—The Life of Bees (Edu.).....
Nov. 25—The Tailor Wants His Pay (Com.)..
Nov. 25—The King of Noose Throwers.....
Dec. 2—(See Ambrosio, this date).

MAJESTIC.

Nov. 26—The Courting of May (Com.).....
Dec. 3—Love Heeds Not Showers (Com.).....
Dec. 10—The Ultimate End (Dr.).....
Dec. 17—Little Red Riding Hood (Juvenile)..

NESTOR.

Oct. 28—Dippy Advertises for a Pup (Com.)...
Nov. 1—Big Noise Hank (W. Com.).....
Nov. 4—Mutt and Jeff and the Lady Stenographer (Com.) .....
Nov. 4—The Suit Case Mystery (Com.).....
Nov. 8—A True Westerner (Dr.).....
Nov. 11—Desperate Desmond Almost Succeeds (Com.) .....
Nov. 15—The White Medicine Man (Dr.)....
Nov. 18—Mutt and Jeff and the Unlucky Star (Com.) .....
Nov. 18—That Kid from the East (Com.)....
Nov. 20—His Vacation (Com.).....
Nov. 22—The Cowboy Pugilist (W. Dr.).....
Nov. 25—Desperate Desmond Pursued by Claude Eclaire (Com.-Dr.) .....
Nov. 27—Happy Hobo's Help (Com.).....
Nov. 29—When the West Was Wild (Dr.)....
Dec. 2—A Western Feud (Comedy).....
Dec. 2—Mutt and Jeff's Scheme That Failed (Com.) .....
Dec. 6—Struck Gold (Dr.).....
Dec. 9—Desperate Desmond Abducts Rosamond (Com-Dr.) .....

F. & E. FILM COMPANY.

Nov. 20—The Aviator (Dr.).....
Nov. 20—Zigomar .....

POWERS.

Oct. 24—The Little Brown Calf (Dr.).....
Oct. 28—The Revenue Officer's Last Case (Dr.)
Oct. 31—Apples and Destiny (Com.).....
Oct. 31—The Progressive Book Agent (Com.)..
Nov. 4—The Pride of the West (Dr.).....
Nov. 7—Mobilization of the American Fleet (Topical) .....
Nov. 11—For the Tribe (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—When First We Met (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—The Tell-Tale Parasol (Com.).....
Nov. 18—The Old Leader (Dr.).....
Nov. 21—Rivals (Com.) .....
Nov. 21—Views of Montserrat, Italy (Sc.).....
Nov. 25—Jug o' Rum (Dr.).....
Nov. 28—Too Much Injun (Com.).....
Nov. 28—The Lineman and the Girl.....
Dec. 2—The Wanderer's Return (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—Views of Lake Como (Scenic).....
Dec. 5—The Little Thief (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 5—The Secret Order of Horns (Com.)..
Dec. 9—Two Men and a Girl (Dr.).....

RELIANCE.

Oct. 21—Divorce (Dr.) .....
Oct. 25—The Empty Crib (Dr.).....
Oct. 28—The Test of a Man (Dr.).....
Nov. 1—A Mix-Up in Suit Cases (Com. Dr.).
Nov. 4—The Greater Love (Dr.).....
Nov. 8—Marriage (Dr.) .....
Nov. 11—The Track Walker (Dr.).....
Nov. 15—The Moonshiners (Dr.).....
Nov. 18—The Injustice of Man (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—Helpless Man (Dr.).....
Nov. 25—A Daughter of Italy (Dr.).....
Nov. 2—A Happy Thanksgiving (Dr.).....
Nov. 29—A Happy Thanksgiving (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—The Poison Cup (Dr.).....

REX.

Sept. 7—Picturesque Colorado (Scenic).....
Sept. 14—Faith (Dr.) .....
Sept. 21—The Rose and the Dagger (Dr.).....
Sept. 28—The Derelict (Dr.).....
Oct. 5—Lost Illusions (Dr.).....
Oct. 12—Chasing a Rainbow (Dr.).....
Oct. 19—Her Sister (Dr.).....
Oct. 26—A Breach of Faith (Dr.).....
Nov. 2—The Tale of a Cat (Dr.).....
Nov. 9—Saints and Sinners (Dr.).....
Nov. 16—The Return (Dr.).....
Nov. 23—The Price (Dr.).....

SOLAX.

Oct. 11—He Was a Millionaire (Com.).....
Oct. 13—His Mother's Hymn (Dr.).....
Oct. 18—A Corner in Criminals (Com.).....
Oct. 18—A Lover's Ruse (Com.).....
Oct. 20—His Better Self (Military Dr.).....
Oct. 25—Percy and His Squaw (Com.).....
Oct. 27—For Big Brother's Sake (Dr.).....
Nov. 1—Following Cousin's Footsteps (Com.)..
Nov. 3—A Heroine of the Revolution (Dr.)....
Nov. 8—An Interrupted Elopement (Com.)....
Nov. 10—Grandmother Love (Dr.).....
Nov. 15—Baby Needs Medicine (Com.).....
Nov. 17—Only a Squaw (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—Husbands Wanted (Com.).....
Nov. 24—The Will of Providence (Com.-Dr.)..
Nov. 29—A Troublesome Picture (Com.).....
Nov. 29—Fun On Board the "U. S. S. Vermont" (Naval) .....
Dec. 1—A Revolutionary Romance (Mil.-Dr.)..

THANHOUSER.

Oct. 20—The Satyr and the Lady (Dr.).....
Oct. 24—Little Em'ly and David Copperfield (Dr.)
Oct. 27—The Jewels of Allah (Dr.).....
Oct. 30—The Loves of David Copperfield (Dr.)..
Nov. 3—Their Burglar (Dr.).....
Nov. 7—The Missing Heir (Dr.).....
Nov. 10—The Last of the Mohicans (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—The Higher—the Fewer (Com.).....
Nov. 17—A Mother's Faith (Dr.).....
Nov. 21—A Master of Millions.....
Nov. 24—The Baseball Bug (Com.-Dr.).....
Nov. 28—The Tempest (Dr.).....
Dec. 1—Beneath the Veil (Dr.).....
Dec. 5—The Newsy and the Tramp (Com.-Dr.)
Dec. 8—Brother Bob's Baby (Com.).....

YANKEE.

Oct. 27—Flower of the Forest (Dr.).....
Oct. 30—The Van Osten Jewels (Dr.).....
Nov. 3—At Daisy Farm (Dr.).....
Nov. 6—A Coward's Regeneration (Dr.).....
Nov. 10—He Didn't Like the Tune (Com.)...
Nov. 13—Into the Light (Dr.).....
Nov. 17—The Two Rooms (Dr.).....

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000 - -	$1.25	20,000 - -	$4.60	50,000 - -	$7.50
10,000 - -	$2.50	25,000 - -	$5.50	100,000 - -	$10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

THE MAJESTIC

Will make its initial release to the moving picture public Sunday, November 26th, and earnestly solicits intelligent criticism from discriminating exhibitors, that it may improve its product, if improvement is necessary.

THE MAJESTIC COMPANY again wishes to thank the exchanges for their increased orders, and to state that no effort whatever will be spared to make MAJESTIC PICTURES the best produced.

THE MANAGEMENT is prepared to announce its date for the release of TWO MAJESTICS A WEEK, the moment the exhibitors place their stamp of approval upon its efforts to improve the quality of the Independent pictures.

THE PRODUCTION of Majectic pictures is in the capable hands of OWEN MOORE and DAVID MILES, who are surrounded by a most carefully selected company —Little Mary Pickford, Mabel Trunnelle, Anita Hendric, Amy Oliver, Edna Rogeta, Herbert Prior, George Loane Tucker, C. DeCordeba, Paul Scardon and Chas. Craig.

A Handsome Photo of Little Mary

The most beautiful photograph ever taken of your favorite, Little Mary Pickford, will appear on the front cover of THE NEW YORK DRAMATIC MIRROR, December 5th. This photograph was taken by Bangs, of New York, and is a work of art. We recommend to every exhibitor in the country that a liberal display of these pictures on the day Majestic Pictures are shown will add greatly to the receipts.

We have been obliged to change the release dates of two of our subjects—transferring "The Ultimate End" from December 10th to December 24th, and substituting "Keeping Mabel Home," a high class comedy, for December 10th.

First Release—Nov. 26th
"The Courting of Mary"—High Class Comedy

Second Release—December 3rd
"Love Heeds Not Showers"—High Class Comedy

Third Release—December 10th
"Keeping Mabel Home"—High Class Comedy

Fourth Release—December 17th
"Little Red Riding Hood"—Nursery Rhyme

Fifth Release—December 24th
"The Ultimate End"—Strong Drama

THE MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

TOM D. COCHRANE, General Manager
145 WEST 45th STREET, NEW YORK CITY
SOLD THROUGH THE SALES CO.

LICENSED Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Nov. 13—Won Through a Medium (Com.).... 467
Nov. 16—Through Darkened Vales (Dr.)..... 999
Nov. 20—The Miser's Heart (Dr.).....
Nov. 23—Resourceful Lovers (Com.-Dr.).....
Nov. 23—Her Mother Intereferes (Com.).....
Nov. 27—Sunshine Through the Dark (Dr.).....
Nov. 30—A Woman Scorned (Dr.).....
Dec. 4—Way He Gave Up (Com.).....
Dec. 4—Abe Gets Even With Father (Com.)..
Dec. 7—Life Failure (Dr.).....

EDISON.

Nov. 15—The Y. M. C. A., Silver Bay, Lake George, N. Y..... 400
Nov. 17—The Ghost's Warning (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 18—The Story of the Indian Ledge (Dr.).1000
Nov. 21—Life In the United States Army (Edu.)1000
Nov. 22—The Bo'sun's Watch (Com.).....1000
Nov. 24—Home (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 25—A Perilous Ride (W. Dr.).....1000
Nov. 28—The Lure of the City (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 29—The Troubles of A. Butler (Com.)..1000
Dec. 1—Pull for the Shore, Sailor (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 2—A Man for All That (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Awakening of John Bond (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 6—John Brown's Heir (Com.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Heart of Nichette (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 9—The Daisy Cowboys (Com.)..... 990

ESSANAY.

Nov. 17—The Point of View (Com.).....
Nov. 17—Excess Baggage (Com.).....1000
Nov. 18—The Cattle Rustler's Father (W. Dr.).1000
Nov. 21—Too Much Turkey (Com.).....1000
Nov. 23—Old Fidelity (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 24—At the Stroke of Twelve (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 25—The Desert Claim (W. Dr.).....1000
Nov. 28—A Football Hero (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—Little Red Riding Hood (Fairy Dr.).1000
Nov. 30—'Twas Ever Thus (Comedy).....1000
Dec. 1—The Quinceville Raffle (Com.)..... 750
Dec. 1—The Girl In the Taxi (Com.)..... 300
Dec. 2—The Mountain Law (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Madman (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 7—The Long Strike (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—Getting Even With Emily (Com.).....
Dec. 8—Stray Bullets (Com.).....1000
Dec. 9—A Frontier Doctor (W. Dr.).....1000

GAUMONT

Nov. 14—Jimmie and His Country Uncle (Com.) 820
Nov. 14—The Outskirts of Paris (Sc.)..... 164
Nov. 18—The Reckoning (Dr.)..... 875
Nov. 18—A Trip to Saxony (Sc.)..... 150
Nov. 21—The Sealed Confession (Dr.)..... 900
Nov. 21—A Stone Quarry in Saxony (Sc.)..... 75
Nov. 25—The Escape from the Dungeon (Dr.).. 825
Nov. 25—Cave Homes on the Canary Isles (Sc.) 180
Nov. 28—A Busy Cupid (Com.)..... 758
Nov. 28—Review of the Austrian Army (Sc.). 232
Dec. 2—The Promoter (Dr.).....1140
Dec. 5—Jimmie Tricks the Landlady (Com.).. 475
Dec. 5—The Challenge (Dr.)..... 525
Dec. 9—Camoens, the Portuguese Shakespeare, Lisbon, 1578 (Hist. Dr.)..... 610
Dec. 9—Important Scenes in Paris, France (Sc.) 320

KALEM.

Nov. 20—Dan, the Lighthouse Keeper (Dr.)..1000
Nov. 22—How Texas Got Left (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 24—The Temptation of Rodney Vane (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 27—The American Insurrecto (Dr.).....
Nov. 29—Among the Irish Fisher Folk (Edu.).
Nov. 29—The Franciscan Friars of Killarney, Ireland (Top.) .....
Dec. 1—How Betty Captured the Outlaw (Comedy) .....
Dec. 1—A Glimpse Into the Yellowstone National Park (Scenic).....
Dec. 4—Arrah-Na-Pogue (3 reels) (Dr.).....3000
Dec. 6—The Long Arm of the Law (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—Too Much Realism (Com.).....1000

LUBIN

Nov. 22—The Ranchman's Daughter (Dr.)....1000
Nov. 23—A Blind Deception (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 25—His Brother's Double (Com.).....1000
Nov. 27—The Man in the Taxi (Com.-Dr.)..1000
Nov. 29—An Actor In a New Role (Com.).. 600
Nov. 29—The Crab Industry (Ind.)..... 400
Nov. 30—A Nicotine Conspiracy (Com.).....1000
Dec. 2—Western Chivalry (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 4—A Head for Business (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 6—Sins of the Father (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 7—Love's Labor Lost (Com.).....1000
Dec. 9—The Teamster (Dr.).....1000

MELIES.

Nov. 2—Right or Wrong (Dr.)..... 360
Nov. 2—Mexican as it is Spoken (Com.)..... 580
Nov. 9—The Spur of Necessity (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 16—The Miser Miner (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Nov. 23—An Oil Country Romance (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—The Reason Why (Com.).....1000
Dec. 7—A Western Girl (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 14—The Better Man (Com.-Dr.).....1000

ECLIPSE.
(G. Kleine.)

Nov. 8—An Eye for an Eye, or the Last Days of King Henry III of France (Dr.).1000
Nov. 15—The Hindu Jewel Mystery (Dr.)....1015
Nov. 22—Guy Fawkes or the Gunpowder Plot (Dr.) 1010
Nov. 29—The Mysterious Stranger (Dr.)..... 610
Nov. 29—Salt Industry In Sicily (Ind.)..... 372
Dec. 6—The Luckless Banker (Dr.).....1002

PATHE.

Nov. 16—Western Postmistress (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 18—The Reporter (Dr.)..... 990
Nov. 20—Pathe's Weekly No. 47 (Topical)....1000
Nov. 22—A Pinch of Snuff (Com.)..... 680
Nov. 23—Cowboy Life (Dr.)..... 770
Nov. 24—Two Daughters of Havana (Dr.).... 600
Nov. 25—The Lost Necklace (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 27—Pathe's Weekly No. 48 (Topical)..1000
Nov. 29—Incendiary Indians (Dr.)..... 745
Nov. 29—Glimpses of San Francisco (Scenic).. 250
Nov. 30—Oh! What a Thanksgiving Day (Com.) 775
Dec. 2—Bear Hunt Romance (Dr.)..... 990
Dec. 4—Pathe's Weekly No. 49 (Topical)....1000
Dec. 6—Hobo Luck (Am. Com.).....
Dec. 7—The Poisoned Arrow (Am. Dr.).....
Dec. 9—Her Little Slipper (Am. Dr.).....

C. G. P. C

Nov. 21—The Grouch Cure (Com.)..... 325
Nov. 22—The Bari Tribe (Egyptian Soudan Novelty) 310
Nov. 23—The Kioday Equilibrists (Nov.)..... 210
Nov. 24—Comic Games in Singapore (Nov.).. 350
Nov. 28—Romance of the Mummy (Dr.)..... 700
Nov. 28—Picturesque Hungary (Scenic)..... 290
Nov. 30—A Life-Saving School in Australia (Educational) 220
Dec. 1—Rover is Jealous (Com.)..... 560
Dec. 1—Capturing Polar Bear Cubs (Adv.).. 290
Dec. 1—Examination of the Stomach by X-Rays (Educational) 150
Dec. 5—The Secret of the Confessional (Dr.)..
Dec. 6—Fishing in the Ceram Islands (Sc.)..
Dec. 7—French Cuirassier Manoeuvres (Military)
Dec. 8—Eva's Faithful Furniture (Com.).....
Dec. 8—Gathering and Preparing Cocoanuts in the Philippine Islands (Ind.).....

SELIG

Nov. 17—A Spanish Wooing (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 20—The Convert of San Clemente (Dr.)..1000
Nov. 21—The Night Herder (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 23—Blackbeard (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 24—Getting Married (Com.)..... 750
Nov. 24—In Japan (Edu.)..... 250
Nov. 27—The Right Name, but the Wrong Man (Dramatic) 1000
Nov. 28—The Telltale Knife (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—An Evil Power (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 1—In Japan (Scenic)..... 500
Dec. 1—Seeing Cincinnati (Scenic)..... 500
Dec. 4—A Diamond in the Rough (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—A Frontier Girl's Courage (Dr.)....1000
Dec. 7—The Maid at the Helm (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Plumber (Com.)..... 600
Dec. 8—A Day With a Circus (Novelty)..... 400

VITAGRAPH.

Nov. 14—The Girl and the Sheriff (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 15—Their Charming Mamma (Com. Dr.).1000
Nov. 17—The Little Spy (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 18—Vitagraph Monthly of Current Events (Top.) 1000
Nov. 20—Heroes of the Mutiny (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 21—Wistaria (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 22—The Half-breed's Daughter (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 24—An Innocent Burglar (Com.).....1000
Nov. 25—The Life Boat (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 27—The Politician's Dream (Comedy)....1000
Nov. 28—The Freshet (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 29—The Voiceless Message (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 1—The Last Cent (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 2—The Husking Bee (Comedy).....1000
Dec. 4—Saving the Special (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Hypnotist (Com.).....1000
Dec. 5—A Slight Mistake (Com.).....1000
Dec. 6—The Black Chasm (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Sick Man from the East (Dr.)...1000
Dec. 9—His Wife's Secret (Dr.).....1000

Classified Advertisements.

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

SITUATIONS WANTED.

Operator wishes position outside of New York City. Experienced on Powers, Edison and Standard machines. OPERATOR, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

SITUATION WANTED—Operator, six years' experience. Will go anywhere. Address, OPERATOR, 2214 Piedmont Avenue, Duluth, Minn.

EXPERIENCED MALE PIANIST wants engagement. No vaudeville nor orchestra work. Thorough musician. Mississippi Valley Pianist, 716 Carpenter Place, St. Louis, Mo.

GOOD COMBINATION—Sign painter, moving picture operator, wants change of venue. New York license. Out of town or road position preferred with responsible parties. Cheap labor supers, save your postage stamps. SIGN PAINTER, Proctor's 23d Street Theater, New York City.

AT LIBERTY—A1 operator, five years' experience. Reference. Road or locate. S. A. LANGE, 620 Lincoln Avenue, Dubuque, Iowa.

OPERATOR AND STAGE MANAGER would like place in same town. A1 men. Both sober and reliable. Good references. Electricians. MAURICE McMAHON, 124 N. County Street, Waukegon, Ill.

GIRL SINGER WANTED—Must be able to pronounce words distinctly. Strong voice preferred. Steady position, with chance of more money if your voice pleases. State lowest salary for tryout week. Orpheum Theater, Kalamazoo, Mich.

WANTED—Advance man for Ohio Dante Milano Show, five reel Milano production. JOHN W. ERB, care of H. E. & G. Company, Newport, Ky.

WANTED—Lecturer for Ohio Dante Milano show, five reel Milano production. JOHN W. ERB, care of H. E. & G. Company, Newport, Ky.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Picture and vaudeville theater seating 1,200 ground floor. City 40,000. Will sell whole or partners. MANAGER, Happyland, Auburn, N. Y.

FOR SALE—A moving picture and vaudeville house, good location in the best town in the two Dakotas. A money-maker for an experienced man. Good reasons for selling. W. J. HAWK, Fargo, N. D. P. O. Box 420.

PICTURE THEATER, Melrose, Mass. Capacity 400. Stage, booth, machine, chairs, etc. Rent $30. See McDANIEL, 225 Essex Street.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—No. 4 Optigraph head, with two lamp-houses (dissolver) mounted on oak board. Two stereo lenses, half size, 30 inches E. F. Two gas jets. One arc lamp. One adjustable rheostat. One six-inch objective tube. Lenses match perfectly: machine is in fine condition, never been in use, except to try out one night. This portable outfit would be dirt cheap at $75. What am I offered? A. W. LEE, Kemper Building, Kansas City, Mo.

FOR SALE—One camera for taking moving pictures, a printer, developing out and 3,000 feet of film, positive and negative. All guaranteed in perfect condition, $500. Marple Theater, Wichita, Kan.

EDISON MACHINE FOR SALE—One pin machine in very best of condition, complete, but without take-up. Will sell for $85 and ship subject to examination when charges are guaranteed. REX SCHNEIDER, 623 Thirteenth Street, Oshkosh, Wis.

FOR SALE—Powers No. 5 Cameragraph complete, with Lang rewinder. Been used four months. $100. G. U. HAMILTON, Box 257, Assumption, Ill.

CHEAP!—Brand new Pathe professional moving picture machine. HUTCHENS, jeweler, Yadkinville, N. C.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WANTED—300 second-hand opera chairs with cushion. Also two No. 6 Powers machines. Box 71, Knoxville, Tenn.

PHOTOPLAYS—How to write: and where to sell. Book 25 cents (silver). Jacy Deans Publishing Company, 32 East Third Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Exhibitors Film Service Co.
49 S. Penna Ave., Wilkes Barre, Pa.

We buy the best of the Independent Output.
We solicit your business.
Prompt Service Guaranteed
A Call Will Be Appreciated.

DID YOU READ

What an exhibitor writes to the Moving Picture World with reference to our Bells and other Musical Instruments?

Fort Worth, Texas, October, 1911.

Moving Picture World, New York City.

Gentlemen:—In conjunction with an article in the Moving Picture World of October 21, headed "A Little Talk on Vaudeville in Picture Theaters," mentioning Mr. J. C. Deagan, of Chicago, manufacturer of musical novelties, especially adapted to picture show work, I can't help but feel it my duty as an extensive purchaser of Mr. Deagan's instruments and a user of the same, to boost for him and his wonderful knowledge of the manufacture of perfectly toned bells. While the article mentions only the organ chimes as an attraction, I have found for complete effects on pictures, the Parsifal Bells, Marimbaphone, Xylophone,

Electric Bells

(the greatest drawing card of all), unequalled when it comes to putting on perfect effects. I am using all these instruments, as well as Mr. Deagan's Cathedral Chimes, in addition to violin, cello, traps and effects.

I have not regretted the expenditure of several hundred dollars on Deagan instruments, and to any show that wishes to increase its receipts, my advice will be fewer drum stunts and more attractive music, such as only Bells can give, and the crowds will come.

(Signed) S. W. CUMMINGS,
Proprietor Orpheum Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas.

We make the Electric Bells in various sizes from

$40.00 up

The most popular sets of Bells we are now making are the

No. 310 outfit

25 Bells, 2 Octaves, Chromatic C to C

Complete with resonators, keyboard and all electrical apparatus.

Price of this outfit is $75.00

Will be shipped to you for examination and trial on receipt of $5.00 to guarantee express charges.

Every set of bells guaranteed one year.

Write for circulars and descriptive matter

J. C. DEAGAN

3800 N. Clark Street
CHICAGO, ILL.

Import Department

International Film Traders
5 West 14th St., New York

Weekly Importations

Feature Films

Masterpieces of the World's Greatest Producers ranging in length from 1000—4000 ft. selected by our own European Agents.

Artistic Posters 3 Sheets and more.

Features sold outright without restriction.

Correspondence solicited.

IT IS WONDERFUL !

The improvement in the quality of films produced by the Independent manufacturers during the past few weeks is simply wonderful. If you haven't seen any Independent films lately, for the love of Mike, look them up. The manufacturers have simply gone bugs on the subject of quality, quality, quality — and you'll get the benefit of the whole thing if you get your films from THE BIGGEST AND BEST FILM RENTER IN THE WORLD.

Carl Laemmle, President
The Laemmle Film Service
New Number:
204 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.
Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1517 Farnam St., Omaha, Neb.
515 Mulberry St., Des Moines, Iowa
1110 Wyandotte St., Kansas City, Mo.
The BIGGEST and BEST film renter in the World

(My Free Employment Bureau is for YOU. Go ahead and Use It.)

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

Fort Wayne Electric Works
of GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE, INDIAN 733

YOU CAN WRITE PLAYS

for moving pictures and make big money. Our course includes instruction book, model scenario, list of film makers and FREE criticism of your first play. All for $1.
Photoplay Bureau, 5126 Superior, Cleveland, O.

McKENNA

BRASS RAILINGS
EASELS
GRILLES
CUSPIDORS

BRASS
KICK PLATES
STAIR TREADS, DOOR SILLS

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH, PA.

$285.00
IN CASH PRIZES FOR SCENARIOS

To secure the very best 500-ft. comedy scenarios money can buy, the "Imp" Company offers special prizes for the four best manuscripts received before the first of the year, as follows:

1st Prize,	$100.00
2nd Prize,	75.00
3rd Prize,	60.00
4th Prize,	50.00

Mark your envelope "Contest" and address to "Carl Laemmle, Personal," care of

The "Imp" Company
102 W. 101st St., New York, N. Y.
Carl Laemmle, President

WE RENT AND SELL FEATURE FILMS

Dante's Divine Comedy
(About 1500 ft. Radium)
Unrestricted Territory - $187.50

The Golden Wedding
The Sensation of the Season

ALL THE FIGHT FEATURES

Ask for lists, our prices will suit you

The Feature Film Co. P. O. B. 195 Chicago, Ill.

HERE AT LAST

A place to buy parts for M. P. machines for less
One of our SPECIALS
Intermittent SPROCKETS $1.50 FOR POWERS EDISON Machines
Write for Price List
PITTSBURG M.P. SUPPLY CO., Pittsburg, Pa.

We Offer 300 more to the Trap Drummers

Get your order in at once. At our special offer price—$10.0

This high-grade Orchestra Drum, 10 thumb screw rods, transparent drum heads, solid shells, maple, rosewood, walnut.

Size, 3 x 14—3 x 15—4 x 15—4 x 14. This offer for September and October.

E. P. Zeidler Drum Co., Cleveland, O.

SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made saleable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism and revision for a fee of only $2.

Exhibitors!

Bad Business?

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

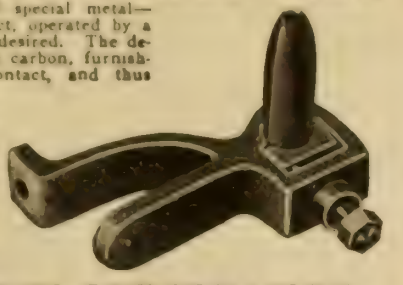
Manufacturers!

Manuscripts developed, $10 each. Send in that scenario that has your staff puzzled and a practical working script will be returned.

Epes Winthrop Sargent
21 East 20th St., N. Y. City

The Indestructo Carbon Holder

is an integral casting of special metal—fitted with a sliding contact, operated by a set screw or wing nut, if desired. The design of the contact fits the carbon, furnishing a larger area of contact, and thus requires less pressure to securely hold the carbon. It is impossible to score the carbon, and the adjustment screw will not "freeze" under any considerations. The concentric adjustment permits instantaneous renewals of carbons.



For further and full particulars write

THE ST. JOHN CORPORATION
180 Broadway, NEW YORK CITY
Sole distributors for MOHAWK ELECTRIC CO. - Albany, New York

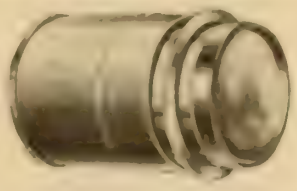
A GUNDLACH PROJECTION LENS
Will Certainly Improve Your Pictur

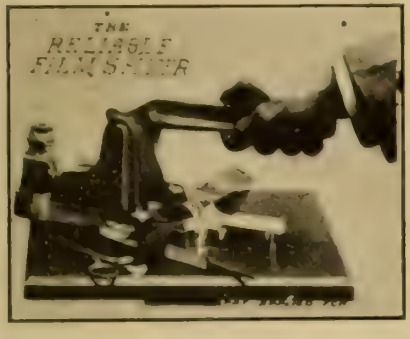


will make it sharp, clear and brilliant, and if you give the height and width of the screen and the distance from the Lens to the center of the screen we can furnish a Lens to make the picture just the right size.

Gundlach Projection Lenses are furnished to order with Powers and Motiograph Machines. They are sold by all Film Exchanges subject to approval.

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Company
808 Clinton Ave., So. Rochester, N. Y.

The Reliable Film Splicer
Patent applied for
DURABLE AND EVERLASTING



Makes smooth, everlasting splices quickly. Matches sprocket holes perfectly.

IT WELDS THE FILM

Price Complete $5.00

Ask your Exchange to show you how it works.

Manufactured only by

A. J. Wellmann
Box 368, Catlettsburg, Ky.

The Carl Barckhoff Company
BUILDERS OF PIPE ORGANS
With or without self playing attachment
POMEROY, OHIO, U. S. A.
ESTABLISHED 1819

Over 3,000 Barckhoff Organs in use in the United States which testify to their superiority and durability in construction, workmanship and character of tone.

We make a specialty of Organ Chimes manufactured from the choicest Bell Metal. Not made by any other builder.

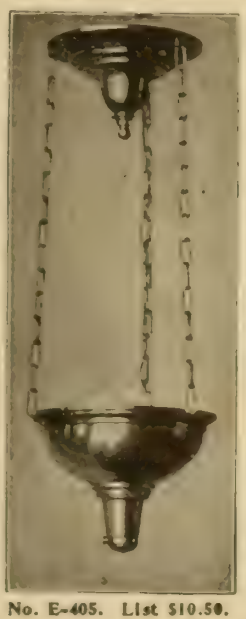
W. E. GREENE
FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

THE OLDEST AND LARGEST INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE IN NEW ENGLAND

Mr. Exhibitor:

Start the Season right by using an Independent Service from a Reliable House. We are buying the Output of the Sales Co. and have some choice services open. Write, wire, or call today at

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.
Telephone: 2187-3790 Oxford



No. E-405. List $10.50.
Ask discounts of your Electric dealer. If he does not carry, write us direct.
Engineering Reports Free.

AT LAST

It is possible to have daylight pictures to run continually in a lighted theatre.

Beautiful even illumination with inexpensive indirect lighting fixtures. Not an electric bulb in sight. The light thrown to the ceiling and diffused through the room. No annoying side lights.

Theatre lighting revolutionized by this Eye COMFORT SYSTEM of Indirect Lighting.

Hundreds of installations being made.

Our engineering department will furnish you free of expense, reports and recommendations on request.

BETTER LIGHT AT LESS EXPENSE

Investigate — Write today

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.,
235 Jackson Blvd., Chicago.
Gentlemen:—
Send full information regarding lighting of our theatre.
Length ..... Width ..... Ceiling Heighth .....
Name ..... Address .....

INDEPENDENT FILM SERVICE

STATE YOUR WANTS.

We'll make the RIGHT PRICE and give the RIGHT SERVICE.

Have little used Powers No. 6 fitted with new 1912 Model Motiograph Lamp House to sell. Low Price.

Bargains in Tickets and Carbons. All kinds of Machines and Supplies.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO., 105 N. Dearborn Street, Chicago

EXPORT FILM COMPANY

Dealers in New and Second-Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines

Second-Hand Films $5.00 per Reel up

Cameraphone Film with two sets of records like new

Complete Lists sent free on request

EXPORT FILM COMPANY, 32 Union Sq. E., New York City

Features You Can Feature

That's what your business needs. Wake up! You fellers who are in a rut.

Get in the Buzz Bus—and Book a FEATURE WEEKLY.

Go in training on counting money—you'll need it if you start booking our magnetic, coin getting,

FEATURE FILMS

We buy them all—Cheyene 1911, Romeo and Juliet, Clio and Phyletes, Train Robbers, Passion Play and thirty others.

Today is the time, before your competitor beats you to it. Heralds—Colored Announcement Slides, Banners and Lithographs sent in advance. Send for prescription now.

THE FEATURE FILM COMPANY

TOLEDO, OHIO.

"DOCTORS OF HAS BEENS."

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK

DEMAND UNLIMITED.

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, and pays well. We teach you by mail how to write and sell your plots. Many successful graduates.

FULL DETAILS FREE.

ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE SCHOOLS

911 Chicago Opera House Building CHICAGO

THE E-Z SLIDE

MAKE THEM YOURSELF

CLEAR AS GLASS—WILL OUTLAST GLASS

You can write or print on them as easily as on a sheet of writing paper.

Ask your Film Exchange for them or write to

BATTERSHALL & OLESON 39 W. Adams St. Chicago, Ill.

"Take a Chance Old Sport"

You have taken so many —Take another

But remember you take no chance with us

2600 ft. of Film Weekly

is the reason

Anti-Trust Film Co.

128 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

WURLITZER

World's Largest Mfrs. Established 1856

Wurlitzer PianOrchestra and Mandolin Sextet in Royal Theatre, Lima, O.

Write for 32-page booklet, showing

Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments

in the leading picture theatres of the country.

The Wurlitzer Instruments furnish better music than musicians and reduce expenses. 50 different styles; time payments; big catalog free. If you can't call, write to our nearest branch.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company

CINCINNATI	NEW YORK	CHICAGO	PHILADELPHIA
117-121 E. 4th	25-27 W. 32d	329-331 S. Wabash	1835 Chestnut

ST. LOUIS	CLEVELAND	BUFFALO	LOUISVILLE	COLUMBUS, O.
912 Pine	800 Huron Road	701 Main	426 W. Green	57 E. Main

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX — EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

BOUND VOLUME No. 9

July to September, 1911

(THREE MONTHS)

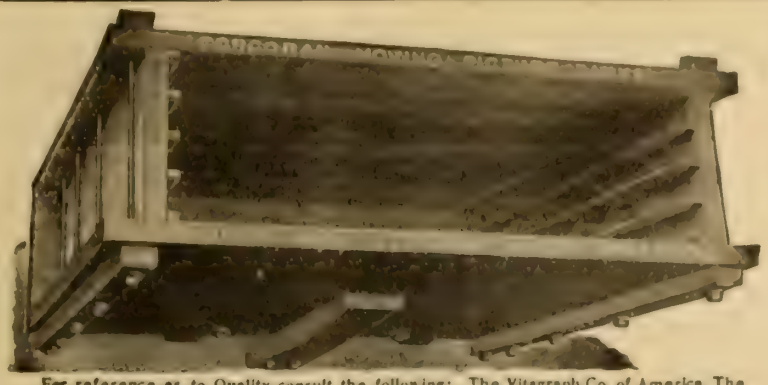
NOW READY

$1.50 EACH NET $1.50

Postage 60c. extra, or Express Charges collect

PUBLICATION OFFICE

Moving Picture World, 125 East 23d St., N.Y. City



For reference as to Quality consult the following: The Vitagraph Co. of America, The Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America, The Powers Picture Plays Co., Nestor Co., Thanhouser Co., Rex, Champion, Melies, Gaumont, St. Louis Motion Picture Co., Kinemacolor Co. of America, N. Y. Motion Picture Co., Bison.

Corcoran Moving Picture Tanks

Develop your films to perfection. Save Time and Reduce Your Expenses by using a "Corcoran Film Development Tank." All up-to-date houses are now installing the "Corcoran System."

Send for Price List No. 5

A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.
No. 11 JOHN STREET :: NEW YORK CITY

Electra

"ELECTRA"
PINK LABEL
CARBONS

COST more than others, but when taken into consideration the superior service they give, they are more than worth the difference in price.

Don't experiment with so-called "equal to Electra" kinds, but specify the genuine "ELECTRA" pink label Carbons.

The immense superiority of "ELECTRA" Pink Label Carbons lies in the absolute mechanical and scientific perfection of their manufacture, in conjunction with high grade materials of which they are made. They are always uniform, and prompt shipment can be depended on.

(SOLE IMPORTER)
Hugo Reisinger
11 BROADWAY
NEW YORK

To Obtain the Best Result You Must Use the

BEST CARBONS

Motion Picture Machines require Carbons that are particularly adapted for the purpose.

Use Arco-Biograph" Brand

The Distinguishing Mark of our Specially Manufactured
CARBONS
for Motion Picture Machines

CARBONS for all Makes of Flaming Lamps Carried in Stock.

L. E. Frorup & Co., Importers
232-234 Greenwich St., New York

ITALIAN-TURKISH WAR FILM

GOING FAST—ONLY FIVE COPIES LEFT

Mr. Exhibitor—Is your territory sold yet ? If not—GO TO IT.

Remember, there is big money in this picture. An investment of $111.00 will bring you from $50.00 to $75.00 a day.

Film sold with no restrictions. To anyone. To be exhibited anywhere except New York, Boston and Philadelphia, as sole rights for these cities have been purchased by Albert A. Kaufman, 46 E. 14th St., to whom applications should be made for booking in these cities. It will pay you to buy this film as you will positively get your investment back in two days If you are interested, wire a deposit and we will ship immediately. Length of film approximately 925 ft. Price $111.00. 24 lithographs—three styles—also 12 Italian-Turkish flags free to every buyer.

TRIPOLI FILM CO.
5 WEST 104th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

AN INVITATION TO EXHIBITORS

Exhibitors from coast to coast are cordially invited to visit the exhibition rooms of the Western office of the Moving Picture World, Suite 306, 307, 309, No. 167 West Washington Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Representatives of the paper will be glad to extend every courtesy, and give you information, if desired, with regard to the various propositions that are advertised through the columns of the Moving Picture World.

CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

INFORMATION BUREAU, MOVING PICTURE WORLD
167 West Washington St. CHICAGO, ILL.

Advertisers, send us samples of your product and a liberal supply of catalogues

The Greatest Rag Song of the day now ready for Illustrated Song Singers.
"THAT MUSICAL DREAM"
PUBLISHED BY BETTS & BINNER, - - 145 N. CLARK STREET, CHICAGO.

HARD TIMES?

Not if you are using the proper advertising system to induce people to come to your theatre and then give them the worth of their money after they are there. Hard times are only what you make them, and if you are continually crying hard times, and no business

YOU ARE RESPONSIBLE for the reason that you are not willing to take advantage of an opportunity to increase your business through the medium of

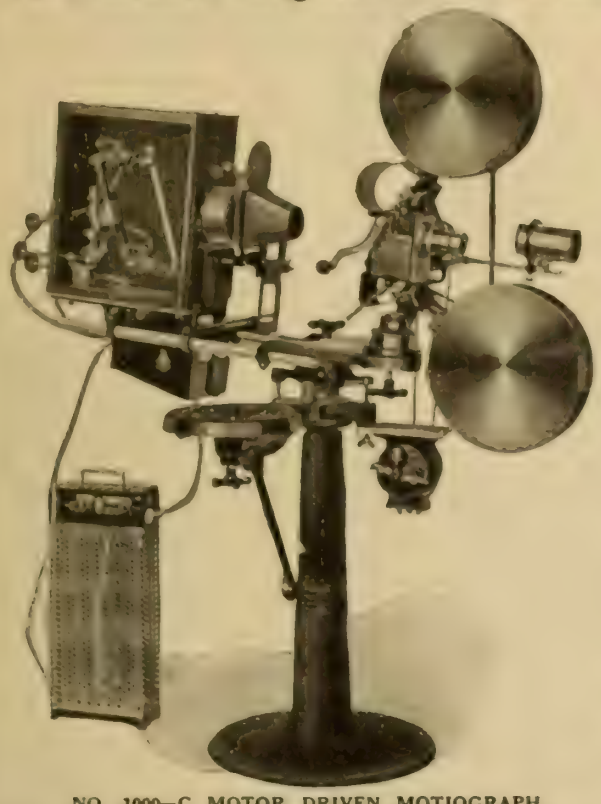
GOOD ADVERTISING

We have letters from exhibitors in which they state that our system of advertising has increased their receipts from 5% to 10%. What it has done for others it will do for you.

The Easel Is $10. The Posters are two dollars per week if paid for five weeks in advance. All posters dating back beyond October 30th we will sell you for one dollar per week. We can furnish you with posters as far back as July 10, 1911.

Exhibitors Advertising Company
Suite 604-605-606, 117 North Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.
NEW YORK OFFICE
Room 815, 145 West 45th Street, New York

A FULLY EQUIPPED 1912 MOTOR-DRIVEN MOTIOGRAPH FOR $268.50 UP



NO. 1000—C MOTOR DRIVEN MOTIOGRAPH

The latest addition to the MOTIOGRAPH line

A snappy, up-to-the-minute 1912 model machine that for grace of design, perfection in construction, "and picture," cannot be equalled.

Naturally you wonder how we can give such astonishing value for the money. The reason is simple—We have been building machines for years. Have a splendidly equipped factory, and the wonderful success of the MOTIOGRAPH has done away with heavy experimental expense.

Dependable Service is what you are after, and every MOTIOGRAPH sold is our silent salesman. When you buy a MOTIOGRAPH and like it you tell your friends and when they are in the market their decision is influenced by the wonderful results you have obtained.

We are always glad to demonstrate our line.—Call at the factory and learn more about us and the MOTIOGRAPH.

Good MOTIOGRAPH operators—get in touch with us.

Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company

564-572 WEST RANDOLPH ST. CHICAGO

For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere

ILG VENTILATING FANS

ARE STANDARD FOR THEATRE VENTILATION

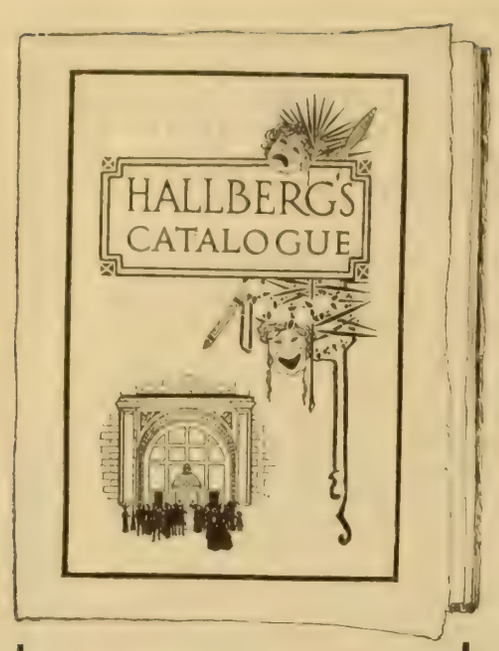
We are specialists in theatre ventilation. We have over 200 fans and blowers in Chicago theatres. alone.

ILG Self Cooled Motor Fan.

ILG FANS ARE NOTED FOR—
the self cooled motor —low power consumption—quiet running—ease of installation—freedom from repairs. We have a capable engineering department and will be glad to lay out your system.

SEND US A SKETCH OF YOUR THEATRE WITH SEATING CAPACITY AND TELL US THE CURRENT AND VOLTAGE AVAILABLE, WE CAN THEN TELL YOU HOW TO PLACE THE FANS, WHAT THEY WILL COST TO INSTALL AND OPERATE. ILG FANS CAN BE INSTALLED BY ANY ELECTRICIAN.

ILG ELECTRIC VENTILATING CO., 160 WHITING STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.



25c. in Stamps

Brings this to you.

Nothing like it ever published before.

Will prove a constant guide and money maker to every proprietor, manager and operator.

Send 25cts. today.

Special Jobber of Edison

Powers
Motiograph

Moving Picture Machines

The "Hallberg Economizer"

Used in connection with any of the above moving picture machines, produces the finest results on your screen that money can buy.

I Equip Theaters Completely

And carry in stock only the highest grade goods required for your theater.

Free catalogues, circulars and pamphlets furnished of individual items you require.

J. H. HALLBERG
36 E. 23rd St., New York

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill.
New York Office, 1165 Broadway.

The A. H. Andrews Co.

Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 673 Mission St.

Branches in all Leading Cities

Get Our Prices Before You Buy

The Wisconsin Lumber and Veneer Co.

Port Washington, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 W. 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

OH! MR. EXHIBITOR!!

THINK OF THE MOTHERLESS, THE FATHERLESS AND THE

Childless homes as the result of theater panics. Protect the lives of your patrons by installing our "ANTI-PANIC" THEATER CHAIR. 26 Dead at Cannonsburg, 176 at Boyertown, 575 at Iriquois Theater, Chicago. Make these horrors impossible.
Our chair is a friend to the Public.
It advertises your theater and makes your business grow.
It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.

IT IS THE ONLY SANITARY CHAIR

It will make your theater all aisles.
It is the world's greatest theater chair, perfected to the highest degree.

Write today for Circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

Operators!

I guarantee quick and satisfactory repair work on all machines. Only genuine parts supplied. Get my prices on ONE DROP OIL and BULL DOG CEMENT the best articles of their kind on the market

H. A. MACKIE

853 Broadway, Cor. 14th Street New York
'Phone: 2478 Stuyvesant

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS

ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Opera Head Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue

It pays to discriminate when you buy

THEATRE SEATING

WRITE TODAY for Cat. V2 (Mov. Picture Chairs) and Cat. V3 (Upholstered Chairs)

Send Floor Sketch for Free Seating Plan

Widest range of styles and prices. Large Stocks

American Seating Company

218 S. Wabash Ave., CHICAGO 19 W. 18th St., NEW YORK

G.MÉLIÈS

MARY DISCOVERS THE PLOT

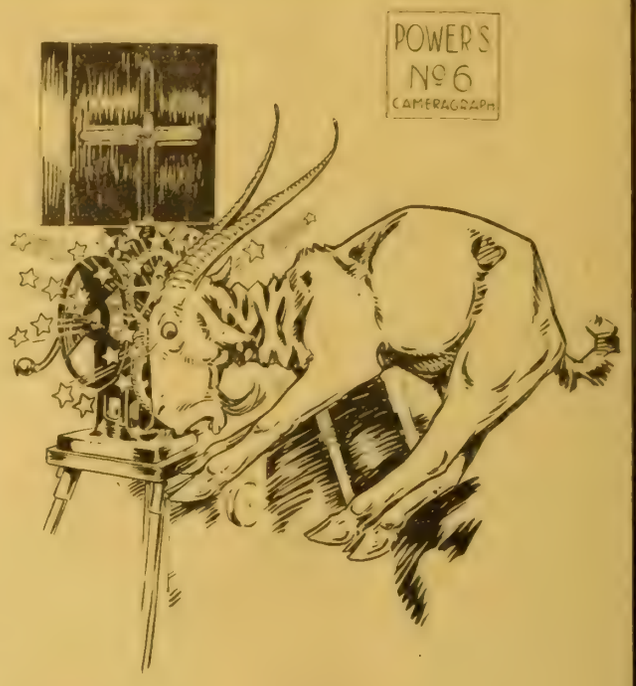
A WESTERN GIRL

DIRECTLY upon his arrival in the West in search of gold, Dick, an Easterner, rescues Mary Brown from the advances of a bully, and being wounded, is taken to her home. The bully plots revenge, and, two months later, when Dick finds gold, overpowers him and hastens to register the claim as his own. How Mary discovers the plot, and by pluck and desperate riding thwarts the villain is a story that will thrill the strong and weak alike.

APPROX. 1000 FT. 12-7-11

G. MELIES, 204 EAST 38th ST., NEW YORK CITY

It Stands The Strain

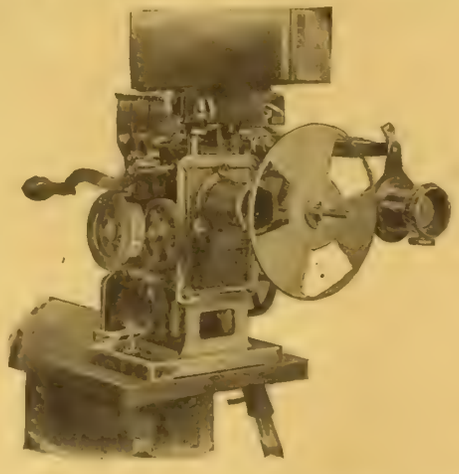


POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6

Is built to stand hard usage.
It is built to resist knocks.
It doesn't "lay down."

YOUR moving picture machine must be one you can rely on, one which will see you through. Power's No. 6 is built with the solidity of a rock. It has the perfect adjustment of the finest constructed watch with almost absolute freedom from noise. It projects a picture without flicker, and will furnish a show which will make friends of your patrons.

Power's apparatus has led the MOVING PICTURE WORLD for fourteen years, and Power's No. 6 heads the procession today. It represents the most advanced thought in the science of moving picture machine manufacture.



Our book "The Proof of the Pudding" will show you what users think of "Power's No. 6" the world over.

Write for Catalogue G and our special proposition.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

115-117 NASSAU STREET, NEW YORK

For fourteen years the leading manufacturers of Moving Picture Machines.

CAREY PRESS, N. Y.

Vol. 10. No. 10 December 9. 1911 Price. 10c.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "Buttons and Hooks" (Great Northern).
Featuring Miss K. Limde and Mr. Carl Alstrup.

125 East 23rd Street New York—Chicago 169 W. Washington St.

Let us help decorate your lobby for the holidays—Mail us the coupon in the lower left-hand corner

THE THANHOUSER

"GREATEST DECEMBER"

"SHE"

Put In Your Request Now for "Greatest December's" Greatest Picture!

IN 2 REELS

RIDER HAGGARD'S MYSTERY MASTERPIECE

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 26th.

A Special and a Feature Issued as a Regular Thanhouser Release

Released, Tuesday, Dec. 12th—Henric Ibsen's
THE LADY FROM THE SEA

Released, Friday, Dec. 15th
A COMEDY THAT YOU NEED DEACON DEBBS

Scene from "The Lady from the Sea"

While Society is seeing this production at high admissions at a fashionable New York playhouse, the Great American Middle Class will be enabled to enjoy it for a nickel or a dime, thanks to YOU! That is, if you are real showman enough you CAN HAVE the reel. It's all in the asking. Ask! Ask! Ask! Every critic has said THIS production surpasses the stage one in point of realism.

is that kind of "Thanhouser Funnyfilm" that you'd expect in our "Greatest December," and if you're one of the folks who say good comedy is lacking and then somehow can't book this reel, you have our sympathy. "There's no such word as 'Can't' in the dictionary," goes the phrase. But there is, as a matter of fact; you'll find it right AFTER "Can." "CAN" comes first; and it comes first, too, with the wise exhibitor who shows EVERY comedy reel WORTH showing.

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N.Y.
Send me FREE Lobby Decorations for your "Greatest December" features. I am / am not getting "The Thanhouser News."
Name_____
Address_____
Exchange_____
CLIP AND MAIL THIS DAY

Remember the dates in the GREATEST DECEMBER

12 (Tues.) LADY FROM THE SEA
22 (Fri.) CINDERELLA
26 (Tues.) "SHE"—2 reels

THANHOUSER COMPANY
New Rochelle, N. Y.
Sales Company Agents for U. S. and Canada

FOUR-A-WEEK ESSANAY

RELEASED TUESDAY, DEC. 5th

PAPA'S LETTER

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

A beautiful, pathetic story with a remarkable child actor.

RELEASED THURSDAY, DEC. 7th

THE LONG STRIKE

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

A big picture of love and labor, excellently staged.

RELEASED FRIDAY, DEC. 8th

GETTING EVEN WITH EMILY

(Length, approx. 630 ft.)

RELEASED WITH

STRAY BULLETS

(Length, approx. 349 ft.)

Two clever little comedies with many laughable situations.

RELEASED SATURDAY, DEC. 9th

THE FRONTIER DOCTOR

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

A Western drama, beautiful in sentiment, with superb scenic backgrounds.

Ask for All Essanay Posters - - - - Get On Our Mailing List

Essanay Film Mfg. Company
First National Bank Building, Chicago, Ill.

OFFICES IN
LONDON : : BERLIN : : BARCELONA

RELEASE DAYS: --- MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, SATURDAY

NESTOR

Oldest and Best — "The Worth-While Film" — Always a Feature

3 NESTORS A WEEK

Monday, Dec. 4th — Length, 993 Feet

JUST TWO LITTLE GIRLS

The IT and HIT of distinctive fotodramatics—thoroughly steeped in beauty and sweetness. GET IT!

3 NESTORS A WEEK

Book Now This Gale of Laughter

"Only An Iceman"

Released Monday, Dec. 11th

Scene from "STRUCK GOLD"

Wednesday, December 6th

"STRUCK GOLD"

995 feet of exceptionally interesting Western film. Stirring story; wealth of beautiful scenery; red-corpuscled action and phenomenal photography. GET IT!

Coming! Wed. Dec. 13th

The LAW of the RANGE

A Western from the West.

Saturday, December 9th

Desperate Desmond Abducts Rosamond

967 feet of house-jamming film novelty. Brave Claude, after many thrilling and humorous adventures, saves Rosamond from the clutches of Desmond; BUT—"The villain still pursues her!" Stop pursuing chimerical box office attractions and GET DESPERATE DESMOND!

Sat. Dec. 16th — THE Split Reel

"IN THE EARLY DAYS"

MUTT & JEFF MAKE the FEATHERS FLY

DAVID HORSLEY, BAYONNE, N. J., SALES CO., SOLE DISTRIBUTORS

ÉCLAIR

ECLAIR FILMS AMERICA

YOU NAME THE DAY FOR THE SECOND ECLAIR RELEASE

Another Eclair will be issued very shortly and You are Just as much interested in its success as we are.

What Day Do You Want for its issue?

We will be guided entirely by the decision of the trade.

Bear In Mind: We are now issuing The American Eclair on Tuesday and the Paris-Americanized Eclair on Thursday.

High Class Comedy will characterize the Second Release and many Two-subject reels will be offered.

We value your opinion and will appreciate an expression from you at once.

HANDSOME SOUVENIR FOR YOUR TROUBLE

To every exhibitor or renter who writes, we will mail with our compliments a handsome, New Photo of the Harrison-Fisher Girl, all ready for framing.

Coming Releases

Thursday, December 7

There Fell a Flower

(Comedy)
Life in Haute Piemont (Educational)
An Interesting Split Reel

Tuesday, December 12

The Musician's Daughter

American Heart Tale

Thursday, December 14

Japanese Drama

Her One Day's Dream

with artists from the Imperial Theatre, Tokio

Tuesday, December 19

A Tragic Joke

unusual American drama

Tuesday, December 26

The Wrong Bottle

or a Drug Clerk's Mistake

Get on Our Mail List

ECLAIR FILM CO. GENERAL OFFICES AND STUDIOS Fort Lee, N. J.

BRANCHES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

GREAT NORTHERN

THE OLD RELIABLE

Release for Saturday, December 2nd

THE PENALTY OF HER AMBITION

A strong and appealing dramatic production, depicting how a young couple's domestic happiness was restored to them through the devoting influence of their child.

Release for Saturday, December 9th

BUTTONS AND HOOKS

A comedy of an entirely new kind. One that compels hilarity. A real rib-tickler. Enacted by star performers.

ON THE SAME REEL:

WINTER IN SWITZERLAND

An exceedingly charming picture of Alpine scenery. Snowbound villagers nestle in the valleys with the superb peaks forming a wonderful and impressive background.

Our lobby display is now ready for the trade. Write for circular.

All First-Class Independent Exchanges Handle Our Product

Sold Only Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 E. 14th St., N.Y.

(NORDISK FILM CO. OF COPENHAGEN.)

CHAMPION

INTERESTING SUBJECTS
EVERY MONDAY and WEDNESDAY

The right opportunity is a rare one. Champ films are choice opportunities to every Exhibitor and Exchange, as the subjects are rich in variety and theme

A TRAITOR ON THE STAFF

Released December 11th

Suffers disgrace in malicious attempts to dishonor his military rival for the hand of the general's daughter

THE SAVING OF DAN

Released December 13th

All the beauty of the West in its natural scenic setting forms the background of this clean Western story

WE'VE SOMETHING NEW ALL THE TIME

Sold Through Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY

MARK M. DINTENFASS, General Manager

12 EAST 15th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

"THE LITTLE STOCKING"

(Copyright 1911 Imp Films Co.)

The illustration shown herein is a striking scene from our Christmas picture, "The Little Stocking."

It is a totally different sort of CHRISTMAS story. Released Thursday, Dec. 14th. Book it just as early as you possibly can.

"WHY THE CHECK WAS GOOD"

(Copyright 1911 Imp Films Co.)

A drama that goes straight to the heart. It illustrates the reward of kindness. Released Monday, Dec. 11th. Will YOU get it?

OUR DANDY "SATURDAY SPLIT"

(Copyright 1911 Imp Films Co.)

This time it's TWO BULLY COMEDIES on the one reel—the kind you have ordered us to produce! One is called "Billy's Seance" and the other "Bungalow Burglars," with a laugh in every inch. RELEASED SATURDAY, DEC. 16th. Don't forget that THREE IMPS A WEEK will bring AT LEAST THREE GOOD HOUSES A WEEK. That's what hundreds of wise exhibitors tell us!

NOTICE:—Stunning picture postcards of KING BAGGOT for sale at ridiculously low prices. Send for sample and terms at once.

NOTICE:—The Imp A. B. C. Books will make fine Christmas souvenirs for your patrons. Write for special prices immediately. Or wire.

NOTICE:—Photos of leading "Imp" performers for sale separately or in magnificent lobby frame. Write for particulars today.

NOTICE:—Be sure of at least THREE PACKED HOUSES EVERY WEEK by using THREE IMPS EVERY WEEK

Arrange it with your exchange NOW!

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES COMPANY

102 West 101st Street New York

Carl Laemmle, President

COMET

Mister Up-and-at-em Exhibitor, get busy with your exchange man right away and demand the COMET'S split-reel release of MONDAY, DEC. 4th. IT'S A PIPPIN.

Scene from "Ups and Downs of Rafferty."

The UPS and DOWNS of RAFFERTY

600 feet of screams.

The funniest thing since the Runaway Horse, in conjunction with the slapbangdest, rough and tumblest, knock down and drag outest FOOTBALL SCRAMBLE ever witnessed by an American gathering.

400 feet of the

CARLISLE (Indian)---JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY FOOTBALL GAME

decided last Saturday at Baltimore, Md. Every important play of the famous REDSKIN WARRIORS and the pale-face College boys is faithfully reproduced. THORPE, the great Indian half-back, was at his best. LONESTAR (the Sioux chief) electrified the crowd with his repeated dare-devil breaks through the HOPKINS line. See MORTON'S (Hopkins' end) successful attack of the Indian defense for a touchdown after a sixty-yard run which turned twenty thousand normally safe and sane citizens into a mob of howling maniacs. The players of each team are shown in parade before the camera. Order this film at once and pack your theatre with the elite of the town.

RELEASED FRIDAY, DEC. 8th.

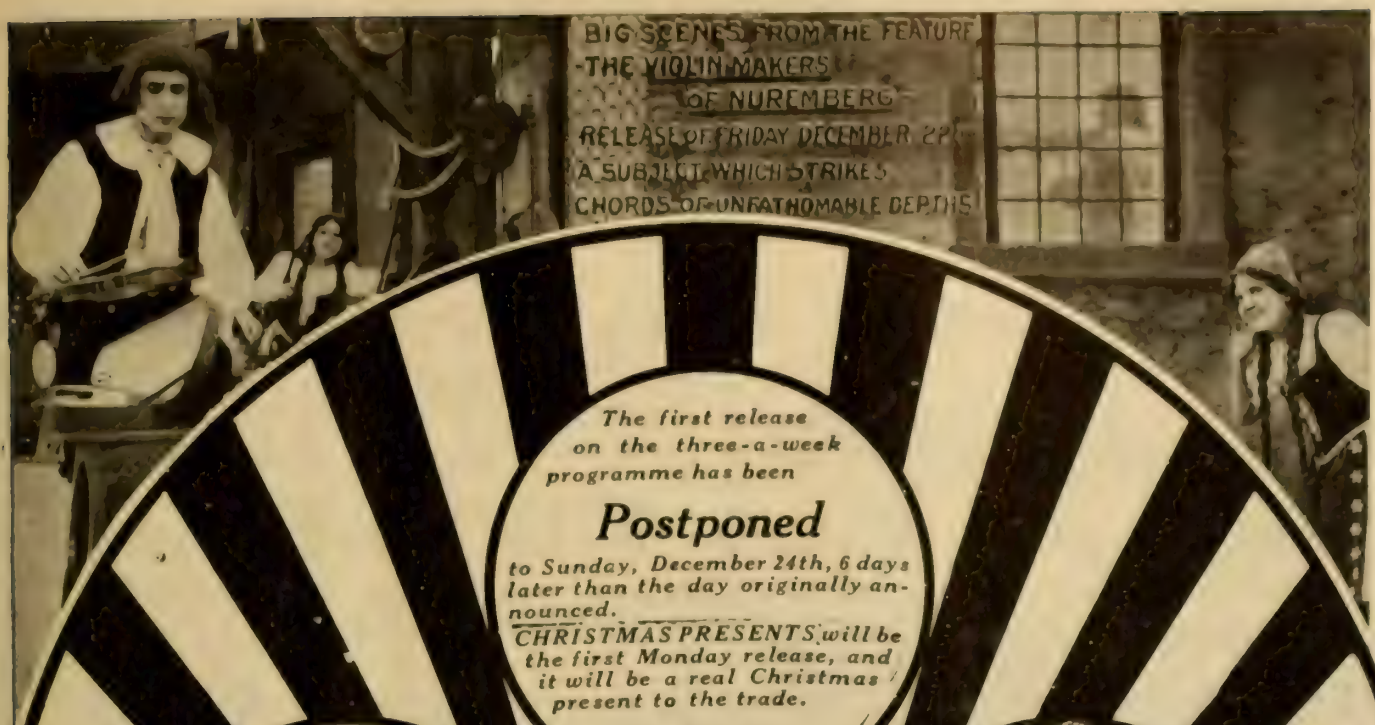
Just in Time for Dinner is our big Christmas number, and you will make no mistake in ordering same at once. A beautifully staged and excellently photographed story of the Christmas home-coming of the son whom the family mourned as dead. The Comet Company is seen at its best in this picture. One thousand feet. Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

Scene from "Just In Time For Dinner."

THE COMET FILM CO., 344 East 32nd Street NEW YORK CITY



The first release on the three-a-week programme has been Postponed

to Sunday, December 24th, 6 days later than the day originally announced.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS will be the first Monday release, and it will be a real Christmas present to the trade.

Watch for it.

Released
Wednesday, Dec. 6th
(A Split Reel)

Baby's Choice

An impressionable child picks out the husband for her sister. She ingeniously eliminates all other suitors.

And on the same reel,

The Paper Making Industry

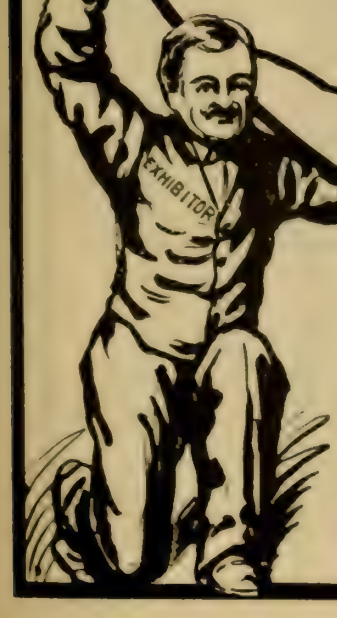
The picture not only shows interesting interiors in a Glens Falls paper mill, but shows also how the powerful Falls have been harnessed.

Released
Friday, Dec. 8th

The Little Shoe

A grief crazed mother in an absent minded moment steals a baby to replace her own who died. The story reaches unusual moments of dramatic intensity. When the real mother and her child are reunited after seventeen years of separation, one feels an exhilaration difficult to describe.

Solax



The Exhibitors and Exchangemen who uphold SOLAX will continue to wear a pleased smile after running The Violin Makers of Nuremberg, the release of Friday, December 22nd.

Solax Company, Congress Avenue FLUSHING, N.Y.

SALES COMPANY Agents in U. S. A. and Canada

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

Realizing that the day of the ordinary cowboy and Indian picture has passed from public favor, a radical change has been made in the Bison Company, and in the future nothing but

Sensational--Spectacular--Western--Military Productions will be released. To this end the entire stock company has been reorganized and new directors employed, the regular company now numbering sixty people. In addition, we have leased from the Miller Brothers their

Famous 101 Ranch Wild West Show including the entire company of 350 people (riders, actors and Indians), together with their horses, equipment and paraphernalia. The Bison company is unquestionably

The Largest Stock Company in the World

Some of the Additions to the Bison Stock Company

The massive productions now being made will create a sensation wherever shown. We will begin releasing them in a few weeks.

Watch for Release Dates!

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO., 1 Union Square, New York City

Thirty-four Releases

To Select from Weekly

AVAILABLE THROUGH SIXTY-THREE EXCHANGES IN UNITED STATES and CANADA

Weekly Program

Monday

Imp, Comet, American, Champion, Nestor, Solax starts Dec. 18th.

Tuesday

Thanhouser, Bison, Powers, (Eclair U. S.)

Wednesday

Champion, Solax, Reliance, Ambrosio, Nestor.

Thursday

Rex, American, Itala, Imp, Eclair.

Friday

Bison, Solax, Thanhouser, Lux, Comet.

Saturday

Powers, Itala, Great Northern, Nestor, Reliance. Republic starts Dec. 16th, Imp, starts Dec. 2nd.

Sunday

Majestic, Republic starts Dec. 17th.

Exhibitors the World Over are showing selections from this program in their theatres to packed houses.

There is a Reason

None Better

Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

111 E. 14th St.
New York, N.Y.

Your Mother

will like the picture mentioned below, because it is so clean and quaint, so picturesque and homelike. It's old-fashioned, yet up-to-date. It's very, very real, and very, very human. It's a picture parents can take their children to see, a picture to which children can take their parents. All who see it will see the measure of a man.

"The Measure of a Man"

Released, Thursday, December 6th

is a whimsical and winsome drama, with just that touch of comedy to make it fascinating.

Fate is a great kidder. It's the greatest practical joker the human race, which comprises you and ourselves and all our other neighbors on this old mud-ball of an earth, ever knew. But this is a story where Fate makes a fumble!

It's a picture that will long be remembered for its character delineation.

SIZE UP
"The Measure of a Man"

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO.

573 Eleventh Avenue
New York City

Sales Co. says the Measure of a Man is some dime-mention!

S E L I G S

HOLIDAY FEATURE EXTRAORDINARY

CINDERELLA

SELIG'S SUBLIME MASTERPIECE

in Three Reels with

MISS MABEL TALIAFERRO

The dainty, diminutive, international idol.

Here is the greatest combination ever offered by any maker anywhere. The sweetest story ever told, gorgeous production, perfect photography, incomparable action; in short the crowning triumph of picturedom—

WILL BE RELEASED AT AN EARLY DATE—BOOK IT NOW.

Dec. 11. "The Chief's Daughter"
Indian drama—on same reel

"April Fool"
A speedy farce-comedy

Dec. 12. "A Romance of the Rio Grande"
Thrilling Western romance of Mexican bootlegging. Great horsemanship

Dec. 14. George Warrington's Escape
Excellent drama of the Revolutionary period

Dec. 15. Industries of the South and West
A review of the Southlands accomplishments. Great educational

CINDERELLA PUBLICITY FOR EXHIBITORS

We are preparing special de luxe Posters, Bulletins, Press Sheets, Lobby Photos, Electro Ads, etc. Everything to help exhibitors make this the greatest success of their career.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

20 East Randolph St. CHICAGO 20 East Randolph St.

S E L I G S

Gaumont

A GAUMONT EVERY TUESDAY and SATURDAY

KOSMIK FILM

AN ECLIPSE EVERY WEDNESDAY

ECLIPSE

CURRENT RELEASES

Gaumont, Tuesday, Dec. 12

HEROISM

Drama. About 610 ft.

Tom, envious of his brother's honors gained in war, distinguishes himself for bravery in a fire and proves himself a hero also.

ARABIAN CUSTOMS

Industrial. About 366 ft.

Eclipse, Wednesday, Dec. 13

THE TRAGEDY OF OLD AGE

Drama. About 798 ft.

Too old for work, the grandfather is turned out of his son's house, but little Jane manages to bring about his happy return.

HARBOR OF MARSEILLES, FRANCE

Scenic. About 215 ft.

Gaumont, Saturday, Dec. 16

A QUEEN'S TREACHERY,
Or
The Betrayal of Charles VI of France

(Colored.)

Historical Drama. About 1,000 ft.

A beautifully colored feature describing the many plots of the false Queen Isabel against the life and throne of Charles VI of France.

Advance Announcements Free. Write to

ECLIPSE

GEORGE KLEINE

166 No. State St., Chicago, Ill.

LICENSED BY THE MOTION PICTURE PATENTS CO.

Gaumont

VITAGRAPH

"Saving the Special"

Monday, December 4th

Especially strong in its thrilling moments of suspense, more especially the saving of the Special by the act of a devoted wife whose husband is the engineer and the cowering of the villain by a little girl. She holds him at bay with a pistol.

Miss Julia Swayne Gordon

John Bunny

"Hypnotizing the Hypnotist"
"A Slight Mistake"

Tuesday, December 5th

This is a split reel, two on one. Two of the funniest comedies of the season.

"The Black Chasm"

Wednesday, December 6th

An Indian Legend. Glimpses of the Primeval forests of America. Most beautifully picturesque. Devouringly fascinating.

Miss Case

"War"

Friday, December 8th

The eyes of the world is centered on the War between Italy and Turkey. A faithful portrayal of scenes at the Siege of Tripoli. A Monster Production that will create a universal cry for peace. It beggars description. A Capacity Booster.

"His Wife's Secret"

Saturday, December 9th

She keeps hubby in suspense. It comes out all right. Hubby's tickled to death. There's spirit and go to it.

Miss Tapley

FIVE A WEEK

Next Week

"ONE TOUCH OF NATURE"—It reaches home.....Monday, December 11th
"THE MILITARY AIR-SCOUT"—War up to date.....Tuesday, December 12th
"THE VENTRILOQUIST'S TRUNK"—Full of fun.....Wednesday, December 13th
"LOVE AT GLOUCESTER PORT"—Romance of land and sea.....Friday, December 15th
"SICK MAN FROM THE EAST"Makes good.....Saturday, December 16th

Next Week

The Vitagraph Company of America

NEW YORK, 116 Nassau St.
CHICAGO, 109 Randolph St.
PARIS, 15 Rue Sainte-Cecile
LONDON, 25 Cecil Court

LUBIN FILMS

4 REELS A WEEK

Released Wednesday, December 6 Length about 1000 feet

Sins of the Father

A potent story that teaches a strong moral lesson. Fascinatingly dramatic, as the Nemesis of a relentless fate closes about the young man. Unique in its ending.

Released Thursday, December 7 Length about 1000 feet

Love's Labor Lost

In the fable, while the wolf and bear quarreled over the honey, the fox ate it. In this story, while two lovers fought a duel over pretty Peggy, a third lover won her. A delicious comedy.

Released Saturday, December 9 Length about 1000 feet

The Teamster

Jim Logan, a brave army teamster, loved deeply the fair Clara Meyers. But she married another who also did love her. In his heart Jim concealed love's fierce fires. In the end, brave Jim gave up his life for her whom he'd wished for his wife. With a kiss from his adored as his ample reward, he passed calmly on from earth's strife. A dandy Western.

Released Monday, December 11 Length about 1000 feet

A Girlish Impulse

How a fair maid foiled the wicked plans of a disappointed lover and was happily united with the man of her heart.

4 REELS A WEEK

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Model New Studios, 20th and Indiana Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

Chicago: 206 N. Fifth Avenue London: 45 Gerrard St., W. Berlin: 35 Friedrich Str.

List of the Best Films Released During the Week of Dec. 11th, 1911

Published in the Interest of the Exhibitor

Dec 12th—
"Youth versus Age"

Dec. 11th—
"Pathe's Weekly"

Dec 13th—
"The Flower Girl of Las Palmas"

Dec. 14th—
"An Episode of Early Mormon Days"

Dec. 15th—
"In the Grip of Alcohol"
(Two Reels)

TRADE MARK

Thomas A Edison

THE MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS IS THE BUSINESS FOR YOU

No other business to-day holds out such certainty of big returns on such small initial investment. But your success depends largely on your first step—the purchase of your machine. Don't buy a cheap machine. Don't let the slight difference in cost between a cheap machine and the best motion picture machine made, stand between you and the success of your show.

THE

Edison Kinetoscope

TRADE MARK

Thomas A Edison

With the Edison Kinetoscope, projecting the clearest, steadiest pictures, working constantly day after day, night after night, without annoying pauses and interruptions, you build up the patronage that makes your show a permanently profitable institution. Besides, the Edison will outlast any other motion picture machine.

With a cheap machine, projecting poor pictures, you destroy your patronage besides throwing away a good proportion of your profits on repairs—and sooner or later you have to buy a good machine anyway.

Buy the best machine first—the Edison Kinetoscope.

Write to-day for full particulars and copy of the Edison Kinetogram.

Scenes from "AN INTERNATIONAL HEART BREAKER"

EDISON FILMS

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 12th

"BUCKSKIN JACK, THE EARL OF GLENMORE"

CAST.

Buckskin Jack.....Herbert Prior
Lady Eleanor.....Laura Sawyer
Lady Jane.....Mabel Trunnelle
Howard Branders, Suitor for Lady Jane's hand.....James Gordon
A Visitor at Glenmore.....Richard Neil
The Butler.....Charles Sutton

Buckskin Jack, of Ignacio, Colorado, discovers that he is the long missing Earl of Glenmore, and visits his ancestral home, meeting his two charming wards. Played in beautiful scenery, it is a delightful mixture of comedy and drama.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13th

(On reel with "Eskimos in Labrador.")

"AN INTERNATIONAL HEART BREAKER"

CAST.

The Heart Breaker.....Mary Fuller
The American.....John R. Cumpson
The Englishman.....Harry West
The German.....William Wadsworth
The Irishman.....Edward O'Connor
The Hebrew.....Julian Reed

All nations are represented in the suitors for her hand. The different types are clean cut and the fun is fast and furious up to the totally unexpected finish.

"ESKIMOS IN LABRADOR"

(On reel with "An International Heart Breaker.")

Interesting views of these people with their sledges, dogs and boats. A short film of great value.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 15th

"BROCKTON FAIR AND HORSE SHOW"

(Brocton, Massachusetts, October 3rd to 6th, 1911.)

A complete tour of the great fair of 1911, showing races, parades, the reception of Governor Foss, horse and dairy cattle show, all beautifully photographed and highly interesting. A film all will want to see.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16th

(On reel with "A Trip from Colorado Springs to Cripple Creek.")

"STAGE-STRUCK LIZZIE"

CAST.

Lizzie.....Alice Washburn
Her Employers.....{Mrs. C. Jay Williams / Mrs. Frances Hulette}
The Children.....{Yale Boss / Edna May Weick}
An Actress.....Elsie McLeod
The Stage Manager.....Charles M. Seay

Lizzie was desperately anxious to get on the stage. She lost several positions because she could not bring her mind down to common things, such as washing dishes or attending to children. Finally she got a chance and—charity draws a veil over what happened.

"A Trip from Colorado Springs to Cripple Creek"

(On reel with "Stage-Struck Lizzie.")

A short scenic picture of wonderful beauty, taking us through the heart of the Rockies and over the summit.

Release of Dec. 19th (Great Xmas Picture): "SANTA CLAUS and the CLUB MAN"

THOMAS A. EDISON, Inc., 72 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

TO THE GENTLEMEN OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY:

A Declaration of Intentions:

THERE has come among your ranks a paradox, the enigmatical advent of a newcomer, sponsored by a group whose connection with and knowledge of the motion picture industry are as old and varied as that industry itself. It comes to you in the form of a new brand of film, or a brand of new film, for the word "new" means fresh, modern, recent, and this film of tomorrow will be all these, and a trifle more.

Good intentions are an important factor in any undertaking; but of far more consequence are the means to promote them to materialization. Not alone have we these intentions and these means, but we have as well another and still a greater incentive, the necessity and imperative desire of the trade.

That it is natural to anticipate the most favorable results is attested by these facts: We have the necessary fundamental and familiar knowledge of the wants and needs of the trade; we have the ambition and the agencies to correct the common evils and the general faults in the manufacturing field; we have the courage of sincere convictions, and the money to back them up!

Experience, Determination, and a respectable amount of Money--a triumphant trinity! With them we are going to cause a revolution and a revelation in film circles. These are not mere extravagant and presumptious speculations; they are practical principles, paramount propositions, valid expressions--they are a Prophecy!

Architecture, sculpture, painting, music, poetry--these may be called the strongest synonym of civilized life and mental accomplishment. Add to the list The Gem Motion Picture Co.

Convincing?

.....Thank you! We hope you share it with us!

THE GEM MOTION PICTURE CO.

Facts and Comments

IN the course of many interviews with the editors of influential journals in various parts of the country recently obtained by a representative of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD the most striking thing was the sincere and often sympathetic interest shown in the motion picture, its present development and its possibilities for the future. In Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and lesser cities, where the views and the knowledge of the editors of the most widely read papers are always fairly typical of the views and knowledge of the best classes in the community, the disposition toward the motion picture was, on the whole, friendly. There seemed, however, to be an unanimous recognition of the fact that the picture will do better and greater things in the future. The present status of the motion picture came in for much hostile criticism, and the adverse comments were mostly directed toward films of foreign make. This brings us face to face with a remarkable fact. The foreign films, with one or two notable exceptions, have depreciated, not by going back, but by standing still. The progress of the American product, or, at least, a considerable portion of it, has been so great and rapid that the foreign makers have been unable to keep up, and seem in consequence to have deteriorated. We are not, of course, speaking of the occasional feature films, but of the average, which is sustained in a regular and certain number of releases. As a rule, made certain by a few exceptions, foreign films have never been popular in this country. The ordinary foreign picture, portraying the social, moral and political conditions prevailing in Europe is often unintelligible to Americans, and not infrequently offensive and disgusting. Our views of life and our sense of humor are so vastly different. Whether Gallic or Teutonic there is something bovine and heavy about European humor which in this country thoroughly fails to please. Add the badly translated titles with their English hacked out of a cheap dictionary and the unpopularity of these pictures is easily understood. It is only fair to except both Gaumont and Pathé by name from these strictures.

* * *

THE benefits of organization were signally demonstrated in the case of the Pennsylvania exhibitors who have through an appeal to the courts escaped the preposterous annual tax of $500 levied by a legislative enactment of the year 1907. Legislation, State and National, was at one time in our history considered as an exercise of statesmanship, but within recent times it seems to have degenerated into a luxury and pastime, demanded by irresponsible reformers. The result has been much dangerous and harmful bungling. There is no way in which we can question and annul pernicious laws except through an invocation of the courts. It is a wearisome and expensive proceeding, but it is well worth while, as the issue in the Keystone State has amply attested.

* * *

WE read of a progressive Western city whose "Playground Commission" plans the acquisition and control of a certain number of moving picture houses to be run at the expense of the community for the benefit of children only. That would be a consummation devoutly to be wished. Time and again we have pointed out the extraordinary influence of the picture over the mind in its immature and formative state, and we emphasized the dangers arising from such a situation by reason of the character of certain pictures. The "Playgrounds Commission," which consists of an equal number of men and women, could be trusted to select proper programs. Such a work deserves the best efforts of the friends of humanity and has our sincerest wishes for its success.

* * *

IN as far as they show a significant quickening of popular intelligence in every part of the country, the results of the late elections should not be lost on the exhibitors and manufacturers, who must gain their livelihood by appealing to the public intelligence. People nowadays apply the quality test in pictures as well as in politics. Everywhere we witness a departure from old ideas and old methods and a smashing of precedent and tradition. He is no longer deemed the best "showman" who can best fool the public. The "philosophy" of Barnum has gone out of fashion and nothing will survive but quality. Time was when the promises a manager made to his public were not taken seriously and were broken almost as a matter of course. 'Tis no longer thus. Managers of moving picture theatres are held to strict account by their patrons, who resent nothing more than a diet of broken promises. Some manufacturers show very clearly that they understand the situation. They meet it with splendid pictures, whether dramatic or educational. Others still adhere to the old superstitution that the majority of moving picture patrons are in a state of idiocy and on their final passage to an asylum for the imbecile. Let such bestir themselves in time before the Limbo of Forgotten Film Makers swallows them up.

* * *

MOVING Picture Outrages" is the pleasant title of an editorial in our ancient contemporary The New York Tribune. The article in question is the usual "scathing denunciation" of motion pictures and recites as the specific count in the indictment an allegation to the effect that elopements in moving pictures are becoming too frequent. It is quite possible that elopements have recently figured a bit too conspicuously in films, but what is there "outrageous"? Elopements do occur in real life, and generally it is the extremely young girl and the extremely young man that elopes. In most cases the parental consent is witheld, because the would-be bride and bridegroom are believed to be too young for marriage. Now according to American ideas there is nothing essentially wrong about an elopement. Many elopers make excellent wives and husbands. The inclination to take "a shot" at the moving pictures has in some newspaper offices become an irresistible habit.

* * *

WE are glad to repeat a demand made by many of the friends of the moving picture in the case of reckless denunciation: "Name the offending picture." If you cannot name the particular picture or describe it plainly enough for the purpose of identification, it is better to be quiet and say nothing. Long-haired men and short-haired women seem to see more offensive pictures than the reviewers of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, and the latter, wretched victims of stern duty, see nearly the entire weekly output fifty two weeks in every year. The hypercritical gentry of the reforming variety always put us in mind of the lady who, on seeing a nude statue, asked Dr. Samuel Johnson: "Oh, Dr. Johnson, don't you think this figure is indecent?" "No," roared back the didactic critic, "the figure is not indecent, madam, but your question is." The lesson might be paraphrased in many other words, but let this suffice.

The Ben Hur Case.

By Epes W. Sargent.

AT last the Supreme Court of the United States has adjudged the question of the status of the motion picture, and differs from the Library of Congress, in that it finds it to be a dramatic production.

This decision by the highest tribunal in the land will have far-reaching effects, but it will particularly interest those scenario writers—and they are not a few—who turn to the periodicals for inspiration.

To make a dramatic production of a published work protected by copyright is to render oneself liable for heavy penalties, and the pleasant process of dramatizing the Saturday Evening Post must be abandoned.

To a member of the staff of The Moving Picture World a manufacturer recently declared that he read the Philadelphia publication twice, once when it came out and again the following week when scenarios began to come in based on these stories. Why the Post should be the favorite inspiration of these pseudo pirates is not apparent, but the fact remains, though, everything from the Bible to Joe Miller's Joke Book has been made to serve its turn.

Not all of those who pirate ideas are conscious of any wrongdoing; indeed, one genius from Battle Creek once wrote a manufacturer to ask if he should change the names of the characters or retain them, as they were in the stories, as he had a lot of magazines and thought he would write some scenarios from them.

Another point of view was shown by a young woman in Texas who sent in half a chapter of Frank Stockton's "Rudder Grange" and, when told that the source of inspiration was known, calmly replied that she was entitled to the idea as Frank Stockton was too dead to write scenarios and she was the first to see the picture possibilities of Pomona. The idea was there, but since none had seen it, she felt that she was entitled to scenario rates for making the suggestion, and she did not see where the Stockton copyright came in.

The first writer was entirely innocent, and the latter not without guile, but both thought that there could be no harm in borrowing from a copyrighted story—and they did.

There is a third and larger class who deliberately make scenarios from obscure works or periodicals having but a limited circulation, and these are in the class with the Washington genius who spends his leisure moments for the better part of each year in counterfeiting a hundred dollar bill. He might as easily make it a thousand dollar bill, but it is not the money he seeks, but the excitement of cheating the government with pen and brush work so fine that even banks are deceived. Some people think that to cheat is clever, and not even the ironclad release form, first used by the Edison Company, but now generally employed, has any terrors for them.

More than one good idea has been reluctantly thrown out by the scenario editor because the plot seemed to be too good for the sort of person who apparently had sent it in, but not all the thefts are detected, since no scenario editor can read all of the produced literature.

Under the more stringent regulations it is probable that scenario editors will redouble their caution, and the antecedents of a story will be even more carefully looked into. Already the Edison Company has turned strongly toward the published works of established authors, the Selig Company has made many copyrighted productions and a dozen other studios have done one or more stories visualized from copyrighted works.

Not always has the experiment been a success, but this depends more upon the choice of story and the work of the editor than upon the scheme in general, and it is probable that this practise will increase unless the average of the product of the scenario writer decidedly improves.

The Children's Theater.

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

NO one who has attended matinee performances at the moving picture theaters, particularly in residence districts, and has closely observed the mixed audiences encountered, could fail to appreciate that these entertainments are making a powerful appeal to those of whom we should have reason to be more proud than our ancestors. Those who go often and mix with the crowd in a friendly way, listening to voluntary comments and extracting discerning criticisms from the men and women of the future will learn that the business of producing is not of to-day, when many engaged in it are grabbing all there is to be had, with get-rich-quick, make-hay-while-the-sun-shines, forecast of eventual decline in attendance and actually forcing such a failure by short-sighted economies of production, but is distinctly of and for to-morrow. The child of to-day is the man or woman of yesterday, glorying in the contest, or in feminine acts of mercy, yet shaming those of us who resort to low methods of gaining a livelihood, as children are solidly against the grafter, opposed to cruelty and despotism and on the side of the weak, the helpless and the erring. They are on the side of right and with a discernment that is very amusing at times.

I recently saw a French drama, or an adaptation from the French, in which the "triangle" is that of two girls in love with a life-saving artist. The hack playwright followed the story so closely that the situation set up was clearly impossible in this country. One of the love-sick girls becomes ill and the father urges the artist to sacrifice himself for her sake, declaring in the sub-title in a highly dramatic manner:

"You must marry her to save her life."

I was only mildly amused, as I have lived several years in France and have grown accustomed to theatrical exaggerations, but the whole audience roared, the children joining in. It was entirely foreign to their tastes, overacted, or so theatrically strained that it not only failed to awaken sympathy, but excited ridicule. The act was intended to show a heroic spirit of self-sacrifice, but sympathy was with the other girl who loved the artist equally well, who would live, love and be loved, and the kids could see no sense in throwing her down. This is mentioned to show that a dramatic instinct exists or has been cultivated which must be considered. The artist consenting to be a physician's prescription at the expense of all that we hold most dear was entirely too good to be true to life, and the rude little critics gave the act derision instead of applauding the motive. Much more remarkable is their fondness for the highest class of stories in action, provided there is an observable fidelity to what they believe to be truth in the action and setting. Naturalness enlists their sympathies, then their emotions can be aroused and the finer appeal is sure to reach their minds. Noteworthy is their keen sense of the ridiculous and love of a contest. The cowboy play fascinates through the spirited chase, suspense and relief, and may be used with effect wherever there is a fine motive involved, and the same is true of military dramas, but the warmest kind of welcome is extended to a view of airships, the growth of a flower, or exhibit of instructive curiosities of science or travel.

The child is a born actor, always pretending—many a one has put up such a good front of illness to stay home from school as to deceive the family physician—and is a fair judge of acting in the photoplay. The settings and costumes are subjected to keen scrutiny, most children delighting in those of beauty, while many are repelled if not frightened by the hideous make-up of tramps and stage villains of the deepest dye, but on one point they are all strong—they dearly love a good story. Tell them a tale of adventure, of struggle, of wrongs righted, of egotism ridiculed, so long as it ends in accordance with natural justice and common sympathy, and they will accept any moral conveyed and retain the impression when it would vanish from a mature mind.

Considering how much is decidedly valueless, if not positively detrimental, that strays into the minds of children, it may be said that the picture show is already educating them, and they may be easily taught in this manner much that they would resent in the way of good advice, but picture shows, some considerate producers to the contrary notwithstanding, are not for children alone, and it has occurred to me that the separate entertainments might be given every day:

The matinee for children.

The evening performance for adults.

So much for a step in the evolution of a veritable theater for children—the evening plays could embrace those of more advanced character with those in the afternoon suited to little and grown-up children, so that millions of people who now regard motion pictures as childish would be drawn to the little theater by photo dramas of superior merit.

A theater devoted to the entertainment and subtle instruction of the little ones would be one of the natural consequences of this evolution, and it would be sure to draw. With grand organ or piano recitals and choral singing by children added to the picture program, such an exhibition would have an astounding and immediate success, especially with people now weary of the low variety entertainments so dear to the piano man and the bald heads in the first row.

O happy day, when we part with Mayme Cortlandt, of skinny throat and abbreviated skirts, and the sure-fire gags of the Words and Music Brothers!

I could listen to a choir of pure-throated boys, gowned like seraphs, chant their celestial songs every day in the week, while good instrumental music has a charm that grows with repetition.

Some day, some man, possibly a woman, will have wisdom enough to start a children's theater with flowers, music and pictures interwoven in delightful combination and set an example that will electrify managers all over the country, the while enforcing the necessity of reaching the minds of children with what strongly appeals to them, pointing out an entirely new scheme of education and starting a system of mental development which may result in reducing what is now called "genius" from an exceptional state to the normal condition of humankind.

WANTS MORE PICTURES FOR CHILDREN.

C. W. Goddard, manager of the Acme Theater, Sacramento, Cal., is anxious to have more pictures suited for exhibition to children. The movement has been given a substantial boost by the women of that city, and it is hoped that it will become nation-wide. The Sacramento Bee gives considerable space to the subject.

Suggestions to a Worried Critic

By W. Stephen Bush.

"HOW are we," asks a distinguished English critic and author in a recent address, "to get intelligent, adult people into the theatre? The old fallacy that people of sense go to the theatre to be amused has long been exploded. If amusement is all you have to offer they will simply stay away, and that is what they do to a large extent now." He continues:

"Do you think, if I had nothing to give you but amusement, you would be here now? Not a bit of it; you would be out seeing the Lord Mayor's Show, where at least you would be getting the benefit of open air!

"No; what this all important public want is something they can take away and think over—something that will throw a new light on their own lives and the lives of those around them. This is what we of the new drama want to give them. But as things are, it is commercially impossible. It doesn't pay.

"I don't say that it doesn't pay a modest 10 per cent. profit. I mean that it doesn't pay the several hundred per cent. that is needed to attract financial support away from the gamble in so-called popular plays—popular, in many cases, just because everything is done in them to make vice attractive."

Before this our readers know who is speaking. It is the ever delightful Bernard Shaw.

Can we agree with him and apply what he says to the moving picture?

Do people come to the motion picture play to be amused or to stimulate their minds? Are the patrons satisfied with a good hearty laugh or will they insist on something they "can take away and think over?"

I think that entertainment best serves its purpose and most benefits mankind which amuses and stimulates as well. To the normal man there is a pleasure, akin to amusement, in exercising his brain. The motion picture offers both amusement and food for thought. To insist on a strict division between amusement and stimulation of thought or instruction or education, is a pedantic splitting of hairs. No one goes to an ordinary motion picture theatre for the sole and express purpose of improving his education. The controlling impulse that leads to the surrender of the small change to the exhibitor is in nine cases out of ten, a desire to be entertained. This does not necessarily mean that the amusement cannot consist of anything but loud laughter. We all have come away from a serious drama with a feeling of having been most pleasantly entertained. If it is true that search after diversion is the primary motive of every man, woman and child who visits the theatre or the picture house, the diversion is offered and taken in various shapes. I think it very safe to say that every motion picture program contains something "a man can take home and think over."

It is in the A-B-C lesson of every exhibitor to have a "good drama," and many exhibitors prefer the drama, though still more of them suspend their personal judgment on Saturday night, when they care more for a short than a varied program. The manufacturers cannot justly be accused of neglecting the serious side; in fact all the competent ones supply the need ably, and some are capable of departing from the conventional and the monotonous and giving us much valuable original matter.

Whatever may be the case in England and whatever may be wrong with the British stage, the American motion picture exhibitor or manufacturer needs no assistance or endowment from either the government or private sources. On the whole, the good picture here pays on its own merits.

Mr. Shaw pleads for an "endowed theatre."

"Shall we not try," he asks, "to give the people such drama as will stimulate their minds, make them think about things seriously and help to become good, keen, respecting citizens? Yet, for purely economic reasons it is really hopeless to try to provide drama of this kind consistently in any save an endowed theatre."

What they need over there is a greater number of picture theatres with the best possible American film service.

There are at least a dozen producers in this country earnestly trying to accomplish just what Mr. Shaw expects from an endowed theatre in England. We are willing to qualify as competent witnesses and then testify to the success of these men's efforts.

We advise the keen and able critic who pleads so earnestly for an endowed theatre with which to educate the people to look at the best ten weekly American releases for the last four weeks and then consider whether an endowed theatre for the "middle classes" could help half as much as a systematic series of the best American films. The British public is not ripe for the things Mr. Shaw wants them to see in his endowed theatre. The best American films would prepare and mature their minds for whatever offering the distinguished critic has in store for them.

With Mr. Shaw at its head we have no doubt that the proposed subsidized showhouse would be conducted on a high and lofty plane, but as a rule the endowed theatre is very much like a refined species of literary and dramatic "graft."

Pictures and Popularity.

MEMORY does not have to hark back so very far to recall the time when the theatrical journals refrained from making mention of the motion picture lest they offend their clientele, the legitimate actors. There was a time, also, when noted thespians disdained the offers of the moving picture producer and when the exigencies of the situation prompted one to accept the tempting offer he would carefully disguise his features and stipulate that his real name be suppressed. But sentiment has changed, as THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD long ago predicted it would, and to-day the motion picture director has his pick of the Rialto. This is not to be wondered at when one considers that the chief asset of an actor is popularity, and they have discovered that this asset is more rapidly and effectively secured through the silent drama than any other way. A concrete example of this may be seen from the following paragraph from a Western newspaper:

A Motion Picture Star on the Regular Stage.

Frederick Santley who appeared in a number of the Kalem comedies the past summer is now playing a leading juvenile part with Eva Tanguay in the play, "Little Miss Fixit." The company is appearing in New Orleans this week to packed houses. The large business can be credited to a very great extent to young Santley's appearance in "Bertie" parts in Kalem comedies. Santley has been recognized on the streets by thousands of people, and the young boys do not hesitate to call out, "Oh, you Bertie," and every time he appears on the stage he is met with applause that is really phenomenal and bespeaks his great personal popularity.

Surely this proclaims the fallacy of the notion that once prevailed that if a prominent actor or actress appeared in moving pictures it would destroy their usefulness for legitimate dramatic companies. Instead of Mr. Santley's usefulness having waned through his engagement with the Kalem company it has been very much enhanced indeed from an advertising standpoint. Thousands patronize the picture shows to the hundreds who patronize the big theaters, hence the actor gets probably ten times as much advertising out of his presentment on the screen as he would in a regular dramatic production. But the point that we wish to make is that if he is a favorite in the pictures it makes him of far greater value to a theatrical company.

Canadian Censors and the U. S. Flag

COMMENTING upon the peculiar form of "Jingoism" that sought to make capital out of the action of the Canadian Board of Censors in barring certain pictures in which the Stars and Stripes were displayed to the disparagement of the flag of Britain, THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD advised its readers to view the other side of the question, and condemned the indiscriminate flaunting of an emblem so sacred as the flag of one's country in order to gain the cheap applause of the crowd, or to put over a production that lacked intrinsic merit. Encouraged by the temperate utterance of THE WORLD, the Canadian censors venture to express through its columns their position upon the flag question in a communication to THE WORLD, of which the following is a substantial copy:

"Having seen some comments in the press of the United States regarding the action of our board of censors in barring out the Stars and Stripes in certain productions of the manufacturers of moving pictures and having, also, noted the sensible comment made by the Moving Picture World regarding same, the attitude of our board (which does not represent the extreme feeling here) towards the Stars and Stripes should be made clear:

"It is quite true that we were somewhat drastic after a certain reel (I refer to "The Mother and Sons of '76") was shown here. Our position is this: that in subjects where the flag is shown where there is not the least necessity for it, or where the display of the Stars and Stripes in any way compares to the disadvantage of our own flag, we bar these subjects out unless the Stars and Stripes are eliminated. In subjects that relate to your Civil War or any occasion when it is quite proper to show the flag, we permit them to be exhibited.

"Our position is not an easy one in respect to many subjects that have merit but are made objectionable to our people by the prominence given to the Stars and Stripes. The feeling is pretty strong here regarding same. There is the pressure of public opinion behind the movement to bar them out; however, there is a time to use a little common sense. There is no reason why the Stars and Stripes cannot be shown in their proper setting any more than the flag of any other Nation.

"You may understand how we feel about it, when, out of some two thousand subjects examined, only once did the Union Jack appear, with the exception of the Coronation series, but no doubt there were hundreds of reels where the Stars and Stripes were prominently displayed.

After such a fair statement as the foregoing there should not be the least apprehension among American manufacturers that a proper use of the Stars and Stripes in pictures will arouse the criticism of our Canadian brothers, or call down the disapproval of the Canadian Board of Censors. Any other use of the national flag should be held in marked disfavor at home as well as abroad.

It is a singular commentary upon American manufacturers that they should require a lesson in respect for the flag from their Canadian brothers.

THIS WOMAN A "BOOSTER."

At a meeting of the women's clubs of Oxford, O., held in Oxford College on November 14, Mrs. Addison Broomhall, president of the Ohio State Federation of Women's Clubs, paid a high compliment to moving picture shows as educating as well as entertaining mediums for the masses of the people. She frankly admitted that she believed in such entertainments, properly conducted, of course. She deprecated the disposition of some women to turn up their noses at five-cent shows for the reason that they were cheap; or, perchance, because they might have to sit beside a servant girl. She said she considered it the duty of club women, those of culture and refinement, to patronize these popular amusements. Their attendance would have a tendency to elevate the shows, and the ultimate result would be the production of higher class films.

Citizens of Helena, Mont., have been holding meetings for the discussion of having motion pictures taken of the town. The expense will be defrayed by popular subscription.

The Belasco of Motion Picture Presentations.

EQUIPMENT AND MANAGEMENT OF THE LYRIC THEATER, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., UNDER THE DIRECTION OF MR. S. L. ROTHAPFEL.

By James S. McQuade.

MINNEAPOLIS, I have been told by men of long experience in the exchange and exhibition departments of the film business, has never been enthusiastic over a straight-picture program, but I have learned from equally competent authority that pictures have been steadily gaining in popular favor.

True, there is still a strong hankering after an admixture of vaudeville, but, for the past year, the tendency has been towards a program of pictures only. This tendency, however, is in part due to a city ordinance, passed over a year ago, which prohibits moving picture theaters, whose construction does not comply with the ordinance regulating regular vaudeville houses, from using vaudeville. The capacity limit for exclusive picture theaters is 350 seats, but over that capacity they must conform to more rigorous stipulations, which call for fireproof construction and locations that permit of safe egress through numerous exits.

The Lyric, on Hennepin Avenue, between 7th and 8th Streets, with a capacity of 1,700 seats, is the largest exclusive picture theater in Minneapolis. There are larger theaters in the country devoted solely to pictures, but there is none, and I can say it without the slightest fear of eating my words, that can lay claim to such model management as controls the destinies of the Lyric. By model management is meant the most intelligent, up-to-date, progressive presentation of moving pictures, the sure instinctive grasp of their full values and the talent—indeed, the aspiration—that seizes the most effective means to reveal successfully these full values to an audience.

Alas! for so much that is commonplace and perfunctory in the ordinary exhibition of moving pictures. The turning of the crank, the grinding out of film at lightning speed, the rushing in and out of patrons so that the pile of nickels may mount higher; how can Art survive in such an atmosphere? And how can moving pictures commend themselves when they are forced to appear as fleeing shadows?

MR. S. L. ROTHAPFEL,
Manager of the Lyric Theater, Minneapolis, Minn.

How I wish that exhibitors throughout the country could attend the Lyric in Minneapolis and see how S. L. Rothapfel, the Belasco of moving picture presentations, does things. I mean how he works wonders. How he takes a picture that ordinarily awakens but little interest and transforms what were only shadows into living, sentient beings, whose varied emotions fill us with joy or sadness, or thrill us with fear. How he takes one into the very atmosphere of the story, so that we live amid its scenes and listen to its sounds.

Is it a great subject—"A Tale of Two Cities?" Hark! Do you hear two bars of the Marseilles, played in medium key by the orchestra, and the rumble of kettle drums. Then, immedately following, the same bars repeated pianissimo, succeeded by the rattle of kettle drums sounding farther off. All this before the operator has made a single turn of the crank. Then the picture follows. There you have the theme of the story in a flash—the French Revolution, with its scenes of strife and bloodshed.

Is it "Uncle Tom's Cabin?" Look at the stage. Down stage to the right is a conservatory and ball room brilliantly illuminated, through the windows of which we see the happy dancers and hear joyful sounds. "Old Kentucky Home," followed by "Good Night," falls sweetly on our ears. As the last note dies away an old darkey is seen coming down the steps of an old Southern mansion, Colonial style, down-stage to the left. As Uncle Ned crosses into the pale moonlight to the center of stage, in 4, about twenty pickaninnies come out of the shadows, from the left and squat themselves in a semicircle around him, their backs towards the audience They ask him to tell the story of Uncle Tom. As the old man seats himself, the picture appears on the screen and all keep their positions in the subdued light until the story is told by the silent drama.

Is there not a delicious realism and atmosphere in this? And does it not reveal an artistic fancy on the part of the manager and afford a delightful prelude to the filmed story.

The foregoing are examples showing Mr. Rothapfel's way of introducing a picture; but it must be remembered that he consistently follows the theme throughout the run of the picture, with appropriate music and sound effects. The examples could be multiplied, and all would serve to show the great resourcefulness of Mr. Rothapfel in the staging of his pictures, in the arrangement of the musical program for each picture, and in the nice subdued use of sound effects. The whole show at the Lyric is high-class and the artistic atmosphere prevails throughout.

How to Select a Musical Program for a Picture.

Mr. Rothapfel is rather disinclined to speak for publication, but on asking him to say something in answer to the question, "How do you select a musical program for a picture?" he considered a long time and finally replied:

"This is indeed a very hard question to answer, and one that takes a great deal of study and hard work. Although I have an orchestra of fifteen people, and am catering to the finest audiences, from whom I invite criticism, I do not care to be held as an authority on so important a subject, as I feel that I have a lot to learn about it.

"Of course, one must have a thorough knowledge of the subject that he is handling, and if he should not have, by all means he should get up on it at once. He will find the work fascinating in the extreme, and if he is not musically inclined, he should take his leader or his pianist into his confidence and study the story carefully. Extract the theme and there you have half the battle. Music is the greatest accessory that the motion picture has; that is, if it is handled properly, it is the making of many a mediocre picture.

"There is absolutely no limit to what one can do with a first-class orchestra, in the way of arranging music to fit the pictures, and we use here almost everything, from the symphonies to the more popular airs from comic opera successes. Every one of my musicians are soloists and highly-trained men, and are members of the Minneapolis symphony orchestra, an organization that is one of the finest in America. Anyone who holds that you cannot play pictures with an orchestra would do well to come and see one of our performances."

"Every picture that is shown in this theater is carefully scored and rehearsed. This is absolutely necessary to acquire results, and unless you have a splendidly trained staff it will be very difficult work. The picture is first run through and everyone is allowed to see it. By taking notes after this is over we gather the theme and we are then ready to arrange the music for the story and work toward the psychological point in the story. I do not believe in changing music for every scene, nor just because there is some dancing that you must play a dance. This, in my opinion, is absolutely wrong and to an intelligent audience would be very annoying. Remember, above all things, that the picture on the screen is the thing, and every single mortal in your theater must work toward that screen to get the real results. By this I mean that your music must not be so conspicuous that it will overshadow the picture, but rather subdue it. If your music is right you will notice that your audience is intensely interested, with their eyes glued upon the screen. If it is not, they will be fidgety and restless, and all the good points in the picture will be lost, and you will perhaps wonder why your audience didn't like such and such a picture.

"Effects? Yes, by all means, but they, too, must be handled in the same delicate manner to attain the best results. Remember that it is a very hard thing to imitate nature. Unless the sound effects are right, you attain just the opposite to what you are striving for."

A Rehearsal at the Lyric.

Desirous of seeing for myself a rehearsal of the semi-week's program at the Lyric, I was on hand on Thursday morning (the program is changed on Thursdays and Mondays every week) at ten o'clock. Manager Rothapfel was present, with his entire orchestra and staff. He sat on the stage, with a stenographer beside him, facing the screen.

At a signal the operator began projecting the first picture. As it was being run off and watched by all, Mr. Rothapfel announced the score, and details for sound effects. He mentally seizes on the musical selections, on the spur of the moment, as if inspired. If an afterthought flashes the intelligence that a better selection than the one announced would be more appropriate, he signals the operator to stop and run several scenes over again. If convinced that the change should be made, he so announces, and the members of the orchestra make notes accordingly. It is strange that Mr. Rothapfel should state that he does not know a note of music, except by ear, yet he has the scores of every light opera and musical comedy at his command, and can draw on grand opera and on the symphonies to assist him in playing the pictures. In addition, he is familiar with the popular lyrics of many countries. When dissatisfied with the manner in which a musical selection is being conducted, he has been known to jump in and wield the baton himself. He gets at the very soul of a score, and brings out its beauty, or its weirdness, with the skill of a master.

The Lyric's Talented Singers.

But instrumental music by fifteen symphony soloists is not considered a sufficient guard of honor for pictures by our Belasco. He has four voices that would do credit to any of the best musical comedy companies: Miss Martha Butler, soprano; Miss Tenie Murphy-Sheehan, contralto; B. F. Forster, tenor, and Dr. Ray R. Morehouse, baritone, are delighting Lyric audiences at the present time. Solos, duets, trios and quartets are sung by these talented artists. I had the pleasure of hearing Miss Butler sing "Ave Maria" (Gounod), accompanied by pipe organ, cello and piano, with delightful expression and art, in the midst of an embowered stage setting, arranged by Mr. Rothapfel. The effect was unique and artistic, with the spotlight fading away as the last sweet note gradually hushed into silence. Miss Murphy-Sheehan captivated all her hearers by "The Garden in My Heart," her rich voice, of fine volume and compass, being enhanced by her dainty chic and a charming personality. The trio from Atilla (Verdi) and "Two Little Love Bees" from the "Spring Maid," also scored big hits.

It must not be thought that the musical programs are beyond the heads of Lyric audiences, for the very best class of people is included. The governor of the state makes his regular weekly visits, and so on through the social scale. Besides, familiar popular lyrics are also abundantly used in the Lyric's vocal programs, as it is the purpose to please all classes.

The Picture Program.

The picture program is treated here in the order of a great cathedral procession—the highest dignitary and the most highly honored march in the rear.

In selecting his pictures, Manager Rothapfel sets a higher value on the appropriateness of a picture than he does on age. That is, if a first run does not serve his purpose, he lays it aside and chooses one that does, no matter what its age, so long as the condition of the film is good. He constructs his programs with the greatest care so as to give the maximum of variety, in consistence with his sense of art. He also aims to keep his programs that follow each other closely as widely different as possible to avoid monotony.

Four reels are used daily and, as before stated, two changes are made weekly. Two of these reels are first runs, provided they fit in with his idea of what the program under consideration should be. He picks four reels from such subjects as scenic, travelogue, educational, dramatic, historical and comedies of high grade. There is always one of the first three mentioned on his program, and there is always a good drama and a good comedy.

The Picture on the Lyric Screen.

Let us go to the Lyric operating room first, before touching on the projected picture. There we find the principal operator and his apprentice dressed in immaculate white uniforms—these "for comfort and cleanliness," in Mr. Rothapfel's words. One machine and a spotlight are used, the latter being patented and of Mr. Rothapfel's own invention. This spotlight is used for the singing numbers and is never thrown on the screen.

About 40 amperes, D.C., are used in the throw of 110 feet, on a 16 x 14-foot curtain. This curtain is also an invention of Mr. Rothapfel's, being made of a textile fabric and a composition of animal matter, the nature of which he keeps secret. No metallic matter enters into the composition I am forced to say that this curtain (combined with fine projection of course) gave the best effects ever seen by me, in the way of bringing out the half-tone values, the sharpness and the stereoscopic qualities of a picture. And the pictures appear on the screen when the house is so well lighted that one can read the house program as if by daylight.

Daylight; yes, that reminds me. Mr. Rothapfel is the originator of "daylight pictures," the first man who discovered that moving pictures could be projected perfectly in a well-lighted house. His work along those lines has given him the reputation of being the most expert moving picture operator in the country. And I can vouch that his house, the Lyric, is a model of finely-projected pictures. I have seen no pictures, heretofore, that would equal his.

Under this head it should be stated that Mr. Rothapfel has automatic safety devices for the shutter, of his own invention, that have been highly commended by fire commissioners.

The booth is a model of cleanliness, order, equipment and safety, and is thoroughly fireproof. For the storage of films that are not in use, Mr. Rothapfel uses a small fireproof vault, which has an ingenious device for forcing moisture through the shelves on which the films are placed.

The Lyric Stage.

The stage of the Lyric is beautifully set and is without doubt, the finest in any picture theater in the country. The screen is set in a black border and is draped by hand-painted imitation tapestry. Marble columns are painted on each side of the screen outside the black border. To the right of the stage, looking from the audience, are the seats for the orchestra and also a large pipe organ with chimes and a complete set of sound effects. Other effects are also to be found all around the stage, out of sight. To the left of the stage, looking from the audience, is an artistic Japanese garden with Japanese lanterns suspended from the lattice work. In front of this are palms, ferns, cut flowers and electric fountain. The stage footlights and border lights are fitted with red, blue and amber globes, and are controlled at will from the switchboard. When the picture is off and the singers come on, or when the opening overture of each program is being played, these lights are turned on, the effect being a warmth of color that makes everyone present feel comfortable.

The Lyric Fire Drill.

Twice a week a thorough fire drill is engaged in by the house employees. The signal for fire is given by a gong and by the flashing of the red exit lights in the theater. On the gong signal the girl ushers immediately look at the exit lights and, if they are flashing and waning, they walk quietly down the aisles and say to the audience, "There is no danger. Please keep your seats. The red lights mean exits. Every exit door in the theater can be opened at the slightest touch." At the same time Mr. Rothapfel has a trained and well-drilled fire force which goes to the scene of the fire with extinguishers and hose. All this is done so quietly that there is no confusion and no noise that would serve to excite an audience. Not a single word is spoken all through the drill, except by the girl ushers when they walk down the aisles.

Daily Opening of the Lyric.

The Lyric is opened and closed daily according to a fixed rule. One ring of the gong in the foyer means inspection call, after which every employee in the theater appears in line in his or her uniform for inspection by Manager Rothapfel. Then follows two bells and everyone takes his or her station. When three bells are sounded it is the signal for the house to open.

The Lyric Front and Lobby.

The Lyric has a handsome front which is brilliantly illuminated at night by a large electric sign. No posters are used in front, but instead neat hand-painted half sheets containing Rothapfel mottoes are seen in attractive frames with glass front. The lobby is spacious and contains large frames, set on handsome easels, which contain photographs of all the stock companies of the Licensed manufacturers. There, while the house is open, one meets the handsomely-uniformed ticket taker, whose uniform politeness and good nature make him a favorite with all who approach him.

Brief Sketch of S. L. Rothapfel's Life.

Just as in the treatment of the picture program, it is reserved to follow subordinate subjects, so we reserve the closing paragraph for a brief sketch of the life of the man who has gained fame by the presentations of de luxe pictures.

Mr. Rothapfel was born in Stillwater, Minn., July 9, 1882. He lived there until 12 years of age, when his family moved to Brooklyn, N. Y. He was educated in the public schools of that city, and at the age of eighteen received an appointment in the U. S. Marine Corps. He served about six years, during which time he held many responsible positions and having been in action on several different occasions. He wrote the article on the battle of Bolivar, which occurred during the Venezuela insurrection, which was copied by every large newspaper in the world. At the age of 24 he left the marine service and had experience as a book agent and insurance manager.

In 1908, after a brief courtship, he was married to his present wife, whom he met in Forest City, Pennsylvania. In January, 1909, he engaged in the motion picture business by exhibiting films in an old dance hall that was a regular den, located directly behind the barroom on a side street, in Forest City. He was further handicapped by the fact that he had strong competition on the main street nearby. In three months after opening he had a splendid business and no competition. The old Family Theater was remodeled and was at the time one of the finest picture houses in Northeastern Pennsylvania. Mr. Rothapfel still owns it and looks upon it as his mascot. Ambitious to enter a larger field, he went to Philadelphia, where he installed his new idea of projection in Keith's Bijou Theater, being the first to project well-defined pictures in a lighted house. This success resulted in a contract with the United Booking Offices, by which he made a tour of the country, improving projection. This he accomplished in a most satisfactory manner. Later he conducted several picture enterprises for the U. B. O. people. He next entered the picture field in Milwaukee, where he opened Shubert's large house, the Alhambra, and offered its now celebrated pictures de luxe and broke all records for that house. He amazed the picture world as well as people in the dramatic business by his performances and success. Afterwards he came to Minneapolis, where he has far eclipsed his Milwaukee record.

Lyric Prices of Admission.

The prices at the Lyric are 10, 20 and 25 cents. There are four shows daily, two matinees and two evening. At the matinee 10 cents is charged for a seat in any part of the house, and 25 cents for box seats. In the evening 20 cents is charged for seats on the ground floor, 10 cents for a seat in the balcony and gallery and 25 cents for box seats. So far as I know the Lyric is the only house in America that is charging these prices for picture shows.

Moving pictures are to supplant the minstrel and burlesque shows as a Thanksgiving and Christmas entertainment at the Ohio State penitentiary this year.

View of Stage of Lyric Theater, Minneapolis—S. L. Rothapfel, Manager.

Reviews of Notable Films

"THE GOLDEN WEDDING" (Ambrosio).

ACCUSTOMED as we are to seeing beautiful pictures under the trade sign of Ambrosio, still there are few subjects from that firm of makers quite so beautiful in the sentiment portrayed as that just released by the New York Motion Picture Company, under the title "The Golden Wedding." Added interest in this subject is discovered in the fact that it won for its makers the gold medal awarded at a recent Cinematograph Exposition at Turin, Italy, in which all motion picture makers of Europe were represented.

Passing over the technical qualities of this picture, which in themselves are remarkable examples of photography and composition, a brief synopsis of the subject will be of interest. The first scene is in the home of an old soldier of Italy and the day is the fiftieth anniversary of his wedding day. The veteran and his wife are seated at a reading table when their daughter with her husband and little girl enter. After an affectionate greeting the old soldier is persuaded to relate the story of the winning of his bride.

Scene from "Golden Wedding" (Ambrosio).

Through the means of a dissolving view the picture carries us back to a battle scene years before. A detachment of soldiers are beleagured in an old castle and their capture is certain if reinforcements are not forthcoming. It becomes necessary, therefore, for someone to carry a message to the main body of the army—a dangerous undertaking, since the enemy's lines are closely drawn about the castle.

A young lieutenent volunteers to get the message through and starts out. He appropriates one of the enemy's horses and dashes away, but is closely pursued. Passing some of the enemy's outposts he is shot and severely wounded, but manages to dismount and conceal himself in a clump of bushes until his pursuers dash by. Though suffering greatly the brave lieutenent continues on with his message, but is compelled to seek aid in the house of a peasant into which he staggers in an exhausted condition. The farmer and his daughter give him such aid as they can, binding his wound and giving him food.

While in the midst of these ministrations the approach of the pursuers is heard. They have detected the trail of the messenger and are hot on the scent. Quickly concealing the young officer under a pile of faggots in one corner of the room, the man and his daughter await the pursuers. They enter and inquire for the fugitive, but nothing is known of him. A search of the house is ordered and while it is in progress the officer in command questions the girl, but she persists in her denials. Suddenly he detects a spot of blood on her sleeve and demands the cause of it. The girl has her hands behind her and, with great presence of mind, grasps a knife on the table which she had used to cut bread for the fugitive and draws it across her hand. This is done so quickly as to escape detection by the keen-eyed soldier, so that, when she exhibits the wound as the cause of the blood, he is completely deceived and departs with his detachment to continue the search elsewhere.

Coming from his place of concealment the young officer is full of gratitude to his friends for saving him from the enemy. Toward the girl he reveals a deep affection, but he hastens away to complete his mission, apparently leaving much that was in his heart unsaid.

Thus far there has been portrayed but little that would mark the picture for distinction beyond the exceptionally good acting and the clear, sharp photography. But now, the big scenes begin to develop. The messenger reaches a detachment of his own army and explains the need of relief for the forces at the castle. An order is given and suddenly, out of a field of waving grain rises a regiment of soldiers and action is begun. There have been many battle scenes portrayed upon the motion picture screen, but the engagement that follows comes nearer to reality than any similar portrayal that has yet come to our notice. Here, again, the young lieutenant distinguishes himself for bravery and comes under the eye of the King, his commander in chief. The battle is furious, but the enemy is successfully routed and the defenders of the castle are saved.

After the fight the young lieutenent leads the King and his staff to the house of the peasant who aided him so materially in his task and, in a scene that is as touching as it is pretty, the young hero receives the King's approval of his affection for the girl whose brave action saved him from capture.

Again the picture dissolves back to the home scene and a very touching finale.

In the battle scenes it would seem that fully a thousand uniformed and equipped soldiers were engaged, so well have those players been disposed. Action of the most strenuous kind does not lag for an instant. The attack of the relief detachment is impetuous, but is met with a stubborn defense at first; then the enemy gives way and the attacking forces, with the King at their head, stream through a narrow passage and into the court yard of the castle to victory. It is a thrilling sight and one calculated to stir the militant spirit to the utmost.

Thrilling battle scene from "Golden Wedding."

On the other hand we have the quiet home scene with the veteran of the wars and his gentle spouse and loving children forming a family group about which radiates happiness and contentment. That such a picture should appeal to the distinguished judges of the exposition, both in point of technical excellence and of the high ideals portrayed is not surprising. It is clearly a prize winner on both points.

This subject was released in two reels on Wednesday, November 22.

"WAR" (Vitagraph).

THIS picture is dedicated to the cause of universal peace. It is intended as a sermon against the horrors and uselessness of war. It is one of the most splendid pieces of realistic work that has ever been turned out of the Vitagraph studio; also a work of some magnitude, involving a cast numbering into the hundreds. The scenes are laid in Northern Africa and the plot apparently has to do with the present war between Italy and Turkey, but the main idea is to call attention to the atrocities of war in general, regardless of the time, place or the nations involved.

Mechanically and artistically the picture is all that the most hardened critic could ask or hope for. The one big scene represents a street in Turkish Africa and is truly a wonderful thing in the line of scenic art. With the actors properly costumed as Turks and Arabs, the opening of this scene so well represents a bustling Moorish street that it will puzzle many to determine whether it is real or artificial. The other scenes are well up to standard but not as pretentious nor of such splendid depth as the street in Tripoli.

Scene from "War" (Vitagraph).

In war pictures of every kind there must of necessity be partisanship displayed. In the matter of outside wars the American public is invariabiy in sympathy with the side of right and humanity, whether that side be the stronger or the weaker, and regardless of race, creed or color. The Vitagraph Company, therefore, undertook a delicate task in endeavoring to depict the slaughter of non-combatants, women, children and the aged, and at the same time present it in such a way that the picture would convey a general deprecation of war and its horrors, instead of having it appear to be an exposé of the barbarous war tactics of any modern and supposedly civilized nation. How well they have succeeded remains yet to be seen. That the intentions of the Vitagraph Company are of the best there can be no doubt, but decision as to the taste shown in presenting such a picture must be reserved until the real judges, the people, are heard from.

Scene from "War" (Vitagraph).

To the American mind the invading army is not placed in the best light to obtain its ready sympathy. There are also thousands of American-Italians who will look at the picture. There are two theories in regard to them. One is that they at the present time are keyed up to a high feeling of patriotism for their mother country and will resent a thing that puts what is apparently their army in a position of questionable civilization. The other theory is that the Italian people are a sanguinary nation and do not altogether enjoy a play or picture in which there is not one or more violent deaths, either human or otherwise. According to the latter theory, our citizens from the sunny peninsula should voice their approbation of such a massacre, on the grounds that the executions are just and deserved.

The crux is just there. The atrocities, so far as the picture is concerned, do not show the grounds for the summary action taken by the invaders. Had there been shown in the opening scenes any mitigating circumstances, such as treachery on the part of the non-combatants, it would perhaps be more acceptable to the civilized mind, either Latin or Saxon, and still it would have been war just the same and probably more typical of war than otherwise.

In making this picture the Vitagraph Company have not committed themselves. The idea is plainly based upon reports of the present African hostilities but the Italian flag is not shown. Italians who might resent the picture would have difficulty in proving their case. An exhibitor upon a challenge could maintain with equal force that the picture represents the French in Morocco instead of the Italians in Tripoli. Technically the picture is what it is represented to be. War. Anybody's war. It conforms to the opinion of the late General Sherman and is therefore dedicated to The Hague Tribunal of Universal Peace. H. F. H.

"THE VIOLIN MAKER OF NUREMBERG" (Solax).

Gottlieb ..... Berkeley Barrington
Fritz ..... Gladden James
Gretzel ..... Blanche Cornwall
Her father ..... Edgar Lewis

THE Solax company is looking upward. Art is the watchword and quality the aim. The Solax people feel that it is incumbent upon every Independent film manufacturer to do his share in improving the quality of picture. There are times, under the pressure of business, when quality does not receive its proportionate and deserved amount of attention. Feeling the duty that rests upon them as purveyors of moving pictures, the Solax people have decided to issue a series of films de luxe or films d'art, or, in plain English, quality films; that is to say, a series of pictures in which quality will prevail regardless of profit. They are not backward in admitting that these films will not be profitable. They do not expect them to be. They will be made in fulfillment of the duty of film manufacturers to produce something for the general good of the business.

"The Violin Maker of Nuremberg" is the first of this series of pictures which will be produced by the Solax Company, monthly, for an indefinite period. These pictures will not be special releases, but will be part of the regular Solax output and intended as the Solax contribution to the betterment of the trade regardless of any financial consideration, one way or the other. The idea and sentiment are worthy and commendable and we feel sure that the Solax Company are doing a wise thing. They are casting bread upon the waters which will surely return to them.

In this respect then, if in no other, "The Violin Maker of Nuremberg" is a notable film. It has qualities, however, that would entitle it to that distinction on its own merits, regardless of any other consideration. The picture is the result of infinite preparation. It is the result of a month's work and in that fact we have the secret of the quality question; it takes time to make good pictures, and the difference in quality in the subject in question over ordinary films is the difference between the usual week's preparation and the work of a month. Without a doubt it is the best production that has come from the Solax studio. It was produced under the personal direction of Madame Blache and in it she has shown her true qualities as a producer of high art films.

"The Violin Maker of Nuremberg" is an idyl; a delicate subject done in a dainty way. It is a story of tender sentiment told amid scenes of artistic quaintness. It carries a simple

THE OLD VIOLIN MAKER AND HIS DAUGHTER.
HIS TWO APPRENTICES
THE HERALD ANNOUNCES THE PRIZE OFFER FOR THE BEST MADE VIOLIN.
SOOTHING HER FATHERS PUPIL AFTER SHE TELLS HIM SHE IS IN LOVE WITH THE OTHER PUPIL
THE SOUL OF THE VIOLIN HAS TAKEN POSSESION OF THE MUSICIANS BODY AND MIND TO THE EXCLUSION OF ALL ELSE.
EXCHANGING HIS OWN VIOLIN FOR AN INFERIOR ONE. THUS SACRIFICING THE HONOR OF A TITLE FOR THE HAPPINESS OF THE ONE HE LOVES.
HE GETS CREDIT FOR MAKING THE BEST VIOLIN THROUGH THE SACRIFICE OF HIS FRIEND
EXPERIENCING THE PAIN OF AN UNREQUITED LOVE

Scenes from "The Violin Maker of Nuremberg," a Classic Solax Feature.

sentimental thread in a skillful manner that never descends to the commonplace and, at the same time, holds the interest with its dignity and artistic charm. There is an old violin maker in the German city of Nuremberg, whose work is pleasure to him, with his daughter and two apprentices, both talented youths in the making and playing of violins. They are almost sons to him and practically members of his family. The daughter being lovely and good, each of the apprentices naturally is in love with her. The two apprentices being manly and good the daughter, Gretzel, finds it hard to determine which of them she cares for most.

Finally a violin making contest was announced by the towncrier, open to all violin makers, with the inducement that the winner would be appointed as violin maker to the crown. The old violin maker was filled with enthusiasm and encouraged his apprentices to do their best to win the coveted distinction. As an extra inducement he announced that the one who succeeded in winning the contest would also be given the hand of his daughter in marriage. It was a contest between the two apprentice youths, for each loved Gretzel dearly. But, by this time, her mind had resolved itself in favor of Gottlieb, the younger of the two. Each young man did his utmost to produce the perfect instrument, but before they were finished, Fritz, the other apprentice, learned to his great sorrow that Gretzel loved Gottlieb. Fritz was the better violin maker of the two and his chances of winning the prize were therefore quite sure, but in his pure and unselfish way he did not have the heart to win the prize and the girl with the knowledge that she loved his good friend and companion; therefore during the night before the contest he slipped into the workshop and substituted his own violin for that of Gottlieb. Gottlieb won the prize and the girl and they were happily married and no one ever knew the tender sacrifice that had been made by Fritz, excepting Gretzel.

This is the simple story, one which could easily be turned into a farce by actors less skillful than those who have presented it. The picture is encouraging; it speaks of better things to come and deserves all commendation for the sacrifice attending its production. It is an example that we hope to see followed by all Independent manufacturers. This picture will be released December 22. H. F. H.

"UNCLE NED'S DIPLOMACY" (Gaumont).

Reviewed by Jas. S. McQuade.

ON January 16, 1912, George Kleine will release an entertaining comedy by Gaumont, entitled "Uncle Ned's Diplomacy." It is only on rare occasions that French actors succeed in interpreting comedy roles so as to make them appeal to an American audience; but, in this case, they have succeeded admirably. True, the impersonator of Uncle Ned at times indulges in moues and little grimaces, characteristic of the French comedian, and engages in sympathetic outbursts of tears that recall the expedients erstwhile resorted to by cheap variety performers in America, yet we can easily overlook these minor defects, because of his virile acting otherwise.

There are only four people in the cast—Uncle Ned, his siter (Clothilde), her son George and Nellie, the girl in the case, with whom George is infatuated. Clothilde is portrayed by that talented actress, who will always be remembered for her work in "The Days of Nero," as the poisoner. In this instance she has a strong character part, as the mother who tries her "level best" to prevent her son from marrying a dancing girl. The manner in which she is circumvented by her hypocritical brother and the artful girl, who really loves her son, keeps one in great good humor and evokes laughs that have the ring of keen enjoyment in them.

The young lady who takes the part of Nellie, the Casino girl, is a promising comedienne. As Nellie, she is vivacious and altogether charming. The varying moods of the little dancing girl are portrayed with delicate, artistic touches. Whether it be as the hoity-toity girl, who frowns on the advances of a stranger, or the devoted sweetheart who flings in the face of the man who offers it, the bribe that is to separate her from the man she loves, the impersonation is realistic. In the gentler moods, the same fidelity to art is noticeable. The character of George is also in capable hands. As the faithful, manly lover he compels interest throughout.

The settings of this picture are all laid out of doors. They have been most happily chosen and the photography is up to the high standard of the Gaumont product.

The opening scene shows George Baring, Viscount Car-

Scene from "Uncle Ned's Diplomacy" (Gaumont-Kleine Release).

leigh, waiting on the steps of the [illegible] Theater for the appearance of the latest music hall favorite, Nellie Fitzgerald. On approaching her, he is snubbed and the girl passes on. Infatuated, he follows and is again coldly dismissed. The third time of meeting is at a boat landing, on the river, and Nellie is persuaded to take a row. On the trip, she learns to love her admirer and vows are exchanged.

When George makes known to his mother, a haughty society woman, that he has offered his name to Nellie, there is a scene. She sees that he is determined on his course and calls on her brother, Ned, to assist in frustrating the plans of the lovers. Ned, a warm-hearted blunderer, calls on the pretty danseuse and tries to persuade her to give up his nephew. She resorts to tears and utterly routs him. He promises to assist her, and carries back a flower to George as a pledge of her constancy.

Uncle Ned fails to satisfy his sister with an account of his interview with Nellie, and that distracted woman gives him a large sum of money to buy the girl off. When he offers the package to Nellie she flings it in his face and rushes from the spot. He follows her in deep commiseration, and finds her in the protecting arms of his nephew. Then, in a fit of good will for the lovers, he presents George with the money and advises them to elope and get married, at the same time furnishing the address of a clergyman, a personal friend.

Returning to his sister, he explains that the lovers had the money and were on the way to have the nuptial ceremony solemnized. Moved to tears by the mental condition of his sister and smarting under the lashes of conscience, Uncle Ned offers to conduct her to the church, whither the elopers have fled, and stop the ceremony. Hastily the journey is made, but they are too late. The happy groom and bride are just coming out of the church entrance, when they arrive. The haughty society dame, at first sight of her daughter-in-law, is impressed by her sweet personality, and takes her to her heart. And Uncle Ned, the blunderer, is priding himself on his successful diplomacy, as the last scene in the picture fades out.

London Letter

By E. J. M.

I HAVE it from an authoritative source in Paris that the Gaumont Company have perfected their "talking pictures" and will shortly issue some subjects. Rumor has been rife on the matter for the past year or eighteen months, but apparently the Gaumont Company preferred to let rumor talk, and meanwhile to perfect their system. It will be interesting to see what course the Edison Company now take. Under the circumstances it is a logical supposition that they will bring out their own method of producing talking and singing pictures very shortly. We on this side are very interested in the matter, because the only system that has attained any considerable vogue is Hepworth's Vivaphone, with which very fair results have been obtained.

Several methods of synchronizing pictures and music have recently been patented, some of which appear to be a quite feasible means of accomplishing the desired end, and there will doubtless be considerable competition amongst the rival inventors in the near future. The system which I personally like best is that of a German who has patented a process whereby a phonographic record is produced on the edge of the actual film itself. That is a system which appears to have more possibilities than all the rest added together.

There is a considerable amount of fur flying about over here just now. The cause of all the trouble is that the film manufacturers and the renters are combining in such a way that members of the one agree to sell only to members of the other and the latter bind themselves to buy only from the former—"with certain exceptions." The "certain exceptions" are one or two well-known firms who would not enter into any written agreement, but who were too powerful to be left out in the cold!

The avowed object of the combined associations is to put a stop to some of the evil practices that have arisen in the trade, more especially the duping of winning subjects, which has become rather a common practice latterly. If the suppression of duping can be successfully accomplished, the Trust—as it practically is—will have justified its existence; but there is a feeling amongst exhibitors that this combination of manufacturers and renters will lead to an increase of prices all around. However, most people here are willing to give the new idea a fair trial, but any attempt to raise prices will surely be fatal.

Meetings of manufacturers and renters, separately and combined, are being held today (Nov. 1st) for the ratification of the agreement.

The firm of Pathe Freres is making a step in the right direction by producing film subjects in the countries in which the plot is laid, thus obtaining true local color. Films of Japan (the first of which is due for release on the 5th of this month), Russia, Italy, Germany, Spain and Holland are being placed on the market and announcement is made that a series of English films by the same firm are in course of preparation. The latter films will be known by the name of "Britannia" and the subjects will be drawn solely from English history and literature. The British Government granted the use of the famous Carisbrooke Castle for the setting of one of these films, and another is being taken at Knowle Park, by permission of Lord Sackville.

Pathe Freres are breaking away from the usual practice of employing a stock company in this new series and are selecting each player because of his or her suitability for the part. In a recent interview, M. Solenne, London manager of the company, said that no expense is being spared to make the subjects as good as is humanly possible.

I had a chat yesterday with R. E. Aitken, general manager of the Western Import & Film Company, which said firm are handling Majestic films in London. He was very enthusiastic concerning the new product, the first samples of which are being shown to buyers this week. I did not have the opportunity of seeing them for myself, but I will do so before my next letter and will let you have a few representative trade opinions as well as my own.

At Mr. Hammerstein's new palatial opera house in Kingsway, London, which opens next week, some novel cloud effects will be introduced to heighten the illusion of reality in the scenery. A projector has been placed behind the scenes so that moving pictures of clouds, etc., can be thrown upon the inert (?) sky, which is usually painted a vivid blue in theatrical scenery. The idea of making use of moving pictures as an aid to effect in theaters and music halls is not a new one, but I believe it is the first time that the ubiquitous cinematograph has invaded Grand Opera.

The American Company (London), Limited, are settling down in their new offices at 101, Wardour Street, W., where Mr. Scott is rapidly making good with Flying A films. When Flying A films first invaded the English market some months ago their reception was none too enthusiastic. It was not long, however, before buyers woke up to the fact that "Flying A's" were deserving of better recognition—and business is booming accordingly. Undoubtedly, the American manufacturer who breaks ground over here has a harder task than he imagines; there are so many different brands of film on the market that buyers are extremely critical, and a fresh brand of subjects is compelled to undergo scathing criticism before it is generally accepted and given a regular place in programs.

Of course, the buyers will tell you that they are ready to buy anything that is worth buying, irrespective of the maker's name, but that is not the case. Consciously or unconsciously, the buyers get into a groove of "regular buying"; that is to say, they give so-and-so and so-and-so an order fairly regularly. The consequence is that programs are more than half filled before the buyer gets as far as the smaller makers and new comers. Thus the latter has to earn its footing with a subject which the buyer dare not ignore before it is admitted to the inner circle.

NEW THEATER FOR BEARDSTOWN, ILL.

"The Princess" is the latest photoplay house to make a bid for public favor. This house is designed and built to stand as a first-class theater in every respect. It is thoroughly fireproof and seats 650. It has a balcony and a steel operating room containing an abundance of projection apparatus. The building is 45 x 115, with a stage 35 x 45. Asbestos curtain, thoroughly equipped stage capable of playing a road attraction. The Mirroroid screen is used in conjunction with a system of diffused lighting. There are telephones in every part of the theater, also ladies' and gents' retiring rooms. The decorations are superb, both as to extent and taste. Inside and out this theater is a thing of beauty and ought to continue as a joy forever. It is owned by Harris and Nicholson and was opened October 19th.

IS THIS A PIPE DREAM OR A MISTAKE IN THE FIGURES?

Charleston, S. C., Courier, Nov. 16th, 1911: "Vincent Milnor, Giosine Guida and James Sottile, all of Charleston, obtained a commission for 'See Charleston First Company,' with a capital of $1,000. The company proposes to conduct skating rinks, picture shows, and carnivals of all kinds; to conduct for profit exhibits and performances of all kinds, of entertainment and amusement; to operate and control pleasure boats of all kinds; to operate sight-seeing vehicles, and to own, operate and control pleasure grounds, airdomes and parks.

B. F. Keith's Bijou Theatre, Boston, Mass.

Written for The World by Henry.

A SERIES of novel musical numbers, which are to be given beginning in November and are to continue through December, at B. F. Keith's Bijou Theater, Boston, are most attractively announced by a set of colored postal cards. These musical numbers are intended as "illustrated songs," and they consist of the national airs of the dozen or more countries that are represented. The songs are arranged in solo, duet, quartette and chorus form, and are rendered by a company of fourteen people. Attractive settings and costumes are used and each group of songs is surrounded with an atmosphere of the country to which it belongs.

Main Stairway and Entrance.

Mention has been made in this paper before regarding the work which has been accomplished along unusual lines in this theater. The Bijou Theater numbers among its patrons people from all walks of life. The fact that John Chinaman is welcome and that children in large numbers from various social settlement houses are regular patrons, does not make the house less attractive to the business man, the teacher, or the woman of leisure, all of whom are regular visitors.

The variety of subjects which compose the programme make this house appeal to many interests. Those who love music will hear only the best, and rendered by artists of conscientious merit. The lectures, specially written, and oftentimes delivered by experts on their own particular subjects, have their regular following. The one-act play is a source of interest to many who have not the time to devote to a three-act production, and last but not least, by any means, the motion picture—the very best the market affords—is provided at the Bijou. The presentation of subjects does not depend upon the arbitrary service of any exchange, but the pictures are selected solely with reference to their relation to the programme as a whole. No preference is given to any manufacturer, but the best pictures of all manufacturers are shown.

At the Bijou it has been found necessary only to herald the coming of any pictures by a clearly marked bulletin of the titles of the pictures. In one of the advertisements run by the Bijou this statement appears: "Pictures of morbid or sensational appeal are never shown." From this it will be recognized that there are pictures produced which Josephine Clement, the manager of the theater, will not permit upon the screen. Indeed, it has been this rigid policy of careful censorship of the entire programme which has brought the Bijou Theater to the recognized position it holds today as the representative motion picture theater of the country.

It has never been the desire of the management to conduct an educational institution, as such, nor to take all life and sparkle from the entertainments provided, but it is their firm belief that a programme may be made both interesting and diverting without depicting the antics of the hoodlum, or the tawdry sentiment of the dime novel. Unusual for theaters of the kind are the provisions made at the Bijou for the comfort and convenience of patrons. The well-appointed reception room, equipped with checking facilities, writing desk and telephone service, affords an attractive resting place. A maid is in constant attendance to look carefully to the comfort of ladies and children.

In accordance with the progressive policy maintained in this house [illegible] Keith is offering as a first prize one hundred dollars, and as a second prize fifty dollars for one-act comedies. The contest opened in November and will close January 1st, 1912. The successful plays will be given production during the present season, the prize payment to be accepted in lieu of the first week's royalty. The Bijou Theater is to have the right to first bid for further use of the prize plays and for production of any of the other plays. All manuscripts must be original. Adaptations previously produced will not be accepted. Manuscripts are to be typewritten, on one side of the page, and accompanied by stamped, addressed envelope. A play must not exceed thirty minutes in length and must be kept to one setting.

Reception Room and Checking Booth.

Josephine Clement, when discussing the theater, always emphasizes the fact that it is a motion picture theater, and she always insists that whatever else appears upon the programme, one and all, they are accessories to the picture. The present policy of the theater has been maintained for over three years, and as a natural consequence the majority of the staff, who have been with it since its beginning, are in hearty sympathy with it. Each department has an enthusiastic director, and the harmony of their work is evident to all who read between the lines.

On the Road.

Clyde Martin Talks About the Houses He Has Seen.

IT seems that the managers of the Middle West are taking to sound effects and drums more than in any other part of the country, and I believe that this feature is one of the things that is boosting business down through the valley. Out of thirty picture houses that I have visited in the last three weeks I have only found six houses without a drummer, and all of the drummers I have met seem to be interested in the detail work of sound effects.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, October 31 and November 1, I had the pleasure of playing at the Princess Theater in Blue Island, Ill. The Princess is a very pretty little house, with a seating capacity close to three hundred. The house is under the direction of Mr. Roy Keppel of Blue Island and Chicago Heights and Russell Keppel, a brother, is the local manager. Miss Esther Landgraf is the pianist and Mr. A. Englehart is the drummer and they are a clever team. Mr. Englehart is only a beginner on drums, but he has talent and could easily back some of the old heads clear off the map. He is a strong believer in effects and is constantly adding novelties to his line. The music at the Princess is a strong drawing card. Mr. Ray Coffman is the operator. Fred Fisher is the usher, Eddie Gordan, door man; Louis Stube, assistant operator and Mr. Keppel's mother, Mrs. A. M. Keppel, is the treasurer. The Princess enjoys good business the year round.

Over at Chicago Heights is another Keppel Theater, a new house called the Fashion, a very fitting name. Mr. Roy Keppel devotes most of his time to this new house and business is increasing every week. The Fashion seats four hundred; it is large and roomy and is without a doubt one of the safest theaters in Illinois. The indirect lighting system is used and the projection is fine. Mr. M. E. Carl is the operator at the Fashion, Walter Gruger, assistant operator; Miss Gisela Sauter, pianist; Mr. Bob Curns, drummer; Herbert Silloway, songbird; Albert Larson, door man, and Gus Fischer, the special policeman. Fischer watches the place in the mornings and sleeps while the show is on. The Fashion is enjoying the patronage of the best people in Chicago Heights.

Saturday evening, November 4th, I had the pleasure of playing an engagement at the Lyric Theater in Gibson City, Ill. The Lyric is one of the neatest houses in the state and does a good business. It is the only licensed picture house in Gibson. Messrs. Grim & Puff are the owners and managers; Ernest Caryer, operator; Miss Alice Whaylen, pianist; Mrs. Grim is the cashier. The house opened the 15th of August this year and everything points to success. I am not a knocker, but I will hand you a little tip. If you ever have occasion to visit Gibson, arrange things so you will not be obliged to stay over-night and be sure and take your lunch with you. The only hotel in the town is absolutely rotten. The first night there was no heat in the building and the second afternoon I heard the manager of the hotel (?) order a half ton of coal. Playing the pictures looks all right on the billboards, but some of the hotel accommodations are enough to put a person's artistic temperament on the bum. (Officer, I'm raving again.)

Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 6th and 7th, I was in a real town on a real picture house with a real manager, [illegible] Dreamland Theater, Chas. Vance. The Dreamland Theater has a seating capacity of three hundred and [illegible] three reels of Licensed pictures to capacity business. Chas. Vance is the proprietor; A. S. Hood, manager; Kitty Baer, pianist; B. Wells, drummer; John Schon, electrician, Walter Sanderson, usher, and last, but not least, Miss Cora Messersmith is singing the songs and it would be putting it mildly to say that this young lady is one of the best singers in the state. Miss Messersmith has a real voice and she knows how to use it. The clever music at the Dreamland is getting Mr. Vance a nice bank account.

A few doors from the Dreamland Theater is another Vance house, The New Dawn Theater, running motion pictures and vaudeville. Mr. Vance is giving his personal attention to the Dawn and he is making a great go of it. The new theater has a seating capacity of five hundred and it is modern throughout. Earl Wise is the stage manager, Arthemues Smith is the musical director (his music sounds better than his name); Miss Mae Kemery, pianist; Edw. Baude, drummer, and Bob Copeland is the electrician. Mr. Vance is surrounded by a good bunch of workers; everybody is on the job at all times.

Wednesday and Thursday, November 8th and 9th, I filled a pleasant engagement at the new Lyric Theater, Champaign, Ill. This theater opened October 20th to capacity business. The Lyric is owned and operated by Mr. H. H. Johnson, an old head in the business. This house is a model in every respect, the front is of plastic design, built by the Decorators' Supply Co., of Chicago. The front decorations are in roses, white enamel and gold, with a large oil painting on each side wall. The lobby has a tile floor and marble base; the front is dazzling bright, made so by two five-thousand candlepower flaming arcs and Tungsten chandeliers.

The operating room is a spacious affair equipped with a Simplex machine, a mercury arc rectifier and is absolutely fireproof; the wall construction is of asbestos and concrete. The interior decorations are of delicate tones, with plastic design panels and floral relief. The policy of the new Lyric is four reels of Licensed films, a daily change of pictures, the admission being ten cents. Daily matinees are given. The house seats three hundred. H. H. Johnson is owner and manager; Mrs. Johnson presides at the ticket window; C. L. Hunter is assistant manager; Wm. Carbaugh, operator; Mrs. Lyda Weedman, pianist and Rex Jackson, usher. Mr. Johnson and Mr. Carbaugh are members of Piqua Lodge No. 61 T. M. A's. Mr. Carbaugh is also a member of Local 155 I. A. T. S. E. Mr. Johnson speaks in glowing terms of the results given by the Simplex machine. The picture they are throwing on the screen is second to none.

At Kankakee, Ill., Nov. 10, I had the pleasure of playing at the Court Theater. The Court Theater is the largest picture house in Kankakee, and is doing its share of the business. S. B. Roach is the owner, C. E. Roach is the business manager, Mrs. Harry Van Dalson is the cashier, Mr. Harry Van Dalson is the operator, Miss Nanette Lafond is the pianist, and Maud Barland Mathieus is the soloist. The Court Theater has a seating capacity of 500 and is showing Independent pictures. It was opened Feb. 19, 1911, and has been enjoying a fair business to date. On the first three days of the week vaudeville is used as an extra attraction, although no stage has been built in the theater. The Court Theater is located in the center of the business district of Kankakee, and as a five-cent house on each side of it.

Mr. Roach is the proprietor and manager of the leading newspaper of Kankakee and is a very careful advertiser. He knows how to advertise the show (that is his business), but he does not know how to manage one. Mr. Roach has the right intentions but he leaves too much to his employees, and anyone who knows the moving picture business knows well what this means.

Things are run very loose; the picture is one of the worst I have seen in the state. The machine or something being so loose that the picture wobbles from one side to the other, and the audience is bad. I am not saying that the audience is bad for the simple reason that they they did not appreciate my work, but from the fact that Manager Roach has one of the cleverest singers in the country, and after this little nightingale, Miss Mathieus, sang "The Gypsy Love" from the Fortune Teller, the audience was restless waiting for another Foolshead picture.

Manager Roach has a very pretty theater, a large seating capacity and could easily control the business of Kankakee if he would spend a little money and put in a capable manager; as it is, the Court is just doing a fair business.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT.

YOU'VE got to give it to the small town exhibitor. Of course, the small town man can do with dimes more than dollars will accomplish in the cities, but just the same a classy campaign depends less on the size of the town than the enterprise of the exhibitor.

Provo, Utah, is a small place with a six-page daily, but the Ellen Theater, located there, comes out with a quarter-page advertisement of "The Colleen Bawn," and to get the proper "local color" the advertisement is done in green ink with a shamrock border. A stunt like that will keep Provo talking for weeks after the three-reel feature has gone on to some other town, and it is doing a great deal more than advertising the presentation of the Boucicault drama. There's a special two-column story one-third of a page in depth directly under the editorials. It's clean-cut advertising and it should bring back more money than the special printing cost. It is the only green in the paper, and being on the back page, the display is certain. It is an idea that may be followed with profit wherever the Kalem triumph is displayed. Our hat is off to the Ellen.

Welcome to Mr. Morris.

Ben L. Morris, secretary of the Spragg Amusement Company, rises to remark that the comment on the White Theater press stuff in a recent issue needs some explanation, but Mr. Morris' letter speaks for itself. Here it is:

Bellaire, Ohio, Nov. 16.

Gentlemen—I am always an interested follower of your Advertising for Exhibitors and pick up many pointers. Our company is a firm believer in advertising picture shows. Particularly last week was I interested, for one of the houses you quoted as ineffective in advertising was White's New Theater, at McKeesport, where our company is running the picture show. I agree that the White ad. was not as effective as the one quoted in comparison, but could you suggest something better for a house that has no way of knowing its advance program, until the film boxes are opened to start the show?

Here is a clipping we use daily for our Olympic Theater show at Bellaire, and is much more to the point. We always use the same heading and use the ad. in the same place, and our patrons always look for it to see what is on tonight. It is not catchy for transients, but that is what your outside poster and front display is for. Our newspapers get the home people who know the house, and pass the front posters without a glance, but the posters catch the strangers who are looking for exterior evidences of the worth of a house.

We have several other theaters, Salem and Woodsfield, Ohio, Fairmont, W. Va., etc., and in most of them are handicapped by not knowing our program in advance. In two or three places, as in Bellaire, we are on a circuit, where we know several days ahead what is coming. Then the proper kind of advertising can be done.

Just as soon as all film exchanges can give advance business, then will picture show advertising be on a plane with other such work.

BEN. L. MORRIS, Sec.

First Rate Stuff.

The clipping to which reference is made falls about three inches single column and takes you by the ear in the first line. It starts off: "Can you imagine a man so tall he could not find anything in a hotel big enough for him?" It is the introduction to "The Trials of a Tall Traveler," and Mr. Morris picks out the salient feature of the day's program with which to catch the eye. It is vastly more effective than the usual "Three first run films, etc." It gets your interest in the first line and you're going to finish the stuff because you were started right.

And notice that the regular reader knows just where to look for the stuff every day. There is a lot more to that than most exhibitors realize. The regular loses no time. He turns to the page and column at once and does not have to search the entire paper. Looking to see what is at the picture show will come to be a habit with the fan and with some who have not yet attained fandom. About the only improvement to be suggested is that the notice carry a double head. In addition to the invariable head use a catchline that will throw up the day's feature, something like this:

The man who was too big for any bed. At the Olympic.

Now you have the trade-mark head for identification and a catchline for a bait for the casual reader. That may make it "catchy for transients," as Mr. Morris writes.

What Pulls Trade.

We differ with Mr. Morris as to the value of the newspaper notice. It will not only appeal to the regular, but it may appeal, or be made to appeal, to the transient as well. The drummer or other visitor doesn't go out and look up the bill-boards. The chances are he gets the paper and reads it through because he has nothing else to do. The picture announcement may get his interest aroused and instead of spending the evening in the bar or his own room, the traveler will get his hat and hunt up the film that got him going. The local transient—the man in town who doesn't go to the picture houses—is open to the same appeal, which leaves the lobby display primarily to catch the passerby, but it does not make sole appeal to the passerby. It leaves its impress on the mind of every patron and this impression may be favorable or otherwise, according to the display. There isn't anything about the picture house from the newspaper advertising to the music that the pianist plays that does not help catch and hold the daily visitor. It is the ensemble, not any one thing, that makes the regular patron of the chance visitor and holds him a regular after he has joined the ranks of fandom.

For the No-Program House.

The best suggestion for a no-program house is a slight advance to the exchange to ensure one guaranteed reel a day (bar accidents). This will give the alert advertiser a chance to brag about something definite and creates the impression that the whole show is as good as the one reel to which he devotes his space. There are few houses so small that they cannot show a profit on one definite reel a day, but where even this is not practical, the scheme of holding over one reel for a second day, recently explained by a contributor, can assuredly be worked at no extra expense. In such a case have your notice read like a criticism of the show.

Where this cannot be done through purely local reasons, the notice can at least avoid the glittering generality and hold to one specific point.

The item in question was reproduced in our issue dated November 18th. The objection offered is that it lacks the convincing ring. Pick up the big points. Instead of wondering how White's can do it for a nickel, tell why it is that a production costing $6000 can be offered a patron for five cents. The cheap combination show asking from 10 to 35 cents and giving some wornout dramatic success or a play that never has been a success, pays its players perhaps four hundred dollars a week at the outside. It uses house scenery that is almost nauseatingly familiar; the players are incompetent and the play itself either butchered or intrinsically bad. The photoplay is done by players of Broadway repute; twenty or thirty new scenes are offered each day and the stories are interesting. A three-reel show represents an investment of from $6000 to $12000, but it can be shown for a small admission through duplication. Instead of wondering why such a show can be given for a nickel explain why and be definite about it. Avoid the unmeaning puffery that does not convince, and make talk that rings true.

"Tie Up the Bull."

Don't deal in glittering generalities if you want to be believed. Stick to facts, make them sound like facts, but make the facts interesting. Here is a sample of the writer's idea of a business getter:

The theatrical manager who makes a dozen productions a year is regarded as one of the leaders of his profession. The men who make as many as this during any theatrical Season may be numbered on the fingers without using the same digit twice, but the photoplay producer may make as many in a month and keep it up twelve months a year. Each production is as carefully planned as the three-act dramatic offering, is played by actors who are known to the patrons of the high-priced theaters, are directed by stage managers of national reputation, and yet the bill at White's each night, offers three of these productions, representing an outlay of anywhere from $5,000 to $25,000 at one-fortieth of the price these same players could command in the "production houses." And there are no "number two companies," in photoplay, to present wretchedly inadequate versions of stale successes. There is only one grade in Photoplay—the highest—and the motion picture film makes it possible to show the highest grade of acting for the smallest admission fee. Two dollar acting for five cents is what explains the remarkable popularity of White's.

This can be improved upon, but it gives a hint as to the style.

A Model Letter.

We are indebted to Frank Hicks, of the Imperial Theater, Cleveland, for a letter that is in many ways a model. This department has advocated getting the teachers into the house that they may appreciate the fact that the show is clean, diverting and educational, and along these lines M

Hicks is planning an effective campaign. His letter is given for the benefit of others:

November 16, 1911.

Miss ———, Principal, The Central Ave. School, City.

Dear Madam:—You and all the teachers of the Central Ave. School are hereby invited to attend our matinee either on Saturday or Sunday, or both—November 18th and November 19th.

Enclosed you will find admission tickets for each teacher; these tickets are good on either date. If we have not sent you enough tickets kindly call the writer at East 2706R and he will be pleased to send you as many as are required.

We run special features every Saturday and Sunday which we believe are not only entertaining, but valuable as an educational aid. That is why we have invited you. We want you to give us your opinion of our features.

Our feature for Saturday is "Ali Babi and the Forty Thieves," an Arabian Knights story, with which you are familiar.

On Sunday we will show "Romeo and Juliet." You know all about this story and will enjoy the picture.

Nearly all of your pupils are our patrons, and we believe you will agree with us when we say that every pupil should witness these pictures.

Trusting to have your co-operation by your presence and endorsement, I am,

Very sincerely yours,

There is one error here in spelling Arabian Nights with a K. The stories are supposed to have been told on a thousand successive nights, from which the series takes its name, and the error will be noticed. There are two particularly good lines in this letter, one in which the teachers are invited to attend either show—or both—and the other expressing a willingness to send more tickets if they are required. Some campaigns of this sort are spoiled by an unconscious niggardliness of the offer. These phrases suggest eagerness to do anything possible to make the teachers welcome, and the invitation possesses a marked appeal.

Mr. Hicks sends another letter in connection with a gift scheme that space does not permit printing this week, but which we will present later.

Mr. Chaney's Offer.

N. E. Chaney, whose Orpheum programs have been alluded to several times in this department, writes:

I have received many letters from exhibitors all over the country asking for samples of my program. You may announce, through your valuable column, that I will take pleasure in mailing copies of my new program to any exhibitor sending a stamp.

The new program to which Mr. Chaney makes allusion is an improvement upon his already attractive folder. These will be ready by the time this appears in print, so send a stamped and self-addressed envelope with your request for a copy that Mr. Chaney's courtesy may not be too severely taxed. Address him at the Orpheum Theater, Hillsdale, O.

Mr. Chaney is generous in this offer, for the mailing will entail no little trouble, and he evidences the true spirit of managerial courtesy. His letter is additionally gratifying in that it shows the widespread interest taken in this department. The new folder will be commented upon when the promised copy arrives, possibly next week.

Hustling in California.

Santa Rosa, California, has a hustling concern in the Columbia Amusement Co., Inc., which runs the Columbia Theater—a combination house—and the Theaterette, a picture theater. The regular advertisement is a four-page folder with pages 6½ by 9½ and carries the title, Weekly Show News, adding on the front page "Programme of Licensed Motion Pictures and Theatrical News for the week commencing Friday, etc." It is issued every Friday, starting the week with that day, that the Saturday and Sunday business may be boomed, and it is announced that a copy will be mailed weekly to any person requesting the same.

The second page is given over to announcement of coming attractions or to items about the pictures according to need. The third page is divided into quarters for three two-day shows and the special Sunday program, while the back page is given over to the Columbia attractions, which runs pictures on the off nights.

It's nice printing—not elaborate, but clean and well displayed; the readers are short but effective and planned to pull. For special releases they supplement the regular advertising with the Hennegan small heralds, and in the box reserved for their special printing they use the line, "Think of the price, 5 cents," which emphasizes the value of the offering in proportion to the admission.

There is nothing about the sheet that cannot be duplicated by any reasonably good printer, but they have done right" what they set out to do. The paper is good, but not good; the display is effective without being fussy, and the printing has been well done. But three issues have come from the press, and the secretary of the company writes that they plan further improvement, but they started with the idea pretty nearly right in the first place.

And Just Think!

And just think, you matinee girls who may chance to read this, on October 31st Gilbert M. Anderson and the other Essanay players appeared at the Columbia in "The Man from Mexico." Just think of seeing all the Essanay Western favorites in a corking good play. And just this once Mr. Anderson wasn't playing the Sheriff. Think of that, too.

MORE BUFFALO JONES PICTURES.

Famous Big Brother to the People of the Wild will Put Out American Reel.

Buffalo Jones, whose pictured exploits in Africa with a cowboy's outfit—a lariat and a good horse—among the fierce beasts of the jungle have caused the world to wonder what sort of a man he is, proposes now to put out some more wild animal pictures, more interesting than those we have already seen. The African tour of Buffalo Jones was a sort of side issue with him—a little excursion for the fun of the thing. His regular occupation—training wild animals and catching the American lion, is just as interesting and fully as dangerous as anything he did in Africa. He has a good reel of pictures showing himself in his daily occupation which he is about to offer to exhibitors.

A representative of the Moving Picture World saw this reel the other day and can vouch for its character. The scenes are mostly taken in Yellowstone Park where Buffalo Jones has charge of the wild animals under Government protection. The first scene shows a stage load of tourists arriving at the park hotel. Views of the herds of elk, mountain sheep and antelope, which roam about the park are given. Some splendid views of these timid creatures have been obtained.

How the big grizzly bears are trained to run when they see a man is an interesting process as the picture shows. Bruin is lassoed by the hind leg and hung up like a pig from the limb of a tree. Buffalo Jones, armed with a long, stout pole, then gets at his bearship and gives him a beating that should last him for the rest of his natural life. The effect of this is to cause Mr. Bear to run for his life every time he sees a man. If this were not done, the bears in the park would become too familiar with the tourists.

Hunting the mountain lion forms a very interesting part of this reel. This highly specialized sport is carried on from Buffalo Jones' ranch down in Arizona. The pictures show Buffalo Jones climbing into a tree after one of the big cats and dislodging him with a forked stick. Like a flash the animal is up the tree again with the daring hunter after him, rope in hand. Soon he drops to the ground and then the lion is pulled bodily out of the tree and quickly tied in a bag and slung across the back of a pack-horse.

Dehorning buffalo is an interesting occupation that is fraught with danger, but it doesn't look so dangerous when you see Buffalo Jones and his cowboys do it. In these scenes is shown one of the most terrific fights between two bull buffaloes Buffalo Jones ever witnessed, and he has seen some bull fights.

These are but a few of the interesting animal scenes in this interesting picture. It ought to make a hit with any audience.

ECLAIR ENLARGES BIG FORT LEE PLANT.

General Manager Raver, of the American Eclair Company, announces the enlargement of its present buildings. Additional property has been added to the space already acquired and the work of erecting another large studio, an office building and a modern garage will be started at once. When asked why this step was found necessary, Mr. Raver said:

"When the Eclair Company, of Paris, decided to invade America, plans were drawn up for a studio equal only to the production of one reel weekly. The intention was to complete the plant some time in advance of the initial release date so as to allow for an ample accumulation of reserve negatives, but building delays made this impossible and it was necessary to engage three directors and a large stock company to meet the emergency. Then came insistent demands for more than one American release and we found studio, dressing rooms, property and scenic departments and the studio offices entirely too small. Mr. Jourjon, head of the Eclair interests in Europe and America, lost no time in deciding to increase the American investment, as he is determined to stop at nothing that Eclair films may attain leadership.

"We are frank in saying that our first release was not satisfactory to the Eclair Company, although we are in receipt of many complimentary letters and telegrams extolling its quality, and, fully realizing the need of ample working space and adequate facilities to handle large and important productions, we are wisely making additions at a time when they are most needed."

CHICAGO LETTER.

By Jas. S. McQuade.

IT is said that union moving picture operators in Northern Indiana are endeavoring to compel exhibitors to sign contracts employing them for one year. Moreover, the operators present a form of contrast drawn up by them for signature. It is understood that exhibitors in the section referred to are willing to pay, and are paying, the union scale of wages, but they refuse to sign a contract for a year.

It seems strange that the operators should have seen fit to follow such a course. A good workman is always in demand and possesses the independence that makes him averse to tying himself up for a year. He knows that so long as he performs his duties efficiently and faithfully his services will be continued by his employer. Moreover, if something better offers he is at liberty to take advantage of it, on proper notice.

If such a contract were signed by an exhibitor, he would certainly see to it that clauses were inserted protecting him in case his theater burned down or closed on account of epidemic, etc., etc. Where, then, would the operator be benefitted?

The whole thing seems so lacking in good sense that it would be well to drop it and forget it.

Wm. N. Selig Returns Hale and Strong.

Mr. and Mrs. William N. Selig returned to Chicago on Friday, November 24th. The numerous friends of Mr. Selig were delighted to see him looking hale and strong. True, his right arm hangs rather limply yet, but the wound has thoroughly healed and a few weeks of massage and usage will make it as good as ever.

Mr. Selig delved into work up to head and ears immediately after his arrival. Out at the big plant, on his first appearance, the general offices were piled with banks of roses and other flowers, and happy greetings were extended by the large family of employes.

The telegrams and letters sent Mr. Selig in Los Angeles were so numerous, over 500, that he fears, under the circumstances, some of them may have been unanswered. He desires to assure all friends, who so remembered him, of his heartfelt thanks for their kind interest.

Influence of Picture Theaters.

In its issue of Nov. 24, the Chicago Tribune had the following editorial, which affords a comforting point of view to managers of the large theaters, who are suffering from light business this season:

"It was estimated at a recent conference held in the East that the moving picture machine and the nickel theater have added at least 15,000,000 to what may be called the theater public.

"There ought to be comfort in this point of view for theater managers who have found their galleries emptying. If a vast new public is developing dramatic taste, or rather dramatic appetite, the larger theaters are certain eventually to profit by it.

"Just now, doubtless, the novelty and cheapness of the nickel theater have drawn away the fickle gallery god, and always hereafter they will divide their allegiance. But if the moving picture drama and the cheap neighborhood theater are bringing under their influence people who have not gone to theaters before in anything like the numbers announced at this conference, the theaters will get a large proportion of them in due time.

"With canned drama in the nickel theaters and canned music in the flats of the people, there ought to develop a musical and dramatic public of enormous proportions. This is bringing art to the people, making soil for native, original, creative work. Drama used to go to the people, in vineyards, at fairs, and from the tail of itinerant carts. Perhaps we are preparing a new renaissance—and the nickelodeon is its threshold."

Senator Stone, of Missouri, Wants Straight Pictures.

Moving pictures are a hobby of the senior United States senator from Missouri, William Joel Stone, as gleaned from a recent article in the St. Louis Star. He never misses an opportunity to attend a picture theater, and it is a standing joke in the Senate, when the senator is wanted for a roll-call, to order the sergeant-at-arms to visit a certain picture theater to find the much-needed absentee. There is a small moving picture theater, off on a side street from Pennsylvania Avenue, in Washington, that the senator frequents daily, during the sessions of Congress. Senator Stone has repeatedly said that the moving picture theater is a great educator. In a jocular way he has declared that the members of the United States Senate could refresh their historical knowledge, if they would spend less time at the musical shows and visit the moving pictures more frequently.

The senator was in St. Louis recently attending a political conference, and, according to the Star, found time to visit three picture shows daily. He was particular to visit theaters where vaudeville was omitted and declared that he does not go to see a specialty show when he pays his dime to see moving pictures.

"If you want a variety show, go to the vaudeville theater," said the senator. "I pay my money to see pictures and I don't want to be bothered by some woman singing 'My Sweetheart is a Political Boss and Gets His Money Easy,' or to see some 'hamfatters' trying to outdo Lew Fields as a German comedian."

Big Preparations for "Cinderella."

"Cinderella," Selig's big feature subject, will be released on New Year's Day, the three reels being released on the same day, one as a regular and two as specials.

Unusual preparations are being made to assist exhibitors in giving "Cinderella" wide publicity. Two styles of 3-sheet lithos., one 8-sheet litho. and a de luxe 1-sheet are being printed. Special photos of Miss Mabel Taliaferro will be gotten out for use in theater lobbies. A special press sheet, with 10 short stories of "Cinderella," will be mailed exhibitors, for use in newspapers. Three advertisements—of 1, 2 and 3-column size—have been written and photographed. and cuts made therefrom. Electros of these can be purchased at cost price from the Selig Polyscope Company. Cuts of scenes in "Cinderella" can also be had at cost price, and can be used either in newspapers or in special booklets gotten up by exhibitors for their mailing lists.

A lecture will also be prepared by an able professional. A musical program, written by an expert, who thoroughly understands "playing the pictures," will be furnished free to exhibitors. In fact, Mr. Selig will furnish every aid to exhibitors within his power, to make "Cinderella" the greatest money-maker they have yet handled.

The Saxe Enterprises.

Frank Cook, booking manager and publicity man for the Saxe enterprise in Milwaukee, writes me that the Alhambra. with its 2,400 seats, is holding patrons out every Saturday and Sunday. Mr. Saxe has just added a beautiful stage setting to the Alhambra, at a cost of $1,000. A new pipe organ. costing $5,000, has been installed and a new box office of marble and glass has just been finished.

A handsome sixteen-page program, called "Milwaukee's Amusement Guide," is now being issued by Mr. Saxe. It is devoted to stories of films, news items confined to happenings in the amusement world, and to the houses on the Saxe circuit. It is attractively illustrated.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Ingvald E. Oes, American representative of the Great Northern Film Co., was in the city Tuesday, November 21st.

Mr. George A. Magie, general manager of the Solax Co., of New York, was a visitor on the same date.

* * *

Edwin Thanhouser, president of the Thanhouser Company, passed through the city recently on his way to Milwaukee to attend the funeral of his father.

* * *

Tim W. Englehardt, owner of the Princess Theater in Hammond, Ind., and also of important real estate and other interests in Gary, Ind., was a visitor last week. Mr. Englehardt stated that the Princess is showing to fine business.

* * *

I. Van Ronkel was seen last week and reported that the volume of rental business done by him at present is larger than at any time during his connection with the business. Exhibitors are well satisfied with the service furnished them by this branch, Mr. Van Ronkel says, but that their business dropped off a little during the recent cold snap.

* * *

Thomas Mobille, owner of the Etropal theater in La Porte, Ind., visited the city last week and attended to advance bookings. Mr. Mobille stated that he gave his first Wabash Ave. Mr. Mobille stated that he gave his first Sunday exhibition on November 19th, offering "The Passion Play" as the attraction. Mr. Mobille believes that in a short time houses in Northern Indiana will be permitted to give Sunday shows.

Henry W. Schell, proprietor and manager of the Schell Theater, 2518 S. Ashland Avenue, and of the Boulevard Theater, 2222 S. Ashland Avenue, this city, was seen last week at the Laemmle exchange. Mr. Schell uses Independent service in the Schell, which is a modern, comfortable house, and he reports excellent business there, much better than he is doing at the Boulevard with Licensed pictures. The Boulevard is a small house. He informed me that Imp pictures are in high favor with his patrons at the Schell.

* * *

Maurice Heckles, manager of the Laemmle exchange, was seen last week and said that he was highly pleased with business conditions. Everything points to a prosperous winter season.

* * *

Joe Bommerscheim, manager of the Gaiety Theater, Fort Wayne, was a visitor at the World office recently. He reported fine business. His service is furnished by the General Film Company's branch in Indianapolis. A mirror screen is used at the Gaiety.

* * *

Wm. Hershberg opened the Magnet Theater, at 3234 West 12th Street, this city, Saturday, Nov. 4, using Independent service. He reports that his business is promising.

BIG TIME AT INDIANAPOLIS.

Indiana Exhibitors Will Meet in Convention December 12.

The Indiana exhibitors will hold their first convention at the Claypool Hotel, Indianapolis, on Tuesday, December 12, the first session to be called promptly at 10 a. m. The Indianapolis Moving Picture Managers' Association is cooperating with the Indiana Exhibitors' League to make the affair a big success. There will be pleasure mixed with business, and it is the chance that all Indiana exhibitors have been looking forward to, to get together. M. A. Neff, President of the National Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, will be present to make an address and advise with exhibitors, and Mayor Shank of Indianapolis will extend a welcome in a characteristic speech for which he is noted. The exhibitors will be entertained in a loyal manner, the entertainment consisting of theater parties, motor rides and a big banquet at the Claypool Hotel.

Every Indiana exhibitor is invited to be present at the meeting. Many matters will be brought up which will be to the interest of all Hoosiers in the motion picture business and a chance to get better acquainted with one another As far as possible every exhibitor will get a special invitation, but in case Indiana exhibitors reading this announcement do not get theirs, they will please consider this an invitation, as our mailing list may not be correct and we want every exhibitor to be present. You will not regret the time or money spent.

Let every Indiana exhibitor keep the date in mind and make extra special efforts to be present.

Those who purpose attending are requested to send their names to Dr. J. M. Rhodes, Chairman Committee on Arrangements. 730 S. West St., Indianapolis, Ind., or F. J Rembusch, Shelbyville, Ind.

H. S. DICKSON, President,
Indiana Exhibitors' League.

while Will S. Rising, the dean of moving picture artists in America, portrays the old musician. Messrs, Applegate and Adolphe are seen to advantage as the opera house manager and city dude respectively. Dorothy Gibson plays the part of a dissatisfied prima donna to a nicety. Other members of the extremely large cast share in the honors of the production. Mr. Jay Hunt is responsible for the scenario and staging. Exchanges and exhibitors will welcome this excellent Eclair subject.

NOVEL THEATER SCENE IN "THE MUSICIAN'S DAUGHTER."

A striking illustration of motion picture detail is found in the Eclair release of Tuesday, December 12, "The Musician's Daughter." One of the many interesting scenes is laid in an opera house, the principal characters appearing on the stage while portions of the audience, orchestra and boxes are simultaneously shown. For the purpose, a stage of standard proportions was built with adequate scenic equipment. The proscenium opening, or frame of the stage, was actually modeled in plaster of paris with scroll work and ornaments in bold relief. A massive box, regulation size, was next attached, the front of same being elaborated with heavy brass rings and decorative designs in papier mache. Heavy velvet draperies, suspended by golden cords added to the brilliancy. From the members of the orchestra, and the audience were carefully selected.

A very touching story is illustrated in "The Musician's Daughter," and each character is important. Grayce Scott, the popular stock leading woman, interprets the title rôle.

TO ORGANIZE PENNSYLVANIA EXHIBITORS.

The following letter has been issued by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania to all exhibitors in that State:

"At the meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League held at their headquarters, 233 Fifth Ave., Pittsburgh, on Sunday, November 26th, 1911, it was decided to issue a call for a State convention to be held at Harrisburg on Monday, May 6th, 1912.

"We also are pleased to say that we had with us at this meeting our National president, Mr. M. A. Neff, who gave us a good talk along the lines of organization, and from his report we assure you that the future for our league looks very bright.

"We are also making arrangements to place a State organizer on the road, for the purpose of organizing locals and bringing the exhibitor into the League, and we ask the assistance of all the exhibitors throughout the State to aid us in our work, so that when the next National Convention is held in Chicago the old Keystone State will be second to none.

"Now let our slogan be: 'Organize! Organize!' and on to Harrisburg to the State convention of the motion picture exhibitors. For any information write to our State Headquarters, as we will be only too glad to hear from you. We remain yours truly,

"Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania,
"Per Fred J. Harrington, Pres.
"233 Fifth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa."

CONNECTICUT EXHIBITORS ORGANIZING.

At a meeting of exhibitors held in the Bijou Theater, Bridgeport, Conn., Sunday afternoon, Nov. 26th, a movement to organize the exhibitors of Connecticut was started. The name adopted is the Connecticut Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, and the Bridgeport exhibitors organized as the Bridgeport Branch No. 1. These officers were elected: A. A. Stevenson, president; Boyd Fisher, secretary-treasurer. Twenty-nine members were enrolled, including many from towns immediately surrounding Bridgeport.

The question of Sunday opening, which is agitating Connecticut exhibitors just now, was discussed at length, as also was the new law regarding the admisston of children. W. F. Plummer, W. S. Banta and R. F. Kinder were appointed to wait upon the city officials and to engage counsel to contest the law if necessary.

ONE BY ONE THEY SEE THE LIGHT.

Hardly a week has passed since motion pictures became the vogue that the Moving Picture World has not had occasion to deny or to ridicule the too evidently biased attacks of the daily press. Time and again we have written to the editors of the big dailies calling attention to the nonsensical statements of the cub reporters and suggesting that some member of the staff with a smattering of brains be occasionally allowed to write on the subject. The public, too, has resented these unfair attacks and we are pleased to see that the press is now taking a more serious view of the poor man's entertainment. They came to scoff and remained to—" well, at least praise the efforts of the manufacturers to present classical and educational subjects. Three weeks ago the New York "American," formerly hostile, devoted its editorial page to a scholarly article on the educational aspects of the motion picture. Not to be behind its chief competitor the New York "World," which has never missed an opportunity to slam the picture business, devoted a whole column last week to an interview with one of the leading film manufacturers. The editor of the "World" realized that the tabloid presentation of the standard novels and classics was not a subject to be trifled with, moreover he saw a chance for interesting copy, hence the order to interview the Thanhouser Company which in putting out such subjects as Ibsen's "The Lady from the Sea," Rider Haggard's "She," selections from Dickens and other great writers. Mr. Edwin Thanhouser's statements were modest, but appeared to be convincing to the New York "World" as the interview was printed in full. We hope to be able to reprint at least part of it in an early number. Meanwhile we rejoice to see that the "World" has capitulated.

Bison Company Gets 101 Ranch

Miller Brothers' Famous Organization Added to the Stock Company of the N. Y. Motion Picture Co., in California.

The surprise of the week is the announcement that the New York Motion Picture Co. is abandoning the regular style of Indian and cowboy pictures it has been making for the past several years, and will hereafter produce nothing but sensational, spectacular Western subjects, with enormous casts, and that it has leased the Miller Brothers' 101 Ranch Wild West Show, which is now installed at Bear Valley, Cal., having been consolidated with the regular reorganized Bison company of sixty people.

To a representative of the Moving Picture World Mr. A. Kessel, president of the New York Motion Picture Co., made the following statement:

"We intend to make, and are making at the present time, what I predict will be the most sensational subjects ever produced. We have been working very quietly until we were in a position to make the proper announcement. The company we now have is the largest stock company in the whole world, comprising more than 400 people employed daily. It includes the reorganized regular stock company of 60 people and the Miller Brothers' 101 Ranch Wild West Show company of 350 people. We have been fortunate in securing this famous aggregation, all of them being seasoned show people, equipped with splendid horses and necessary paraphernalia. Among them are the world's most daring riders—men and women who think nothing of taking their lives in their hands when giving an exhibition of their skill. Scenarios have been written around them which feature sensational deeds of daring.

"I predict that this marks the passing of the 'done-to-death' Western picture. The Bison company was the first in the field of Western pictures and has had many imitators. If anybody tries to follow in our footsteps now they will have to gamble a big bank-roll. We are in perfect shape. Before making any announcement we wanted to be sure we were right. We installed new cameras, new people and new directors, and Mr. Baumann went West to personally supervise the production of the thirty-odd scenarios we had specially written.

"Instead of shoving out three reels of ordinary quality we believe we are doing the exhibitor more good by turning out two reels which will stand supreme as the king of Western pictures. These two reels will be features in every sense of the word which could be handled as specials and state rights sold.

"Three-sheet posters will be put out with every release. We want every exhibitor to make a 'clean-up' and we're going to give him the film and the poster to advertise it.

"The first release of the big pictures will be made in a few weeks."

Mr. A. Kessel, President.

Mr. C. O. Baumann, Secretary and Treasurer.

PRINCIPALS OF THE NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE COMPANY.

MISS TURNER GOES TO CALIFORNIA.

The Vitagraph Company has been deluged with inquiries concerning Miss Florence E. Turner's health, some going so far as to offer condolence for our sudden loss. We are pleased to state, for the benefit of these many anxious and solicitous inquirers, that Miss Turner has now so far recovered from her indisposition of a few weeks that she was at the studio last week and will start for California about December the first. This tip to the coast will be one of business as well as recreation.

MINNESOTA NATIONAL EXCHANGE CHANGES POLICY.

Mr. Wm. Cohen, of the Minnesota National Exclusive Exchange, Minneapolis, Minn., wishes to announce to patrons that his company is no longer handling the Natio Film Distributing Co.'s output, for the reason that the p gram was unsuitable to his clientele. He desires thro The World to extend thanks to his customers for st favors and to announce that hereafter he will confin his exchange business to feature and commercial picture

The Films of the Future.

By William H. Kitchell.

HAVE you ever wondered, darling reader—to vary the mode—where the films of the future are coming from? Have you ever wasted a fifteen-cent Vuelta Abajo in musing at a table within the corner of a thirst emporium as to what the manufacturers will do for plots in the time when there will be more manufacturers and more exhibitors who will not stand for revamped melodrama and other horrors of the age? You haven't? Then don't. Dreaming is an unprofitable vocation, and it was only the other day that a man fell off a seven-story building while cogitating as to whether Snodgrass intentionally spiked Baker in the World's Series.

But to those who make dreaming a business—to a scenario writer, for instance—the question of plots is an absorbing one. There are moments when plot-suggestions come as thick as flies in midsummer to a writer—and there are more moments between when imagination halts and there is nothing doing with the think factory. But this stagnation, as a rule is dispelled by regular hours at the typewriter; and a writer who has any "call" whatever to his profession has plenty of plot-suggestions, and his chief trouble is in picking out the ideas that will "get across" before and after production..

It is the writer's business to write, and the manufacturer's to produce, and under present conditions it is rather a "hit-or-miss" business on both sides. Neither writer nor manufacturer is a qualified judge of his own production, and the comment of the trade-paper and the photoplay patron oft-times hits unfavorably upon a play that looked especially strong until it left the studio. But these are unavoidable conditions, and natural; and it is to the credit of the men behind the studio that there are so few failures. Compared with "legitimate" drama and musical comedy, the number of scenarios that "get over" successfully upon the screen are ten to one.

And the proportion will be larger in the future. From the standpoint of the scenario writer there is an appreciable improvement in compensation from the payment given for a scenario a year and more ago. Possibly the good work of the Moving Picture World in agitating adequate payment for a picture play has helped to better conditions. Possibly the increase in competition, with more manufacturers and more frequent releases in the field, has had something to do with the improvement. Anyhow, the improvement is there, and the chance for the untried writer without a "pull" is vastly greater with the manufacturer than it was a year ago.

In the increase of compensation lies the key to the films of the future. "A man will do anything for money"; and as long as the world lasts there will be writers with imagination and insight into human nature who can be drawn upon for the inventing of photoplays. The more pay the better will be the quality of photoplays. This is logic that "works out." To-day a writer can get as much for a dramatic scenario built on sensational lines and requiring only an early education of dime-novels and the Laura Jean Libby school of inane fiction as he can for a highly imaginative and ultra-refined comedy. There has been no incentive for extra good work. The yarns of "hundred-dollar checks" may have had a beginning in truth, but the average check received by the average writer has been nearer "fifteen" than a hundred, and it is upon the "average writer" that much of the future of the photoplay world will depend. There must be better pay for better work, or there will be no better photoplays.

Given a more liberal allowance for the scenario writer, there is no question but that the studio will take care of its own. There has been good work in the general run of releases from most studios during 1911, and there have been examples produced by these same studios that have been especially rotten. There is no other word for some of the junk produced, and there was no excuse for its production. Companies that travel with an insufficient supply of scenarios and are thereby forced to depend upon the heated imagination of the actors and camera men, who are not efficient producers of good material.

The most pessimistic writers of scenarios, however, will admit that the photoplays are popular with the public, and deservedly so. There is no let-up in patronage of the photoplay theaters, and even the press has come to speak of the world of motion pictures with respect and approval. There is still the howl about the small boy and his propensity to imitate the Wild West film dramas in the environment of civilization, but there is less of that, and more of praise concerning the educational and even the general run of photoplays. And the average picture-goer is higher in the scale of intelligence than his prototype of a year ago. You can verify the fact for yourself.

And with all these conditions working together for good, the future of the films is assured. It does not take a complex plot nor an expensive equipment of "properties" to make a photoplay. The best stories of the world are often the simplest. The writers of them knew human nature and how to make their readers believe in what they wrote. Their appeal was to the mind. So it is with the good film dramas. The Edison Company has never released better work than the drama entitled "The New Church Carpet." Another top-notch picture was the Essanay—"The Atonement." The Pathe "Veil of Happiness" was of this class, although it was a Chinese story written by a Frenchman, and of unique background. These are three of the films that "got across," and simply because of their simplicity of strength. It is the straight blow from the shoulder that hits hardest.

It is when such stories as the above are released that the photoplay philosopher has most faith in the permanency of the films. What has been done can be done again. Comedy can be made effective with an appeal to the mind as well as to the eye. The film Indian can be transformed into a real Indian, and be less of an ochre-toned ass that he is on the screen to-day, without much effort.

And "cowboy" photoplays! They are popular everywhere, and yet we hear of them in the newspapers. Now, a "cowboy" plot need not necessarily be illustrated with examples of bullyism and gunplay. Nor, if deemed essential, need these features be eliminated. The people who move and talk in Bret Harte's stories of the early West live in powder smoke and saloons; but they are idealized, and they will live when the heroes of the dime-novel are forgotten. The manufacturers of Western plays have neglected something. What they require most are directors who can drop the haze of romance gently over a film drama, to blur the rough action of rough characters, and soften the sharp outline of stories that are lived outdoors. If you don't believe that the West can be made romantic, ask David Belasco for the recipe.

To the man who sees photoplays day in and day out, so to speak, there comes the belief that the films of the future will take care of themselves. If the plays of to-day were not far from perfection, there would be cause for alarm, for with perfection there would be stagnation, and stagnation means ruin. When the time comes when it will be impossible to improve the films, there will be a procession of scenario editors and writers half a mile long, wending their way silently and sadly into other pastures.

And few of us will live long enough to be of the procession.

CINCINNATI NOTES FROM NEFF.

The picture business in Cincinnati is very quiet at the present time and there have only been a very few changes in the picture houses. M. A. Neff bought the Unique Theater on Walnut Hills and changed the name to the Queen Theater. Since the change the theater seems to be doing a nice business.

Mr. Beck, of Indianapolis, Indiana, is expected in Cincinnati in a day or two. Mr. Will Cohn, of the General Film Co., of Columbus, was in Cincinnati this week. The Ohio Exhibitors' League will start their State organizer on the road next Monday. The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America will be represented by an able organizer, who will take the field in a very few days.

Mr. C. A. Dashner, of Huntington, W. Va., has opened up the Queen Theater at Versailles, Ky. Mr. Ralph Lefeever, of Lebanon, O., formerly manager for M. A. Neff, has bought the Queen Theater at Lebanon and, after remodeling and decorating, will open it up on Nov. 25th. Mr. Staup, of Delphos, O., will soon move into the new theater which is now building. Delphos is to be congratulated in having so efficient a picture man as Mr. Staup.

I am pleased to announce that Ex-Senator J. B. Foraker, of Cincinnati, O., has agreed to act as counsel for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, which organization has been duly incorporated under the laws of Ohio.

In securing the services of Senator Foraker we have a guarantee for every exhibitor that his legal rights will be fully protected. I think I should further announce that Senator Foraker has accepted this employment not alone from a monetary consideration but also because he realizes the great good that can be accomplished through a League that is organized for the purpose of securing a higher standard of pictures and placing the business on a higher plane.

Ex-Senator Foraker and the President of the League have been friends for many years. M. A. NEFF.

WILLIAMS WIRES FAREWELL.

J. D. Williams, the enterprising American exhibitor who has been turning things topsy-turvy in Australian motion picture affairs during the past two years, sailed from Vancouver, B. C., on November 28, for the scene of activities upon the other side of the world, after an extended visit in the United States and England. Just before embarking for the long voyage Mr. Williams sent the following telegraphic farewell to his friends to be communicated through The World:

JJ4 14CH Xh 50 N L
Vancouver BC Nov 28/11
Moving Picture World
125 E 23rd St New York

Upon our departure for Australia we wish to thank old and new friends for many kindnesses and favors extended. New ideas and equipment secured in America and Europe will enable maintenance in front ranks future as well as in past highest possible standard in photoplay theaters our company conducts.

J D WILLIAMS

6:18 AM 29th

The World wishes to supplement the good wishes of the many friends of Mr. Williams by wishing him bon voyage.

THE POWERS COMPANY OFF FOR NEW MEXICO.

Not content with the increased facilities afforded by their new Duplex Studios, the Powers Company is following the line of least resistance, which at this particular time is turning the heads of the most progressive film manufacturers to the Pacific coast.

The accompanying cut shows Mr. J. O'Brien, the latest addition to the directing staff of the Powers Co., with his company of photoplayers who have left for New Mexico. Some interesting information from this company should be forthcoming.

THEATER VENTILATION AND FILM DRYING SYSTEMS.

The Ilg Electric Ventilating Company, of Chicago and New York, maintain a corps of ventilating engineers, a branch of which is now making a specialty of theater ventilation.

Their reports show that there is considerable agitation among theater owners relative to the importance of ventilation within theaters, and having made a specialty of this particular work, they are now installing ventilating systems in upwards of 75 theaters throughout the country.

Ilg fans and blowers are specially adapted to this class of work, owing to their low cost in power consumption, as well as their quietness in operation. They also manufacture such apparatus in any current and voltage.

Another particular feature specialized in by this company is the designing and installing of special drying systems, used in connection with the drying of films. They have completed a number of installations of this nature and invite correspondence with film manufacturers on this subject. The Ilg Electric Ventilating Company invites correspondence with each and every individual interested in either of the above problems. Write to their special engineering department, and any information desired will be cheerfully furnished.

MARSHALL P. WILDER A PHOTOPLAYER.

By special arrangement between the Vitagraph Co. and Marshall P. Wilder, that well-known diminutive entertainer will appear in a limited number of Vitagraph comedies. Mr. Wilder and Mr. John Bunny will also appear together in a few pictures. At present they are in the midst of a farce to be known as "Chumps," which will be released soon after the holidays.

The asquisition of Mr. Wilder as a photoplayer adds one more to the growing list of well-known vaudeville and legitimate actors who are bridging the chasm that has heretofore yawned between the stage and the picture. Of the prominent thespians who became picture pioneers, each found it necessary to build a bridge of his own, as one bridge would not hold two. But when John Bunny built his bridge he had to build it so strong that it remains a permanent structure. Any actor feels safe in crossing any bridge that Bunny will cross and many have done so since he made the passover.

But Wilder did not use Bunny's bridge. He made one of his own, years ago, when moving pictures were only to be seen on flip cards that were used in the old Biograph machines. He was one of the very first actors to pose for the animated camera. We took the liberty of having ourselves introduced to "Marsh," and he seemed glad of an opportunity to square himself with the world and the "profesh" for being on our side of the chasm. "Naturally," said "Marsh," I feel a little bit nervous. I have exactly the same feeling that a codfish would have on the top of a mountain. You see I have done my stunt for years alone and this thing of working with a cast is strange enough, but working to a bull's-eye and a pile of furniture, with the footlights up in the air, is demoralizing, to say the least. I was never put inside of a piano before, but here on my first day they do it, with endless rehearsals, putting me in and taking me out like a ventriloquist puts his dummy figures in a trunk. But I like it. Moving pictures are a grand thing for the actor, the teacher, the child, the parent and everybody else. I realize, as do others of my profession, that if an actor wants his work to outlive him, he must appear before the camera and that's why I'm here. I had no idea when I posed once, fifteen years ago, that the pictures would be such a monumental institution, but now I am coming out of my Rip Van Winkle."

NEW THEATER FOR PERU, INDIANA.

The Photoplay Exhibitors' Co., of Peru, Ind., is installing a new moving picture theater in the heart of the business district of that city. The Decorators' Supply Co., of Chicago, designed and is installing the decorations, which will be very elaborate both outside and on the interior. The new theater will have 400 seating capacity, will be up-to-date in every particular, and will be open for business about Dec. 15th, running straight pictures.

J. K. Lipsett, a member of the company and part owner of the Palace Theater, will have the management of the new enterprise. There is no doubt but that the new theater will be a money-maker from the start, as the moving picture theaters of Peru have done an exceptionally good and increasing business in the past.

CHANGES IN KINEMACOLOR SHOW.

A few changes have been made in the program at the Kinemacolor Theater on 40th Street. At the presentation given last Monday evening a series entitled "Sunset on the Nile," "Scenes on Lake Garda," "Harvesting in England" and several other interesting productions were shown, to the evident satisfaction of the audience.

While the pictures are of surpassing beauty and interest, the effort to introduce sound effects is so utterly silly as to be annoying. The Kinemacolor management would confer a favor upon its patrons by discontinuing the use of effects until such time as they are able to make them properly expressive.

BEDDING WITH I.M.P.

The I.M.P. Company announces that it has secured the services of Thomas Bedding to conduct its publicity department in place of Mr. Hoadley, resigned. Keep your eye on the Imp announcements.

The Brooklyn Eagle this week inaugurates a new department in both its amusement advertisement columns and its amusement news. This department is designed to call attention to the offerings in the motion picture theaters and those which present a combination of vaudeville and picture entertainments.

Projection Department

Edited by F. H. RICHARDSON.

EMBRYO EXHIBITORS.—During the past four years the writer has received many requests for advice such as the following letter from New York City: "I am taking the liberty of asking you for information in regard to investment in a moving picture house in New York City, and trust my enquiry is not amiss. If it is, I beg pardon. I have been a regular reader of the 'World' for the past few months and, while I have never been in the amusement business, I feel that I have gained valuable experience in the perusal of your columns. As above stated, I am perfectly 'green' in matters relating to this particular business, but from outside observation, it appears to be a moderately safe investment where one might expect reasonable returns for his money, the varying conditions of course being considered. I have $5,000 that I want to invest within the next few months, and the purpose of this letter is to ask, if permissible, for your advice as to whether this is a sufficient sum for investment here in New York, and if so, what is probably the best proposition, opening a new place or perhaps getting one already in operation—hardly the latter I suppose, since good places are not for sale, and poor ones not desirable; and, would you recommend the investment in this city in the first place? Of course, I would like to start as 'good' as possible, so far as my financial circumstances will permit, and perhaps the sum of money at my disposal would be inadequate. I am altogether at sea in the matter, and do not know just how to go about it, therefore appeal for your advice, which will be very much appreciated. My age is 25; generally speaking, I believe I am quite capable. I am enclosing stamped envelope in case you would be good enough to drop me a line; otherwise I shall look for a few words in the 'Department' which you so ably edit."

I am glad to be of assistance to a brother man in any possible, reasonable way, but have consistently refused to give advice of this kind. There is altogether too much depending on the "personal" equation. Many bright men have entered the exhibition field with less than the sum named and made a pronounced success. Many bright men have entered the same field with several times the sum named and made a total, complete failure. Each had the same opportunity, aside from matters financial, but each did not have the same faculty of successful management, or else the same instinctive affinity for the amusement business.

It by no means follows that because one is a capable, bright man that he will make any large success in the amusement field. He may be ever so energetic, resourceful and excellent in management, yet, beyond all this, he must have a certain, rather undefinable, quality in his makeup by which he is enabled to separate the wheat from the enormous amount of chaff in the amusement business, if he is to reap any large degree of success.

The gentleman who writes would probably not dream of entering the dry goods or the boot and shoe business without a course of training sufficient to equip him with a comprehensive knowledge of the business. He would probably consider any one who did so as being possessed of extremely doubtful judgment. But he, and others, cheerfully propose to jump into the amusement field with absolutely no knowledge of the business.

True there is not the same vital necessity for knowledge that exists in the other business named. That is to say the chance of some degree of success without previous knowledge is somewhat better in the amusement line than in the dry goods business. This is probably for the reason that the public, as a whole, does not exercise the same amount of discernment and good judgment in its purchase of amusement that it does in the buying of dry goods; this in turn by reason of the fact that amusement, like candy, lasts but an hour or so and is done, whereas the dry goods we purchase remain with us for months. Still the fact remains that to succeed in any large way you simply must be an "amusement man," and have that faculty coupled with good managerial judgment and business capacity.

Now, the young man who asked my advice, in this case, might enter the field with $5,000 capital and make a success of it. He also might make a total fizzle. In the first case, were I to advise him to enter the field and he should succeed, I would receive no reward and mighty little credit. On the other hand, did he make a failure he would forever after blame me for not telling him to stay out. I would be the "goat."

New York is a good field for the right man, yes; but, while $5,000 would enable a man to get a fair start in Brooklyn, Jersey City, or even some parts of the Bronx, that sum would be of no use in Manhattan.

Understand me clearly: I have not, in the above article, talked to the man who is contented to start a little "store-room" theater and dub along, thoroughly satisfied if he makes an average of twenty dollars a week above expenses, grinding the said expenses down to the last possible penny. That kind of "exhibitor" is too numerous already. Probably New York could do that all right, if he is bright and has any ability at all. Many are doing it who haven't any of the latter quality and not enough of the former to dazzle the average peanut vendor. They manage to exist, but the business, as a whole, suffers immeasurably by their presence. However, let it be understood that in this I refer to the cities, not to the small towns. In the small towns, where income is strictly limited, we can forgive many a shortcoming that is absolutely inexcusable in the city. In fact, the small town exhibitor, even though he be conducting a show that would not be creditable in a city, is in fact a public benefactor in that he is providing the people with what is to them, and by their standard, a pleasing form of amusement, well worth its price. The city and small town exhibitor are not to be judged by the same standard at all.

FILM SERVICE.—Several letters have been received from exhibitors in various parts of the country commending, the answer we made to Mr. [illegible] in November 4 issue. One exhibitor says: "You have hit a very large nail very squarely on the head. The way the buying and selling of film service is carried on is nothing less than an outrage. We pay for a certain thing and then take what we are able to get. Inspection by most exchanges is a farce and that is another thing you ought to hand a wallop."

I fully agree with the correspondent that in most of the exchanges the inspection is largely [illegible]. If a girl examines one reel of negative film and does it as it should be done she has performed a good day's work. As a matter of fact, many of them "inspect" three or four times that number of feet in a day. Of course her inspection amounts to next to nothing. If the film is torn clear in two she will probably find it out and make some kind of a splice, but that is about all. There is sad need for drastic reform in inspection. But the fault does not all lie in the exchange, however. In nine cases out of every ten (not at all exaggeration) neither the exhibitor nor the operator expends any effort whatsoever in caring for the film while in his possession. With proper care a reel of film ought to be in excellent condition after a two months' run. As a matter of fact, most films are in very bad shape long before two months have elapsed. What and where is the fault? In the first place "pulling down" in rewinding and improper adjustment of takeup tension fills the film with "rain." Improper adjustment of idler rollers and too tight takeup and film tension rip the film in two and wear out the sprocket holes. Worn intermittent and lower sprocket teeth butcher up the sprocket holes. The film is kept in a hot operating room without moisture, which makes it dry and brittle. All these things constitute, severally and on the whole, an outrage against the valuable property of the exchange entrusted to the "care" of the exhibitor and operator. There is absolutely no excuse for them. On the other hand the exchange itself butchers up its own stock by farcial inspection, by pulling down in rewinding and by improper storage of the films. There is great need for reform all around. Exchanges could do much by a system of very careful inspection and tabulation of all visible damage done films, favoring those exhibitors who take proper care of the films, but even this is impractical until such time as there is a general, uniform move on the part of all exchanges to remedy the many existent evils. The whole thing is a very large proposition and not at all easy of solution. We would welcome letters from exhibitors or exchange men making any possible practical suggestions on the topic.

UNION WANTED.—Grafton, Pa., writes setting forth the fact that grinding the edges of condensers when they fit tight in mount will stop breakage; also asks for address of Pittsburg, Pa., operators' union.

The remedy indicated has been published many times in this department. It applies only to round, metal mounts. Address Fred Fulgora, Box 74, Uptown Station, Pittsburg, Pa., who was secretary of the Pittsburg local the last we knew. Probably a letter addressed to Chas. W. Sheppard, president Moving Picture Operators' Union, Labor Temple, Pittsburg, Pa., would be productive of some information also.

LIGHT PLANT.—Washington (name of town suppressed) writes: "Am one of the old Film Index readers, but like the World fine. Read it from cover to cover every week. Am using 60 cycle, 110 volt A. C., about 45 amperes. Sometimes the current is very poor, but manage to get a good picture; above the average they tell me. Do my own operating and get as good or better picture than the show across the street using a Mercury Arc Rectifier. Am thinking of putting in a small light plant of my own or else installing a motor-generator set. Which do you think would be cheapest and best in the end? Pay 10 cents per K. W. for current now. Have to shut down about three or four nights in a year on account of breakdowns at power plant."

While you may get as good results, or nearly so, with A. C. as the man across the street does with a rectifier, it is costing you much more to do it. If your picture is as large as his, I should say you are a better operator than the operator of the opposition show. He ought to get a much better curtain illumination on a picture of equal size with the rectifier than you can with 45 amperes of A. C. With 60 amperes you might very nearly equal his best performance, but look at the difference in current consumption. As to the light plant: much depends on the man. We have records of current production by small plants as low as 3 cents per K. W. However, there will be considerably more work and worry connected with the operation of a light plant than with a motor-generator set. I think there is no doubt but that the light plant, if the right kind, would produce the light at less cost. Moreover, it would produce all the current, whereas the motor-generator would only be of value on the projection light. If you are something of an engineer and electrician and enjoy working with such things you probably would do better, in dollars and cents, with the small plant. If you are neither and don't [illegible] you might run into a bundle of trouble with it. With a [illegible] the motor-generator goes right on with the trouble of [illegible]. As I said: much depends on the man. [illegible] I [illegible] give final advice.

UNIQUE SPOTLIGHT SCHEME.—Coaticook, Canada, writes: "In reference to the inquiry in November 11 issue concerning spotlight, I have successfully worked a spotlight scheme with both the Powers Five, which I used to have, and the Edison Underwriter's Model I now have. I put the rod which holds the stereo lens out towards the front of the machine and reverse the lens. By so doing a spot as large or as small as one wants can be made by moving the lens back and forth on the rod. I like the World very much and look forward to its receipt every week. We are doing a fair business and find the World a great help. I use 45 amperes of 110 volt A. C. and get good pictures. Have the same trouble I see others complaining of from time to time. I wish the World every success."

Your scheme for getting a spot is a new one on the editor. The trouble with it, assuming it would work all right, is that it would require a re-adjustment of the lens every time one wished to use the stereo. However, we thank you cordially for the contribution. Glad to know you like our humble efforts in trying to produce a paper of real, genuine value to the business.

CARE OF FILMS. Harrisburg, Pa., writes: "Regarding your comments on my letter, (P. 467, Nov. 11 issue), I must take issue with you. When voltage climbs on street mains, due to lack of load on generator, the required amperage cannot be secured at the projection arc as well as it can when pressure is at normal. I speak of the Harrisburg service which is 60 cycle, 110 volt. Thought I might be wrong, so put the matter up to a competent E. E. here and he says I am right. Would like to hear from any who have had similar experience. As regards Mr. J. F. May (Nov. 4 issue) will say that if an exhibitor pays junk prices he cannot expect to receive good service. I am running twelve day films (licensed) and herewith submit few samples of the things reaching me. Hope you will give your opinion of the operator who will run them through his machine. The guilty party is running 11 day film. This I can say: the man who receives films after me doesn't have to look them over before using. I have a device enabling me to load up with one or more films and do not have to thread up but once. Can then keep running all day, if need be, without a stop except to change carbons. Am now working on another device which will do away with even that delay. The cost for both will be about $200. Do you think this will be too expensive for general use by exhibitors? Am much interested in discussion of feasibility of running without resistance other than that of the arc itself. Will presently install that kind of set myself, as I know it can be done. Will then send photos of same."

As to the argument that you get less amperage as the voltage mounts, I have already expressed my opinion. Glad to hear from our readers. The proposition presented by the Brother is: on Saturday afternoons many factories, etc., close down. The generator is not working at capacity and voltage mounts up. He claims he then gets, under those conditions, less amperage. As to the film matter: the samples submitted comprise torn places in film, in some instances the tear extending half way across, and wide, stiff, poorly made patches. Certainly such things should not be, nor should an operator run them, BUT, if the operator is to put in from one to two hours repairing films he ought to be paid for it. It is the DUTY OF THE FILM EXCHANGE TO INSPECT AND REPAIR FILMS AND THEY DON'T, EXCEPT IN RARE INSTANCES. Many of them don't even half-way do it, and the matter is an outrage. It is an outrage against the exhibitor, against the operator and against THEIR OWN PROPERTY. An exchange sends out a reel of film upon which the inspection has been farcial. It contains stiff, wide patches, loose patches, odd patches and torn places. The operator runs it through a machine, which is perhaps not too well adjusted. The patches climb the sprockets, the loop is lost and the film torn in two—that much of it lost. The loose patch catches on an idler and the film is split a foot or two before the machine is stopped—that much of it is lost. The show is injured and the audience disgusted. On the other hand, the operator receives the film and, as no cabinet with moisture has been provided, keeps it in a hot, dry operating room all day and probably all night. It goes back to the exchange and is there treated in practically the same way. Soon it is dry and brittle. It breaks on the slightest provocation. The sprocket holes break and split. The reel is worth about $100, but no one, including the exchange, its owner, seems to care a tinker's darn about it or how soon it goes to the everlasting bow-wows. From the time it reaches the exchange as a new reel, it is placed on the toboggan slide to destruction and everybody, including its owner, the exchange, assists in greasing the slide. I do not believe there is any other one thing in all the world concerning which so much crass stupidity and imbecillic ignorance is displayed as in the care of films. One would think the exchange, which has paid hard cash for it, would be interested in its care. Apparently they are not. I have watched a $7 per week girl "inspecting" (save the mark) film, working like a steam engine, and exhibiting about as much intelligence. To do the girl justice, however, it is generally not her fault. She is expected to "inspect" film by chasing it from one reel to another as fast as she can spin the reels. If it is torn clear in two somewhere she stops, grabs a pair of scissors, snip, snip, reaches for a knife and scratches off most half the emulsion, dabs on cement, slaps the two ends together, almost matching the sprocket holes sometimes, gives it a pinch and whir-r-r-r goes the reels again until the end comes off, slaps around a few times good and hard—yank, and off comes the reel and she tosses it on the table and grabs another. Oh, yes, I nearly forgot her loving care in one respect. She stops the reel once in a while to pull down and plow a few more nice little groves in the emulsion. Pretty soon in comes the manager. "What's th' matter wit you anyhow?" says he. "Here half th' mornin's gone an' you ain't got but twenty reels done. Get a move on yuh." So the "inspector" puts on a little more steam and the reels "get theirs," A press for making patches? Mention such a thing to the average exchange manager and he would pronounce you a lunatic. The reel goes out in abominable condition. The film tears in two. The operator pins it together (anyhow four pictures gone every time—maybe a dozen; also maybe two feet), to get through the show. The manager won't stand for the slightest delay so the operator perforce makes a hasty patch or the usher makes a worse one and—well, you all know the net result. In two week's time the reel is a rainy wreck, with whole sections missing and from twenty to fifty patches, most of them half made. The reel should hardly be marked in two weeks.

I am aware that this is strong talk, but the subject fully justifies it. It is high time some degree of at least half-way intelligence be shown in the care of film. As to the devices you name, I could not possibly offer any opinion without full knowledge of them, what they will do and how they do it.

SPRINGFIELD OPERATORS' DANCE.—M. P. M. O. Union 186, I. A. T. S. E., Springfield, Mass., tripped the light fantastic the eve of November 16. A most enjoyable time was had. The ball was a success in every way. The Editor is in receipt, through the courtesy of Brother Chas. E. Schneider, of a programme, round in shape, about six inches in diameter, having the emblem of the order enlarged to a five-inch diameter, embossed in blue on its cover. Committee on Arrangments: H. B. Schoch, G. F. Hill, W. A. Clark, Thos. Donnelly, Arthur Shaw. Floor Director, W. A. Lewis. Assistant Floor Director, Frank Blanchan. Aids: W. A. Clark, H. A. Cooley, Jack Landon, Arthur Willis, Chas. E. K. Schneider and Frank Fennessey.

UP TO DATE.—Mr. S. N. Block, Manager "The Picto," Selma, Ala., writes: "Under separate cover I am mailing you a trio of pictures. I have noticed several operating rooms pictured in the Department and feel that mine might perhaps be of interest. Being just a little proud of it I shall give you details of its equipment. Ours is the only house I know of equipped for an instantaneous change from D. C. through a G. E. Rectifier to A. C. through a Ft. Wayne Compenscarc. This is clearly shown in the picture. Our equipment is a G. E. Rectifier, a Ft. Wayne Compenscarc and a Powers Six. An electric rewinder, a Mortimer Film Cleaner and an Edison film mender. Also have ammeter for Rectifier and an 18 inch exhaust fan. The openings in the operating room are equipped with semi-automatic drop doors but this is not plainly shown. The entire credit for the design and completion of our little house is due Mr. W. B. Gill, our Operator, known locally as "The South's Best." We are young at the picture game but fall easily for any and all improved ideas. Your particular department of the WORLD is always of interest and a help; the others sometimes. We are strong for the Mercury Arc Rectifier but—our first love is the Powers Six. We are also inclosing you several front page ads to show we believe in printers' ink."

We are always particularly pleased to hear from men who talk as does Neighbor Block. He is up-to-date. He keeps up with the procession and isn't afraid to invest money in improvements which make for better results. He has a good operator and isn't afraid to say so. Too many managers seem afraid to say a word in praise of the work of their operator, presumably for fear he will get the idea that he really is of some importance. I have gone into houses where the projection was really excellent. Have spoken to the manager, remarking the excellence of his operator, only to be promptly informed: "Oh, he's well enough, but I can get dozens just as good." The man knew he was lying. He knew he couldn't do anything of the kind. He knew he was very fortunate, indeed, in having the man he did, but not a word of praise. Knock, knock, knock, instead. Lots of encouragement for operators to improve—I don't think. Friend Block isn't in that class. The arrangement for switching from rectifier to transformer is indeed excellent. Views of theatre were sent also, but space forbids their publication at this time.

PULLEY WANTED. Grafton, W. Va., writes: "No one thinks more of the M. P. World than do I. I'm not the only one down here who is in love with it either. Can you tell me who makes the motor drive pulley which was advertised in the World some months back? Same was for an Edison machine. It was to go on crankshaft and was so made that crank could be put on after the pulley was in place. This is my first call for help, but that does not mean I know so much that I cannot learn more."

Man, I put in a whole hour looking for that "ad." Guess you'll have to be more explicit. "Some months ago" is a big order. Was the pulley illustrated? Was it shown on a machine in the illustration? About when did the ad appear? Glad you like our work in the World. Yes; I'm the guilty party as to the stories. There'll be another one of mine in the January number of the Railway Man's Magazine, I believe.

LIGHT PLANT. Peabody, Kans., writes: "Have been much interested in the motor-generator discussion. Have a Motiograph, 1911 model. There is a rub in it somewhere and I can't find it. The machine runs all right on the first half on the reel and then runs hard. Take-up is loose enough. Seems to be just tension enough to take up all the film. The light company here is holding us up on current—15 cents per K. W. We are thinking of getting a plant of our own. The company put in a forty ampere meter last week and now we cannot get a clear picture. Before that we were getting excellent projection light, pulling 30 amperes. Now we have the rehostat coils cut out to its limit (adjustable rheostat I suppose you mean. Ed.) and still have poor light. Would the meter have anything to do with this?"

Peabody also asked about something else. Said something was wearing more on one side than the other, the side opposite the blocks. I could not make out what was meant. I know of no reason why the machine should bind up on last half of reel if the take-up is not binding. If any of our correspondents have had similar experience let them set it forth [illegible] much current it wouldn't take very long for your plant to pay for itself at that rate. [illegible] to connect [illegible] to [illegible] something wrong with it. [illegible] wires and connections being certain that the wiring inside the lamps are in good condition and not burned, and that the lugs where it connects to lamp are not burned or covered with scale inside. Also be certain the rheostat connections are O. K. Very likely, however, since the trouble began with the installation of the meter, the trouble lies therein. Will ask the Motiograph people what they can make of your trouble.

WIDE ANGLE LENS. As usual of the War Department writers. "Have read with much interest your remarks from time to time in the Projection Department. Now find myself in a predicament; want to [illegible] and have sought your advice through the department. Am using an Edison machine, Model B, for purpose of entertainment both in barracks and in the field. For the latter work I purchased a 2½-inch wide angle lens in order to place the projector behind the screen, thus avoiding possible trouble by reason of the machine being too close to the men of our command. In trying out this lens I find I cannot project a discernible image on the screen. It is a blur, in which one may just perceive figures moving. Will you kindly inform me as to where the difficulty lies. Would prefer a personal reply."

In the first place, were I to make personal replies, without exacting a fee, I would be literally snowed under with correspondence. For personal reply the sum of $1.00 must be enclosed. You do not say whether the 2½ stands for back focus or E. F. Presumably the latter. If so, I do not believe you can use it at all in the Model B. You probably couldn't get a very good picture with it on any machine. The back lens would have to be very close to the film. I think that if you take off the jacket of the lens and shove the barrel carrying the lenses in closer to the film than you are able to get it with the adjustment screw, you will find the picture will clear up all right. You see it is necessary that (the lens having a 2½ E. F.) it be so set that a point half way between the back and front lens combinations will be exactly 2½ inches from the film. The lens won't focus the picture in any other position. I assume that the lens itself is O. K. To ascertain if this be the fact, remove the combinations from the barrel and see that the individual lenses are in place in their mounts, and that the convex surface of each lens is toward the screen.

IMPOSSIBLE. Rochester, N. Y., writes asking several questions, all based on his second one which is: "Can I project a good picture 17 feet wide with a twenty-foot throw and would it be better or worse than if the throw were 90 feet?"

It is totally impossible to project a picture 17 feet wide with a 20-foot throw. There is no such projection lens made, and you couldn't use it if there were. Ninety feet is an ideal distance to project pictures.

TROUBLE. Independence, Iowa, writes: "Have a Powers Six, purchased last spring and am having trouble with the sprocket holes of the film splitting on the side next the stereo lens; also every once in a while the lower loop gives me trouble and the film will tear in two. Am using 110 volt D. C. through a rheostat, ⅝ carbons above and ½ inch hard below. Have considerable difficulty with the carbons flaming, and sputtering. It causes a shadow on the screen. Am certain current is steady, or at least fairly so."

As to the machine trouble: I think you have a mechanism with the old style, separate tension springs and that the left-hand spring is exerting much more tension than its mate. Also possibly you have adjusted the intermittent movement and have made all the adjustment on the left-hand bushing, thus throwing the intermittent shaft out of alignment with the flywheel shaft. This, however, would tend to throw the major portion of the strain on the right hand side of the intermittent sprocket. I guess it's the spring all right. As to the lower loop: be sure the spring holding the lower sprocket idler holds it firmly in place when closed down. If it allows any teetering of the front roller take the spring off and bend its top end back (toward the front of machine) a little. The top end is probably striking the bracket casting, which it should not do. See page 887, September 23 issue. Set the front roller away from sprocket by twice the thickness of a film. As to the arc; you have not given sufficient data with which to offer an intelligent opinion. Ordinarily the conditions you describe would indicate very soft carbons or else excessive amperage: maybe both.

SKOWHEGAN, MAINE, writes: "Am using 60 cycle A. C., 110 volt current. After opening this theatre have had a little trouble with the manager of the light plant. Have installed compensarc to reduce current bills. Have two meters, one for house lights and one for the projection arc. Pay same rate per K.W. on both. I want the whole thing put on one meter. Manager of light plant says it cannot be done without reducing voltage one-half. Having received much valuable information from the Projection Department would be glad to have you inform me through your columns as to this matter."

It is not unusual to place the house lights on one meter and the projection circuit on another, but, in most cities, it is usual to pay a lower rate for projection current than for house light current. I know of no other reason why it is necessary to use two meters. Most exhibitors would be glad to have separate meter for machine to enable them to kep tab on cost of projection, as well as for other reasons. You have not said what kind of system you have. Presume the facts would show that it is a three-wire, three-phase system, and that the house lights are balanced on the two sides, thus operating on 110 volts, while the projection circuit is hitched across the two outside wires, consequently on 220 volts. Under these conditions, you would have a 220 volt compensarc and it would either be necessary to put everything on 220 volts or on 110 volts, if one meter is to be used. In other words, the house light circuits would have to operate on 220 volts (possible, but not good) or else you would have to get a 110 volt compensarc. If any one can offer any other explanation let him arise and speak.

[illegible] a term, or unit, used to express work performed, the same as is the Watt, [illegible] When a current of one ampere is passed through one ohm resistance under a pressure of one volt, an amount of work is done which is termed "one joule." [illegible] one joule of work per second.

SPOTLIGHT, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., writes: "Noting in recent issue of the World an inquiry as to whether an Edison lamp house could be used as a spotlight, and that you are not certain yourself, I would advise you that it is very easy to use it by removing the cone and collar which carries the condenser shell, putting on a new collar, rivited to the lamp house to carry the cell. Make this collar five or six inches long in order to permit the cell to be moved forward or back. If the collar be slit and a handle screwed into the cell it can be made to give either large or small spot or flood by moving forward or back. For an eight foot spot at say 75 feet it would require a 6½ inch focus lens, which would be about 5 inches from the arc. In my long theatre experience I have never used other than 4½ inch lenses for all kinds of spotlights, except where a very large flood at a short distance is required. A long throw with a small spot requires a long focus condenser (nine inch I find to be best) in order to get a clear field and an even illumination. Lamp should be trimmed about the same as for moving picture use, except in the use of D. C. it is advisable to set the bottom carbon a little further back in order to avoid the shadow of the bottom carbon which will show on the top of the spot in a heartshape, which will also be liable to occur if the lamp has too much slant. With A. C. the lamp is trimmed same as for M. P. and in the use of this current it is nearly impossible to avoid a blue spot on top of the spot, or a double spot, on account of the double crater."

LIGHT TROUBLE. Wooster, Ohio, writes, saying, in effect, that he has ghost in center of screen. Can remove same by pulling lamphouse back but on setting carbons or changing position of same ghost reappears. Has read everything on such trouble for past three months but nothing seems to fit. Asks what size condenser lenses I would advise—12 ft. picture at 55 feet. Edengraph machine. Has trouble with brown ring around entire outside.

Use two 7½, or one of that length and one 6½, which even gives best results. You did not say whether you are using D. C. or A. C. Probably fault lies in carbon setting, the shadow of lower carbon tip showing as a ghost on the screen. May be due to too much slant on lamp or to too much advancement of lower carbon ahead of upper. Not positive but that's what it sounds like. As to stereopticon: get a half-size stereo lens. You haven't given width of both stereo and moving picture. You may have some odd proposition—a wide moving picture and narrow stereo. This would, or might make it difficult to get good results on both pictures without moving lamp ahead or back every time you change from one picture to the other. I cannot impress strongly enough, on correspondents the absolute necessity for full and complete details, if they expect intelligent answers. For instance: suppose this brother is running a 12 ft. motion picture, but, for some reason, uses a much wider or narrower stereo picture. Don't you see it would make a big difference in the lens combinations? I must—simply MUST—have full, detailed data in order to reply intelligently to queries.

LIGHT TROUBLE. Athens, Ga., writes: "My light on screen has blue center and brown edges. Use resistance made from galvanized iron wire. One 6½ and one 7½ condenser lens. Have moved lamphouse backward and forward with no effect. Carbons set as per your directions but carbons do not burn as they should. Picture out of focus on left side. What do you advise?"

Gentlemen, if you want intelligent answers why, why, WHY don't you give full data. I am not good at guessing contests. Not knowing throw or width of picture how in the world can I tell whether your lenses are right? Not knowing whether your machine sets square in front of screen or to one side, how can I tell cause of out-of-focus effect with any degree of certainty? Examine your lamp leads (wires) inside lamphouse and where they connect to lamp. Maybe they are burned. That particular thing causes much trouble with light. My dear sir, you don't even tell whether it is A. C. or D. C. I am glad to be of assistance, but long distance mind reading is not one of my accomplishments. Now, Athens, come on in with some information and I will do the best I can for you.

WHY

PAY from 25c. to $2.00 per sq. ft. for patent theatre screens when you can make one yourself equal to the best for 7c. per sq. ft. ? Write

THE HADFIELD-HALL CO.
WAUSAU, WIS., about it.

Comments on the Films

Licensed.

"HEROES OF THE MUTINY" (Vitagraph), November 20.—This film tells a story of the Indian mutiny and shows how an officer and his servant escaped from a besieged fort, disguised as beggars. They make their way through the opposing lines, learn the plans of the enemy and stealing two horses ride furiously to the nearest British regiment and lead them back in time to rescue the people inside the fort. The love story, which has been a factor in prompting this bravery, culminates happily and the servant is suitably rewarded for his faithfulness.

"THE CONVERT OF SAN CLEMENTE" (Selig), November 20.—San Clemente is an island out in the Pacific from the California coast. The convert was a little Indian maid, the only one on the island to be converted. Two friars made a trip to the island. One was shot with an Indian's arrow as soon as they landed, the other escaped, thinking the brother dead. An Indian girl found the wounded priest and for long years kept him hidden from her friends. She fell in love with him and couldn't understand why he wouldn't take her as his wife, but he kept his vow and later, when he is saved, we see the convert kneeling with the cross in her hands, probably still wondering why she had been deserted. The picture is dignified and well acted and some of the scenery is interesting, but it moves at a leisurely pace.

"AN OIL COUNTRY ROMANCE" (Melies), November 23.—A melodrama along well-known lines and with an oil country, with derricks and mountains in the distance, as its setting. The hero is an inventor and fortunately he described his new pump to the oil magnate's daughter, Doris, before showing it to the foreman. So when this foreman, coveting the invention, fired the inventor and applied himself for the patent, Doris was able to convince her father as to its rightful owner. The picture is not exciting. The scenes in the early part were drawn out too much and made the story drag. The reason for showing a photograph of the inventor's widowed mother was not clear and it gave a touch of sickly sentimentality which added nothing to the picture's value.

"OLD FIDELITY" (Essanay), November 23.—The hero of this picture is a white bull pup. There were people in the audience who seemed much interested in the story, which seems to attempt to teach a lesson of kindness to animals; but the story is extremely artificial and lacking in convincing truth. The dog came to where the paymaster sat eating his luncheon, his saddle bags beneath him. It was noon, and he had stopped on his way home from the bank with the pay roll of the mine. The dog was plainly not hungry, but ate what the man gave him, and watched beside while the man slept, which seems a not very improbable incident. When the man got up he left his saddle bags, and the dog tried at attract his attention, but in an ugly way. To quiet him, the man shot him with his revolver. One lady not far from the reviewer expressed strong disapproval. The paymaster didn't miss his bags till he had reached the mine. Then three of the men went back for them and got the dog also.

"CAVE HOMES IN THE CANARY ISLES" (Gaumont), November 25.—This scenic gives good views of a curious and interesting community. The people who live in this part of the Canaries find it convenient to use old Mother Earth as their houses. It is interesting, not very beautiful.

"THE ESCAPE FROM THE DUNGEON" (Gaumont), November 25.—A very romantic story of the Middle Ages. The dungeon was in the castle of a powerful villain and he kept the heroine's father in durance vile. She, dressed as a man, makes two friends and with them, as minstrels, gains admission to the castle. The castle is stormed and the key obtained in a romantic fashion. The situation is not a very dramatic one. The acting is stilted, but the film is prettily colored.

"A BLIND DECEPTION" (Lubin), November 23.—Whenever a picture is so enjoyable and good as this, and so well acted, set and photographed, it is hard to criticise it at all. One feels that it merely ought to have a star pasted after it. Yet it starts out as a thoroughgoing, rollicking comedy, and closes in a very tragic situation. In art that desires to make the deepest impression possible, this is not defensible. Tragedy is always religious, whether it be Chinese, Indian, Greek or Christian; comedy never is. There are comic moments in many tragedies—resting places, nodes. But comedy is essentially lawless. Nature never puts on the comic mask for more than a moment at a time. Real life is essentially tragic. And to mix comedy and tragedy in blocks, so to speak, as this picture does, offers suggestions to the mind that are at war with each other. Ellen wanted to do something useful, wanted to care for a blind man. She was coming to answer an advertisement and seeing Robert with goggles on thought him the blind man. He saw her through the goggles and decided that it would be pleasant to remain the blind man. She read to him for a day before she saw through his pretense and left in great indignation. This occupies half the reel; is not a picture of life, but is very amusing. Now comes the tragic picture of real life. He loses his sight. She can care for him now and he won't have to pretend.

"RESOURCEFUL LOVERS" (Biograph), November 23.—A comedy romance, well conducted for the most part and prettily acted, but neither vital nor very original. The chemist's assistant discovered a very readly poison and was promised the chemist's dark-haired, pretty daughter as his guerdon. She preferred someone else. This assistant was played very well and his character was made to furnish the best comedy in the situation. He was especially funny in scenes where the chemist tries to force the girl to make love to him. He turns to the old man and says, helplessly, "It's no use." He seemed to look upon the girl as some refractory compound in a test tube. The other lover makes believe he has drunk some of the poison. He's going to die in ten minutes, so the old man lets him marry the girl. Then he becomes very lively and merry. The audience laughed.

"HER MOTHER INTERFERES" (Biograph), November 23.—A comedy of matrimonial life in which wifey's mother tells her how to work on her husband's sympathies. It works the first time. The second faint gets a cold douch. Mother comes to help wifey. Husband and a chum of his combine against mother-in-law. Friend persuades mother to use him as a puppet to make husband jealous. Friend takes mother and wifey out to dinner and gets mother drunk. He then sends the two back to husband, who is now clearly master of the situation. The friend, as acted, was full of exaggerated foolishness; but he got more laughs, of a kind, than anything else in the picture.

"HIS BROTHER'S DOUBLE" (Lubin), November 25.—This comedy has an entirely unexpected and very funny denouement. It is a new and cleverly worked-up version of the two brothers story. In appearance, one was a bit taller than the other; and one can tell them apart by that. Jack was the good one; Bob was the bad one. Bob stole a hundred dollar bill from father and made him think Jack took it. Jack got even. He dressed exactly like his brother—the spectator will hardly be able to distinguish them. He gets his brother discharged and gets his brother's girl.

"BLACKBEARD" (Selig), November 23.—A buccaneer story of capture and a hairbreadth rescue. It is a very commonplace story with some interesting moments. When the town is sacked by Blackbeard, the Governor and others, including the Governor's lady and other women, are captured. His excellency is made to walk the plank with his hands tied. Conchita, serving maid to his wife, jumps overboard and cuts his bonds. They swim to shore, fall in with a British man-of-war which later takes the pirate's ship and frees the prisoners.

"COWBOY LIFE" (Pathe), November 23.—This is not a story. It is rather a series of views showing what cowboys are supposed to do during the day. The different operations required about the ranch are pictured, inluding the disinfecting process ordered by the government and through which the cattle have to go every six months. The scenic qualities of the picture are worth consideration.

"THE KIODAY TRIBE, EQUILIBRIST" (C. G. P. C.), November 23.—A novelty film which presents a series of attractive pictures which are described in the title.

"TWO DAUGHTERS OF HAVANA" (Pathe), November 24.—The idea back of this film, a case of double mistaken identity, is interesting and the Pathe players have worked it out very satisfactorily. Two men are in love with two girls, the latter being much alike. The result is a series of complications which finally lead to a fight. This fight, by the way, is sensational and seems to be in real earnest. The picture pleases because it is somewhat novel and because of its picturesque settings and excellent acting. Indeed, it seems to this reviewer well worth while.

"COMIC GAMES IN SINGAPORE" (C. G. P. C.), November 24.—A novelty film which will please because of its unusual subject. It brings some of the sport of the little known Indian world to the doors of the Occident and they learn, even as they are amused. It is well worthy adding to any program.

"GETTING MARRIED" (Selig), November 24.—A lively comedy with a young couple, an objecting father and a mistake in delivering a wardrobe as important factors. The couple are to be married in the lover's studio, but the father appears. Just as he comes some furniture men deliver a wardrobe by mistake and the girl gets inside. Before the difficulty is straightened out the furniture men return and transfer the wardrobe with the girl inside to the rightful owner next door. The young man and the minister crawl through the skylight and the ceremony is performed right there while the irate parent storms to his heart's content in the studio. The situations afford much sport for the audience.

"IN JAPAN" (Selig), November 24.—An excellent picture of Japan, which affords some good views of the people, at work and play, and is placed in picturesque and interesting surroundings.

"THE TEMPTATION OF RODNEY VANE" (Kalem), November 24.—The temptation was to avenge himself, for a fancied attempt to win his sweetheart, by allowing the revenue officer to drown in a huge wine vat. Van's better nature prevails, however, and believing he has no chance of winning the girl, he decides to leave, but just as he is about to depart explanations are made and he discovers that the girl has loved him all the time. There is a rival which manages to increase Van's distrust, but there is a happy ending and the requirements of a melodramatic situation are fulfilled.

"AN INNOCENT BURGLAR" (Vitagraph), November 24.—A pleasant story of how a young man, forgetting the key to his home, enters through a window and being seen by people next door is arrested as a burglar. He telephones for his fiancee's father, who upon arriving, gives the taxi driver the wink. The young man is carried toward what he believes to be the police station, but is in reality the delayed bridge game for which he was preparing when arrested. The film is not particularly strong, but it tells a good story in an interesting way and the audience clearly liked it.

hearts of thousands. Indeed, it may have the same effect as the little personal. It may bring more than one wanderer back home for the Thanksgiving feast. If it does it will accomplish more good than even amusing the people.

"THE DESERT CLAIM" (Essanay), November 25.—A Western picture, the principle feature of which is the attempt of two unprincipled prospectors to secure a man's claim. He outwits them by rolling up his blankets [illegible]. He quickly overpowers them and tying them together leaves them to wander alone in the desert. Later he relents, releases them from their bonds and orders them to leave the country. Tying the men together as a punishment is a novelty, even in Western pictures, which have exhausted about every expedient known to secure something new.

"[illegible] MAN IN THE TAXI" (Lubin), November [illegible]—A [illegible] picture very good in part and, as a whole, effective and acceptable. There is some true comedy in it, but not all that was intended to be amusing is so. Two lovers, having objecting parents on both sides, decide to elope. They are going in a taxi. The groom-to-be is waiting outside a hotel for his [illegible] witnesses when a burglar, who has just [illegible] jewels, jumps in, orders the driver outside to go fast and chloroforms the man. Being followed, the burglar places the empty jewel bag in the man's pocket and jumps out. He is so severly injured by the fall that he is taken to the hospital, giving the groom's name. The groom is caught and arrested His story is not believed and he is locked up. The girl, who has waited for the groom all night, sees in the papers next morning two accounts; one that he had been caught in a daring burglary, one that he had died in the hospital from injuries due to an automobile accident. She gets busy and soon the whole difficulty is cleared up.

"SUNSHINE THROUGH THE DARK" (Biograph), November 27.—A character comedy, the leading part in which is a clownish serving maid in a family where there is a spoiled child. This clownish maid was not played with convincing effect. The young lady who took the part seemed unusually competent, but she was poorly cast. Her looks belied her at every minute nearly, in spite of clever facial expression, and then one can't keep up clownish work all the time, especially if one was born with the face of an artist. The poor servant girl too greatly admired the pretty sash of the spoiled child and after she had put her to bed, borrowed it to see how it would look on herself, took it to her room. But the spoiled girl found it out and brought her mamma to search for it. The sunshine came through the love of the stable boy who consoled the girl for her harsh treatment by the spoiled child. The picture, with the exception pointed out, is very interesting and highly commendable.

"AT THE STROKE OF TWELVE" (Essanay), November [illegible]—Twelve was the hour the very small boy was invited to call at the rich manufacturer's office. He had stopped a runaway and saved this rich man's very little daughter. Some years later, we see the boy prospering and engaged to the girl. This girl is about a good deal. She has made friends with the old chief draftsman and when this old man gets suddenly sick, he sends a telegram asking "his little flower girl" to come and see him, which is peculiar. By her, he sends plans on which he has been working to her father, which is also peculiar. The only object appearantly being to keep the girl in the story. These drawings must be complete by twelve that night. The girl's sweetheart does the work and gets them in just in time. It is fairly dramatic; but not very much above the ordinary good picture.

"THE LIFE BOAT" (Vitagraph), November 25.—A story of bitter hard luck, but a very human one. It is not depressing; such stories very often have an entirely different effect and console us with a vision of the possibility, even probability, of the clouds passing away. The situation is pictured dramatically and the story fairly well designed, except in one particular. It deals with the sorrow of an old fisherman and his wife whose weak, not vicious but erring son, after promising to come home for a visit, disappeared and wasn't heard of for years. We are shown how this came about and we do not feel like blaming the son so much as sympathizing with him. In the end, the old father bravely puts out in the life boat to save the survivor of a wreck. This survivor is his son. The scenes of the wreck are not taken off the screen soon enough, not before we have a chance to see the artificiality of it, an old hulk in a calm sea. The story is burdened, too, with too much life-saving apparatus. Aside from these defects, the picture is very well made in almost every way. It is a very interesting and commendable film.

"THE LOST NECKLACE" (Pathe), November 25.—A sleep-walking picture in which the heroine (Pearl White) receives a valuable pearl necklace, dreams that she is being robbed of it and, in her sleep hides it in a tree on the lawn. Next morning she doesn't know where it is; thinks it really has been stolen. The laundress is blamed; indeed, we ourselves might have thought her guilty if we hadn't seen where the pearls went. Octavia Handworth plays the laundress. The laundress's son (Roy Smith), sees the heroine and the jewels are at length discovered. It is very well acted and, with the exception of the girl's nightmare, made very effective.

"THE AMERICAN INSURRECTO" (Kalem), November 27.—A story set in a wild mountainous country with Mexican soldiers, Indians and an American hero who is in the service of the Insurgents. The American, wounded, is found by Mona, an Indian maid, and taken to a ranch owned by a white man who, it chances, sympathizes with the Federals. The ranchero's daughter finds an incriminating letter in his pocket. Mona brings her people to the rescue. The ranch is attacked and Mona, herself, cuts the prisoner's bonds, but she can not marry him, because, to bring

[illegible]

"FATHER'S WEDDING" [illegible]—A [illegible] funeral in Japan [illegible] of unusual interest including a good view of the Sultan of Turkey, excellent [illegible] as a whole is of re[illegible]

"THE RIGHT NAME BUT THE WRONG MAN" [illegible]—A [illegible] her [illegible] tures. This business man had the same name as a burglar and by mistake received a letter that really wasn't safe to carry around. That letter made [illegible] found. He went to prison, even his sweetheart testified against him. Later, he becomes a soldier. The girl is in love with his lieutenant. These three are alone on the hills when Indians attack. The lieutenant proves a coward, but the hero holds off the Indians, shoots 'em right and left, knocks 'em off their horses till only two are left. Then, at the end, he walks away while the girl holds out her arms to him in vain.

"THE POLITICIAN'S DREAM" [illegible]—A [illegible] graph comedy with Hunny as the politician and Miss Flora Finch as the widow. It is almost wholly funny and very laughable in many parts. The politician dreamt that he had been nominated for the mayoralty of New York City and that every thing was coming his way. Parades and dinners and favorable reports; all the glories of a campaign were his when a telegram comes telling him that his rival in the country village is going to marry the widow. He abandons all to hurry back only to see the wedding ceremony of his rival. It takes him off his feet. He falls out of his chair by the stove and wakes up. It is a comedy to conjure with.

"THE LURE OF THE CITY" (Edison), November 28.—A picture that for the most part is strong and very effective. The idea has been used many times, but it is still fresh and worth doing. The early scenes, especially the one drawn after after Hovenden's "Breaking Home Ties," could hardly be improved upon. The youth felt the lure of the city and determined to win his fortune. The working up to the scene where he takes leave of his mother was like life itself. It was acted and posed with truly wonderful skill; but, at the close, when the scene became like the picture, it was held quiet, frozen, for an instant. This touch of self-consciousness was a mistake and it alone robbed the scene of perfection. The youth reaches the city, is disillusioned; but is, at length brought back to the farm by his sweetheart who goes to the city after him. One of the picture's strongest points is the types which, except those at the city boarding house, give a very realistic atmosphere to the story.

"REVIEW OF AUSTRIAN ARMY" (Gaumont), November 28.—The photography of this military picture is not quite up to Gaumont quality in every scene, but it is very fair.

"A BUSY CUPID" (Gaumont), November 28.—A very pretty love fantasy in a very beautiful and unusually well photographed and painted rose garden. The gardener's daughter loves a scissors grinder and her father, whose ambition is to grow a blue rose, objects. He sets the girl to work in the garden. Cupid appears. Does the work in order to let her escape and walk with the youth. Then takes a turn at the grindstone in order to free the youth for a while. In the end, he gives the youth his quiver, which placed over any rose turns it blue. So the youth makes the blue rose and the gardner rewards him with the girl's hand. The picture is wholly delightful. It is very commendable, indeed.

"THE FRESHET" (Vitagraph), November 28.—A story of love with a climax in a time of a great freshet. Most of the film is taken up by very realistic pictures of such incidents as happen when a small river widely overflows its banks, washing away small houses which it carries, along with other debris, chicken-coops, etc., on its swirling course. No wide view of the flood is shown; we don't know how extensive nor how terrible it is. But we see work going on in the blacksmith shop, much as usual, and conclude that no apalling horror has settled on the valley. The last scene is a glimpse of Austin, Pa., after its great flood. The blacksmith loved Meg, but her father objected and she married someone else. She became a widow. The day of the freshet he rescued her little boy from an apparantly very dangerous position—he was floating on a door. The boy, later, brings about a reconciliation between Meg and the smith, who was somewhat bitter. It makes a fine picture; for the smith is played by a competent actor who has given a worthy character portrayal. It is acted well throughout.

"THE TELLTALE KNIFE" (Selig), November 28.—A well-knit and interesting melodrama, although it uses such conventional incidents as the chase and last stand of the rustlers. In this case there are two rustlers and both are killed in the fight. The love story is simple and clear. At first the pretty barmaid preferred someone else to the sheriff; but when the sheriff brings home to her lover the guilt of false branding and with his posse chases the rustlers to the place where they are shot, she gives her affections to the sheriff. It is an exciting and commendable melodrama.

BUFFALO JONES TO GIVE EXHIBITIONS IN NEW YORK.

Buffalo Jones, the celebrated trainer of wild animals and the man who "takes 'em alive" with the aid of a lariat, is booked to give two monster exhibitions of motion pictures of his exploits in Greater New York in December. The first will take place in Carnegie Hall, New York City, on December 22, and a full house is now practically assured. The second engagement will be at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, N. Y., on December 23, when it is expected that that great auditorium will be crowded.

Independent.

"MISS MASQUERADER" (Eclair), November 28.—This picture depends for its fun on the difficulties which a young girl, masquerading as a boy, encountered. The reason for these difficulties was so obvious that there was very little fun in them. The girl was an heiress and had grown disgusted with suitors who wanted her money. The "lark" was partly to find a disinterested sweetheart. She finds him. Later she gets a job as nurse to this man's old grandfather and meets the man again. We have some very pretty love-making. It is pleasingly acted as a light society comedy and has considerable charm and prettiness.

"THE FIVE DAUGHTERS OF M. DURANT" (Eclair, French Co.), November 30.—A comedy showing the difficulties a suitor may have in trying to get one sister out of five. The conduct of the piece gave an atmosphere to it like a musical comedy with the chorus acting in unison like well-drilled soldiers.

"GUSSY'S CONGRATULATIONS" (Eclair, French Co.), November 30.—A brisk farce. Gussy had much difficulty in getting and keeping a bouquet for a distinguished lady who had invited him to her birthday party. The one he bought was lost in an amusing way, so he took one from a messenger boy. This, some one had intended for an actress, and the note with it was not pleasing to the old lady. The results were disastrous to Gussy, who had hardly paid his respects before he was kicked out. It is amusing.

"BILL AS A VETERINARY SURGEON" (Lux), December 1.—A trick picture in which Bill brings dead animals to life, and pulls a big tooth out of a black bear. It is amusing to see these well accomplished tricks. It is on the same reel with "Making an Aeroplane."

"MAKING AN AEROPLANE" (Lux), December 1.—This instructive and interesting picture was reviewed at length on page 731 last week.

"THE LITTLE DUKE" (Ambrosio), November 29.—A poetic, pretty picture. He was a very great duke, but a very little boy and he got tired of high state and played "hooky" from the palace. His experiences were, in a general way, like Prince Edward's in "The Prince and the Pauper." The child player didn't act like a duke, who would still remember his position, even though ragged and hungry. It is a very acceptable picture, although more might have been made of the situation.

"TINY TOM APACHE" (Ambrosio), November 29.—A picture featuring a child actor who is something like the Gaumont "Jimmie." It is all amusing, but there is very little true comedy in it, as it is shown. The child, a gamin, manages to steal much bric-a-brac and then manufactures a Mona Lisa for the museum authorities. It is an amusing farce.

"THE CONVICT'S SONG" (Ambrosio), November 15.—A Russian peasant story is told by a convict who sings to other convicts, apparently halting on their way to Siberia. By excellent photographs, it tells a strong, human, well-acted story of love, greed, passion and jealousy, and has a sensational and bitterly tragic climax. It surely impresses one as a truthful, vivid picture of Russian peasant and village life. The backgrounds seem to be thoroughly Russian and one feels safe in saying that the picture has great educational value as well as being very good entertainment.

"THE PENALTY OF HER AMBITION" (Great Northern), December 2.—Her ambition was to become an opera singer. She was tempted by a manager to be untrue to her husband and child, and she fell. In a year or so, the impressario grows weary of her. Her little girl becomes sick and father and mother are reunited. It is very well acted, and it is clear.

"A RENDEZVOUS IN HYDE PARK" (Great Northern), November 25.—A comedy, rather slight, but very clever and amusing. The daughter of the house had a rendezvous in Hyde Park with a captain; her maid had one on the same afternoon with a sergeant. The girl's father forbade her to leave the house, so she borrowed her maid's hat and cloak and slipped out. The father and mother suspected and followed. A little later the maid remembered her engagement, but had no hat, so she borrowed the girl's. The captain followed her, thinking her the girl, and she ran. The sergeant followed the girl and chased her unexpectedly into the arms of her maid. Later, the parents find both pairs on a grassy bank. It is a comedy of coincidences.

"BENEATH THE VEIL" (Thanhouser), December 1.—A very romantic picture well-acted partly, and prettily set. The situation is developed not without dramatic effectiveness, yet there is not very much in it that is fresh and this keeps one from being very deeply interested. The heroine of the picture was married in a veil. She was very beautiful and her father feared that the artist, her sweetheart, loved her only for her beauty. He was a chemist and so contrived it that the artist supposed her burned in an explosion, and scarred for life. At first he is willing to break the engagement, yet later decides that he cannot live without her. She insists on being married in a veil. The artist doesn't know that she is still beautiful until after the ceremony. Some of the photographs are full of merit pictorially.

"THE TEMPEST" (Thanhouser), November 28.—This photoplay has a sketchy outline of the scenario of Shakespeare's play. At times there is much commendable suggestion in its scenes, some of which are very pretty. It now and then seems crude. The player who takes Miranda's part fills it, so far as physical requirements went, very well indeed. But Ariel is, perhaps, the only truly well-acted part in the picture. It is taken by a young lady who has put something of sprightliness and mystery into it, with the help of some well-chosen backgrounds. As a whole, the film will please, not only because of its subject, but for the sake of the prettiness of parts of it.

"TOO MUCH INDIAN" (Powers), November 28.—A comedy-farce in which a small boy, who had been reading too much Western literature, is chased by a cigar store chieftain. This chase is made very amusing, especially to the small boy; but the average spectator also will probably like it.

"THE LINEMAN AND THE GIRL" (Powers), November 28.—A comedy with a slight plot, but pretty and acceptable. The linemen were putting up poles and had a hole dug in front of the girl's house. She didn't want one there and jumped into the hole to stop progress. The lineman made love to her. After the wedding the bridal party danced around the pole.

"THE WANDERER'S RETURN" (Powers), December 2.—A comedy that developed when the old people on the farm advertised for their long-lost son who had run away to sea years before. A stranded actor needing a home, saw the advertisement first and applied for the position as wanderer. He didn't have the right mark on his chest and was kicked out. However, he had found out what the mark was and painted it on a tramp who was accepted, but wouldn't help the actor, so the actor, seeing the true son passing, gets him to hurry up. By the time the son arrives, the mark has worn off the tramp. It is well acted and the settings are real, homely farm scenes. It is amusing, but there have been a good many funnier pictures.

"VIEWS OF LAKE COMO, ITALY" (Powers), December 2.—These are very good photographs of the shores of this beautiful lake. They are clear and have depth and atmosphere. Quite worth while.

"UNCLE'S VISIT" (Imp), November 27.—A comedy decidedly amusing, although along quite conventional lines. Uncle was expected. His object in coming was to see John's bride. He was giving John an allowance and he wanted to know whether to increase or diminish it. They expected him to come disguised. A tramp came and the bride received him as an honored guest. When the uncle came, he called at John's office first and the two found the tramp at the table. The tramp could have acted more naturally easily and it would have been even funnier. When exaggerated acting is continued too long it begins to bore. The comedy, as a whole, is brim full of good laughs.

"OVER THE HILLS" (Imp), November 30.—A Western story of a pretty miner's daughter who, while her father was away on a prospecting trip, dressed up as a boy and went prospecting herself. She got lost and was helped by another miner. In the end she won a very estimable sweetheart. There is much fine and true humanity in the picture; there are several melodramatic and more or less artificial incidences in it also. On the whole, the effect of the picture is decidedly pleasing. The little heroine makes as pretty a motion picture as any player in the field.

"JOLLY BILL OF THE ROLLICKING R" (American), November 27.—The widow and Jolly Bill made a window and ladder elopement and got married in 'Frisco. The daughter distributed rice for the home-coming reception. When the boys saw them in their 'Frisco store clothes, however, they were so astonished that they couldn't throw any of it. Bill is henpecked. It isn't very funny.

"THE SHERIFF'S SISTERS" (American), November 30.—A good old Western melodrama, very romantic, but with palpably artificial "thrills." The hero, fleeing from the villain's gang of lynchers, has a hardly convincing running pistol fight while he clambers up to a bridge spanning a railroad cut. On this the gang catch him. He handles them pretty roughly at first; but just then a train passes underneath and the man (very plainly a stuffed doll) is thrown over the parapet onto it. Down the track a way, he is captured by the sheriff. The man was in love with the sheriff's sister, and the villain was jealous because she returned his love. The villain had killed an old man. The sheriff's other sister knew that the hero hadn't done it, for he had been with her at the time the shot was heard. She had been jealous of her sister and, out of pique, had kept silent. She now exonerates the hero. The scenery was pretty and there are some very good views of natural scenery in the picture.

"GRANDMA'S TOOFACHE" (Comet), November 27.—If very skillfully made photographs, a nice girl and a dear old grandmamma could make, by themselves, a first-class picture, this would be fine. There is, however, very little real dramatic interest in the picture. It is such a play as Grandma might have gotten up, extempore, to amuse a little girl while waiting for Thanksgiving dinner to be ready. Under such circumstances it would have been fun for both. As a serious attempt at comedy it is an unmistakable failure. The argument is this: Grandma on a visit to her daughter's gets a toothache. Papa is a dentist and is going to pull it. Little girl takes Grandma up to the garret to hide. While the family is searching for them, tramps come in and eat the dinner, then go to the garret, but are scared away. Father calls up the police who find Grandma and little girl fast asleep.

"A HAPPY THANKSGIVING" (Reliance), November 29.—It is very hard to get into a picture the atmosphere that belongs to any particular holiday; it is too elusive. The backgrounds of this picture seem to indicate warmer weather than we have at Thanksgiving in this neighborhood. Let that be as it is, there was no suggestion of the particular holiday except in the title. It is, however, a very interesting and human picture. It tells a story of a rich, but careless man who, at the dinner table of a farmer, on whom he had been very hard, found his only child, a little boy, motherless and neglected, who had run away from a cheerless home and had been cared for by the farmer and his motherly wife. The father had been searching for a day and a night, when the farmer, having discovered who the lost child was, sent a message to him. He is taught a lesson in brotherly love and charity. He destroys the mortgage on the farm that he holds and sits down at a happy dinner table with the farmer's family. The picture will be liked very much.

"A WESTERN ONE-NIGHT STAND" (Bison), November 28.—A boisterous but amusing Western comedy. The trouble came from the press agent's first appearance in the town. This agent was also an actor. He came dressed as a woman and Broncho Bill fell in love with him. Broncho Bill's assurance of his success in courtship is worth seeing. When the boys found the press agent out, the play was foredoomed. The whole troop was chased out of town. There are some very good character sketches in it.

"AN EASTERNER'S PERIL" (Bison), December 1.—A very fair Western romance, well designed and exciting, and with a new thrill. The Easterner fell in love with the cowgirl, and the jealous puncher and his friends compelled him to walk into a pool with a quicksand bottom. The girl discovered his plight and brought help. There is little or no camera consciousness in the picture; it is acted effectively and is likely to please the average spectator very much. It succeeds in getting somewhere and gives one something to look at.

"FIRST EDITION OF MOTHER GOOSE RHYMES" (Champion), November 27.—One has to get back into the attitude of childhood before he can enjoy this picture. It is not a connected picture. There are two backgrounds, the first is the house (let me call it the nursery) and in the people and is used to set forth the first two rhymes, "Hush a Ba Baby" and "Blackberry Crum." The second rhyme is "Jack and Jill" and a cross man's house and children are used to set it forth. The Old Mother Goose with her gentle acts as fairy godmother and dream weaver in both sets of pictures. As a children's picture this will prove very acceptable indeed. It is intended at such.

"THE TWO BROWNS" (Champion), November 29.—We know not the exact name for this picture a pleasing production. It's a ranch-life story. Joe Brown was the foreman; John Brown, an Eastener, who came to the West for his health and got a job on the ranch. They were rivals for the love of the ranch owner's daughter and John was the favorite. Joe cleverly schemed to discredit John, and very convincingly he succeeded; but the black hen came home to roost with avengeance. It is a good and commendable picture.

"A TROUBLESOME PICTURE" (Solax), November 29.—It was a very troublesome picture of an Egyptian girl. It came to life while Jones was sleeping and then it wouldn't get back into its frame. Jones's wife came in and Jones had to hide it in the big clock. When he got it to go back to the frame, it had a troublesome way of stepping down again. What is worse, it didn't know how to behave before Jones's wife and mother-in-law. Of course, it was only a dream. It has some very good comedy. Perhaps Jones didn't get as much fun as possible out of the situation, but he did very well. It is a good comedy picture.

"FUN ON THE U. S. SHIP VERMONT" (Solax), November 29.—A pleasant, well-photographed picture of Jack Tars having a good time. There's a three-round mill in it.

"THE HAPPY HOBOES HELP" (Nestor), November 27.—A situation, pleasing and amusing, has been carefully handled to get the most fun out of it and makes this a very commendable light comedy. The resisting father was a grocer. The two young people were helped in their elopement by two hoboes. In the first place we see one hobo rob the other of his coat. Then, after a few pretty scenes telling that the grocer objects to his daughter's sweetheart, we see the rector's wife giving one of her husband's old coats to the tramp. In the elopement, this hobo, dressed as a minister, fools the father into thinking that the young people have already been married. They continue on their way and are married by a justice. The tramp who stole the coat in the first scene is met and made to give it up by the tramp with the minister's coat, and this man later is whipped by the grocer. It is an innocent, pleasing and pretty comedy of country life, acceptably acted, conducted and photographed.

"WHEN THE WEST WAS WILD" (Nestor), November 29.—An old-fashioned picture with some very good scenery and what appear to be real Indians in it. The girl goes over a cliff to escape from the Indians, but finds the rope too short. She holds by one hand while she fires back at them with her pistol. Some punchers see her and come to the rescue. It is a scene to make the gallery roar with enthusiasm. When the picture is done there are plenty of "good" Indians in it. It is a good, old Western melodrama.

"A WESTERN FEUD" (Nestor), December 2.—The feud came out of a horse deal, which seems very probable. The two young people, who are always to be found in this story, refuse to take part in the quarrel and elope. The two fathers, still boiling with rage, follow. There is some very fast riding shown. The ending of the quarrel is conducted freshly and is acceptable. It is a pleasing picture.

"MUTT AND JEFF'S GREAT SCHEME" (Nestor).—This short picture is on the same reel with the above. It is a bit more dramatic than many of this series have been and there are some laughs in it. Jeff is taken for a detective and the saloonkeeper sends him out a ten. When Mutt hears of it, he, too, will get some easy money. It's amusing to watch the results.

"LOVE HEEDS NOT SHOWERS" (Majestic), December 3.—The reviewer would like to give the argument of this picture, or at least tell what it is all about, but although he watched it with the closest attention he could not make it out. It has some pretty pictures. There is one instant when "Little Mary" stood close to the camera and we saw a very good portrait of this very popular player. But "Little Mary" can not make a picture go with so poor a scenario as this behind it.

"THE ANGEL OF PARADISE RANCH" (American).—It doesn't take many scenes to reveal the situation in this Western love story. The ranchman's punchers are systematically robbing him. He has a pretty daughter. The leading man applies to him for a job and is refused. The rancher's foreman gives him a job—it is to misbrand the rancher's cattle. The girl finds him at the work and arrests him. He tells her that his sick mother is starving and that he could get no work and she verifies this and is sympathetic. Under her helping care, the mother recovers. Later, the man finds gold. The rancher has become poor and the man repays the girl for her kindness. The picture is well designed. Its weakness lies, perhaps, in a certain sentimentality, especially in its starving mother episode, but some like this sort of thing. It is well acted, of course.

"A REVOLUTIONARY ROMANCE" (Solax), December 1.—The story of this film is very interesting and, at its climax, very exciting. It is not wholly clear and not wholly reasonable; but, if one watches closely he can follow the main thread. The hero is a British spy whose sweetheart before the Revolution, had been a patriotic American girl. With papers giving valuable information about the patriotic forces, he arrives at the inne, owned by the girl's father. He is recognized as a spy. The girl helps him to escape, but demands that he surrender the papers. It is acted with more camera consciousness than usual nowadays. Some of the settings also are not very wisely chosen, but for the most part serve very well. The costumes and a part of the acting are very commendable.

"THE TAILOR WANTS TO BE PAID" (Itala).—A tumble-chase farce. There is freshness in its incidences, and it has some clever things.

"THE KING OF NOOSE THROWERS" (Itala).—He occupied rooms in Paris and had been reading too much "Western" literature. He thought he was a great roper. This is mostly a throw and tumble farce; yet he managed to rope a gang of thieves for the police. There is some fun in it.

"THE [illegible]" ([illegible]), November [illegible]—[illegible] effectively acted tragic meeting of two [illegible] struggles with her husband for a revolver, which is discharged. [illegible] dead, the good boy is put [illegible] girl is arrested, but on [illegible] of her actions [illegible]. The success largely [illegible] girl, when the first time [illegible] and discards [illegible] she runs to him. [illegible] husband [illegible] the door is standing [illegible]. The picture is pretty [illegible] it is told [illegible] of her dramatic [illegible]. The final scene, [illegible] the glow from [illegible] and, looking [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"KEEPING MABEL HOME" (Majestic).

Another clever comedy is to be scored to the credit of the Majestic Company. "Keeping Mabel Home" is the title and it gives the Majestic an opportunity to introduce its new stars, Miss Mabel Trunnelle and Herbert Prior, former stars of the Edison stock company, who have but recently joined the Majestic forces. Mabel is the pretty daughter of an aspiring papa and mamma, who are anxious to form an alliance with the nobility. Mabel is in love with a handsome young fellow of the home town, but neither of her parents will listen to the match. Mabel is a bit curious to know what a real duke is like and falls into a plan formed by mamma's sister abroad that she shall go to England and meet a lord or two, so she treats her lover a bit coldly upon his latest visit.

The lover decides that something must be done to prevent this trip and so frames up something for papa and mamma. They get a cablegram in due time announcing that their butler is none other than the famous Lord Sillon in disguise and requesting papa to give him 1,000 pounds on account. Papa is duly impressed and advises the noble duke that his identity has been revealed and invites him to a place in the bosom of his family.

Scene from "Keeping Mabel Home" (Majestic).

Now, the butler has been making love to the maid, but when he discovers his new position in life, he gives her the cold shoulder and joins the family upstairs. The presence of a real duke in the house leads papa and mamma to give up their plans to send Mabel abroad and she is introduced to the new duke at home. But Mabel does not warm up to the plan. When the Duke sits at table with the family his manners are so crude that Mabel deserts the table in disgust. Her lover has just come in and she tells her troubles to him.

Later, following instructions, the duke proposes marriage to Mabel, who does not consider his offer seriously, but turns it off with a suggestion that they take an auto ride. While the duke is getting ready she gets Jack on the phone and warns him to be on the lookout. While on the ride Mabel manages to throw off the duke's cap, and while he goes after it, she takes Jack in at the appointed place. Into the car and away they go, leaving the duke behind to get back as best he can, while she and Jack hasten to the nearest minister and get married.

The duke gets home and explains what happened to him just as Mabel and her new husband arrive. On their heels comes another cablegram for papa which tells him that it is all a mistake; that the butler is not the duke. Upon receipt of this information papa chases the duke down stairs and there is a reconciliation between papa and mamma and the young folks. Another reconciliation takes place downstairs when the maid forgives the butler and falls into his embrace.

There is a lot of fun in this picture. Mr. Prior and Miss Trunnelle never appeared to better advantage, and they are well supported by the other members of the company. The photography is sharp and the picture steady throughout.

"THE CLIFF DWELLERS" (Edison).

Here is a rather remarkable picture story, developed by the Edison players. The Cliff Dwellers were prehistoric people of whom we know but little, therefore, when it comes to portraying their customs and emotions the producer is treading upon unfamiliar ground; yet, he has in his favor the fact that he knows as much about that primitive people as anyone and that his interpretation is, if reasonable, as likely to be correct as any other. Working upon this theory the Edison Company despatched several members of its stock company to the Cliff Dwellers Village, Manitou, Col., and will soon release a picture under the above title.

Scene from "Cliff Dwellers" (Edison).

To our way of thinking the best part of this subject is the views given of the cliff dwellings of an extinct people. These scenes are peculiar to America, for nowhere else in the world has been found anything similar. Some interest is added by the presence of the skin-clad natives as portrayed by the Edison players, giving life and color to the otherwise barren and deserted scene. But the glimpses given of the former home of a race that has disappeared form a most interesting picture.

In this frame the Edison players have set a primitive love tragedy. Two stalwart savages seek to possess the same woman. One is favored by the dusky beauty while the other, by means of presents, wins the approval of her family.

Nevertheless, the woman refuses to accept him, so, in savage manner, he drives her before him into the wilderness.

When the accepted lover returns to find his sweetheart missing, his rage is great. A search is instituted and he discovers his rival and the woman in one of the wild recesses of the mountain. A fight between the men at once occurs and while they are struggling upon the edge of a precipice, with imminent danger of going over the brink, the woman decides the contest by driving an arrow into the heart of the man she scorns.

Days after, the body is found upon the banks of the river and the favored lover is charged with murder. He denies the charge, but refuses to confess his knowledge of the deed and is put to torture. Realizing what is happening to her lover, the woman rushes past the guards before the council chamber and appears before the council where she confesses to the crime. For this she is sentenced to be tied in a canoe and sent over the great falls. If the Great Spirit permits her to come out alive she is to be set free. We see her tied to the canoe and the little craft is shown going over the brink. The lover is at hand when the frail craft comes to the surface after its frightful plunge and is seen swimming ashore with the girl. The picture closes upon the lovers as they kneel to give thanks to the Spirit of the Waters for the safety of the woman.

The subject is handled in a most dignified manner and is one that will be received with interest.

WHO RIDER HAGGARD IS.

The announcement by the Thanhouser Company of the presentation of Rider Haggard's "She," in two reels, brings attention to the wonderful mind that created this mystifying character. Synonymous with the Thanhouser announcement is one in the New York Times of still another book from this unusual veteran.

H. Rider Haggard wrote "She" a quarter of a century ago. Active as when in the late eighties he conceived "She," Haggard devotes himself to his writings, his flowers and his crops. The vigorous action of "She" and his early romances may be explained by the fact that among his many activities he was a good soldier, having been lieutenant and adjutant of the Scene from "She" (Thanhouser).

Pretoria Horse in 1879, while two years before, with Col. Brooke, R. E., he formally hoisted the British flag over the South African Republic at Pretoria, on the Queen's birthday. In addition to his military achievements, Adjt. Haggard has been on many committees, including one on investigating agriculture, member and Chairman of Reclamation and Unemployed Labor Committee of the Royal Commission on Coast Erosion and Afforestation, in England, and Salvation Army Settlements in our United States. His books are very numerous, a few of the better known being "King Solomon's Mines," "Allen Quartermain," "Cleopatra," "People of the Mist," "Heart of the World," and with Andrew Lang, "The World's Desire. He is also a member of the British bar.

The two-reel "She" is released Tuesday, Dec. 26, as a holiday feature.

NEW SCREEN ON THE MARKET.

The Inventors' Specialty Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, is a new concern with ample capital, incorporated, and with offices at 401 Ashland Block. This firm is offering to the trade a new projection screen claimed to be of decided merit and constructed along entirely new lines. We refer to their full-page advertisement in other part of the paper.

"TONY AND THE STORK" (Imp).

In "Tony and the Stork" King Baggot is furnished with a splendid role in which to prove his histrionic ability in the way of interpreting the silent drama. It is a bit of character work that shows his versatility also, and in the character he is pleasing. Tony, a young married Italian, is out of employment just at a time when he needs money. An important household event is expected and he is in despair. He refuses to obtain work to no avail. He speaks imperfect English and his curious garb and manner do not impress employers in his favor. At last he is taken on as a member of a railroad construction crew and hastens home to tell his good wife the news. She is overjoyed and then saddened, for the work will take him out of town. Tony packs a few belongings and goes with the gang.

Scene from "Tony and the Stork" (Imp).

A month elapses and then he receives a letter telling him he is a father, his wife being an inmate of a hospital. He hastens home after drawing his pay and is all expectation. He sets out for the hospital after buying a baby carriage and other toys to gladden the heart of his wife and child. Arriving at the hospital he makes inquiry, gives his name only to be told that his wife has died during an operation. He is led to a sheeted figure wild in his grief. The covering is removed and he shouts with joy. It is not the body of his wife, a confusion in names being responsible for the mistake. He finds his wife, strong and well and is further surprised and delighted to be informed that he is the father of twins. Tony starts out to exchange his go-cart for one of larger carrying capacity.

SPECIAL POSTERS FOR LICENSED FEATURES.

The Exhibitors' Advertising and Specialty Company, of 105 East 14th Street, New York, are publishing special posters for Licensed feature subjects. These posters are in four colors and in three and eight-sheet sizes, especially suited for special billing. Another special poster designed by this firm is a series of one sheets featuring the particular stars for the photoplay. This feature has met with considerable success and promises to become popular among the exhibitors.

DRAMATIC AUTHORS' ASSOCIATION.

An association of dramatic authors has been formed in St. Louis, Mo., for the purpose of producing dramatic works adapted exclusively for the motion picture stage.

"ART VERSUS MUSIC" (Lubin).

Few photoplays have the strong and sustained love interest that is found in "Art vs. Music," soon to be released by the Lubin Company. The plot is simple and so straightforward that it can be followed without the slightest difficulty and it is not crowded with inconsequential characters.

Ethel Vernon and John Whittler were devoted respectively to music and art. They were also very sincerely devoted to each other until the necessity arose for each to express an honest opinion of the other's work. Though Ethel was convinced that his paintings were "punk" and, though John was positive that Ethel's heart was better than it's weight in radium, he tried to point out to her that her musical compositions were rubbish. Result: a quarrel. Further result: the departure of both—separately—for the city, where they took studios.

One day while John was trying to paint he was disturbed by an awful piano clatter in the next room. He hammered on the wall. Ethel, for it was she, determined to give the "unfeeling brute" her opinion of him. Their surprise is easily imagined when they found themselves in such proximity. Gradually they again renewed interest in each other, though both tried to conceal anything but the coldest politeness. Gradually pity sprang up in their hearts. Ethel fervently wished that John had the genius of a Raphael and John wished that Ethel could be proclaimed a feminine Beethoven.

Scene from "Art versus Music."

One day Ethel called on an art dealer and persuaded him to buy the picture that John considered his masterpiece and on the same day John called at a music dealer's and induced him to buy some of Ethel's compositions.

All might have gone well but the conscientious art dealer nearly had a fit when he saw John's painting and the man of music said some very wicked words when he saw what Ethel had perpetuated. Both the dealers hurried to call on the authors of these art and music atrocities. Down went the hastily reared air castles of fame. But at the very moment when these castles were demolished a still larger castle of love rose from their ruins. John and Ethel were united in a most affecting love scene.

AMERICA'S FEATURE FILM COMPANY.

A new film manufacturing company has been organized in Chicago, with offices in room 403, Schiller Building. The name of the new organization is America's Feature Film Company. The principal of this enterprise is E. J. Eichenlaub, of Chicago. At present the new company intends to produce feature films exclusively, which will all be franchised on the state-rights plan.

The first production of the new company is now on the market, and promises to be one that will appeal to the public strongly. The title of the new picture is "Twenty Years in Sing Sing," and is said to be a decided novelty in moving pictures. The production is in three reels and the producers state that they have been very careful to see that interest never lags throughout the picture. Part of the picture was made in a picturesque section of the United States, in a wild and mountainous region. Other scenes were taken upon the grounds of a typical country fair, of the type known fifty years ago, when the races were made with the horses hitched to old-fashioned high-wheeled sulkies.

The great feature of the films, it is thought, lies in the scenes showing actual life in the famous penitentiary, where men are slaving day in and day out, as expiation for their violation of the laws. In the prison scenes is shown a most daring and sensational escape.

A fine line of advertising has been prepared for this feature film and nothing has been left undone by the company to make their first subject a success, it is said.

Calendar of Independent Releases.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 4th, 1911.

AMERICAN—The Angel of Paradise Ranch (Dr.)....1000
CHAMPION—Yankee Doodle (Juvenile) .....
CHAMPION—Our Navy (Naval) 950
COMET—Billy's Letter (Comedy) 1000
IMP—The Dumb Messenger (Dramatic) 1000
NESTOR—Just Two Little Girls (Dramatic) .....

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 5th, 1911.

BISON—The Empty Tepee (Indian Drama) .....
ECLAIR—In Humanity's Cause (Am. Dr.) .....
POWERS—The Little Thief (Com. Dr.) .....
POWERS—The Secret Order of Horns (Com.) .....
THANHOUSER—The Newsy and the Tramp (C. Dr.).

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 6th, 1911.

AMBROSIO—Jorio's Daughter (Dr.) .....
CHAMPION—The Indian Fortune Teller (Dr.) 950
NESTOR—Struck Gold (Dr.) .....
RELIANCE—The Turn of the Wheel (Dr.) .....
SOLAX—Baby's Choice (Com.) .....
SOLAX—The Paper Making Industry (Indus.) .....

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 7th, 1911.

AMERICAN—The Smoke of the Forty-Five (Dr.)....1000
ECLAIR—There Fell a Flower (Com.) 660
ECLAIR—Manners and Traditions of Piedmont (Edu.) 660
IMP—Tony and the Stork (Dr.) 1000
REX—The Measure of a Man (Dr.) .....

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 8th, 1911.

BISON—A Range Romance (West. Dr.) .....
COMET—The Dead Canary (Dr.) 1000
LUX—The Man in the Auto (Dr.) 650
LUX—The Adventures of an Amateur Hypnotist (Com.) 350
SOLAX—The Little Shoe (Dr.) .....
THANHOUSER—Brother Bob's Baby (Com.) .....

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9th, 1911.

GREAT NORTHERN—Buttons and Hooks (Com.) ...
GREAT NORTHERN—Winter in Switzerland (Scenic)
ITALA—(Title not given) .....
IMP—Her Birthday (Com. Dr.) 750
IMP—Columbia Interscholastic Chase (Athletic) 350
NESTOR—Desperate Desmond Abducts Rosamond (Com. Dr.) .....
POWERS—Two Men and a Girl (Dr.) .....
RELIANCE—The Turnstile (Dr.) .....
REPUBLIC—The Savannah Auto Races (Topical) (Released Dec. 5 by permission of Sales Co.) .....

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 10th, 1911.

MAJESTIC—Keeping Mabel Home (Com.) .....

CHAMPION'S MOTHER GOOSE SERIES.

One of the novelties of motion picture production is the "Mother Goose" series now being released by the Champion Film Company, of New York, to which reference has been made in these columns. The latest production in this series is a curious fantasy that will especially interest the kiddies. Two mothers and their children are spending a pleasant afternoon together when, for the entertainment of the little ones, the oft-repeated stories of "Mother Goose" come into play. The film maker has conjured up "Mother Goose" herself with her fabled goose, who joins in the play. Uncle Sam comes on the scene, followed by General Grant, Stonewall Jackson, General Lee and, finally, Abe Lincoln. By this time all the little kiddies in town have joined the procession and there is great merrymaking. Then the great personages fade away from the picture, and even "Mother Goose" says goodbye, leaving only the kiddies and their tired mothers.

To complete the reel a view of the United States warships coming up the North River is given, with Uncle Sam viewing them from a promontory of the Palisades. It is all very interesting and quite creditable to the Champion Company.

"THE THREE BEARS" (Essanay).

The second of the Essanay Company's fairy series is the old familiar one of Little Curly Locks and the Three Bears. Curly Locks, as she is called in this picture, is the ever delightful Miss Ella Hall, of the Essanay company, who really became known and loved as Little Hiram Hood in the first of the Essanay series. There are the three bears, the Great Big Bear, the Middling Sized Bear, and the Teeny Tiny Bear, and the antics of the last named are sure to cause shouts of good laughter for adults as well as the children.

The story tells of the three bears arising one morning to eat their porridge, but finding it too hot decide to walk in the woods, in which their cottage is hidden, to return later when it is cool. They leave the house and are gone but a few minutes when Curly Locks, romping through the woods, spys the cottage. She enters, tries all of the porridge and all of the chairs and finally eats the Teeny Tiny Bear's porridge and also breaks out the bottom of his chair. Becoming sleepy, she goes into the adjoining bed chamber, where are three beds, tries all, and finally cuddles down in the Little Bear's bed.

Scene from "The Three Bears" (Essanay).

When she is asleep the bears return and soon discover that something is amiss. It is the Teeny Tiny Bear who finds that his porridge is all gone and that his chair has been broken. The bears then start to search the house and finally enter the bed chamber, where the Teeny Tiny Bear finds Little Curly Locks cuddled up in his bed. His cries awaken the little girl, who frightenedly runs out of the room and leaps out of the window. The bears pursue and when Curly Locks finally drops exhausted the mother bear pounces on her and is about to eat her up—when she wakes up and finds that it has been nothing but a dream. "The Three Bears" is a complete reel and will be released at an early date.

IT IS "SANTA CLAUS AND THE CLUBMAN."

In reviewing an Edison picture last week a lapse of memory on the part of the reviewer led The World to refer to the picture as "The Clubman's Christmas." While the writer may have had a personal preference for the title used, the fact remains that the correct title is "Santa Claus and the Clubman." Our readers are requested to observe the correction.

"THE MISSION FATHER" (Melies).

Developed among the mountains of Southern California a part of the country that is always glad to the heart-lover of Nature and of a climate that compares with Southern France, the Melies scenic artist naturally appeared to be productive of the scenic and picturesque. Almost all the work of the Melies company is done out of doors so to speak, in a sense, as it reserves an accurate idea of a part of the world that is for ever famous. Further in Southern California are the ancient monasteries which are the landscape and of not surprising that the sentiment and historical interest attached to these appears from time to time in the pictures. A case in point is "The Mission Father," the Melies release of December 21st. With beautiful scenic effects is woven a touching story of the nobility of character and the victory of one of the old monks a devotion that costs him his life.

Don Hernando is a rich landowner and a cruel man. One day he is beating a slave unmercifully for some trivial offense when Padre Ignatio interferes and saves the slave, but is roughly handled by the Don. Shortly afterwards Don Hernando is stricken with a dangerous and infectious disease and is deserted by everyone, even his family, but the slave whom he mistreated tries to minister to him. The Don's wife sends for the Padre and the grateful slave tries to prevent his benefactor from risking his life, but the Padre brings the Don into the house and nurses him through the illness. As the Don regains his health, the Padre is stricken with the disease and dies attended only by the slave.

Scene from "The Mission Father" (Melies).

At the burial of the Padre, which introduces some very impressive scenes, the slave steals up behind the Don with the intention of killing him because of the loss of the Padre, but just as he is about to strike the blow he overhears the Don lamenting that he should have been the unwilling cause of the tragedy, and the slave relents and the two forgive each other. As they follow the funeral party through the door of the monastery, the slave bearing the Padre's hat, we are given a beautiful illustration of the fact that "one touch of Nature makes the whole world kin."

"The Mission Father" can hardly be classed among the notable films, but it is a good example of the earnest effort that is now being made by the manufacturers to supply mental pabulum with their pictures as well as mere action and scenery.

SERIOUS MISHAP OF PICTURE ACTRESS.

Edna Fisher Thrown From Top of Old Coach and May Die.

San Francisco, November 25.—A moving picture camera in Marion County, Cal., on November 25 caught what is likely to be a real tragedy. Miss Edna Fisher, of the Essanay Company, lies in a hospital with her skull fractured and probably dying. She was riding on the top of an old Forty-niner rickety stagecoach. Cowboys dashed out of a roadhouse and flourishing their revolvers fired shots into the air in real old California style.

The play read that the horses should get excited by the shots and dash away with the stagecoach and the unfortunate girl alone on top of the coach. Then she was to be rescued. The horses ran away and at a sharp turn in the road the coach overturned and Miss Fisher was thrown on her head.

INQUIRIES

Correspondents are advised that no attention will be paid inquiries which do not give the name and address of the writers. For the purpose of reply, initials or noms de plume may be used.

Inquiry as to the private affairs of photoplayers will not be answered. This includes the question as to whether or not they are married.

No inquiries of a general nature will hereafter be answered by mail and only in special cases when a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Many correspondents ask the same question and we have initiated this department to save our own time and yet help out our readers when we can.

MRS. S. J. G.—Guy Coombs has returned to the dramatic stage so far as we know, but we cannot undertake to follow the players over into the dramatic field. He is not connected with any picture company that we know of.

G. M. D.—Most of the Vitagraph players have their headquarters in the studio in Brooklyn, taking to the field as the productions require. There is a company with a studio in Los Angeles producing Western plays, but most of the established favorites are with the home company. We don't know whether they all live in Brooklyn or whether some live in New York, and life is too short to compile a list of names. (2) Mr. Blackwell and Miss Joyce are still members of the Kalem stock companies, and are likely to continue to be. (3) Another demand for a roster of a company, this time the Essanay Western company. G. M. D. is advised that answers are given at retail and not in wholesale quantities.

MABEL E. H.—Glad you're much obliged for "all those answers," but you've not got Mona Darkfeather right yet. She is now listed as a member of the Selig Western forces. She has played in several recent releases. We give Walter Miller up.

HARRY MYERS.—The three feet of combination boy actor and telephone operator who signs himself "Bennie from Lubinville," advises us that Harry Myers is to remain with the Lubin company, and asks a correction. Inasmuch as Mr. Myers confirms the statement, the announcement is made that he will continue to be a Lubin player. But as this determination was not arrived at until after the publication of the answer in question, we shall not regard it as a correction, but as an amended fact. We hope that Mr. Ziedman will rest content with this. If Bennie wants to get useful he can send over a list of the first names of the new people.

O.—Who queries the Essanay company as to the identity of Jack in that company's "Pals," is informed that the player is G. M. Anderson.

E. J.—The player whose portrait you have marked is Francis Bushman.

K. T., T. M.—Two questions on the same letter head as to the identity of the same player in the same part may be a coincidence, but it looks a little like presswork. The part was played by Miss Weber.

The Aunt and Child in "By Registered Mail" (Imp) were Mrs. August Balfour (Sue Balfour) and Edith Holdeman.

A FAN.—Mrs. Clark, in "Colleen Bawn," is the mother of Jack J. Clark. (2) The Vitagraph company advises us that the photoplay you desire to locate is "Through the Darkness." Maurice Costello had the lead. When you want to decide whether it is Mr. Costello or Leo Delaney playing a part look for the dimple. If it's there it's Mr. Costello, and the deeper the dimple the more certain you may be.

Mrs. M. B.—Romain Fielding played both of the parts you mention. He has been with the Lubin company about three months. (4) We do not know the details of his previous dramatic career. This question is out of our line. (5) Herbert Prior may be addressed in care of the Majestic Motion Picture Company, 145 West 45th Street, New York City. (6) In a strict sense there is no "heavy" role in "The Mission Waif." The Melies company suggests that you mean William Clifford, the leading man of the company, who played the part of the bandit. He was a hero, not a heavy, but this seems to cover your question.

H. T. M.—Guy Oliver, formerly with Lubin, is now with the Eclair company.

FRANK C.—King Baggot and Lucile Young were respectively the husband and wife in the Imp's "The Wife's Awakening." (2) The Pathe question is held over, waiting the reply of that company.

CLARENCE L.—The Selig question has not been answered, but Miss Hawley was the artist in Lubin's "Her Inspiration." Her first name is given as Omeeta, but this seems liable to correction.

JAMES K.—The difference between a double exposure and double printing is that in the first instance the film is run through the camera twice and in the latter it is run through the printing machine twice. It is too intricate a subject to be fully treated in this department.

MISS V. K.—We do not know of any company likely to purchase a series of temperance scenarios. You might place one or two well written stories with a temperance lesson with almost any company, but the series is a very different matter.

V. E. B.—While the stories of fancy salaries paid photoplayers are not always correct, the statement that no one ever gets more than $100 is not in accordance with facts.

MISS C. H.—Happy Jack in Selig's "The Pony Express" was T. J. Carrigan. (2) Lottie Pickford was the girl in the Vitagraph's "Who's Who."

JACK.—The reason that you see so few chase pictures now is that most producers regard the chase as old fashioned. They may be as popular as ever with audiences, but the audiences do not make the pictures.

HARRY T.—Films are not printed by sunlight, but by electricity, generally a Nernst lamp. The negative and a strip of positive film are passed through a mechanism not unlike a projection machine head, but enclosed in a light tight cabinet. The film does not run through continuously, but is taken down one picture at a time, a shutter making an exposure only when the film is at rest. The operation is conducted in a room with only ruby light, that the film may be handled freely; the light being also encased in a light tight box. The exposure illumination is constant, the light being modified to suit the particular negative by means of one or more sheets of ground glass or the moving of the light closer to or further away from the shutter opening. No form of printing frame, as you understand it, is employed.

JENNIE.—We do not believe that press notices from your home town paper would help you qualify for a photoplay stock company. There is just a faint suspicion that the critic may be prejudiced.

CARL G.—We do not know who "the very pretty girl of the Vitagraph company" is. They have a lot of very pretty girls, but how are we to tell which particular one you mean? Tell us some of the films you've seen her play in and we'll try to get the name for you. Not knowing who she is, we cannot say if she is as good looking out of a picture as in it. It does not always follow that the prettiest girl in the film is the prettiest girl that comes through the studio gate, but were we a stage door Johnny we would be hanging around the Elm Avenue elevated station about time the Vitagraphers are going home.

Z. Y. Z.—(That's a little better than the usual X. Y. Z.). The story that motion picture producers wait for windy days to take outdoor pictures that the breeze may "give life" to the scene is a perennial yarn that never seems to grow old. It has even been copied into the Edison kinetogram, but that doesn't make it so. Many pictures are taken in strong winds and sometimes the waving foliage and flapping skirts help the scene, but the producer does not wait for a windy day. He goes out whenever there is a sun and a call for "outside stuff" whether there blows a gale, a zephyr or no wind at all.

S. G. R.—The printed "story of the film" and the synopsis you send are very similar, but you offer no convincing evidence that your plot was appropriated. On the other hand we have had brought to our notice in the past two weeks two instances of duplication of ideas where there existed not the slightest question as to the situation, as the company had already made the subject from one script before the second came in. In nine cases out of ten these alleged thefts of ideas are not thefts at all. Set it down to hard luck and try something else.

E. P. T.—The best way to get what you want quickly is to use our advertising columns. This is not one of the advertising columns.

GLADYS.—We do not know whether G. M. Anderson uses hair restorer or wears a toupee, and we are not going to ask him. Call the bet off or write and ask him yourself.

BUD.—Certainly you can send a story to the same editor twice, but it will be best to explain that you have changed the layout of the story that he may not think you've sent the old version in. Rejection by one company does not spoil your chances with another. You can't always hit the editorial fancy no matter how good your story may be. You can save a lot of postage stamps by studying the "Stories of the Films" for pointers on what the various companies seem to prefer.

SCENARIOS WANTED

THE ECLAIR FILM COMPANY will positively pay the very HIGHEST PRICES for Scenarios that are FIRST CLASS in every respect. No Cowboy or Wild West Stories will be considered, but MAXIMUM PRICES are offered for Superior DRAMAS and COMEDIES which afford opportunities for Refined Dramatic Expression. Adaptations from famous Authors acceptable. Send in Your BEST at once. Address, New York Office, 31 East 27th St., New York.

NEW FIELD
BIG MONEY
EASY WORK

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, and pays well. We teach you by mail how to write and sell your plots. Many successful graduates.

DEMAND UNLIMITED. FULL DETAILS FREE.

ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE SCHOOLS
911 Chicago Opera House Building CHICAGO

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES & LANTERNS

BRIGHTER THAN CALCIUM.

OZO-CARBI LIGHT PATENTED

NO SATURATOR- OPENS NEW FIELDS FOR MOVING PICTURES.

SPECIAL SLIDES TO ORDER ALSO CARRY SLIDES ON ALL SUBJECTS.
Moore Hubbell & Co.
34 N. Franklin St. Chicago Ill Send for Catalogue.

ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD

Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper

INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON, (POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

Song Slide Releases.

A. L. Simpson, Inc.

"I'm Going to Take the Train for Home, Sweet Home"—Pub. by Shapiro Music Pub. Co.
"Trifling"—Pub. by Song Writers' Music Pub. Co.
"My Sweet Pal"—Pub. by Song Writers' Music Pub. Co.
"Dear Old Sally"—Pub. by Kendis & Paley.
"The Tale That the Roses Told"—Pub. by F. B. Haviland.

Levi Co.

"They Don't Speak to Each Other Now"—Pub. by Shapiro Music Pub. Co.
"Kiss Me Again"—Pub. by Shapiro Music Pub. Co.
"Go Hide Your Face in the Corner; I'm Ashamed of You"—Pub. by Shapiro Music Pub. Co.

Excelsior Slide Co.

"Roll a Little Pill for Me"—Pub. by M. Witmark & Sons.
"Light Up Your Face with a Smile"—Pub. by Gus Edwards Company.
"Smile Awhile"—Pub. by Head Music Pub. Co.
"Snowtime, Deary"—Pub. by Blood-Koehler Co.

DeWitt C. Wheeler.

"That Haunting Melody"—Pub. by Jerome & Schwartz Pub. Co.
"Cat Wise"—Pub. by Harry Dale Music Co.
"That's How I Want to Be Loved"—Pub. by Thos. Music Co.
"Steeple Jack"—Pub. by M. Witmark & Sons.
"When I Carved Your Name on the Old Oak Tree"—Pub. by M. Witmark & Sons.
"Come Kiss the Honey Moon Darling"—Pub. by M. Witmark & Sons.

Niagara Slide Company.

"If I Knew"—Pub. by Burdick.
"Knight of the Road"—Pub. by Burdick.

Scott & Van Altena.

"Treasures of the World Are Mine"—Pub. by J. W. Stern.
"That's Some Honey Moon"—Pub. by Bostonian Pub. Co.
"A Kiss on My Finger Is Worth Two on the Floor"—Pub. by F. B. Haviland.
"In Dear Old Ireland Where the River Kenmare Flows"—Pub. by H. Rossiter.
"Nobody Bothers About Me."
"Chicken Rag"—Pub. by J. F. Helf.
"Take Me Back to My Old Home Town"—Pub. by Longbake & Edwards.

Simpson's Celebrated Slides
THE BEST MADE
A. L. SIMPSON, Inc.
113 W. 132nd St., New York

When ready to order ADV. SLIDES, write us. Our 14 years' experience on this subject is at your disposal.
Excelsior Slide Co.
61 W. 14th St. New York, N. Y.

SPECIAL SALE
500 Sets of Song Slides from One Dollar per Set and up.
Write today.
United Slide Adv. Co.
61 W. 14th Street, New York, N.Y.

Spiegel Motion Slide
For Announcement Slides

For Advertising Slides
The Subject Moves
A regular Stereopticon Slide with Motion Picture effect. Brings out the action in fullest detail.
Because of its attractive and entertaining features to the audience, theatre managers who have heretofore refused to even consider running an advertising slide in their theatre, are now not only willing, but anxious to run Spiegel Motion Advertising Slides as well as Motion Announcement Slides.
A very complete list of new and original subjects. The cost is comparatively small. A postal will bring you our catalogue and complete information.
AMERICAN MOTION SLIDE CO.
611 First National Bank Bldg., Dept. W. CHICAGO

The Slides that Please the Eyes
Scott & Van Altena
Special Slides for Scientific Purposes
59 Pearl Street New York City

FREE SLIDE
With every order, mentioning this advertisement, we will send you any five announcement slides, for $1.10, including FREE a Merry Christmas slide as a present. We make beautiful advertising slides, from 50¢ ea. up. We have just released two beautiful sets of song slides. "It pays to remember Niagara Slide Co.," so make inquiry before you buy. Catalog free. Satisfaction or money back is our strong point.
NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY, Lockport, New York

Always Remember
WHEN deciding to use an exclusive Song Slide Service, that we are absolutely neutral, neither controlled by the Licensed or Independent organizations. Write for our new catalogue and prices. :: :: :: :: :: ::
CHICAGO SONG SLIDE EXCHANGE
N.E. Cor. Monroe St. & Wabash Ave., Dept. 1. Chicago, Ill.

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 4th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—Why He Gave Up (Com.) .....
BIOGRAPH—Abe Gets Even with Father (Com.) .....
KALEM—Arrah-Na-Pogue (3 reels) (Dr.) 3000
LUBIN—A Head for Business (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 49 (Topical) 1000
SELIG—A Diamond in the Rough (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Saving the Special (Dramatic) 1000

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 5th, 1911.

EDISON—The Awakening of John Bond (Dramatic).1000
ESSANAY—The Madman (Dramatic) 1000
GAUMONT—Jimmie Tricks the Landlady (Comedy). 475
GAUMONT—The Challenge (Dramatic) 525
C. G. P. C.—The Secret of the Confessional (Dramatic). 000
SELIG—A Frontier Girl's Courage (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Hypnotist (Comedy) .....
VITAGRAPH—A Slight Mistake (Comedy) 1000

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 6th, 1911.

EDISON—John Brown's Heir (Comedy) 1000
ECLIPSE—The Luckless Banker (Dramatic) 1002
PATHE—Hobo Luck (American Comedy) 1000
KALEM—The Long Arm of the Law (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—Sins of the Father (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Black Chasm (Indian Dr.) 1000

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 7th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—The Failure (Dr.) 999
ESSANAY—The Long Strike (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—Love's Labor Lost (Comedy) 1000
MELIES—A Western Girl (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—The Poisoned Arrow (American Drama) .....
C. G. P. C.—French Cuirassier Maneuvers (Military) ....
SELIG—The Maid at the Helm (Dramatic) 1000

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 8th, 1911.

EDISON—The Heart of Nichette (Dramatic).....1000
ESSANAY—Getting Even with Emily (Comedy) ... 630
ESSANAY—Stray Bullets (Comedy) 349
KALEM—Too Much Realism (Comedy) 1000
C. G. P. C.—Eva's Faithful Furniture (Comedy) .....
C. G. P. C.—Gathering and Preparing Cocoanuts in the Philippines (Industrial) .....
SELIG—The Plumber (Comedy) 696
SELIG—A Day with a Circus (Novelty) 400
VITAGRAPH—War (Military Drama) 1000

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9th, 1911.

EDISON—The Daisy Cowboys (Comedy) 990
ESSANAY—A Frontier Doctor (Western Drama) 1000
GAUMONT—Camoens, the Portuguese Shakespeare, Lisbon, 1578 (Historical Drama) 610
GAUMONT—Important Scenes in Paris, France (Sc.).. 320
LUBIN—The Teamster (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Her Little Slipper (American Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—His Wife's Secret (Dramatic) 1000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 11th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—Saved from Himself (Dramatic) 999
KALEM—Molly Pitcher (Historical Drama) 1000
LUBIN—A Girlish Impulse (Comedy-Drama) 1000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 50 (Topical) 1000
SELIG—The Chief's Daughter (Dramatic) 500
SELIG—April Fool (Comedy) 500
VITAGRAPH—One Touch of Nature (Dramatic) ...1000

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 12th, 1911.

EDISON—Buckskin Jack, the Earl of Glenmore (Com.-Dr.) 1000
ESSANAY—The First Man (Comedy).....1000
GAUMONT—Heroism (Dramatic) 610
GAUMONT—Arabian Customs (Industrial) 366
C. G. P. C.—Youth versus Age (Dramatic) 795
C. G. P. C.—Small Trades in Malacca (Edu.) 200
SELIG—A Romance of the Rio Grande (Dr.) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Military Air Scout (Dr.)... 1000

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13th, 1911.

EDISON—An International Heart Breaker (Com.) ... 700
EDISON—Eskimos in Labrador (Edu.) 300
ECLIPSE—The Tragedy of Old Age (Dr.) 798
ECLIPSE—Harbor of Marseilles, France (Scenic) 215
PATHE—The Flower Girl of Las Palmas (Am. Dr.) ... 990
KALEM—Norma from Norway (Dr.) 1000
LUBIN—Mr. and Mrs. Suspicious (Com.) 400
LUBIN—Quick! A Plumber (Com.) 600
VITAGRAPH—The Ventriloquist's Trunk (Com.) 1000

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 14th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—Taking His Medicine (Comedy) 673
BIOGRAPH—Her Pet (Com.) 323
ESSANAY—The Hack & Schmidt Bout (Com.) .....
ESSANAY—A Polished Burglar (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—The Substitute (Dr.) 1000
MELIES—The Better Man (Com.-Dr.) 1000
PATHE—An Episode of the Early Mormon Days (American Drama) 820
PATHE—The Magic Suit Case (Trick) 150
SELIG—George Warrington's Escape (Historical Dr.).1000

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 15th, 1911.

EDISON—Brockton Fair and Horse Show, Brockton, Mass., October 3rd to 6th, 1911 (Topical) 990
ESSANAY—A Goodfellow's Christmas Eve (Dr.)....1000
KALEM—Bill's Flute (W. Dr.) 1000
C. G. P. C.—In the Grip of Alcohol (2 reels) (Dr.) 2000
SELIG—Industries of the South and West (Edu.) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Love at Gloucester Port (Dr.) 1000

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16th, 1911.

EDISON—Stage Struck Lizzie (Com.) 650
EDISON—A Trip from Colorado Springs to Cripple Creek (Scenic) 350
ESSANAY—The Cowboy Coward (W. Dr.) 1000
GAUMONT—A Queen's Treachery, or the Betrayal of Charles VI of France (Hist. Dr.) 1000
LUBIN—When Innocence Was Wise (Com. Dr.) 1000
PATHE—A Mother's Remorse (Am. Dr.) 995
VITAGRAPH—The Sick Man from the East (Dr.)....1000

POSTERS

LARGEST AND MOST COMPLETE STOCK IN THE UNITED STATES

All brand new 4 color Pictorial Lithos. No second hand junk. Vitagraph, 10c. A B C and other makes, 15c.

SPECIAL FEATURE POSTERS — The Life Boat, Heroes of the Mutiny, Blackbeard, Cain and Abel, Arrah na-Pogue, Love at Gloucester Port and all coming features.
8 sheets, 75c. each. Three sheets, 30c. each. One sheet 15c.

BACK NUMBERS — Accumulated on our shelves in the past two years. All Posters over 4 months old, A B C and other makes, 10 cents. Vitagraph, 5 cents.

AMERICA'S POPULAR PHOTO-PLAYERS. COMPLETE SET OF 10 (full sheet size) FOR $2.00 POSTAGE PREPAID
Send money order or N. Y. Draft. No personal checks or C. O. D.

Exhibitors' Advertising & Specialty Co., ARTHUR D. JACOBS, President BEN TITLE, Secy. and Treas. 105 East 14th St., N.Y.

POSTERS

LICENSED Film Stories

ESSANAY.

THE FIRST MAN Dec. 12).—Carl Williams, a rejected suitor, managed to get a show at Miss Marian Crawford who, during the absence of her overbearing father, is obliged to exclude herself from the opposite sex until she is of age. Williams gets the inside and gets a glimpse of the girl. He is soon ousted from the premises by one of the old guard who was guarding the girl. In finding away an accident befalls him. He is brought into the house and locked in a room. Finally he succeeds in getting into a conversation with the girl who tells of her father's will. Williams soon learns that the age for a girl to marry is 18 and not 21, as he supposed and after being told by Marian that she is waiting for the hero for her by the two suits, who cheerfully grant it.

THE HACK AND SCHMIDT BOUT Dec. 14).—Schmidt, the German "wrestling son" arrives in America to meet America's new "white hope" of the mat, Hack. They sign articles for the big match and both go in training. While Hack works conscientiously in his training quarters, Schmidt is over-confident and takes no training at all. The great bout takes place. Hack wins a fall and it looks bad for Hack, until he resorts to a crafty novel scheme which puts the big German on his back.

A POLISHED BURGLAR (Dec. 14).—Jack and Louise love each other, but Louise's proper and dominant object. Jack and a pal, with Louise as the third conspirator, plan to frighten the old people into giving consent. They masquerade as burglars, slip into the house and steal away with all the plate, after making the old man shine Jack's shoes and the mother manicure his nails. Jack then returns with the booty, playing the hero, but the old man notices his polished shoes and the old lady his finger nails, and Jack is forced in turn to shine the old man's shoes.

A GOODFELLOW'S CHRISTMAS EVE (Dec. 15).—James Sawyer, a wealthy bachelor, has had an unfortunate love affair in his youth which has never healed. A man now well in years, he lives a lonely life at his club, completely apart from the rest of his associates. It is Christmas Eve. A number of clubmen are preparing to go out with baskets of food for the poor and they press Sawyer to join them. He sarcastically refuses. On the street, later, Sawyer accompanies them a little ways, when they find an abandoned baby on a doorstep. Sawyer takes it in his arms, and for the first time in years expresses sympathy. He takes the little mite to his home, where it is placed in charge of his old housekeeper, while her employer now thoroughly stirred with the spirit of Christmas, goes gladly forth to join his charitable friends. The evening results in the complete reformation of the rich old bachelor, who finds in relieving his more unfortunate brothers, the true key to all happiness and peace in life.

THE COWBOY COWARD (Dec. 16).—Henry and Steve, two "cowhands on the L.U." ranch, are in love with Katie, their employer's daughter. While she likes Steve the best, she feels she cannot accept him because of his cowardly fear. Cash Wilkins, a cattle rustler, knows Steve's secret he receives a good thrashing and Wilkins, to get even, insults Katie and steals a small revolver that she carries with her. He then sends a note to Katie telling her that it was Steve who took the gun back to steal Henry for it. Henry is afraid of the lady and frightened, puts Steve out so as to avoid the trial but Katie is by no means fooled. Wilkins, Steve looks pityingly at the coward, and taking the note, goes to Wilkin's cabin, and after another thrashing makes Wilkins write a note of apology to Katie and a promise to leave the country forever. Steve gives the note and the girl's gun to Henry and tells him to take them to Katie. The girl means business and Steve, realizing that "two's company and three's a crowd," packs his clothes and leaves.

C. G. P. C.

YOUTH VERSUS AGE (Dec. 12).—A [illegible] the struggle between youth and age, the latter seeking to [illegible] The scene opens [illegible] Mary is [illegible] and [illegible] love, but she withstands them all until Father Age [illegible] the opposite of Mary [illegible] of love and he finds an opportunity to reunite the young couple happy.

IN THE GRIP OF ALCOHOL (2 reels—Dec. 15).—The greatest moral drama ever made [illegible] manufacture. It tends not [illegible] interest. It awakens interest in the [illegible] drop to their ruin. It shows the [illegible] in those unfortunates who have become enslaved to drink. It paints the [illegible] of the downward path in a manner which no one can [illegible] It shows so brutally just the awful [illegible] of the downfall of one of God's creatures through the drink evil. It follows [illegible] eight years of snow drifts for [illegible] relentless misery for his devoted wife, eight years of hardship and deprivation for his little daughter, eight years of self torture and self respect. The attainment of self [illegible] course drink is what it is not necessary to mention [illegible] to say NO. [illegible] supplies the backbone.

MELIES.

THE MISSION FATHER (Dec. 21).—The setting is in old California when it was under the rule of Mexico. Don Hernando is a cruel feudal lord who is arrogant and cruel. Padre Ernesto is a noble priest, greatly beloved by his congregation.

In trying to save Pepe, an Indian slave of Don Hernando's, from being punished by the latter, the Padre is struck and insulted by the Don. He leaves in resentment, however, and later, when the Don is stricken with the dread disease, small pox, it is none other than the Padre himself and Pepe who risk their lives to nurse him back to health.

Scene from "The Mission Father" Melies

But just as Don recovers, the Padre is himself stricken with the disease, to which he succumbs. Pepe is heartbroken, and from that moment swears to avenge himself for the Padre's death by taking the life of the Don.

Pepe brings up the rear of the funeral procession, but instead of entering the Mission, lays in wait for the Don. Don Hernando comes and pauses. Pepe sneaks up behind him and raises high in the air the knife that is to strike the blow. With full force he brings it down, but at that very moment the Don falls upon his knees in prayer, truly repentant of his crimes, and an [illegible] Pepe's arm.

Master and slave are reconciled and lead different lives under "the new light."

GAUMONT.

HEROISM (Dec. 12).—Tom, the younger son, is [illegible] a Frenchman and is quite an important personage in the community, [illegible] his older brother [illegible] from the field of battle.

[illegible] proven himself [illegible]

ARABIAN CUSTOMS (Dec. 12) [illegible]

A QUEEN'S TREACHERY OR THE BETRAYAL OF CHARLES VI OF FRANCE (Dec. 16).—[illegible] of France.

ECLIPSE.

THE TRAGEDY OF OLD AGE (Dec. 13).—[illegible] evening creeps out of the room to look for him. After a long search [illegible] his arms.

Meanwhile, the partner, missing little Jane, start [illegible] search of her. [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] with society, and plans to go back to America to the wild, free life of a cowboy. Lady Eleanor, however, changes his mind, and at the close of the picture we realize that love will teach him his faults and that the manhood of the Western cowboy will win the love of the lady.

ESKIMOS IN LABRADOR (Dec. 13).—We are introduced first to the desolate looking Mission Station at Hopedale, Labrador, and then see the Eskimos in their every-day life. Scenes are then shown with the dogs at work hauling the "cometiks" or sledges. After several views taken on snowy mountain paths we see an Eskimo managing his "kyjak" or canoe.

At the close we are taken into an Eskimo family and see them at their meal. They are a kindly race and theft is very rare. Finally a woman, probably a leader of fashion, is shown in her full dress costume.

AN INTERNATIONAL HEART-BREAKER (Dec. 13).—As soon as Belle Travers drifts into the hallway the night of the German given by Mrs. Vanderheld, the "heart-breaker" is besieged by the male contingent, each of whom clamors for the privilege of at least one dance with her. Belle, being quick-witted, evades them all by promising each one an answer the following day at a given hour.

The summer house in her garden is the rendezvous. The suitors arrive one by one, each under the impression that he is "it" and the others intruders. When Belle appears upon the scene an argument ensues which develops into a small riot, whereupon she turns the garden hose on the turmoiled crowd, which rapidly disperses. The would-be lovers' activity causes Belle to laugh so hysterically that she accidentally turns the hose on herself.

BROCKTON FAIR AND HORSE SHOW (Brockton, Mass., Oct. 3 to 6, 1911 (Dec. 15).—This is one of the most important state fairs held in the country. It lasts four days and comprises all kinds of sports, parades, a dairy show and a horse show probably equal to any held in the United States.

After getting an impression of the vast crowds (including a novel view taken from the Ferris wheel), we are shown the parade for and the reception of Governor Foss, on Friday, Oct. 6. Then, after various horse races, we see the finish of the Marathon from Boston (twenty-three miles away), a sack and potato race, a glimpse of aviation, and, more interesting and exciting still, an old-fashioned firemen's muster—the hand pumping and the struggle for supremacy in forcing a stream the greatest distance through a fire hose.

After that, we are taken through the horse show with its high jumping and the beautiful animals being driven single, tandem and four-in-hand; then through the dairy show, to see the finest breeds of cattle in the world. In one or two close views of enormous prize bulls we feel quite as well satisfied from their attitude that they are on the screen and not in our midst.

STAGE-STRUCK LIZZIE (Dec. 16).—Lizzie Wirts, better known as "Stage-struck Lizzie," is employed as a dish washer in a restaurant where she is discharged for persistently displaying her histrionic powers. On account of a scarcity of servants she has no difficulty in immediately securing another position, this time as cook. Here again she becomes wrapped up in her play book, neglects her duties and almost causes a conflagration. Once more she is discharged. Next we find her employed as a nurse girl taking the children out for an airing where she meets a policeman to whom she confides her undiscovered talent while the children wander away into a nearby coal yard and slide down the banks of coal until they are black from head to feet. It is only natural to surmise Lizzie's immediate dismissal upon her arrival home with the children. Next we see her in the dressing room of a theater in the capacity of maid to an actress. During the performance the stage manager discovers the absence of a lady cast for a minor part and Lizzie is requested to assume the role. She fairly jumps at the offer and quickly dons the wardrobe given her, receives hastily-given instructions and struts fearlessly and boldly upon the stage. When she faces the dazzling footlights and the audience assembled, she suddenly loses all control and succumbs to a severe fit of stage fright. In her frantic efforts to escape she jumps over the footlights and flees in terror up the center aisle of the theater, to the disgust of the stage manager and the delight of the audience.

A TRIP FROM COLORADO SPRINGS TO CRIPPLE CREEK (Dec. 16).—In presenting this wonderful trip from Colorado Springs, the greatest health resort in the world, to Cripple Creek, the greatest gold field in the world, we are shown all the wonders of the Rockies. Eleven thousand feet above the sea level we gaze over the mountain tops and snow-capped peaks into the setting sun.

At first we start up Pikes Peak Avenue, Colorado Springs to the mammoth Antler's Hotel; to the gateway of the Garden of the Gods; the log cabin, the capitol building of the State of Colorado; down to the little village of Manitou nestled away among the hills. And now we are off on the train amid the clang of bells and the sound of whistles and we begin to climb over the short line to the summit.

At last we reach the Valley of Gold, Vindicator Junction, then Gold Field. Yonder is the Silver King mine, the first mine to be discovered in the Cripple Creek District, then there is Blue Bird, Gold Sovereign, and riloy, names that vibrate in the halls of commerce throughout the world. By means of the highest electric railroad in the world we reach the town of Altman, the highest incorporated village on the earth, and look down upon all the other towns.

KALEM.

MOLLY PITCHER (Dec. 11).—Hayes, the gunner, while fighting at the battle of Monmouth, is wounded and his wife takes his place. After the battle the Continentals capture a foraging Hessian. Molly suggests a plan to learn the enemy's strength for General Washington. One of the Continentals is dressed in the uniform of the Hessian and he starts off for the enemy's camp. Before he can reach there, however, the Hessian manages to escape and reaches camp before the Continental, who is promptly arrested on his arrival. Molly, who has followed after the fleeing Hessian, sees her husband's capture, and following at a distance penetrates the enemy's camp. Later on Molly aids him to escape and as a climax to an exciting day the Continentals cover Molly and her husband's retreat and capture the pursuing Hessians.

NORMA FROM NORWAY (Dec. 13).—Valdamar bids his wife, Norma, goodbye in far away Norway and goes to America to seek his fortune. Arriving in America he quickly secures work and a year later we find he has prospered and sends money and a letter to his wife, asking her to come to him. Norma, with her young baby, sets out to join her husband, expecting to meet him on the dock on the arrival of the steamer. A few days before the steamship is expected, Valdamar is seriously hurt and taken to a hospital. Norma arriving in the new country and not finding Valdamar at the pier is in despair. A kindly laborer on the dock takes her to a Norwegian family, where she is given temporary shelter. Her funds becoming exhausted she knows not which way to turn. The lady with whom she is living shows her an advertisement in the newspaper stating that a Mrs. James Mason wishes to adopt a healthy baby to take the place of her own child, which had recently died. For the baby's sake Norma consigns her infant to Mrs. Mason. The same day Valdamar is discharged from the hospital cured. Going to the steamship dock he asks if any one there has seen his wife. The laborer who met her and took her to the Norwegian family tells Valdamar of the circumstance and he goes in search of his wife and baby. Arriving at the poor little house they find Norma's room empty, but as they are about to leave Norma returns home much to the joy of Valdamar, but his new found happiness is short lived when he learns that Norma has given the baby to Mrs. Mason, and they both vow they must have the child back. Their heart-broken appeal to Mrs. Mason has its effect, however, and the child is returned to its happy parents.

BILL'S FLUTE (Dec. 15).—Bill thinks more of playing the flute than he does of working. This angers his father, who orders him to attend to his work or get out. Bill thinking his father unjust decides to leave home. Mounting his horse he rides to a nearby ranch to get a job. Arriving at the ranch house he finds a company of neighbors gathered for a dance, but having no music they are deprived of this pleasure. Bill coming on the scene, however, and offering to play for them, makes their enjoyment complete.

The next morning Bill is given a job and goes to the round-up. While on his way to a distant part of the ranch he is ambushed by a party of Indians and to save his life feigns madness. Dora, the rancher's daughter, out for a ride, discovers Bill's predicament and rides for help. The exciting scenes that follow are cleverly portrayed by a company of capable players.

LUBIN.

A GIRLISH IMPULSE (Dec. 11).—John Stevens, a lawyer, warned his daughter, Gladys, not to associate with John Banks, a suitor for her hand, on account of his desire for drink. Gladys is also loved by William Elliot and one evening Banks became jealous of Elliot and left in anger. Gladys wrote a letter to Banks which appeased him and a few evenings afterwards he called upon her with theater tickets.

While waiting for her in the parlor he kept the butler busy bringing in wine, and when Gladys appeared he was in a drunken state. Mr. Stevens ordered him from the house and he also was discharged from the law firm.

Banks, seeking revenge, paid a visit to Gladys, showing her the note she had written him about Elliot, but he was promptly ejected by the butler. Then Banks wrote an anonymous letter to Elliot, telling him to keep an eye on Gladys, and also wrote to Gladys, saying that she could have the note if she called at his apartments. Thus it happened that Elliot saw his fiancee entering the apartment of Banks. He denounced her. She told him her reason for calling and when Banks handed him the note he laughed and tore it up.

MR. AND MRS. SUSPICIOUS (Dec. 13).—Each suspected the other and one night each determined to disguise and follow the other. Mr. Suspicious dressed in feminine apparel and Mrs. Suspicious donned masculine garments.

While thus on the trail Mrs. Suspicious was held up by highwaymen who, of course, took her for a man. Just at that moment Mr. Suspicious rushed to the rescue and dealt regular White Hope blows right and left in a manner most amazing in a woman. Then he picked up the form of the supposed man and hurried to a nearby café, where stimulant was administered. One of the crowd that had gathered took off the hat of the victim and a stream of beautiful hair fell down. Mr. Suspicious looked in amazement at his wife and at the same time his woman's hat was brushed off. Husband and wife gazed into each other's faces.

Then Mr. Smith picked up his wife in his arms and never stopped until he had arrived at their home, where they asked and received mutual forgiveness.

QUICK! A PLUMBER (Dec. 13).—Mr. Cole was helping to clean house. He was so strenuous in driving a nail to hang a picture that he went through the partition and punctured a water pipe. Mr. Cole ran to the kitchen and after several attempts to block it he rushed for a plumber.

During his excitement at the plumber's shop he picked up a large pipe. With this in his hand he rushed back to the house, knocking down everything and everybody that came in his way. He found the kitchen flooded with water. The cook, knee-deep in the flood, was striving desperately to stop it.

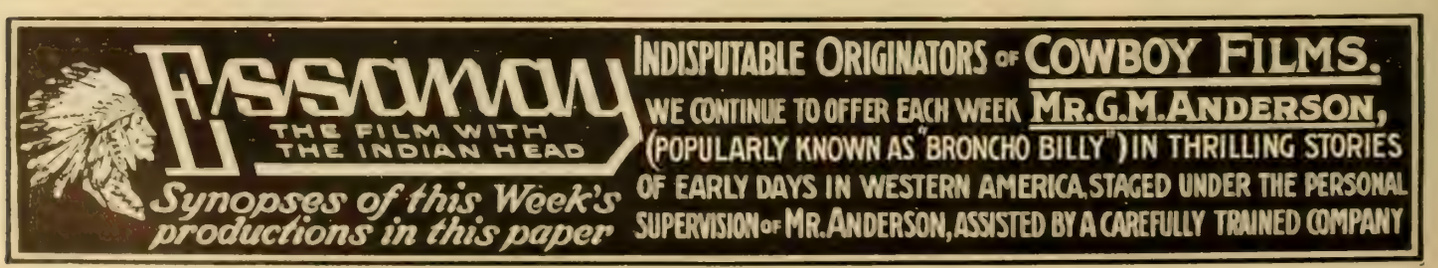
Shortly the plumber arrived, calmly, without the least hurry, turned off the water and once again all was well.

THE SUBSTITUTE (Dec. 14).—Jennie Rock was telegraph operator and station agent at a little town in New Mexico. Her brother was an engineer on the same railroad. One day a troop of cavalry stopped at the station and Sergeant Berger came in to inquire for a telegram. The sergeant liked Jennie's looks. He told her that he, too, was a telegraph operator attached to the signal corps and invited her to call on him at the post.

A few weeks later Jennie found opportunity to do so. She became much interested in a field telegraph instrument used by the troop to cut in on line wires in sending messages from the field. The gallant sergeant had a duplicate of it, which he presented to Jennie.

When the girl arrived home she was shocked to find her brother intoxicated. A message arrived ordering him to take out a special express car. To save him from disgrace Jennie determined to dress in his clothes and take out the train, which she did.

Robbers had heard of the big money shipment and they held up the train. Now, Jennie had her field telegraph instrument with her. She slipped away while the robbers were busy, climbed a telegraph pole, cut in on the line and sent a message, which brought a troop of cavalry to the rescue in time to save the day.



ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON,
(POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES
OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL
SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

Increase Your Attendance

Hundreds of Motion Picture Theatres are now using the Motion Picture Story Magazine to increase their attendance. By placing it on sale at your Theatre, you will find that it will:

Make Your Theatre Known

Interest Your Patrons

Increase Your Attendance

and

Help Raise the Standard of the Whole Motion Picture Business

It Will Cost You Nothing to Make a Trial
You Need to Pay Only for Copies Sold

We will prepay express and furnish advertising slides and signs free. Just fill out the coupon below and mail.

The Motion Picture Story Magazine

26 Court Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Date .....

The Motion Picture Publishing Co.,
26 Court St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Gentlemen:—

Please send me ..... copies of the Motion Picture Story Magazine for the month of ..... and ..... copies every month until notified to discontinue shipments. I agree to pay you ten cents per copy for every copy sold. It is understood that I am to sell the magazine for fifteen cents per copy.

Name ..... Theatre.....

Street and No. ..... City and State

A TIMELY LESSON (December 16).—George Winslow became fascinated by the charms of a widow and was soon devoting more time to her than to his wife and child. Mrs. Winslow suspected the state of affairs, but concealed her grief. Her brother, Jack Norton, arrived with his friend, Bob, for a visit. Jack soon had the whole story from her and he and Bob determined to take a hand.

That evening there was a ball at the hotel, at which Winslow was attentive to the widow. His attentions were distracted by a most handsome woman. She was attended by two young men, who were evidently very anxious for her favor. Winslow drew near for a better look and was amazed to see that the handsome woman was his wife. He forgot the widow, and Bob became her cavalier. Jack, disguised with a mustache, escorted Mrs. Winslow. Thus, Mr. Winslow was deserted. Deeply did he regret his inattention to his wife. He followed his wife and her escort and discovered them making love; the man was kissing her. Thinking her lost to him forever, Winslow returned home filled with despair and jealousy. There he took the baby in his arms and gave way to his grief.

The next morning Mrs. Winslow received a note from her supposed lover, urging her to fly with him. She dropped the note, apparently by accident. Her husband picked it up and read it. Later he entered her room, where she was busy packing, and confronted her with the letter, wildly demanding an explanation. Jack entered the room and Winslow started to attack him. Jack pulled off his mustache and stood revealed. Later there was a full explanation and the last scenes spell ideal domestic peace restored to the Winslow home.

VITAGRAPH.

SAVING THE SPECIAL (Dec. 4).—Pete Black determines to win the wife of the engineer, Jim White. He comes to Jim's home and makes advances to Mrs. White; she repulses him and he leaves the house in anger. The time is due for Jim to take his engine out.

Pete Black starts down the railroad track, set upon getting Jim White out of the way. He goes down the tracks and places heavy ties across the tracks, intending to wreck the Special, of which Jim White is the engineer. Then he returns to Jim's home and urges Mrs. White to run away with him. She strikes him with a rolling pin and knocks him senseless.

In the meantime, her little girl, coming home from school, sees the ties across the tracks. She rushes in and tells her mother, who goes into an adjoining room, procures a revolver, gives it to her little girl and tells her to hold the villain at bay until she removes the ties from the tracks. She reaches the railroad tracks just in time to save the Special and her husband. She notifies the sheriff and with him starts back home. In shorter time than it takes to tell it, the sheriff arrests him and takes him to jail. Jim White, who has brought his train in from the run, comes home, learns of what has happened, and fondly embraces his dear ones in acknowledgment of their love for him.

A SLIGHT MISTAKE (Dec. 5).—Peters and Dudley, with their wives, are speeding along in their auto. The machine suddenly breaks. A passing wagon is hailed and the driver is induced to take their wives to town while their husbands struggle to fix the auto. They finally give up and start down the road in search of some place where they can secure help to repair the auto. They come upon an insane asylum and are admitted by the gatekeeper. Dudley and Peters are placed in padded cells, from which they afterwards escape, but not without being chased by the inmates and keepers. Just as they reach the outside of the gate their wives appear upon the scene. Explanations by them are made to the Professor and the doctor, who gradually grasp the situation, and which is further explained by the arrival of the two expected "duffies" announced in the morning mail.

THE HYPNOTIST (Dec. 5).—Swengaully, a hypnotist, endeavors to win the love of Mrs. Morgan, a young widow, from Sam Patch, her promised husband. Sam calls and finds her under the influence of the hypnotist. He goes to Swengaully's house to warn him to keep away from the widow, but finds that his rival is still at Mrs. Morgan's.

While waiting at Swengaully's home he discovers a book on hypnotism and learns through it that he can exert hypnotic power at a distance. He calls Mrs. Morgan up on the telephone and begins to exercise this power over her by telling her to make faces at the Professor, which she does. Swengaully is amazed. Sam takes the book under his arm and hastens to his loved one's home and with the further aid of the book, subjects the mesmerizer to his will and makes a regular "goat" of him by causing him to make ardent love to the housemaid in a most foolish manner. To still further humiliate him, he brings him back to a normal condition and then gives him a couple of good, swift kicks, which accelerate his departure into the cold, cold world.

THE BLACK CHASM (Dec. 6).—"Lend me your ears whilst I unfold to thee a legend more fascinating and thrilling than the wonder tales of history or the fairy tales of fiction." This invitation was accepted by a young Indian lad, as the old Chief told him about the "Black Chasm."

Here is the story: Yellow Eagle, a young Indian prince, is in love with Dark Feather, an Indian princess. Being of different tribes, hostile to each other, Dark Feather's father opposes her betrothal and according to the custom of the Indians of that period, he plights her to one of his own people. Unknown to the others, Dark Feather meets Yellow Eagle and they declare again and again their undying love.

Spotted Tail, to whom her father has promised Dark Feather in marriage, spies upon the lovers and when he meets Dark Feather warns her to keep away from Yellow Eagle. She proudly denies his right to command her and tells him that she loves Yellow Eagle and him alone. In a moment of anger Spotted Tail strikes her, instantly killing her. To hide his crime, he puts her body in a canoe, and sets it adrift in the rapids and disappears.

Yellow Eagle, sitting on the bank of the river, sees the canoe with its precious burden floating by. He follows it for a time with his eyes, and then, as if in a dream, he is drawn into the waters of the stream deeper and deeper, reaching out to check the drifting canoe until the waters of the river close over him and they become black as the raven's wing, giving to them the name of the "Black Chasm."

WAR (Dec. 8).—In the gray dawn of an October day, as the inhabitants of a village street in Tripoli are engaged in the enjoyment of their several pursuits of life, an Arab rushes upon the peaceful scene, announcing that Italy has declared war against Turkey and that the Italian warships are now in the harbor, shelling the city. Arna, an Arab girl, upon hearing the announcement, tremblingly clings to her sweetheart, Midas, who reassuringly tries to calm her.

The Italian transports load their troops into the small boats, preparatory to landing upon the shores of Turkey, where an Arab fisherman immediately suspects their purpose and rushes madly inland to spread the warning to his countrymen. The Italian soldiers, with guns, cavalry and infantry, enter the Arab village, mowing down everything before them. Arna's father is dragged through the streets. Arna, tenderly sustaining her mother, learns that her father has been taken by the Italian soldiers, and frantically makes her way in search of him, accompanied by Midas, only to find that her father has been ruthlessly slain. Arna and Midas stand side by side and face to face with the enemy until their helpless resistance is mercifully ended by the murderous bullets of the desecraters.

Mad with the frenzy of the spirit of war, the beseigers, not content with the desolation and slaughter with which they have strewn their pathway, apply their torches to the pyre of misery.

HIS WIFE'S SECRET (Dec. 9).—Leslie Charlton, a young business man, not very long married, is in business difficulties and much worried over his finances. His young wife has literary ability and has written a novel, which she has a good chance of getting published, but she keeps it a secret from her husband until she is certain of the fact, as she does not wish to disappoint him. Meeting her publisher, Mr. Ormonde, one day, Leslie sees him drop an envelope, which is directed in his wife's handwriting.

Then he sees her trying to conceal a letter from him. Afterwards he meets a messenger boy carrying a parcel to her from Ormonde and finally picks up a portion of her MSS., which contains a passionate love letter, which he thinks is for Ormonde. Just when his jealousy is at its height, he, while in his friend's office, sees his wife enter Ormonde's office, which is across the hall, and after remaining there some time, come out again. She has gone to receive a copy of her book and her first check. Leslie is furious and is only withheld from entering Ormonde's office to demand satisfaction by his friend Jackson, who advises him to see his wife first and demand explanation.

He reaches home to find her reading her own book. When he upbraids her she shows it to him and also her check, explains how she worked to help him, and is ashamed of his conduct. Leslie asks her forgiveness, and obtains it.

ONE TOUCH OF NATURE (Dec. 11).—James Mahoney's love for Helen Grochberg is the signal for opposition. Helen's father is a rabbi and James' father is of the opposite faith. Their marriage not only excludes them from recognition by their parents, but makes a great breach of friendship between Mahoney, senior, and Helen's father.

James is a young lawyer and his first client brings him a case against his father. While discussing the case he receives a letter from his people who, with the exception of his father, desires him and his bride to make their home at his house. This attitude of his father prompts him to begin legal proceedings at once. He wins.

His father is furious, but soon is reconciled to what should be. Mr. Mahoney and Mr. Grochberg, who had been on unfriendly terms, chance to meet each other at the home of the newly married people one day, where they saw their little grandchild. The little one was the cause of renewing their friendship.

THE MILITARY AIR-SCOUT (Dec. 12).—The commanding officer of the army, with his daughter, Marie, and Lieutenant Wentworth, are watching the flight of the latest introduction in modern warfare flying above them. Wentworth takes up the study of aviation and, after mastering it, makes his first flight, witnessed by the general's daughter, who is Wentworth's sweetheart.

At an informal luncheon news is brought to Commander Arthur that war has been declared. Lieutenant Wentworth is ordered to attack the enemy's fleet by flying above it and dropping bombs among the war vessels. Taking leave of his sweetheart, he makes a successful flight and succeeds in sinking two of the battle-ships. The opposing army calls into service its aeroplane gun, determined to meet the attack of the flying machine with its own weapon. They succeed in getting a bead on Wentworth's aeroplane and manage to disable it. It falls to earth with Lieutenant Wentworth underneath. When he extricates himself from the wreck he finds that he has a broken arm. He escapes to his army's headquarters and reports to Commander Arthur. After a visit to the hospital and his injuries are attended to, he calls to see Marie, by whom he is received with admiration for his brave and daring deed, and accepted by her father, Commander Arthur, as his prospective son-in-law.

THE VENTRILOQUIST'S TRUNK (Dec. 13).—Eligible men are scarce at summer hotels. At the beginning of our story there is one male, Mr. Bunny. But he is not enough to withstand the seige of old maids and other specimens of femininity.

The arrival of Professor Dinkenspiel, a ventriloquist, causes considerable commotion and a great deal of curiosity. Miss Flora, a spinster, loses no time in trying to make a conquest of his heart, arousing Bunny's jealousy. The professor is shown to his room, where he unpacks his trunk and places his ventriloqual puppets about the room. He begins to rehearse the performance which he intends to gove that evening. Miss Flora sees him, through the ground glass of his room door, conversing with one of the puppets, which she conversiing with one of the puppets, which she thinks is a human being like herself. She immediately arouses the proprietor and the guests, who try to break into the professor's room, but do not succeed until he has dropped his trunk out of the window into the head of the suspicious constable waiting below. Taking advantage of the constable's plight, he loads the trunk into a peddler's wagon and drives off at break-neck speed.

When they discover that he has flown, all hands start in pursuit of the fast disappearing wagon, from which fall the tin pans, and other articles of merchandise. The trunk cannot withstand the jolts and bumps and it goes the way of the other contents of the wagon. Professor Dinkenspiel jumps from the vehicle to replace his trunk and is captured by the constable, who insists upon him opening the trunk in the presence of the pursuers. The professor does so and brings forth the puppets, who have been the innocent cause of all the trouble. Miss Flora falls into Bunny's arms and the professor embraces the puppet, which bears a striking resemblance to Miss Flora.

LOVE AT GLOUCESTER PORT (Dec. 15).—Frank Mills and Daisy Hibbs are sweethearts. Frank, after a quarrel, leaves her unceremoniously. Ned Burton and Alice Newall are also sweethearts, but after their quarrel Alice leaves Ned.

ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper

INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON, (POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

The Record Wrecker

That is what the sale of state right f :

THE GREATEST MOVING PICTURE EVER MADE!

TWENTY YEARS IN SING SING

(Three Thousand Feet)

has been. Hardly a day passes that we do not close a deal for the sale of one or more states. And all the time we are swamped with mail from exhibitors from all over the country wanting to book the attraction. All this communication we turn over to the purchasers of territorial rights. A golden harvest is waiting for the progressive man who buys state rights.

Don't overlook the one best bet that has been offered in years

FREE! FREE! FREE!

Advance advertising that is distinctly different from the rest. A lobby display that is in a class by itself when it comes to style and finish. A street drive that is bound to attract attention and create comment. Everything is furnished absolutely free with the attraction and we help you book time and assist you in every way we can.

RAILROAD FARE PAID TO AND FROM CHICAGO

from any point in the United States to the purchasers of state rights. Demonstrations now being given at our office. Come to the city and let us prove to you that our advertising is the truth when we say that we have the greatest special attraction ever put on the market.

Is Your State Sold Yet?

Better write in and find out. Territory is going like wildfire and it will be only a short time until every state in the Union will be gone. So if you want to get in on the ground floor for the greatest feature picture ever put on the market don't delay another day, but write or wire now!

AMERICA'S FEATURE FILM CO.
403 Schiller Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

Four Years' Success

FOR

HALLBERG ELECTRIC ECONOMIZER

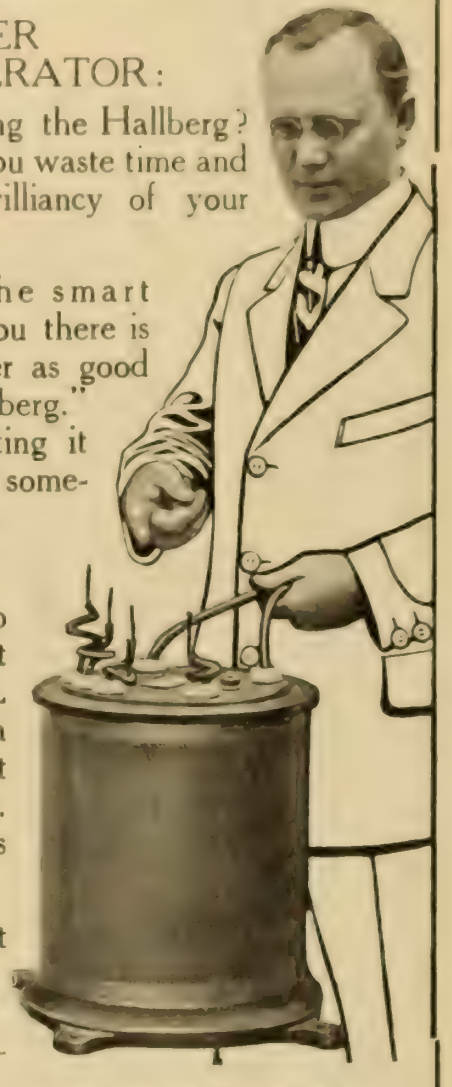
Mr. MANAGER
and OPERATOR:

Are you using the Hallberg? If not, why do you waste time and sacrifice the brilliancy of your picture?

Don't let the smart "Alecks" tell you there is any current saver as good as the "Hallberg." Insist on getting it even though something cheaper is offered.

It is easy to save current, but it is a H——L of a job to get a better light at the same time. "Hallberg" does the trick.

Read what our friend Hoffman has to say about it—



N[illegible] Y[illegible] N[illegible] 19[illegible]

MR J H HALLBERG,
36 East 23rd Street, New York City.

Dear Sir: I recall with pleasure the [illegible] of [illegible] 14, 1[illegible], when you installed in my [illegible] L[illegible], N. J., the first Hallberg Electric Economizer ever used on a moving picture machine. I well remember the trouble I was having with my light [illegible] I [illegible] N[illegible] of my mind that day, but the help you gave me was too great to be [illegible] to me to observe the far-reaching effect of my installation, and to know that the Hallberg Economizer has now been universally adopted. The original Hallberg Economizer is still doing duty. I congratulate you upon your fourth trade birthday.

Very truly yours,
HUGH E. HOFFMAN,
Editorial Staff Moving Picture World.

Over 2000 in use for A. C. as well as D. C. and my G. E. Mercury Arc Rectifier is the thing for those who want D. C. at the arc on A. C. circuits

J. H. HALLBERG

36 East 23rd Street - - NEW YORK

Frank, looking through his telescope, sees his sweetheart give Ned a flower as she departs. Frank approaches Daisy. Daisy in a very pastonate mood and demands an explanation, which she refuses to give. He leaves her still more angered and Ned and Alice come to terms.

Frank, who is the first mate on the schooner "Loon," is delighted to hear that Captain Hibbs is going to take his daughter with him. As the captain needs one more man, Ned is asked to fill the vacancy. He accepts, much to the regret of his sweetheart, who is almost heartbroken. Frank, thinking that Ned is his rival, subjects him to all kinds of indignities. He orders Ned to climb the rigging after having spliced the rope with a rotten strand. The rigging breaks and Ned falls overboard. Daisy cuts loose the small boat and goes to his rescue.

After drifting many hours they are finally picked up by a passing vessel, which takes them to Gloucester Port, where they meet Frank, who asks Daisy to forgive him. She will not listen to his overtures, but it is fair to suppose that a reconciliation is soon effected.

THE SICK MAN FROM THE EAST (Dec. 16).—"Another horse stolen from Jenkins' Ranch. This makes the tenth. $1,000 reward for the capture of the thieves."

This was the announcement which Henry Hamlin, a young New York detective, saw in an Arizona newspaper from the town of Lasso.

Disguised as an invalid, the detective goes to Lasso and locates as a boarder at Jenkins'. While staying at the Jenkins' Ranch Hamlin falls in love with Kate Jenkins, but he dare not make his identity known. He learns that Black Beauty, Kate's favorite horse, is the one that has been stolen. Kate shows much attention to the "sick man from the East." Hamlin discovers that Ed. Muller, who has taken a notion to Kate, has stolen Black Beauty, with the assistance of Nick Hankins, a half-breed pal of Ed.'s.

Laying his plans accordingly, it is not long before the detective from the East traps his man and receives as his reward not only the $1,000, but Kate Jenkins as his affianced wife. In this way they learn that the "sick man from the East" is not only a brave and fearless man, but a very healthy and resourceful specimen of humanity.

SELIG.

THE CHIEF'S DAUGHTER (Dec. 11).—Daniel Boone, soon after moving to the wilderness of Missouri, in his early pioneer days, undergoes an experience which is familar to every school boy in the land.

His son captures the Chief's daughter; Boone's daughters plead for her release and she is given her liberty. Soon after this the girls are captured by the Indian band. The Indian girl comes to their rescue, sets them free at night and guides them to their stockade, and then, fearing to go home, she remains there. The band attack the little stockade and are in the act of setting it on fire when the chief's daughter proposes that Boone threaten her in sight of the band. Boone acts upon her suggestion and it accomplishes the desired effect. The hatchet is buried, the pipe of peace is smoked and another incident is passed in Boone's romantic frontier life.

APRIL FOOL (Dec. 11).—The Hall Room Boys, who have lost all their money at the races, see an ad. in the paper offering a large sum of money for the best April Fool joke perpetrated upon the unsuspecting citizens. They think of an original idea and after many funny experiences win the reward.

A ROMANCE OF THE RIO GRANDE (Dec. 12).—The Texas Rangers, led by Tom Wilson, are hot on the trail of the Mexican bootleggers, who have been smuggling whiskey into American territory and supplying it to the Indians. Pedro, the bootlegger, sells his whiskey to a band of Indians and they go on a drunken rampage, first tying and gagging Pedro.

Tom Wilson has just bid goodbye to his sweetheart, Nellie Smith, who, with her father, are starting on a long trip overland. He runs into the Mexican, who advises him that the Indians are on the warpath. He gathers a posse of cowboys and starts after the Indians.

The Indians overtake Smith's wagon and Smith is bound to the burning wagon. Nellie is tied to a horse and led away. Tom rescues Smith and they continue after Nellie's captors. A running fight ensues, in which the Indians are killed, and finally Tom rescues the nigh-dead girl. Smith decides that Tom has earned his right to Nellie's hand and gives her to him.

GEORGE WARRINGTON'S ESCAPE (Dec. 14).—This story is based upon the thrilling escape of George Warrington from the hands of a brutal old French sergeant at Fort Duquesne, now the city of Pittsburg, after the defeat of General Braddock and the almost total annihilation of his troops by the French and Indians, as it is told by George to his twin brother Harry in Thackeray's novel, "The Virginians." The brothers had been visiting at Quebec, where George had fought a duel with an impetuous young Frenchman, and had for his second the Compte de Florac. A friendship was established between the young men, and was only interrupted by news of war between the two countries. Later, George was appointed on the staff of General Braddock with his friend, Col. George Washington, and was wounded at the disastrous ambush in which Braddock and nearly all his force were killed. He was on the point of being scalped when he was saved by Florac, and sent to Fort Duquesne, where he was at the mercy of a drunken old scoundrel of a sergeant, from whom he finally escaped through the kindness of an Indian squaw, the toy of Sergt. Museau, whom he had befriended and shielded from the latter's violence.

INDUSTRIES OF THE SOUTH AND WEST (Dec. 15).—Probably no record of industrial achievement in the history of any country can compare with the remarkable advancement which our great Southland has made during the past few years. In practically every line of endeavor this wonderland—the Southwest—has equalled or even surpassed the glowing predictions of its most enthusiastic admirers. It has accomplished feats of engineering agriculture, business building and artistic betterment that would have been deemed impossible a few years past. In this interesting educational picture we review some of the features of this remarkable growth.

We are shown among other subjects "The Prune Industry," of which the average layman knows so little: "The Famous Roosevelt Dam," in the course of construction and after its completion: "Luther Burbank," the wizard of flower and plant life: "The Watsonville Apple Fair," with its remarkable fruit displays: "The Largest Locomotive in the World," "The Santa Rosa Flower Festival," and "The Los Angeles Vaquero Club" in one of their thrilling exhibitions of horsemanship.

PATHE.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, N. 48, 1911 (Nov. 27).—Petersburg, Va.—Governor Foss, of Masachusetts, presents to the State of Virginia a monument erected to the memory of the Massachusetts soldiers who fell in the Civil War on the battlefield of Petersburg, and Governor Mann, of Virginia, accepts it for the State.

Constantinople, Turkey.—On the occasion of the annual feast of Bairam the Sultan attends the mosque of Top-Hane.

New York, N. Y.—The Cardinal-Designates, Farley and Falconio, leave St. Patrick's Cathedral on their way to Rome to receive their red hats.

Aix-la-Chapelle, Germany.—The aged Count of Haeseler presents a flag to the veterans in the city.

New York, N. Y.—The rioting of the strikers in the Department of Street Cleaning has assumed such serious proportions that police have to escort the strike breakers.

St. Albans, England.—In the presence of the American Ambassador, Whitelaw Reid, Andrew Carnegie offers a library to the city.

Lafayette, Ind.—On the centennial of the Battle of Tipperance the struggle is re-enacted upon the battlefield in the presence of former Vice-President Fairbanks.

Tripoli, Tripoli.—The Italo-Turkish War. The Italian troops occupy the city. Panorama of Tripoli, showing the Italian warships which operated the blockade and shelled the forts. Fort Hamidie after the bombardment. The pieces of artillery lie broken or spiked as the Turks left them. The army of occupation lands and arouses the curiosity of the natives. The Italian troops intrench themselves in strong positions. The Marquis Borea Ricci, the new Governor of Tripoli, witnesses the raising of the Italian flag over the fortifications.

Hodgensville, Ky.—President Taft attends the dedication of the Lincoln Memorial on the site where Lincoln was born, February 12, 1809.

SPECIAL FOR THE LADIES.

Paris, France.—The Fall fashions in hats are attracting much attention in the fashion center of the world.

And many others.

THE FLOWER GIRL OF LAS PALMAS (Dec. 13).—A Mexican, living apart from his wife, falls in love with a flower girl. This leads him into trouble, first with the flower girl's lover and father, and then with his own wife, who has just decided to return to him. However, the flower girl herself brings about a reconciliation, and all ends happily for all concerned.

AN EPISODE OF EARLY MORMON DAYS (Dec. 14).—A band of settlers pasing West, reach the land staked out and claimed by the Mormons, on which Brigham Young has posted a notice prohibiting any "Gentile" to enter upon his land. In spite of the notice, the settlers—150 of them—entered and camped in the mountain meadow where the Mormons found them, and, as the report goes, under a flag of truce, annihilated the entire party.

A MOTHER'S REMORSE (Dec. 16).—A club woman neglects her husband and little child, to spend her time at the bridge table. The husband's reproaches cause her to leave him. Later the child is sick and the mother, who finally comes to see her child, finds her gone. She thinks her baby is dead, and her remorse turns her forever from her clubs. She is repaid by finding her baby alive and receiving her husband's forgiveness.

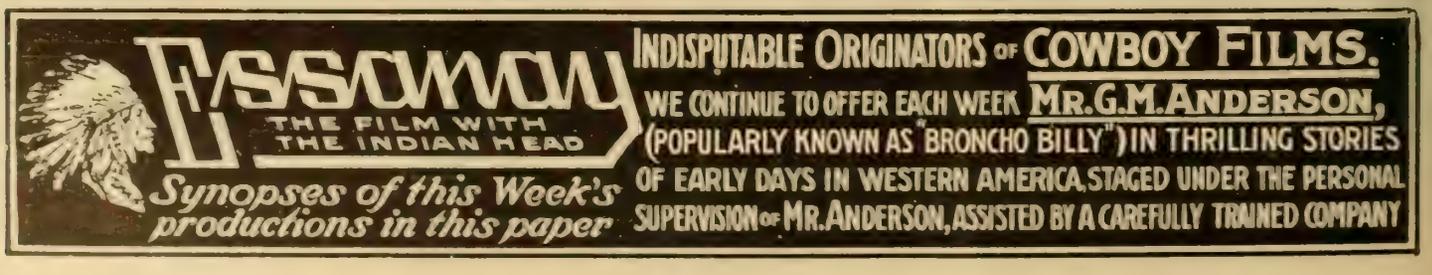
BIOGRAPH.

SAVED FROM HIMSELF (Dec. 11).—The young hotel clerk and the stenographer are engaged, and the boy's one ambition is to provide a rosy future for his bride. With this in mind, he invests all his savings in the stock market, having been induced so to do by the success of an old friend in the market. He, however, is not so fortunate, for the stocks bought are dropping fast. His broker wires for $2,000 to save him from utter ruin. This, of course, he hasn't, and in the despair caused by the thought of his hopes for the future being crushed, he is about to yield to the temptation of appropriating a large amount of money left in care of the hotel proprietor by one of the guests, when his purpose is discovered by his sweetheart, whose influence saves him from the dishonorable act his desperation would have driven him to.

TAKING HIS MEDICINE (Dec. 14).—Lazy Lou would rather fish than work and when he is called upon to saw wood he gets out of it by pretending sickness, but he didn't bargain for the outcome. Dad, in alarm, sends for a doctor, and the only M. D. in the neighborhood is a horse doctor, so he is engaged. Lou kicks against taking horse medicine, and bolts out, followed by the doctor and ma and pa. After a number of amusing and thrilling incidents, he is chased to the roof of the house, where he sits, pelting the folks below with Oranges. Dad has an idea. He gets an old shot gun, and not having any shot, uses the pills instead. Well, Lou takes the pills perforce.

HER PET (Dec. 14).—Mrs. Perkins is all devotion for her little poodle-dog pet, much to the perturbation of Mr. Perkins, who, enraged at what he considers her silly affection, bribes a newsboy to steal and do away with the obnoxious canine. The boy carries out his part of the program, but Mrs. Perkins advertises for her lost pet and the same boy seeing the ad, returns it and receives the reward offered.

New improved Spot Light Song Slides feature the singer
Patent applied for
MADE EXCLUSIVELY BY
LEVI CO., Inc. 1560 BROADWAY New York City
Demand them from your exchange.



FASSOVOW
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON,
(POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES
OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL
SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO.

145 West 45th Street, NEW YORK, U.S.A.

21 Reels Every Week

7 Days—3 Reels Daily

Catchy Pictures

Your Pictures are more important than words

Demand Good Pictures

Demand the right to display them along successful lines.

Don't get away from the idea that your public does not understand good pictures, because they do.

The dime and the dollar of success is the point we are covering when we talk EXCLUSIVE SERVICE.

We can't put our hands in the public's pocket, but we offer you pictures that will induce the public to put their own hands in their pockets and pull out the nickels and dimes which mean your success. This is the real purpose of our organization.

Pictures which the public will see, and will want to see again and again—that is what you want, that is what we have, and that is why it is vital that we get together.

Secure the following exclusive service with its franchise endowment:

M.nday,	"Plantation"	"Clarendon" "Mono"
Tuesday,	"Rose"	"Deu. Biograph" "Helio"
Wednesday	"Federal"	"Mondia" "Latium"
Thursday.	"Washington"	"Hepwix" "Film d'Art"
Friday,	"Mohawk"	"Cricks & Martin" "Aquilla"
Saturday,	"Oklahoma"	"Deu. Bioscope" "Savoy"
Sunday,	"California"	"Messters" "Comerio"

7 Days—3 Reels Daily

National Film Distributing Co.

145 West 45th Street, NEW YORK, U.S.A.

Independent Film Stories

LUX.

THE MAN IN THE AUTO (Dec. 8).—Mr. Moran had the misfortune to cross some dangerous characters. They therefore wrote him a threatening letter informing him, that unless he were prepared to hand over the sum of five thousand dollars, they would take their revenge upon his wife and child. The Chief of Police advised him to take his wife and child away to a place of safety. Mr. Moran then placed them in charge of his trusted chauffeur, who drove them away into the country. The desperadoes heard of their intended departure, and an exciting scene follows, when the chauffeur is shot down and the car goes madly careening on without the man at the wheel. The chauffeur is taken to a cottage, from which he makes his escape. In spite of a severe wound he manages to make his way back home and to set the police upon the trail of the men, who are captured after an exciting struggle. Meanwhile, the car is stopped by some other automobilists before it comes to a disastrous end. Thus the desperadoes are arrested, and all is set right through the brave conduct of the man in the auto.

THE ADVENTURES OF AN AMATEUR HYPNOTIST (Dec. 8).—A smart young man is invited to display his skill as a hypnotist at a party. He manages to work the influence until he meets a charming young lady who is also a hypnotist. Their powers over other people clash when they meet and thus instead of exercising an attraction over the other, they are unable to get as near to each other as they would like. The situation becomes serious, as they have fallen in love, but of course, love making is out of the question when the lovers are unable to approach each other. The spell is at last broken by a professional hypnotist, who hypnotizes them both. Under the spell they are again able to act normally; thus things are set right once more. Take heed, ye amateur dabblers in mesmerism, lest ye bungle things slightly and meet a similar fate.

ECLAIR.

(American make.)

THE MUSICIAN'S DAUGHTER (Dec. 12).—Carl Wagner's good wife was dying. His heart bled at the thought of losing her, his life-long loyal helpmate. And his opera was almost completed, after spending months of weary hours to make it perfect. A pretty daughter tried in vain to brighten the overhanging gloom. Finally the composer, after a superhuman effort, and with a soul filled with sorrow, finished the last act of his score and hurried away to the impressario for a hearing.

Here he was assured of an immediate reading and the return to his humble tenement was made with a much lighter heart.

The doctor paid another visit to his patient and left a prescription to be filled. Carl reached home and realized how much depended upon the medicine ordered to possibly save a life most dear. Taking his cherished violin, the only article of value remaining, he rushed off to the pawnbroker and negotiated a loan. Meanwhile, the sad-faced patient and tender wife and mother quietly passed away, breathing a prayer for the future of her husband and child.

The doctors say something snapped in Carl Wagner's brain when he entered that room and saw his wife lying there cold in death. At any rate, they gently led him away to a quiet sanitarium, where, for days, he stared vacantly into space and never uttered a word.

The opera was passed on favorably. Word was sent to the musician's home and Alma went to the impressario's in answer to the summons. A reigning prima donna, then starring at the opera house, refused to go on at the last moment. Alma heard the controversy as she sat waiting. Then she thought of her musical education, of the poor old man in the sanitarium and bravely volunteered to understudy the prima donna. In a night she rose to fame. The metropolis was at her feet. Then came offers of marriage. At the stage door she was beseiged by admirers. Even the manager proposed.

How she met these advances and ultimately fell victim to a brave man's devotion, after a wild ride with a designing scoundrel, is only equaled in interest by the experience of Carl Wagner returning home after being mentally made sound.

AMBROSIO.

THE LITTLE DUKE (Nov. 29).—The little duke lives in a castle upon the mountain, without playmates, tutored by a severe old teacher. He is taught court etiquette and dancing, and when he walks in the park he is followed by a watchful escort. Weary of it, he runs away, and to secure food sells his jewels, his shoes and his hat. Like a vagabond he limps along and meets a poacher who is very friendly. The gamekeeper accuses them of stealing game, and when the little duke proclaims himself he is mocked by the peasants. A countryman thrashes him and locks him up in a hen coop and the next morning he is taken before the governor, where his identity is disclosed and he is taken back to the castle.

RELIANCE.

THE TURN OF THE WHEEL (Dec. 6).—James Harrison, seated in his luxurious bachelor apartments, receives a message that his fortune has been swept away in a tight squeeze on Wall Street. Overwhelmed, he writes a farewell letter and takes out his revolver to commit suicide. Brown, a burglar, breaks in at this time, and at the point of his pistol, relieves Harrison of his watch, wallet, ring, etc. He sees the letter on the table and his inquiries bring forth Harrison's story. Compassion for the man prompts the burglar to return his property, and he then tries to persuade Harrison not to kill himself, but without avail. In despair he overpowers Harrison and ties him firmly to a chair, telling him he will return in the morning, hoping Harrison will have changed his mind about destroying himself. When Brown comes back he gives Harrison a drink and Harrison tells him he is still of the same mind. At that moment a telegram is received from Harrison's brokers stating that the banks have come to their assistance and that his fortune is saved. The burglar releases him and the two sit down and chat. Harrison discovers that hardship and adversity have driven the man to theft, and he promises him assistance to lead an honest life, which Brown vows to do.

THE TURNSTILE (Dec. 9).—The Gail family consists of father, mother and two children, Ruth and Harry. Mrs. Gail is a bridge whist fiend, and her heavy losses and business reverses ruin him. He goes to a distant town to begin over again, sending remittances to his wife. Notwithstanding her emphatic promises, she slides back into the gambling whirl of society and neglects her children, and returns home one evening to find the little girl dead.

A woman friend dies, leaving an orphan girl of the same age as Ruth, and Mrs. Gail adopts her, fearing to tell Gail of Ruth's death. The boy and girl learn to love each other as the years go by, and when Gail returns he surprises them in a love scene. In an emotional scene in which the father, mother and children take part, the situation is cleared and Gail's forgiveness is obtained.

NESTOR.

JUST TWO LITTLE GIRLS (Dec. 4).—Wesley Burke, M.D., is referred to as "The Great Doctor Burke." Notwithstanding his great gift, Dr. Burke could not save his dear wife's life and, had it not been for Gladys, his only child, he might have gone mad.

In the squalid home of Frank and Margaret Morse, little Nell Morse lies still on her deathbed. The good old Doctor Davey gives up all hope, but tells the grief-stricken couple that Doctor Burke alone might save the little one. Frank promptly rushes out in search of the great physician.

Little Gladys indulges in a game of hide-and-seek with her governess and, while attempting to cross the road, would have been struck by an automobile but for the heroic act of Frank Morse who, though knocked unconscious, is but slightly hurt. Governess, girl and the brave man are bundled into the auto and rapidly driven to the doctor's home.

On regaining consciousness, Frank learns that he is in the very home of Dr. Burke, whose child he had saved. The doctor soon hears of the little girl hovering between life and death, and goes to the Morse abode. Here, after twelve hours of work and constant watch, he declares little Nell out of danger and the Morses weep for joy.

Little Gladys pays frequent visits to Little Nell, bringing her toys. The two little girls make even the great Doctor Burke share the happiness pervading the Burke and Morse households.

STRUCK GOLD (Dec. 6).—After many weary months of hard labor, Ben Dudley had at last struck gold, which would make his little daughter, Lucy, and himself rich beyond their wildest dreams. But worn out with privation and ceaseless work, Ben determined to secure help from his friends in an adjoining camp.

Unfortunately, ere they started out, the old man, while showing the map of his mine to Tom Moore, an old friend, had been overheard by the claim-jumpers, Bill and Pete Sloan, who straightway resolved to obtain the map at any cost.

Hurrying along the trail, the two men secreted themselves at a point which they knew the Dudleys must pass. But by the appearance of the sheriff and his men, and later by John and Roy Stivers coming to the miner's aid, the plans of the claim-jumpers were frustrated. Determined, however, to learn the whereabouts of the mine, as soon as Ben and John, with a number of friends started for the spot, the claim-jumpers, who had also strengthened their party, crept stealthily after them and when night fell, opened fire, only to be forced to retreat after losing one of their men.

The next morning, as Ben's party were finishing breakfast, a half-breed appeared with the terrifying message that a band of outlaws had attacked John's cabin. Leaving two of their men on guard, the others set out with all possible speed for the cabin, only to find on their arrival, the women, for Lucy had remained with John's wife, chatting gayly over their work. The men then realized that it had been merely a means of getting them away from the mine. Sending Roy for the sheriff, the others hurried back and found, as they had expected, that the claim-jumpers were in possession.

But that night, when Sheriff Raymond and his men arrived, they crept cautiously upon the overhanging rock, and by means of a rope let themselves down to the mine below—a move so unexpected by the enemy, that the claim-jumpers were handcuffed and led away ere they had time to realize what had happened.

DESPERATE DESMOND ABDUCTS ROSAMOND (Dec. 9).—Claude Eclaire is in a happy frame of mind, not because he has just bidden au revoir to beautiful Rosamond, but because he is to see her again soon. Contentedly he stretches himself upon a couch to sleep, perchance to dream. He does dream and of his beloved one. He is about to embrace her when Desperate Desmond and his minions capture him, carry him to a deserted wharf and leave him securely tied to a post with only his head above the water. When the tide rises it will be all over with Claude.

Safe at home, Rosamond abandons herself into an easy chair and is soon feasting upon a vision of her hero. But, alas! Desperate Desmond and Gomgotz scale the steep wall of the house, quietly enter through a window, bundle up the sleepy beauty and then all three gain the street by a spectacular descent down the sides of the building. They hasten with the precious burden to an isolated shack, wherein they lock her up for future reference.

Meantime ,the rising waters have reached up to Claude's mouth and—a swordfish comes to the rescue by sawing off the cord and our hero swims safely away to the aid of his dear one.

The sweethearts are in each other's arms when the King of Villains and his heelers unexpectedly return and again make them prisoners. Rosamond is put under lock and key, while Claude is rushed over to the saw mill, strapped to the saw table, and "Saw, you bunk hero, saw!"

The Beautiful One in her dungeon, is hit with a telepathic wavelet, smashes the door into a heap of kindling wood and, gun in hand, saves her noble Claude, who in turn lashes Desmond to the saw table, bids him a grinding finish, and proceeds to bask in the light of Rosamond's eyes. The Desperate Chap, however, is not so easily gotten rid of. He cleverly fools the buzz saw and vows to get "hunk" on Claude.

MAJESTIC

KEEPING MABEL HOME (Dec. 10).—Billy Blake's assiduous courtship of Mabel Martin, a rich young society girl is brought to a crushing pause by the news that Mabel is to be taken abroad by her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin have concluded that their daughter is fitted by her beauty and their money to occupy a more exalted position in the social world than can be given her by a simple, if hustling, young American. Mabel cares for her young hustler, but the trip to London opens up a won-

WE were one year in arriving, but we are here with a Screen that is scientifically and mathematically correct from every point of view.

Not an inch of surface but what receives the picture like every other inch on the entire surface.

The only possible way to secure a perfect reproduction, regardless of how perfect your machine or your film may be.

We leave it to your Common Sense.

Every Screen made to order, spherically concaved so that each ray of light is exactly the same length when it strikes the surface. All your patrons see is your screen and what is reflected from it.

A Perfect Picture is sure to Please Them.

A word to the wise is sufficient.

Send us the distance of your screen from your lens, and the size of projected picture, and we will tell you how much it will cost you to own a

"Perfection Concave Screen"

(STATE WHETHER STATIONARY OR MOVABLE)

You now have a chance to be the first in your community to show

A PERFECT PICTURE

Inventors Specialty Manufacturing Co.

401 Ashland Block, CHICAGO

delful vista to her pretty brown eyes and after all, Duchess, Countess, prefixed to one's name, does sound attractive.

Billy's bitterness is augmented by the manner in which the Martins' haughty English butler ushers him out. He goes to his room. A newspaper heading catches his eye, to the effect that the heirs of three of the greatest titles in England are missing. Billy, desperate to "keep Mabel home," conceives a diabolical plot that will accomplish its object and also give a vicious job to the snobbishness of Mabel's parents.

By the aid of a business associate in England and the cables, he convinces the Martins that they have a Duke in their midst, and therefore a trip abroad is unnecessary. The butler has ducal honors thrust upon him and questioning not the source of his good fortunes, his butlership gratefully accepts everything coming to him and reaches for more while the going is good.

Billy's fondest hopes are realized. Mabel's parents try to force the girl to accept the pseudo Duke's attentions and the American spirit of scorning to be bossed coming to the surface the girl takes his amorous lordship into the woods and loses him, picks up the waiting Billy and off they go to—well, where all proper young people should go when they're really, really fond of each other.

In fear and perturbation, they repair to the parental roof where, after many weary miles on the hoof, the Duke has also arrived, crying aloud at the wrong done him.

A cyclone of fatherly wrath is about to be wreaked upon the youngsters when Billy's last trump opportunely appears and the parents, aghast at what might have been, gracefully accept their son-in-law. And the Duke—alas! To the kitchen for him, where 'tis true he finds some consolation in the caresses of one he spurned in his little week of power.

REPUBLIC.

IN THE DAYS OF THE SIX NATIONS (Dec. 17).—Escorted by a lieutenant of the army, the two daughters of the Major have no fear as they make a long journey acros a country swarmed with war-maddened Indians and quite a large number of renegades.

Several of the Indians appoint one of their number to act as escort for the party and betray them into their hands at the first opportunity. The treacherous Indian guide leads the party astray in the woods and, but for the fortunate appearance of a famous trapper, the sisters would undoubtedly have become captives of the Indians. The trapper's shrewdness for a time overcomes the craftiness of the redmen, but the odds prove too great against him and in order to save the daughters of the Major and their escort, he leaps into the raging torrent below the cave where the party have sought refuge, and begins a dangerous trip to the fort to seek aid. The party is captured by the Indians in spite of the brave fight made by the Lieutenant and bound hand and foot they are brought to the Indian village. Indian runners are sent forth to notify the chiefs that a special council is to be held, and soon the famous council of the six nations is in session.

The Lieutenant is condemned to the stake and after a war dance, preparations are made to execute the order, when Providence, in the shape of a body of mounted militia, led by the trapper, interferes with the plans and the Indians, in their eagerness to escape from the merciless fire of the army men, forget all about their victims, who are rescued and are safely escorted to their destination.

BISON.

THE EMPTY TEPEE (Dec. 5).—White Lily is sent to the mission school by her father, the chief, against the protests of the girl and of Big Bear, her sweetheart. A month later she runs away from the school and walks home. In a battle with a hostile tribe, Big Bear is killed, and amid impresive ceremonies is laid at rest, the whole tribe following his body to its last resting place. White Lily comes up, and, in an affecting scene, throws herself upon the bier and gives vent to her sorrow.

A RANGE ROMANCE (Dec. 8).—After a quarrel with his wife, Mary, Bob Adams leaves her, taking with him their little girl, Ethel. In order to conceal their identity, he dresses the girl in boy's clothing. Bob and Ethel finally drift West, the girl still passing as a boy. Ten years go by and Bob secures work on a ranch, and the foreman becomes strongly attached to Ethel. Her sex is discovered, and the foreman falls in love with her.

The cook is discharged, and the foreman goes to the city for another. Mary's search for Bob and Ethel has taken her West, and the foreman meets her at an employment agency, where she is seeking work, and engages her. That evening, when the men come in for supper, Bob and Mary meet, and a reconciliation takes place. Ethel marries the foreman, and the happy family is shown two years later, with Bob and Mary delighted over their little grandchild.

AMERICAN.

SANTA CATALINA, MAGIC ISLE OF THE PACIFIC (Dec. 14).—The film starts with a view of Santa Catalina Island, "Magic Isle of the Pacific," whose wonderful mountain grandeur is far-famed, but seldom seen by the average American. Here is the clearest water in the world and many sights to amuse and interest even the most jaded traveler. An extraordinary view of seals basking on the rocks off the island is next seen. Then follows a visualization of more than fifty feet of the ocean's bed, showing the remarkable submarine growth, a kelp, octopus, many varieties of coral and fish.

This scenic also contains an exceptionally fine view of the Pacific fleet in annual maneuvering off Los Angeles. The fleet contains the battle-scarred cruiser Raleigh, the cruisers Colorado, the flagship California, the South Dakota, the gunboat Vicksburg, the Oregon, the cruiser Cincinnati, several war tugs, supply boats and finally the entire torpedo fleet.

THE LAST NOTCH (Dec. 18).—Old Jim Briggs was getting old, and although in his work as sheriff he showed no signs of advancing years. However, the day came when a younger man was given his place. Jim, deprived of his livelihood, was compelled to go to his married granddaughter for support. Her husband never liked the sturdy honesty of old Jim, because, perhaps, the husband did some shady things himself that would hardly stand the light of old Jim's honest blue eyes.

Shortly after Jim's retirement, a man was stopped at the point of a gun and robbed, and the man who did the work was none other than Jim's worthless grand-son-in-law. The new sheriff, while able and willing in most cases, failed to capture the thief; so old Jim once more went into harness, affectionately counting six notches in his gun, each one representing a desperado he had killed. Jim took sole charge, and, while rounding a rock alone, came face to face with the robber. The other shot, but not until he had himself received a bullet that caused instant death. Old Jim was carried home and placed in an easy chair on the veranda. Although weak from fatigue and a wound he insisted upon cutting the seventh notch in the old revolver butt.

CHAMPION.

THE SAVING OF DAN (Dec. 13).—Ulan Blake is a cowboy with many good qualities, but he has an ungovernable temper. Beating his horse one day, he was surprised by the ranch owner's daughter, who berated him and caused his discharge.

A little later, while he was sitting by the side of the road, the girl came along. She was on horseback, but in an instant he had dragged her from the saddle.

Do You Know, Mr. Exhibitor,

That the public wants to know what they will see before they pay their price of admission to your theatre?

The Only Way to Show Your Programme

is by using a method that cannot be improved upon for ages to come.

Our Best Proof

are the hundreds of easels in front of theatres, through the country. Look at one in your city today. Then cut out this slip and mail to us. The Easels are $10.00. The Posters $2.00 per week for the entire output.

To give you a start, we will send you all or any part of old releases from July 10, '11, to Oct. 30, '11, for $1.00 per week.

Exhibitors Advertising Company
Suite 604-605-606
117 North Dearborn St.
Chicago, Ill.

EXHIBITORS ADVERTISING CO.,
117 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Enclosed find $10.00 for frame and check for $..... for Posters, to commence with the week of ....., 1911.

Name .....

Theatre .....

Street .....

City .....

FLAMING EXCELLO CARBONS

TRADE MARK

"Excello" Flaming Carbons

The original genuine flaming arc lamp carbon. Not adapted to, but designed and made to give the best service in any flaming arc lamps.

Resistance is reduced to the minimum because of the special patented form of metal vein, thus maximum light from the available current is assured.

"Excello" Carbons produce a much higher candle power than any other brand of flaming carbons. Yellow, pearl-white, brilliant white or red light.

Sole Importer

"Electra" Pink Label and
"Excello" Flaming Carbons

HUGO REISINGER

11 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

It's All Here!

WHY indulge in grandiloquent laudation of our own work? Here are our releases, they'll do all the talking for us and we'll stand by what they say.

For Tuesday, Dec. 12th, a split reel

"The Little Chaperone"

A Comedy-Drama, and

"Views of Genoa, Italy"

For Saturday, December 16th

Our usual feature, this time a farce

"When Heart Wires Cross"

NOW—Watch for the bulletin from the "Boost Department." Got your name in for it?

Powers Motion Picture Co.

511 West 42nd Street New York City

To Obtain the Best Result You Must Use the

BEST CARBONS

Motion Picture Machines require Carbons that are particularly adapted for the purpose.

Use Arco-Biograph" Brand

The Distinguishing Mark of our Specially Manufactured

CARBONS

for Motion Picture Machines

CARBONS for all Makes of Flaming Lamps Carried in Stock.

L. E. Frorup & Co., Importers

232-234 Greenwich St., New York

LUX FILMS

Speak for Themselves

Released Friday, Dec. 8, 1911
Length, 1000 feet

The Man in the Auto

The tense dramatic situation of a mother and daughter seated in a runaway automobile without a chauffeur, and the capture of the machine before harm overtakes the occupants is shown in realistic setting, on the same reel as

The Adventures of an Amateur Hypnotist

A comedy of the "worth-while" kind. A laugh in every inch throughout its entirety.

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th St. New York City

Telephone 3427 Stuyvesant

Sold Only Through
MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING and SALES COMPANY

ONLY EASTMAN RAW STOCK USED

But as the girl prayed to him in her distress, he thought of his sister, and his mother, and he drew from his pocket a letter from the former, in which she admonished him to deal with others as he would have her dealt with. His true manhood asserted itself. Then he led the sorrow-stricken girl back on her way to her friends, and she, seeing the triumph of his better nature, loved him for it; it was the start toward a greater love.

The absence of the girl brought the cowpunchers, led by her father, to the trail. They had found her hat and revolver where the struggle first occurred, and so they suddenly came upon them in a rocky glen as they made their way, and the enraged father shot the kidnapper of his child before she could explain. It then fell to the girl's lot to nurse the now thoroughly repentant cowboy back to life and health. She then crowned him with the mantle of happiness, for she gave herself to him in wedlock.

A TRAITOR ON THE STAFF (Dec. 11).—Lieut. Gorman was passionately fond of Alice Rambeau, the daughter of his general. Walter Cranston, however, the handsome young subaltern of the same regiment, had already won that deep favor in the eyes of the sweet-faced Alice.

It came about that the general had decided to promote Cranston for bravery on the field of battle. Gorman was against this. Shortly after this, while the general and daughter were in deep conversation with Cranston, Gorman managed to secrete a valuable document in the hat-band of his rival. This document was missed shortly after, and the general instituted a rigorous search, but to no avail.

Then it was that Lieut. Gorman threw suspicion on young Cranston, and when the subaltern appeared, Gorman knocked off his hat and thus disclosed the missing paper. But Alice had been in a position to observe the actions of Gorman. Alice then and there denounced Gorman, and he, having been taken to task by the general, and latterly by Alice herself, acknowledged his guilt and was led away in disgrace, while the young lieutenant, restored to place and honor, found a recompense in the warm embrace of the woman he loved.

SOLAX.

BABY'S CHOICE (Dec. 6).—In this production baby has decided which of the two of her sister's callers is the most eligible. Her decision is final. As soon as she makes up her mind she lays out her plans of attack. When the suitor, who in some way has incurred her displeasure, calls to see her sister, she makes it as hard for him as possible. Indeed when he is about to leave, she writes in his hat that he is person non grata, or words to that effect. He tries to do his best by her, but the baby is as relentless as fate.

One day the unfortunate lover calls when the favorite one is on the premises. The favorite is very attentive to the child and allows her to play rough-house with him. When the child spies the ineligible one she makes for him and waylays him to another part of the house. She locks him up in a room and then runs off in delight.

The imprisoned suitor is furious, and becomes incensed when he sees from the window the object of his affections in the embrace of his rival. A counterplot is prettily interwoven. It shows that the baby's dislikes were well founded and shows that the man whom she disliked was really a villain.

THE PAPER-MAKING INDUSTRY (Dec. 6).—Modern methods of paper-making present fine educational opportunities. How many know how paper is made? Have they any idea of the number of processes the wood must undergo before the paper is ready for actual commercial purposes?

The picture shows in a picturesque way how Glens Falls has been harnessed for its motive power.

THE LITTLE SHOE (Dec. 8).—Rich and happy parents of a baby girl leave their baby in a carriage on the curb and enter a store to make a small purchase. A sorrow laden mother, who had just lost her own child, comes along. The child begins to cry and the lady walks over to comfort her. In an absent-minded moment she takes the baby in her arms and carries her off, forgetting temporarily that the baby is not her own.

Seventeen years elapse before the mother and child are reunited. They are brought together in a very natural way. When the baby was stolen the only clue left in her carriage was her little shoe. The woman who had stolen the baby locked up in a small box the child's trinkets together with the other little shoe. These shoes are matched and the identity of the girl is established.

JUST TO GET ACQUAINTED

Send us 20c. in stamps and we will mail you one of the prettiest ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES made. Write for Lists today

UNITED SLIDE ADVER. CO.
61 West 14th St. New York, N. Y.

The way to increase your patronage is to show them something better than your competitor.

MIRRORROIDE

Screens and Curtains

Will do this for you. Mirroroide has done it for hundreds of other exhibitors. Why not for you? We can produce hundreds of original testimonials proving that has increased business 100 per cent. in every theatre where it is used.

MIRRORROIDE

MIRRORROIDE
is highly endorsed by the clergy who know that with its use you can keep your theatre fully illuminated during projection.

MIRRORROIDE
will give you better detail, more depth, brighter and clearer pictures. 100 per cent. improvement over any other screen or curtain.

MIRRORROIDE
is a mercury foil coating of pure silver brilliancy that will never fade, crack, peel or lose its lustre.

MIRRORROIDE
will cut your juice bill 1-3. Besides it's the best, the world's best, by actual tests.

MIRRORROIDE
is the only curtain and screen that will not lose or distortionize the picture close up or at a great angle to screen.

Mr. H. H. Dean,
Dreamland Theatre,
Vernon, B. C.,
Writes us that he is greatly surprised at the brightness of his picture. In fact, he says they are too bright. This Proves Our Claim That We Can Save One-Third Of Your Juice Bill; Simply Reduce Amperage At Arc. Hundreds of Testimonials From All Over the World.

Get our samples.

Demonstration size 1-3 yard 50 cents. Ordinary free circulars, testimonials, etc., for the asking.

BENJAMIN GENTER CO.
Newburgh, N. Y.

IMP.

HER BIRTHDAY (Dec. 9).—A young husband wishes to make his wife a birthday present and strives to keep the affair a secret. He takes a friend into his confidence who writes him a note, which arouses the suspicions of the wife. The husband declines to show her the note, which she eventually finds, and she thinks her suspicions are confirmed. The plan is to buy her a saddle horse, but the movements of the husband are so mysterious that she institutes an investigation, in which the husband is shown up as a flirt, with his friend as an accomplice. The tangle is finally straightened out, but not until the bride has made life quite miserable for the indulgent and forgiving husband and his friends. When the wife realizes that her suspicions have been foolish and unjust she craves the pardon of her spouse and all is forgiven. (Copyright, 1911, by the Independent Moving Pictures Company of America.)

COLUMBIA'S INTERSCHOLASTIC CHASE (Dec. 9).—The camera man caught the athletes at various portions of the long and arduous cross country run of about five miles.

The start was at the University in New York, across to Morningside Avenue, to 123d Street, across to Riverside, around Grant's Tomb to 96th Street and back over the same course.

Many scenes of interest in New York were caught by the camera and enhance the interest in the picture. Fourteen schools were represented in the endurance race and prizes worth competing for were hung up. (Copyright, 1911, by the Independent Moving Pictures Company of America.)

WHY THE CHECK WAS GOOD (Dec. 11).—Oliver Stetson, the son of Walter Stetson, is a typical young man who is fond of pleasure without vicious habits. One night Oliver lingers too long at the pool table and on going home is turned adrift by his father.

He goes from his home without money and gradually assumes the dress and habits of a nomad, roaming around the country. Footsore and weary, he reaches a small village. He enters a shoe store to steal a pair of shoes and is apprehended by the proprietor, Alanson Erwin. Instead of turning the unfortunate over to the law, the shoe dealer equips Oliver with a presentable suit of clothing, shoes, etc., and gives him a small sum of money. He writes Oliver's name on a card and bids him goodbye.

Oliver flourishes, but his benefactor meets with business reverses and is at last forced to forge a name to a check to obtain money to buy the necessaries of life. He finds the name of Oliver on the card and resolves to use same. Presenting the check at the bank, it is at once recognized by the paying teller as a forgery. The old man is detained, until Oliver, now a successful business man, is summoned and the matter explained. He seeks an interview with the suspected man and discovers it is his benefactor. He announces that the signature is genuine and then relates his story to the bank officials. The old man is taken to the home of Oliver and cared for the remainder of his days. (Copyright, 1911, by Independent Moving Pictures Company of America.)

THE LITTLE STOCKING (Dec. 14).—John Allen leaves his wife and child and goes to the gold country in search of the yellow metal. As his wife finishes packing his grip his little girl slips in one of her little white stockings and the father kisses her and leaves for the West.

On arriving at his destination, he finds a congenial companion in Dan Bartlett, an honest, robust miner. While unpacking his effects the little stocking falls to the floor and Allen, in the exuberance of his joy, announces that he will not return until he has filled the stocking with nuggets.

Allen and Bartlett go prospecting and, losing their way, their water is exhausted, and they suffer on the desert. Bartlett sees his companion die and is about to succumb when assistance arrives and he is saved from torture and death.

Reaching the camp, Bartlett tells the miners the circumstances, how Allen braved death for the sake of his wife and child. The narration awakens the right sort of emotion in the hearts of the lonely miners, and they chip in, fill the stocking with nuggets, and give Bartlett a substantial sum to carry to the bereaved woman.

Series No. 2---ITALIAN-TURKISH WAR 20 SLIDES PLAIN $5.00 20 SLIDES COLORED $10.00

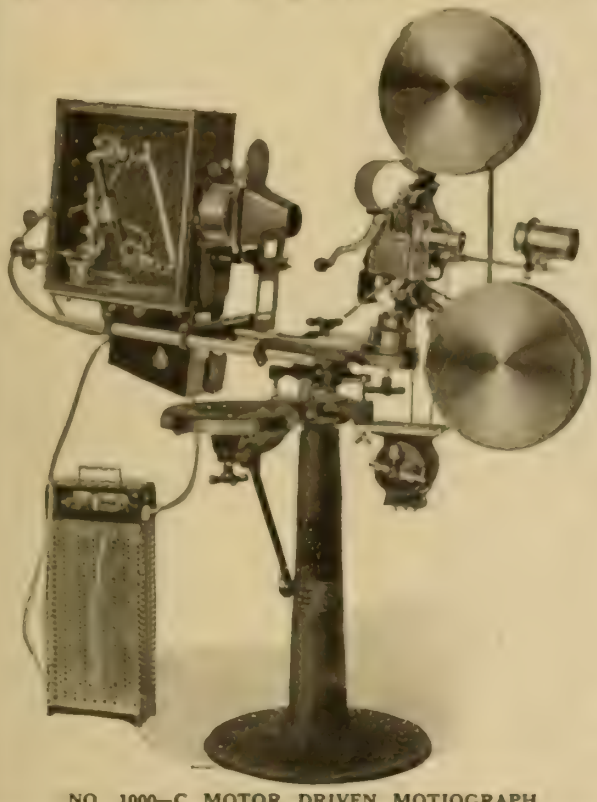
The only genuine slide on the market showing actual fighting scenes. The first to arrive in this country. Produced by special permission of the Central News Association of Genoa, Italy. They will surprise you.

Special 1-sheet 5-color lithos free with each set. Sold only by

A. J. CLAPHAM, Fine Art Slide Manufacturer, 130 West 37th St. New York City

Wire orders, and be first to exhibit them.

A FULLY EQUIPPED 1912 MOTOR-DRIVEN MOTIOGRAPH FOR $268.50 UP



NO. 1000—C MOTOR DRIVEN MOTIOGRAPH

The latest addition to the MOTIOGRAPH line

A snappy, up-to-the-minute 1912 model machine that for grace of design, perfection in construction, "and picture," cannot be equalled.

Naturally you wonder how we can give such astonishing value for the money. The reason is simple—We have been building machines for years. Have a splendidly equipped factory, and the wonderful success of the MOTIOGRAPH has done away with heavy experimental expense.

Dependable Service is what you are after, and every MOTIOGRAPH sold is our silent salesman. When you buy a MOTIOGRAPH and like it you tell your friends and when they are in the market their decision is influenced by the wonderful results you have obtained.

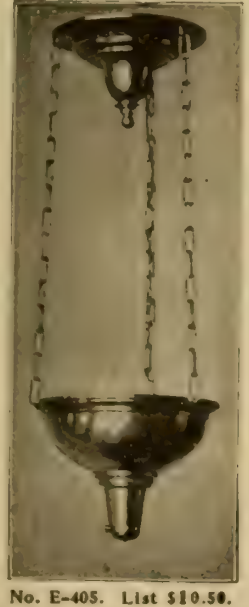
We are always glad to demonstrate our line.—Call at the factory and learn more about us and the MOTIOGRAPH.

Good MOTIOGRAPH operators—get in touch with us.

Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company

564-572 WEST RANDOLPH ST. CHICAGO

For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere



No. E-405. List $10.50.
Ask discounts of your Electric dealer. If he does not carry, write us direct.
Engineering Reports Free.

"DAYLIGHT PICTURES"

WITH ANY CURTAIN OR MACHINE

AT SMALL COST WITH

The Eye Comfort System of Indirect Illumination

Since the first advertisement in this paper, a few months ago, theatres in all sections of the country have installed this system. All enthusiastic, and acknowledge that theatre lighting has been revolutionized.

Even illumination throughout your theatre can be obtained without a light in range of vision.

No glaring side lights to detract from the detail of your picture, and more perfect depth and perspective are assured.

Our engineering department will furnish you, free of expense, reports and recommendations on request.

BETTER LIGHT AT LESS EXPENSE

Investigate—Write today

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO., 235 Jackson Blvd., Chicago

Gentlemen:—Send full information regarding lighting of our theatre.

LENGTH ..... WIDTH ..... CEILING HEIGHT .....

NAME ..... ADDRESS .....

Bartlett arrives in the East on Christmas Eve and seeks out the widow of his dead companion. She is being harassed by a grasping landlord and Bartlett pays the scoundrel and throws him out of the house together with his process server.

Christmas morning the little girl arises and discovers that Santa Claus has indeed paid their humble cottage a most welcome visit, for Bartlett has been generous in his purchases. The widow thanks him, and bids him take her thanks to his partners, and Bartlett returns to the mountains sad, but with a knowledge that he has performed his duty to the widow and her child. (Copyright, 1911, by the Independent Moving Pictures Company of America.)

GREAT NORTHERN.

BUTTONS AND HOOKS (Dec. 9).—Mr. Durand, a solicitor, is preparing for his participation in a dinner party. His toilet is almost complete, but the fastening of his collar gives him some trouble. He cannot button it. Bursting into his wife's room, he finds his better-half in the clutches of her maid, who is experiencing trouble with the bodice hooks. He promptly annexes Jeannette to his dressing-room. Thither comes the irate Mrs. Durand and a tussle ensues for the possession of the maid. Jeannette is eventually pushed out of the room by her mistress, and in disgust leaves the house. Husband and wife eventually overcome their difficulties, and are on their way to the dinner party. Here hubby is paired off with a charming young damsel, while his wife is handed over to the tender mercies of a specimen of humanity, whose dial appears to have passed through the perils of a landslide. At table, Mr. Durand showers attentions upon his fair partner, much to the chagrin of his better-half, who creates a scene, and the pair eventually leave for home. Here they encounter a repetition of their former difficulties. He will not undo her hooks, as she will not unbotton his collar. Hubby repairs to the street and solicits the aid of passers-by, but without avail, until two young ladies come along. They perform the necessary operation, and the trio go off to a night café, where, after refreshing the inner man, they indulge in terpsichorean exercise. In the small hours of the morning, Durand repairs to his home and is astonished to find the Life Saving Corps motor car outside his domicile. His wife as a last resort has telephoned for their assistance to enable her to remove her apparel. Our familiar friend Smith is at the head of this corps, and his susceptibilities for the morals of his confreres enable him to once more demonstrate his capabilities as the comic member of the company. He is in the midst of his duties as lady's maid when Durand bursts into the room. Explanations follow, and it is made apparent to hubby that 'tis not his to reason why, he's but to do and pay, and after he has satisfied the Corps' demands, he and Mrs. Durand are reconciled, and, let us hope, live happily ever after, as the story books say.

WINTER IN SWITZERLAND (Dec. 9).—This is an exceedingly successful picture of Alpine scenery, taken for the most part from the Via Mala—a road that has been blasted along the mountain sides and passes through the most beautiful and impressive scenery. Snow-bound villages nestle in the valleys, the superb peaks forming a wonderful background.

THANHOUSER.

THE LADY FROM THE SEA (Dec. 12).—Ellida was the daughter of a lighthouse keeper, and spent many hours near the water's edge.

While she was still scarcely more than a child, one of these ships put in for repairs at a fishing village near the lighthouse, and its second officer, while on a day's outing to kill time, visited the lighthouse. He there met Ellida, whose youth and beauty he admired.

While his ship was still undergoing repairs, the second officer quarreled with his captain, and a fight ensued in which the captain was killed. The guilty man escaped from the ship, and making his way to the lighthouse, forced Ellida to assist in his flight. Before going he compelled her to plight her troth with him, inventing a strange ceremony to impress her, by fastening a ring which she wore to one of his, and casting them both into the sea. As soon as he had gone, Ellida wrote, telling him that she would not consider the engagement binding.

The sailor paid no attention to her letter, and simply wrote that some day he would return to claim her and that she must wait for him.

Being left alone by the death of her father, Ellida finally consented to become the wife of Dr. Wangel. The doctor was a widower with two grown daughters, and Ellida found herself a stranger in her new home, and spent much of her time alone. Her loneliness naturally led to a mental depression, and as the years passed, an awful dread grew in her mind of what her fate should be if her sailor lover ever returned to claim her.

Her imagination had so strongly worked upon her, that when the sailor did finally return from the sea, she entreated her husband to allow her to go to him, although she feared, and had grown to hate the strange man. Dr. Wangel tried to show her that her duty and happiness lay with her husband and her home, but feeling that she would never be perfectly content with any fear darkening her life, he decided to tell her that she was absolutely free.

BRUNSWIG BROS.
New York Harmony Boys.
Formerly with Richard Mansfield Quartette.
(Singing to Please the People). Classic, Popular and Ragtime.
36 Consecutive Weeks in the South.
Just finished return date in Augusta, Ga.
Nov. 27—Open New Bonita Theatre, Pensacola, Fla.
Following this a return date San Carlos, Key West, Fla., Dec. 25th, then to Cuba.

SONG SLIDES
LIDE
LIDE
SONG SLIDES
World Series, Athletics vs. New York, 25 plain slides, $5.00; 25 colored slides, $8.50. The Great Austin Flood, 22 plain slides, $4.50; 22 colored slides, $8.00. Italy-Turkish War, 30 plain slides, $6.50; 30 colored slides, $10.00.
NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO.
23 N. Ninth Street Phila. Pa.

WHY—
—is the business of the Laemmle Film Service at the high water mark of its history right now? Because the Independent films have improved so wonderfully; because we are buying every good thing produced; because we use brains in making up programs and because our service department is the best on earth. That's the sort of combination YOU ought to hook up with. Write!
Carl Laemmle, President
The Laemmle Film Service
New Number:
204 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.
Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1517 Farnam St., Omaha, Neb.
515 Mulberry St., Des Moines, Iowa
1110 Wyandotte St., Kansas City, Mo.
The BIGGEST and BEST film renter in the World
(Have you used our Free Employment Bureau? It's at your Service)

When Ellida found that she was free to choose between the sailor and her husband she realized that this man who had been a fearful mystery, whose very existance she concealed from everyone, including her husband, was simply a man whom she disliked, and whom she could freely marry, or dismiss at her pleasure. Of her own free will she ordered the sailor to leave her, telling him that he no longer had power to intimidate or mystify her.

With perfect trust and no secrets between them, Dr. Wangel and his Ellida started life anew, with no bar to their complete love and understanding.

DEACON DEBBS (Dec. 15).—A young New Yorker has "expectations," the same being a wealthy uncle who lives in the country, and who has signified his intentions of making the young man his heir.

While he and his wife are entertaining some friends at a bridge party in their home one evening, they are shocked on receiving a telegram from a friend in the country, informing them that Uncle is on his way to town, intending to visit the young man and find how he is withstanding the temptations of a great city. The nephew sees that something must be done at once, and having little time at his disposal, hastily adjourns the bridge party, and organizes his laughing friends into a literary society, so as to make "a front" with Uncle.

The elder man arrives and is thoroughly impressed with the fact that his nephew is a serious-minded youth, possessed of all the virtues we read about. As the days pass, this conviction becomes deeper, for the nephew and his wife take the uncle on a round of sight-seeing, seeing the most solemn things and hearing the most highbrowed lectures.

Finally, when they go to a particularly deep discourse, they get away by a ruse, leaving Uncle alone to enjoy the lecture, while they run off to have a real "city time" by themselves. Having spent a jolly afternoon, they return and take Uncle home again, pleased with the thought that he had not been neglected.

One evening after Uncle had gone to bed, carrying an encyclopedia to read if he should awake during the night, the young couple steal into the sitting room. From its hiding place behind a row of books, the nephey produces a decanter, and a box of cigars. Chatting gaily with his wife, he prepares for a drink and a smoke. Suddenly his uncle stands glaring behind him. He takes the glass of strong liquor from the young man's trembling hand, the cigar from his left. The young man tries to explain; the elder with a nod, indicates a note on the table. It is from the uncle to his would-e heir, and contains the information that he, Uncle, has had the most dreary time in the world. He had come to the city for a good time, but all that came his way were lectures no person could or would want to understand. And he wound up by telling his nephew that he was a mutt, and was disinherited.

The uncle watched the young folks while they read this letter. Then he winked and drank the liquor prepared for the nephew. He next lighted the cigar and, finding it good, forgave the culprits. Then they took Uncle out to "see the town."

COMET.

THE UPS AND DOWNS OF RAFFERTY (Dec. 11).—The first scene shows Pat Rafferty on top of a ladder with a hod full of bricks resting on his shoulder. He is about to empty them, when the clock strikes six. He pauses and then descends, carrying the hod and bricks from where he found them. The foreman, observing this unique procedure, discharges Pat.

Next, Pat is a bartender. He receives a bill from a party whom he has served with drinks, but instead of tabulating the amount on the cash register, rings up "no sale," gives his own change and pockets the bill. This act of indiscretion is witnessed by the proprietor, who has Pat arrested. At the station-house, friends intercede for Pat. Some wag then suggests that Rafferty would make an ideal policeman and Pat is rigged up then and there as a full-fledged "cop."

Pat forms the acquaintance of Bridget, who is employed as maid of all work with a rich family on his "beat." Pat is invited to the house, where Bridget serves him with a meal, consisting of wine, cake, chicken, etc. Pat is monarch of all he surveys, and forthwith makes himself at home. Pat takes off his coat, helmet and club, and while enjoying his repast, a burglar enters. Pat is so scared that he does not know what to do. With Bridget cringing close to him, he telephones to police headquarters and informs them of the situation. While Pat is at the phone the burglar dons his coat, helmet and taking his club, makes off. In the meantime, the police arrive. They find Pat and Bridget kneeling before a huge safe which the burglar has forced open in

AN EASY WAY TO MAKE MONEY. Open to Everybody
$10 to $100 Paid for Picture Plots
Our Students Are Selling Scenarios. We can teach YOU, too. Most successful Book of Instruction. Sample actual scenario, List Buyer, Free Criticism of Your Work, all for $1 by mail. Start while demand is big.
PHOTO-PLAY SYNDICATE
BOX 20 CLEVELAND, OHIO

WURLITZER

World's Largest Mfrs. Established 1856

Wurlitzer Pian-Orchestra in Bijou Theatre, San Francisco, Cal.

Write for 32-page booklet, showing

Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments

in the leading picture theatres of the country.

The Wurlitzer Instruments furnish better music than musicians and reduce expenses. 50 different styles; time payments; big catalog free. If you can't call, write to our nearest branch.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company

CINCINNATI 117-121 E. 4th — NEW YORK 25-27 W. 32d — CHICAGO 329-331 S. Wabash — PHILADELPHIA 1835 Chestnut

ST. LOUIS 912 Pine — CLEVELAND 800 Huron Road — BUFFALO 701 Main — LOUISVILLE 426 W. Green — COLUMBUS, O. 57 E. Main

YOUR PROFITS DEPEND ON THE CROWDS THAT COME BACK

It is only by pleasing your audiences that you can get them to come back time and again. To please the crowds best it is not only necessary to show good films, but the important thing is to show these films to best advantage. That's why you should use

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lens

No matter how good a film is, it will be spoiled by a poor lens. When you use the Bausch & Lomb Projection Lens you get the very best out of every film. This lens gives clear, sharp, brilliant pictures. With the Bausch & Lomb Lens you will have the kind of pictures that bring the crowds back.

Send for descriptive literature 62D.

Our name, backed by over half a century of experience, is on all our products,—lenses, microscopes, field glasses, projection apparatus, engineering and other scientific instruments.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

NEW YORK WASHINGTON CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO LONDON ROCHESTER, N.Y. FRANKFORT

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX — EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

BOUND VOLUME No. 9

July to September, 1911

(THREE MONTHS)

NOW READY

$1.50 EACH NET $1.50

Postage 60c. extra, or Express Charges collect

PUBLICATION OFFICE

Moving Picture World, 125 East 23d St., N.Y. City

The E-Z Slide-Making Outfit

A SIMPLIFIED METHOD OF MAKING YOUR OWN ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

THE E-Z slides are composed of a specially prepared transparent fiberless parchment sheet bound between two heavy mat board frames—a complete slide all ready for use.

Clear as Glass—Will Outlast Glass

You can write or print on these slides as easily as on a sheet of writing paper and the ink will not run or blur.

The outfit consists of blank slides and a series of printed copy sheets of various sizes and styles of type, ornaments, etc. for tracing letters on slides.

	Price
No. 1 Outfit consists of 12 blank slides, copy sheets, etc.	$ .50
No. 2 Outfit consists of 36 blank slides, copy sheets, etc.	1.25
No. 3 Outfit consists of 100 blank slides, copy sheets, etc.	3.35

The E-Z Printed Announcement Set

Containing 6 Standard Announcement Slides in Colors

No. 1 Good Night	No. 4 Ladies Have Mercy
No. 2 Good Afternoon	No. 5 Change of Program Tomorrow
No. 3 Intermission	No. 6 Just A Moment Please

Price Complete Set of 6 Slides $1.00

Ask your film exchange for them, or write to

BATTERSHALL & OLESON 39 W. Adams St. Chicago, Ill.

his attempt to rob. Pat is mistaken for the thief and haled to the station-house, the burglar-cop aiding in the arrest. When the burglar's identity is discovered, the lieutenant is so surprised that he turns to the crook and says, "It takes a good burglar to make a good cop, so I will give you Rafferty's job." The tables are turned. Pat is back at the old stand, carrying the hod. The burglar has now intrenched himself in the good graces of Bridget, and Pat glares with envy at the pair as he sees them strolling by the building upon which he is at work. The burglar-cop taunts Pat while patrolling his beat, which so enrages him that he retaliates by dumping a hod of brick on the head of his blue-coated successor.

JUST IN TIME FOR DINNER (Dec. 15).—When war calls John Bartlett to duty, he does not forget to attend to the most important thing of his career—the payment of the mortgage due on Christmas Day. After taking leave of his family and his old father and mother, he visits the office of Ephriam Fox, the village lawyer. "The mortgage on the farm has to be paid and I have come to you for that purpose," the young soldier said. "Here is the money, and the only demands I make is that you give me a receipt and keep the fact of what I have done from the old folks until Christmas morning. I want it to be a sort of surprise." Fox agrees to do all this and John, very grateful, departs. Soon word reaches the Bartletts that John has been killed in battle. The news immediately fires Fox with dishonorable motives. Dead men tell no tales, he realizes, and nobody but himself knows of the payment of the mortgage. Why not take advantage of this fact? He visits the home of the Bartletts and reminds them that the mortgage, which falls on the morrow, Christmas Day, must be paid. The unfortunate people have no money, and plead with Fox for an extension of time. The lawyer is obdurate, but says that he will compromise, if Mary, the wife of John, will marry him. Mary is undecided. She wants to save the old folks from eviction, and begs the unscrupulous lawyer for time to consider. She bids him call the next day, which Fox does. Mary, however, rejects him and the family are about to be cast into the street when John, who is still alive, arrives on the scene. When he learns what Fox has done he is furious. He orders him from the house on threat of immediate arrest. Joy has now taken the place of gloom and all hands sit down to their Christmas dinner with hearts filled with bliss and thanksgiving.

POWERS.

THE LITTLE CHAPERONE (Dec. 12).—Makes a man feel like a big boob to have his girl's little sister's majesty capering around him on every second of his visit, sitting on the sofa when he wants to be spooney, and dogging his footsteps at every opportunity. She's not dancing attendance on him, either, mind you, for if that were the case, the proffered coins would easily relieve the couple of the curly-headed nuisance; but that is not the case. The little Nemesis has got some "card up her sleeve," and when the couple in desperation plan to elope, the chaperonette (copyrighted), is, in the parlance of the day, "on the job." So much so that the sheriff is apprised of the fact, and while he is scratching the moss that covers his brains in the hope of finding an excuse to interfere in the elopement, it suddenly comes to him in the shape of a document from the authorities of a nearby city. Then we learn the reason why the kiddie had so persistently dogged sister's beau—it was that indefinable something—intuition.

VIEWS OF GENOA, ITALY (Dec. 12).—Who hasn't read and dreamed of romantic Genoa? Who has not been thrilled by the tales of wierd and grand happenings in the old Italian castles, of the fascinating life neath the beating sun that has made "Italian blood" the favorite theme of the poet and the composer? You can almost see it as you read, can't you? But you can really see it all, as in life. That's our release, a series of glorious views.

WHEN HEART WIRES CROSS (Dec. 16).—Little Mr. Cupid, the operator, sometimes falls asleep on his job, and then there's real trouble. You'd never expect that there should be any trouble when the parties concerned are two bachelor boys and two sweet young darlings who have sworn never to marry—those kind are supposed not to have any heart wires at all. But it so turns out that Jack and Fred each get sweet on a honey girl, unknown to each other, ditto the girls. Complications arise from which you'd naturally judge that Operator Cupid's switchboard is the most rantankerous piece of mechanism you ever saw, because the poor bachelor boys almost fall victim to the wiles of each other's girls, and they're both as innocent of any intent as babes. As for that matter, the girls are willing parties, but in their case, too, ignorance is the blister. One of those heart-smashing, breath-grabbing situations is imminent, when the switchboard rights itself again, and there are two bachelor harps and two bachelor girls less in the world; nothing tragic, bless you, just married.

REX.

THE MEASURE OF A MAN (Dec. 6).—Jack Fuller and his sweetheart, Bird, go off for a jaunt through the woods. They sit down on a rock to—well, there's no use telling on them, but—say, you're not old enough to have forgotten. They are so absorbed in their—now, never mind—that it is some time after the actual deed that Bird discovers the theft of her purse. In the distance the thief's figure looms up, and Jack goes off in pursuit.

For a long time Bird waits for the return of her lover. At last she determines to go home, thinking he has lost his way and would return home alone. She finds her way out to the clearing, and suddenly remembers that she has no car-fare. She is in despair over her dilemma. Fred Barton, a fashionable clubman, passing by, notes her worried look, and volunteers his assistance. His charm, his polish, his suave manner, conquer her shyness. She tells him of her predicament. He invites her to his home, nearby, for rest and refreshment, and Bird, at first reluctant, is again overpowered by his personality. She accepts.

She comes to a mansion, and Bird, humble shop-girl, is awed at the evidences of wealth and refinement. She contrasts the elegance, the gilt and velvet, to the poverty of her own squalid home. She compares the handsome, cultured scion of wealth to Jack, rough, poor, and unlearned, and the seed of discontent is sown, to reap the wild harvest of regret.

He takes her home in his automobile, and makes another appointment with her. Jack, who had returned with the purse, to find her not yet home, is waiting, anxious for her welfare. Her attitude toward him is strange, strained; he feels an unknown doubt, a deep pang—and wonders.

In the days that follow Jack notices and divines. Broken-hearted, his dream of a summer day shattered, he enters the army.

And the woman—she continues to meet her Prince Charming until—he begins to neglect her. Puzzled, pained, she goes to his grounds, and lurking in the shadows, sees him leave the house with another woman—his wife. Disillusioned, she goes her own lone way in sorrow and remorse.

How does it end? Just as we'd all like it to. Five years later she again meets Jack, and the love of the summer day years before is reborn, to live and last through the springs and summers and autumns of many, many years, to the gray of life and the snows of December.

Among the Exhibitors

Louisville, Ky.—The Standard Amusement Company, with a capital of $12,500, has been incorporated to operate motion picture theaetrs. I. A. Greenstein, Sim B. Lesler and Joseph R. Lewis are the incorporators.

Guthrie Center, Ia.—Powd McLuin is preparing plans for the erection of a motion picture theater here.

Appleton City, Mo.—Will Shannon has purchased the only moving picture theater in this city.

San Francisco, Cal.—The largest moving picture theater in the United States is nearing completion.

Big Stone Gap, Va.—J. R. Taylor has had plans prepared for a $20,000 moving picture theater here.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—Excavation for the new $25,000 motion picture theater in East Center Street has been begun.

Minneapolis, Minn.—A building permit has been issued to F. J. Lake, 1305 West Lake Street, for the extension of a motion picture theater.

Bellaire, Ohio.—The Sprague Amusement Company will erect a $10,000 moving picture theater in South Belmont Street, with a seating capacity of 800.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—I. Frankel has purchased realty at 121-123 Fifth Avenue, presumably for the erection of a moving picture theater.

Rock Island, Ill.—George Millhouse will open a motion picture theater in this city.

Eaton Rapids, Mich.—Grant Muir will erect a motion picture theater here.

Greenfield, Mass.—The site on which the First Baptist Church has had its home for so many years will be adorned by a moving picture theater, under the management of Herbert S. Streeter.

Torrington, Conn.—Samuel A. Mackintosh and A. F. Strickland are erecting a motion picture theater here.

Westfield, Mass.—The Star Moving Picture Theater, at Elm and Bartlett Streets, has just been opened.

Millville, N. J.—Christopher Hand has had plans prepared for the erection of a moving picture theater here.

Columbus, Ohio.—J. E. Stewart is erecting a two-story moving picture theater at High Street and Lane Avenue.

Racine, Wis.—Work on the new Bate Theater, at Main and State Streets, will be started shortly.

Foley, Minn.—N. C. Jensen will erect a moving picture theater here.

Atlanta, Ga.—The Pastime Theater, formerly owned by Leighton H. Burroughs, has changed hands to Arthur Wood, who for some months was manager of the Grand Opera House.

Import Department

International Film Traders

5 West 14th St., New York

Weekly Importations

Feature Films

Masterpieces of the World's Greatest Producers ranging in length from 1000—4000 ft. selected by our own European Agents.

Artistic Posters 3 Sheets and more.

Features sold outright without restriction.

Correspondence solicited.

Eau Claire, Wis.—The Orpheum Theater has pased into the hands of new owners; a deal for the purchase of the popular playhouse has been closed by the New Majestic Theater Company. Ed Dowling will have charge of the theater as manager.

Aberdeen, S. D.—L. V. Calvert has purchased the Gates-Larson interest in the Cozy Theater, and together with Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Jamieson will conduct it as a high class picture theater. Mr. Calvert was connected for eight months with the Bijou and two years with the Idle Hour theaters of this city, and during the past year has been manager for the Bijou Film Amusement Company, of Sioux Falls.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Schutz & Seeler are preparing plans for a moving picture theater building for David J. Brown at Thomas and Murray Avenues.

Councils Bluff, Ia.—The Majestic Theater, which has been operated by Vern Brown for the last few years, has been leased to Thomas Canaan.

New York City.—Shampan & Shampan are preparing plans for a moving picture and vaudeville theater, 50 x 100, to be built on the north side of Monroe Street, 93.4 feet east of Clinton Street. It will consist of auditorium and one balcony. George E. Siegel, of Brooklyn, is the owner.

Utica, N. Y.—A permit was secured at the Bureau of Buildings by Andrew M. Ehlinger for the remodeling of the property at 324 Varick Street into a picture house which will be known when completed as the Dreamland Theater.

Middletown, Conn.—Middletown is to have a new moving picture theater, to be known as Heath's, and to be located in the new Fagan block on Main Street.

New York City.—Gronenberg & Leuchtag, architects, have filed plans for installing a moving picture show in the two story building at the northwest corner of Sylvan Place and 120th Street for Sam Schwartz at a cost of $5,000.

Washington, Pa.—W. M. Irwin has disposed of his moving picture theater known as the Grand, on West Chestnut Street, to Joseph Clark.

Newark, N. J.—A one-story moving picture theater has been erected by Frederick C. Kern at 648 Springfield Avenue. The structure will be forty-seven feet wide by 114 feet in depth. It will cost approximately $15,000.

Omaha, Neb.—Parneall Magan and Parker Haight, late treasurer and assistant treasurer of the Boyd Theater, have leased and are now in control of the It Theater, a moving picture enterprise, at Sherman Avenue and Locust Street.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Fairview Heights is to have a motion picture house. The Fairview Amusement Company is about to acquire title to the southwest corner of Warner and Flora Streets, on which a playhouse 33 by 100 feet, with 300 seats, will be built.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Saxe Bros., of the Saxe Amusement enterprises, are erecting a $20,000 motion picture and vaudeville theater in St. Joseph, Mo.

Duluth, Minn.—J. C. Woodworth, proprietor of the Grand Theater has leased the rooms formerly occupied by the Colonial Inn and will open another moving picture house there.

Antigo, Wis.—Mr. B. F. Kelly, a prominent theater man, intends to put a building and convert it into a high class moving picture and vaudeville theater.

"La Cinematografia Italiana ed Estera"

IS ITALY'S LEADING PAPER FOR THE ANIMATED PICTURE

PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY

32, 36 and 40 large pages. $1.60 per annum.

Editor-proprietor, Prof. GUALTIERO I. TABBRI

Via Cappuccini 31 (Barriera S. Paolo) Turin, Italy

"Wanted--Pathe's Passion Play"

I want to buy a positive copy of Pathe's latest, "Passion Play." Reels must be in good condition. I must have the right copy, save postage. Willing to pay right price for the right stuff. Reels must be shipped C. O. D., subject to examination. Will guarantee express charges both ways. References, First National Bank, Minneapolis, Minn.

JAMES V. BRYSON

256 Hennepin Ave., - Minneapolis, Minn.

FOR SALE

In the greatest city in the United States, a Film Exchange fully equipped and with an established business, rents reels at 10c and making from $50.00 to $80.00 weekly. Its stock will inventory between $4,000.00 and $5,000.00. Only $2,000.00 against the entire exchange. Reason for selling is on account of other business. Will consider $1,500.00 cash and balance on time with good security. Or we will sell for $3,500.00 cash. In the centre of 1,000 shows, and possibilities are greater than in any section of the country to-day.

FILM EXCHANGE

MOVING PICTURE WORLD, - NEW YORK CITY

Operators!

I guarantee quick and satisfactory repair work on all machines. Only genuine parts supplied. Get my prices on ONE DROP OIL and BULL DOG CEMENT the best articles of their kind on the market

H. A. MACKIE

863 Broadway, Cor. 14th Street New York

'Phone: 2478 Stuyvesant

Wants to buy: "Dante's Inferno," "Tale of Two Cities," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "The Two Orphans," "Queen Rawn," "Romeo and Juliet," "Life of David Copperfield," "Enoch Arden," "Johnson-Jeffries Fight," "James Brothers in Missouri," "Faust," "Hands Across the Sea," and other two and three reel features.

For Sale: Films, $5.00 per reel. Used machines, $35 up; new Standard and new Motiograph machines, factory price, $225 ours $150.

For Rent: Films, $1.00 per reel weekly.

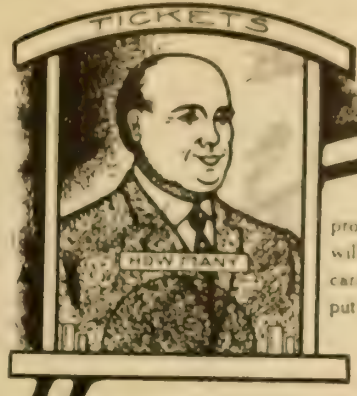
H. DAVIS Watertown, Wis.

STOP

Supplying exhibitors with dirty, rainy films. Before sending them out, have same redeveloped, cleaned and softened.

Ortho Film Company

40 East 12th St., N. Y. C.



As the Manager Sees It

This Manager looks prosperous and happy. You will feel the same way when you discard that old juice consuming rheostat and put in a

Fort Wayne Compensarc

It will increase your box office receipts because your patrons will notice at once how much brighter and clearer your pictures are. And what's more, it will

Cut 2-3 from Your Monthly Lighting Bill

That sounds as if we were stretching it, doesn't it? But we are not and just to show you, we will ship you one on 30 days free trial and let you prove it.

If it does not do all we claim for it, ship it back at our expense and it won't cost you one cent.

If this sounds "good" to you, send for our little booklet "Compensarc vs. Rheostat" and find out the particulars.

You are paying the Lighting Company half your profits every day you wait.

Fort Wayne Electric Works

of General Electric Company
1402 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Indiana

LISTEN, MR. EXHIBITOR!

When you get all the Independent Films released by Thanhouser, Nestor, Reliance, Bison, Imp, Rex, Solax, Powers, American, Eclair.

2	reels	6	times	per	week,	$14.00
2	"	7	"	"	"	15.00
3	"	6	"	"	"	16.00
3	"	7	"	"	"	17.00

WHY HESITATE

NATIONAL FILM BROKERS, 186 N. La Salle St., CHICAGO

ANOTHER ENTERPRISE TRIUMPH

TOGO CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Complete with Rubber Tubing and Keyless Jet

SUPERIOR WORKMANSHIP and HIGH GRADE MATERIAL combined with SAFETY and SIMPLICITY place the TOGO far ahead of any other cheap outfit.

PORTABLE and ready for instant use - $25.00.

Anyone can operate it

MANUFACTURED BY

The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564 W. Randolph St., Chicago

FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS

INDEPENDENT Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Nov. 13—The Eastern Cowboy (W. Com.).....1000
Nov. 16—The Way of the West (Com.).....1000
Nov. 20—The Test (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 23—The Master of the Vineyard (W. Dr.)1000
Nov. 27—Jolly Bill of the Rollicking R (W. Com.) 1000
Nov. 30—The Sheriff's Sisters (W. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 4—The Angel of Paradise Ranch (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 7—The Smoke of the Forty-five (Dr.)...1000
Dec. 11—The Man Hunt (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 14—Santa Catalina, Magic Isle of the Pacific (Scenic and Educational)..1000
Dec. 18—The Last Notch (Dr.).....1000

CHAMPION.

Nov. 20—National Guardsmen and Regulars at Fort Riley, Kansas (Top.)..... 950
Nov. 22—When the Sheriff Got His Man (Am. Dr.) 950
Nov. 27—The Mother Goose Series (Juvenile).. 950
Nov. 29—The Two Browns (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 4—Yankee Doodle (Juvenile).....
Dec. 4—Our Navy (Naval)..... 950
Dec. 6—The Indian Fortune Teller (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 11—A Traitor on the Staff (Dr.)..... 950

Dec. 13—The Saving of Dan (Dr.)..... 950

COMET.

Nov. 20—The Office Boy's Dream (Com.)..... 960
Nov. 24—Diamond Locket (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 27—Grandma's Toothache (Com.)..... 955
Dec. 1—The Late Mrs. Early (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 4—Billy's Letters (Com.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Dead Canary (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 11—The Ups and Downs of Rafferty (Com.)
Dec. 15—Just In Time for Dinner (Dr.).....

ECLAIR.

Nov. 6—Willie Challenges Jim Jackson (Com.)
Nov. 6—Life Under the Sea (Educational)....
Nov. 13—The Legend of the Eagle (Dr.)..... 925
Nov. 21—Hands Across the Sea in '76 (Am.-Dr.) 2000
Nov. 23—Portguguese Centaurs (Military)..... 600
Nov. 23—The Automatic Lighter (Com.)..... 400
Nov. 28—Miss Masquerader (Am. Com.)..... 400
Nov. 30—The Five Daughters of Mr. Durand (Com.) .....
Nov. 30—Gussy's Congratulations (Com.).....
Dec. 5—In Humanity's Cause (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—There Fell a Flower (Com.)..... 660
Dec. 7—Manners and Traditions of Piemont (Educational) 660
Dec. 12—The Musician's Daughter (Am. Dr.)..
Dec. 14—Her One Day's Dream (Japanese Dr.)

GREAT NORTHERN.

Oct. 21—His Fidelity Investigated (Com.).....
Oct. 28—The Vicissitudes of Fate (Dr.).....
Nov. 4—The Actor as a Soldier (Com.).....
Nov. 4—Through the South of France (Sc.)...
Nov. 11—A Woman's Wit (Com.).....
Nov. 18—A Rendezvous in Hyde Park (Com.-Dr.)
Nov. 18—High Scotland (Scenic) .....
Nov. 25—The Theft of Mona Lisa (Com.).....
Dec. 2—The Penalty of Her Ambition (Dr.)..
Dec. 9—Buttons and Hooks (Com.).....
Dec. 9—Winter In Switzerland (Scenic).....

IMP.

Nov. 6—Waiting at the Church (Com.).....1000
Nov. 9—The Wife's Awakening (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 13—The Fallin' Out (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 16—Breaking the Seventh Commandment (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 20—From the Bottom of the Sea (Dr.)..2000
Nov. 23—Executive Clemency (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 27—Uncle's Visit (Com.).....1000
Nov. 30—Over the Hills (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 2—Percy, the Masher (Com.)..... 750
Dec. 2—President Taft Dedicating the Naval Training Station at Chicago, Ill. (Topical).. 350
Dec. 4—The Dumb Messenger (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 7—Tony and the Stork.....1000
Dec. 9—Her Birthday (Com.-Dr.)..... 750
Dec. 9—Columbia Interscholastic Chase (Athletic.) 350
Dec. 11—Why the Check Was Good (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 14—The Little Stocking (Dr.).....1000

LUX.

Nov. 10—Bill Taken for a Ghost (Com.)..... 426
Nov. 10—The Diversions of a Nursemaid (Com.) 495
Nov. 17—Saas Grund, a Village in the Alps (Sc.) 295
Nov. 17—The Mystery of Beaufort Grange (Dr.) 695
Nov. 24—A Passing Cloud (Dr.)..... 655
Nov. 24—Bill and Bertie's Wedding Day (Com.) 325
Dec. 1—Bill As a Veterinary Surgeon (Com.) 488
Dec. 1—The Making of An Aeroplane (Ind.).. 419
Dec. 8—The Man In the Auto (Dr.)..... 650
Dec. 8—The Adventures of an Amateur Hypnotist. Com.) 350

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
BISON.

Nov. 3—A Young Squaw's Bravery (Dr.)....
Nov. 7—A Race for a Bride (Dr.).....
Nov. 10—Wenoma's Broken Promise (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—The Winning of Wonega (Dr).....
Nov. 17—The Ranchman's Mother-in-Law (Com.-Dr.) .....
Nov. 21—The Broken Trap (Dr.).....
Nov. 24—White Fawn's Escape (Dr.).....
Nov. 24—A Bad Man (Com.).....
Nov. 28—A Western One-Night Stand (Com-Dr.)
Dec. 1—An Easterner's Peril (Dr.).....
Dec. 5—The Empty Tepee (Indian Dr.).....
Dec. 8—A Range Romance (W. Dr.).....

AMBROSIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Oct. 25—Salambo (Dr.) .....
Nov. 1—Judas (Dr.) .....
Nov. 8—Dolly's Doll (Dr.) .....
Nov. 8—Tweedledum's Motor Car (Com.).....
Nov. 15—The Convict's Song (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—The Golden Wedding (Dr.).....
Nov. 29—The Little Duke (Dr.) .....
Nov. 29—Tiny Tom, Apache (Com.).....
Dec. 2—Tweedledum Goes Into High Life (Com.) .....
Dec. 2—The Accusing Dog (Com.).....
Dec. 6—Jorio's Daughter (Dr.).....

ITALA.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Oct. 28—The Rearing of Pheasants (Edu.)....
Nov. 4—Foolshead's Holiday (Com.).....
Nov. 11—A Victim of Competition.....
Nov. 11—The Effect of a Racket (Com.).....
Nov. 18—Foolshead, a Professor of Innocence (Comedy) .....
Nov. 18—The Life of Bees (Edu.).....
Nov. 25—The Tailor Wants His Pay (Com.)..
Nov. 25—The King of Noose Throwers.....
Dec. 2—Severed from the World (Dr.).....

MAJESTIC.

Nov. 26—The Courting of Mary (Com.).....
Dec. 3—Love Heeds Not Showers (Com.)....
Dec. 10—Keeping Mabel Home (Com.).....
Dec. 17—Little Red Riding Hood (Juvenile.)
Dec. 24—The Ultimate End (Dr.).....

NESTOR.

Nov. 8—A True Westerner (Dr.).....
Nov. 11—Desperate Desmond Almost Succeeds (Com.) .....
Nov. 15—The White Medicine Man (Dr.)....
Nov. 18—Mutt and Jeff and the Unlucky Star (Com.) .....
Nov. 18—That Kid from the East (Com.)....
Nov. 20—His Vacation (Com.).....
Nov. 22—The Cowboy Pugilist (W. Dr.).....
Nov. 25—Desperate Desmond Pursued by Claude Eclaire (Com.-Dr.) .....
Nov. 27—Happy Hobo's Help (Com.).....
Nov. 29—When the West Was Wild (Dr.)....
Dec. 2—A Western Feud (Comedy).....
Dec. 2—Mutt and Jeff's Scheme That Failed (Com.) .....
Dec. 4—Just Two Little Girls (Dr.).....
Dec. 6—Struck Gold (Dr.).....
Dec. 9—Desperate Desmond Adducts Rosamond (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 11—Only An Iceman (Com.).....
Dec. 13—The Law of the Range (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—In the Early Days (Com.).....
Dec. 16—Mutt & Jeff Make the Feathers Fly (Com.) .....

FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL FILM CO.

Nov. 20—Love and Aviation (Dr.) .....
Nov. 20—Zigomar (Dr.).....

POWERS.

Nov. 4—The Pride of the West (Dr.).....
Nov. 7—Mobilization of the American Fleet (Topical) .....
Nov. 11—For the Tribe (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—When First We Met (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—The Tell-Tale Parasol (Com.).....
Nov. 18—The Old Leader (Dr.).....
Nov. 21—Rivals (Com.) .....
Nov. 21—Views of Montserrat, Italy (Sc.).....
Nov. 25—Jug o' Rum (Dr.).....
Nov. 28—Too Much Injun (Com.).....
Nov. 28—The Lineman and the Girl.....
Dec. 2—The Wanderer's Return (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—Views of Lake Como (Scenic).....
Dec. 5—The Little Thief (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 5—The Secret Order of Horns (Com.)..
Dec. 9—Two Men and a Girl (Dr.).....
Dec. 12—The Little Chaperone (Com.).....
Dec. 12—Views of Genoa, Italy (Scenic).....
Dec. 16—When Heart Wires Cross (Com.-Dr.)..

RELIANCE.

Nov. 1—A Mix-Up in Suit Cases (Com. Dr.).
Nov. 4—The Greater Love (Dr.).....
Nov. 8—Marriage (Dr.) .....
Nov. 11—The Track Walker (Dr.).....
Nov. 15—The Moonshiners (Dr.).....
Nov. 18—The Injustice of Man (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—Helpless Man (Dr.).....
Nov. 25—A Daughter of Italy (Dr.).....
Nov. 2—A Happy Thanksgiving (Dr.).....
Nov. 29—A Happy Thanksgiving (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—The Poison Cup (Dr.).....
Dec. 6—The Turn of the Wheel (Dr.).....
Dec. 9—The Turnstile (Dr.).....
Dec. 13—Love and Charity (Dr.).....

REPUBLIC.

Dec. 5—The Savannah Auto Races (Topical)..
Dec. 17—In the Days of the Six Nations (Dr.)

REX.

Sept. 21—The Rose and the Dagger (Dr.).....
Sept. 28—The Derelict (Dr.).....
Oct. 5—Lost Illusions (Dr.).....
Oct. 12—Chasing a Rainbow (Dr.).....
Oct. 19—Her Sister (Dr.).....
Oct. 26—A Breach of Faith (Dr.).....
Nov. 2—The Tale of a Cat (Dr.).....
Nov. 9—Saints and Sinners (Dr.).....
Nov. 16—The Return (Dr.).....
Nov. 23—The Price (Dr.).....
Nov. 30—The Strangers (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—The Measure of a Man (Dr.).....

SOLAX.

Nov. 1—Following Cousin's Footsteps (Com.)..
Nov. 3—A Heroine of the Revolution (Dr.)....
Nov. 8—An Interrupted Elopement (Com.)....
Nov. 10—Grandmother Love (Dr.).....
Nov. 15—Baby Needs Medicine (Com.).....
Nov. 17—Only a Squaw (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—Husbands Wanted (Com.).....
Nov. 24—The Will of Providence (Com.-Dr.)..
Nov. 29—A Troublesome Picture (Com.).....
Nov. 29—Fun On Board the "U. S. S. Vermont" (Naval) .....
Dec. 1—A Revolutionary Romance (Mil.-Dr.)..
Dec. 6—Baby's Choice (Com.).....
Dec. 6—The Paper Making Industry (Ind.)...
Dec. 8—The Little Shoe (Dr.).....

THANHOUSER.

Oct. 27—The Jewels of Allah (Dr.).....
Oct. 30—The Loves of David Copperfield (Dr.)..
Nov. 3—Their Burglar (Dr.).....
Nov. 7—The Missing Heir (Dr.).....
Nov. 10—The Last of the Mohicans (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—The Higher—the Fewer (Com.).....
Nov. 17—A Mother's Faith (Dr.).....
Nov. 21—A Master of Millions.....
Nov. 24—The Baseball Bug (Com.-Dr.).....
Nov. 28—The Tempest (Dr.).....
Dec. 1—Beneath the Veil (Dr.).....
Dec. 5—The Newsy and the Tramp (Com.-Dr.)
Dec. 8—Brother Bob's Baby (Com.).....
Dec. 12—The Lady from the Sea (Dr.).....
Dec. 15—Deacon Debbs (Com.).....

YANKEE.

Nov. 3—At Daisy Farm (Dr.).....
Nov. 6—A Coward's Regeneration (Dr.).....
Nov. 10—He Didn't Like the Tune (Com.)...
Nov. 13—Into the Light (Dr.).....
Nov. 17—The Two Rooms (Dr.).....

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000	-	-	$1.25	20,000	-	-	$4.60	50,000	-	-	$7.50
10,000	-	-	$2.50	25,000	-	-	$5.50	100,000	-	-	$10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents!

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

THE MAJESTIC

Has made its first release and it was a SUCCESS. The second, third, fourth and all following releases will likewise be SUCCESSES, because we shall give the exchanges the class of pictures they need to inspire confidence in the exhibitors, who in turn must satisfy the public.

THE EXHIBITORS now have the greatest opportunity of their lives to increase their profits—this is due to the combined efforts of Independent exchanges and manufacturers, who have entered the field at great cost and made it possible for the exhibitor to choose his own service.

THE INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES are commencing to reap the benefits of this improved condition and they are to be congratulated for loyally supporting the manufacturers to the extent of making possible a healthy existence all around.

THE INDEPENDENT MANUFACTURERS have reaped benefits, but must not fall short of proper recognition of this splendid support—they must continue to improve their product—each and every one of them—and they will reap further reward.

The Majestic Will Practice Everything It Will Preach

WE HAVE THE BEST COMPANY of favorite actors and actresses in the business. We have the best plots and we know how to make pictures with that essential combination.

MAJESTIC RELEASES

Nov. 26	"The Courting of Mary"	High Class Comedy
Dec. 3	"Love Heeds Not Showers"	High Class Comedy
Dec. 10	"Keeping Mabel Home"	High Class Comedy
Dec. 17	By Special Request "LITTLE MARY," in "Little Red Riding Hood"	Nursery Rhyme
Dec. 24	"The Actress"	Strong Drama

THE MAJESTIC will release two subjects each week, commencing early in January—definite date to be announced later

THE MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

145 WEST 45th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

Sold through the Sales Co.

LICENSED Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Nov. 20—The Miser's Heart (Dr.).....
Nov. 23—Resourceful Lovers (Com.-Dr.).....
Nov. 23—Her Mother Intereferes (Com.).....
Nov. 27—Sunshine Through the Dark (Dr.).....
Nov. 30—A Woman Scorned (Dr.).....
Dec. 4—Why He Gave Up (Com.).....
Dec. 4—Abe Gets Even With Father (Com.)..
Dec. 7—The Failure (Dr.).....
Dec. 11—Saved from Himself (Dr.) 999
Dec. 14—Taking His Medicine (Com.)..... 673
Dec. 14—Her Pet (Com.)..... 323

EDISON.

Nov. 18—The Story of the Indian Ledge (Dr.).1000
Nov. 21—Life In the United States Army (Edu.)1000
Nov. 22—The Bo'sun's Watch (Com.).....1000
Nov. 24—Home (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 25—A Perilous Ride (W. Dr.).....1000
Nov. 28—The Lure of the City (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 29—The Troubles of A. Butler (Com.)..1000
Dec. 1—Pull for the Shore, Sailor (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 2—A Man for All That (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Awakening of John Bond (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 6—John Brown's Heir (Com.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Heart of Nichette (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 9—The Daisy Cowboys (Com.)..... 990
Dec. 12—Buckskin Jack, the Earl of Glenmore (Com.-Dr.) 1000
Dec. 13—An International Heart Breaker (Com.) 700
Dec. 13—Eskimos In Labrador (Edu.)..... 300
Dec. 15—Brockton Fair & Horse Show, Brockton, Mass., Oct. 3rd to 6th, 1911 (Topical) 990
Dec. 16—Stage Struck Lizzie (Com.)..... 650
Dec. 16—A Trip from Colorado Springs to Cripple Creek (Scenic)..... 350

ESSANAY.

Nov. 18—The Cattle Rustler's Father (W. Dr.).1000
Nov. 21—Too Much Turkey (Com.).....1000
Nov. 23—Old Fidelity (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 24—At the Stroke of Twelve (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 25—The Desert Claim (W. Dr.).....1000
Nov. 28—A Football Hero (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—Little Red Riding Hood (Fairy Dr.).1000
Nov. 30—'Twas Ever Thus (Comedy).....1000
Dec. 1—The Quinceville Raffle (Com.)..... 750
Dec. 1—The Girl In the Taxi (Com.)..... 300
Dec. 2—The Mountain Law (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Madman (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 7—The Long Strike (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—Getting Even With Emily (Com.).....
Dec. 8—Stray Bullets (Com.).....1000
Dec. 9—A Frontier Doctor (W. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 12—The First Man (Com.).....1000
Dec. 14—The Hack & Schmidt Bout (Com.).....
Dec. 14—A Polished Burglar (Com.).....1000
Dec. 15—A Goodfellow's Christmas Eve (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 16—The Cowboy Coward (W. Dr.).....1000

GAUMONT.

Nov. 18—The Reckoning (Dr.)..... 875
Nov. 18—A Trip to Saxony (Sc.)..... 150
Nov. 21—The Sealed Confession (Dr.)..... 900
Nov. 21—A Stone Quarry in Saxony (Sc.)..... 75
Nov. 25—The Escape from the Dungeon (Dr.).. 825
Nov. 25—Cave Homes on the Canary Isles (Sc.) 180
Nov. 28—A Busy Cupid (Com.)..... 758
Nov. 28—Review of the Austrian Army (Sc.). 232
Dec. 2—The Promoter (Dr.).....1140
Dec. 5—Jimmie Tricks the Landlady (Com.).. 475
Dec. 5—The Challenge (Dr.)..... 525
Dec. 9—Camoens, the Portuguese Shakespeare, Lisbon, 1578 (Hist. Dr.)..... 610
Dec. 9—Important Scenes in Paris, France (Sc.) 320
Dec. 12—Heroism (Dr.) 610
Dec. 12—Arabian Customs (Ind.)..... 366
Dec. 16—A Queen's Treachery, or the Betrayal of Charles VI of France (Hist. Dr.)1000

KALEM.

Nov. 22—How Texas Got Left (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 24—The Temptation of Rodney Vane (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 27—The American Insurrecto (Dr.).....
Nov. 29—Among the Irish Fisher Folk (Edu.).
Nov. 29—The Franciscan Friars of Killarney, Ireland (Top.) .....
Dec. 1—How Betty Captured the Outlaw (Comedy) .....
Dec. 1—A Glimpse Into the Yellowstone National Park (Scenic).....
Dec. 4—Arrah-Na-Pogue (3 reels) (Dr.).....3000
Dec. 6—The Long Arm of the Law (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—Too Much Realism (Com.).....1000
Dec. 11—Molly Pitcher (Historical-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 13—Norma From Norway (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 15—Bull's Flute (W. Dr.).....1000

LUBIN.

Nov. 25—His Brother's Double (Com.).....1000
Nov. 27—The Man in the Taxi (Com.-Dr.)..1000
Nov. 29—An Actor In a New Role (Com.).. 600
Nov. 29—The Crab Industry (Ind.)..... 400
Nov. 30—A Nicotine Conspiracy (Com.).....1000
Dec. 2—Western Chivalry (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 4—A Head for Business (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 6—Sins of the Father (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 7—Love's Labor Lost (Com.).....1000
Dec. 9—The Teamster (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 11—A Circus Impulse (Com.-Dr.) 1000
Dec. 13—Mr. and Mrs. Suspicious (Com.)..... 400
Dec. 13—Quick! A Plumber (Com.)..... 600
Dec. 14—The Substitute (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 16—A Timely Lesson (Com.-Dr.) 1000

MELIES.

Nov. 9—The Spur of Necessity (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 16—The Miser Miner (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Nov. 23—An Oil Country Romance (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—The Reason Why (Com.).....1000
Dec. 7—A Western Girl (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 14—The Better Man (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—The Mission Father (Dr.).....1000

ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

Nov. 15—The Hindu Jewel Mystery (Dr.)....1015
Nov. 22—Guy Fawkes or the Gunpowder Plot (Dr.) 1010
Nov. 29—The Mysterious Stranger (Dr.)..... 610
Nov. 29—Salt Industry In Sicily (Ind.)..... 372
Dec. 6—The Luckless Banker (Dr.).....1002
Dec. 13—The Tragedy of Old Age (Dr.)..... 798
Dec. 13—Harbor of Marseilles, France (Sc.)... 215

PATHE.

Nov. 22—A Pinch of Snuff (Com.)..... 680
Nov. 23—Cowboy Life (Dr.)..... 770
Nov. 24—Two Daughters of Havana (Dr.).... 600
Nov. 25—The Lost Necklace (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 27—Pathe's Weekly No. 48 (Topical)..1000
Nov. 29—Incendiary Indians (Dr.)..... 745
Nov. 29—Glimpses of San Francisco (Scenic).. 250
Nov. 30—Oh! What a Thanksgiving Day (Com.) 775
Dec. 2—Bear Hunt Romance (Dr.)..... 990
Dec. 4—Pathe's Weekly No. 49 (Topical)....1000
Dec. 6—Hobo Luck (Am. Com.).....
Dec. 7—The Poisoned Arrow (Am. Dr.).....
Dec. 9—Her Little Slipper (Am. Dr.).....
Dec. 11—Pathe's Weekly No. 50 (Topical)....1000
Dec. 13—The Flower Girl of Los Palmas (Am. Dr.) 990
Dec. 14—An Episode of the Early Mormon Days (Am. Dr.)..... 820
Dec. 14—The Magic Suit Case (Trick)..... 150
Dec. 16—A Mother's Remorse (Am. Dr.)..... 995

C. G. P. C.

Nov. 23—The Kloday Equilibrists (Nov.)..... 210
Nov. 24—Comic Games in Singapore (Nov.).. 350
Nov. 28—Romance of the Mummy (Dr.)..... 700
Nov. 28—Picturesque Hungary (Scenic)..... 290
Nov. 30—A Life-Saving School in Australia (Educational) 220
Dec. 1—Rover is Jealous (Com.)..... 560
Dec. 1—Capturing Polar Bear Cubs (Adv.).. 290
Dec. 1—Examination of the Stomach by X-Rays (Educational) 150
Dec. 5—The Secret of the Confessional (Dr.)..
Dec. 6—Fishing in the Ceram Islands (Sc.)..
Dec. 7—French Cuirassier Manoeuvres (Military)
Dec. 8—Eva's Faithful Furniture (Com.).....
Dec. 8—Gathering and Preparing Cocoanuts in the Philippine Islands (Ind.).....
Dec. 12—Youth versus Age (Dr.)..... 795
Dec. 12—Small Trades in Malacca (Edu.)..... 200
Dec. 15—In the Grip of Alcohol (2 reels) (Dr.).2000

SELIG.

Nov. 23—Blackbeard (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 24—Getting Married (Com.)..... 750
Nov. 24—In Japan (Edu.)..... 250
Nov. 27—The Right Name, but the Wrong Man (Dramatic) 1000
Nov. 28—The Telltale Knife (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—An Evil Power (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 1—In Japan (Scenic)..... 500
Dec. 1—Seeing Cincinnati (Scenic)..... 500
Dec. 4—A Diamond in the Rough (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—A Frontier Girl's Courage (Dr.)....1000
Dec. 7—The Maid at the Helm (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Plumber (Com.)..... 600
Dec. 8—A Day With a Circus (Novelty)..... 400
Dec. 11—The Chief's Daughter (Dr.)..... 500
Dec. 11—April Fool (Com.)..... 500
Dec. 12—A Romance of the Rio Grande (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 14—George Warrington's Escape (Hist.-Dr.) 1000
Dec. 15—Industries of the South and West (Edu.) 1000

VITAGRAPH.

Nov. 18—Vitagraph Monthly of Current Events (Top.) 1000
Nov. 20—Heroes of the Mutiny (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 21—Wistaria (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 22—The Half-breed's Daughter (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 24—An Innocent Burglar (Com.).....1000
Nov. 25—The Life Boat (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 27—The Politician's Dream (Comedy)....1000
Nov. 28—The Freshet (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 29—The Voiceless Message (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 1—The Last Cent (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 2—The Husking Bee (Comedy).....1000
Dec. 4—Saving the Special (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Hypnotist (Com.).....1000
Dec. 5—A Slight Mistake (Com.).....1000
Dec. 6—The Black Chasm (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—War (Historical-Dr.) 1000
Dec. 9—His Wife's Secret (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 11—One Touch of Nature (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 12—The Military Air Scout (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 13—The Ventriloquist's Trunk (Com.)....1000
Dec. 15—Love at Gloucester Port (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 16—The Sick Man from the East (Dr.) ..1000

Classified Advertisements.

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Picture and vaudeville theater seating 1,200 ground floor. City 40,000. Will sell whole or partners. MANAGER, Happyland, Auburn, N. Y.

FOR SALE—Ten cent moving picture and vaudeville theater, fully equipped. Good paying house. Price, $3,000 cash. Address, C. W. B., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

EDISON MACHINE FOR SALE—One pin machine in very best of condition, complete, but without take-up. Will sell for $85 and ship subject to examination when charges are guaranteed. REX SCHNEIDER, 623 Thirteenth Street, Oshkosh, Wis.

FOR SALE—One Motiograph moving picture attachment in first class condition. Address, L. P. GILLESPIE, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

FOR SALE OR EXCHANGE—Complete moving picture machine outfit. Never been used. What do you offer or what have you for a trade. L. WORDEN, 52 Ceape Street, Oshkosh, Wis.

FOR SALE—Three No. 5 Powers machines complete and four pianos; also asbestos curtain (14 x 14) and scenery. APOLLO THEATER, 304 Eighth Avenue, New York City.

FOR SALE—Moving picture machine outfit, cheap. Write quick. Machine is complete and was used only a week. L. WORDEN, 52 Ceape Street, Oshkosh, Wis.

HELP WANTED.

MANAGER WANTED—First class theater in Cleveland wants intelligent manager: one with knowledge of motion pictures preferred; send references and state salary; theater seats 1,200 and presents pictures and high class specialties. 710 Columbia Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY—Experienced manager and singer, who understands the business. Will go anywhere. Address, GEO. RYAN, 10 Maple Street, Norwalk, Conn.

AT LIBERTY—Moving picture operator and electrician, six years' experience. Locate or travel; best of references. JOHN BORK, Stevens Point, Wis.

AT LIBERTY—Manager, seven years' experience vaudeville and picture houses. Four years with last company as general manager of three houses. Age 30 years, single and a hustler. References A-1. Would like to locate with reliable company. Address, W. J. C., 7 Grand Street, Glens Falls, N. Y.

AT LIBERTY—Drummer, full set traps and sound effects, vaudeville or pictures. Greater New York. E. B., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

AT LIBERTY—Practical operator and electrician. Guarantee best results, all machines. Can overcome all troubles. Sober and reliable. BERT BRADLEE, Keokuk, Iowa.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WANTED AT ONCE—Any number of second-hand films, any age, any make. Must be cheap and in fair condition. HUNT, 40 Palace Arcade, Buffalo, N. Y.

WANTED—Scenarios, Western Drama. $10 $15. R. PRIEUR, 10 East 15th Street, New York City.

"OPERATORS' examination" of over 100 questions and answers and other useful information sent on receipt of $1. TED KELTY, 607 Foster Street, Youngstown, Ohio.

Will exchange films for sets of lecture slides like Life of Christ, etc. TED KELTY, 607 Foster Street, Youngstown, Ohio.

WANTED—300 second-hand opera chairs with cushion. Also two No. 6 Powers machines. Box 71, Knoxville, Tenn.

DID YOU READ

What an exhibitor writes to the Moving Picture World with reference to our Bells and other Musical Instruments?

Fort Worth, Texas, October, 1911.

Moving Picture World, New York City.

Gentlemen:—In conjunction with an article in the Moving Picture World of October 21, headed "A Little Talk on Vaudeville in Picture Theaters," mentioning Mr. J. C. Deagan, of Chicago, manufacturer of musical novelties, especially adapted to picture show work, I can't help but feel it my duty as an extensive purchaser of Mr Deagan's instruments and a user of the same, to boost for him and his wonderful knowledge of the manufacture of perfectly toned bells. While the article mentions only the organ chimes as an attraction, I have found for complete effects on pictures, the Parsifal Bells, Marimbaphone, Xylophone,

Electric Bells

(the greatest drawing card of all), unequalled when it comes to putting on perfect effects. I am using all these instruments, as well as Mr. Deagan's Cathedral Chimes, in addition to violin, cello, traps and effects.

I have not regretted the expenditure of several hundred dollars on Deagan instruments, and to any show that wishes to increase its receipts, my advice will be fewer drum stunts and more attractive music, such as only Bells can give, and the crowds will come.

(Signed) S. W. CUMMINGS,
Proprietor Orpheum Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas.

We make the Electric Bells in various sizes from

$40.00 up

The most popular sets of Bells we are now making are the

No. 310 outfit

25 Bells, 2 Octaves, Chromatic C to C

Complete with resonators, keyboard and all electrical apparatus.

Price of this outfit is $75.00

Will be shipped to you for examination and trial on receipt of $5.00 to guarantee express charges.

Every set of bells guaranteed one year.

Write for circulars and descriptive matter

J. C. DEAGAN

3800 N. Clark Street
CHICAGO, ILL.

ILG VENTILATING FANS

ARE STANDARD FOR THEATRE VENTILATION

We are specialists in theatre ventilation. We have over 200 fans and blowers in Chicago theatres. We have alone.

ILG Self Cooled Motor Fan.

ILG FANS ARE NOTED FOR— the self cooled motor —low power consumption—quiet running—ease of installation—freedom from repairs. We have a capable engineering department and will be glad to lay out your system.

SEND US A SKETCH OF YOUR THEATRE WITH SEATING CAPACITY AND TELL US THE CURRENT AND VOLTAGE AVAILABLE, WE CAN THEN TELL YOU HOW TO PLACE THE FANS, WHAT THEY WILL COST TO INSTALL AND OPERATE. ILG FANS CAN BE INSTALLED BY ANY ELECTRICIAN.

ILG ELECTRIC VENTILATING CO., 160 WHITING STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

THERE IS

ONLY ONE

BIO CARBON

RECOGNIZED STANDARD

Try it and you will forget the names of all other brands. Then it will be

"BIO" FOR YOURS

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

NEW YORK 165 Greenwich St. MILWAUKEE 114-116 Huron St. SAN FRANCISCO 19 Sutter St.

AND ALL LIVE FILM EXCHANGES

Moving Picture Electric Light Plants

Produce Flickerless Current Cheaper than the Trust

Neatest Outfit Built

A portable or a stationary direct-connected plant which saves you money on your current bills. The only outfit for a tent or road show for both theatre projection and illuminations. Plants with capacities of 75 to 250 16-candlepower lamps at prices from $137 upward for complete outfit. Engine uses kerosene and supplies current at a cost of 2 cents per kilowatt. Address Electrical Dept. for Catalog No. 201.

Detroit Motor Car Supply Co. Detroit, Mich.

(117)

LECTURES

The MOVING PICTURE WORLD has prepared the following Lectures by W. STEPHEN BUSH, in Booklet form, at $1.00 each, postage prepaid

How To Put On THE PASSION PLAY
(Second Edition).
For Pathe Freres World Renowned Production

How To Put On THE CRUSADERS
OR JERUSALEM DELIVERED
For the World's Best Film Co., Feature Film (Copyright, 1911).

KEY and COMPLETE LECTURE for
DANTE'S INFERNO
For Monopol Film Co.'s Five-Reel Production of the Milano Films Co. (Italy).

Copyrighted and Published Only By
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
25 East 23rd Stree NEW YORK CITY

STUDIO FOR SALE

A completely equipped studio with all new appointments centrally located in New York City.

ADDRESS:
Motion Picture Studio
c. o. Moving Picture World
Box 228, Mad. Sq. P. O., N. Y. City

McKENNA

BRASS RAILINGS
EASELS
GRILLES
CUSPIDORS

BRASS
KICK PLATES
STAIR TREADS, DOOR SILLS

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH, PA.

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS
Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

The* Decorators Supply Co.
2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL.

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing
Why don't you send it to us?
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
We buy second hand machines.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

MORTIMER
FILM CLEANER

Makes Dirty Films Clean and Bright. Removes every particle of dust and oil from films, making them shine CLEAR AND BRIGHT. No trouble to operate—cleans while film is being re-wound. Used and endorsed by leading exchanges and theatres. SIMPLE, PRACTICAL and positively GUARANTEED NOT TO INJURE THE FILM. Price of machine, $10.00; pads $1.00 per hundred. Send for illustrated booklet and testimonials. Mortimer Film Cleaner Co., 704 Fidelity Bldg., Portland, Me.

CINES CO. of ROME

Studios and Factories, Rome and Padova

CAPITAL { Preferred Stock Lire 2,000,000
Ordinary Stock, 3,750,000
Fully Paid-up Lire 5,750,000

ITALIAN-TURKISH WAR.

The first series are now all sold and the next shipment expected about end of month, showing Aviators in Warfare, Episodes of last engagement, Insurrection of Arabs. Approximately 1000 ft.

Orders executed in strict rotation.
Posters.

Branch for the United States of America

445 Broome St., cor. Broadway
New York City

TELEPHONE, SPRING 9232
TELEGRAPHS, CINES NEW YORK

W. E. GREENE
FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

THE OLDEST AND LARGEST INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE IN NEW ENGLAND

Mr. Exhibitor:

Start the Season right by using an Independent Service from a Reliable House. We are buying the Output of the Sales Co. and have some choice services open. Write, wire, or call today at

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.
Telephone: 2187-3790 Oxford

Mr. M. P. Exhibitor:

As a Magnate for your Box Office that will stimulate your business and fertilize your Bank Roll you must have Good Feature Attractions.

This is your opportunity to secure exclusive service for all the best Feature Films and Slides on the market.

There is a place for you on our circuit.

And our services cost you nothing.

We personally review each attraction before accepting them and thus warrant only the best, while our service assures you of the best possible prices.

If you desire the good money getting Features for your program and wish to save both time and money, write us at once for a place on our circuit.

Tell us the location and size of your house.

We'll book you the Feature to fill it.

We are here to assist you and our motto is Service.

Don't delay but write us today.

Serviceably yours,

THE TISDALE
FEATURE ATTRACTION SYNDICATE OF CHICAGO

401-2-3 Chemical Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

F. M. TISDALE, Pres. F. R. MARTIN, Mgr.

HAVE YOUR

POSTERS MOUNTED

IN

POSTER STYLE

They are mounted on muslin and Tacked on Roller and Moulding. Hundreds of Thousands of similar Paper Sheets have been mounted in this way. Some call it Roller or Map Style, as they hang on wall.

Poster, Show Card and Map Mounter E. C. BRIDGMAN
86 Warren St., N. Y. City

"We recommend to the chemical men in the Moving Picture trade who are having difficulty in securing good negative films, the following formula for tank development:

Distilled Water ..... 20 gals.
Sodium Sulphite Anhyd. ..... 5 lbs.
Sodium Carbonate ..... 2 lbs.
Agfa Glacin ..... 2 oz.

Use at room temperature 70° F. Thoroughly wash the film after development before placing in the fixing bath.

The above formula will be found to give very brilliant negatives, and will entirely overcome any danger of fog." Yours very truly,

Berlin Aniline Works, 213-215 Water St., N. Y. City

STANDING ROOM ONLY

When You Use French Grey Teaspoons for Souvenirs

FULL REGULATION SIZE AND WEIGHT

5c. EACH

Send 10c. for sample and Plans for giving away souvenirs. The plans are indorsed by the managers of the largest houses in the country. Copies of same mailed with sample.

UNITED STATES FACTORIES CO., Manufacturers, General Offices 421 Dickey Building, Chicago

They will fill your house to capacity every performance.

AN INVITATION TO EXHIBITORS

Exhibitors from coast to coast are cordially invited to visit the exhibition rooms of the Western office of the Moving Picture World, Suite 306, 307, 309, No. 167 West Washington Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Representatives of the paper will be glad to extend every courtesy, and give you information, if desired, with regard to the various propositions that are advertised through the columns of the Moving Picture World.

CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

INFORMATION BUREAU, MOVING PICTURE WORLD

167 West Washington St. CHICAGO, ILL.

Advertisers, send us samples of your product and a liberal supply of catalogues

SEND FOR MACKIE'S PRICE LIST IF YOU HAVE NOT RECEIVED ONE.

WHOLESALE

EVERYTHING IN MOTION PICTURE EQUIPMENT EXCEPT THE FILM

MACKIE HAS IT

RETAIL

H. A. MACKIE, Inc., 851-853 Broadway, Corner 14th Street, NEW YORK CITY

PEARL WHITE CONDENSERS 65c. EACH. SOLD ELSEWHERE FOR $1.

"FOR GOODNESS SAKE"

Use Our Service

Don't Miss the Best

Ask us all about it

Anti-Trust Film Co.
128 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

American Moving Picture Machine Co.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE

STANDARD

Automatic Moving Picture Machine

101-102 Beekman Street New York

FILM FOR SALE 300 Reels Independent Film—Imp—Bison—Nestor, Etc.—No Junk—Renovated- Fine Condition — 10 to 25 Posters—Price $10.00 to $12.50.

FRENCH FILM RESTORING CO., Columbus, Ohio

EXHIBITORS!!

BOOK THIS FILM IMMEDIATELY

The Italian-Turkish War

THE BIGGEST MONEY MAKER
1000 FEET — GENUINE POSTERS — BANNER

This is the Second Series (6 and 7) by the CINES CO. OF ROME, showing fourteen most interesting events of the War in Tripoli, Bengasi, Sidi-Mesri, etc.

DON'T SHOW FAKES THEY HURT YOUR REPUTATION

Wire, write or call on me NOW for terms and dates

LAURENCE

304 EIGHTH AVENUE NEW YORK CITY

INDEPENDENT FILM SERVICE

STATE YOUR WANTS.

We'll make the RIGHT PRICE and give the RIGHT SERVICE.

Have little used Powers No. 6 fitted with new 1912 Model Motiograph Lamp House to sell. Low Price.

Bargains in Tickets and Carbons. All kinds of Machines and Supplies.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO., 105 N. Dearborn Street, Chicago

TRANSARC

Price $50.

Dimensions, 8½" x 10½" x 11"
Core Loss, 55 Watts.
Volts at arc, 35.
Amperes, 30-40-50-60.

Construction

The core is of the "SHELL" type construction with highest grade of steel lamitations, exposing the outside surface to the air, while the coils mounted therein are carefully wound and treated in the most approved manner and protected from any possible damage thereto, being mountel inside the core. For illustrated catalogue and full information apply to

THE ST. JOHN CORPORATION
180 Broadway, NEW YORK CITY
Sole Distributors for MOHAWK ELECTRIC CO., Albany, New York.

LUMIERE'S METHYNOL

A PEER OF DEVELOPING AGENTS

(USED SAME AS METOL)

Special Prices $4.50 a pound in Lots 10 lb. (in Tin)
$4.25 a pound in Lots 20 lb. (in Tin)

Sold only by LUMIERE JOUGLA CO. Phone
75 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK Stuyvesant 531

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and any one can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of three dollars ($3) cash with order, we will send by express, charges not prepaid, or $3.50 by registered mail, prepaid, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Features You Can Feature

That's what your business needs. Wake up! You fellers who are in a rut.

Get in the Buzz Bus—and Book a FEATURE WEEKLY.

Go in training on counting money—you'll need it if you start booking our magnetic, coin getting,

FEATURE FILMS

We buy them all—Cheyene 1911, Romeo and Juliet, Clio and Phyletes, Train Robbers, Passion Play and thirty others.

Today is the time, before your competitor beats you to it. Heralds—Colored Announcement Slides, Banners and Lithographs sent in advance. Send for prescription now.

THE FEATURE FILM COMPANY

TOLEDO, OHIO.

"DOCTORS OF HAS BEENS."

IMPROVE YOUR PICTURES

Lavezzi Machine Works, 2949 Herndon St., Chicago, Ill.

HEADQUARTERS FOR ASBESTOS
Curtains and Picture Booths
SEND FOR BOOKLET
C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
30 Pearl St., BOSTON

Moving Picture Machines
Stereopticons
Make Big Money

Motion Picture Theatre Supplies

We carry on hand at all times the largest and most complete line of Repairs and Supplies for all Standard Machines, also Tickets, Carbons, Screens, Chairs, etc. Can ship at once. Special Slides made to order. We also handle Motiograph, Edison and Powers Machines. Write to-day for THEATRE CATALOGUE.

CHICAGO PROJECTING CO.
219 S. Dearborn St., Dept. A, Chicago, Ill.

YOU ARE THE VERY ONE

Mr. Theatre Manager, to install my Junior Local Motion Picture making outfit, why not get at it? It's so easy. I give you all advice. You have to do it or your neighbor will. This cheap and perfect outfit enables you to take pictures of your town occurrences. Show your patrons their own familiar faces. Show the film from time to time. Quite a nice feather in your cap outside of the popularity and prosperity you certainly will gain. Write immediately for full description and catalogues. Take my word, you are getting 1,000% of your invested money back. This outfit is a jewel, and the missing link in your business.

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER
Optical Works
219 Second Avenue NEW YORK

FREE

Send postal card with name and address plainly written and receive free of charge sample pages of "Orpheum Collection" of Moving Picture (dramatic and descriptive) music. Until further notice these splendid collections will be offered at the following special prices:

No. 1 (post paid).....58 cts.
No. 2 (post paid).....58 cts.
Both numbers post paid for $1.15.

Clarence E. Sinn
1501 Sedgwick St. Chicago, Ill.

G. W. Bradenburgh
Cinematograph Films
233 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa
Phone, Market 334
Cable: Brad-Films, Phila.
Code: A. B. C., 5th Edition

Italy - Turkey War
980 ft., price 8 cts. ft.
One-sheet four color posters
The Only Film Showing Actual War

Scene 1—Governor-General of Tripoli.

Scene 2—Turkish gunners in the forts.

Scene 3—Italian cruiser shelling coast, showing exploding shells, etc.

Scene 4—Havoc of shell striking on board R. N. Carlo Alberto.

Scene 5—Italian squadron shelling Turkish camps at Derna.

Scene 6—Sinking of Turkish cruiser Aka-Bey by Italian cruiser Prevesa.

Scene 7—After the Ultimatum: Bombardment of Tripoli; destruction of Benghazi, showing customs house being destroyed by the ten-inch shells of the R. N. Roma.

State Rights given away on orders in quantities.

Photography perfect; will allow examination.

All films cash with order.

Next week's release:
Capt. Fox and The Chinese Rebels
Posters? Yes!
ANOTHER WAR FILM

Independent Film Service
231 North 8th Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

EXHIBITORS:

We have contracted for the EXCLUSIVE AMERICAN RIGHTS for a series of film productions conceded to be the GREATEST NOVELTIES EVER ATTEMPTED IN MOTION PHOTOGRAPHY. BAR NONE. Correspondence solicited from first-class houses only, as the prices of these features will be prohibitive for the smaller exhibitor.

If you are in the Market for
SECOND HAND FILMS
Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the United States
International Film Traders
Incorporated
5 West 14th St., New York City

We Offer 300 more to the Trap Drummers

Get your order in at once. At our special offer price—$10.0

This high-grade Orchestra Drum, 10 thumb screw rods, transparent drum heads, solid shells, maple, rosewood, walnut.

Size, 3 x 14—3 x 15—4 x 15—4 x 14. This offer for September and October.

E. P. Zeidler Drum Co., Cleveland, O.

SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made saleable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism and revision for a fee of only $2.

Exhibitors!
Bad Business?

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Manufacturers!

Manuscripts developed, $10 each. Send in that scenario that has your staff puzzled and a practical working script will be returned.

Epes Winthrop Sargent
21 East 20th St., N. Y. City

25c. in Stamps

Brings this to you.

Nothing like it ever published before.

Will prove a constant guide and money maker to every proprietor, manager and operator.

Send 25cts. today.

Special Jobber of Edison

Powers
Motiograph

Moving Picture Machines

The "Hallberg Economizer"

Used in connection with any of the above moving picture machines, produces the finest results on your screen that money can buy.

I Equip Theaters Completely

And carry in stock only the highest grade goods required for your theater.

Free catalogues, circulars and pamphlets furnished of individual items you require.

J. H. HALLBERG
36 E. 23rd St., New York

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill. The A. H. Andrews Co. Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office, 1165 Broadway. Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 673 Mission St.

HERE AT LAST

A place to buy parts for M. P. machines for less
One of our SPECIALS
Intermittent SPROCKETS $1.50 FOR POWERS EDISON Machines
Write for Price List
PITTSBURG M.P. SUPPLY CO., Pittsburg, Pa.

20,000 roll tickets, $1.40; 50 5-8 cored carbons, $1.15; stereopticon objectives, 50c to $3.00; stereopticons, $15.00; rheostats, $3.00 to $5.00; arc lamps, $1.75, $2.00 and $3.25. Condensers, 50c; calcium jets, $2.80; acetylene jets, $2.50; gas generators, $3.50; moving picture objectives, $2.75; jackets, $2.75. List of moving picture repair parts at fair prices. Sprocket wheel, 85c; films, 1c a foot. Catalogue on request. L. HETZ. 300 E. 23d St., N.Y.

Musicians Wanted! "Knack Reading Music at Sight" booklet, mailed for 10 cents. Celebrated Knack System of Playing Vaudeville and Dramatic Music—Transposing—Faking—Arranging—taught by mail. Particulars Free.
KNACK STUDIO Dept. 4 DANVILLE, ILL.

THEATRE SEATING—Send for Moving Picture Chair Cat. "V4," Upholstered Chair Cat. "V5."
AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY
Chicago New York Boston Philadelphia

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-door use
Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue

WE CAN HURRY

YOUR ORDER OUT.
STAFFORD Chairs excell all others.

HEAVY FIVE PLY seats and backs.
The last-forever kind, that you are using long after you have forgotten the price.

STEEL CHAIRS TOO

We carry several kinds of good chairs in stock, all guaranteed.

ASK FOR CATALOG 305

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILL.

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 W. 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

Get Our Prices Before You Buy

The Wisconsin Lumber and Veneer Co.

Port Washington, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

OH! MR. EXHIBITOR!! THINK OF THE MOTHERLESS, THE FATHERLESS, AND THE

Childless homes as the result of theater panics. Protect the lives of your patrons by installing our "ANTI-PANIC" THEATER CHAIR. 20 Dead at Cannonsburg, 176 at Boyertown, 575 at Iriquois Theater, Chicago. Make these horrors impossible.
Our chair is a friend to the Public.
It advertises your theater and makes your business grow.
It is a space saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.

IT IS THE ONLY SANITARY CHAIR

It will make your theater all aisles.
It is the world's greatest theater chair, perfected to the highest degree.

Write today for Circular A. THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

G. MÉLIÈS

DORIS PROPOSES A RACE

THE BETTER MAN

OF two equally attractive suitors Doris cannot decide which to choose, so devises a novel plan to determine which is the better man. The rivals have a race from the Post Office to her house. Lying on the road, apparently hurt, is Pedro, Doris' old servant. The first suitor rushes by, but the second, at the risk of losing a bride, stops and helps the old man home, whereupon Doris divulges the "frame-up" and declares the loser the winner.

APPROX. 1000 FT. 12-14-11

G. MELIES, 204 EAST 38th ST., NEW YORK CITY

IT ALWAYS GETS THERE

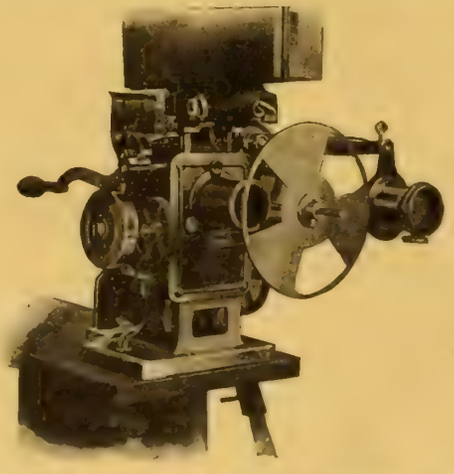
Power's Cameragraph No. 6 always "delivers the goods," even in the face of accident.

THE picture tells a true story of wreck which a POWER'S survived without injury. Mr. J. J. Dashington, a traveling exhibitor, writes us:

> "I was in a railroad accident last season and the machine was struck by a freight train, when it was in a common wooden box all set up ready for use, and thrown 30 feet. The wreck smashed up trunks and trucks, but never hurt the machine in any way."

This demonstrates POWER'S great stability, but it does not speak for its other virtues—perfect adjustment, ease of operation, lack of noise, pictures without flicker, clear and steady.

Power's Cameragraph No. 6 has made friends everywhere give it a chance, it will be a good friend to you It will work hard for you and it won't go back on you. It will send your patrons away satisfied. It will increase your business and bring you money.



A POWER'S No. 6 in your house means the S.R.O. sign out in front.

Our book, "The Proof of the Pudding," will show you why POWER'S is preferred to all other machines.

Catalogue G is yours for the asking.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

115-117 NASSAU STREET NEW YORK

For fourteen years the leading manufacturers of Moving Picture Machines.

CAREY PRESS, N. Y.

Vol. 10. No. 11 December 16. 1911 Price. 10c.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "One Touch of Nature Makes the Whole World Kin" (Vitagraph).

125 East 23rd Street New York Chicago 169 W. Washington St.

Let us help decorate your lobby for the holidays—Mail us the coupon in the lower left-hand corner

THE THANHOUSER "GREATEST DECEMBER"

"SHE"

Request Now "Greatest December's" Greatest Picture!

IN 2 REELS

RIDER HAGGARD'S MYSTERY MASTERPIECE

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 26.

A Special and a Feature Issued as a Regular Thanhouser Release

Released, Tuesday, December 19

"Greatest December's" Human Interest Film

THE TOMBOY

Released, Friday, December 22

The Second "Greatest December" Feature

CINDERELLA

FROM THE MOST FAMOUS FAIRY STORY KNOWN

Scene from "Cinderella"

is a person that is well calculated to corral your admiration, with her brave and independent spirit, characteristic as it is of a Nation of Freemen. Her tiny sister, too, has qualities that will play upon your affections—she it is, who finally brings The Tomboy into her own. The picture is quite an oddity in the human interest way and that's why it's found in the "Greatest December" list. Ask for it when you ask for the "Greatest December" Features.

Just tack up the "Cinderella" Query-Sheet that you get when you mail us the coupon in the lower left-hand corner, and the supreme excellence of the film will do the rest. At some stage of the game we've every one of us read "Cinderella"—or HAD IT READ to us—and the questions on the Query-Sheet will awaken fond recollections—which will draw 'em in. The change of the lizards to horses, the pumpkin to a coach and the other transitions are really marvelous.

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N.Y.

Send me FREE Lobby Decorations for your "Greatest December" features. I am / am not getting "The Thanhouser News."

Name_____

Address_____

Exchange_____

CLIP AND MAIL THIS DAY

EXTRA! Plenty of Billing Matter for "SHE!"

Thanhouser Company beg to announce that the exhibitor can secure from his exchange two kinds of one-sheet four-color lithos for "She," and a three-sheet Artposter. The supply of the three-sheet Artposters is limited and it is requested that you give your exchange NOW an idea of how many three-sheet Artposters you will require.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

New Rochelle, N. Y.

Sales Company Agents for U. S. and Canada

FOUR-A-WEEK ESSANAY

COMING FOR THE HOLIDAYS COMING

A Series of Children's Fairy Stories

RELEASED TUESDAY, DEC. 12th

THE FIRST MAN

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

There is an ingenuous plot, excellent acting and splendid stage management in this comedy. It will cause ripples, torrents, floods of hearty laughter.

Here is an excellent split reel of comedy.

RELEASED THURSDAY, DEC. 14th

THE HACK AND SCHMIDT BOUT

(Length, approx. 513 feet.)

Schmidt arrives from Germany to champion America's "white hope" of the mat in the world's greatest wrestling bout. Hack uses a new sort of "jiu jitsu" and puts the German lion on his back. A real roar!

—On the same reel—

A POLISHED BURGLAR

(Length, approx. 487 feet.)

A laughable little conceit with plenty of lively situations.

RELEASED FRIDAY, DEC. 15th

A GOODFELLOW'S CHRISTMAS EVE

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

An exceptionally pretty Christmas story with the true spirit of the Yuletide. A real feature!

RELEASED SATURDAY, DEC. 16th

THE COWBOY COWARD

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

A western drama by the Essanay Western players. Compelling in interest.

Essanay Film Mfg. Company

521 First National Bank Building, Chicago, Ill.

OFFICES IN

LONDON : : BERLIN : : BARCELONA

"ELECTRA" CARBONS

LEADS-THEM-ALL!

After all, Carbons are the most important factors in moving picture projection. Unless Carbons of the very best quality obtainable are used, it is impossible to throw a clear, well defined picture; and even the most expert operator cannot get proper results from inferior Carbons.

Therefore, if you wish to obtain perfect projection, insist on getting the genuine

"ELECTRA" Pink Label CARBONS

Sole Importer

HUGO REISINGER

11 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

ÉCLAIR

ECLAIR FILMS AMERICA

YOU NAME THE DAY FOR THE SECOND ECLAIR RELEASE

Another Eclair will be issued very shortly and You are Just as much interested in its success as we are.

What Day Do You Want for its issue?

We will be guided entirely by the decision of the trade.

Bear In Mind: We are now issuing The American Eclair on Tuesday and the Paris-Americanized Eclair on Thursday.

High Class Comedy will characterize the Second Release and many Two-subject reels will be offered.

We value your opinion and will appreciate an expression from you at once.

HANDSOME SOUVENIR FOR YOUR TROUBLE

To every exhibitor or renter who writes, we will mail with our compliments a handsome, New Photo of the Harrison-Fisher Girl, all ready for framing.

Coming Releases

Thursday, December 7

There Fell a Flower

(Comedy)
Life in Haute Piemont (Educational)
An Interesting Split Reel

Tuesday, December 12

The Musician's Daughter

American Heart Tale

Thursday, December 14

Japanese Drama

Her One Day's Dream

with artists from the Imperial Theatre, Tokio

Tuesday, December 19

A Tragic Joke

unusual American drama

Tuesday, December 26

The Wrong Bottle

or a Drug Clerk's Mistake

Get on Our Mail List

ECLAIR FILM CO. GENERAL OFFICES AND STUDIOS Fort Lee, N. J.

BRANCHES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

GREAT NORTHERN

CARL ALSTRUP
Playing Leading Parts in
All Feature Comedies

Release for Saturday, December 9th

BUTTONS AND HOOKS

A comedy of an entirely new kind. One that compels hilarity. A real rib-tickler. Enacted by star performers.

ON THE SAME REEL:

WINTER IN SWITZERLAND

An exceedingly charming picture of Alpine scenery. Snowbound villages nestle in the valleys with the superb peaks forming a wonderful and impressive background.

Release for Saturday, December 16th

HIS FIRST MONOCLE

A delicious comedy film with every scene a laughable one.

ON THE SAME REEL: GREECE

An admirable travel subject, depicting many interesting scenes amongst which the Corinthian Canal, Corfu Harbor, and the German Emperor's mansion are included.

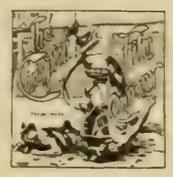
Our lobby display is now ready for the trade. Write for circular.

All First-Class Independent Exchanges Handle Our Product

Sold Only Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 E. 14th St., N.Y.

(NORDISK FILM CO. OF COPENHAGEN.)



A NEW STUDIO

Has just been completed by Champion

NEW PLANS FACILITIES SUBJECTS

Have also been introduced into CHAMPION'S System.
And why all this, Mr. Exhibitor?

Answer: To turn out the best pictures possible in a modern plant

RELEASES FOR THIS WEEK

The Coward's Flute

Released Dec. 18

When the tide of battle surged into defeat, Arthur Paget's cowardice fell off, and he heroically led the troops back upon the wave of victory.

By Decree of Fate

Released Dec. 20

A Great Drama of Life's occurrences as wrought by the Hand of Fate.

A REAL REALISM

Sold Through Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY

MARK M. DINTENFASS, General Manager

12 EAST 15th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

"THE GIRL AND THE HALF-BACK"

(Copyright 1911, Imp Films Co.)

A great "rah-rah" picture that will bring your audience to its feet in wild excitement. The football scene is one of the best things you ever saw on a screen and is the climax of a corking good love story. Released Monday, Dec. 18. Your favorite, King Baggott, takes the leading role. Sufficient!

"The Professor"

(Copyright 1911, Imp Films Co.)

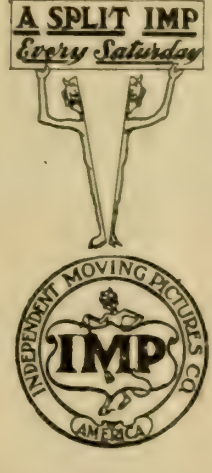
In which a detective tackles a knotty problem and runs up against a sleep-walker. Released Thursday, Dec. 21. Go after it hard.



"Saturday Split Imp"

(Both subjects copyright 1911, Imp Films Co.)

A slam-bang comedy, "A Pair of Gloves," is crowded into the first 600 feet of this reel; followed by "Niagara Falls Celebration," embracing 400 feet packed full of corking good stuff, the famous Leach going through Whirlpool Rapids in a barrel, some great airship stuff and other extremely interesting views. Beg for it!

IMP NOTES—Photos of Imp performers for sale. Flashy one sheets of King Baggott are splendid advertisers. Imp A B C Books make classy Christmas gifts for your patrons. Three Imps a week insure you of AT LEAST THREE GOOD HOUSES EVERY WEEK. Is YOUR exchange getting the Saturday Split Imp as well as the Monday and Thursday Imps?

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America
102 W. 101st Street, New York.
CARL LAEMMLE, Pres.

THE COMET

The most pretentious picture the "Comet" Company has offered to date

A Game of Bridge

Released Monday, Dec. 18th

A skillfully presented picture of society's latest frolic—"Bridge". The salon scene sparkles with beautiful girls, stunning gowns and gorgeous scenic effects. The Independent exhibitor who is not getting two "Comets" every week is being shabbily treated by his exchange man. This business builder is 1000 feet.

The above is a high-class reel but not one whit better than

The Man with the Camera

A corking comedy drama—985 feet

Released Friday, Dec 22nd

This picture shows a band of crooks, disguised as moving picture camera men and what happened to them when they tried to "put it over" on a suburban chief of police.

THROUGH MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES CO.

COMET FILM CO., 344 E. 32nd St., New York, N. Y.

SIXTY-THREE

Exchanges buying from this Weekly Program. There is a reason. Nothing better on the Market.

WEEKLY PROGRAM:

MONDAY—Imp, Comet, American, Champion, Nestor.
TUESDAY—Thanhouser, Bison, Powers, (Eclair, American).
WEDNESDAY—Champion, Solax, Reliance, Ambrosio, Nestor.
THURSDAY—Rex, American, Itala, Imp, Eclair.
FRIDAY—Bison, Solax. Thanhouser, Lux, Comet.
SATURDAY—Powers, Itala, Great Northern, Nestor, Reliance, (Republic starts Dec. 16th), Imp.
SUNDAY—Majestic, Republic starts Dec. 17th. Solax (starts Dec. 24th).

INDEPENDENT MANUFACTURERS

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.	Ashland Block	Chicago, Ill.
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.	1 Union Square	N. Y. C.
CHAMPION FILM COMPANY	12 East 15th Street	N. Y. C.
ECLAIR FILM COMPANY		Fort Lee, N. J.
GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY	7 East 14th Street	N. Y. C.
INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURE COMPANY	102 West 101st Street	N. Y. C.
LUX FILM COMPANY	10 East 15th Street	N. Y. C.
MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE COMPANY	145 West 45th Street	N. Y. C.
COMET FILM COMPANY	344 East 32nd Street	N. Y. C.
NESTOR FILM COMPANY	Ave. E. and 43rd Street	Bayonne, N. J.
POWERS MOTION PICTURE COMPANY	511 West 42nd Street	N. Y. C.
REX MOTION PICTURE COMPANY	573 Eleventh Ave.	N. Y. C.
CARLTON M. P. LABORATORIES	540 West 21st Street	N. Y. C.
REPUBLIC FILM COMPANY	145 West 45th Street	N. Y. C.
SOLAX FILM COMPANY	Congress Avenue	Flushing, L. I.
THANHOUSER COMPANY		New Rochelle, N. Y.

—SELLING THROUGH THE—

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING & SALES CO., 111 E. 14th St., New York City

The Moving Picture World says: " THE VIOLIN MAKERS OF NUREMBERG is a notable film . . . an idyl . . . a delicate subject done in a dainty way . . . holds the interest . . . is an example that we hope to see followed by all Independent manufacturers." - - - - The film is released Friday, December 22.

Get It!!

Ask Your Exchange

Get It!!

Write for a special list of Music

Release
Friday, Dec. 15
The Little Kiddie Mine

Little Toots, the daughter of a prospector, imitates her father at the hardy task of gold-digging. She locates a cache of a highwayman, and imagines she has discovered a mine with an unlimited supply of bags of gold.

Released
Wednesday, Dec. 13
Fickle Bridget

This is a satiric comedy dealing with the aspirations and heart ailings of a cook with an inheritance. A grocer and an iceman are in love with her and her money—and a Count is also in love with her and her money—principally her money. The Count gets her as a result of a duel. The situations are absurdly funny.

Released
Wednesday, Dec. 20
Love, Whiskers and Letters

A jealous lover creates "a tempest in a teapot" because he sees his sweetheart kissing a bewhiskered gentleman, who happens to be a "long lost brother" of the girl. The lover sends his girl a note breaking off his engagement. After the letter has been posted he learns of the relationship between the girl and the bewhiskered gentleman. His attempts to intercept the letter are roariously funny. The climax, however, is the novel feature of the story.

Solax

REMEMBER CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

Is the first release under the new three-a-week programme. Sunday, December 24, is the day.
Send in your orders now. Get Booked.

Solax Company, Congress Avenue FLUSHING, N.Y.

SALES COMPANY Agents in U. S. A. and Canada

3 NESTORS A WEEK 3

NESTOR

Oldest and Best "The Worth-While Film" Always a Feature

Monday, December 11th, 1911

"ONLY AN ICEMAN"

If you do not yet know the tip-top quality and drawing power of the MONDAY NESTOR, break the ice now with "Only An Iceman," the pleasantest, sweetest, merriest, funniest and happiest comedy yet produced. 995 feet of delightfully charming film swept by a gale of laughter. GET IT!

Scene from "ONLY AN ICEMAN"

Monday, December 18th

"THE LOVE CHASE"

Irresistibly Funny Foto-Comedy

Wednesday, December 13th

"THE LAW OF THE RANGE"

A rousing Western Foto-Drama of the West and taken in the West—stirs, impresses and delights—scenic grandeur, capital acting and unsurpassed photography. 980 feet of worth while film—abounds with cumulative action and grips with a strong sense of reality. GET IT!

Scene from "THE LAW OF THE RANGE"

Wednesday, December 20th

"THE NEW RANCH-OWNER"

Rapid, Roaring Western Comedy

GET THIS BIG SPLIT REEL

Saturday, December 16th, 1911

"IN THE EARLY DAYS"
Strong Western Drama of the Inimitable Nestor Variety.

"MUTT AND JEFF MAKE THE FEATHERS FLY"
Snappy, Riotous and Catchy Nonsense.

GET THIS BIG SPLIT REEL

COMING—"Desperate Desmond Foiled by Claude Eclaire"—Sat., Dec. 23rd

DAVID HORSLEY, BAYONNE, N. J., SALES CO. SOLE DISTRIBUTORS

PROTECT YOUR M.P. MACHINE— ALWAYS OIL WITH 3 IN ONE

3 in One is a pure, clear oil that lubricates perfectly star wheel, fly wheel, shutter gear, rewinder and every other working part of every kind of a moving picture machine.

The oil flows right to the heart of all action points, preventing wear and tear, and making each part do its work smoothly and about 100 times easier. Won't collect dirt and clog as greasy oils do. Contains no acid or alkali to injure your machine. Won't gum—won't run. Cleans and polishes—prevents rust on all metal surfaces.

FREE OIL FOR YOU

Send today for a generous free sample and the free 3 in One Dictionary. You'll get enough oil for a real good test. Sold at the best stores and 25c, 50c at all good stores. The 50c size is the recommended M.P. machine size.

3 IN ONE OIL CO.

42 N. M. Broadway New York City

LUX FILMS

The Crown of Perfection

Released Friday, Dec. 15, 1911

Bill and His Chum Tired of Married Life

Comedy—Length 521 ft.

When a man is married his troubles begin.

Mistaken for the Culprit

Drama—Length 459 ft.

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th St. New York City

Telephone 3427 Stuyvesant

Sold Only Through

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING and SALES COMPANY

ONLY EASTMAN RAW STOCK USED

GAS

is a thing people make light of! And generally it isn't long before it's put out! The wise man knows where the real brilliance is!

On Thursday, December 14th, this dying year, an industrial picture you need is called

"The Logging Industry"

There are industrial pictures—and then there are industrial pictures. They're the same, only different. One variety bores, while the other augurs well for the trade. There's the industrial picture that's only a conglomeration of unconnected scenes, with the captions the only intelligent and intelligible feature of the whole arrangement; and there's the industrial picture that really teaches a lesson in universal economics. Of this class, conspicuous for its absence, or at best infrequency, on the exhibitor's program, is

"The Logging Industry"

The picture shows a great branch of human endeavor, with a sufficiency of human interest. Watching it, one feels the swing of mighty arms, the song of a man's work close to Nature, the inspiration of primeval labor. From the forest to civilization—this is the text of the film.

It's a fast motion motion picture!

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO.

573 Eleventh Avenue
New York City

The Leading Motion Picture Producer of the World

SELIG — FOLLOW THE FLAG

Dec. 18th

EVANGELINE

Pictured from a Dramatization of Longfellow's Beautiful IDYLL of ARCADIA.

Beautiful Poetic Drama.

About 1000 feet.

Dec. 19th

For His Pal's Sake

A Drama Dealing with the "DAMON and PYTHIS" — Like Friendship of Two Western Men.—

About 1000 feet.

COMING — COMING

RELEASED JAN. 1st, 1912

1 REEL REGULAR, 2 REELS SPECIAL

SELIG'S SUBLIME MASTERPIECE

"CINDERELLA"

In Three Reels with Picturedom's Greatest Star

MISS MABEL TALIAFERRO

The dainty, diminutive, international idol. The production Beautiful, pronounced by press and critics everywhere as The Crowning Triumph of Moving Picture History. Rich, costly and gorgeous, this production is one of undescribable pictorial magnificence. There are 99 scenes, or over 3,000 ft. of elaborate settings, superb costumes, perfect photography, wonderful effects, and the action is incomparable in its dramatic elegance. The story is beyond doubt the sweetest ever told—that of Cinderella and her silver slipper—the story that is ever dear to the hearts of old and young alike.

DON'T FAIL TO BOOK THIS WONDERFUL PICTURE

Everything to aid exhibitors in their advertising.

TRADE MARK

Dec. 21st

Brown of Harvard

An elaborate and cleverly enacted visualization of HENERY WOODRUFF'S greatest dramatic success. Produced by special arrangement with the owners of the copyright. Big boat race scenes. SINGLE REEL SELIG FEATURE.

Dec. 22nd

The Little Widow

A vivid Drama of the Klondyke days with a perilous voyage at sea as the principal motif. THRILLING.

About 1000 feet.

SELIG — FOLLOW THE FLAG

Selig Polyscope Co. — TRADE S MARK — Chicago U.S.A.

EUROPEAN OFFICES

LONDON — BERLIN — ST PETERSBURG.

VITAGRAPH

"ONE TOUCH OF NATURE" MONDAY, DEC. 11th

Miss Turner

Two families of opposite faiths, divided by the intermarriage of their children, are reunited by the birth of a grandchild, which makes all hearts kin. Strong and logical.

Earl Metcalfe

"THE MILITARY AIR-SCOUT" TUESDAY, DEC. 12th

Above the clouds he attacks the enemy, who return his fire with an aeroplane gun, which brings him down. He lands safely, escapes and reports the defeat of the opposing forces and the sinking of their war vessels. The beauty of this picture is—we see all these things done, and in perfect safety.

"THE VENTRILOQUIST'S TRUNK" WEDNESDAY, DEC. 13th

John Bunny

The moment it opens the fun comes out, and keeps coming out. When it closes you can't stop laughing.

Miss Tapley

"LOVE AT GLOUCESTER PORT" FRIDAY, DEC. 15.

Suspicious of his sweetheart, a jealous swain tries to get his supposed rival out of the way. He lives to rue the day and plead for pardon. "The green-eyed" monster pursues him on land and sea.

"SICK MAN FROM THE EAST" SAT. DEC. 16th

Wm. R. Dunne

He is a detective. He keeps after his man, whom he makes look sick and "gets in strong" with a pretty Western girl. It's great, with Western snap and life.

FIVE A WEEK

Next Week Next Week

"VITAGRAPH MONTHLY OF CURRENT EVENTS"—A full volume...Monday, December 18th
"VANITY FAIR" (Three Reels)—Big Feature Film.....Tuesday, December 19th
"FIRES OF DRIFTWOOD"—Christmas Story.....Wednesday, December 20th
"A REFORMED SANTA CLAUS"—Another Christmas Story.....Friday, December 22nd
"THE OLD DOLL"—It tells its own story.....Saturday, December 23rd

The Vitagraph Company of America

NEW YORK, 116 Nassau St.
CHICAGO, 109 Randolph St.
PARIS, 15 Rue Saint-Cecile
LONDON, 25 Cecil Court

LUBIN FILMS

Released Wednesday, December 13, 1911. Split Reel.

MR. & MRS. SUSPICIOUS

¶ A humorous lesson is administered to a husband and wife who are unduly jealous of each other. Through their suspicions and spying upon each other's actions, they are led into a decidedly unpleasant predicament.

QUICK! A PLUMBER

¶ A roaring comedy, in which a bungling house-holder punctures a waterpipe in his kitchen, floods the house, nearly drowns the cook, and in his amateurish efforts to stop the leak has everybody around him dodging and falling.

Scene from "THE SUBSTITUTE"

Released Thursday, December 14, 1911. Length about 1,000 feet

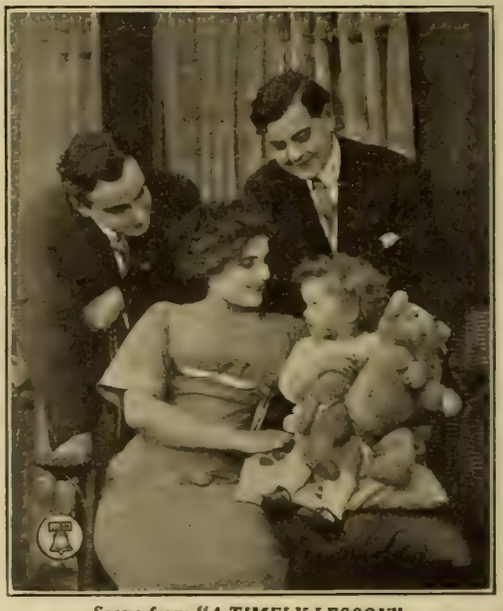
THE SUBSTITUTE

¶ A rousing melodrama, in which a girl telegraph operator takes her brother's place as engineer of a special train, and through her heroism in climbing a telegraph pole and summoning troops from a nearby post, by means of a field telegraph instrument, prevents the robbery of an express car at the hands of a large body of brigands.

Released Monday, December 18, 1911. Length about 1,000 ft.

LOVE DECIDES

¶ A strong story, dealing with the marriage of May and December. The young wife is sorely tempted to desert her home, but is prevented at the crucial moment through the potent power of love.



Scene from "A TIMELY LESSON"

Released Saturday, December 16, 1911. Length about 1,000 feet.

A TIMELY LESSON

¶ A married man, who had become infatuated with a handsome widow and believes that he no longer loves his wife and child, is brought to his senses through the instrumentality of his wife's brother, who causes him to suffer the same heartaches he had inflicted upon his wife.

WATCH FOR OUR 2 REEL CHRISTMAS PRODUCTION. RELEASED THUR., DEC. 21

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY,

MODEL NEW STUDIOS, 20th and Indiana Avenue Philadelphia, Pa.

CHICAGO: 208 N. FIFTH AVENUE LONDON: 45 GERRARD ST., W. BERLIN: 35 FRIEDRICH STR.

THE BEST FILM ISSUED

PATHÉ'S
WEEKLY

BOOK
IT
EVERY WEEK

TRADE MARK

Thomas A Edison

The motion picture business offers the greatest promise of big return on small investment of any business today—and keeps its promise if you use

THE

Edison Kinetoscope

TRADE MARK

Thomas A Edison

Right at the beginning, the success or failure of your show depends greatly on your choice of a machine. A cheap machine can break your show just as surely as a good machine will make it.

The difference in cost between the Edison Kinetoscope and a cheap machine is so slight in comparison to the difference in results that, in fairness to yourself and your show, you have no right to consider any machine but the Edison.

The Edison is the simplest machine to operate, the most accessible and durable, most economical to maintain—and will outlast any other motion picture machine made.

Write us to-day for complete particulars and copy of the Edison Kinetogram.

Scenes from "SANTA CLAUS AND THE CLUB-MAN"

EDISON FILMS

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 19th

"SANTA CLAUS AND THE CLUB-MAN"

(Christmas Release.)

CAST.

The Clubman	Harold M. Shaw
His Fiancée	Bessie Learn
Her Mother	Mrs. Wallace Erskine
The Butler	Bigelow Cooper
Two Waifs	Yale Boss, Edna May Weick

An appealing story of two little waifs left out in the cold the night before Christmas. Through the beneficent influence of Santa Claus, their own and others' lives were brightened.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 20th

"THE SIGN OF THE THREE LABELS"

CAST.

The Bride	Mabel Trunnelle
The Bridegroom	Herbert Prior
The Hotel Clerk	Yale Benner
The Waiter	Edward O'Connor
Hotel Boys	Edward Clarke, Edwin Clarke
The Maid	Ethel Jewett

A bride and groom unwittingly offend "The United Brotherhood of Hotel Servants" in Europe. What happens to them almost beggars description, until they finally discover their mistake and square themselves. This is a comedy far out of the ordinary.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 22nd

"HOW SIR ANDREW LOST HIS VOTE"

from "In the Fog," by Richard Harding Davis.

CAST.

Sir Andrew	Marc McDermott
Honorable Grant Richmond	Charles Ogle
The Hostess	Camilla Dalberg
Amateur Actors	Mabel Trunnelle, Bigelow Cooper, Ethel Jewett, Joseph Levering
The Butler	William West

Through a group of amateur actors, Sir Andrew is made to believe that a terrible crime has been committed and so loses his vote on an important bill in the House of Commons. But unfortunately for the conspirators, their scheme miscarries. It is high-class comedy, refreshing in its originality.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23rd

"PAT CLANCY'S ADVENTURE"

From "The Shamrock and the Palm," by O. Henry.

CAST.

Pat Clancy	Edward O'Connor
Senor DeVega	Charles M. Seay
Sailors and Members of Clancy's Party

This quaint conceit of O. Henry's, tells how Pat Clancy enlisted, as he thought, to fight for the oppressed people of Gautemala, and found he was wanted for something very different. He comes out ahead in the end though.

Release of December 27th: "THE STUFF THAT DREAMS ARE MADE OF." A perfect scream from start to finish. A comedy of unusual briskness.

THOMAS A. EDISON, Inc., 72 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

Sunday

THE first day of the week, the first day of the year; not alone in priority of time, but in priority of principle, in priority of pre-eminence and prominence. It is a day of hallowed memories, of memorable reminiscences; a day of sweetness and serenity, with just a suggestion of solemnity and sadness, yet a sadness that is not sere but soothing. There is never so much peace in the world, never so much peace in our hearts, never so much song and solace in our souls, as on Sunday!

Roses and peace; the lull of strife; calmness and contentment; the happy carolling of carefree creatures of the air! The sea itself is a sermon, the sky a psalm. And everywhere—roses and peace!

Wars and woes; vanity and vaunting; pride and predatory prerogative; crime and cruelty; folly and futility—these are forgotten! We know only the homily and harmony and homage of an humble heart, and a sacred tranquility pervades and permeates all.

Sunday, the first day of the week, the first day of the year, the first day that a new-born world emerged from desperate darkness, from night and blight, and rejoicing, looked upon the light!

Sunday is not only a day of rest, but a day of recreation. We find church unity manifesting itself in such ways as the opening of all art galleries to the public on Sunday.

Minneapolis, Denver, Omaha, San Francisco and other cities have municipal concerts on Sunday, with moving pictures for the instruction and amusement of the people.

THE GEM MOTION PICTURE CO.

KALEM

THE "REVENUE" AND THE GIRL

A Stirring Drama of the Kentucky Mountains

Love finds a way to overcome a hated enemy. One sensation follows another in this picturesque story.

Released Monday, Dec. 25th.

The Higher Toll

An intense drama of a sister's devotion. The settings are beautiful California.

Released Wednesday, Dec. 27th.

The Maid's Double

A decidedly novel story of mistaken identity.

Released Friday, Dec. 29th.

SPECIAL MUSIC FOR ARRAH-NA-POGUE

We will supply you with a complete piano score and four piece orchestration for this feature film for 50 cents, postage prepaid.

Three half-tone electros (2½ inches wide) for ARRAH-NA-POGUE, 50 cents each, postage prepaid.

KALEM COMPANY

INCORPORATED

NEW YORK, 235-239 W. 23rd St.
86 Wardour St., LONDON, W.
BERLIN, 35 Friedrich Str.
PARIS, 13 Rue du Faubourg Montmartre

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY — 125 E. 23d. Street NEW YORK
(Beach Building) — J. P. CHALMERS, Editor and Manager. — Telephone call, 1343-1344 Gramercy

SUSCRIPTION RATES: $3.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada, $3.50. Foreign Countries, $4.00, Post Paid.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES ON APPLICATION.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS (No Display), Three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

WESTERN OFFICE: 169 W. Washington St. (Post Bldg.), Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Main 3145. Automatic Phone 32732.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Address all correspondence "Moving Picture World, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square, New York," and not to individuals.

Vol. 10 — DECEMBER 16, 1911 — No. 11

INDEX TO CONTENTS.

ACTRESS, THE (Majestic) 886
ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS 888
AMONG THE CHICAGO SHOWS 879
AMONG THE EXHIBITORS 924-934
ANOTHER PICTURE ORDINANCE 891

CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES 910
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES 909
CHICAGO LETTER 880
CINCINNATI 914
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent) 905
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed) 903
CORRESPONDENCE 913

DANGERS OF THE FOREIGN MARKET, THE 877

MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR, THE 882

FACTS AND COMMENTS 876

GOODFELLOWS' CHRISTMAS EVE, THE (Essanay) 885

MILDRED HOLLAND IN PICTURES 881

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES 926
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES 936
IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY 914
INQUIRIES 896

KALEM SENDS COMPANY TO ORIENT 880

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR 911
LICENSED FILM STORIES 918
LICENSED RELEASE DATES 938
LONDON LETTER 878
LOUISVILLE, KY. 913

MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES 907
MOVING PICTURE ELOPEMENTS CONDEMNED 878

NEW ENGLAND 924
NOTRE DAME DE PARIS (S. F. C.) 884

OBSERVATIONS BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN 898

PROBLEMS IN PICTURES (E. W. S. Essay) 877
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 890

RANDOM SHOTS OF A PICTURE FAN 880
REVIEWS OF NOTABLE FILMS 884

SCENARIO WRITER, THE 890
SONG SLIDE RELEASES 942
SONG AND SINGER 897
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent) 926
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed) 918

VANITY FAIR (Vitagraph) 886

WASHINGTON, D. C. 916

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
FRORUP, L. E. 941
KIEWERT, CHAS. L. 940
REISINGER, H. 869

ELECTRICAL AND MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
FORT WAYNE ELEC. CO. 922
DETROIT ENGINE WORKS 935
HALLBERG, J. H. 935-946
ILG ELEC. CO. 940
MACKIE, H. A. 944
SCHNEIDER, E. 926
ST. JOHN CORPORATION 942

FILM BROKERS.
EXPORT FILM CO. 941
NATIONAL FILM BROKERS 941

FILM DEALERS AND IMPORTERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS 939-945

FILM EXCHANGES.
BRADENBURG, GEO. 945
FEATURE FILM CO. 945
FEATURE FILM CO. (London) 941
FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL FILM CO. 929
GREENE, W. E. 935
HETZ, I. 922
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE 928
SWAAB FILM SERVICE 926
SWANSON-CRAWFORD FILM CO. 933

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
CHAMPION FILM CO. 882
COMET FILM CO. 884
ECLAIR FILM CO. 881
GEM MOTION PICTURE CO. 873
GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO. 892
IMP 883-945
LUX FILM CO. 887
MAJESTIC FILM CO. 937
M. P. DIS. & SALES CO. 894
NESTOR FILM CO. 866
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO. 928
POWERS MOTION PICTURES CO. 927
REX MOTION PICTURE CO. 867
SOLAX MOTION PICTURE CO. 895
THANHOUSER CO. 858

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON FILM CO. 872
ESSANAY FILM CO. 859
KALEM CO. 874
KLEINE, GEO. 919
LUBIN MFG. CO. 870
MELIES, G. 947
PATHE FRERES CO. 871
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO. 868
VITAGRAPH CO. 869

MISCELLANEOUS.
AM. THEATER CURTAIN & SUPPLY CO. 942
ANTI-TRUST FILM CO. 911
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO. 943
ASSOCIATED M. P. SCHOOL 944
BARCKHOFF, C. 942
BATTERSHALL & OLESON 944
BERLIN ANILINE WORKS 912
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS 938
CORCORAN, A. J. 929
EXHIBITORS' ADVERTISING CO. 942
EXHIBITORS' ADV. & SPECIALTY CO. 919
FRENCH FILM RESTORING CO. 944
GUNDLACH MANHATTAN CO. 943
HOKE, GEO. M. 912
INFORMATION BUREAU 931
LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS 944
LUMIERE-JOUGLA 944
McKENNA BROS. 922
MOVING PICTURE PATENTS CO. 917
MUSIC PRODUCTION CO. 932
NATIONAL TICKET CO. 936
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO. 941
ORTHO FILM CO. 927
PRINCESS THEATER 935
PITTSBURG M. P. SUPPLY CO. 922
REID DIFFUSE CO. 932
SANITARY SERVICE CORP. 944
SARGENT, E. W. 945
STEBBINS, CHAS. M. 920
THREE IN ONE OIL CO. 867
TRAINER, C. W. 922
WELLMAN, A. J. 944
ZENITH MFG. CO. 943

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN M. P. MACHINE CO. 942
EDISON M. P. MACHINE CO. 872
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO. 927-933
POWER, NICHOLAS 948

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
DEAGAN, J. C. 939
SINN, CLARENCE E. 923
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH 923
ZEIDLER DRUM CO. 945

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO. 946
ANDREWS, A. H. 946
BENNETT, GEO. W. 946
HARDESTY CHAIR CO. 946
STEEL FURNITURE CO. 946
WISCONSIN LUMBER CO. 947

PROJECTION SCREENS.
INVENTORS SPECIALTY CO. 939
MIRROROID CO. 927
SILVER SCREEN CO. 941
THE HADFIELD HALL CO. 932

SONG SLIDE MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN MOTION SLIDE CO. 942
CHICAGO SONG SLIDE CO. 912
LEVI CO. 939
SCOTT & VAN ALSTYNE 942
SIMPSON, A. J. 942
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO. 943

SPECIAL RELEASES.
BUFFALO DINES 927
CINES (S. A. F. & R.) 939
NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO. 925
RAISING THE MAINE FILM CO. 927
SING SING FILM CO. 927
TOURNAMENT FILM CO. 932

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO. 931

Facts and Comments

WE confess to some surprise that the idea of giving periodical illustrated reviews of great events taking place in all parts of the globe has not been followed more freely after the pronounced success of "the world's events in moving pictures," now featured by two companies. The reproach of imitation would not hold here, for the field is wide and open to all on even terms. As people read different newspapers, being interested in all, they would likewise be glad to see the pictorial news budget of different film companies. If there is to-day a shorter way to immediate recognition and popularity than a portrayal of contemporaneous events by means of the cinematograph, we have not heard of it. There are at least a dozen companies financially strong enough to enter this new and highly promising field of cinematographic effort. So far only the surface has been skimmed, and the service now availble may easily be improved in quantity, at least, if not in quality. An organization rivaling in completeness that of the Associated Press or of the International Cable Bureaus, and possessing the ability to rate news according to its proper value could, with the aid of the moving picture, easily become the greatest news-distributing force in the history of mankind.

* * *

FROM recent talks with men and women interested in the cause of education we incline to the belief that one of the first uses of the educational moving picture will be in aid of elementary training. Eventually the cinematograph will revolutionize all elementary teaching and practically control it. It has long been the opinion of experts that the modern child is taught too early and too quickly and that a draft is made upon the reflective power of the child long before nature is ready to meet it. The exercise of reflection and abstraction begins with the alphabet, and right here the child often ceases to learn in the proper sense of that word. He begins to repeat without understanding, because his mind has not been sufficiently prepared for absorbing the things which the reflective faculty alone can grasp. Modern education has sought to solve the problem by the establishment of "kindergartens," where children's games and picture books are used to ripen and strengthen the child's mind for the reception of ideas which can be conveyed by letters and words alone.

*

The moving picture in an immeasurably greater degree than any other method now in use accomplishes the work of filling the child's mind with pictures of things as they actually exist, including the all-important element of motion. In this way the child's mind is stored with a great stock of knowledge before he is asked to learn reading and writing. Children of five and six understand much of even the ordinary picture intended for adults. They love to ask and talk about them, as most parents know from personal experience. Such stimulation of thought in the growing mind is from the educator's point of view invaluable, and prepares the child for a better exercise of the reflective faculty, which should not be tested too strongly until the child has passed his tenth year. The motion picture will undoubtedly extend the present period of elementary education far beyond the time now allotted to it—to the great mental betterment of the child. Take two children of the age of ten—suppose one has been educated by the methods now in vogue and the other mainly through the means of carefully selected motion pictures. Let us suppose their mental endowments and their ambition to learn to be about the same, and we may be very sure that in the important four years from ten to fourteen the child that has gone through the moving picture course will progress more swiftly and absorb more completely; his power of expression will be greater, his imagination livelier and his ability to understand and retain will be superior. The subject is too vast to be more than lightly touched upon here, but some day not far off THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD will treat this and kindred subjects in an exhaustive manner.

* * *

WE have repeatedly suggested, both to exhibitors and manufacturers, that great advantges would result from judicious advertising in the daily press. Every newspaper prints a list of current amusements for the benefit of its readers, and this list should contain a notice, daily or weekly, of all the releases of moving picture reels. How welcome such a guide would be to the great army of "fans," who would in many cases make it a point to look for the house where the advertised film is shown. If corporate action by the two organizations is deemed unwise, there is no reason why the component companies should not act independently. It would be a novel thing, always a desideratum in effective advertising, and the cost would be trifling. Both exhibitor and manufacturer would be benefitted. In many instances outside of the big cities a regular press review of all advertised films may be expected. Incidentally such advertising would have a conciliatory influence on the policy of the paper, printing the lists of releases, would furnish a book of reference for the general public and stimulate interest in motion pictures. We wonder what progressive film-maker will be the first to heed this suggestion and carry it out in practise?

Edison Camera Patent Re-Issued.

THE Edison camera patent, known as re-issue No. 12037, was again re-issued on December 5, 1911, to Thomas A. Edison, assignor to the Motion Picture Patents Company. Briefly the claims covered by the patent refer to a motion picture camera having a stationary lens and a film governed by an intermittent movement. The claims will be found fully set forth on page 917. With the exception of Nos. 4 and 5, they are substantially the same as in the old patent.

The new and handsome building of the Red Men's Building Association, Bristol, Conn., which has been under construction for several months, is in the finishing stages and will be ready for the opening. The lessees will be a party of Bristol men who intend to rent it for receptions, dances or other public functions. This policy will be followed if there is a sufficient demand to warrant, otherwise it will be leased for moving picture show exhibitions.

Problems in Pictures.

By W. Stephen Bush.

TWO hostile forces have been contending for the mastery of the dramatic stage ever since man ceased to be a cliff dweller and found pleasure in imitating nature. Whether these conflicting elements were called conservatives and progressives or reactionaries and radicals, the dividing principle has always been the same, always is and always will be the same. The one group believes in tradition, in routine, in discipline and is thoroughly and complacently satisfied with whatever seems sufficient for the needs of the present. It is habitually disinclined to venture upon new fields and embrace new ideas. The other group is insurgent by temperament, impatient of experience and discipline, delights in defying conventionalities and looks with prejudiced favor upon whatever is new. At one extreme the pure, old-fashioned melodrama with such freedom of movement as is afforded by a pair of Spanish boots and a straight-jacket, while at the other extreme is the "problem play" par excellence, looking upon the stage not as a theatre of action but rather regarding it as a platform for the discussion of social, ethical, political and not infrequently sexual questions. The stage prospers best when neither faction holds a decided supremacy and when each is compelled to make concessions to the other. By taste, education and temperament mankind is pretty evenly divided between conservatives and insurgents. The greater and more complete therefore the compromise, the greater and more complete the material well-being of the stage. It is really nothing more than the assertion of the old principle, "the greatest good for the greatest number."

How is this situation reflected upon the silent stage? What is the pronounced tendency of the picture play at this present moment? Are the two forces evenly balanced or is the equilibrium disturbed by an undue preponderance of one over the other to the detriment of the motion picture art? Before entering upon an attempt to answer these questions seriously, it should be borne in mind that the ordinary moving picture audience is apt to be biased in favor of the old-fashioned and conventional type of drama. Of course we do not speak of the lurid and stupid form of melodrama, which the moving picture has helped to laugh out of existence. We have in view a rather high type of the conventional drama, such creations, for instance, as "The Two Orphans," "Foul Play," "David Copperfield," "East Lynne," "Jane Eyre," "La Tosca," etc. Such types contain, after all, but little of that unreal sentimentality which makes the stereotyped melodrama so indigestible to sound minds and normal hearts, while in their strong appeal to pity, in their ultimate triumph of good over evil and the downfall and punishment of the wrongdoer they are melodramatic to the core. There is this to be said in favor of the classic melodrama: The average crowd is far more easily moved by an appeal to the heart than by an argument addressed to reason. We can sit through most problem plays with small temptation to shed tears, but when we see the pitiful struggle of a child to escape its tormentors, or witness the cruel expiation of a folly committed by a good woman, we pay tribute in gracious drops of pity.

The great trouble with the melodrama is its constant tendency to the commonplace and to insincerity. The skill capable of creating a melodrama of the higher type is rarer than radium. For one masterhand possessed of enough cunning to touch the proper cords and evoke the genuine strain there are scores who possess all the diabolical persistency and all the mental poverty of the cheap imitator. The result is fearful to contemplate. It carries in its train all the horrors of monotony, of artificial sentiment, of forced situations and impossible characters. In certain sections of the manufacturing branch of the industry the stereotype melodrama, in wofully thin disguises, is running riot to-day. The melodramatic foundry has only about six original moulds, and all the rest of its products, no matter how numerous, are reducible to these original six. All of them breed a lot of bad acting, which in the picture play is far more offensive than on the silent stage. Acting by gesture, when it is unnatural, overdone and in the worst sense of the word theatrical, is intolerable. It provokes the disgust of the intelligent spectator far more quickly than a less amount of false acting on the speaking stage. Incidentally it spoils any real talent the actor may possess. Instances are not wanting of once capable actors who are visibly deteriorating under the burden of impossible melodramatic parts.

We would like to see some of the smaller and newer as well as some of the older manufacturers break away from old, time-worn, but not time-honored subjects, savoring strongly of the cheap melodrama. If this advice can be followed only by giving greater prominence to educational and scenic topics, so much the better. We earnestly hope at the same time that they will not be led away from the beaten path only to imitate the ways and methods of one or two singularly successful producers. Imitation is the bane of the photoplay. The convulsive attempts to follow the lead of this or that popular film maker can never bring desirable results. Be original or be not at all.

As things stand to-day in the dramatic situation on the silent stage, the hackneyed and conventional picture is in a harmful ascendency, and it would be well for manufacturers, capable of discerning the signs of the times, to go straight in the other direction and cultivate the style of drama which by its enemies is called the problem play. It is the play dealing in a dramatically correct and ethically sound manner with the questions that enter into our daily lives in quite a practical way. We do not mean to say that there should be a predominance of such plays; far from it. We do, however, wish to say that there ought to be more of them in order to restore that happy equilibrium essential to the continued material prosperity of both the speaking and the silent stage. People going to see a drama like to be moved and stirred to thought in about equal proportions.

If, in the poet's words, "nature is the seal to mortal wax," and the drama is to hold up the mirror to nature, then the drama must be like nature herself: varied, changing and full of disguises. Nature has by-ways of her own which she often reveals to patient and devout research.

If our advice "on first taste shall prove unwelcome" we cherish the hope that "on digestion it will turn to vital nourishment."

The Dangers of the Foreign Market

THE Moving Picture World sincerely wishes the success of all the enterprising American manufacturers who have invaded Europe and, in an open market, achieved and maintained an easy supremacy. We earnestly hope that the leadership of the American film will continue, for at present it is well deserved. The Americans practically control the market for no other reason than the excellence of their product.

There is, however, one grave danger which needs to be guarded against at all times. In a desire to meet the lower level of the European business it is just possible that a producer might be tempted to cheapen his product.

To appreciate the reality of this danger it is but necessary to glance at the foreign trade papers. The French press advertises pictures that could never get past the Federal statute forbidding the importation of obscene plays, books, etc. Of course, such films must please a large part of the French public. It is as bad in Italy and Spain, where most of the native manufacturers delight in taking their subjects from "penny dreadfuls," and the vile and cheap novels with which these countries are flooded. What we see here of the products of the Latin races is far above the average mass which never leaves the borders of the country where it was made. In Germany matters are, if possible, even worse. The appeal of the German film maker is almost without exception to the lowest order of intelligence. We hesitate about printing even the titles of some reels freely advertisd in word and picture in the European trade press. There is little danger of moral corruption in English films, but they are so uniformly and ineffably stupid as a rule, that they never, or hardly ever, leave Great Britain. With all their pro-British patriotism even the Canadians cannot stand them. In the considerations here urged the British films may therefore be safely left out of the question entirely.

We believe that it would be a commercial as well as a moral mistake to lower American standards even the fraction of an inch in order to cuddle the "low-brows" of Europe. Eventually the latter will be converted and uplifted by the higher ideals and cleaner morals reflected in the American-made film. It seems to us that we have of late noticed a trace of vulgarity in the "comedies" of one or two companies which make a specialty of supplying the German market. These few words are intended as a kindly warning not to do it again.

"Moving Picture Elopements" Condemned

CONFIRMING the attitude of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD on the subject of "elopements" as expressed in last week's issue, the following article, which is going the rounds of the daily press, should serve as a "straw" to the manufacturers to indicate the direction in which the wind is blowing:

Moving Picture Outrages.

Special emphasis was given to last week's protest of some benevolent societies against moving picture iniquities by a piece of news which through an interesting coincidence appeared in the same day's papers. This news came from Hoboken, and was to the effect that showmen had placed on exhibition films representing an alleged "high school elopement." The actual high school building itself was used as the background of the pictures, and the two girls dressed to represent high school pupils—with just a dash of "fastness"—were shown coming slyly out of its door, throwing themselves into the arms of two fashionable young men—with a dash of the "sport"—and hastening away, supposedly to some "marrying parson." The films were advertised as a "high school elopement" and were exhibited in places where they would most appeal to the patronage of the pupils of the high school and other schools.

It would be difficult to characterize without strong language the obvious evil of this performance, and it is not surprising that the Mayor of the city promptly sought police aid in suppressing the outrage. It was, of course, a libel upon the school to use it for such a purpose and to intimate that it had been the scene of such an occurrence, and an insulting libel to the pupils. It was, worst of all, a direct incitement to waywardness among them.

It seems to be a law of nature that whatever is of greatest usefulness is also capable of being perverted to the greatest misuse. There are few more interesting, entertaining and instructive devices of modern inventive genius than the moving picture; and there are few if any which are more abominably misused. As in the case of the automible, the misuse is confined to a minority, but that minority is large enough to do almost incalculable mischief. It is necessary, for the welfare of society, that the authorities shall exercise a strict and unrelenting censorship over such shows, perhaps to the legitimate extent of prohibiting any portrayal of unlawful acts. It is also eminently desirable, for their own sake as well as for that of the public, that reputable makers and exhibitors of films should discountenance the making and showing of the pictorial outrages to which we have referred and lend their potent influence for their entire suppression.

London Letter

By E. J. M.

AN attempt is at last being seriously made to compel all operators to prove their ability before they are permitted to take charge of the projecting apparatus in a cinematograph theater. Hitherto it has been open to all and sundry to try their prentice hand at the game, to the detriment of films and to the danger of the public. Now, however, the National Association of Cinematograph Operators is introducing into Parliament a bill which provides that, previous to accepting a position of operator-in-charge, every man shall pass a practical examination of a severe character. If the new Act becomes law it will apply to all parts of the country, local examining boards being set up in the most populous centres. Licenses will be issued yearly, the fee for the initial year of a man's career as an operator being fixed at five dollars, renewals being granted thereafter for a fee of 2½ dollars per year. The examining boards will have the power to suspend or revoke the license of any operator who is proven guilty of negligence in the handling of the apparatus of which he has charge and the picture theater proprietor is liable to a fine or imprisonment or both if he shall permit any unlicensed person to operate apparatus for projecting cinematograph films.

Strange to say, the bill has been received with a torrent of criticism and abuse on the part of a certain section of exhibitors, but it will probably avail them little. All the people who are running first-class shows welcome the idea because it opens the door that leads straight towards convincing the public that every care is being taken to provide for its safety. Rightly or wrongly, the upper middle classes in Great Britain are a wee bit nervous of cinematograph theaters, which have so many times been "slated" in the press, and one would have thought that the exhibitors would have welcomed the bill unanimously. The mere advertising value of a "licensed operator" ought to be worth a great deal to showmen.

The leading firms are making elaborate preparations for filming the Delhi Durbar and most of them have sent specially selected staffs to India at great expense. One or two of them have in fact also dispatched developing and printing outfits so that Australia and the Far East can be supplied with copies of the film direct from India, thus saving at least six weeks of valuable time. Mr. Charles Urban, of Kinemacolor fame, is personally directing the efforts of his staff in India and Mr. A. C. Bromhead, London manager of the Gaumont Company, is also there. A great deal depends upon the sailing dates of the mail boats, but the first copies of the actual Durbar ceremony ought to reach London during the first week in January, and consequently New York a few days later.

American films are being handled here by the Western Import Company, of which the brothers Aitken are the leading lights. The same company also run Majestic subjects.

Two Frenchmen propose to use metallised paper as a substitute for celluloid in the manufacture of cinematograph films. There is nothing very new in the idea so far as it goes, but the present inventors claim to be able to produce a film that is lighter, thinner and cheaper than has hitherto been the case with similar inventions. The new film is produced by applying an electrolytic coating of silver to specially prepared bands of paper. A non-cohesive coating of silver is deposited on a polished cathode and transferred to the paper by interposing between the cathode and the paper an organic solution, such as a celluloid solution, capable of forming after drying an impermeable, insoluble and cohesive film adhering to both the paper and the silver, but not the cathode. The paper itself is of the glazed variety and is coated with gumlac, or similar substance. The coated surfaces of the cathode and the paper are then brought into contact and the whole is pressed between cylinders maintained at a suitable temperature. After being allowed to cool the paper is separated from the cathode and it appears to be covered with a white silvering which is claimed to be as brilliant and polished as that of a mirror. It is, of course, understood that the pictures on such a film as the one just described are projected by reflection. Whether or not the paper film possesses sufficient strength to withstand the hard wear and tear of cinematograph projection remains to be seen. The inventors claim that it does.

I had a chat to-day with Mr. George Smith, Lyceum manager of the Vitagraph Company, and was glad to learn that his firm continues to do increasing business. He tells me that a version of "Barbara, A Daily Fair" is on the way here, and as a patch on "A Tale of Two Cities" it will be very welcome. Apropos of Vitagraph films as showing the esteem in which they are held, I was talking to one of the biggest buyers the other day and he assured me that he saw every film offered for sale every week except Vitagraph. He knew they were so uniformly good that he did not even trouble to see them. Yet he buys more Vitagraph subjects than those of any other manufacturer.

AMONG THE CHICAGO SHOWS.

By Charles A. Young.

THE Monroe Theater, at 55th Street and Monroe Avenue, has started a new policy under the new manager, Mr. H. W. Jenner. Where formerly the pictures were used merely as a chaser at the end of a vaudeville program, they are now featured, and three reels are included in the show. The program now offered consists of four vaudeville acts and three reels of film. Mr. Jenner does a commendable thing with his pictures in including his bookings as announcements on his theater programs, but I am sorry to say that he does it only half-way, since the manufacturer's name is not given. He said that he does not want to advertise the manufacturer, but I think he is wrong. Everyone who ever sees a picture nowadays knows Imps, Thanhousers, Rexes, and other pictures by their name and their reputation, and the announcement of a subject by any of these makers, as well as of many others, will draw better than the mere placing on the program of the title. Projection of the pictures is fairly good, the throw being very long and the picture of good size. A Power's "Five" is the machine used, and service is supplied by the Standard Film Exchange.

The Manhattan Theater.

The Manhattan Theater, at 59th Street and Wentworth Avenue, is putting on the screen one of the best pictures I have seen in the city. The picture is brilliant, steady and sharp, with the sharpness that comes of an unusually fine lens and accurately set shutter. A two-year-old Motiograph is used, which projects a picture quite as well as a brand new Motiograph could. The rest of the projection equipment includes a Kosmik transformer and a H. & H. (Hadfield-Hall) aluminum screen, and all these, in the hands of Operator Fred Hager, produce a picture equalled in very few houses. The stereoscopic effect is remarkable, and the extreme sharpness of the screen image renders the rear seats as good as the front ones for one who likes to follow the delicate shading of expression on the features of the actors. The owner of this excellent house, Mrs. Eunice Fitch, certainly is fortunate in having a picture of such quality. Her son, Edmond Fitch, who played the pictures, gave a very fine musical program, free from all ragtime, and her daughter, Miss Elmore Fitch, sang the songs very well. Altogether the Manhattan is a very pleasant little house, deserving of all success, which I think is coming to it, as every house I have seen which presents as good a show as this is successful.

The Federal Theater.

The Federal Theater, on East 61st Street near Indiana Avenue, has just recently opened up, and is a very pretty place indeed, but as its owner is a newcomer in the moving picture field, there are many points where there could be improvement. The house is lighted during the intermissions by a series of clusters of lamps, there being eight clusters of six 16-candle power lamps. The result is a too bright illumination of the auditorium while the picture is off the screen, amounting to a glare, and too great a contrast between the light and the dark auditorium. This house is located in a refined neighborhood, where a soft light would be very desirable, as well as a well-lighted house during the show. The side lights are of low candle power and deep green, and therefore do not give enough illumination to be of any value at all. The owner, Mr. Wm. H. Murphy, is a man who does not hesitate to spend money if he sees the results, and I would suggest to him that he try out the indirect lighting system, which is very desirable for his house and locality. Projection in the Federal is of very high quality.

I had the pleasure of meeting Mr. J. W. Allen, the operator, a few days before the house opened, and was somewhat impressed by the way he spoke of his new operating room, in a tone which an incompetent man could never have used. I wasn't disappointed when I saw his picture. The light was very fine, but I am sorry to say that the machine has some fault which prevents the giving a perfectly steady picture. This is something which the manufacturers ought to make good. Mr. Allen showed me his carbon trim, very nicely fitted out, with the new machine, and other appliances, including a Ground[illegible]. He told me that he believes in using one good ampere to the current, but changed the current over to suit the conditions on the screen, a fine point in operating which escapes most operators. However, the average amount he uses is 45 amperes.

I noticed a couple of other fine points about the operating room: First, it is reached by a stairway through the box office, instead of a ladder and trap door; a large vent flue over the lamp house; and what would seem to be a superfluity, a small steam radiator in the corner of the room. But this is quite [illegible] (the reason [illegible]) is cold until after the arc has been in use for some time, more so because there is no rheostat to heat up the place. The screen at the Federal is unworthy of such a nice little house, being one of those aluminum daubs which spoil a good picture.

The program board in front of the place is not very fitting to a good house, being a home made affair of whitewashed letters, not at all attractive. Service is licensed, but the manager seems to have a wrong idea of present-day film conditions, since he wants to run a program largely of Wild West pictures, which is not the kind to build up and hold a trade in this refined locality. It would be much better to get the finer products of the American and foreign studios, and feature Gaumont's and Eclipse's and the leading American makers' fine historical subjects instead of the usual Indian and cowboy "omin' picture show." The future money in the moving picture business, as in everything else, is for the man who does something which is not the usual thing.

My remarks regarding the Federal Theater are not at all of the nature of knocks, and I hope that the owner will take them in the spirit in which they are written. I don't really like to knock anybody, but in the course of my visiting the various shows about town, I cannot help comparing them; and those which are successful are those which are best managed, have the best pictures and the best projection, and cater to the best class of people in their neighborhoods. And the best people are those who say least about the pictures; they very rarely applaud them when they like them, and show their approval only by coming again. Vice versa, when they are not pleased with a show, they say nothing, but they stay away. And it is the crowd that comes again and again that makes money for a theater.

That moving pictures should be utilized in religious meetings if the Protestant church is to keep pace in the march of progress was the declaration made by Dr. Elduras Richmond, of Philadelphia, speaking on "Pictured Truth" before the District Sunday-school Association in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, Washington, D. C.

PROGRESSIVE STREETER.

The above cut illustrates the novel and uniq[illegible] Mr. Herbert S. Streeter, of the Bijou Theater, Gl[illegible], Mass., advertises a special "Indian Day." It is an unusually [illegible]ng and effective method of booming business. Crowds watched the cartoonists placing it upon the window and the general comment was that "Streeter is up and coming."

Kalem Sends Company to the Orient

PRODUCERS, CAMERAMAN AND PLAYERS SAILED DEC. 2nd ON THE ADRIATIC—EXTENDED PICTURE-MAKING TOUR OF EGYPT, PALESTINE, TURKEY AND SOUTHERN EUROPE WILL BE MADE—MANY PICTURES OF HOLY LAND PLANNED.

ENCOURAGED by the success of its two expeditions to Ireland for the purpose of taking pictures upon Irish soil, the Kalem Company has undertaken a campaign in foreign countries that makes the Irish affair look like a mere Sunday school picnic and which will, if successful, place the promoters at the very top of the list of motion picture makers of the world in point of enterprise.

On Saturday, December 2nd, there sailed on the White Star S.S. Adriatic, bound for points on the Mediterranean, the following Kalem players: Mr. Sidney Olcott, director; Mr. George Hollister, expert photographer; Miss Gene Gauntier, assistant director, and editor and writer of scenarios; Miss Alice Hollister, Mr. Jack J. Clark, Mr. Robert Vignola, and Mr. J. P. McGowan, players, and J. A. Farnum, scenic artist. Mr. and Mrs. Hollister took their two children, George, Jr., and Ethel Dorris, with them, and "Philly" McDonald, general utility man, who joined the company in Ireland, is also one of the party. The party of players will go to Genoa, Italy, direct, touching at the Madeira Islands and Algiers, after which they will go to Alexandria, Egypt, and thence up the Nile valley to Luxor and to Assouan. From Egypt the company will journey to Palestine, making their headquarters in Jerusalem, from which point trips will be made to various interesting localities. A stop will be made in Damascus and, at the beginning of summer, they will cross into Europe, up the Danube by easy stages and finally go to Norway and Sweden for the summer season.

Further than that plans have not yet been formulated, but that, though briefly told, constitutes the most extensive trip for so large a company of players and comprehends the most ambitious plan for picture making that has ever been attempted in the brief history of the motion picture business by any concern.

In speaking of this great enterprise, Mr. Frank J. Marion, of the Kalem Company, told a representative of the Moving Picture World, who expressed surprise that anything of the kind should be attempted at this time, that probably no one could be much more surprised than themselves. "It is the result of a sudden inspiration," he said. "Our company had just got nicely settled in Jacksonville for a good long winter's work and, up to ten days ago, had no though of going elsewhere. We got to talking about the possibilities of pictures in Egypt and the Holy Land here at the office, and the subject appealed to us so strongly that we concluded to undertake the work at once. Mr. Olcott got his instructions on Friday to come to New York and prepare for the trip. The rest of the company packed and followed and, on Saturday of the week following they were aboard the Adriatic bound for Egypt. We, here, have not fully recovered from the hustle of preparation, and we are constantly in fear of discovering something of importance that has been left behind in the scramble of getting the company aboard the boat.

"I will not attempt to tell you all they expect to do on this trip; but, as you know, there is a wealth of material in biblical history. Egypt is rich in tradition and historical events which readily lend themselves to the needs of the picture maker. For example, the story of "The Good Samaritan" will be done upon the exact spot now pointed out to tourists as the place where the hold-up occurred. In the work of securing suitable scenarios and stories we have secured the co-operation of a noted authority on Egypt and the Holy Land, Mr. E. Alexander Powell, F. R. G. S., and much of this trip was planned upon lines suggested by him.

"Our company will work under the protection and with the active assistance of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, through the mission stations in Egypt and Palestine, also with the authority and co-operation of the Franciscan Order, which is, by the courtesy of the Turkish government, in charge of the sacred places in Palestine. By a direct order from President Taft our company carries letters to all American consuls and consular agents instructing those officials to give us every proper assistance. Further than that, Mr. Olcott is something of a diplomat himself, and Mr. McGowan, once a member of the "Queen's Own," campaigned through Egypt and knows something of the tribes to be met there. Another point in our favor is the fact that our cameraman, Mr. Hollister, has traveled all through the Holy Land on a previous occasion and is familiar with that region. Altogether, the company starts out about as well equipped for the tour as is possible, and we are satisfied to spend our money on their chances of success."

We are not going to try to repeat all that Mr. Marion told us concerning this great Kalem enterprise, for when he gets properly inoculated with one of these big ideas he fairly bristles with little side ideas and bubbles with enthusiasm. "It's right in line with the original Kalem policy," he declared. "You will remember when we began to make pictures in that loft on 24th Street that we endeavored to do the things that could not be done on the theatrical stage. Our pictured stories were set in scenes as nearly resembling those described in the written story as it was possible for us to find, when we could not get to the actual places described. It was with that idea uppermost that we undertook the Irish pictures upon Irish soil and upon the very spots described. We have in mind, also, the coming educational value of these pictures. The time is coming when the Kalem pictures of the Holy Land and of Egypt and elsewhere, for we do not know where this enterprise will end or what it will develop, will be in great demand. That time is not far distant, so I am confident that we have not launched our enterprise prematurely."

We will leave it to you, readers of The World, if it is not a subject to grow enthusiastic about. The World man confesses to a lot of enthusiasm over the matter, and has been thinking ever since of what a wonderful vein of material will be available to the Kalem players, of the splendid work they will be able to do under the inspiration of the mysterious Orient and its mysterious people.

Mr. Marion does not attempt to say when the first negatives will arrive from this expedition, but it will probably be months before anything like a picture will be received at the home office in New York. One thing we do know: it will be a good one when it does come, or the record of these same players in Ireland counts for nothing.

In the meantime the picture makers of the world are invited to take off their hats to the unequalled enterprise of this wideawake firm of American picture makers—the Kalem Company.

NEW KALEM COMPANY FOR JACKSONVILLE.

Kenean Buell, with a new company of players, has gone to Jacksonville, Fla., to take up the work started by Mr. Olcott and his company, now on their way to Egypt. Mr. Buell has been with the Kalem Company for the past two years or more, having been in charge of the No. 1 California company for a year and, more lately, in charge of the New York company and studio. Under his direction the work at Jacksonville will proceed without interruption.

WOMAN O.K.'S IOWA PICTURE SHOWS.

At a convention of the Federated Women's Clubs of the second district of Iowa, held at Marengo, Ia., recently, Mrs. J. B. Kessler, of Iowa City, created a sensation among the anti-amusement members by an endorsement of the picture theater. Among other things she said:

"I can't speak for your other cities," she averred, "but in Iowa City the moving picture shows have come to stay and deservedly so. They are clean, moral and uplifting, in the main. The men who conduct these shows, moreover, are gentlemen. They and their wives are people of culture, and move in the best society. They would not stoop to give unclean and demoralizing entertainments, any more than any other of our best citizens."

SOLAX HAS SOME "MAINE" PICTURES.

Advices from the Solax Company come to the effect that pictures have been taken by them of the committee headed by Admiral Vreeland, which has recently examined the wreck of the U. S. S. Maine in Havana Harbor. The pictures show portions of metal which is supposed to be fragments of the mine which caused the destruction of the Maine. The first public view of these pictures will be given at Lew Fields' Herald Square Theater, New York City, Sunday, December 10, and during the week following they will be exhibited in Washington for the benefit of President Taft and other officials. During the week of December 18, they will be exhibited to the public in the Belasco Theater, Washington, D. C.

Mildred Holland in Pictures.

Famous Dramatic Star Has Been Secured by the Powers Motion Picture Company—Will Appear in Production of "The Power Behind the Throne."

Mildred Holland, one of the best known actresses of the legitimate stage, is the latest notable acquisition to the ranks of photoplayers. Miss Holland has enjoyed a long and successful career as a star and her favorite play, "The Power Behind the Throne," has been presented by her in almost every city in the United States to large and enthusiastic audiences. Believing this reputation to be a valuable asset negotiations were opened with Miss Holland by the Powers Motion Picture Company, of New York, seeking to secure her exclusive services for picture plays. These negotiations have been successful and Mr. P. A. Powers, the head of that company, now announces Miss Holland's engagement.

This announcement by Mr. Powers may be taken as a forerunner of some of the big things he has in consideration, now that he has completed his new studios. With adequate facilities for doing serious work in the production end of the picture business, the Powers Motion Picture Company may now be looked to for something unusual. Naturally, with so important a player at the head of the Powers stock company as Miss Holland, the big things will be a possibility. It is therefore no surprise when the statement is made by Mr. Powers that the first production must be Miss Holland in the event will be her own favorite play, "The Power Behind the Throne."

Following this production will come a series of picture plays especially suited to the actress of the quality and importance of Miss Holland.

The Moving Picture World views the acquisition of Miss Holland by the Powers Company as a distinct achievement. It is in line with our predictions that the time is at hand for the particular stars of the dramatic stage to acknowledge the importance of the pictured drama and take a part in its production. Last week we noticed the effect in the popularity of Mr. Frederic Santley. Soon we will be called upon to observe the result in the case of Miss Mabel Taliaferro, who is to appear in a production of that delightful fairy story "Cinderella."

But this is only the beginning of a new order of things. Following the lead of Miss Holland and Miss Taliaferro we confidently expect to see other and possibly greater American dramatic players posing for pictures.

Miss Mildred Holland, Famous Dramatic Star, Now with the Powers Motion Picture Company.

The Moving Picture Educator

WITH this issue our readers will notice that the Educational Page has grown to the extent of a special supplement to THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD. For more than a year it has been felt that educational cinematography was assuming such proportions that it was not only worthy of, but demanded, the attention of a special department. Fostering the spread of the educational movement, it is our intention to increase the size of this supplement from time to time, until it can be issued separately as an independent journal devoted exclusively to the moving picture in its educational aspect. Furthermore it is the purpose of the editor of this paper to endeavor to promote the educational value of the moving picture by this addition, which is so prepared that it may be used by authorities in educational matters wherever moving pictures are known. It is a pleasure to anticipate for THE MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR the same sphere of usefulness, the same prosperous growth, with the same universal appreciation which has come to THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

It will be manifest to all that the first uses of the "Educator" will be to chronicle everything in cinematography relating to educational purposes, thus making it a desirable medium useable by everyone interested in educational work. It will also notice other films of a nature "safe and sane" for schools, institutions and churches; rising superior to all censorship, it will only notice that which is beyond reproach and valuable as containing something of that interest which is second only to education itself. It is further desired that its pages shall be open to the practical educator as THE WORLD has been to the exhibitor, for out of the mutuality of thought true progress is assured.

THE MOVING PICTURE AS A NECESSITY.

Article I.

THE cinematograph is not only ornamental, beautiful, pleasing and entertaining; it is also useful. More than this, its practical value has made such bounds that it has now become an actual necessity; indeed, it is almost a question if its utilitarian value is not greater that its pleasure giving has proved to be. Its production has become an industry and its use a profession, so that it is now a recognized commercial factor of rapidly increasing proportions. Seldom have predictions been made concerning the value of an invention or discovery, that have been so rapidly and so completely realized than those relative to the moving picture. Two years ago it was the creature of scorn and contempt; an agency of evil, a very "devil transformed as an angel of light"; time has proved, however, that it was more an angel of light than it was devil; whatever evil attended it was not inherent, but added, and as an angel of light it is now fulfilling its mission as one of the greatest servants of humanity.

Our good old friend the stereopticon has reluctantly been compelled to take a second place, but its value will never be discarded, as it will always be a worthy aid of its greater successor. As a necessity the cinematograph finds its place everywhere the human eye needs either to be taught or pleased. It is an exaggeration to say that as a counterpart of the human eye it seems as valuable a necessity as the eye itself. The value of this necessity has already been proved as an entertainer to a large extent, bringing within the range of all classes down to the humblest and poorest a pleasure heretofore deemed impossible.

Besides this pleasure giving it has proved an uplift as, passing from the cheap and melodramatic, to the historical and classical, the most unlearned have seen the portrayal of events, real and imaginary, which always have an edifying effect. The continuance of this necessity demands permanency, for progress is eternal, and, until superseded by another and a greater power, the moving picture becomes its own necessity. Lifting all forces with it in its upward tendency it has been an educator. Film manufacturers will confess that they have been drawn into a sphere of work they never contemplated and which, being beyond the capabilities of many, may compel some of them to leave the field to others better able to carry on the work.

Starting, as many of them did, to produce playlets of small proportions and mediocre value, well within their powers, they soon found a demand for productions far beyond the playlet and requiring talent far beyond what was then contemplated. The call for educational subjects opened up a new future, not only artists, but educators were now in demand and, per force of that necessity laid upon them, manufacturers had to meet the new conditions, or abandon the work to those who could do so. In one way or another manufacturers are trying to meet these new conditions, even if inadequately; for it must be admitted that the demand for the moving picture is greater than the supply, or the capabilities of that supply.

In this crisis the moving picture educator hopes to be able to assist.

THE TEACHER OF TEACHERS AN AID TO THE TEACHER.

Article I.

"Thou that teacheth another, teacheth thou not thyself also?" These words are singularly true of the teacher who uses the moving picture. In many instances it becomes a question whether the teacher uses or is used by the cinematograph. The position is now an alternating one; sometimes the cinematograph is an aid only, at other times it is a leader with the teacher as an aid. In this new relationship it may often carry the burden of the work and thus relieve that tremendous pressure of which teachers make common complaint. As a further aid to the teacher the cinematograph is

A Great Disciplinarian.

The maintenance of discipline in the schoolroom is the teacher's hardest work. Teaching is easy where order and attention are gratuitous; but where these have to be purchased at a great cost of nerve-racking effort, teaching becomes one of the hardest tasks. Every teacher knows that the "story," or the "picture," immediately secures attention, for silence and good order are a pre-requisite condition readily volunteered by the class. How easy, and what a pleasure will teaching become when the lesson is given in story, or picture, or both?

Discipline and the impartation of knowledge here co-ordinate, making teaching easier almost to the point of pleasure giving. As a result there naturally follows a saving of time, as not only the economy of time gained by the discipline, but the rapid impartation of the lesson by the picture and the doubly rapid conception of both eye and ear, increase a hundred fold the great advantage of perception, retention and comprehension of the subject. So great is the value of possible rapid learning that there are pictures which present in a few minutes subjects which have taken days and weeks to prepare. Taking some of the Pathe nature pictures, which are timed to illustrate eight hundred times quicker than the actual or, as in another case, a "development of six weeks in two minutes," it is readily understood how every branch of learning will be reduced to a minimum almost inconceivable.

A further value must be recorded in favor of the degree of permanence which results from cinematographic teaching. Learn to-day and forget to-morrow, necessitating painful and monotonous repetition, is the drudgery of teaching. The combined working of the faculties caused by the picture method has driven forgetting into oblivion. Formerly the scholar often did not care to remember, now he wants to re-

ADVANCES.

It may not be generally known that the only distinct advance in the realm of moving pictures is along educational lines. This is of course good news to all who are interested in advanced and applied cinematography. While it is unfortunate that there is no greater development in the entertainment series of pictures, it is probably because the field is not so large, neither are the opportunities so great as those in the industrial, scenic and educational world. There is further need for a more thorough scrutiny of the scenarios which are being enacted just now, as a weak sentimental love-making is too apparent. Several of the historical reproductions recently released have been spoiled by the fact that what was interesting and important was belittled by being made to surround "an incident" which is often of a nature which causes the critics just ground for complaint as to the effect upon young minds.

THE WEEKLY INSTRUCTOR.

In Pathe's Weekly the writer feels that every scholar in America ought to find a common instructor, as to his mind it is the masterpiece of current informative education. The choicest events in the world are regularly chronicled and portrayed. At the present time the Italy-Turkish war is receiving close attention. Never before has an actual warfare been portrayed and its progress noted and presented; this in itself is a valuable lesson, while the other events are always of interest and value.

"HOME"—A THANKSGIVING PICTURE.

This Edison production, timed for a Thanksgiving release, is singularly appropriate for any time seeing that it carries with it a strong moral lesson showing the power of home ties upon wandering ones, no matter in what station of life.

A father and mother, saddened by the willful absence from home of their only son, approach with heavy hearts the home-loving season of the year. Hoping that even by chance her wandering boy may see it, the mother inserts a "personal" in the city papers assuring her "child" a warm welcome on returning home. In the "copy" room of a paper the notice is read by the editor, who has himself forgotten the old country home and aged parents; the appealing nature of the "personal" touches him and he immediately starts upon a long delayed return trip to the old home. Again an actress in the dressing room of the theater is reading and smoking her cigarette while waiting her "turn." As her eye catches the advertisement her quickened conscience is evidenced by her actions, for she, too, is a willful wanderer from the parental roof and table; hastily dressing in traveling clothes after finishing her part, she hurries to the "welcome" waiting her.

Scene from "Home" (Edison).

In turn a clubman, lolling the luxury of his clubroom, happens to read the mother's call, which comes to him as a voice from the early days, as the vision of the old and happy farm scenes pass before him. The call is undeniable and tossing aside the paper he surprises his friends by his hurried departure for the home, well nigh forgotten.

The paper tossed aside by the clubman falls through an open window where a passing street wanderer catches and reads it. Although the message has done so much good thus far the last reader is the one for whom it was originally intended. The call finds a ready response in the prodigal's mind, and he is soon seen "trailing" his way home, by stealing rides on the freight trains, for unlike the others whose hearts have been touched he is to poverty and distress.

Meanwhile, in the old home, the lonely couple have been quietly preparing the family meal. The same is but with especial care that a place is prepared for the absent one. The turkey is placed in front of the father who now with the mother stands reverently to offer thanks and invoke the blessing. At this moment, and amid the silence of the solemn prayer, the prodigal enters the room unnoticed. Though stunned for a moment, he silently walks to the prepared place and with bowed head awaits the finish of the parental devotions. The reunion is a scene of happiness which sends a thrill of joy to every beholder.

Scene from "Home" (Edison).

The sentiment of the picture is good, its message almost divine, for even as a passage of scripture the "personal" appealed to every erring reader who saw it. Who can tell but that in like manner, as the picture travels all over this and other lands, it may appeal to many a wanderer, prodigal, or even rich home forgetter who will be reminded of early scenes, past joys, loving parental hearts and realize that there is only one place, which is "Home, Sweet Home."

RESULTS.

While it is a pleasure to anticipate or predict the success of any adaptation of the moving picture, it is a far greater pleasure to record the actual success which has been experienced through their use. In the schools of Brooklyn the educational exhibitions given nightly under the direction of Madame Dolesé, of the General Film Company, are proving a success more than anticipated. A regular attendance averaging fifteen hundred on each occasion is certainly a great proof of appreciation.

Last week the subjects shown were "Wild Animals in Captivity," "Dr. Charcot's Expedition to the South Pole," "Summer Babies," a study in sociology, and "To the Aid of Stonewall Jackson." Some of the subjects are prefaced by a few explanatory remarks, while between the pictures the children delight in singing patriotic and other suitable songs. Other pictures which have proved most acceptable are "Sea Birds in Their Haunts," "Sensational Logging" and "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

It is also a pleasure to record similar successes in other places. In some smaller towns the authorities arrange with the picture theater for an "Educational Night" when not only the children, but the civic and educational authorities, attend to give emphasis to their belief in the value of such helpful exhibitions. There is little doubt that this plan will rapidly spread all over the country, and prove productive of similar satisfactory results.

The science or aviation is represented this week with a picture showing Aviator Collier experimenting with his new hydroplane "Canard Voisin No. 2" at Boulogne, France. The way in which the 'plane runs on the surface of the water and rises at the will of the operator is exceedingly clever. Its return to the surface of the water seems at first impractical; a safe "landing" is, however, made, which shows that thus far at any rate the hydroplane is not a mere toy or fanciful invention.

Reviews of Notable Films

"NOTRE DAME DE PARIS" (C. G. P. C.)

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

HERE is a three-reel photoplay so well constructed that it has certain elements of superiority to the novel from which it was adapted—it saves the reading of a vast amount of historical literature that does not pertain to the plot. The story in the photodrama is perfectly told without Victor Hugo's graphic force of language and will be more interesting than the novel to a number of people because the continuity is so much better preserved. It is not only put together with exceptional skill, but is handled in a masterly way, and is acted with greater fidelity to the original than any adaptation I have ever had the pleasure of seeing.

The story is in some respects a hideous one, and it will be regarded as of doubtful moral value by many who see its truthful presentation. It tells of the unholy passion of Archdeacon Frollo of Notre Dame for a young gypsy dancer named Esmeralda. She first came within reach of his vision while dancing before a crowd in the Place de Notre Dame, a public square in front of the religious edifice. The actual exterior is used in a large number of cases and possibly when the dancer first appears with her little piece of carpet to set the people agape by her fascinating contortions. The priest sees her while he is in company with the hunchback bell-ringer Quasimodo, and around these three characters practically all the interest is grouped.

We are first shown the tall, scholarly and morose archdeacon—all the types are well chosen—dressed in his sombre gown of black and occupied with the practice of alchemy in a secluded chamber supposed to be within one of the towers of Notre Dame—there is abundant opportunity for fine settings throughout the piece, and no failure to respond on the part of the producers. The hunchback is with him, acting in the capacity of a confidential servant, faithful and stupid enough to serve the tall priest's evil purposes. When these two go forth from the cathedral and join the mob watching the beautiful young dancer, the priest becomes so infatuated that he acts like a man in a spell of enchantment. After the dance, they follow the gypsy girl through the old and narrow streets of Paris—these are accurate representations—until an opportunity arrives and the powerful hunchback, at the priest's instigation, seizes the girl in his arms and attempts to carry her away. A captain of the guard comes on the scene followed by his men and Quasimodo is caught, while the "man higher up" escapes as he occasionally does in modern times. The girl falls in love with the captain, but the hunchback is punished on a pillory of fiendish ingenuity. He is strapped to a revolving wheel, whipped in the presence of a mob—all this before the cathedral—and left there in a famished condition to be stoned by the mob.

Now comes Esmeralda with more bravery than any man present, and the merciful qualities of womankind added, to the relief of the unfortunate wretch who attempted her abduction. She is again seen by the inflamed archdeacon, and his growing passion leads him to follow her a second time. She goes on her way from the pillory to keep an appointment with the man she has come to love, the gallant captain who prevented the abduction. He is gallant in an old-fashioned way, for he has arranged the meeting to be held at a low tavern with a private room for amorous swains on the second floor. Archdeacon Frollo follows Esmeralda to the door of the tavern—he is now consumed with mad passion—sees her enter and greet the captain with shy tenderness, and becomes tormented with rage when the captain induces the unsuspecting Esmeralda to ascend the stairs. In a frenzy of murderous jealousy the priest climbs up outside of the tavern, enters a dark room adjoining that of the lovers, slips in when they are locked in each other's arms, stabs the captain in the back and escapes unseen. Esmeralda's cries bring the guard, and she is arrested for murdering the man she really loves, carried off to prison and convicted of the crime she denies having committed.

The settings are chosen with fine taste up to this period and continue to be of exceptional order throughout, but the acting is now intensified in scenes rarely permitted on the stage or screen. Frollo visits Esmeralda in her prison cell in the guise of a confessor, while she has as little on as the law will allow, and there is a struggle between the infatuated priest and the tormented girl that will satisfy critics who like scenes "true to life." He is repulsed and the beautiful girl is next tortured to wring a confession from her of the crime she did not commit. This scene also is realistic enough to gratify those who delight in the horrible. The gypsy confesses in her agony and is taken to the steps of Notre Dame in a tumbril with little on but the hangman's rope around her neck to make peace with her creator. There she is seized by the powerful hunchback and carried into the sacred protection of the church before the eyes of those gathered to witness her execution. Quasimodo, acting now from gratitude, hides the unfortunate beauty in his own den and sleeps before the door. Frollo enters at night—the villain still pursues her—and overcomes the enfeebled creature, but her cries bring Quasimodo and she is preserved for another fate. She is executed before Notre Dame while Archdeacon Frollo is peering over at the scene from a gallery—these scenes are taken at the cathedral—and he meets death at the same moment at Quasimodo's hands being hurled to the steps below.

Scenes from "Notre Dame de Paris" (C. G. P. C.)

Such is the story of horror and human animus which Goethe characterized as the "most detestable ever written." The school of drama which dwells on hardship and persecution as "realistic" will always have its followers, especially those who imagine that realism consists of depicting rascality. The evil of the world forms the theme of great novels by Balzac and Zola, but it has always seemed to me that there are two sides of each individual existence, that human character is complex and composite and that which is really truthful shows the sunshine and the shadow instead of holding up the dark places to view unrelieved by an opposed glimpse of happiness. Realism, therefore, seems to partake of pessimism, and is no more true than romanticism while lacking in the latter's charm.

Be that as it may, the photoplay "Notre Dame de Paris" has exceptional merits. It has extracted a connected narrative from a rambling work of fiction; it is a marvel of setting, interior and exterior; the types are admirably chosen and the acting little short of superb. Many adaptations from noted works of fiction fail—in fact, nearly all of them do—in these particulars, hence this one may be preserved in the eventual survival of the fittest.

"THE GOODFELLOWS' CHRISTMAS EVE" (Essanay).

Reviewed by Jas. S. McQuade.

SCHEDULED for release on Dec. 15th, Essanay's full-length film, "The Goodfellows' Christmas Eve," will come at a most opportune time to move men and women on whom Fortune has smiled, to assist in administering to the needs and contributing to the joys of those in poverty and distress. Around Christmastide, more especially, there abound good will and good deeds towards the less favored among the sons of men, and the Essanay film under review will doubtless make an appeal to many thousands of hearts.

It will be just three years ago this coming Christmas since a big, warm-hearted Chicagoan started this "goodfellow" movement. He undertook the gigantic task single-handed but discovered so many [illegible] that throughout the city [illegible] a corps of his reporters. [illegible] a series of letters in the Chicago Tribune still concealing his identity, for it was a vital feature to his plan of relief that no one participating in the beauty should ever know [illegible] and that the names of all those whom he personally assisted be kept secret.

The Tribune took up the plan most heartily, and many [illegible] "goodfellows" responded to assist in the work. Many noble women, it must be remembered, were included in the ranks and the number has increased yearly, until now there need not be a child in the city without some token that Santa Claus has paid a visit [illegible] Christmas dinner, and much needed articles of wearing apparel, or money with which to buy medicine, fuel, etc.

Other cities have followed the lead of Chicago "goodfellows," and it is believed that the Essanay film will be a potent factor in making the movement world-wide.

The film has been produced by Essanay's Eastern company. It shows many pathetic scenes copied from real life, and no attempt has been made to exaggerate conditions. These scenes reveal excellent studio work, the surroundings and characters being typical of [illegible]

The club scene, in which a grouchy old bachelor turns a deaf ear to the entreaties of his fellow members—all of them "goodfellows"—to join them, shows capital acting. Spirited persistency is shown by the "goodfellows" and is met with equally obdurate obstinancy by the crusty old man.

When a copy of the Tribune is handed him and his attention is drawn to the heading—"Wanted: Ten Thousand Good Fellows to Bring Cheer to Ten Thousand Cheerless Children"—he throws the paper from [illegible] and snaps his old jaws shut with the ferocity of a bull dog. Not even then do his companions cease to urge him to join them; but, surely and determined, he waves them away.

Dreams of his childhood succeed where his friends had failed. In his big chair he dozes, and has a vision of a Christmas tree of 50 years ago, in the old home, around which father and mother and a little boy flutter happily on Christmas Eve. This is followed by [illegible] same trio on Christmas morning, examining stockings to find what Santâ Claus had left them.

Scene from "The Goodfellows' Christmas Eve," by the Essanay Film Mfg. Co.

Awaking, he eagerly seizes the newspaper and reads about the great need for "goodfellows." Then he calls for his overcoat, hat and cane and hurries out in search of his friends, who are making their Christmas Eve rounds to bring joy and gladness to gloomy homes.

He has just joined them when a tiny baby is discovered in a large basket in a doorway. A note is attached to the outside wrapping, in which the mother prays that some Christian soul will give her baby a home. The baby is passed from man to man, each anxious to give it a home, but old Grouch seizes it and carries it home in triumph to his housekeeper. Then he rejoins the "goodfellows."

Next we see them visit a poor sick widow and her children. There is neither medicine nor food in the house. Tell-tale moisture clouds the eyes as one watches these "goodfellows" chasing despair and hunger from this helpless household. And we laugh in merry glee as we note that old man Grouch is the most generous giver of them all!

So it is in the remaining scenes, and when all is over and the "goodfellows" return to the club to drink a Christmas morning toast, we are not surprised to hear, "Here's to the death of old man Grouch, and here's hail to the birth of a jolly 'goodfellow'!"

The photography throughout is of such quality that it will contribute greatly to the pleasure of viewing the film.

"THE ACTRESS" (Majestic).

SACRIFICE to duty is a fruitful theme of story writer and dramatist. Naturally, it crops out in the picture now and then. One of the best portrayals of this theme seen in some time is given in a Majestic subject entitled "The Actress." With an excellent cast headed by Miss Mabel Trunnelle and Herbert Prior, the Majestic company has produced a picture that will prove its claim to serious consideration. Briefly, it is the story of an incident in theatrical life, while by no means common, yet one that happens, testing the fortitude of even the strongest character. A new play is about to be produced and the company is at its last rehearsal on the day of presentation when the star receives a message that her child is seriously ill and likely to die. Abandoning everything, the distracted mother hastens to the bedside of her little one and the company at the theater is thrown into confusion. The manager attempts to find someone to take the part thus left without a player, but no one will undertake it. He is driven almost frantic, for he realizes that he must keep faith with the public.

Scene from "The Actress" (Majestic).

It is decided to make a final appeal to the actress upon the ground of duty. She yields with great reluctance and leaving her child in the care of the doctor and nurse, returns to the theater for the opening performance of the play. It is a comedy and, though her heart is torn with anxiety for her child, she must appear in her happiest mood. We see her in her dressing room laboring under the greatest mental strain, endeavoring to prepare for her appearance on the stage. She fairly staggers from the dressing room for her first entrance, her features drawn in agony, and then—she appears upon the stage all smiles. In this manner the picture proceeds to the end of the play, giving a glimpse of the sick chamber when the crisis of the child's illness arrives, to illustrate the method of administering oxygen, an interesting bit of business that has been introduced here. The play being concluded and the actors having taken their final curtain calls, the mother hastens to the side of her child to find, happily, that its life has been saved.

The story is well fitted to bring out the best in Miss Trunnelle. While we have always thought her best in comedy roles, where her sweet, girlish features appear to the fullest advantage, she has proved in this picture that she is quite as capable of portraying dramatic parts. The part is played with a tense earnestness that is certain to touch the heart of the observer, yet the closest scrutiny will fail to reveal the least exaggeration of emotion which might so easily have happened where the portrayal of so widely varying emotions is demanded.

The subject recalls the Edison picture, "Comedy and Tragedy," in which Madame Pilar-Morin gave a similar portrayal. While the demands upon the emotional powers of the photoplayer are equally great in either subject, Miss Trunnelle's work does not suffer by comparison with that of the artiste of greater renown. If anything, it is more pleasing.

As for the rest of the company there is much to be said in praise of the excellent manner in which they supported Miss Trunnelle. They seem to suffer in silent sympathy with her and sustain the illusion of tense anxiousness for the ability of the grief stricken mother to keep up her nerve and get through with her part.

With a few more such pictures as this there will be no question as to the standing of the Majestic Company in the picture-making world.

"VANITY FAIR" (Vitagraph).

Miss Helen Gardner.

IF the Vitagraph Company can be considered as a public servant, let us say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." In producing "Vanity Fair" this company has performed a service not only to the public but to the trade. At last we have a well-known literary work done into moving pictures without suffering the loss of any part of its charm or atmosphere. Surely a new day seems to be dawning when the moving picture is to be considered reliable. Historical subjects or literary classics have been handled so freely in their translation into moving pictures that they are divested of well-known facts or incidents, which makes them unauthoritative or unsatisfactory for any other than purely amusement purposes. But in "Vanity Fair" the Vitagraph Company may be said to have "arrived." They have reproduced a well-known work of fiction that has lost none of its individual qualities during the transition. It comes nearer to being a flawless adaptation than anything that has appeared in moving pictures. Aside from one slight incongruity there is nothing to criticise and everything to praise. We were not aware that well-shaped cigars were much in use one hundred years ago, nor were gentlemen accustomed to lighting their cigars with the present-day parlor match as did Lord Steyne in the scene with Becky Sharpe. Snuff boxes were more prevalent at the time, but they are entirely absent in this picture. While from this there is no flat except perhaps the persistency which the Vitagraph Company has drifted into lately of cutting the characters off at the knees.

"Vanity Fair" is an uninterrupted delight and a revelation in the art of picture making. We predict for it a tremendous success not only in America, but in England, where no doubt it will be even more popular than in the United States. It is a film classic the result of most painstaking care that has been well spent. Not only in entirety, but in detail it is especially noteworthy. The individual work of the principal characters is particularly strong in every instance, but head and shoulders above them all is Miss Helen Gardner as Becky Sharpe. It seems a much too difficult task to attempt to describe her phenomenal work in this exceedingly complex role. It is somewhat of a task for an actress to play it on the speaking stage, but when it comes to portraying such a capricious character in the silent drama there is indeed work to be done. We might ramble on for hours in ecstasies over the superb work of Miss Gardner and at the end of that time have given but a faint idea of what we saw in the part that we can picture [illegible] and every moving picture fan to see the picture and the other work has done. Her work needs no word of commendation from us after that. Suffice it to say that she has seized every opportunity to portray the fickle, pleading, opportune character that Thackeray drew to his everlasting fame.

Scene from "Vanity Fair" (Vitagraph).

Equally as much might be said of any of the other characters, for they are most accurately cast and so thoroughly capable, but the bulk of the work going to the part of Becky Sharpe. Miss Gardner carries off highest honors, with the exception of the producer, Mr. Charles Kent. Next to Miss Gardner must be mentioned the commanding work of Mr. William V. Ranous as Lord Steyne. We have a feeling this is the greatest bit of photoplay acting that Mr. Ranous has ever done and we have seen him in many plays before. He lives and breathes the part, and lives up to the fullest conception that anyone could ever have of it. In many respects this picture resembles a dead heat at a horse race, for alongside Mr. Ranous is Mr. Harry Northrup, keeping up the pace in his competent conception of Rawdon Crawley, the debonair roué and dissipated dillitante. The climax of the picture enacted by the aforementioned actors is positively great, one of the strongest scenes that has ever been shown in pictures. The other characters, though of less import, deserve an equal amount of praise which lack of space will not permit. As a matter of pure character acting, Mr. Alec B. Francis deserves special mention in regard to his delineation of Pitt Crawley; a perfect and convincing portrayal in no particular overdone, and leaving nothing to be desired. Mr. John Bunny gave an exquisite bit of comedy character work for the short time it lasted. And that is the charm of it all. All the secondary characters are so well done as to make it a perfect whole. Leo Delaney as George Osborne and Mr. Tefft Johnson as Captain Dobbin live up to the ideals of Thackeray. Mrs. Kate Price and Mr. William Shea in the respective parts of Miss Crawley and Sir Pitt Crawley, Mr. Charles Kent as John Sedley, Mrs. B. F. Clinton as Mrs. Sedley and Miss Rose E. Tapley as Amelia Sedley are all entitled to the highest of praise for their thoughtful work in this picture. Each and everyone has done his and her part to make "Vanity Fair" a composite superlative

"Vanity Fair" will be released December 19. It is on three reels, all of which will be released the same day. [illegible]

Scene from "Vanity Fair," a Three-Reel Subject by the Vitagraph Company of America.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT.

GIVING his reasons for enlarging and improving his weekly program, N. E. Chaney, of the Orpheum Theater, Hillsboro, O., writes:

I have now arranged for one on 60-pound book paper, 6 x 9. The front page will have nothing on it but a nice border and a half tone, each week, of some prominent actor or actress of the films. The two inside pages will be devoted to my program, with one or two ads at the bottom. Back page will be given to advertisers using nice cuts, thus making an attractive program. I am putting it on good paper for three reasons. First, because it is a business proposition to use good material, as the material of the paper somewhat indicates the class of entertainment. Second, because my advertisers appreciate it. Third, the front page will be of such a character that many of my patrons will keep the program for the sake of the half tone of their favorites.

Mr. Chaney sends one of the first issue of the new style of program and, apart from the fact that the halftone does not show up as well as it should, the program is a big improvement upon his already creditable publication. The cut seems to be of too fine a screen for rapid press work and was not well etched, but most manufacturers are giving more attention to the cuts furnished exhibitors, and better results may be looked for. It is better to use a 60 or 80 screen and get a good coarse cut than to use a finer screen and not have it show up well. This is a matter over which Mr. Chaney had no control. His own share of the work has been well done and it should not be long before he graduates into an eight-page folder or larger.

In the last department we published Mr. Chaney's offer to send a copy to any exhibitor sending a stamp. It is a splendid model for those using a four-page folder and there should be many who will have reason to thank Mr. Chaney for his generosity.

Those Vitagraph Postals.

Someone slipped up in advertising the new Vitagraph postals at $7 a thousand. The proper figure is $4 a thousand. Not less than 100 of any player may be ordered. The cards are well done on good stock in brown ink in a fair imitation of photography. It does not purport to be a photo postal, but it has much of that effect. They are useful as an advertisement, can be sold to the patron or may be used for matinee souvenirs. Twenty-nine of the players are represented and there are some in more than one pose. If your business will not permit you to put out an advertisement yourself, why not sell the back to local concerns? In this way you can get the advantage of the booming, since you reserve a small space for your own advertisement, and you may show a small profit as well. This, of course, applies to the Kalem and other postcards as well.

Used as souvenirs you will need to provide some scheme for getting all the cards out, either by confining the card for the day to some particular player or laying out your assortment to give a proper proportion. A card a week would appear to be the best idea for most houses. If you overorder perhaps you can dispose of them at box office sale to those who did not come, or you can use them up at the end of the run with your own or some trade advertisement on the back.

A Coupon Program Scheme.

Frank L. Newman, president and manager of the Royal Theater, St. Joseph, Mo., sends in a program which appears to have been the result of reading this department. It is based on the program style of the Tenth Street Theater, Kansas City, but offers some individual ideas, the most novel being a unique solution of the free matinee ticket problem. Each program gives the show for a week and carries this announcement:

Save this program until you have saved fifteen consecutive numbers, bring them back to the box office of the Royal Theater, and get fifty cents' worth of matinee tickets free. The number of this issue is 10.

This fills the house at matinees and makes new business, while it assures the advertiser that the program will be taken into the home, where the shrewd advertiser aims to send his announcement. It would be better were the line lifted from a notice to advertisers and given a coupon form of its own where it will be more prominent. The program is made up of two eight-page white forms and a four-page form on heavy cover paper. The presswork is good, but the display is not well balanced, the rulework being too heavy for the type employed. A lighter line and a heavy typeface would throw up the important matter more definitely.

If the cover form is run off each week and not printed ahead in quantities, it would be well to give each issue a number and a date on the front.

It's a prosperous little issue and it gives importance to the house that sponsors it. That's one point about these programs that many exhibitors overlook. A prosperous-looking program argues the right sort of performance.

Makes Use of His Curtain.

Ben. L. Morris, of the Spragg Amusement Company, Bellaire, Ohio, writes:

We always find our curtain a great advertising place. We have turned down all kinds of money for running advertising slides, figuring our patrons do not pay their money to read ads, our own of course, excepted. I use a gelatine paper like enclosed, between two carbon sheets, making the prettiest print you could wish. Placed between [illegible]. It gets all your patrons for two or three nights and they tell others.

Mr. Morris encloses a very thin sheet of gelatine. Fresh carbon paper should be used and by employing two sheets a double deposit of the pigment is obtained, a wrinkle worth knowing. The outside advertising slide is seldom welcome to the patron, but the exhibitor who does not use the screen for his own announcements is overlooking the most valuable aid to good business. You've got something to tell your regulars and you have them where they can't help seeing what you have to say. There are so many ways of making slides quickly and cheaply that the man who overlooks his screen deserves to have his house taken away from him. Make your lines crisp and snappy and you can't help but pull not only those who read but those others whom they tell. This has been alluded to before, but it cannot be emphasized too strongly.

An Interesting Experiment.

Mr. Morris writes that they are going to discard the usual poster advertising in a new house they will open in Bellaire December 9th and employ instead the material supplied by the Exhibitors' Advertising Co. A board will show the day's program and a second the bill for the following day. This service costs only two dollars a week and is decidedly effective.

If you use the pictorial poster display get the border stuff that is sold by several concerns catering to the demand for advertising novelties. A plain white paper edging is crude and the red and green sheets used in many places to make up the difference between the area of the poster and the greater surface of the board is no less than a sin. The garish colors kill the lesser tints of the posters and nullify the effect. Plain wall paper border, if chosen with taste, will do very well, but these special strips are made on purpose and transform a one-sheet into a three-sheet poster.

Most lobbies suffer from an over-display of paper and a report on the result of Mr. Morris's experiment will be awaited with interest.

Montgomery Wants to Know.

Montgomery, the original "moving picture man" in more senses than one, sends a copy of a Savannah publication and wants to know what we think of a double-column portrait cut of Miss Florence Turner used in connection with a Vitagraph release at one of his two Savannah houses. We think it enterprising, but if he has to make a special payment for the running of the cut, as his letter seems to suggest, the money might be diverted to more direct booming. The well-written press stuff and the noisy but effective advertisement will pull more business than a newspaper cut and, if the cut is inserted at a line price, a single column cut inserted directly in the reading matter would serve as well. If the cut is carried by the paid advertising, it's good hustling. Montgomery believes in keeping things stirred up, and he is one of our very best little stirrers.

A Word from Williamson.

Here's a little sermonette on advertising from M. P. Williamson, of the Arcade Theater, Attica, Ind.:

Such adv. as the enclosed folder, pays me from two to three hundred per cent. in direct returns, besides advertising the house in a general way.

ADVERTISE ADVERTISE ADVERTISE For from five to ten per cent of receipts for advertising. It pays me. I believe it will others.

The folder to which reference is made is a four page in brown on cream. It is devoted to the Thanhouser release of David Copperfield and is headed "A Thanksgiving Feast An Evening with Dickens. Two Nights November 20th and 30th." Outside of the fact that Mr. Williamson uses a type face not easily read, there is much to commend in the arrangement. The second page briefs the three reels of the story and the third is given over to some catchy lines and an explanation that the reels are a Thanksgiving treat to its patrons. A part of the first page is reproduced here. It will do equally well for the Thanhouser or Vitagraph production.

David Copperfield is generally considered to be Dickens' masterpiece. Some claim it to be the best story of the kind ever told. Be that as it may, we feel reasonably sure it is one of the most valuable literary assets the world has ever produced, containing as it does such a wide range and variety of characters. So realistic is it that each one of us can imagine that the personality of David Copperfield were real. At once a favorite. You will love David Copperfield the very first time you see him.

Try the Percentage Idea.

The suggestion that a certain percentage of the receipts be devoted to advertising is a good one, provided that the advertising be well done. What you pay for advertising is not what counts—it's the way you do it; what you have to say and the way you say it. Mr. Williamson gets a return because he gives thought to his work and frames the announcement attractively.

Until you get the hang of advertising writing, don't just "dash off" an advertisement. Give it thought, weigh your words. Make your sentences short and snappy and let them mean something. Put the "pull" into every phrase. Get enthusiastic but not boastful. Write the sort of ad. that would make you want to come yourself, but do not be too easily coaxed. Many of the larger advertisers will pay five or ten dollars for any catchy line; not the slogan of the firm, but any line that will fit in the advertising. You can't buy lines, but you can think some up for yourself that will be worth money to you. Dig and dig deep. Don't be content with the first thing that comes into your mind. First thoughts may be best, but give the others a chance.

Up in the Air.

W. M. Smith, manager of the Cozy Theater, Tulsa, Okla., sends a small sheet which was taken up in the air in an aeroplane and tossed overboard. It claims to be the first newspaper ever issued from mid-air and the claim seems to be made good. It is a reduced copy of the Tulsa World and the only advertising carried is that of the Cozy. Mr. Smith has the trick of writing good catch lines. We are sorry he is wasting them on vaudeville acts. Pictures don't want "ten more" next time they come around.

A good catch line that may serve others is found on the Cozy letterheads: "The theater where you spend both sides of your dime." "Get value for both sides of your dime" might be even better. He uses a drawn design for his title and in the elongated tail of the C is the line: "All that the name implies." Mr. Smith writes that he finds much help from tihs department in "the best of all picture weeklies."

A Regular Paper.

The Saxe Amusement Guide, published by the Saxe Amusement Enterprises, Milwaukee, in behalf of its numerous ventures, is something more than a program booklet. It's a theatrical newspaper. The Saxe Company's theaters have been written up in this paper and include picture, vaudeville and dramatic theaters. The Amusement Guide gives the current attractions and several pages of well-edited news items about acts to come, acts which have played the houses and just acts. A sheet like this is looked for and the space given over to general news is not wasted, since it insures the whole being read. There is a profusion of cuts that come out well in spite of rapid press work, and the whole thing suggests that there are some newspaper boys on the Saxe staff. It's good work.

Choppy but Catchy.

Roscoe C. Cuneo sends in a couple of samples of the press work he does for his Star Theater in Upper Sandusky, O. He lacks smoothness of phrase, but he gets his ideas over and holds attention. He writes that he has been doing advertising for three years and that not a person in the county but knows the Star. "It is known just like Royal baking powder," he adds, and the simile is forceful. Get known and you won't be forgotten. We quote one of his readers:

HIS DRESS SHIRT.

Star Theater this evening. A pretty home-life quarrel comedy over the young husband's dress shirt, which his pretty wife forgot to send to the laundry. The role of the wife is the best Little Mary has ever done for the Imp Company. It is delightfully played. "Field Day Sports at Ft. Riley." This is an interesting and instructive picture. It's going to be some show and you can't afford to pass it by. Monday night. "A Mixup in Suit Cases." A comedy of summer time, with Arthur Johnson in the leading role. Tuesday is Imp and Rex night.

This might be more dramatic phrased. The idea of running the head into the paragraph is not whole good and the periods are a little too thick. This would give the same effect

HIS DRESS SHIRT

It Didn't Go to the Laundry, But It Was Done Up Brown.

Little Mary issued [illegible] at the Star Theater [illegible] She forgot to send [illegible] Sports at Ft. Riley" [illegible] Don't let it get away [illegible] a double treat.

Other contributions must be held over until next week.

RANDOM SHOTS OF A PICTURE FAN.

A Selig picture had just been run—"The Coquette"—and as I did not care to watch the doings of a wretchedly stupid, musical coon—such is vaudeville—I turned to study the faces of the audience, and the thought struck me, as I looked at the faces: "Why, those are the types of men, women and children whom I saw just now on the screen." True, the Seligs have developed a power of portraying the lives of the plain people of our country which is not one inch short of marvelous. "The Coquette" is an average Selig film and yet it is every way a masterpiece. Every time it makes my blood tingle and my heart beat faster to think I am an American. Such people as are portrayed in that film make up the backbone of our nation, ruggedly honest, simple of heart, full of study, manhood and tender, compassionate womanhood. When the old minister knelt down in his study to pray, after feeling that he had been the instrument of touching and converting the heart of a frivilous and dangerous woman, few eyes in the audience remained dry. The fierce struggle of the men in the boiling waves, the merry children's party, the neighborly visit, the stern banishment of the heartless girl from the fireside of the people whom she had so cruelly troubled, are like so many pages taken from the lives of the people from whom we spring and whom we know and whose joys and sorrows we can understand, because they touch the hidden depths of human nature. If you think I am too enthusiastic, see the picture yourself. It was a matter of conscience with me to pay this tribute. I would like to say more, but space forbids.

It seems hard to believe that the comedies, "One on Reno" and "His Chorus Girl Wife" were produced by the same company, yet the trademark is the same on both. The fun in the first reel was neither fast nor furious nor even intelligible. It reminds one of a procession of mud turtles or a race of snails—that dragging sensation, you know. But for the superb and finished acting of Miss Lawrence and Mr. Johnson it would have been unbearable. I could forgive the impossibilities of the piece, but its dullness, never. Now to contrast it with "His Chorus Girl Wife." A more amusing comedy I have never seen—a skillful leading up to a humorous and pathetic climax that just sets everyone cackling with laughter—the right kind of laughter with the genuine ring of merriment. When the old disabled father was bounced out of the little kitchen and Miss Lawrence fired a pancake after him, the situation was simply irresistible, and when later the same old "gent" forgot his social pride and dignity and ate with evident relish of the pancake pie, apparently with more zeal than discretion, it was enough to convulse any kind of an audience anywhere. It is but just to add, that Miss L. and Mr. J. are to-day in the very zenith of their power and if they get any sort of a chance they will make the picture "go over."

Quite the most clever satire on the melodrama is "Desperate Desmond." It is wonderfully well done in pictures and for realism I know of no comedy to beat it. The make-up of Desperate Desmond, Fair Rosalind and Claude Eclaire is enough to make you yell with delight. I hope the actors and Rosamond wore waterproof underwear, for they think nothing of diving and swimming on the least provocation. The bomb incident in the submerged house was enough to tickle the risibles even of a Canadian censor of moving pictures. You can bet I will see the next release just as soon as it comes out. Right on the top of this biting satire on the absolute melodrama, what did I see in the same house but a perfect melodramatic nightmare called "The Trackwalker." The Thing gives you the impression of ill-nourished brain-cells somewhere and my heart goes out to Mr. Walthall. This is not acting but torture both for the actors and the public. It is supposed to be a thriller, but there is not a thrill in it anywhere even when the audience is treated to a sight of real human "beelood."

P. F.

CHICAGO LETTER.

By Jas. S. McQuade.

PATHE'S special representative, K. W. Linn, was in the city last Monday, Dec. 4th, after an absence of several months, during which he has visited every state in the Union, excepting those of New England and a few Eastern coast states. The principal object of his tour was to ascertain public opinion, as expressed by exchange managers and exhibitors, in connection with the present Pathe output. Instead of confining his efforts to Chicago and tributary territory as formerly, Mr. Linn now extends his activities to all parts of the country, where a knowledge of business conditions will be of benefit to his firm. He aims at finding out how the Pathe product appeals to the moving picture public, and to learn how it may be improved, so as to increase its popularity.

Mr. Linn had no hesitancy in stating that the Pathe product is getting more popular with exhibitors throughout the country. The Pathe Weekly is pronounced by the rank and file of exhibitors to be the most eagerly booked film on the market. He found the demand for it to be uniformly strong in all sections of the country, the only difficulty experienced at times being that of obtaining it from the exchanges. The leading vaudeville houses of the country book the Pathe Weekly solidly every week, with gratifying results in the box office, as many managers seen by Mr. Linn have testified.

Mr. Linn informed me that the higher class picture theaters are strong supporters of the European product of his firm, on account of its educational and artistic merits, which appeal strongly to intelligent audiences.

He is positive in holding that the moving picture has won over a large following during the past six months from the best classes. He also observed during his tour a marked change for the better in the attitude of the daily press towards the moving picture, and that local bodies of prominence in the various cities are less disposed to ill-advised condemnation of the picture.

Taking a broad view of conditions, Mr. Linn considers the moving picture business in a very healthy state. In the exhibiting end, the tendency is towards the elimination of the smaller houses. Larger and beautiful picture theaters are taking their places, and higher prices of admission are being charged.

The West easily carries the palm for progress in the building of first-class picture theaters, Mr. Linn thinks. On the Pacific Coast one can point to the beautiful Dominion Theater in Vancouver, B. C., erected at a cost of $75,000; to the new house now being built in Seattle by Mr. Klemmer, at an outlay of $70,000; to the magnificent new People's Theater in Portland, costing $125,000, and owned by the People's Amusement Co. of that city; to the two Clune theaters and Tally's Broadway in Los Angeles, strictly first-class houses; to the Isis, Princess and Iris in Denver, most pretentious structures, and to the Liberty in Salt Lake City.

Mr. Linn left for Milwaukee and Minneapolis, and will return in a short time to familiarize himself with the conditions in Chicago.

Pictures of Animals in the Wild.

I had the pleasure and privilege of meeting Mr. C. E. Akeley, of the University of Chicago, one day last week. Mr. Akeley is widely known in scientific circles, both in this country and abroad, by reason of his extensive knowledge of animals in their native wilds, and for the numerous fine zoological specimens he has secured during successive exploration expeditions through Central Africa.

In 1895 Mr. Akeley conducted an expedition through Somaliland in the interests of the Field's Museum of Natural History, Chicago, and another from 1905-1906 in the same interests. In 1909 he undertook another expedition through British East Africa, on behalf of the American Museum of Natural History, New York, returning in October, this year. Whereas the first two expeditions were confined to the study of wild animal life generally, in its habitat, and to a general collection of zoological specimens, the third was devoted to a special study of the elephant and to the securing of specimens. On this last trip Mr. Akeley brought back eight fine specimens of elephants that will soon be on view in the New York institution. He is the only scientist traveling in Africa that makes a specialty of elephant study.

On the third expedition Mr. Akeley was accompanied by Mrs. Akeley, John T. McCutcheon, the Chicago Tribune's celebrated cartoonist, and Fred Stephenson; the two latter remained with the party for four and a half months, Mr. McCutcheon furnishing his paper with weekly letters of the trip, illustrated by his inimitable cartoons. Colonel Roosevelt, who is a warm friend of Mr. Akeley's, was met during the trip.

On Mt. Kenia, June, 1910, Mr. Akeley had a narrow escape from being killed by a monster bull elephant. The animal charged and tried to gore him with its tusks, but, providentially, Mr. Akeley contrived to get between them, and escaped with several broken ribs and a badly bruised chest, which laid him up for months.

On the third expedition, Mr. Akeley carried a complete outfit for still pictures and also an Urban camera for cinematographic work. He found the Urban machine utterly unadapted to tropical work, being both cumbrous and incapable of being adjusted quickly for rapid action. Notwithstanding the drawbacks, Mr. Akeley has brought back some interesting animated pictures (about 8,000 feet) showing native dancers in action, spearing of lions and leopards by natives, the shooting of lions, good hippo. views, and some fine scenics, especially the ascending of the Ripon Falls by fish. These falls form what may be called the birth of the Nile, near Victoria Nyanza, the highest of the series of cascades being about 30 or 40 feet. One of the finest moving pictures secured by Mr. Akeley shows a huge gathering of flamingoes, on Lake Hannington, midway between the Eastern African coast and Victoria Nyanza, on the equator.

Mr. Akeley acknowledges that he was a mere novice in his knowledge of cinematography when the third trip was begun, but during his two years' experience he has learned much that will be of great service to him on his fourth expedition, which will be undertaken in about ten months. He has already given an order to an English firm to build a portable and easily and quickly adjustable camera for African field work, along lines of their own invention. He is also getting one built in New York, under his own supervision, to meet the same requirements.

A compressed air or a spring motor will be one of the essentials. "I find that turning the crank will not answer the purpose when the camera man is looking into the eyes of a rapidly advancing lion," smiled Mr. Akeley. "It is not in human nerves to stand the strain without excitement. The man in charge can turn on the motor, under the new arrangement, seize his gun and assist in protecting the party."

A most complete equipment for the taking of moving pictures will be carried next time. Ten and six inch. and ordinary short length, lenses will be included.

The work during the fourth expedition will be confined to Uganda, German East Africa and the Congo. Elephants, chimpanzees and gorillas will be studied in their habitats, cinematographed, and specimens secured. Mr. Akeley is confident that he will be able to bring back a great many valuable negatives of elephants and other animals in the wild.

On being questioned as to the value of the moving picture in the special field to which he is devoted, Mr. Akeley replied: "Cinematography is the most valuable record we can make of animal life in the wild. I hope to see all of our natural history museums forming libraries of cinematographic records for educational purposes available for use not only in museums for lectures, but in allied educational institutions, such as colleges, schools and libraries."

Mr. Akeley is the inventor of the cement gun, a machine for mixing and applying cement concrete by the medium of compressed air. This new "air process" has been taken up widely by contractors and builders.

It is to be borne in mind that Mr. Akeley personally finances all his African expeditions.

Boom "John Bond"!

Exhibitors generally, without a single exception, should see to it that they are furnished with that valuable and important educational film, "The Awakening of John Bond" (Edison). These instructive pictures will be instrumental in saving many hundreds of lives, as they leave visual impressions that cannot be forgotten.

Tuberculosis, that dread foe of humanity, should be combated in season and out of season. The Edison Company has furnished an admirable weapon, and some fine effective fighting should be done with it.

In Chicago, the Tuberculosis Institute has taken up the release of "John Bond" with great zeal. A worthy successor to "The Red Cross Seal," exhibitors should do their best to aid local tuberculosis institutions by widely advertising the film, and offering every aid to Red Cross officials to dispose of Red Cross seals.

Big Deal for Picture Theater Site.

The dailies of Chicago devoted considerable space in their issues last week to a big real estate deal in which James Lamck & Schaefer, owners of the Orpheum on State Street, and a chain of houses running vaudeville and pictures, were the lessees.

The Bay Street property, on the southeast corner of State and Randolph Streets was leased for 198 years at a total rental of $11,000,000, and was the largest real estate transaction for many years on the basis of the capitalized ground on State Street. As the property stands it is too small for a theater, which would have to be built according to the new city ordinances, which require spacious aisles and numerous exits. The adjoining property is, therefore, desired, at least so it is understood. Mr. Schaefer, when seen, said "If other property can be leased adjoining, I can predict another house on the street."

The new year will doubtless have many surprises for the owners of so-called legitimate theaters. The time is not ripe to make known certain moves that are contemplated by Chicago men of capital; but it can be stated, without much fear of contradiction, that Chicago will have as homes for moving pictures some of the finest and largest theaters in the country before another year rolls by—and, it may be before six months pass.

Chicago Film Brevities.

S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Manufacturing Co., left for New York Monday, December 4.

* * *

John Bell, manager of the Bell Theater, Western Avenue and Madison Street, was seen one day last week, and was jubilant over the fine business he is showing to. John is featuring "The Awakening of John Bond" pretty strongly and is working enthusiastically in co-operation with the Red Cross people and the officials of the Chicago Tuberculosis Institution. Uniformed nurses from this institution will attend all the performances given at the Bell on Wednesday, December 6.

* * *

John Bobeng, manager of the Bismarck Theater, 3553 Armitage Avenue, this city, opened that house to splendid business on Thanksgiving eve. "Blackbeard" (Selig) and "Luck of Reckless Reddy" (Kalem) were the chief features on the program and made big hits. Manager Robeng states that he is doing very fair business and that the owner, M. M. Rothschild, is well pleased with the box office receipts thus far. The Bismarck cost $10,000.

* * *

The Essanay Company have been much annoyed recently by the escapades of a man, who gives his name as "Bruce Robertson." He carries a card on which this name is printed, with the further addition that the said person is "with S. & A. Film Company." On the back of the card he gives an address, namely, Ravenswood Avenue and Irving Park Boulevard. This man, who seems to be non-compos-mentis, calls on certain business houses and represents himself as an actor and connected with the company referred to. Then he orders goods on account of the Essanay and has them sent to the address given. In every case the goods have been returned, because there is no such man at the address stated. Readers of the World are warned to look out for him.

* * *

George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, has made it a rule that all employees engaged in the production of pictures are requested to remain every Thursday evening to see an exhibition, in the private theater in the plant, of the latest releases of other licensed manufacturers. It can be imagined that numerous criticisms are indulged in, as well as many roasts—these, however, in a spirit of jocularity, rather than of seriousness. A feature of these exhibitions is the intelligent acting of "Old Jack," the bulldog. By some peculiar instinct, "Jack" never fails to distinguish an Essanay film from all the others shown. Perhaps this is because Harry Cashman, one of his biggest favorites, is seen in nearly every picture. When the Essanay comes on, "Jack" walks up to the screen and barks loudly in applause of Cashman's acting—at least that is what everybody thinks. It is needless to state that Cashman is proud of the distinction.

Edison has been to Washington to show Mr. Taft how he can remain at the White House and at the same time address sixty million people by means of the moving picture and phonograph. Yes, but Mr. Taft enjoys the swell eats and rare vintages. What substitute did Thomas offer for those? Perhaps Mr. Edison thinks canned food is good enough for canned speeches.

Another Picture Ordinance.

Exhibitors of Greater New York Again Face an Attempt by Board of Aldermen to Regulate Their Business.

The Exhibitors' League of Greater New York held another of their meetings on Wednesday, December 6th, this time at the Union Square Hotel. The meeting was presided over by Mr. Samuel Trigger and called especially to consider the proposed new city ordinance that has been drafted by Alderman John J. White. It was an important meeting and sixty-two exhibitors representing about seventy-five theaters were present. We shall not go into the details of the meeting, but will treat it in a general way, as a typical exhibitors' meeting, in the hope that it may be read by and prove of service to exhibitors in other cities.

The New York exhibitors are facing a crisis. They have faced crises before and have been beaten to a frazzle, for the reason that exhibitors' meetings that consist principally of talk and no action do not accomplish things. The net result of this latest gathering of New York exhibitors points to nothing definite and if something is not done at the next meeting in the way of decided action, they are going to get the worst licking of their lives at the hands of their natural enemy, the peanut politician.

The politicians have framed up another neat little package to slip over on the New York exhibitors, and when the package is opened it will be found to contain enough dynamite to blow most of them off the map. The strangest part of the whole proceeding is that this new law which is calculated to drive many houses out of business has been framed up by no other person than an exhibitor of moving pictures, Alderman John J. White, of the Fourteenth Ward. He is building a theater. William Fox is to be the manager. William Fox is connected with Gus Rogers, and Gus Rogers is connected with Tim Sullivan, and Tim Sullivan is some pumpkins in a well-known political wigwam on Fourteenth Street; so it is not difficult, even for a blind man, to follow the matter along the line. But even so, that does not get the New York exhibitor anywhere if he is not within the magic circle. Perhaps it would be well at this point to go over the ordinance and notice in brief some of its salient points. It is so loaded down with jokers that it ought to find a ready sale on the news-stands as a joke book.

Section 352 defines as a moving picture show any cinematograph exhibition indoors or out which seats not more than 300 persons.

Section 533 states that any exhibition place having over 300 seats is declared to be a theater, coming under sections 108 and 109 of the New York Building Code.

Section 534 states that every place indoors or out which is at present in actual use is to be excepted. The joker in this clause is that it does not apply in a case where application for license is still pending. This means that when present licenses run out they will not be renewed and the house must close.

Section 535.—The Police Department is vested with the authority to issue licenses. The police may take sixty days to inquire into a man's moral character before issuing a license. Meanwhile the applicant's business may go hang for all that the Police Department may care.

Section 536.—Applications for renewals of licenses shall be accepted or rejected by the Police Commissioner at least one day before the date of expiration thereof.

Section 537.—No licenses for exhibitions in any hotel, tenement house, lodging house, factory or work house, nor in any building above the ground floor.

Section 538.—All new picture theaters must conform to section 109 of the building code, which means that it must be a regular theater with water tanks and fireproof material and fire resisting devices of all kinds.

Section 539.—Airdomes will have to have roofs to protect the people from flying bricks. They may not seat more than 300 persons. There must be a gate on all four sides, whether they are up against a brick wall or open onto somebody's cabbage patch. Generally, the floor, seats, doors and exits shall be constructed in a manner provided for in section 100 of the building code. Better get a copy of that building code, Mr. Exhibitor, and study section 109.

Section 540.—Section 109 of the building code does not apply to buildings for which a license is existing at the time of adoption of the proposed ordinance. Digest that. What is to happen after the existing license expires?

Section 541.—Licenses will be issued for three months or six months. $20 for three months; $30 for six months.

Section 542.—Films to be censored by the police. Imagine the average policeman being qualified to pass upon the artistic and literary work of other men, when he scarcely knows the meaning of the word art and his literary training has been limited to the prize fight news on the daily sporting pages. Clause E of the same allows an appeal to the Mayor in the matter of refusal of license.

Section 543.—License may be revoked by any judge of any city court on the word of a policeman.

Section 544.—The Police Commissioner may suspend a license before a hearing is granted.

Sections 545, 546 and 547 stipulate the penalties for failures to comply with provisions and violations of the ordinance.

The Proposed Ordinance.

CHAPTER 7, TITLE 2, ARTICLE 1, Sec. 305 is hereby amended by inserting the words "as defined in Section 352," Article 11, of Title 2, of Chapter 7 after the words "common sacks" and before the words "shooting galleries," and inserting in the said Section 305 after the word "statutes" "but nothing herein contained shall authorize the issuance of a license for the exhibition of motion pictures or similar performances."

CHAPTER 7, TITLE 2, ARTICLE 11, SEC. 309a. No person shall engage in or carry on the business or pursuit of giving or permitting to be given upon any premises of which he shall be the owner, agent, lessee or tenant, any form of exhibition of motion or moving pictures, pseudo play or plays, cinematographic or vitagraph performances, indoors or outdoors, without first obtaining and procuring a license in the manner provided for in Article XVI, Sec. 342 et seq. of this chapter.

Section 532. EXHIBITION OF MOTION OR MOVING PICTURES, MUTOSCOPES, KINETOSCOPES, CINEMATOGRAPH, ETC. Definition: A motion or moving picture exhibition or the place of giving such exhibition, indoors or outdoors, or for the giving of photo plays by means of electrical display of cinematographs, kinetoscope or vitagraph, or any other instrument or machine electrically operated, is defined to be a place indoors or outdoors at which such exhibition is given, having seating capacity or accommodating not more than three hundred persons.

Section 533. PLACES EXCEPTED. Places hereafter erected, constructed or altered, indoors or outdoors, having seating capacity or accommodation for more than three hundred persons are expressly excepted from the form of license hereinafter provided for, and is declared to be a theater for all purposes specified in Sections 1472 and 1473 of the Greater New York Charter, and Sections 108 and 109 of the Building Code of the City of New York, and being Sections 108 and 109 of Chapter 15, Part 21.

Section 534. PRESENT PLACES EXCEPTED. Every place, indoors or outdoors, which is at present actually used for the purposes hereinbefore mentioned, and for which a license shall have been issued before the final adoption hereof, is expressly excepted from the provisions hereof, but the provisions hereof shall apply to every and all place or places where the application for the license is still pending or made after the final adoption hereof.

Section 535. AUTHORITY TO ISSUE LICENSE. The Police Commissioner of the City of New York is hereby authorized and directed in a proper case, upon the application of a proper person, firm or corporation, to issue a license for the purposes specified in Section 532 hereof, and for no other purposes, upon presentation to him of a Certificate of the Fire Department, Bureau of Buildings, Police Department, Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, Department of Health, a written report that all of the laws, ordinances, rules and regulations for protection of life, limb and body have been complied with, and that the premises are proper for the purposes intended, and also proof by the applicant that he is of good moral character. For the purposes of determining the foregoing, the Police Commissioner shall have sixty days from the date of the filing of the application, in which to duly report upon the acceptance or rejection of the application for the license.

Section 536. RENEWAL OF LICENSE. An application for the renewals of existing licenses heretofore issued by the Mayor under Sections 305 and 352 hereof, shall be made to the Police Commissioner, and within thirty days before the date of expiration thereof. All renewals for licenses issued by the Police Commissioner hereunder shall likewise be made to him within thirty days from the date of the expiration thereof. Applications for renewals of licenses shall be accepted or rejected by the Police Commissioner at least one day before the date of expiration thereof.

Section 537. PROHIBITION AGAINST CERTAIN BUILDINGS. No license shall be granted for the giving of the exhibition hereinbefore provided for in any hotel, tenement house, lodging house, factory or workhouse, nor in any building above the ground floor thereof.

Section 538. BUILDINGS, ETC., TO BE USED FOR MOTION PICTURES. Every building intended to be used for the exhibition of motion or other pictures, electrically exhibited, as defined in Section 532 hereof, constructed, erected, altered or remodelled, shall be built, constructed or altered to comply with the requirements of Section 109 of the Building Code of the City of New York, and being Section 109, Part 21, of Chapter 15, and any building hereafter erected, constructed, remodelled or altered for the purposes hereinbefore mentioned, shall be wholly and exclusively used for such purpose, excepting as expressly authorized or permitted, pursuant to Section 109 of the Building Code heretofore referred to.

Section 538a. The provisions of the foregoing section shall not be construed to mean or made to apply to any building or buildings now actually used for the purpose of giving moving picture exhibitions, etc., as heretofore defined, or for which plans have heretofore been approved by the Superintendent of Buildings, unless it is intended to alter or remodel the said building or buildings to accommodate or seat more than three hundred persons.

Section 539. EXHIBITION OUTDOORS. No exhibition as herein defined shall be given or conducted in any lot or vacant land, excepting in the manner hereinafter provided for. (1) No such place so conducted outdoors shall be operated to accommodate more than three hundred persons. (2) It shall have a temporary or permanent roof, suitably fastened at least twenty feet above the level of the ground, fastened in such manner as shall be approved by the Department of Buildings, and of sufficient strength and durability to prevent articles and missiles being thrown into the premises so used. (3) There shall be at least one exit in front of said premises, one exit in the rear of said premises and one exit on each side, making in all not less than four exits, at least five feet in the clear, and divided with doors of iron or wood. If of wood, the doors shall be constructed in the manner provided for in Section 109 of the Building Code heretofore referred to. All of said doors shall open outwardly and shall be fastened with movable bolts, the bolts to be kept drawn during performances. The exits shall lead directly to the street, excepting the side exits, and rear exits may lead into vacant land or space, containing at least 500 square feet each in the clear. All exits must be indicated by signs and red lights at the doors. The seats must be stationary and firmly secured to the floor and shall not be less than thirty-two inches from back to back, measured in a horizontal direction and firmly secured to the floor. No seat shall REPUBLIC PLAYERS—Director McGlynn and Company at Lunch During the Production of "The Pride of Lexington," Republic Release of Dec. 30, 1911.

Section 540. [illegible]

Section 541. LICENSE, ITS DURATION AND TO WHOM ISSUED. [illegible]

Section 542. FILMS AND PLAYS TO BE CENSORED. [illegible]

Section 543. REVOCATION OF LICENSE. [illegible]

Section 544. SUSPENSION OF LICENSE. [illegible]

Section 545. PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO OBTAIN LICENSE. Every proprietor, owner and manager who shall permit to be run the license for such exhibition as is hereinbefore required, or who permits or allows the exhibition or performance [illegible] performance shall be permitted. The action for penalty shall be sued for and [illegible] of the City of New York and the proceeds shall be paid to the Commissioner of the City of New York, for the use of said city.

Section 546. PENALTIES FOR FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH PROVISIONS. Every [illegible] be one, shall for [illegible]

Section 547. [illegible]

The exhibitors' meeting of last Wednesday was consumed principally by talk. Out of sixty-two exhibitors present, there was only $120 forthcoming in the way of initiations and dues. They squabbled about money most of the time. All of the money at present in the treasury would not buy a quarter-page advertisement for one insertion in any one of the daily papers. It is quite certain that this is not the time for New York exhibitors to quibble over any $5 or $10 bets. What every exhibitor at the meeting and those not present should have done was for each to walk up to the table and lay down $100. If those present had done so, there would now be over $6,000 in the treasury, instead of the paltry sum on hand at present. Not for lawyers or grafters, but for the assurance that goes with a fat bank-roll. However, it is not too late. There will be another meeting next week and the week after that. If independence is not worth $100 to any exhibitor he might as well get out of the business. If he is not making enough money to afford $100 for independence he ought to try some other business. This is no time for picayune business. Either the New York exhibitors are going to form into a strong organization or they are going to remain a nonentity and incidentally a football for peanut politicians.

MISS MARIAN SWAYNE.

Miss Swayne is a newcomer to motion pictures. She recently joined the Solax stock company and is showing great promise. She is comely and dresses and has the appearance of a young girl fresh as a morning rosebud. She is vivacious and has a charming and pleasing personality that should make her a success.

Although Marian Swayne is very young she has had much experience in the legitimate. She has been across the country and played in stock from Seattle to Philadelphia. She also had one year in vaudeville on the K. & P. circuit.

Like other women, Miss Swayne is a bundle of contradictions. Although she is of the home-loving, stay-at-the-fireside kind, she loves excitement. The moving picture studio, she says, nourishes her craving for excitement without disturbing her home-loving disposition.

Miss Marian Swayne.

"In the Solax studios," she declared, "I always have felt at home. The home spirit permeates the place. This spirit is perhaps fostered by our getting together at lunch hour and like a big family eating at the same table the delicious food which Mme. Blache scrupulously provides. [illegible] in the legitimate, one has a good deal of time to oneself. For example, I can spend my evenings any way I like. I don't have the inconvenience of hustling and packing to catch trains. The actress who wants to develop her art should pose for moving pictures. There, she has no excuse for nerves, headaches or indigestion. The life is as regular as one would want it to be."

Miss Swayne has appeared to advantage in the Solax productions of "An Interrupted Elopement," "Husbands Wanted," "The Little Shoe" and "A Revolutionary Romance."

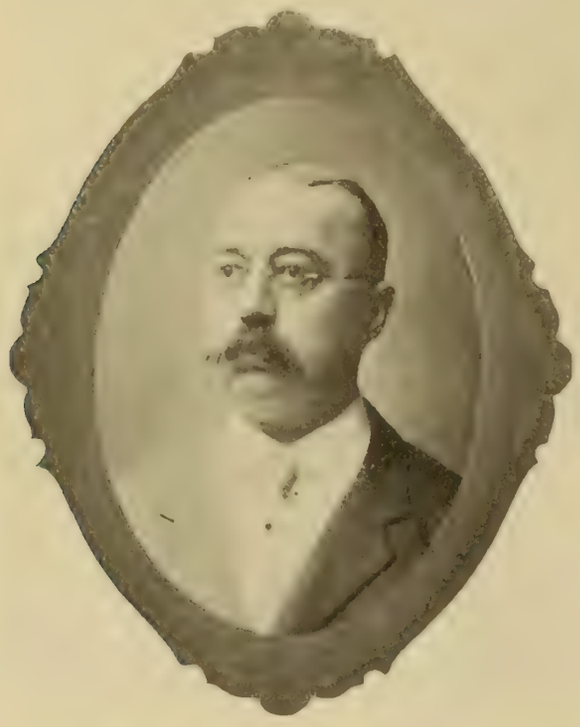
NEMO THEATER OPENS AT JOHNSTOWN, PA.

According to the newspapers of Johnstown, Pa., the opening of the Nemo picture theater in that city the other day was quite an auspicious event. Securing a building on Main Street, formerly occupied by the Presbyterian congregation, Mr. J. M. S. Blauvelt, proprietor of the new house, has evolved a very handsome place of amusement. The auditorium is 54 feet wide by 120 feet long and is 45 feet clear to the ceiling. Completely remodeled and handsomely decorated, this auditorium presents a very pleasing appearance. Many conveniences for the comfort of patrons have been installed. The management of the new house will be in the hands of Mr. Michael McCann, an old-time showman and one of the oldest citizens of Johnstown.

DEATH OF OSCAR B. KLEINE.

Oscar Bruno Kleine, widely known in the moving picture trade as an expert optician and moving picture mechanician, died at his home in New York City on the night of November 29th, of typhoid fever, after a brief illness of less than a week. It seems rather an ironical coincidence that only a month ago in these columns we published an announcement of the retirement of his father, Mr. Charles B. Kleine, from active ownership of the firm of C. B. Kleine. At that time it was stated that the elder Mr. Kleine had permanently retired from the moving picture field and had made a gift of the business to his son, Oscar, but the fates willed otherwise and thus so soon is the parent recalled to his former business after a brief interval of four weeks.

Oscar Kleine died at the age of fifty-one. He was born in New York, where he resided most of his life, except for periods of several years' duration in both Cleveland and Chicago. He was a brother of George Kleine, the present head of the Kleine Optical Company, of Chicago, well known as importers of European film. The deceased learned the optical trade from his father and knew it well. He was an authority on all matters pertaining to projection, moving picture mechanics and optical work in general. In his business methods he was a fair dealer, known always to be honest and frank. A purchaser needed no guarantee with any article purchased from Oscar Kleine. His loss will be felt by many exhibitors who came to him in their time of trouble and found Mr. Kleine and his expert machinists always ready to repair a breakdown on the spur of the moment. His advice was always sound and whatever he had to say concerning projection could always be relied upon. Mr. Kleine was buried in the Evergreen Cemetery in Brooklyn and leaves a widow.



The Late Oscar B. Kleine.

GEM CITY ATTRACTION COMPANY OPENS IN DAYTON, O.

Gem City Attraction Company, headed by M. J. Mackmull and A. A. Wall, has opened offices in Dayton. The Company has purchased the Gem Theater on North Main Street, the Princess on Cincinnati and Hartford streets, and the Majestic on Springfield Street. The latter is the only exclusive fireproof picture theater in Dayton, having been just completed and turned over to the owners recently. The firm also has the Mystic Theater on Valley Street under consideration. Mr. Wall is a well-known moving picture and theater manager, having been connected with several of the largest film and supply exchanges. Mr. Mackmull is a wide-awake business man of Dayton and well known throughout the State. Mr. Wall will have headquarters in Dayton and Chicago, being on the road constantly in the company's interest.

ESSANAY LEADING WOMAN A REAL HEROINE.

Edna Fisher, with the Western Company, Works in Three Scenes of Christmas Picture with Broken Ankle.

Heroism on the part of actors and actresses working in moving pictures has been recorded before, but if medals are given out for rare deeds of bravery, little Edna Fisher, with the Essanay Western company, certainly deserves one. In order that the Essanay Christmas picture would not be delayed, Miss Fisher worked through three long scenes in "Broncho Billy's Christmas Dinner" with a broken ankle.

The accident occurred during the run of the stage coach, when the frantic "four-in-hand" which she was driving during a "supposed" runaway became unmanageable even for her, and broke into a wild run. Turning a curve, the coach swung to the edge of the turnpike, skidded perilously along the edge and then turned over, throwing the young woman about twenty feet. That she escaped with no more than the broken ankle is considered a miracle.

There was a great deal of excitement, as can well be imagined, when the other picture people, headed by Anderson, rushed on to find the young lady, rising nervily to her feet and with a smile turned to them.

"Did the camera get it? Won't it be great!" was all she said.

Miss Edna Fisher.

"But—but—!" exclaimed Anderson, "aren't you hurt?"

"No," she answered, "not the tiniest bit." But when she took a step forward she winced with pain. "Well—there's something the matter with my ankle—I must have bruised it."

When the ankle was examined it was found to have been broken and Anderson called off the picture for the day. However, Miss Fisher would hear none of it.

"There are only three more scenes," she said grittily, "and a little old broken ankle isn't going to stop the picture. Come on, boys."

Anderson had to let her have her way. The coach was righted and the horses, which had broken loose, were captured, calmed down and hitched up again. The young lady then mounted to the seat and continued the "runaway" ride, through three trying scenes, in order to save the picture.

The overturning of the stage coach is not in the picture and it is perhaps a lucky thing that it isn't. The camera man had placed his camera at the very spot where the big, heavy coach turned turtle, but had moved it to a better position just before the accident. Had he not, "Broncho Billy's Christmas Dinner" would probably have been his last picture.

Miss Fisher is comparatively new to picture fans, having taken Miss Gladys Field's place with the Western players when the latter left the company. She is a capable little actress, an excellent horsewoman, and this, she claims, is her first real runaway.

"Broncho Billy's Christmas Dinner" has lots of thrills, sensations and excitement, as may be guessed, but, better still, it is as big with the true spirit of Christmas. The acting is especially good and the photography excellent. It is released Saturday, Dec. 23rd.

Too much kissing in the films to suit Mrs. E. N. Law, lady reformer of Los Angeles. She thinks legislators could stop it if they weren't too busy doing the same thing themselves. Law! What's in a name?

The SCENARIO WRITER

CONDUCTED BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

FOREWORD.

Scenario writers have become factors of considerable importance in the world of motion pictures. It is meet that they should have some proper means of expressing themselves upon questions of import to them. For that purpose the Moving Picture World will devote adequate space under the direction of Mr. Epes Winthrop Sargent. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to Mr. Sargent, in care of the Moving Picture World. Unless of general interest, all questions will be answered in the Inquiry Department.

THE NEW COPYRIGHT DECISION.

Will the Recent Decision of the Supreme Court in the Matter of the "Ben Hur" Production Affect the Attitude of the Librarian of Congress?

If the Supreme Court holds a motion picture to be a dramatic production will that change the decision of the Librarian of Congress? Last summer, in these columns, Mr. George Rockhill Craw, the well-known scenario writer, described the somewhat intricate process by which he succeeded in copyrighting a scenario as a "dramatic production" after having been refused protection for the scenario as such. Those interested can find Mr. Craw's article in the issue of the Moving Picture World dated July 15 of the current year.

Substantially, Mr. Craw explains that the Librarian of Congress refused to accept for registration a scenario as such, or as a "pantomime," but accepted the same as a "dramatic production" when a minimum of dialogue and leaders delivered by a "chorus" in imitation of the Greek drama, permitted the actual scenario to pass as "business" incidental to the dialogue.

This somewhat extended process was made necessary by the fact that no provision had been made in the copyright law—but a poor thing at best—for the registration of scenarios. They were refused registration as "dramatic productions" or as "pantomimes" and Mr. Craw described interestingly the slow process by which dillution with dialogue made registration possible.

Now comes the highest tribunal in the land with the flat-footed decision that the motion picture is a dramatic production. If the motion picture is a dramatic production, the scenario or script from which that production has been made is as much a dramatic production as is the manuscript of dialogue and business from which the stage play is produced. It would seem necessary to alter the rulings of the Copyright Division to conform to the new decision. We have written the Librarian of Congress, and will await his decision with interest, but meanwhile we would suggest that if the registration still is refused, that to copyright the story in the form of short fiction will give the scenario writer full protection against infringement, since it is precisely this entry which gives protection to the Harper Brothers.

It will be the purpose of this publication to obtain a ruling in accordance with established fact, but the official mind moves slowly and until a decision is obtained it should be sufficient to submit a typewritten story in fiction form, together with the registration fee, and announce on synopsis and scenario pages of the script that the story is derived from an unpublished copyrighted manuscript.

Personally this writer regards copyright merely as a useful adjunct to a suit at common law in officially establishing the fact of priority of writing, and it is seldom that copyright protection is needed, but since there are many who regard the copyright as necessary, we point out the way to relief, adding the reminder that to state that an article is copyrighted when it has not been entered in the Library of Congress is a punishable offense.

Think of the Weather.

It's all right to send to a magazine the Christmas story on the Fourth of July and the summer story in January, but that is not the way to sell scenarios. You don't want to send out the Christmas story any time during the year, but the winter story should not go to the editor in July or the summer story about the time he is wondering about his winter overcoat and the moth balls.

Of course, there are companies working in Los Angeles in a land of perpetual summer, but they are not making summer stories. They're mostly making cowboy and Indian stuff and scenes up and down the coast. The summer stuff is left to the home studio and the editor is not going to buy in October the story he can produce next May. He is apt to argue that there will be other good stories along about April from which he can select his stock and he isn't going to get his department charged with a couple of thousand dollars worth of summer stuff about the time he wonders if the old man is going to give him a box of cigars or two weeks' notice for a Christmas present.

What is wanted right now is stuff that can be played indoors or on the city streets. It doesn't have to be stuff that suggests winter; merely stuff that can be done mainly indoors during the mostly dark days of this time of year.

Trying It On the Dog.

Why do you think Tom gave Mabel a gold watch when he handled shovel is because Mabel is going to marry his brother Sam, though Mabel loves Tom as much as he loves her. You know that because you wrote the story, but did you tell the Editor? If you didn't how is the editor going to know? If he was a mind reader he would be in a museum. He's just there to read scripts and he's not likely to waste time writing you to ask why it is that in scene one Tom enters his room, packs up a pajama, jacket and a dress shirt and hikes, without a word of farewell to the fair Mabel or anyone else. It's clear to you, because you know, but maybe the editor won't stop to consider that Tom is a railroad magnate augmenting the coffers of the great railway systems and he may slap the script back in its envelope and say something about this picture that will not look well in print or on the Recording Angel's loose leaf ledger.

Give some patient friend a chance to ask the question the editor won't, and perhaps you can fix up the omission before the story leaves home instead of after it comes back.

Because the scenario does not call for literary quality and polished phrase, it does not follow that you can go to the other extreme and turn out the careless, ill considered manuscript. Be careful of details; even more careful than when you have words to tell what now must be expressed in action. Make the story clear and well defined and do not trust wholly to yourself. If you could see the mistake you would not make it. Try it on some friendly dog and if he says it's a great story and offers no comment, try it somewhere else because he is either a fool or a liar and no critic.

Even experienced writers make some funny breaks, though they are less apt to because they have been through the mill and have profited by their previous errors. If they do not always make their meanings clear, how can you expect to?

Don't let go of your script until you are positive that you have made every detail clear, that your layout of scenes has told the story in self explanatory action and that you have answered every prospective "Why?" It pays.

Is It a Steal?

Every little while someone writes to the editor that a company has stolen one of his stories and calls upon the wide world to witness the injury done him, but is it always a steal?

The other day William H. Kitchell sent the Edison company a scenario and a couple of hours later the postman brought him a copy of the Moving Picture World containing the main theme with a slight change of incident. As his story had not had time to reach the Edison company and the paper had been put on the press two days before, there was not the slightest loophole for the suggestion of appropriation, even had he desired. It was simply a case of two persons thinking of the same idea and yet, had the two stories been sent out at the same time to different companies, there might have been trouble.

It is the experience of every editor that sometimes two and three versions of some central theme will show up within a week. These may have been suggested, consciously or unconsciously, to the authors by the same newspaper item or other happening, and yet should the company accept one and reject the other two no power on earth could convince the disappointed authors that they had not been robbed of their rights.

The writer has twice had his own scenarios suffer through rear end collision with something done ahead, and as an editor he has seen scores of similar instances. Don't cry "Stop thief!" until you are certain that a theft has been committed.

Be Nice.

While the comedy script affords greater latitude than the photo drama in the choice of subjects and the departure from absolute probability, it does not follow that any old thing is going to be funny when pictured.

A writer of national note recently suggested as a comedy idea a story done around a rural funeral and seemed surprised at the reply that the presence of the coffined corpse and the conduct of the imaginary service would not prove humorous in picture. The main incident was mildly amusing when told in words, but the intrusion of the corpse as a peg for fun made the story absolutely impossible.

A less experienced writer started a recent comedy with a pig killed by an automobile—no pretty object. The pig was not at all essential to the story, but was put in to "make it funny." It wasn't so bad in words, but the story was not to be told in words.

That's where the trouble comes. The author writes in words, but the editor reads in pictures. The picture conjured by the words may not be pleasant, yet it is pictures that will be shown to the audience.

Write in words, but think in pictures, and if you do you'll be less liable to offend good taste. The word picture of how the foolish little country under the modern juggernaut and the result is something that will turn the stomach. The idea may be funny, but the actual sight of the poor destruction is not.

It is one of the arguments in favor of the Motion Picture in the educational field that it impresses its lesson more forcefully than the printed page possibly could, and it is just this which makes it so impossible to gloss over the unpleasant things. Each fact is brought out with absolute realism and the half apologetic reference to forbidden matters that is covered by a cloak of words becomes a naked fact when robbed of the concealing language. Be nice in your choice of subjects. Avoid not only the horrible, but the offense against good taste. Don't write about anything you would not care to see, because if it gets on the screen you'll see it; not read about it.

— —

Not How, But What.

Don't write a scenario that tells the actor how to play a scene. If the actor doesn't know how to act he won't hold his job long and you can't save it for him by trying to teach. What they want of you is what to act, not how, so give what is wanted and do not start a correspondence school of dramatic art.

The story that is going to be approved before it's read is the crisp little summary of what to do. It won't take more than three or four lines to tell the average scene and some will require less. When a script like that comes up out of a mass of ten and twelve page stories, with all the details of action and acting, the editor is going to utter a mental sigh of relief and you've half sold the story.

Don't say:

> Scene one—A garden, house right, trees left, a pathway leads to the gate in the background, winding its way between great masses of old fashioned flowers. Mabel, a tall and willowy blonde, comes pensively from the house, stopping on the steps to inhale the delicious fragrance of the beautiful blooms. Languidly she descends the steps and crosses the sward to a garden seat beneath the trees where she disposes herself in graceful fashion. Tom, tall, young and handsome, enters through the gate and comes quickly toward the unconscious girl, raising his hat in manly fashion and letting the summer breeze toy with the dark curls that cluster about his noble brow, etc.

Just say:

> 1. Garden—Mabel enters from house—crosses to seat—Tom enters from street—greets Mabel—etc.

The first example is not an exaggeration. It's just the sort of stuff that lots of people write who wonder why they never sell their beautiful stories. They give the minute details of stage business, although they are themselves unversed in matters of stage detail and show it in their work.

You're not really a scenario writer until you learn to leave out the how and put in the what.

Inquiries

Correspondents are advised that no attention will be paid inquiries which do not give the name and address of the writers. For the purpose of reply, initials or nows de plume may be used.

Inquiry as to the private affairs of photoplayers will not be answered. This includes the question as to whether or not they are married.

No inquiries of a general nature will hereafter be answered by mail and only in special cases when a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Many correspondents ask the same question and we have initiated this department to save our own time and yet help out our readers when we can.

JACK O'LANTERN.—Miss Isabelle Rae was the wife in "King, the Detective" story. The negative was made after Miss Pickford's withdrawal from the picture.

VIVA G.—Leona Hogan is still with Lubin and is going to remain. Guy Oliver is not. He is with the Vitagraph company. (2) We presume that the aviator crossing the aeroplane told Lon Williams how to run it, but the Vitagraph company or Miss [illegible] is not answering at this time with the Lubin company. Her previous connections were with Vitagraph, Biograph and Lubin, in that order, starting with the Vitagraph. (3) Eva Vagrant in Edison's "A Close Call" was Edwin Forney's consort. (4) Miss Mehrmann is said with Edison.

D. C. O'M.—Arthur Housman was last heard of in Lubin's "The Life Saver," with Dorothy Mason in the second part. (2) The Kalem company produced "Don Quixote" [illegible] this year. (3) We pass on opinions at [illegible] best is a question of business management.

D. W. J.—The Edison players are playing [illegible] so much time for the preparation of the bold for the heated scenes. We look for [illegible] soon. Such scenes come from the press.

N. M.—A course of study in "dramatic art" is going to do as much as anything else in getting a job with the picture companies. Make the rounds of the Los Angeles studios if you want to, but you'll waste carfare. Don't tell them you took a course in "dramatic art" unless you're looking for the seat of your trousers.

F. H.—You have a horse, but there are too many horse crackerjacks between Montreal and Los Angeles to argue well for your success. See the issue of Dec. 30, 1911, page 1,[illegible] Addresses of the advertising concerns.

A. I.—[illegible] is so determined either by the number of scenes [illegible] by the number of scenes and by the length of the [illegible] is merely a question of possibility. A scene may be two feet long or may run a hundred feet or so, and ten scenes may [illegible] where a company will be needed for one week. As a general rule, [illegible] probably have been eight or ten scenes, [illegible] approximately 1,000 feet, as you have had extended experience making film. You do not have to hit it exactly, anyhow, so merely write a short sequence of action and let it [illegible]

I. W. R.—Some of the manufacturers having companies in the West at present are Vitagraph, Selig, Essanay, Bison, American, Biograph, [illegible] Pathe, Nestor, and perhaps others.

F. & F.—The Edison, Biograph, Vitagraph and Lubin companies have made films dealing with the treatment of tuberculosis, and the Kleine [illegible] perhaps [illegible] subjects not suited to general release, etc. (2) We agree with what you apparently desire. (2) We do not think that your client will find it practical to make his own films if matters not already provided for. It will be cheaper and more satisfactory to have those made by some established concern. (3) Your correspondent should be able to advise you as to the rates of photoplays dealing with this subject.

L. C.—Having learned to write scenarios, you will find it a more difficult matter to become an editor of scenarios. We would suggest that you offer your services as assistant to the companies. After you have gained the necessary studio experience you may gain advancement to the editorship. In most studios the editor is already employed to read the scripts and pass on to the producers those that seem promising. We know of no book that treats of this subject, because the demand for such a work would be limited. There are some publications purporting to deal with the subject of production, but little is done that we can recommend.

H. E. B.—The Thanhouser company states that Miss C. Taka was the actress playing the part of O Sen in "The Last Act in a Tea House." She is a native of Japan, as were the other Japanese players in that production; a fact that was apparent on the surface not only from the appearance of the players, but more definitely through their actions. They did not act as imaginary Japanese would, but they just played themselves.

BEATRICE G.—We do not advise those not having picture or stage experience to seek positions with picture companies. The places are all filled against the applicant, particularly in the vicinity of New York, and such a quest for employment can only result in disappointment and loss of time and car fare. There are too many experienced players idle—about 6,000—to make it profitable for a novice ever to get a hearing.

V. K.—The trained horse used in some Edison pictures a couple of years ago was not the property of the Edison company, but a "talking" horse, Don Eduardo, now appearing on the stage. Through his manager he was hired as any human actor would be, for a run. Jean, the Vitagraph dog, is the property of one of the members of the stock company and is not a stage dog. The Selig animals are permanently owned by that company.

GEORGE M.—The shooting scene in "Lost in the Jungle" is probably to be explained by the fact that the leopard which sprang upon Miss Williams wounded her through jumping short. She pluckily played the scenes through, but did not go back and play again the scenes already made in another setting, in which she was seen without the scratches. All scenes in one setting are made at one time regardless of sequence and some of these prior made scenes were inserted in the film subsequent to those in which she was scratched by hair.

C. F. W.—We know of lots more ways of getting into trouble than by telling you who is "the most popular motion picture actress in America." (2) We do not know where Arthur Johnson has his photos made.

GEARY.—You will find the information desired in our advertising columns.

C. L. P.—Jack Standing was the player to whom you have reference. He is not now with the Lubin company.

BESS.—Aunt Hulda, Matchmaker and Mammy in "Daddy's Boy and Mammy" were not the same Vitagraph players. The former is Mrs. Devere, the latter Mrs. Kate Price. Neither is a negress. (2) The negro in some recent Lubins is one of the waiters in the Lubin restaurant, pressed into service for the picture. (3) There are no negroes playing Indian parts that we know of, though many companies have Indian players on their staffs.

W. W. H.—Yale Boss and Yale Boss are two distinct personalities in the Edison company. Yale Boss is a youngster while Mr. Benner plays older parts.

M. N. S.—When a scenario editor explains that a story has been done before he does not suggest that you know it and derived your inspiration from the produced play. He simply explains that he does not want to buy it over. If he thought you had stolen it he probably would be less polite about the matter. Take it at its face value and do not try to read insult into the line.

CONSTANT READER.—The Edison studio is in East Orange, N. J. If you [illegible] were a constant reader you could have read that [illegible] recent issues.

A. S. H.—Our index to advertisers will refer you to all of the leading [illegible] makers. If you have a good photograph [illegible] addition to those [illegible] position as needed.

G. L. P.—We cannot undertake to locate a photoplay by its story unless the name of the maker is indicated, and not always then. It involves considerable [illegible] as a rule.

JOHN F.—[illegible] against your employment by a film company, but the greater drawback would be your lack of experience. There are several schools of dramatic acting, but we do not imagine that a diploma would help much. Better save your money.

G. I. M.—Questions as to players' ages are treated as [illegible]

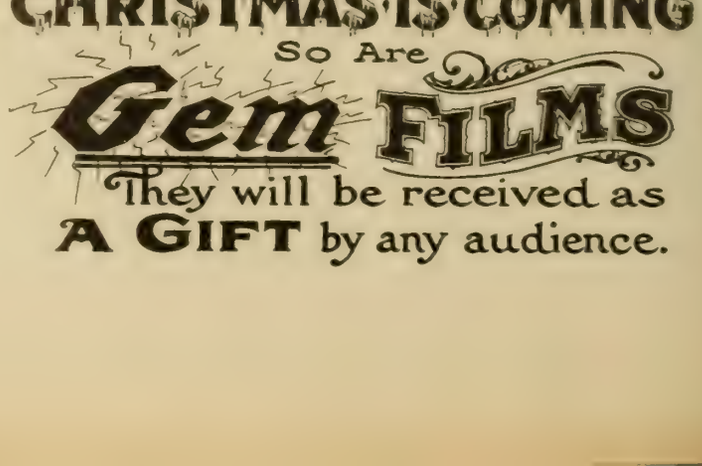
U. S. T.—The Pathe studios are in Jersey City Heights and Los Angeles. The factory where the films are printed is in Bound Brook, N. J. Visitors are not admitted to [illegible] people [illegible] are [illegible]

A. D. P.—It was the Biograph company that [illegible] and sending to get a [illegible] scene. The Selig [illegible] was made during the period in Los Angeles.

ADMIRER.—We do not know what photographs of Miss Mayo [illegible] will cost or whether they are already to be had, but we presume some [illegible]

N. E. C.—Mrs. Mary Maurice is not the mother of Maurice Costello.

LIEUTENANT.—Soldiers [illegible] and sometimes [illegible] In Mr. Ince's "The Battle of Shiloh" cadets from a military school were employed, but as a rule the soldiers are obtained through advertisements in the Help Wanted columns of the daily papers. These men are captained by experienced actors and we do not believe that you would stand much chance of getting a job as drill master. There is no time for drilling and no real need. You might make application to some of the companies producing military pictures. The Solax and Lubin companies have used the crack cavalry regiment at Fort Myer, Virginia, in some pictures.



The Song and the Singer

By Clarence E. Sinn.

BESS STOKES [illegible] is one of Will Rossiter's most valued as well as valuable [illegible] time. She is billed as "The Girl With the Voice" and we [illegible] she has both. You can notice the smile of satisfaction [illegible] attractive and pleasing. Just now Miss Stokes is [illegible] Pacific coast to give Mr. Nancy [illegible] and relatives. She [illegible] long enough to [illegible] She will remain [illegible] a few of Will Rossiter's [illegible] all of them cut up there [illegible] work while they are resting. [illegible]

The Leon Brothers, Leon and Eddie, are at the Central Theatre, this week and are booked up full in Chicago and vicinity till the latter part of February. They are with the start at Lincoln H. Reed and are taking all kinds of encores with their chorus novelty. While on the Remick subject, Bryan and Ayer (the boys who wrote "Oh, You Beautiful Doll") were here last week [illegible] Van Alstyne are the famous song writing team "Williams and Van Alstyne") is in Chicago for three or four weeks popularizing songs in which he is being ably assisted by Mr. Tom Penfold, tenor soloist from New York City. They are working in some of the smaller theaters.

Through an error it was stated in November 14th, Mr. E. Clinton Keithley was made to appear as professional manager for another publisher. Mr. Keithley is connected with the Forster Music Company only and is professional manager for that company, also a partner in several song successes, among them being "A Dream" and "Rose." which was written by E. Clinton Keithley and has all the car-marks of a sure enough winner. (It took a long breath to say that, but it was worth the trouble. E. Clinton is a good fellow and has a good song.)

M. Witmark & Sons have a bunch of good songs this year as usual. Ward and Vokes have been playing all the Chicago [illegible] and decided to add some of the Witmark song hits to their act. "Goodbye My Love" and "Rag-Time Love" were chosen. Wheeler and Hanley, who are playing the small time around Chicago are taking [illegible] "Goodbye My Love, Good [illegible] Dancing Four at the Savoy last week danced their way into the hearts of the patrons of that popular café to the tune of "Red Pepper Rag" and "Dixie Daisy Dear," both from the house of Witmark. The Three Koltons at the Empress last week are using "Red Pepper Rag" as [illegible] number. Madison Sisters, now playing Chicago, are singing "Baby Rose" and "Rag-Time Love," taking encores at every performance. Miss Vere Long, who was at the Sheridan Inn during the summer, [illegible] more friends at the Alcazar Theater. Miss Long has a soprano voice of a sweet and pleasing quality and a magnetic personality that carries her audience with her—figuratively speaking. She is one of the Witmark "boosters" singing "Baby Rose," "In The Garden of My Heart," "I Love the Name of Mary," and "If All My Dreams Were Made of Gold." Miss Long will soon be leaving to appear in the Orpheum time.

Other singers in Chicago and vicinity who are using songs from the Witmark catalog are Miss Baily at the Pastime with "Mother Machree," Mr. Ed Cameron at the Alcazar singing Armstrong & Clark's new song "Driving Home the Cows From Pasture," Edna Cooper at the Gem using "Baby Rose" with success, Tom Ford at Vaudette featuring "I love the Name of Mary," "Seth Gordon at the Lincoln Theater singing "Baby Rose," Wm. Green, the Caruso of Chicago, putting over "If All My [illegible] have not yet brought out, but are keeping up their [illegible] the coming [illegible] You'll hear about it when it comes out.

[illegible] characteristic number for band.

[illegible] Clark, who pulled off an odd [illegible] Clark, lives in Hoboken, N. J., [illegible] son, sent her a [illegible] yond doubt. This box traveled [illegible] miles and is the first, I am told, [illegible]

[illegible] given at the Unity Club House on the evening of December 6th. It is [illegible] Wally Sprand and Lou Bates [illegible]

John Baxter was sent to the Joliet penitentiary last week [illegible] by Will Rossiter, the Chicago publisher, to sing for the [illegible] the show was over.

A fine vaudeville program was furnished [illegible] cluded Chas. Huber (whistler), Garner & Parker, [illegible]

Lyman C. Goss, of the Ted. Snyder force.

NEW PICTURE HOUSE FOR BELLAIRE, OHIO.

The first theater starting in Ohio under the new Ohio building code is the Elks Auditorium at Bellaire. This is a four story concrete building, the theater occupying the first and second floors, while the Elks use the upper floors for lodge purposes. The theater has been leased for [illegible] years by the Spragg Amusement Company, making the fifth theater on their chain. It will seat about 800. [illegible] ventilation, [illegible] sentence of a modern picture [illegible] large building, will not be ready until the spring.

The Spragg Amusement Company has started still another theater in Bellaire, the New Olympic. This will seat 700 all on one floor, and is also built under the new Ohio building code. The Spragg Company will make this a model for Ohio picture shows. Not much is spent on exterior gingerbread decorations, but inside, everything will be for the comfort and convenience of the people. Two [illegible] Motiograph machines have been installed (making ten Motiographs now used by this company) in solid concrete operating room. The latest curtain device has been secured. The X-Ray indirect lighting system will be used, twenty-inch seats with rows thirty inches apart are in the house, on an elevated floor that makes every seat perfect. Retiring rooms [illegible] fountains, and in fact every [illegible] after. Licensed pictures four reels a day are used. This house has no stage, as the Spragg Company never uses a vaudeville act or an illustrated song singer. Nothing but pictures with occasional feature slides are used. The admission is always five cents in all the Spragg houses, regardless of how much extra money is paid out for early run special pictures. The New Olympic is scheduled to open Thanksgiving Day. The Spragg Company controls the old Olympic in Bellaire, which will be closed with the opening of the new.

Observations by our Man About Town

A SINGULAR condition of affairs exists in the local motion picture field that is attracting considerable attention and exciting an equal amount of speculation as the effects of the result upon the business as a whole. Heretofore the exhibitors have been obliged to contend with the various departments of the Municipal Government in order to ward off what they considered was imposition in many cases. In such matters they apparently stood together and worked in harmony for a common purpose; but at the present time the ranks appear to be divided. The smaller exhibitors are openly declaring that exhibitors such as the Loew and Fox forces are trying to "slip one over" on the smaller people through the agency or ordinances that, it is claimed, would practically put the latter out of business. They say the seat of the campaign is in Fourteenth Street.

* * *

In some instances the charges of the so-called little men are most bitter and it is claimed that powerful political influence is being brought to bear with a view to placing them in such a position that the monopolitically inclined may put them out of commission whenever they see fit.

* * *

Some of the smaller exhibitors who have been in the business since the nickelodeon first made its appearance are especially incensed over the audacity of what they call comparative newcomers in the field, and do not hesitate to say that the people to whom they refer are those who, while apparently figuring as motion picture promoters, are really seeking to establish a secondary chain of vaudeville houses. It is charged that they really hurt the picture business, in that their picture programmes are inferior, notwithstanding that the market is well supplied with new and up-to-date pictures. On the other hand, they claim, the straight picture houses are the real friends of the picture industry, in that they give the public the best that their means will afford and do everything to maintain the popularity of the pictures. For this reason, it is claimed, the smaller exhibitors who give more attention to pictures than to cheap vaudeville should be protected by the manufacturers against any attempt on the part of what is termed "the combine" to put them out of business. Some of the exhibitors are quite bitter in their denunciation of the so-called grabbers and I have endeavored to give their views so that a better idea may be obtained of how they feel and what they think. Here are some of them:

* * *

"When I say some of these far-sighted men are engaged in an effort to corner the motion picture exhibiting business I am not hitting wide of the bull's eye, although some may charge me with exaggeration. A few weeks ago the exhibitors of Greater New York prepared an ordinance to permit an increase of seating capacity to six hundred and allowing the attendance of children under sixteen years of age at picture exhibitions between school hours and supper time. The latter provision was greedily seized upon by certain people for an aggressive fight against the proposed ordinance, while in fact, the real attack was against the proposed increase in seating capacity. However, the anti-vice, clergy and other people were cleverly aroused and they got on the job in a minute to protest against the attack upon the morals of the rising generation. Why, the contemplated rampage by the exhibitors was shameful! Then some wiley thinker launched the idea that the Board of Censors was a fake, or a nonentity."

* * *

"This matter has been pretty well ventilated and many people who have been expending their energies in the condemnation of somthing that did not exist are now taking a sensible rest. To supplant them we find an alderman who is closely allied with one of the big promoters. They say the fox is sly, but be that as it may, he cannot get away with the chicken all the time. This particular alderman, let his color be white or black, has introduced an ordinance or, at least, has the same already printed for introduction, by which the exhibitor who has shouldered the exhibition business to date must eventually go out of business."

* * *

"The proposed ordinance provides that the regulations it calls for 'shall apply to every and all place or places where the application for the license is still pending or made after the final adoption hereafter.' It is well known that, for some reason, the majority of the picture plates are working under a temporary license. If permanent, or annual, licenses are not granted these places, they will be outlawed by the ordinance offered."

"At present licenses for the picture houses are issued by the license bureau designated by the Mayor. The proposed new ordinance would transfer this authority to the Police Commissioner. The renewal of licenses is to be also left to his discretion. Thus far no sane reason has been given for this transfer of authority."

* * *

"But listen to this: no exhibition is to be given in any lot or vacant land excepting 'in the manner hereinafter provided for. (1) No such place so conducted outdoors shall be operated to accommodate more than three hundred persons.'"

* * *

"Do you see the point? Open air places are not to accommodate more than 300 persons. I beg your pardon. I did not state the point correctly. The ordinance does not specify open air places. It says: 'any lot or vacant land.' It makes no reference, for instance, to the roof garden of the New York Theater, which is controlled by Mr. William Fox, who is connected to a more or less extent in business with Alderman White, who offers the ordinance. Is it not just as safe to have more than 300 people on the surface as it is to have 300 or more on a roof?"

* * *

"Here is another one to think over: 'Any manufacturer or other person aggrieved by the failure of the Police Commissioner to issue the license, may appeal to the Mayor, whose decision in the matter shall be final.' This refers to the censorship of films. Why deprive a manufacturer 'or other person' of his rights at law? The Police Commissioner, and the Mayor, may each be most proficient so far as the duties attending their respective offices are concerned, but each and both may err in the exercise of judgment. Police commissioners and others have frequently been reversed by the courts."

* * *

"Still another: 'Where a proceeding is instituted for the revocation of a license it may, in the discretion of the Police Commissioner, be suspended until the final determination of the proceeding brought for its revocation.' What a glorious sense of justice there is about this? Trump up a charge against a man and then have a man with a pull get the Police Commissioner to suspend the license until the innocent victim succeeds in showing that he has been a victim of a conspiracy. This smells very much like the outrage Mayor McClellan perpetrated, when he closed up all the picture houses in Greater New York without regard to merits and caused a loss of hundreds of dollars to innocent and law-abiding exhibitors. It sounds like hanging a man and trying him later. Many legitimate and law abiding exhibitors could be ruined by the enforcement of such a provision."

* * *

"To make myself plain, I want to say that I believe there are some men in the motion picture business who should be put out of it. Some of them have not the slightest idea of properly catering to the amusement public, others are rank grafters, and still others, I believe, conduct their places in part, if not wholly, to aid the purposes of miserable designing people. There are existing laws to cover all such cases if the so-called reformers would turn their efforts in the right direction and not cloud the public mind and create a confusion of laws that put the well-meaning people in doubt. On the other hand, there are good, honest, intelligent and law-abiding exhibitors who should be protected, and not prosecuted and oppressed. It is these people who have my sympathy. They have invested their capital and are entitled to as much consideration as those who have, fortunately, more than others to put in the business. As a matter of fact, they are the real motion picture exhibitors. They depend upon the pictures and pay for and exploit them. Many of them put their money in first-runs and give their patrons a better show than some of the managers who are endeavoring to squeeze them out. Give these people the advantage of an increased seating capacity and you will soon find some of those who are pulling every political wire upon which they can lay hand hustling to keep themselves to the fore. I can name a few men who have used the pictures successfully as a stepping stone to success and are now trying to become 'theatrical managers' at their expense, using them when and as they see fit, and trying to kill off the people who are loyal to them. These people may find before long that they have pulled the wrong string."

THE FIRST CHRISTIAN MARTYR FOR MOVING PICTURES.

The Rev. Herbert A. Jump, who is the author of that admirable booklet entitled, "The Religious Possibilities of the Moving Picture," has been asked to vacate the pulpit of the South Congregational Church of New Britain, Conn. Mr. Jump has been a staunch advocate of the moving picture and the mere fact of losing his charge on the count of being too radical has not served to reduce his militant enthusiasm for the pictures as a valuable adjunct to the teaching of God's Word.

In his farewell address he chided the church authorities for their staid respectability.

"When a church cares more for respectability than for humble services," he said in his address, "when it is prouder of its organ and its brownstone front than it is of the poor people who seek its pews for worship; when it regards itself as a polite religious club with its clergyman an errand boy to do its bidding rather than a regiment marching into the battle with its minister leading the charge, then its days are numbered and the Lord will sooner or later cast out that church as an unprofitable servant."

It is a pleasure to state that the fourth largest Congregational Church in America, located at Oakland, Cal., is in eager sympathy with Mr. Jump and his ideas, and has called him there, where by this time he is in no doubt in charge of his new flock.

Projection Department

Edited by F. H. RICHARDSON.

TWO SIDES TO IT. CHICAGO, ILL., [illegible] considerable in what you say. It cannot be disputed that higher wages will attract better men. It cannot be denied that projection would thus be improved. It must also be conceded that projection still needs much improvement and that improvement can only come through better knowledge. It must be still further allowed that better projection means added popularity for the motion picture business and an ultimate increase in prices of admission. All that I freely grant and I believe that the better class of exhibitors, as a rule, are not opposed to what you advocate in the matter of operators' wages, provided the advancements come gradually. What they really fear is that the men, through their unions, will seek to boost wages more rapidly than conditions will justify and faster than the acquirement of knowledge enables them to deliver the goods in return for the advanced pay. Another thing: I do not know how it is with other unions, but the one in Chicago, while it contains many excellent operators who can and do perform creditable work, has a goodly number of members who cannot by any stretch of the imagination be placed in that class. I hold it to be an indisputable fact that it is wrong, from any and every point of view, to attempt to place the good, capable man on a par, so far as wages be concerned, with the careless, incompetent man who cannot deliver good projection and takes no interest in learning how to do so. When all is said and done, Mr. Richardson, do you not honestly think, considering the comparatively short hours most operators enjoy (some of them only a few hours in the evening) and the light character of their work, that they are well paid? In conclusion of this somewhat lengthy letter, allow me to personally thank you for the good you have done the business and the exhibitors, through the dissemination of knowledge of projection."

The foregoing letter is interesting. Plainly, it comes from an exhibitor who studies the business, not alone as applied to his own house, or houses, but as a whole. In the first place, Chicago, you make the common mistake of supposing that unions make one common price for all. This is not the fact. The union simply says that you shall pay no man less than a certain price for a certain class of work. You may pay the best men more, however. In San Francisco, where the scale is the highest in the United States, the best men, I am informed, command a premium over the union scale. It is thus in most cities and I presume you have men in Chicago who get more than the scale. In the second place, while it is true that only really competent, high-class men ought to be allowed in the union, it is not yet practical, in most cities, to thus limit the membership. Doubtless that will come in time. In the third place, I must disagree with you as to the operator's work. True, it is physically not hard, but there are other things to consider. On Sundays and holidays, when men of other crafts are enjoying themselves with their families and friends, the operator is up in an iron-lined room working. He cannot take his wife anywhere in the evening or enjoy himself in any way the ordinary man does. I used to even have to fight to get to eat Thanksgiving dinner with my family. This phase of the operator's work is by no means a joke and it more than counterbalances the lack of hard, physical labor and the short hours. I would prefer more, or harder work, and live like a normal man. You see, there are two sides even to that question. As to unions forcing up wages faster than the increase of knowledge and operating ability warrants, it is likely that may be the case, but mark this: every increase of salaries will be followed by better work. The man who secures added remuneration for his work must and will realize that that means he must get busy perfecting his work. If he does not do it, the higher wage will soon attract men who will. Hence, I think exhibitors need have no fear on that score. I think that both operators and exhibitors are beginning to understand what I am working for better than they did. I have, from the very first, sought to elevate projection—to place the operator in position to put a better picture on the screen. This involved educating many of the exhibitors themselves to an understanding of the fact that a bunch of jumpy shadows does not constitute excellence in projection. They say my work has had its effect. I am glad of it. That knowledge repays me for much.

REMARKABLE. Last week, at the request of Mr. C. F. Jones, President of the Noflaw Theater Companies, Allentown, Pa., I made a trip to that city to look over the new Noflaw Theater. Mr. Jones entered the amusement field, without previous knowledge of the business, about three months ago. He has proven himself a man of excellent ideas and exceptional ability. The first thing Mr. Jones learned was the fact that he knew very little about the business he was proposing to enter. He did not make the almost universal error of the beginner and attempt to proceed on his own very limited knowledge, but, instead, proceeded to at once consult with those who did know. He prefaced the consultation by frank acknowledgment of ignorance—a very wise thing to do. The result was that Mr. Jones, having an open mind, profited by the advice given. Being a bright business man, he was able, to a considerable extent, to sift the wheat from the chaff and he is today possessed of a truly remarkable fund of knowledge of the business, considering the short time in which it has been acquired.

He took an old skating rink and has made it into a theater which is [illegible] Mr. Jones has overlooked anything I was unable to discover it. There is a [illegible] easy chairs and Davenport. There is a [illegible] boxes, with ten seats to the box, with excellent view of the stage [illegible] a set of the Deagan Swiss musical bells. The operating room [illegible] Openings are round and protected by semi-automatic shutters suspended [illegible] Throw-[illegible] City, is in charge. A special Mercury Arc Rectifier has been ordered, which [illegible] time, plunging the house in darkness, there are four large gas lamps installed in the auditorium which the operator can instantly light by merely pressing a button. Altogether, the whole proposition is remarkable and Mr. Jones is to be congratulated on his accomplishment to date. One of the first things he did was visit five or six cities and pick up ideas by inspection of theaters. The editor of this department was consulted as to matters pertaining to projection. Mr. H. F. Hoffman, New York City, has been engaged to lecture on selected films twice a week.

ANNEALING GLASS. Columbus, Ohio, writes: "Have been putting telephone system in the Federal Glass Works, this city, and noticed all glassware goes through a tempering oven. The ware is put in one end of the oven and subjected to 700 degrees of heat [Centigrade, presumably.—Ed.], then it is gradually pulled away from the heat, the cooling-down process requiring about two hours. This they claim toughens, or tempers the jelly glasses, etc., so that hot water won't break them. I explained to the foreman of the glass works the trouble experienced with condenser breakage. He said to put the lenses in an ordinary oven, get it as hot as possible, and then allow it to gradually cool off. I tried it and so far as I can see it works fine. I notice many complain about losing lower loop when bad patches go through. I eliminated that trouble entirely by putting all the loop I could in the space. Noticed Georgia set forth details of a marked coin stunt. Here is a good one. Send to any slide company and get a slide of one of our ex-Presidents. Cancel lower half of features and announce a guessing contest as to who he is. I give prizes in tickets; first prize, 50; second price, 25. Run it for ten days. It will create talk. The friend who was seeking an afternoon business booster will find this scheme excellent, using it afternoons only. For cleaning lenses the following solution is good; it certainly makes them shine. Distilled water, 2 oz., alcohol, 1 oz., nitric acid, 3 drops. The acid kills the blue tinge left by the alcohol. Have one of those dissolvers (?) which cuts the light in diamond shape, using gelatine. The gelatine warped so it would catch and tear. I put in red and blue glasses instead and have no further trouble. Have a nut for you to crack. When I first put in a slide it is clear, but soon it becomes hazy in center, with clear light around. When I take the slide out it seems to be foggy on the inside, but by next show it is clear again."

Many thanks for the suggestions made. I doubt the annealing stunt having much value. [illegible] the process is quite long and the temperature quite high, I do not believe it would be of any large benefit in the case of a thick lens. However, I may possibly be wrong. The fog on inside of slide is caused by moisture. As the slide cools off it is probably absorbed by the paper of the mat, to be again driven out by the heat. Usually this only occurs once in an evening, if at all. The moisture then appears to be driven out of the slide. This trouble is mostly present in new slides and very rarely in old ones.

MORE CONCERNING GENERATORS. Mr. S. P. Dunn, Gary, Ind., [illegible] Department concerning the matter of the feasibility of connecting a projection arc across the terminals of a generator without other resistance in series therewith. Messrs. Brown and Dowell, San Diego, Cal., favored us with a detailed and very excellent description of a shunt wound gen- [illegible] wound, series wound and compound wound, however, it seems to me that neither the shunt or series winding is suitable for such a purpose, keeping in mind our 'no resistance" idea. Let us take, for example, a 2 K.W. (50-volt, 40-ampere), shunt wound dynamo, which would be about the required size to supply a projection arc. When starting we will set the field rheostat at a point at which we will have a pressure of 55 volts, with no load. Assuming that the machine will have a drop of ten volts between no load and full load, we will then have a pressure of 45 volts when the [illegible] by means of carbon adjustment. The foregoing would seem to make the shunt wound generator ideal for our purpose, and so it would be but for one thing, viz: the temporary short circuit, with consequent drop in voltage, caused by bringing the carbons into direct contact with each other. This drop in voltage would be instantaneous but recovery would be very slow. One method has occurred to me by means of which this difficulty might be overcome, and that is to connect a resistance of one ohm in series with the arc by connecting either end of the resistance to one of the wires of the circuit at different points, and then installing a single pole switch in the circuit wire between the two resistance contacts. By opening the switch the current would be forced through the resistance, while with the switch closed the resistance would, in effect, be cut out. The switch would be opened while striking the arc and this would limit the flow to 50 amperes during the time the carbons were in contact. The switch would be closed as soon as the carbons are again separated and the arc sprung. This seems to me to be the most practicable method of using an arc directly across the terminals of a shunt wound generator.

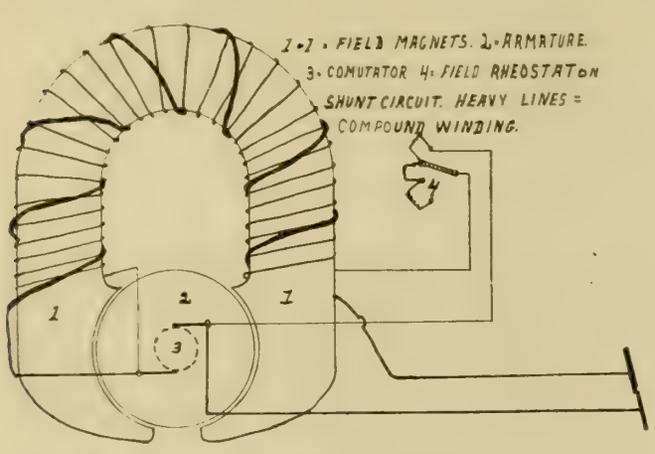
"The series wound dynamo is, of course, entirely out of the question, since instead of an overload causing a drop in voltage it would act exactly the opposite and the voltage would rise the instant the carbons be brought together. The practical result would be to blow the fuse. If the short be maintained and the fuses held the wires would melt or the dynamo burn out. It seems, therefore, that the compound wound generator is the most practical machine for such work. As is pointed out in San Diego's article, it is necessary to have an external resistance, called a field rheostat, connected into the magnetizing circuit of the generator. This must be arranged so as to allow of gradually increasing or decreasing the resistance as the current increases or decreases. Now, since the magneto-motive force of the magnetizing coils must be varied in almost direct proportion to the current flow, it follows that it is possible to obtain the required regulation by providing additional magnetizing coils through which the main current passes. This is known as "compound winding," and is illustrated in the sketch.



"It should be evident that this is a combination of series of shunt winding. To a certain extent it has the load characteristics of both, inasmuch as the voltage of an over-compounded generator increases as the current increases, the same as does that of a plain series-wound machine, whereas, if undercompounded the pressure will decrease as the current increases, just as does that of a shunt wound generator. The over-compounded machine is out of the question on account of the temporary short in striking the arc. That leaves us the under-compounded compound wound generator as the really practical dynamo for such work. If such a machine has only enough turns (ampere turns) in its series winding to keep the pressure up to about 15 volts when the dead short comes, the resistance of 12-inch carbons, lampleads, etc., being about ⅕ ohm (approximately correct, as I measured mine with a Wheatstone bridge), the current flow during the short would be about 7.5 amperes. As the carbons are separated and the resistance increases to approximately one ohm, the voltage rises and the shunt winding would tend to maintain the pressure and current flow constant at normal. I wish we had such a machine here as the only current available is 25 cycle. Can't you almost see the flicker from where you are? I have tried to make my view clear and trust it will shed a little light on the subject."

If I am not in error, the under-compounded machine is precisely the type Mr. Hallberg pronounced feasible for such work. I believe this is the type known as a constant current machine, the shunt and compound working against each other. I take it, however, that such a dynamo has but one output. That is to say, it can produce only one certain current flow against a given resistance. It does not appear to me that much, if any, regulation or variation of load would be possible. I note that a field resistance is shown. Now, I suppose I am wrong, but it seems to me that the use of such a resistance would upset the relative, necessary proportions of the shunt and compounding and with that resistance all cut in practically make an over-compounded machine out of it. I should like to see this point explained a little more in detail. I have another letter from San Diego describing the compound wound machine. It will probably receive space soon.

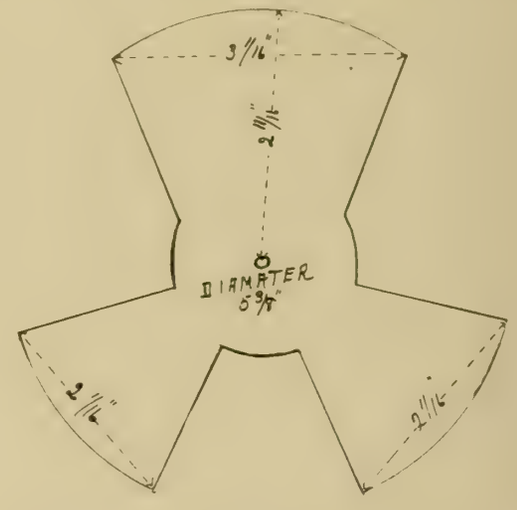
OPAQUE COATING. California (name of town suppressed) writes: "Messrs. Goldsmith and Israelsky recently disposed of the Haynes Theater to Messrs. Ash, Levy and Karske, of San Francisco. Mr. Ash will remain here as manager. I note that St. Louis, Mo., inquires for an opaque slide coating. I make slides, when needed on short notice, by writing on clear gelatine with a typewriter. They can be read by the audience quite readily and by adding a few ornamental lines of scroll with pen and ink the general effect is quite good indeed. I also have a number of slide cover glasses coated with water color paint. Anything desired can be readily written on them by using a sharp pointed instrument of any kind."

The brother also complains of a certain make of film jumping badly, but I understand the fault has been remedied. The gelatine slides show up well, if properly made. They can be written with typewriter or with pen and draughtsmen's ink. The water color scheme is also practical, but not so good as the gelatine.

WRONG. Binghamton, N. Y., writes: "I note a communication from Binghamton, N. Y., by someone having trouble with Kalem films jumping. Note that the party uses a Powers Six. Would say, in behalf of all operators, that I have been running Kalem films for years, that I find them in better condition than ever. They run rock steady through Motiograph and Edison machines. It must therefore be either the fault of the operator or machine, as other theaters are not having any trouble with Kalem films."

The brother is wrong. Complaints have come from all over the country similar to that voiced by Binghamton. However, as I have already said, the trouble has been remedied. It was a temporary fault, frankly acknowledged by the Kalem Company, and promptly remedied. Things go wrong sometimes in the best regulated families. Evidently the correspondent did not happen to receive any of the films in which the trouble existed. The fault did not lie either in the machine or the operator (both of whom the correspondent is apparently taking a little swipe at), because it was stated that all the other makes of film run perfectly.

SHUTTER, OLD SHOES AND RICE.—J. T. May, Bartletsville, Okla., writes: "Enclosed find sketch of shutter for use on Edison Exhibition, one-pin, machine. You will notice that the blades are too long—3 1-16 inches. I filed the casting to allow for this and it obviates the out-of-focus effect in one corner of the picture when the carriage is framed clear up or down. The shutter gives a much better result on the screen than does the two-wing. Mr. William May, operator at the Odeon, and Miss Christine Ruble, pianist at the Bijou, have concluded that single blessedness is a delusion and a snare. Henceforth Miss Ruble, that was, is Mrs. May that is, and Mr. May is wearing a smile as large and bright as a full moon."



Much obliged for the shutter pattern. It cuts a trifle more than 50 per cent. of the light, I find, which is not excessive. We wish the young people health, happiness and prosperity. They should have been married on May Day, in the month of May, and then there'd sure have been a lot of Mays.

GENERATOR WANTED.—Mr. T. F. Keegan, La Crescent, Minn., writes: "Kindly supply me with name of Chicago or Milwaukee manufacturer or jobber who can furnish a 60-volt dynamo. First, however, would you advise me to get a 60-volt machine and use slight resistance, or get a 50 or 52-volt generator? Also how many K. W. capacity would you advise? Will be used for arc alone as I do not wish to burn any other lights while arc is on. Have been using a 4-h.p. gas engine and 2½ K. W., 110-volt dynamo, but find necessary resistance has the effect of overloading the engine. Is it your opinion that a generator of same capacity, only 60-volt pressure instead of 110 would not pull the engine so hard?"

The problem presented is not quite as simple as it seems. It is possible you can get a generator of the type known as "constant current," which will work on a projection arc without resistance. If so, then the saving would be large, as the difference between 50 and 110 volts is wasted in the resistance necessary when using a 110-volt dynamo. The low voltage generator of equal K. W. capacity will deliver more amperes than will the one of high voltage. This is apparent from the fact that K. W. capacity equals voltage times amperes divided by 1,000. The 110 V., 2½ K. W. generator would deliver 2½ × 1,000 ÷ 110 = 22 8-11 amperes. The 50 V., 2½ K. W. machine would deliver 2½ × 1,000 ÷ 50 = 50 amperes. If each were working to its capacity each would require the same engine power, but delivering equal amperage the low voltage machine would require much less power to pull it. If your 2½ K. W., 110-volt dynamo supplied sufficient current then the 2½ K. W. lower certainly ought to do so. Unless a 50-volt machine can be had with an iron clad guarantee to give satisfaction, working without resistance, then I would advise a 70 or even 75 volt one. Sixty volts would not allow enough steadying ballast in the form of resistance to enable you to handle the light very well. Milwaukee and Chicago dealers are invited to send data concerning their generators to Mr. Keegan, supplying full information, of course.

MR. MAY ANSWERED.—The United States Amusement Company, Amarillo, Texas, writes: "Referring to the complaint of Mr. J. T. May, November 4 issue, we claim space to set forth the real facts in the case. Mr. May was formerly located in Oklahoma. We went to considerable trouble and expended time and money in arranging a location for him in Canada. He requested a service of eighteen thirty-day reels a week. We replied that such service was impossible, but offered nine 30-day reels and [illegible] We made [illegible] that we ought to furnish that film if anyone wished to rent and asked a charge for more [illegible] of the reels. We have on file a letter from Mr. May in which he [illegible] that contract. We did write him a letter telling him we would warn all exchanges in this section of the [illegible] the conduct of his business seeking to make profit at the expense [illegible] keeping reels instead of making prompt return, and then refusing to pay the bill he owed us. We believe, as do you, that the only way to conduct a film rental business is to insist on prompt return of reels and fill all orders you do mail. We [illegible] of the exchanges trying honestly and conscientiously to conduct a fair and square business. We trust that, as a matter of justice, this will be placed in the Projection Department, where Mr. May's letter appeared. Should you desire, we will send you facsimile copy of all correspondence between this exchange and Mr. May. It will prove that we did just as we agreed to do. We never promise any exhibitor a thing we have not got and never will. We are in hearty accord with your department and believe it is an excellent idea to show up exchanges which make promises and break them, also to show up exhibitors who act unfairly by exchanges."

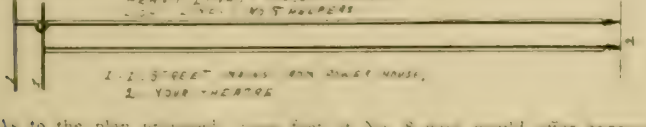
This letter, not being addressed to the Projection Department, was mislaid and its publication thus delayed. At this distance we cannot, of course, know exactly what the merits of this controversy may be, except as set forth by Mr. May and the exchange. We have given the exchange's side of the matter space, since that is but fair. If Mr. May kept reels over instead of making prompt return, he did a very wrong thing. I may say that this is a too common fault of exhibitors—not of all of them, but certainly of some. If the exhibitor expects to receive fair play from exchanges he, in his turn, must give the exchange fair play. Every day lost on a film means dollars and cents loss to the exchange, since the film is rapidly becoming a back number, regardless of its physical condition. But all this does not get us [illegible] "brass tacks." I am not a believer in broken promises for the very simple reason that, as I pointed out, I don't believe in doing business on "promises." Written contracts are the thing, gentlemen. Buy and sell service on prices based on actual age of subject, as shown by release date, and make the contracts in black and white. Know what you have the right to expect and demand in return for your money, Mr. Exhibitor. Don't make promises, Mr. Exchange Manager, make contracts in writing.

UNIQUE PROPOSAL: Iowa (name of town suppressed) writes: "Our current is supplied by a 110-volt direct current plant owned by the city. I am connected on a 1,000 foot run and when we turn on our arc, it seems to lower the amperage, or at least, lower the illuminating power of all lamps on this lead at least 20 per cent. They all know when the picture show starts, and this has caused quite a little complaint. The Superintendent of light plant (who is not an electrician) told me today that he was going to run a No. 8 wire direct from the plant to my building, and that [illegible] I would not need my rheostat. He says that they can't notice any difference at the plant when I go on and does not know how to explain it or overcome this in any other way. He is not an electrician (although a good all-around man and gives us the best of service) and it is very little I know about electricity. So I told him to wait until I could get some good reliable information, and that I could get it from the Moving Picture World. He agreed to wait a few days until we could hear from you. I have been a reader for some time of the World, and am especially interested in the Projection Department. What would you advise us to do in the above case?"

If it is proposed to run the No. 8 lead to supply the entire house it will not work. If it is only proposed to supply the arc lamp it probably will do all right, though I would myself prefer a No. 6 wire and rheostat. The trouble undoubtedly lies in the fact that the present leads are not large enough to carry the load, without drop in voltage, when the arc is on. In other words, when your arc is on the leads are overloaded. This causes excessive resistance, with consequent drop in voltage. In order that incandescent lamps burn up to c. p. it is necessary that the voltage be maintained at normal at all times. A drop of three or four volts will very appreciably affect the incandescent lamps. Why not increase the size of the present leads? That would be the logical thing to do. Also, inasmuch as the incandescent lamps burn O. K. when your arc is off you could run two No. 8 wires right alongside the present wires, attaching them to the mains at present point of contact and to the present leads where they enter your house. This would have the effect of increasing the size of the present wires and would be much better than the plan proposed. See sketch.



As to the plan proposed, 2,000 feet of No. 8 wire would offer approximately 1.3 ohms resistance. A 35-ampere, 45-volt arc would offer about 1.7 ohms. Total, 3.0 ohms. It requires 3.1 ohms resistance to limit the flow to 35 amperes under a line pressure of 110 volts. Without taking time to figure things out exactly, I should say you would [illegible] amperes working without any resistance other than the 2,000 feet of No. 8 wire and the arc. The capacity of No. 8 weatherproof is 46 amperes. If the lights beyond the point where your leads attach are not affected, it is proof that the mains up to that point are large enough. I would, therefore, recommend that your leads be made larger, or else assisted as per sketch, which amounts to the same thing.

LIKES THE HANDBOOK. Huron, S. Dak., writes: "The Handbook arrived in due time and I am greatly pleased with it. In fact, it is just what I have been needing, as it supplies knowledge on many points concerning which I have heretofore been in doubt. Have had eight years actual experience at operating. My knowledge of electricity consisted in what I had been able to learn through experience, with the help of the Department and six months working for the electric light company. Have [illegible] themselves and to the business.

TENSION EQUALIZER. Waterbury, Conn., writes: "Can a moving picture machine [illegible] where another can be obtained at a reasonable figure? [illegible] hibition Model and the [illegible]

"1 is the takeup belt pulley, 2 a movable arm, 3 a stationary arm carrying idler pulley, and 4 is a coil spring attached to 2 and 3, thus maintaining a [illegible]

[illegible] 309 South M Street, Waterbury, Conn. As to the equalizer, while it would no doubt serve a very useful purpose in allowing the operator to quickly and easily vary the tension of the takeup, still it is in no sense automatic in its action. The shutter photo is excellent and shows method [illegible]

VERY VALUABLE—IF. Many an otherwise excellent picture has been badly marred by dust collected around the edge of the aperture. A New York operator tells me this may be instantly removed, while running, by pressing in on the film at the opening just under the guide rollers at top of gate of a Powers Six, or any other machine with which it can be done. I see no reason why this should remove the dirt on edges of aperture, but he assures me it will. Try it out, anyhow.

A DISPUTE. Massachusetts (name of town suppressed) writes: "Think possibly an argument can be settled by your help. The management of the house where I work has installed flaming arc lamps and the manager [illegible] to take care of them. I have refused on the grounds that I have no right to do such work or, for that matter, any work at all outside the operating room. The operators here are organized and the local agrees with the stand I have taken. We cannot, however, put up a fight as we, as yet, have no local by-laws. We are only going on Sec. 15, Article 6 of the I. A. T. S. E. constitution. There is an electrician in the house and two janitors and I hold it to be the duty of one of them to care for the lamps. Am I right or wrong?"

Under the circumstances you are most emphatically right. In small houses in small towns I hold that the operator may properly perform such a duty as this. You, however, are not in a small town or, I take it, in a small house. Should you do this work, under the circumstances set forth, the electrical workers' union could, if it desired, prefer charges against you, I believe, as, unless I am in error, lamp trimmers come under their wing. But be that as it may, trimming and caring for those lamps is no part or parcel of your duty as an operator.

HANDBOOK.—Moberly, Mo., asks information concerning the handbook, price, etc.

The handbook is a cloth bound book of 186 pages. It price is $1.50 postpaid. Thousands of copies have been sold and it has given universal satisfaction. Hundreds of enthusiastic letters of approval have been received and to date not one single purchaser has expressed dissatisfaction with the book. We are obliged to the brother for contributing a very practical method of utilizing an ordinary lamphouse for spotlight. Out of the several methods described and illustrated in the Department recently, I think California will be able to pick one to suit his needs.

CORRECT.—New Brighton, Pa., writes: "Have been watching the projection department very closely for the last year and have been very much pleased with the results of your efforts. Yours is and has been a most commendable cause and all I have to say is keep the hammer going. And now just a word in answer to random shots of a picture fan of a recent issue. His letter was very interesting and I assure him that he has my most sincere sympathy if things have come to such a pass in New York. However, I would recommend, if picture fans do organize into some sort of body, which, by the way, would be most convenient for the exhibitor as he would have but to interview the business manager of the moving picture fans incorporation to determine what sort of program would be appreciated by his patronage, to use their vote and influence to secure friendly legislation and the election of officers who are competent and will make laws protecting operators of worth. Then projection in New York will start on the up-grade. It seems in other large cities as well as in New York, as long as it is possible for a manager to use a man or boy who is able to turn a crank and keep a picture that stays some where in the neighborhood of the screen, and who will accept ten or fifteen dollars, possibly less, per week, do janitor work and chase his legs off for the film service, song slides and sheet music on the side, he is not going to spend any more money for a practical man who persists in doing nothing but operate and looking after his machines. Just as long as there are no laws to protect the men who are worthy of the name Operator, such operators will shun the city, for there are better fields in outside towns."

What the brother says is correct, but it seems almost impossible to get some managers to understand the fact that cheapness in an operating room does not pay. Many of them have an ingrained idea that if they get a "cheap" operator and in addition compel him to do work outside of his duty as an operator, they are just that much ahead. The real trouble is that they themselves do not know a good show from a bad one. Having no real knowledge of the exhibition business themselves they imagine they are doing fine if they manage to pull out twenty dollars, or even less, above expenses by putting on farcial projection. They are totally incapable of understanding the fact that with real projection and real management they could get much better patronage or, if playing to capacity at 5 cents, play to capacity at 10 cents. New York has its share—its full share—of this type of manager. We have here some good operators who are treated fairly decent in the matter of salary, etc. We also have many who—well, let us draw the veil of charity and hope for better things.

HENDERSON REPLIES. In Nov. 25 issue, Atlanta asked Mr. Henderson, chief operator of the Vaudette Theater, of that city, what certain spots under his machine were, referring to a photo of the Vaudette operating room, published a few weeks ago, Mr. Henderson replies:

"Oh, you Spotter, who spotted a spot on a spotless floor! I'd like to take a pot shot at you. Say, Spot, that's 'Three-in-One Oil' which soaked into the cement floor when the machines were being installed and oiled up. Now, Spot, be a good little Spot, and get off the stage before I put the spotlight on you. I've answered you as you asked, like one of Shakespeare's characters in 'Hamlet' serenely says: 'Out, damned spot!' "

I think Brother Henderson is in error in treating the matter as a joke. He must have given the machines a bath when "setting them up." Now, Friend H., while I agree that too much oil is better than not enough, still too much does a great deal of harm. It gets on the films, makes a dirty mess around the machines and is generally a nuisance. Time and again I have pointed out the fact that one drop of oil is ample for any motion picture machine bearing, whereas two drops is one drop too much. The one exception is the oil casing of the intermittent, of course. I am not calling attention to your error in order to "rub it in," but to call the pointed attention of other operators who are committing the same sin.

EXAMINATION BLANK. Georgetown, Colo., writes: "Will you kindly tell me where I can obtain an examination blank, as I would like to know whether or not I could pass an examination and hold down a job anywhere in the country? Am as good as most operators, I believe, and better than some I have seen."

There is no "examination blank" that I know of. Examinations are usually oral. You are questioned as to your knowledge of electricity, projection, etc. The questions are, or should be, of a practical nature such as, for instance, how would you hitch up two rheostats in order to get their maximum output when working together on one circuit? How get their minimum output? Would you hitch a projection arc lamp up to No. 10 wires? To No. 000 wires? Explain your reasons, etc.

NEW YORK WAGE SCALE.—New York operators are engaged in a strenuous endeavor to bring about the acceptance of the new wage scale and to do away with the matter of the operator carrying reels to and from the exchange. Up to date a great many houses, including the Marcus Loew theaters, have signed up with the union and the outlook for a general acceptance of the scale, with consequent betterment of conditions of New York operators, is very good.

WANTS UNION BY-LAWS, ETC.—Lowell, Mass., writes: "This local desires to frame up by-laws and adopt a wage scale. Some of the boys thought you might give us aid in the matter. We would like to get hold of copies of contracts and by-laws suitable for operators' union. This would help us a lot in the drafting of our own by-laws."

I have no by-laws at hand, except a copy of those of the San Francisco local, which I would not care to part with. Anyhow, conditions are too widely different there and here to make them of much value as a guide. Will unions having printed by-laws or contract form kindly send copy of same to F. G. Wheeler, Sec. Aux. M. P. O. Union No. 12, I. A. T. S. E., No. 36 Prescott Street, Lowell, Mass. As to the wage scale—you must not be guided, except in a general way, by the scales of other cities, since conditions there may be quite different. Of course it is well to try to have your scale no lower than that of the unions in surrounding cities. What I mean is that in the making of a scale local conditions must be, to a great extent, the governing factor. As you have no scale, or even by-laws, I take it you are a young organization. If that is the fact I would advise you to proceed slowly. Don't try to do too much at once. Don't forget the fact that, according to Scripture, it took even the Creator seven days to finish a certain task. It probably would be impracticable to adopt the wage scale you would like to have (and ought to have) the first thing. Adopt one that you can get. I don't mean, however, that you should demand no increase at all. By no means. I am trying to caution you not to attempt things beyond your strength to accomplish, remembering always that you are a young organization. Possibly this warning is not needed in your case, but I have seen many a new organization disrupted, or well nigh so, by that very mistake.

FAN LOCATION. Princeton, N. J., writes: "Does too much or not enough tension cause picture to climb up on the screen when speed is increased? Where is best location for operating room fan? There is a 7½-inch vent hole in wall opposite door of room. Size of fan, 10 inches."

If picture climbs before crank speed reaches 85 or 90 there is not enough tension. You can answer the last question better than I can. Use your own judgment. Enlarging the vent hole and placing the fan in it would probably be all right.

UNION. Elizabeth, N. J., writes: "Kindly tell me what I will have to do to join Auxiliary "L. U. No. 35, New York City; also, does the auxiliary control New York and Brooklyn?"

You will have to come in, make application and be examined. You would have an initiation fee of $5 to pay. The local covers all of Greater New York City and I believe also Jersey City. Am not sure about Elizabeth. As to "controlling" New York and Brooklyn, well, in the language of the classic East Side, that is something else again. It is doing the best it can, anyhow.

WORLD HELPS HIM. Mr. G. H. Hackathorn, Prop., Orpheum Theater, Pendleton, Ore., writes, saying that the World is a great help to him. He uses the film stories taken therefrom liberally in his advertising. Sends in neat bill advertising the recent three-reel release of the Edison Company, "Foul Play."

LICENSE. Rochster, N. Y., asks: "Is it necessary that an operator have a license to travel and operate a moving picture machine in large and small towns (not cities) in New York and Pennsylvania? Must he carry a fireproof booth?"

You will only need a license when operating in cities or towns where local ordinance requires operators to be licensed. As I understand the matter, however, you must have a fireproof booth anywhere in Pennsylvania or New York State. I would be glad to hear from various states as to exactly what the requirements are in these two respects.

A NEW VOLUME BY ROBERT GRAU.

"The Stage in the 20th Century" is the title of the third of Robert Grau's series of volumes of stage history. The newer work will, however, treat greatly on the vast development of the scientific and mechanical phases of stage progress. Mr. Grau has been impressed with the advent of various automatic devices, together with the remarkable achievements of the motion picture, the phonograph and the player piano, and his research has uncovered an almost unbelievable encroachment of science and artifice on what for centuries has been the realm of players and singers, who at last seem to realize the situation and are now themselves affiliating with the inventors. The new volume will be the largest in size of the Grau series, consisting of nearly 500 pages of text and more than 300 portraits, and will be issued early in the new year.

WHY

PAY from 25c. to $2.00 per sq. ft. for patent theatre screens when you can make one yourself equal to the best for 7c. sq. ft. ? Write

THE HADFIELD-HALL CO.
WAUSAU, WIS., about it.

Comments on the Films

Licensed.

"THE MYSTERIOUS STRANGER" (Eclipse), November 29.—A miracle play in which a mysterious stranger, seeming to come out of the Seven, appears in the guise of a beggar, which in the last act he discards, puts off to stand forth in more impressive fashion. He comes first to plead with and then to remonstrate with a hard-hearted and money-proud farmer. His plea rouses the farmer's wrath, then he warns him. We are shown that the man was harsh in all his dealings; but the occasion that brought the stranger was his refusal to let his son marry a daughter of a poor neighbor. Much hard luck comes to the farmer until his only other child, a daughter, is struck by a vivid and realistic flash of lighting. The man becomes contrite and the beggar enters, changes into a prophet and, forgiving the farmer, raises up the girl. Not so much has been got out of the situation as was possible; but the picture is impressive.

"SALT INDUSTRY IN SICILY" (Eclipse), November 29.—A very interesting and instructive scenic and industrial. The salt seems to come from evaporated sea water.

"A WOMAN SCORNED" (Biograph), November 30.—The early scenes of this picture are remarkable for strongly portrayed emotion. They show the jealousy of a wife whose husband is growing cold toward her. This husband is a burglar, and he and another character attempt to get possession of a large sum of money that they know the village physician has. By a fake call, they bring him to the house and bind him, leaving him gagged in the bed. When they break into the house, the fear of the doctor's wife also is extremely well pictured. The situation is melodramatic. The burglar's wife comes in, thinks the doctor is her husband asleep, and is on the point of stabbing him when she discovers who it is. For vengeance, she helps him; together they get the police and go to the house just in time to make a rescue. The end shows the bitter revulsion of the burglar's wife when she awakes to the fact that she has brought about his arrest. The two brightest stars in the Biograph constellation play these two wives, and they help greatly in making a picture well worth seeing.

"'TWAS EVER THUS" (Essanay), November 30.—Yes, indeed, when a woman is only sweet and twenty, she dislikes to get a box of roses on her birthday ("a beautiful rose for every glorious year") and find thirty roses. It wasn't the lover's fault either. He was such a good customer that the florist added ten roses. He was treated most harshly by the girl and by her dad who kicked him out onto the sidewalk. It is a very clear picture and evoked laughter.

"LITTLE RED RIDINGHOOD" (Essanay), November 30.—On the same reel with the above this children's rhyme is retold in pictures for children. It should please them, although there isn't a great deal of imaginative atmosphere in the picture. There undoubtedly is in the rhyme.

"THE REASON WHY" (Melies), November 30.—A comedy of which the last scene, richly human, is worth watching a good deal of rough horse-play to see. Part of the picture is taken up with the rough ejection of two drunken and obstreperous loafers from the village general store. The chief characters are two bunkies, Jack and Slim, and the pretty storekeeper whom both love. As a pretext for going to the store, one is always buying a new pipe, the other always buying a fresh bag of tobacco, until neither can get a good smoke, for one has no pipe, the other no tobacco. They, however, have a rival who carries off the fair one. Then, very disconsolate, they sit on the steps of their porch and make each other presents, one of tobacco, the other of pipes. It isn't a very strong picture. It got some laughs.

"A FOOTBALL HERO" (Essanay), November 28.—This film has some of the flavor of the game of the season, football. There is a girl loved by two men on the college team. One plays a sneak game and lies down when the great contest is in progress. The other is a substitute and is put in his place. His drop kick wins the game and it comes about through a glance from the girl's eyes which tells him he must win. There is much life and animation in the picture and because it deals with football it will be a prime favorite at this season.

"AN EVIL POWER" (Selig), November 30.—In this picture, which, by the way, not entirely agreeable, there is an illustration of what a hypnotist might be able to do. He succeeded in weaving a spell about this unfortunate girl which won her away from her friends. Fortunately for her, her former maid sees her entering a strange house and informs her father. He and her lover enter a taxicab and are driven to the house, arriving just in time to prevent a farcial wedding between the girl and the medium. The lover nearly chokes the medium to death and compels him to release the girl from his power. She renews her engagement and all ends happily.

"A NICOTINE CONSPIRACY" (Lubin), November 30.—Smokers who have been where they wanted a smoke and couldn't get it will appreciate the fun in this film. Her father didn't like the doctor, so they put up a job on him. When the father took her away from civilization, the better to circumvent the doctor, she stole his cigars. The doctor arrives and begins smoking. The old gentleman is in a fever of desire for a smoke. At the right time the doctor hands over a cigar. The result is a wedding. The fun in this story lies in the effort of the old gentleman to get along without a smoke and the way the doctor handled the situation.

"INCENDIARY INDIANS" (Lubin), November 29.—A Western picture [illegible] of the pursuit of settlers by Indians. All the escape of the [illegible] in the stockade. A crazy man [illegible] and set fire to one of the cabins inside. One of the men [illegible] child, crawled to a ditch and got out. He ran [illegible] but the most sensational escape was [illegible] an outlaw whose life [illegible] for capture. [illegible] the Indians and drives off [illegible] which [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] of the pursuing [illegible] the rest of the [illegible] to be consumed. [illegible] long delayed [illegible] very [illegible] pretty [illegible].

"GLIMPSES OF SAN FRANCISCO" (Pathe), November 29.—A series of views of San Francisco. It shows principally the city's statues of notable people. The art museum and the new Federal building are also shown.

"AN ACTOR IN A NEW ROLE" (Lubin), November 29.—A cleverly-acted comedy-drama. It pictures an actor who is forced by financial circumstances to turn book agent. By assuming a number of disguises, one after another, he succeeds in inducing one very stubborn man to buy a full set. The amusement is given by the pictures of the various disguises and the portrayal of the different characters necessary in each of these. This picture kept a large New York audience much amused for twenty minutes. It is a trifle rough in places, but, for the most part, is bright and acceptable.

"THE CRAB INDUSTRY" (Lubin), November 29.—A series of views which tell the story of canned crab from the time the fleet goes to sea until the meat is safely enclosed in hermetically-sealed containers. Some of the views are picturesque, notably those where the boats are coming in laden with large cargoes of struggling crustaceans. The last picture on the screen, the colored gentleman who gives every evidence of a fondness for crab meat, is a bit of character posing that is excellent. The entire film is not alone interesting, but is educational in the best sense.

"THE AWAKENING OF JOHN BOND" (Edison), December 5.—This picture with a Christmas, Red Cross Seal message, like that release of a year ago, called "The Red Cross Seal," was reviewed at length on page 535 (issue of November 18) and needs no further notice here.

"JIMMIE TRICKS THE LANDLADY" (Gaumont), December 5.—The quality that people look for in "Jimmie" pictures will be found in this one, but it is not as prominent as in the best Jimmie pictures; there are only a few good laughs in this one. The first scene shows a very poverty-stricken tenement house room. There are many children, Jimmie among them, in picturesque rags and the children's mother. The landlady comes and gives the mother only eight days in which to pay the rent. After this period she return with a bailiff, but Jimmie in the meanwhile has seen her in a flirtation with the butcher. He uses this information, reads truth on the lines of the lady's palm and practically "holds her up" for the rent. It is very amusing.

"THE CHALLENGE" (Gaumont), December 5.—A farce-comedy in which a very clever swordswoman compels a "masher" to fight a duel with her. It is amusing. In the contest she sorely wounds him and afterward falls in love with and marries him. The last scene shows their two kiddies practicing with the foils.

"A MAN FOR ALL THAT" (Edison), December 2.—Although not everything in this picture is wholly convincing, its central idea as presented appeals to us as truthful. An outcast is shown as about to drown himself and he is persuaded to give himself another trial. When next we see him, he is among criminals to whom the dishonest servant of a planter comes ostensibly seeking a doctor, but really to tell them of a large sum of money at the planter's. The chief of the robbers compels the outcast to impersonate the doctor and get the cash with the dishonest servant's help. He consents after being threatened; but the farmer's daughter trusts him with the keys to the safe and, later, when the gang arrives, he helps the farmer's wife and daughter stand off the robbers until the farmer returns with a real doctor and they are driven off. This fight is not wholly convincing. some of the exteriors might have been better photographed. The picture is interesting.

"ARRAH-NA-POGUE" (Kalem), December 4.—This big, three-reel production was reviewed at length under "Notable Films," page 536, and needs no further notice here.

"PULL FOR THE SHORE, SAILOR" (Edison), December 1.—Miss Laura Sawyer plays very effectively the part of the sailor's wife in this heart-touching picture, which was suggested by Elizabeth Stewart Phelps's "The Madonna of the Tubs." She is also ably supported. It is a seaside story of fisherfolk. There are some delightful pictures of a Maine harbor and of the sea, although it cannot be said that the scenes in which the dory is shown adrift are all quite as effective as possible; they are good, however. The only other criticism is that the first scene might have been more happily placed a bit later in the picture; it prepared us for one of the lesser threads of the story. The sailor, after a causeless quarrel, left for a fishing trip without saying goodbye to his wife. In a fog his dory was separated from the ship and he was reported as dead. It was summer when he went out; it is Christmas when he reaches home. His coming is unexpected and brings great joy. It is a well designed picture and Miss Sawyer's acting makes it very effective.

"SAVING THE SPECIAL" (Vitagraph), December 4.—A railroad melodrama which seems designed more to show well-contrasted characters than to give a thrill at the rescue of the train. These characters are very well acted; they are human beings; and some of them are very amusing. The foiling of the villain, who because he couldn't wreck the engineer's home tries to wreck his train, is not so exciting as is usual in the best melodramas, those whose sole purpose is to get the thrill across and nothing else. This picture merely didn't pay so much attention to the bringing of the warning of the villain's obstruction laid on the track, or to the race of the engineer's wife to remove it in time, as it did to the reckless depths of this villain's villainy and to the trap into which it led him. It is, however, partly because of this departure from the well-worn formula, a very interesting picture.

"ABE GETS EVEN WITH FATHER" (Biograph), December 4.—The very first scene of the picture provoked a good laugh. It seemed as though every single scene that followed was thoroughly enjoyed. The audience of a large theater, as a whole apparently, was kept in amused laughter all the way through the picture. Abe's father refused him a nickel. So he blackened his eye with a burnt cork and told his father that Murphy, the janitor, had given it to him. Daddy was going to do some things to Murphy, but wasn't very successful. Abe got a dollar out of his father because of it. The old Jew seemed pleased by Abe's cuteness.

"WHY HE GAVE UP" (Biograph), December 4.—The first picture on this split reel was funny, but this farce-comedy is even funnier; it is better in every way. Hubbie was a gay bird. He pretended to be in a great fury because wifey ordered a new hat. Wifey is played by that Biograph girl who swims and dives like a mermaid. Hubby went down to the shore to have a good time with the boys and girls. He didn't know wifey also was going to be there. From a distance he sees wifey's diving and tries to get acquainted, slips a note into her dressing room asking her to make a date. She does, and with mother not far away keeps the tryst. It is very funny from first to last and the audience applauded it heartily.

"A HEAD FOR BUSINESS" (Lubin), December 4.—There is a bit too much cheap comedy in this picture which, in some of its scenes, is bright enough; and it hardly measures up to the best that Lubin producers have done. The story will suggest an Imp picture of a few weeks back, called "The Artist Financier." It is perhaps a trifle better. Miss Lawrence plays an artistic young lady who is loved by the younger of James Murray's sons. This young man shows so much artistic temperament that his older brother, a good business man, is discouraged and buys his share of the business. The young lady finds that this older brother has overlooked a plot of ground needed by his new railroad, so she uses the younger brother's check to buy it in and then makes the older brother pay her price for it, thereby showing a head for business.

"THE FRANCISCAN FRIARS OF KILLARNEY" (Kalem), November 29.—A very interesting topical picture showing an impressive church ceremony out-of-doors at the Corpus Christi anniversary. It contains a long procession of Irish folk led and conducted by the Killarney friars. There are many banners; the Host is borne under a canopy and High Mass is said. This picture will interest everyone, but especially Irish folk. Some of such may see friends in the procession.

"AMONG THE IRISH FISHERFOLK" (Kalem), November 29.—On the same reel with the above is this topical picture which shows much of the intimate life of Irish fishermen and maidens. It is also very interesting. The photographs of both are clear.

"THE PROMOTER" (Gaumont), December 2.—A strong, truthful picture; its chief character excites the deepest interest until we marvel at the depths of meanness to which he falls. It is a typical picture of life; the things that this get-rich-quick promoter does are being done; many will recognize him. The art quality that this presentation of the character has, the dramatic way in which the acts that make it plain and open to us, is what makes the picture effective and important. Only the truly significant moments in his experience and the dramatic results of what he does are shown to us. Our interest isn't wearied and vitiated by trivial and unimportant circumstances. Local color seems left to take care of itself; all that the film seems to desire is to give a universal human picture; yet it is full of local color. The promoter fools his own gray-haired father and lets his father fool his life-long friends and cronies with terrifically ruinous results. It is an unusually worthy and desirable picture.

"WESTERN CHIVALRY" (Lubin), December 2.—This reviewer finds this picture slow, even wearisome. It deals with characters that are not truly human and, despite the players who take these parts, are not pleasing, do not wake human sympathy in the spectators. The chief characters are an English lord (conventionally foolish and cowardly), a girl, daughter of a magnate, to whom he is engaged, a clownish girl who belongs on a ranch and a not very prepossessing cowboy. (The player who takes this cowboy part has done some very pleasing heavy villain work in other pictures.) The lord, the magnate and his daughter come to the ranch. Love at first sight follows when the cowboy and the girl meet. The cowboy has his friends dress up as Indians who scare the lord and the magnate and then the cowboy rescues the girl, brings her back to the ranch in his arms. The magnate then accepts him as prospective son-in-law, while the clownish maid makes love to the lord.

"THE HUSKING BEE" (Vitagraph), December 2.—This picture is not to be named in the same breath with the Vitagraph life-portrayals, although the talented young lady who plays the leading role plainly understood how a girl of the standing and experience of its heroine would be likely to act. This heroine was a well-to-do farmer's daughter who loved a very rural, yet not quite truthfully rural, youth. The village doctor's niece came in an automobile to visit him. At the husking bee, a few days later, this niece found a red ear and, as she had the right, demanded the kiss, choosing the most reluctant looking youth present, the girl's sweetheart. This precipitated a quarrel. The girl gave back her ring and told the youth that he'd have to crawl on hands and knees to her before she'd take it back. After several vain efforts, he did crawl in from the gate; but he [illegible] apparently a physical inconvenience in an act which as garden weeder he had probably done many times. The girl comes out to meet him and makes him, as further punishment, place the ring in his mouth and bark like a dog. Could any girl love a man after seeing him cut such capers? To show how the audience regarded it, we may state that two men behind the reviewer expected the youth to swallow the ring, plainly looking upon the picture as a farce. There were several laughs in it.

"IN JAPAN" (Selig), December 1.—A series of scenes in Japan which give a good idea of life among the women of the Japanese. The pictures are novel. Women driving piles is not a common sight here, but in contrast to that are views of the women's school at Shiba, give something of the other side. There are many others equally interesting.

"HOW BETTY CAPTURED THE OUTLAW" (Kalem), December 1.—A rather good comedy given a Western flavor by the settings. A city young man decides to visit his uncle in the West. Arriving at the place he purchases an outfit in keeping with his surroundings. He is mistaken by Betty, his pretty cousin, for an outlaw for whom a large reward is offered and she manages to get him in the cellar and hold him a prisoner until her small brother can go for the sheriff. That official and her father arrive at the same time. When the young man has been recognized by his uncle he asks Betty if she doesn't think that is a nice way to treat a cousin. What Betty said is not disclosed.

"A GLIMPSE INTO THE YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK" (Kalem), December 1.—It was the Kalem Company who were among the first to picture this great natural wonder. The series of pictures here shown includes some of the most sought points and are clearly photographed. The series is commended to those who desire an attractive travelog.

"SEEING CINCINNATI" (Selig), December 1.—A series of pictures which will afford those who have never been there a good idea of what some parts of this busy city are like. These travelogs of cities in this country are interesting additions to any program. They bring distant parts of our own land to our doors.

"A PERILOUS RIDE" (Edison), November 25.—This typical picture of the Indian and soldier kind is only as interesting as others of this class, except that it is better done than most. Few of these pictures are more than a fresh arrangement of old stock properties often used, such as the attack on the fort, the lieutenant's sacrificing himself to save the colonel's daughter, the proud chief who demands that daughter in marriage and the final rescue by U. S. Cavalry. That is all this picture can claim to be. In fact, we have already given its outline. It is very well acted.

"A FRONTIER GIRL'S COURAGE" (Selig), December 5.—An Indian melodrama, which, although it seemed a bit too loosely made, and dragged in several places, is, nevertheless, somewhat more interesting than the usual run of such. The girl is not shown as doing any signal deed of courage; she courageously helped a prospector fight off a large band of the reds. She had met this prospector in the brush; herself an only survivor of a little group of settlers whom these Indians had just wiped out. The prospector and she are cornered, a bit later, and have a sharp fight with the murderous band, but beat them off. The girl is wounded by a brave, who crept up near them unawares but was killed by the man. Herburt Bostworth plays the prospector. I don't remember ever seeing him make any blunder that mattered in any other picture. In this film, with the intention of producing a pathetic picture, he clasps the now wounded heroine in his arms, holds her tightly, and fires over her shoulder, without realizing that she is his shield and protects him from bullets. There are some good, well made scenes, and some interesting backgrounds; but the photography is not quite as clear as in the best pictures. It is a commendable picture.

"A SLIGHT MISTAKE" (Vitagraph), December 5.—This and its companion number on a split reel make a very desirable comedy offering. This is not so good as the second part. It is a picture of a lunatic asylum where a letter had been received stating that two men who thought that they were automobiles were to be taken there that day. A party of motorists happen to be stranded a few miles from the asylum by a breakdown. Of these, Bunny and a friend walk on. They, passing the asylum, are seen and made welcome. It isn't quite so funny as it might have been if the second man had played the situation as well as Bunny; but he didn't play it in any way but the conventional, which is poor beside the better way.

"HYPNOTIZING THE HYPNOTIST" (Vitagraph), December 5.—An extravaganza comedy thoroughly laughable and enjoyable, and one that was received with warm applause. It deserved to be applauded on account of its quality which is all in the acting. A very well-made-up hypnotist calls on Mr. Brown's sweetheart while Brown is there. Brown is quickly cut out and leaves in dudgeon. Goes to consult a professional hypnotist, but finds him not home. Edges past valet into the hypnotist's library. Finds the great book, "How to Hypnotize from a Distance." Reads for a while, then calls up sweetheart and has her make faces at the other hypnotist. Miss Florence Turner plays the girl and she is rich in it. Brown then comes back with the great book. Heavy battle scene in sweetheart's parlor, ending in a truce with Brown victor. It surely is a worth-while comedy. There's hardly an inch that isn't funny.

"A DIAMOND IN THE ROUGH" (Selig), December 4.—A good love story worked out with a rough setting which emphasizes the good qualities that appear in the hero and heroine. A girl is saved from a marriage which she abhors through the timely arrival of a young man who ultimately asks for and receives her as his wife. The former suitor is otherwise disposed of and when the girl's parents visit her a year afterward, they are almost convinced that they made no mistake in giving her to this young man. The human touches through the film add to its interest. There is an interesting situation at the start when the girl obstinately refuses to accept the suitor chosen by her father. But the difficulty straightens itself all out and everybody is happy, while there is no record to show that the disappointed young man seriously mourned his loss.

"THE LUCKLESS BANKER" (Eclipse), December 6.—A somewhat melodramatic picture, based upon the misfortune of a banker. He is compelled to place his child with a friend and goes to Africa to try his fortune. Twenty years later, he is joined by his son. They do much prospecting and when they find gold the elder man goes insane. But the son takes him home and there [illegible] gradually restored. [illegible] altogether pleasant picture, yet one which has some serious defects.

"SINS OF THE FATHER" (Comet), December 6.—The present effects are very powerful. In brief, it tells of the failure of a husband and dad of his apparently [illegible] business, at the suggestion of his partner. He makes his mother promise that she will say [illegible] when she detects symptoms of the malady. The boy soon [illegible] with the mother, and decided what to do. A strong ending. The film presents a logical moral sermon upon the effect of heredity, and it might have been suggested by Ibsen's "Ghosts."

"JOHN BROWN'S HERO" (Comet), December 6.—An interesting comedy, relating the story of a hero who rescues a lady [illegible] of the mines, and is repaid by losing her [illegible]. The coming of the [illegible] brings in the humor. Brown [illegible] to be carried off the [illegible] he invites them all to visit him. They find to their surprise that he is married, is in good health and has furnished his [illegible] to the [illegible] young wife. The contrasts [illegible] and realities afford a satisfactory climax.

"THE LONG ARM OF [illegible]" (Kalem), December 6.—The film tells of a Mexican bandit who escaped from the sheriff on his own side of the border, but was recognized [illegible] at work in California. He makes his escape in a [illegible] manner, holding a young woman, the ranch manager's sweetheart, before him as a shield. But he is at last at bay on the edge of a precipice. Pushed harder and harder he at last plunges to his death below.

Independent.

"KEEPING MABEL HOME" (Majestic), December [illegible].—The [illegible] was reviewed at length on page [illegible]. It needs no further mention here.

"THE SMOKE OF A FORTY-FIVE" (American), December [illegible].—A truly thrilling melodrama with a good deal of quality to it. The situation is made clear by the very first scene. The rustler's daughter loves the young ranger sheriff. Her father attempts to make her marry his lieutenant, and tries to keep her from [illegible]. In the end the father's plans are circumvented and the lovers meet. The lieutenant, however, brings his men unexpectedly and the sheriff is captured. The girl is compelled to accept the lieutenant to save the sheriff's life. It looks as though her sacrifice was to be without avail, but a sister of the heroine warns the cowboys and they come to the rescue. The girl also is saved. It seems as though Miss Bush, as the [illegible], has never [illegible] a part more acceptably. The whole cast did very well indeed. The design of the picture could hardly be improved upon.

"YANKEE DOODLE" (Champion), December 4.—It is somewhat surprising to find Mother Goose conducting a Yankee Doodle celebration in the front yard and down the street. Old Uncle Sam, with a feather in his cap, appears. Later, Stonewall Jackson [illegible] and leads the procession; then General Grant; then General R. E. Lee. Abraham Lincoln comes and shakes hands with the heroes. None of these figures is well made-up or looks like the original. Yet this idea of weaving such a series of scenes for the children is very commendable.

"OUR NAVY" (Champion), December [illegible].—This [illegible] of good pictures of the big United States ships, each individually. The name is given in each case. It is a good film.

"BILLY'S LETTERS" (Comet), December 4.—Billy had just been married. The actress, an old flame, returned his love letters and his wife read them. She rushed to the theater and caused a scene in the actress' dressing room. The wife makes up with Billy in the last scene. It is very poorly acted indeed, and lacks illusion as a picture of life. The settings also seem quickly chosen and haven't the touch of naturalness which is found in the best pictures. The incidents, too, are often unnatural, especially those in which the butler and maid at Billy's house figure. The story is not coarse and the main thread keeps our interest, but one has the feeling that the film was made hurriedly.

"THE DEAD CANARY" (Comet), December 8.—A pretty story that is satisfying to human feelings, but hardly to human art sense. It is a romance of a village taxidermist and an actress who came to the country on a visit and whose canary died. The courtship of these two and the attitude of the village characters toward them, as shown, are not convincing. There is nothing in the film, however, that is not humanly possible. The photography is not up to standard. The detail is clear, but the result is foggy.

"THE DUMB MESSENGER" (Comet), December [illegible].—The story of a dog which summoned help when an attempt was made to burglarize a house, with the help of the butler and the maid. The society Raffles is an interesting factor. Deciding to steal the diamonds himself he finds others ahead of him. He holds them at bay until help, summoned by the dog, arrives, and in explanation of his presence declares he was passing, heard the noise and entered. The anomaly presented by this character gives a subtle distinction to the film which makes it the more notable. The invalid and the young man's fiancee perform their parts well, but they are subordinate. The film contains many exhilerating thrills.

"JUST TWO LITTLE GIRLS" (Nestor), December 4.—A melodrama of sentiment, not a picture of life, but one which a pleasing little player makes interesting. The story is very much overdrawn and without its children players could hardly have been popular. In the story the doctor's love for his little girl (it is very tenderly shown) leads him to put forward his best efforts to save the life of the little girl of another man. This man, while on his way to ask the physician's help, was the means of saving the doctor's little girl's life when jeopardized by a passing auto. As art, the picture doesn't reach a very high place.

"STRUCK GOLD" (Nestor), December 6.—A conventional melodrama too loosely constructed to be very effective, although the last [illegible] at the [illegible]

[illegible]

"[illegible]" (Comet), December [illegible].—[illegible] stork has arrived; his return home and his progress to the hospital with a carriage filled with toys. Then comes an emotional feature when his wife and [illegible] are reunited about [illegible] doctor in charge, but when taken to see them discovers that it is not his [illegible] which he hugs the nurses and everyone else within reach. Nor is this [illegible]

"THE EMPTY [illegible]" (Comet), December [illegible].—As [illegible] acted and reasonable, and human in the story that it tells. The photographs [illegible] pretty scenes were ruined, as pictures, by this weakness. The chief sent [illegible] Jones Wes[illegible] [illegible] Jones West, a [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] tribe. This ceremony makes a commendable picture.

"A RANGE ROMANCE" (Bison), December 8.—One can not deny that the incidents of this story are possible, yet it takes a very lively fancy to see this picture of a father taking his daughter, aged twelve, away from her mother, who was quarrelsome, and, in the disguise of a boy, permitting her to get a job with him on a ranch in the West, and count the picture a life portrayal. The foreman of the ranch takes a great liking to the girl even before he knows her sex. The mother follows her husband and daughter to the West. There's a chance, dramatic meeting and a reconcilhation. The girl, and also the mother, are players new in [illegible] pictures. They give promise of interesting work. We shall probably have the pleasure of seeing them in more significant pictures than this.

"IN HUMANITY'S CAUSE" (Eclair, American), December 5.—A melodrama of Civil War times. It may leave in the spectator's mouth a somewhat unpleasant taste, because of its peculiar central idea. A Confederate officer, who has [illegible] [illegible] a moment on the [illegible] battle, is saved [illegible] transfusion [illegible] from the [illegible] a negro. After a leader [illegible] "Hold Still [illegible]," [illegible] sadly changed in character. The black blood has made of him a brute, who disgusts even his sweetheart. In the last scene, after he had been told of this transfusion, he seeks the negro, finds him at the edge of a precipice and grapples with him. Both go over together and die in each other's arms. The title seems intended to point a moral. One could hardly call this a highly commendable film, although there are some remarkable and beautiful scenes in it. And, in the parts that were natural it was well acted.

"THERE FELL A FLOWER" (Eclair), December 7.—A society comedy fresh, bright and very amusing. It is very well acted, too. It has parts for four players, a young wife, her husband, her mother-in-law and an old bachelor, mother's devoted but bashful admirer. It cleverly utilizes a little quarrel between the old lady and her son-in-law to bring the bashful bachelor into the picture at the critical time when he proposes. The son-in-law, as a peace offering, had brought mother an elaborate basket of flowers. It was not acceptable; went out of the window, in fact. The bachelor was passing and came up, not knowing who lived in the house, for an explanation.

"MANNERS AND TRADITIONS OF PIEDMONT" (Eclair, French), December 7.—A truly lovely picture of Alpine village life and scenery. It is more interesting than the usual scenic pictures; for, catching the villagers at a festival and again at church time, it brings them all before us very intimately. We can almost make friends with them.

"THE LITTLE THIEF" (Powers), December 5.—A child's doings furnish the comedy in this picture. It might have been suggested by that poem each of whose stanzas ends "Now he's in an awful fix. Ain't he cute; he's only six." He stole the revolver his father had left with his mother as a protection against the burglar who was doing business in the neighborhood. Then he held up the cook for pie and, afterward, a girl in the park with her beau, for candy. He went home to eat his plunder; the burglar was there and he held him up till the policeman got him. It [illegible]

ZIGOMAR! See page 929

"THE SECRET ORDER OF HORNS" (Powers), December 5.—An amusing comic picture showing the initiation ceremonies of the ancient and powerful Order of the Horns. Poor Si took two degrees at the lodge and got his third degree from Mrs. Si when he got home.

"JORIO'S DAUGHTER" (Ambrosio), December 6.—D'Annuncio's play gives the scenario for this picture of Italian peasants. The player who took the part of Jorio's daughter managed to put over an unpleasant character. The picture is very tragic and very beautiful, being, in these Italian mountain settings, almost wholly poetry. It is, as is well known, not a pleasant story. The daughter of Jorio causes a fight between two reapers and in this fight one is badly wounded by a reaper. The other peasants chase the girl down the hillside. They knew who was guilty. She takes refuge in the house where the wounded man's son is being married to another girl. This youth saves her from the mob. After the wedding, she meets him up on the foothills and persuades him to run away with her. The youth's father, who also loves her, follows. He is killed by his son. The girl finally saves the youth from being burned alive by claiming to be a witch, and taking his place at the stake. It is an artistic and very strong production, very commendably acted and staged.

"THE INDIAN FORTUNE TELLER" (Champion), December 6.—A young man gives an Indian woman a liberal fee. Having won in a card game the young man is followed by his victim for the purpose of vengeance. His treacherous Indian guide, a confederate of the loser, leads him through a by-way where lurk the ruffian and his Indian allies. They are met by the Indian woman who is stabbed from behind by the spurious guide, who in turn is shot dead by the young man. The woman, though dying, leads him to the safe path. When she falls dead he drags the body, with the crucifix upon it, to the roadside and goes on his way. The scenes change often, showing the villains waiting for their victim, who never comes. He arrives home safely. The last scene, showing the outlaws still watching, seems superfluous. It weakens the otherwise peaceful close.

"BABY'S CHOICE" (Solax), December 6.—The principal feature of this picture is the child, "Toots," who dislikes one of her sister's admirers, while she evinces an equally pronounced liking for the other. Her expedients to drive away the one she does not like are amusing. She succeeds in a way that gives the audience a thrill. When kidnapped at the instigation of the disappointed suitor it is her friend who rescues her. And she has the satisfaction of seeing her sister accept her favorite after all. That baby will be a favorite everywhere.

"THE PAPER MAKING INDUSTRY" (Solax), December 6.—A good industrial film, the photography of which deserves commendation. It is an admirably illustrated story of a sheet of paper from the log to the finished product.

"BROTHER BOB'S BABY" (Thanhouser), December 8.—This particular baby caused his uncle no end of difficulty and finally forced him to sail for Europe. His mother left him in his uncle's care while she went to the news-stand. The train goes without her, and the troubles of the uncle begin, supplemented by telegrams from the baby's mother. The uncle and the baby are ejected at a station. For safe keeping the uncle places the baby in a dog basket in the baggage car, while he goes for a drink. The train goes and leaves him, but the baby makes a disturbance in the baggage car, and the man takes him through the train. He is promptly claimed by his mother, who has taken this train. The badly disconcerted uncle telegraphs where the baby is and adds that he sails for Europe on the next day. The picture of the Hudson River steamer and the one of the new Pennsylvania station in New York are both excellent. The comedy is sparkling.

"THE MEASURE OF A MAN" (Rex), December 7.—A completely made and praiseworthy picture of human hearts with their weaknesses and glories upon them. The idea that it presents is deep and significant and the story, in its essential meanings at least, rings true; is typical. A working girl, the daughter of a respectable workman, gets, it doesn't deeply matter how, a taste of the luxury of the rich and it comes in such a way that it makes her covetous and much dissatisfied with her home and poorer lot. This luxury leads her into temptation and she flutters toward it, as a moth toward the flame. She is singed, not deeply burned, and is rescued. Five years pass and we see her again content, wiser and happier in her own sphere. There is a love thread woven into the story, and in the end her early lover proves that he measures up to man's stature by coming back for her.

"THE MAN IN THE AUTO" (Lux), December 8.—An automobile adventure in which a gang of thugs shoot the chauffeur of a man they are trying to blackmail, leaving the car to forge ahead at some speed with the man's wife and child in it. These are saved by men in another car. The chauffeur, who on being shot fell from his car, escapes from the gang and leads the owner and the police in trailing and capturing the criminals. It isn't a picture that will excite a great deal of enthusiasm. It is interesting, but the incidents connected with the runaway car are not at all convincing; the car is shown as keeping in the road and steering itself.

"THE ADVENTURES OF AN AMATEUR HYPNOTIST" (Lux), December 8.—A rather freakish picture in which two hypnotists figure. They meet at a party and fall in love, but the power that is in both keeps them from approaching each other. Many amusing encounters ensue. They have to get a professional hypnotist to relieve them from the difficulty. It is only fair entertainment.

"THE LITTLE SHOE" (Solax), December 8.—This is not, as a whole, a convincing picture; but it brings forward a few acceptable players in pleasant roles. These players, not being able to make it deeply human, wisely get the most out of it by being themselves at their best. The heroine of the story, in the last scenes, made a pretty picture. This heroine while very young was stolen by a woman whose own baby had just died. She only got one shoe. The child grows up supposing her to be her real mother. The woman dies; the girl, now about sixteen, is hurt by an automobile and adopted by her own father and mother. On her eighteenth birthday, the day she becomes engaged, the little shoe is the means of showing the relationship.

"WINTER IN SWITZERLAND" (Great Northern), December 9.—Some of the photographs of these snow-scenes are very good, considering how hard it is to get good detail under the circumstances. The views include some vistas of Via Mala and some scenes of Alpine villages with fairly deep snow around them. There are no views of high ranges or peaks and no glacier views. It is an interesting film.

"BUTTONS AND HOOKS" (Great Northern), December 9.—A very well-acted and amusing comedy. There is a good deal of human truth in it, although the atmosphere is thoroughly European. Mr. and Mrs. Bright have only one maid. Mrs. Bright wants her dress hooked up and Mr. Bright is having trouble getting his collar buttoned. It ends in Mr. Bright's getting served first. The little tift is carried to an evening party and reopened again when Mr. and Mrs. Bright are preparing for bed. Mr. Bright goes out to get someone else to unbutton the collar. His adventures take him to places that are open late and he gets home drunk. Mrs. Bright, meanwhile, has called up the Life Saving Corps of the Fire Department to unhook her dress behind. This is not offensive, but to some, it may seem a bit suggestive. One sees much worse on Broadway. It is a comedy that gives a well utilized chance to do some brilliant acting.

MAPLE LEAF PALACE, MONTREAL.

A new moving picture house has been recently opened on one of the principal thoroughfares of the city, namely, "The Maple Leaf Palace." The seating capacity of this theater is about 800, and it presents a fine line of vaudeville and moving pictures. The entrance, which from the photo one can see is very lavishly decorated and spaciously arranged, is situated on St. Lawrence Boulevard. Thomas Brothers, the proprietors, have spared no money to make the place extremely comfortable. From the very start this new venture of Thomas Brothers has been a pronounced success. At all events the business that has come to this theater indicates unmistakably that the exhibiting business is not on the wane.

Maple Leaf Theater, Montreal, Can.

MOVING PICTURES AND THE CHURCH.

The moving picture shows as a means of public recreation were stoutly defended, while the existing laws and efforts toward the regulation of them were severely criticised when the Sunday Civic Center of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, N. Y., met in the church parlors, at Henry and Remsen Streets, to discuss this civic problem.

* * *

The great crowd of mothers and fathers and their children which assembled at Public School No. 147, Bushwick Avenue and Seigel Street, Eastern District, Brooklyn, N. Y., attested to the popularity of the "moving picture show" provided by the co-operation of the Board of Education and the Citizens Committee, of which E. W. Ordway is the chairman.

* * *

The moving picture censor board, Los Angeles, Cal., was allowed $200 by the council to defray incidental expenses. The question of providing quarters in the Temple block and a moving picture machine is under consideration.

* * *

Motion pictures as a means of teaching the Bible and the history of the Episcopal Church, Kansas City, were advocated by Bishop Sidney C. Partridge at a meeting of the men of the Church Club of the Kansas City diocese, held in the guild hall of Grace Church, 13th and Washington Streets. He intimated that the present age was novelty mad, and he could see no reason why the novel side of religion should not be portrayed, in order to satisfy the twentieth century demand for something new.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"FICKLE BRIDGET" (Solax).

Critics unanimously advocate the elimination of burlesque and slap stick from comedies. Straight comedy, of course, "comes over" stronger with the elimination of these objectionable features. There is, however, a peculiar kind of comedy of which many producers fight shy. In that peculiar style of comedy there is a slight mixture of burlesque and slap-stick, and their application in proper measure without hurting the general scheme, is difficult. For this reason manufacturers are usually luke-warm in their reception of scenarios with those apparently objectionable features incorporated. Unless the story is "handled with care" its appearance on the screen is usually received with a storm of protest. If carefully produced, such comedies can come under the head of Satiric Comedy—or comedy with a keen edge.

Scene from "Fickle Bridget" (Solax).

Such a comedy is Fickle Bridget—the Solax release of Friday, December the 15th. It is a comedy with a keen edge, because it picturesquely "shows up" striking frailties of human nature in a pointed way. It, in a subtle manner, interprets the ambitions and the aspirations of a cook from Cork, Ireland, who inherits a fortune. It brings out forcefully the servant problem and the point of view of foreign nobility and their attitude toward matrimony and the dollar.

The plot of this story concerns a cook, who, after her inheritance of a fortune assumes "airs" which she cannot support by her limited intellect. She has ambitions as a fencer and engages a Count to teach her the art of handling foils. Her former associates and admirers, a grocer and an iceman, are not good enough for her and she finally accepts the proposal of the Count—when the iceman and the grocer show themselves up as liars and unqualified for the tender profession of love.

The situations are absurdly funny and the satire is strongly emphasized.

CHAMPION ENTERPRISE.

In a recent interview with Mr. Mark M. Dintenfass, the Moving Picture World is informed that the Champion Film Company has closed a contract with Mr. Fowler, the well-known aviator, who has distinguished himself in all of the flying meets and enjoys an international reputation, to fly for the Champion Company and take with him as passenger one of the picked camera men of the Champion staff.

It is the object of Mr. Dintenfass to secure a series of bird's eye views of the country over which Mr. Fowler will pilot his airship, beginning in Texas and then proceeding north and east. There is no doubt but that this series of scenic pictures taken from the clouds will prove to be an interesting feature of the already popular Champion releases.

"WHY THE CHECK WAS GOOD" (Imp).

The illustration shows the dramatic moment in the "Imp" release of Dec. 11th, "Why the Check Was Good." "Pay the money," says the sleek-looking man to the teller. The money is paid, and the humble-looking old man departs, rich in pocket, and assured of freedom, although he had forged the signature to the check.

Why was the check good? Years before, the prosperous-looking man, then a youth, had been turned out of home by his father and given a check, which he was too proud to sign and use. Destitute and ragged, he was finally helped by a man who kept a shoe store and sent West to get a job.

Scene from "Why the Check Was Good" (Imp).

He prospered and became a bank official. But his benefactor went on the downward path of life; and in the last resort forged the signature to a check that he had accidentally came by in former times.

He presents the check to the very bank of which his protege has become an official. In gratitude the latter does not go back on his former benefactor; avows the signature to be genuine, and so saves the old fellow and repays him for some of his kindness.

In this picture the Imp Company has produced a clear, wholesome story which makes an irresistible appeal to the sympathies of the audience.

SELIG BUYS LARGE TRACT FOR ANIMAL FARM.

Recently Mr. W. N. Selig purchased an ideal tract of property near Santa Monica, Calif. The property comprises over three hundred acres and is situated on the line of the Los Angeles Pacific Interurban R. R. It is easily accessible to the newly enlarged Selig Edendale Studios and within a short distance of Santa Monica Harbor on the Pacific Ocean, where the Selig Co. keep their flotilla of boats.

The new property will be converted into what will be known as the Selig Animal Farm. A Studio will be erected and permanent animal quarters built. All of the buildings will be of concrete and they will be designed in the Mission style which distinguishes the Selig buildings in California.

The Selig menagerie, in charge of Big Otto Briekreutz, will be moved to their new quarters at once, and this wonderful collection of wild animals, which is now one of the greatest collections in the country, will be added to gradually until it knows no rival. Needless to say, the Selig people are planning some animal pictures that will surpass everything in this line that has gone before.

PENNSYLVANIA STATION FILMED IN ITS NATURAL LIGHT.

And now the new Pennsylvania Station, New York, the largest railroad depot in the country, has been stormed by the moving picture man. And the Thanhouser people, who composed the attacking force, did the filming right in the interior minus the aid of any artificial light. Many of the scenes were made at the lower train level, under conditions that heretofore have never been thought favorable to the taking of a successful moving picture. As the pictures were taken at the rate of 16 per second, with a maximum exposure of 1-32 part of a second for each picture on the roll, any photographer will appreciate the difficulties that were surmounted. Photographers who have been in the Pennsylvania lower level will marvel at the fine view of the train emptying passengers at the subway station. A bright comedy story is woven about the great railroad station, a fast railroad train, a bachelor, and a baby, all under the title of "Brother Bob's Baby." Thanhouser releases it Friday, December 8.

Enlargements from Film Views Made in Interior of Pennsylvania Station, New York, by Natural Light.

NEW MACHINE TABLE.

The Lavezzi Machine Works, of Chicago, whose advertisement may be seen in the Moving Picture World, are putting another improvement on the market in the form of a strong table, designed and built to eliminate all vibration in the machine due to a faulty support. Mr. Lavezzi says that this table is built to order; it is only necessary to give the height in inches of old machine baseboard to obtain one for trial. Any movement of the picture on the screen, which is due to table vibration, may be overcome by its use. In the illustration in their advertisement the machine baseboard is left off to show construction of the table; it is of course furnished with each table.

GORDON SACKVILLE.

Mr. Gordon Sackville, an actor and photoplayer of note, has joined the forces of the Nestor Company and will shortly be seen in the Monday releases of that concern. Mr. Sackville has had a long and successful dramatic experience, having been for many years "character leads" with the late Richard Mansfield, who deemed him worthy of his closest friendship and admired his versatility. He has also played leading parts with the "Fritzi Scheff Opera Company," Shuberts' "Chinese Honeymoon Company," and at the Hippodrome, New York City. As "Mr. Brown," in the original "Buster Brown Company," he made a decided hit. His motion pictures experience dates back to 1904, having worked chiefly in the Edison Company. In the Rex initial release, "A Heroine of '76," he was the stately and imposing Washington.

Mr. Gordon Sackville.

Excelling in character and heavy leads, Mr. Sackville's great versatility enables him to play any role, however difficult it may be. He is a war veteran, having served nine months during the Spanish-American War as first sergeant in Company H, 47th Regiment Regular Volunteers. He possesses a magnificent physique and is uncommonly handsome.

HALLBERG D. C. ECONOMIZERS IN DEMAND.

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports a gratifying increase in the sale of the Hallberg Direct Current Economizers for all voltages. Among recent sales is one to R. S. Lind, Belize, British Honduras, of a 500-volt Hallberg Direct Current Economizer; also a 220-volt Hallberg Direct Current Economizer for the Silk City Amusement Company's new theater in Paterson, N. J. There are now five Hallberg 220-volt Direct Current Economizers in operation in Paterson.

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY MOVES.

The Champion Film Company announces that it will move from its present quarters at 12 East 15th Street, New York, to 145 West 45th Street, the Exchange Building. Commodious offices have been secured in that modern building and Mr. Dintenfass expects to have everything in shipshape soon.

ZIGOMAR! See page 929

"THE FLASH IN THE NIGHT" (Kalem).

A pretty girl doing a clever stunt is the central idea of this picture. Gladys is the daughter of a business man and is in love with Tom, an engineer on the railroad. They meet and drop into the train despatcher's office where Mary, the operator, is taking a message. The tickety tick tick of the receiver suggests to the lovers that they can communicate with each other by the Morse code: Tom, by blowing his whistle, and Gladys by flashing an electric light in the window of her home when Tom's engine happens by at night. Get the idea?

Now, Glady's father has a bookkeeper. One day when Gladys happens in her father's office she sees the bookkeeper slip a letter in his pocket and suspects that he is not on the level. She tells her father about it and that sets the old gentleman to thinking. By the time he gets ready to go home that evening his suspicions are aroused to the point that leads him to take one of the books and a letter file home with him. That night while he is working on the books and apparently finding things not quite right, the crooked clerk lures him away from the house by a call on the 'phone and then breaks into the house after the old man leaves, with a determination to get the book and destroy the evidence of his crookedness.

Scene from "The Flash in the Night" (Kalem).

While the clerk is searching about downstairs, Gladys is in her chamber waiting for a signal from Tom. It comes and she goes down stairs to answer by flashing the electric light at the window and stumbles upon the clerk searching for the book. The clerk attempts to explain his presence, but Gladys suspects him and starts for the telephone to call her father, when the clerk tears it from her hands and breaks the connections. Then he takes the broken cords and ties Gladys to a chair and goes on hunting for the book.

Gladys realizes that Tom is waiting for her answer to his call, so she manages to get to the electrolier on the table and takes the shade off with her teeth; then she grasps the switch cord of the lamp by her teeth and flashes the word "help" to her lover. Tom has been waiting at his engine for the signal, and when he gets the word "help" he gets a trainman to join him and hustles over to the house to see what's up. They are in time to catch the clerk and hold him till Gladys's father returns. By this time Tom is holding Gladys, who is inclined to faint from the excitement of the occasion, and father quietly smiles his approval as the picture ends.

SOME GOOD NESTOR PICTURES COMING.

"Only an Iceman" is the title of a comedy by the Nestor Company that will afford a few wholesome laughs. A young society man gets dead tired of the unbroken round of pleasure and seeks excitement. Seeing an advertisement in the want columns for an iceman, he applies and gets the job. While making the rounds he meets a very pretty girl in the kitchen of one of the homes on his route and immediately falls in love with her. The girl is not the regular cook, but is doing the work while Bridget is away. She rather likes the iceman and flirts with him, much to her mother's disgust. That night the new iceman loses his job, but his desire to see the young lady of the kitchen is so strong that he goes back next day and buys the ice wagon so that he can visit her again. On the occasion of his next visit the iceman makes violent love to the young cook and wins out when her mother appears and orders him out of the house. But the affair has gone too far and the iceman invites the mother and her daughter to visit him at his home to discuss an important matter, signing his proper name to the invitation. Of course the mother and the girl are agreeably surprised when they discover the identity of their host; but he makes plain the nature of the matter to be discussed and—mamma consents.

A Western picture, "In the Early Days," though taken in the East, has many good points in its favor. This reel winds up with a "Mutt and Jeff" comedy that is quite funny.

The first product of the Nestor Company made in California is scheduled under the title "The Law of the Range," for early release. It is a good photograph and shows some good riding and other very interesting scenes. It is entitled to a place along with the best of the many Western subjects being released these days.

Calendar of Independent Releases

MONDAY, DECEMBER 11th, 1911.

AMERICAN—The Man Hunt (Dramatic) 1000
CHAMPION—A Trained to the Sea (Dramatic) 950
COMET—The Ups and Downs of Rafferty (Comedy) ..
IMP—Why the Chalk Was Used (Dramatic) 1000
NESTOR—Only an Iceman (Comedy) .....

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 12th, 1911.

BISON—Bar Z's New Colt (Comedy) .....
ECLAIR—The Musician's Daughter (American Drama)
POWERS—The Little Chaperone (Comedy) .....
POWERS—Views of Genoa, Italy (Scenic) .....
THANHOUSER—The Lady from the Sea (Dramatic)..

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13th, 1911.

AMBROSIO—The Marquis of Lantenac (Dr.) ... .
AMBROSIO—The Launching of Two Italian Dreadnoughts (Naval) .....
CHAMPION—The Saving of Dan (Dramatic) 950
NESTOR—The Law of the Range (Dramatic) .....
RELIANCE—Love and Charity (Dramatic) .....
SOLAX—Fickle Bridget (Comedy) .....

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 14th, 1911.

AMERICAN—Santa Catalina, Magic Isle of the Pacific (Sc. Edu.) 1000
ECLAIR—Her One Day's Dream (Japanese Drama)...
IMP—The Little Stocking (Dramatic) 1000
REX—Logging Industry in the Northwest (Industrial)

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 15th, 1911.

BISON—The Foreman's Courage (Dramatic) ..
COMET—In Time for Dinner (Dramatic) .....
LUX—Bill and His Chum Tired of Married Life (Com.) 521
LUX—Mistaken for the Culprit (Dramatic) 457
SOLAX—The Little Kiddie Mine (Dramatic) .....
THANHOUSER—Deacon Dobbs (Comedy) ...

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16th, 1911.

GREAT NORTHERN—His First Monocle (Comedy) ..
GREAT NORTHERN—Greece (Scenic) .....
ITALA—An Up-to-Date Doctor (Comedy) .....
IMP—Billy's Scance (Comedy) 500
IMP—The Bungalow Burglars (Comedy) 500
NESTOR—In the Early Days (Comedy) .....
NESTOR—Mutt and Jeff Make the Feathers Fly (Com.)
POWERS—When Heart Wires Cross (Comedy-Drama)
RELIANCE—Just Smile (Comedy) .....
RELIANCE—The Playwright (Dramatic) .....

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 17th, 1911.

MAJESTIC—Little Red Riding Hood (Juvenile) .....
REPUBLIC—In the Days of the Six Nations (Hist. Dr.)

CHRISTMAS IS COMING
So Are Gem FILMS
They will be received as
A GIFT by any audience.

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 11th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—Saved from Himself (Dramatic) 999
KALEM—Molly Pitcher (Historical Drama) 1000
LUBIN—A Girlish Impulse (Comedy-Drama) 1000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 50 (Topical) 1000
SELIG—The Chief's Daughter (Dramatic) 500
SELIG—April Fool (Comedy) 500
VITAGRAPH—One Touch of Nature (Dramatic) ...1000

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 12th, 1911.

EDISON—Buckskin Jack, the Earl of Glenmore (Com.-Dr.) 1000
ESSANAY—The First Man (Comedy).....1000
GAUMONT—Heroism (Dramatic) 610
GAUMONT—Arabian Customs (Industrial) 366
C. G. P. C.—Youth versus Age (Dramatic) 795
C. G. P. C.—Small Trades in Malacca (Edu.) 200
SELIG—A Romance of the Rio Grande (Dr.) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Military Air Scout (Mil. Dr.).....1000

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13th, 1911.

EDISON—An International Heart Breaker (Com.) ... 700
EDISON—Eskimos in Labrador (Edu.) 300
ECLIPSE—The Tragedy of Old Age (Dr.) 798
ECLIPSE—Harbor of Marseilles, France (Scenic) 215
PATHE—The Flower Girl of Las Palmas (Am. Dr.) ... 990
KALEM—Norma from Norway (Dr.) 1000
LUBIN—Mr. and Mrs. Suspicious (Com.) 400
LUBIN—Quick! A Plumber (Com.) 600
VITAGRAPH—The Ventriloquist's Trunk (Com.) 1000

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 14th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—Taking His Medicine (Comedy) 673
BIOGRAPH—Her Pet (Com.) 323
ESSANAY—The Hack & Schmidt Bout (Com.) .....
ESSANAY—A Polished Burglar (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—The Substitute (Dr.) 1000
MELIES—The Better Man (Com.-Dr.) 1000
PATHE—An Episode of the Early Mormon Days (American Drama) 820
PATHE—The Magic Suit Case (Trick) 150
SELIG—George Warrington's Escape (Historical Dr.).1000

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 15th, 1911.

EDISON—Brockton Fair and Horse Show, Brockton, Mass., October 3rd to 6th, 1911 (Topical) 990
ESSANAY—A Goodfellow's Christmas Eve (Dr.)....1000
KALEM—Bill's Flute (W. Dr.) 1000
C. G. P. C.—In the Grip of Alcohol (2 reels) (Dr.) 2000
SELIG—Industries of the South and West (Edu.) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Love at Gloucester Port (Dr.) 1000

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16th, 1911.

EDISON—Stage Struck Lizzie (Com.) 650
EDISON—A Trip from Colorado Springs to Cripple Creek (Scenic) 350
ESSANAY—The Cowboy Coward (W. Dr.) 1000
GAUMONT—A Queen's Treachery, or the Betrayal of Charles VI of France (Hist. Dr.) 1000
LUBIN—When Innocence Was Wise (Com. Dr.) 1000
PATHE—A Mother's Remorse (Am. Dr.) 995
VITAGRAPH—The Sick Man from the East (Dr.)....1000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 18th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—As in a Looking Glass (Dramatic) .....
KALEM—He Who Laughs Last (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—Love Decides (Dr.) 1000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 51 (Topical) 1000
SELIG—Evangeline (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Vitagraph Monthly of Current Events (Topical) 1000

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 19th, 1911.

EDISON—Santa Claus and the Clubman (Dramatic) ..1000
ESSANAY—The Three Bears (Juvenile) 1000
GAUMONT—Through the Enemy's Lines (War Dr.) 985
C. G. P. C.—Princess Charming (Juvenile) .....
C. G. P. C.—Landscapes in Japan (Scenic) .....
SELIG—For His Pal's Sake (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Vanity Fair (Three Reels) (Dr.) ...3000

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 20th, 1911.

EDISON—The Sign of the Three Labels (Comedy) 1000
ECLIPSE—The Miracle (Dramatic) 1040
PATHE—The Fatal Posing (Am. Dr.) 1000
KALEM—The Flash in the Night (Dr.).....1000
LUBIN—Art versus Music (Com. Dr.) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Fires of Driftwood (Dramatic) 1000

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 21st, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—A Terrible Discovery (Dramatic) .....
ESSANAY—Winning an Heiress (Com. Dr.) 300
ESSANAY—The Foiling of Red Dugan (Dramatic) ... 700
LUBIN—Kiddies' Christmas (Two Reels, Xmas Dr.)..1800
MELIES—The Mission Father (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Dad's Smash-Up (Am. Dr.) 1000
SELIG—Brown of Harvard (Dramatic) 1000

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 22nd, 1911.

EDISON—How Sir Andrew Lost His Vote (Comedy).1000
ESSANAY—The Millionaire Barber (Comedy) 1000
KALEM—Between Father and Son (Dramatic) 1000
C. G. P. C.—Providential Bread (Dramatic) .....
C. G. P. C.—In Japan—Nara (Scenic) .....
SELIG—The Little Widow (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—A Reformed Santa Claus (Dramatic) .1000

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23rd, 1911.

EDISON—Pat Clancy's Adventure (Comedy) 1000
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Christmas Dinner (Dr.)..1000
GAUMONT—The Maid of Argos (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—The Sergeant's White Peril (Mil. Dr.) 1000
PATHE—Actor's Heart (Am. Dr.) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Old Doll (Dramatic) 1000

A. B. C. and all other makes of licensed
POSTERS
Largest and most complete stock in the country.
Vitagraph Posters, 10c
All other makes, 15c

FEATURE POSTERS
Molly Pitcher, Arrah-Na-Pogue, Lifeboat, Blackbeard, and all new licensed features.
3 Sheets, 30c
8 Sheets, 75c
Full Sheets, 15c

BACK NUMBERS
All brand new posters for subjects released from months to two years ago.
Vitagraphs, 5c
A.B.C. and other makes 10c

PHOTO PLAYERS
Ten of America's most popular M.P. Actors and Actresses.
Full Sheet POSTERS
25c each
Complete Set of 10 for $2.00

POSTER FRAMES
Handsomely lithographed in colors to fit 3-sheet board, with blank space in center for regular posters.
10 for $1.00
Every one different.

Send Money Order or New York Draft with order. No personal checks or C.O.D.

EXHIBITORS AD ERTISING AND SPECIALTY CO.
Arthur D. Jacobs, Pres. Ben Title, Sec'y and Treas.
105 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

WHAT WOULD YOU DO WITH THE DOGS?

Oakland, Cal., Nov. 8, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—I was waiting for a party today and dropped into a nickelodeon on Market Street, in San Francisco. The house and its appointments were the finest in the land, but the operator and the manager—well, I can't knock, for I am a crank myself, too.

The first picture, "Pathe's Weekly No. 41," being outdoor photography was clear and sharp, but a Lubin, "Out on Bail," and Sol Smith, "The Interference," were out of focus, poor and unsteady. The machine wobbled and jumped, but the lighting was good. Many in the audience were compelled to look at the floor or the ceiling to ease the eyestrain. I used to put a nickel in the candy box to get something to look at.

Now a question has come up in connection with my cause. If all of my audience haven't got dogs they have six "kids." The kids we dispose of at 2 for 5 cents, but the dogs are requested to remain outside, and there they are—a black and white coach, a collie, two curs, a rat terrier and several other kinds—crying on the lobby floor.

Up comes a lady and says, "What's the matter, doggies, won't they let you in?" She came nearly buying a ticket for all of them—but the question. Would you rent the store next door and hire a matron for the dogs or would you allow them a seat at 5 cents per head?

We've got 'em coming in automobiles now—three last Sunday.

My wife, the cashier, admitted a man, lady and child quite late, free the other evening and they saw two pictures (we run four reels). This happened to be their first time in the house. The next evening he bought three tickets, using a silver dollar, and forgot his change. When she called him back he said he was thinking of the night before. He's spent over a dollar in the house, now.

Now, about a voting contest I held some time ago. Prize, a $7 silver purse (cost wholesale $2.50). Cost of 8,000 votes, $8. Result, two girls about 16 were the favorite contestants and every kid in the neighborhood hung around the theater begging votes. Some sat inside and begged on the aisles. No matter how many we ejected they still begged votes.

Jealousy arose between the two girls, and the weaker one accused us of giving more votes to the other, as she bought several $1 lot of tickets on 10 vote nights.

We lost at least $5 on the proposition and had the trouble and worry.

A 50-cent piece of china (wholesale) brings in more business than anything we've found yet, or advance billing of a certain good picture for a certain night. More some other time. Respectfully,

"ARC."

ANOTHER FINE OPERATOR.

Nov. 10, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir—Have been reading letters written you in the Moving Picture World (which I have taken for years) under the heading of "Letters to the Editor" in regard to good operators. And I will say I have been in the picture field for 9 years or more and have seen the work of lots of good operators and bad ones, too.

While going through the fast little town of Muncie, Ind., the other day, I was in a number of good picture shows, but particularly the Lyric (which, by the way, was running Selig's "The Two Orphans," a cracking good picture). The little playhouse was packed to the doors. But it is not the house I am boasting of, but it is their operator. I never witnessed better work in my life, and I have seen a few. He was right there with everything. He used a common muslin screen, coated over with alabastine or some other kind of whiting, and his picture was as bright as a new dollar in a mud hole and always in frame.

One feature that I took particular notice to, was he always started his reel of "in frame." I have been in places where the operator pulls over his lamphouse and starts off with a bad light and the picture half and half maybe all through the title. But not so with this operator, and I have seen union and non-union operators do it, too. Now, how are the people going to know the name of the picture when it is run like that, and lots of times you have to know the name of the picture to catch the meaning of it. I sat two shows just to see if he would keep up the "good work," but the "good work" went on just the same, never a hitch, always in focus, always in frame and always a fine light.

Well, I left for Chicago that night and thought no more about it. But then, today, while coming back down on my way back to the South I stopped off in Muncie again, as I had some more business in the town that had to be looked after and so I stopped in the Lyric again and the same good old "never jump, never dark, never flicker" picture was on the screen. I inquired the operator's name and found it was Richard Addison, better known as Red, the operator (owing to the color of his hair); that he had been operating for over seven years; that he had been with the Lyric for two years of that time and that there was no chance of him leaving if the manager can prevent.

I wish you would print this in your next issue of the World, for I believe in boosting any one that is trying to do the right thing, and it may help other operators to pay more attention to the class of work they put up.

Hoping the Moving Picture World will continue on its successful way and Mr. Addison will keep up his good work, and pardon me for writing this, I beg to remain, yours truly,

ANOTHER OLD TIMER.

THE MOVING PICTURE SHOW AS A PROTECTION AGAINST THE SALOON.

To the Editor of the Baltimore Sun:

Sir—Kindly afford me space in your paper to answer "A Working Woman's" letter in Saturday's Sun.

She seems unable to understand why quite a number of men attend the moving picture shows during the day, "while so many women and girls are laboring through long hours for daily bread," and "hopes some kind masculine reader will enlighten her." It is a pleasure for me to do so, and I hope she will see my reply in The Sun.

In all cities there is a large body of unemployed men and boys, brought about by many causes. Not a great many years ago all the stores in the shopping district [illegible] now you see [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

SONG SLIDE RELEASES.

A. L. Simpson, Inc.

"My Same Pal"—Pub. by Song Writers' Music Pub. Co.
"Dear Old Sally"—Pub. by Kendis & Paley.
"The Tale That the Roses Told"—Pub. by F. B. Haviland.
"I Fondly Dream, Dear One of You"—Pub. by Simpson.
"Bamboo Land"—Pub. by J. H. Aufderheide & Co., Indianapolis, Ind.
"Oh! You Little Rascal"—Pub. by Geo. N. Meyer Music Co.

Levi Co.

"Kiss Me Again"—Pub. by Shapiro Music Pub. Co.
"Go Hide Your Face in the Corner; I'm Ashamed of You"—Pub. by Shapiro Music Pub. Co.
"That Baboon Baby Dance"—Pub. by Shapiro.
"It's Lonesome on Broadway"—Pub. by Shapiro.

Excelsior Slide Co.

"Light Up Your Face with a Smile"—Pub. by Gus Edwards Company.
"Smile Awhile"—Pub. by Head Music Pub. Co.
"Snowtime, Deary"—Pub. by Blood-Koehler Co.
"Baby Is Calling"—Pub. by J. W. Wilcockson Co., Hammond, Ind.
"Cindy"—Pub. by Kendis & Paley, New York.

DeWitt C. Wheeler.

"Steeple Jack"—Pub. by M. Witmark & Sons.
"When I Carved Your Name on the Old Oak Tree"—Pub. by M. Witmark & Sons.
"Come Kiss the Blarney, Mary Darling"—Pub. by M. Witmark & Sons.
"Honest Injun"—Pub. by Remick & Co.
"The Old Love Lingers Still"—Pub. by Up-to-Date Music Co. of Indianapolis, Ind.
"Snowtime"—Pub. by M. Witmark & Sons.

Niagara Slide Company.

"If I Knew"—Pub. by Burdick.
"Knight of the Road"—Pub. by Burdick.

Scott & Van Altena.

"In Dear Old Ireland Where the River Kenmare Flows"—Pub. by H. Rossiter.
"Nobody Bothers About Me."
"Chicken Rag"—Pub. by J. F. Helf.
"Take Me Back to My Old Home Town"—Pub. by Longbake & Edwards.
"Come Over Joe"—Pub. by J. T. Brennen.
"My Bombay Maid"—Pub. by F. B. Haviland.
"She Never Was In Ireland, But She's Irish Just the Same"—Pub. by F. B. Haviland.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY

"Das Lichtbild-Theater"

The most up-to-date and most comprehensive Journal of the Cinematograph Industry in Germany.

Editor-Proprietor: LUDWIG BRAUNER

BERLIN SW 68. MARKGRAFENSTRASSE 92/93.

Annual subscription abroad, $3.00. Write for specimen copy.

THE SPIEGEL MOTION SLIDE cannot be excelled for advertising efficiency.

It moves with lifelike action.

They are being successfully used in thousands of theaters in the U. S. and foreign countries.

It makes your advertisements attractive and interesting.

THE AMERICAN MOTION SLIDE COMPANY

611 First National Bank Building - CHICAGO, ILL.

IT has taken 3000 years for men to learn how to double the work of a bricklayer. Don't let it take you that long to discover our excellent slide service.

Chicago Song Slide Exchange

6th Floor, Powers Building

N. E. Cor. Monroe St. and Wabash Ave.

Dept. I Chicago, Ill.

The Slides that Please the Eyes

SCOTT & VAN ALTENA

Special Slides for Scientific Advertising Purposes

59 Pearl Street New York City

In answering advertisements kindly mention The Moving Picture World.

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing

Why don't you send it to us?

We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

We buy second hand machines.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

Simpson's Celebrated Slides

THE BEST MADE

A. L. SIMPSON, Inc.

113 W. 132nd St., New York

"We recommend to the chemical men in the Moving Picture trade who are having difficulty in securing good negative films, the following formula for tank development:

Distilled Water.....60 gals.
Sodium Sulphite Anhyd.....½ lb
Sodium Carbonate " .....2 lbs.
Agfa Glycin.....½ lb.

Time 20 mins., temperature 70°. Thoroughly wash the film after development before placing in the fixing bath.

The above formula will be found to give very brilliant negatives, and will entirely overcome any danger of fog." Yours very truly,

Berlin Aniline Works, 213-215 Water St., N. Y. City

Correspondence

LOUISVILLE.

A. M. Musselman, until recently treasurer of the Princess Amusement Company, has resigned that position and left Louisville for Fargo, N. D. Mr. Musselman will engage in the theatrical business in that city. He is succeeded as treasurer of the Princess Amusement Company by J. F. Mayer. Mr. Mayer has already taken hold of the position. He has had several years experience.

In spite of all efforts, the new Majestic Theater was not open to the public on Thanksgiving day, as anticipated. L. J. Dittmar, proprietor of the house, stated that another week will see the best theater ready for business. An exterior view of the place shows it to be one of the handsomest in Louisville. The interior decorations will cost hundreds of dollars, and when completed, it should compare favorably with any theater in the city, photoplay or legitimate.

Miss Martha Russell, leading woman of the Essanay Film Exchange was at the Novelty Theater for two days preceding Thanksgiving. A play in which she was pictured was staged during her stay, and drew packed houses. Miss Russell explained the methods of making the pictures to the audiences at each performance. The regular price of ten cents prevailed, and the public flocked to the new house in droves. A noticeable feature was the number of women patrons who attended the plays during her engagement.

M. Switow, owner of the Novelty and other showhouses, has installed a handsome soda fountain in the building immediately adjoining the Novelty. It is one of the most costly in Louisville, Circassian walnut fittings being a feature. A delicatessen annex has been arranged, and hot drinks of all kinds will appeal to the pedestrian during the cold winter months. Mr. Switow was formerly in the confectionery business and is a student of the public taste.

C. E. Hampson, formerly manager of the Crystal Theater, has gone over to the Novelty. It is understood that Mr. Hampson is slated for the job of president of a new film exchange, which may be started about the first of the new year. M. Switow is said to be the promoter of the new exchange. Mr. Switow owns a half dozen houses in Louisville, and is in a position to make a success of the venture if he decides definitely to embark on it. Mr. Hampson is his right hand man, and will have direct charge of the new enterprise if it is said. The name and other details have not yet been decided.

Manager Jacobstein, of the Crystal Theater, of Louisville, said that business with his house was at its height. Standing room only is the order of the day, and additional seating capacity is absolutely necessary. The Falls City Amusement Company, which owns the place, realizes this, and is planning with that end in view. The first run pictures which are shown at the Crystal have made a decided hit and larger quarters would be extremely welcome with the public.

The addition of "Cy" Reinhardt, formerly of Al G. Fields' minstrels, to the staff of the Orpheum, has boomed an already excellent business, and the house has had its seating capacity tested every night. Reinhardt has an excellent voice and his rendition of his famous yodel brings encores at every performance. He is recognized as one of the best baritones in the country and could secure excellent positions with almost any company he wished. He is a Louisville man, however, and prefers to stay in his home town.

By a mutual agreement between the representatives of the Building Trades Council, the Carpenters' Union, and the Novelty Theater, the latter has agreed to use only union men in the future, and to give $500 to any designated charity. The management of the Novelty declared that its policy has always been to live in good terms with organized labor and that it is their firm intention to conduct their business along this line in the future. The Little Sisters of the Poor and the Jewish Charities were made the recipients of $250 each, and the Carpenters' Union No. 64 and Louisville Trades Council announced that the struggle between the building tradesmen and the Novelty had come to an end by amicable adjustment, and that the theater is entitled to the consideration and patronage of all.

T. P. Taylor, owner of a chain of drug stores in Louisville, who recently purchased the old Hast Building, on Fourth Street, near Chestnut, for the purpose of converting it into a moving picture show, has been granted a permit to raze the building. The new structure will cost about $40,000 and will be one of the most modern in Louisville. M. Switow will lease the building when it is completed. Brinton B. Davis has practically completed the plans.

Woodson Moss and Henry H. Phillips, of Winchester, Ky., have returned to that place from Cincinnati, after purchasing modern equipment for the moving picture show, which they will open [illegible] trip by D. F. Seaton an experienced picture man.

L. C. Beatty, assistant manager of the Hippodrome Theater in Lexington, Ky., will leave early for a tour South, out of Kentucky in charge of a theater's [illegible] moving picture outfit. After the tour, Mr. Beatty will go to Huntington, W. Va., where he will take charge of the Hippodrome there.

After a month's experience, D. L. Bragg of Providence, Ky., has given up the task of running a moving picture outfit and will return to his home in Indiana.

Although many of the things connected with the Novelty Theater, of Louisville, live up to the name of the house, two people who attract the most attention are W. J. Moore, and A. J. Wagner. Both are ticket-takers. The novelty, however, is in the heights of the pair. Wagner is exactly seven feet one inch in stature, while his partner stands four feet from the ground. The size of the former is accentuated by a high hat and other articles of clothing, while the opposite is true of the little fellow. Standing together in the lobby of the theater, they are a mirth-provoking sight, and both are stellar attractions in Louisville moving picture circles.

The Crown Theater, at Seventh and Magnolia Streets, has just been completed and put into operation. It caters both to white and colored patrons, a feature of the structure being a gallery for the blacks. Frank McGrath and Bernie McDevitt are the proprietors of the theater, and their experiment is netting them good results.

The Hast Building, until recently an office structure, has been vacated by its tenants, and will soon be converted into a moving picture theater. T. P. Taylor, proprietor of several drug stores in Louisville, is the owner of the property, having recently purchased it as an investment. He has leased it to M. Switow, who already owns several buildings devoted to the photoplay. Brinton B. Davis, a local architect, has been engaged to work out the plans. Alterations will soon be begun. It is thought that the theater will be ready for business by March 1.

The Louisville Photoplay Association, formed to protect the interest of proprietors of moving picture houses, has elected officers, after filing articles of incorporation. L. J. Dittmar, president of the Royal Amusement Company, was chosen as president of the Association. Other officers are: M. Switow, first vice-president; Irvin Simon, second vice-president; Joe Steurle, secretary, and Max L. Simon, treasurer. The five officers will also serve as the Board of Directors. Meetings will be held once a month, or at the call of the president, at Hopkins' Theater.

A new ventilating system has just been completed at Hopkins' at a cost of $600. The house is now one of the most modern in the city as far as equipment and comfort are concerned.

Work on the new Majestic is being rushed and the theater should be ready by Thanksgiving Day, as anticipated. It will seat 1,200, and is of the most modern construction.

The Ruby Theater, at 914 West Walnut Street, suffered a $1,000 loss by fire recently. The origin of the fire is unknown. The Ruby is the third Negro theater to suffer a fire loss within the last month.

The Princess Company, organized to conduct a vaudeville and motion picture show in La Grange, Ky., staged its first performance recently. Performances will be given four times each week, with several matinees. The equipment of the theater [illegible] in La Grange, Ky., is to have a new theater [illegible] early in the new year, costing [illegible]. The [illegible] Theatrical Company. [illegible] Madison Avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, on which it now is leased, but [illegible] will be removed to the new location, and [illegible] will be completed at an estimated cost of [illegible]. The [illegible] Company now has [illegible] Hamilton, Lexington and Louisville.

Winchester, Ky., is the latest town to annex the services of electric lighted posters, when the two local Woodson Moss and Henry H. Phillips have leased quarters in the Hinkston Building and will open the doors to the public about December 1. The proprietors of the enterprise have been in Cincinnati, where the necessary paraphernalia was purchased. D. F. Seaton, a Winchester man who, has had experience in the business, accompanied them.

The old Munson Hotel Building in Owenton, Ky., has been converted into a theater and photoplays will be presented three nights in the week. E. L. Wilson is managing the enterprise. The program will be changed at each performance, and the best seats will be offered.

Faithful copies of the state laws were sent out into the different parts of the state on blanks for votes for the Republican party, but opposite moving picture outfits speakers also. The outfits were so equipped that they were able to give both afternoon and night performances going from one town to the other as soon as their performance was over. They were equipped with gas tanks and operating power, so that they were able to show at any place and at any time.

[illegible] warrants were sworn out recently by the State Labor Department against the Broadway Theater Company, the Empress Theater Company, and the Idle Hour Theater Company, all of this city. The charge was that all of these shows allowed a child under sixteen years of age to work after 7.00 p. m. As yet no action has been taken in the matter, but it is thought that it will be decided in a short time. Warrants were also sworn out for Novelty and Majestic Theaters for not having a copy of the child labor laws posted in a conspicuous place in the theater. Two other "legitimate" theaters are also under the same charge.

Wise and Arnett opened a new show at Midway, Ky., and it is reported that they are having very good crowds. Arrangements have been made with one of the principal circuits, so that they will be able to furnish the best of pictures for their patrons.

It is rumored that a new show will be started in a part of the old Phoenix Hotel, at Lexington, Ky., and bids have been asked on the work, but nothing definite has been done as yet. It is said that the directors intend to remodel the old café and make it one of the most up-to-date shows in the city.

Taylor & Brown Amusement Company, recently opened their new show at Middlesboro, Ky., under the style of the Amuzu Theater. The place is thoroughly equipped with every device for the operation of an up-to-date show.

The Crescent Amusement Company opened up their second show at Bowling Green, Ky., under the name of the Elite. It is said that this show is better equipped than the Columbia, and the crowds which have been experienced during the opening have proven that the house will be more popular than any other in the city.

The Novelty Theater, which only recently threw open its doors to [illegible] has [illegible] set at the start. The [illegible] of its arrangements have been the subject of much favorable comment, and it has already gained a warm spot in the heart of the public.

The Casino, which gets two first run films from the Independent Film Service, is also as popular as ever. While the house is not as large as some others, the excellence of its service assures heavy patronage.

The Pastime Amusement Company has filed an application with Building Inspector B. J. Tilford, for a permit to erect a motion picture show at Eighteenth and Gallagher Streets. The structure will be constructed of brick, steel and concrete, and will cost $8,000, it is estimated. The Pastime Company has increased its capital stock to $10,000. The shares are valued at $50 each. The amended articles of incorporation were signed by H. B. Struby, Gus Giebel, Joseph Seiler and John Moeller.

Michael Switow, proprietor of the new Dream Theater, with Jacob Turvel, and Harry Elliott, were made defendants in a $2,000 damage suit filed by Herman McDougal in the Clark Circuit Court recently. The ground of complaint is, injuries received by McDougal through the collapse of a scaffold which he was employed upon the building, resulting in the loss of a leg. Switow carried an employers' liability policy.

Warden E. Mudd, of the Kentucky State Penitentiary, at Frankfort, Ky., has ordered a moving picture machine, and contracted for the delivery of from four to eight reels every Sunday. The machine will be installed in the chapel of the prison, which is nearly completed, and shows will be given regularly. Col. Mudd's idea is to give the convicts something to work for, only the well-behaved ones being allowed to see the show. Wild West pictures, mold ups, and similar films will, of course, be tabooed.

Only persons under twenty-one were barred from entries on a chubby, blue-eyed baby of unannounced gender which was recently raffled off at a moving picture show at Morganfield, Ky. The baby was secured from the orphanage here, and signs announcing the contest tacked up for a radius of twenty-five miles. The holder of the lucky ticket was declared foster parent on the spot. The ticket office was swamped with applications for tickets.

The College Theater, of Russellville, opened for business recently. The new house is located in the Auditorium Building and is modern throughout. Messrs. Pool and Croft are the promoters of the theater, which has had liberal patronage since its inauguration.

A moving picture show, as yet unnamed, opened in Hazel Green, Ky., recently. J. Taylor Day, a prominent citizen of that town, will back the new enterprise. A dynamo to furnish light and power for an electric piano has been purchased.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

The high class of pictures from an educational standpoint shown in Champaign was commented on by Dr. William Hartford before the Social Service Club, at Champaign, Ill., but he said that something should be done to have the picture houses better ventilated.

H. O. Talley, manager of the opera house at Carlinville, Ill., will erect an airdome on East Main Street, that city, to be occupied next spring. The building, which will have a sliding top, will have a seating capacity of 1,400. The airdome will be put up by the Manchester Amusement Company, of St. Louis. High class pictures and vaudeville will be offered.

Piano dealers in central Illinois were anxious to have Clyde Martin use their instruments in demonstrating the use of sound effects in photoplay houses.

H. H. Johnson, proprietor of the Lyric Theater at Champaign, Ill., entertained grade school children and teachers at a free matinee to show the educational value of moving pictures. Appropriate subjects were selected.

By a vote of six to four, the city council at Sterling, Ill., repealed that part of the amusement ordinance that prohibited the operation of moving picture shows and playhouses in the city on Sunday.

The Gem Moving Picture Show, Beardstown, Ill., devoted one night's receipts to tornado sufferers of Virginia, Ill., and nearby towns.

J. Jolly Jones has severed connections with the Crystal and Orpheum theaters, at Waterloo, Iowa, and taken over the lease of the Majestic, in that city.

The American Film Renewing Company, of Chicago, Ill., has changed its name to the Builders Bond Company.

The Ottawa Photoplay Company, of Ottawa, Ill., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $6,000 to operate amusement houses. The incorporators are G. K. Robinson, K. Gerdes and F. H. Tichenor.

Mrs. Gretchen K. Robinson, of Peoria, is one of the heaviest stockholders in the new Ottawa Photoplay Company. Mrs. Robinson is interested in Peoria theaters.

The Mozart Amusement Company, of Chicago, Ill., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $900, to do general amusement and theatrical business. The incorporators are Condit Voorhees, John H. O'Connor and Ingvall N. Herreid.

Joseph Odenthal is remodeling Music Hall in Island Avenue, Batavia, Ill., which will be occupied by the new Odeon Theater.

The International Harvester Company recently furnished its 4,000 foot picture, "Romance of the Reaper," for a public school entertainment at Oakwood, Ill.

A new opera house will be built on the site of the Wilson Theater, which recently was destroyed by fire at Mason City, Iowa.

An ordinance has been passed in Peoria, Ill., which calls for an annual license fee of $100 for theaters with a seating capacity of 400 and under, and $150 for houses with a capacity of 800 and under.

G. M. Luttrell, proprietor of the Majestic, East State Street, Jacksonville, Ill., has installed a Regina mandolin orchestrion.

The remodeled Majestic, at Lincoln, Ill., will be a ten-cent house, giving some vaudeville in addition to pictures. A new operating room has been built.

A Quincy, Ill., paper says that a Mr. Byrnes, representing the Chicago concern that manufactures motion picture paraphernalia, has been looking over factory sites in that city, with a view of erecting a branch store.

Miss Irene Newton, who formerly sang in the Savoy Theater, Quincy, Ill., is now singing in the moving picture show at Pittsfield, Ill.

The Star Theater, at Watseka, Ill., recently announced a baby show contest.

Because the city council at Sterling, Ill., recently repealed that part of the ordinance which prohibited Sunday moving picture shows and other performances, the ministers of the city have arranged for a four weeks' revival service to counteract its effects. It was declared that the city council passed the measure because several hundred people were going to Dixon every Sunday night to witness performances in that city.

Rev. Father M. J. Dowling, pastor of St. Aloysius Catholic Church, of Kansas City, Mo., has established a motion picture theater in the hall of the parochial school and proposes to give shows each Monday and Thursday night.

J. J. Barnes has purchased the Star Theater, at Henry, Ill., from J. K. O'Neil. Mr. Barnes will be assisted in the management by W. E. Fenwick, who has been connecter with the place for seven years. An electric organ will be installed. Mr. O'Neil will devote his time to his moving picture house in Chicago.

"Why is it," a Springfield, Ill., resident who does no more than pass by moving picture houses, asks "that every time there is a convention or big public gathering in Springfield the moving picture theaters charge ten cents and announce a special?" The implied charge against Springfield managers is not justified. It is true that nearly every convention, and there are many in Springfield, generally finds one or more specials and a ten-cent admission, but it is hard to find a dissatisfied patron among the visitors. This condition obtains too, because the capital city men are beginning to appreciate the possibilities of two and three reel releases. There was a time when managers were knifing each other in an endeavor to see who could give the biggest show for a nickel, but this is ended and all, especially the Licensed houses, are endeavoring to give quality, not quantity. H. T. Loper's Lyric on November 22 featured "Auld Lang Syne," and had capacity houses at double admission.

W. W. Watts, of the Vaudette, on November 23 gave the three reels of the "Colleen Bawn" in addition to its regular show, making a wonderful program for a dime. As a result he got more advertising for his house than he could from a month of regular reels at five cents. Patrons here were especially pleased with the piano accompaniment of the films. The same week the Royal, an Independent house, played up "Custer's Last Stand."

The "Colleen Bawn" special gave Illinois managers an opportunity to display some enterprise in their musical programs. The Orpheum, at Ottawa, Ill., had Gus A. Bauchle, a meritorious yodler, and Scott's Theater, Jacksonville, Ill., offered a harp solo, by Mrs. Mazie Brooks Mallory.

The Drexel Amusement Company, of Chicago, Ill., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2,400 to operate theaters and other places of amusement. The incorporators are William Bartholomae, Frederick Bartholomae and Herman T. White.

J. P. Carmichael will build a new theater in Dows, Iowa.

R. P. Hannahan has installed a pipe organ in his picture show at Farmer City, Ill. Mr. Hannahan also conducts a theater at Leroy, Ill.

Fred Stelzer, of McCook, Neb., recently was in Lincoln, Ill., with a view of opening a film exchange there, according to papers of that city.

F. N. Parsons, manager of the X-Ray Theater, at Lincoln, Ill., has opened a moving picture show at Delavan, Ill. Delavan again has two photoplay houses.

Two emergency reels of pictures were destroyed when fire damaged the Main Street Theater, at Bloomington, Ill., November 28, it is reported. Total damage to the theater was estimated at about $1,000.

O. T. Crawford, of St. Louis, has purchased from the Easton-Union Amusement Company in that city a lot on Easton Avenue, which will be occupied by a new theater. Mr. Crawford and others have filed articles of incorporation for the Mikado Theater Company with a capital stock of $45,000. The other incorporators are James Hagerman, Jr., and W. C. Coss.

Al Yaeger, of Freeport, Ill., will have charge of a new five-cent picture house, opened in the Gettings block, South Jackson Street, Monroe, Wis.

Manager Yearwood, of the Grand Opera House, at Mt. Vernon, Ill., put on a Sunday moving picture show. His license was revoked by the mayor on Monday, and on Tuesday, after a consultation the city executive issued the showhouse a new permit. No more Sunday shows will be run, it is said, however. Decatur, Ill., is having a test case of the same kind. Manager Ronan, of the Powers, was arrested for giving a Sunday show, in which moving pictures were made the feature.

Freeport, Ill., managers are said to have posted notices that the patronage of negroes is not desired.

The States Theater Company, of East St. Louis, Ill., has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $1,500, to conduct theater, vaudeville and moving picture business. The incorporators are: William F. Zurwelle, William H. Becker and Raynold B. Hendricks.

The Stockholm Amusement Company, of Chicago, has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $8,000, to operate a moving picture show. The incorporators are: J. M. Delaney, Robert W. Delaney and A. L. Heald.

The Garden Theater Company, of Kansas City, Mo., has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $20,000. The incorporators are: E. P. Churchill, H. N. Churchill and M. H. Graham.

Ernest Bouillet and Dennis Laughlin, of Elwood, Ind., have purchased the Princess Theater from Charles Mahan and Allen Mason.

The Imperial Theater Company, of St. Louis, has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $2,000. The incorporators are: Louis A. Cella, John H. Halvin and Joseph Marks.

J. R. Yeagle and Harry A. Barnes have purchased the Corner Theater, at Decatur, Ill., from the New York Amusement Company.

A theater fire without a panic is said to have ocurred at the Cozy Theater, in Anderson, Ind., recently. One hundred people, who were in the building at the time, filed out quietly. The damage was estimated at $1,000.

Herbert Bell is operator at the Reddish Theater, in Jerseyville, Ill., which had its opening November 18. Miss Effie Bell is pianist.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Richardson, of Jacksonville, Ill., have opened a moving picture show in the Grand Opera House at Bluffs, Ill.

George C. Martin has been placed in charge as acting manager of the Mirror moving picture theater at Moline, Ill. The Moline Amusement Company, which controls the house, has elected officers as follows: President, W. J. Talty; vice-president and treasurer, L. K. Cleaveland, and secretary, T. L. Stanley.

The Empire Theater, at Lincoln, Ill., has been remodeled and refurnished, and was reopened November 18. Blossom Bunn is the piano player and Clarence Parke drummer.

Arthur J. Fitzsimmons, former councilman of St. Louis, represented the moving picture theater owners at a meeting of the city council, when the subject of a proposed increase in the license tax was debated. He declared that property values in the vicinity of the photoplay houses had been increased thereby and that the raise was unjust.

Paul Le Marquarnd, president of the Starland Theater Circuit of Canada, is said to have announced that the company will invade the twin cities, Minneapolis and St. Paul. A thirty-year lease is said to have been made for a site at Eighth and Wabash Streets, St. Paul, where $30,000 in remodeling will give an unusually handsome photoplay house. The Minneapolis end will not be ready so soon. Duluth may also be invaded.

F. H. M.

CINCINNATI.

An effort is being made by the Moving Picture Operators' Union of Cincinnati, Ohio, to introduce an ordinance in the city council providing for the amendment of the present code regulating the size of machine booths. They wish to have the present enclosures enlarged in all the Cincinnati theaters. The proprietors and managers of the houses are naturally opposing the same, the latest action taken being the appointing of an investigating committee to look into the local conditions and report to the council at a meeting in the near future.

According to Thomas Nolan, proprietor of the Pastime Theater, on West Fifth Avenue, a number of Cincinnati picture exhibitors will be compelled to abandon their present places of business if the proposed ordinance should go through council. He declares that the operators have asked that the law require booths to be enlarged to eight feet square and seven feet high, which, if enforced against owners, would find many of them unable to comply, because the ceilings of their rooms are not of sufficient height or there is some other building structural difficulty.

After a thorough investigation of the local picture houses, following the panic scare in a West Virginia town recently, the Cincinnati Building Inspector pronounced all of the theaters safe, being well provided with exits, none on second floors, and the machine booths well fireproofed.

NEW ENGLAND.

The Cumings Theater, Fitchburg, Mass., had an "almost panic," when a small fire started there. The cool courage and resourcefulness of Manager H. F. Jackson, prevented any trouble. The fire was put out, and the entire audience kept unaware of the incident.

Henry Redmond, who has been missing from the Premier Theater, Boston, since last October,, and who is under indictment for the alleged larceny of $550.00 from the Premier, returned to Boston November 13, and gave himself up. Redmond was employed by the Premier as assistant manager, and, it is stated, jumped to New York with $550. He was arrested and held on $1,000 bail.

On November 23, Paragon Park, at Nantasket Beach, Boston, was swept by fire. Paragon Park is one of the foremost outdoor amusement resorts in New England. Wolf & Walker's photoplay theater was leveled to the ground, with almost the entire park., Messrs. Wolf & Walker expect to rebuild for the coming season.

A new photoplay house is promised for Danvers, Mass., as Mr. L. Brown is about to build on High Street. The house will seat 550, and it is expected, will be ready by January , 1912.

Dante's Inferno played Poli's Theater, Meriden, Conn., and was very well received on each of the two days' stay. The reels are meeting with great success in New England.

Mr. R. B. Royce has been appointed manager of Poli's Theater, Meriden, Conn., succeeding Thomas Kirby. Manager Kirby has been transferred to Poli's Bridgeport, Conn., Theater.

The Loomer Opera House, Willimantic, Conn., had excellent business during the stay of Dante's Inferno.

New Haven, Conn., will soon have another moving picture theater, if the present plans of Messrs. Norton and Gentile are not changed. The house will be centrally located on Chapel Street.

Buffalo Jones's American Reel

(INDEPENDENT)

BUFFALO JONES

CONQUEST of the ANIMAL KINGDOM

One that makes the red blood run cold

EVERYBODY has heard and read of "Buffalo Jones." He is known as the "King of Cowboys," the "Burbanks of the Animal Kingdom," the "Wizard of the Wilds."

The man without a gun, who followed Col. Roosevelt through Africa, roped and hog-tied every species of animals of that dark continent.

Sampson met the young lion and "Buffalo Jones" has met the old lion. Daniel was cast into the lion's den, but "Buffalo Jones" goes into their dens, climbs trees, ropes and ties them down for fun. And shows the proof in the no fake pictures. He also shows how he ropes grizzly bears and toys with them like kittens. Mighty buffalo bulls he ties down, and dehorns them; shows the fiercest combat ever witnessed; two monster buffalo bulls contesting for the supremacy of the herd. Bands of wild horses. Herds of Catalo, the new animal he has originated. Also the Persiarino and Gorisians, the new sheep and new goats. Also herds of wild elk, antelope and mountain sheep, the shyest of all animals. Deer and other animals on their natural environments.

Buffalo Jones Roping Grizzlies.

Desperate Buffalo Bull Fight.

Buffalo Jones was game warden of the Yellowstone Park for many years and recorded the most wonderful things ever heard of in moving pictures. Besides he has ranched his buffalo and all kinds of hybrid animals on the banks of the Grand Canyon in Arizona for many years, the wildest place in the United States, and the pictures obtained from these places are marvelous. People never tire of such pictures. They are all combined in one reel of 1,000 feet, and will be released Jan. 4th, 1912. A written lecture goes with each reel. Also thrilling advertising slides and posters. These are unquestionably the greatest pictures ever made. Just the thing for drawing new crowds to picture shows.

A pamphlet containing the lecture on application. All interested in moving pictures should send at once for one, especially lecturers.

WRITE AT ONCE TO C. J. JONES, Corner Broadway and 31st St. New York City

Phone, 4100 MADISON SQUARE

Reference: 1st National Bank, Las Vegas, N. M., or "Moving Picture World," New York City

Mr. Jones will supervise the sale and sending out of the reels himself and every reel will be inspected by him before going out.

Mr. C. O. Fuller, the Vitagraph representative, whose efforts among the New England exhibitors resulted in that big trip to New York as the guests of the Vitagraph Company, the story of which appeared in a recent issue, was presented with a watch by New England exhibitors, who felt that they wished to show Mr. Fuller that they appreciated his efforts. The subscription was started by Mr. R. D. Marson, manager of the General Film Company's Boston offices.

The new Washington Theater, Boston, has installed a five-piece orchestra, in addition to the regular show of licensed pictures and vaudeville. Manager Collier finds the innovation to be a distinct success.

The opening of Portland's new Masonic Building, Portland, Me., occurred November 20-25. A big Masonic fair was given, and vaudeville and pictures formed a big feature of the festivities.

T. L. Donahue, of Nantasket, Mass., is turning his garage into a photoplay house to seat 350. When the alterations are complete, Mr. Donahue will run his shows on Wednesday and Saturday nights. The program will be four reels of Licensed service, and illustrated songs.

The Olivet church, Springfield, Mass., was recently badly damaged by fire. The Gaiety Theater, State Street, offered the church free use of its auditorium on Sundays, and services are held regularly at the Gaiety. The kindness manifested by the Gaiety Theater will no doubt redound to the advantage of the box office, as the good deed will make friends for this house.

Mr. Charles Hodgdon, of the Princess Theater, Wakefield, Mass., is finding business to be too good. Accordingly, Mr. Hodgdon is enlarging his house, having bought the land in the rear of his theater for that purpose. The Princess is an excellent example of what the right man can do with a photoplay house, as the theater had proved to be a loser to the two concerns owning it before Mr. Hodgdon purchased the Princess. This makes the second enlargement of the Princess under Mr. Hodgdon's management. When purchased, the house seated 300, was raised to 700 last winter, and when completed now, will seat just about 1,200 people.

A good quality of Licensed service, together with musical numbers, are doing the business. Mr. Hodgdon uses quartets and other singing specialties.

The Hampton Hotel property, Northampton, Mass., has been purchased by the Goldstein Brothers Amusement Company, who intend to build a first-class theater, to be devoted to vaudeville and pictures. This company owns a string of theaters in Massachusetts.

Frank L. Browne, formerly manager of several Boston picture houses, has taken a position with the National Booking Offices, Boston.

An article appeared in the Brockton Daily Enterprise recently, about Keith's Theater, Campello, Mass., which opened as a photoplay house. The theater is managed by Mr. L. A. Howard. The article states that Mr. L. A. Howard is "the original moving picture king." This is somewhat incorrect, as it is Frank Howard, owner of the first Licensed exchange in Boston, who is termed in New England "the original moving picture king." Mr. L. A. Howard was an operator in the Theater Comique, Tremont Row, Boston, for some time.

The Cambridge Theater, Cambridge, Mass., which was closed for a few days, has reopened and is playing vaudeville and pictures.

The Edisonian Theater, Portsmouth, N. H., has given vaudeville in connection with its picture programs a fair try-out, and has decided to use straight pictures only.

A National Exclusive Film Exchange has just been opened in Boston, and developments are expected most any day.

A large theater is about to be built in Melrose, Mass., with a seating capacity of 1,200. The theater is to be on Main Street, and will be by far the best in Melrose. The new house will be fireproof and will cost $30,000. Vaudeville and pictures will be used.

The Star Theater, Dover, N. H., has closed after an unsatisfactory season devoted to vaudeville and pictures. Jack Dolan's Lyric Theater proved too strong a competitor for the Star.

The Star Theater, Boston, is playing four reels of first-choice Licensed service, four acts of vaudeville and a "Song Revue." For the last few months this house has been using no vaudeville, but Manager George I. Appleby finds a demand for the acts and contracted for vaudeville of the better kind.

Mr. Irving Hamilton, who has managed the South End Theater, Boston, since Marcus Loew opened that theater, has left his position, and will shortly announce his new connections. Manager Hamilton was originally assitant manager of the Orpheum Theater, Boston, the first house opened in that city by Mr. Loew. Mr. Hamilton was well liked by his employees, who presented this former "boss" with several appropriate gifts. Mr. Louis Boas, who has been manager of the two Marcus Loew houses in Fall River, Mass., was shifted to the South End. If Mr. Boas shows the same calibre as he has in Fall River this writer advises nearby houses to look out for storms, as Mr. Boas is a wonderful business-maker.

Mr. Leroy A. Jackson, of 494 Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge, Mass., is thinking seriously about opening a large photoplay house in Cambridge, to seat 2,500. If his present plans are consumated, Mr. Jackson's house will be the finest in Cambridge, and one of the best in the New England States. A large company is being formed, with Mr. Jackson as the prime mover.

Mr. Harry F. Campbell, manager of the Boston Film Rental Company, has annexed quite a number of motion picture theaters lately.

The Columbian Hall Theater, of Maplewood, Mass., is now using Independent service. The Columbian is using four reels of pictures and illustrated songs, with a bi-weekly change. The Eagle Theater, Fall River, Mass., is also using the service of the Boston Film Rental Company. Manager Joseph Salvo reports excellent business. Manager Campbell is an energetic worker, and is continually lining up theaters with his Independent service.

The Savoy Theater, Boston, closed on Tuesday night, November 21, with no idea of reopening. Miss Lotta Crabtree, owner of the house, has made a loss of not less than $50,000. The whole trouble with the Savoy was its poor front and lobby, as was stated last year by the writer. The house has used both kinds of service since its first opening, and tried other ways to help business, but to no avail. A restaurant has secured the building from Miss Crabtree, who owns both the theater and the building. This is the first high-class house that found business so bad as to close in Boston.

The Orpheum Theater, Newburyport, Mass., which was considerably damaged by fire some time ago, has just been leased by the National Amusement Company, who intend to open the Orpheum by January 1, 1912, as a photoplay house. The house is undergoing alterations at present.

The Scenic Theater, Hartford, Conn., after using vaudeville in connection with its program of pictures, has discontinued the acts, and is using illustrated songs in their place.

Manager Gellatis, of the Quincy Auditorium, Quincy, Mass., is doing an excellent business this season, with vaudeville and pictures.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hathaway, well known in New Bedford, Mass., are away from town, on a pleasure trip. The Hathaway Theaters are all doing well.

The Theater Voyons, Lowell, Mass., owned by the Bowlaway Amusement Company, is one of the most up-to-date in Massachusetts. This house advertises in the daily papers and is reaping excellent results. When the Kalem Company produced "Colleen Bawn," the Theater Voyons advertised it very strongly. Mr. J. S. Kittredge, of the theater, made it his business to inform the editors of the local dailies of the unusual merits of these reels. As a result both the Sunday Telegram and the Courier-Citizen published reviews of these pictures, sendng staff reporters for the purpose. The Theater Voyons tells the writer that their advertisements cost them $75 an inch for display type. The circulation of the Courier-Citizen is about 14,000. The Theater Voyons can claim the distinction of being the first photoplay house in New England giving a "professional performance." On November 17, this theater, after its regular performances, gave a professional one to the theatrical people of Lowell, with the members of the Donald Meek stock company, as the special guests. The reason being that in one of the reels exhibited by the Voyons, Mr. Jack Chagnon had one of the principal parts. Mr. Chagnon was seen in "The Black Arrow." In "Dooley's Scheme," Mr. John J. Benson, another Lowell actor, had a prominent part. The affair was voted a huge success, with everyone enjoying himself. There is no house in Lowell doing so fine a busines as the Voyons, which caters to the best people in the city.

Mr. Charles Benson, manager of the Bijou and Premier Theaters, Fall River, Mass., made a flying trip to Detroit recently and was married.

The First Congregational Church, Hyde Park, Mass., is both uplifting the standard of amusements in that town and adding to its bank account. The cause for all this is to be found in the fact that this church rented a building and is giving regular performances of photoplays. A number of the parish have been detailed to censor all pictures before they are exhibited by the church. All reports state that business is great.

Mr. C. O. Fuller, the popular Vitagraph representative, due to whose efforts fifty-eight New England exhibitors visited the Vitagraph plant in New York, again appeared in Boston, Mass. "War" was the picture that Mr. Fuller was showing at the General Film Company. This was a special showing, as the picture is not yet released. From present indications, "War," a huge sermon on the horrors of war, will be exhibited in many New England houses. While in Boston, Mr. Fuller was presented with a watch, as a mark of appreciation by New England exhibitors. Through Mr. Fuller, the Vitagraph Company presented New England managers with a photograph of the boys, taken in front of the studios.

Mr. T. L. Donahue, who hoped to open his new Star Theater, Nantasket, Mass., on December 2, was delayed. The Star will probably be opened in another week.

Mr. M. C. Blumenberg, manager of the Casco Theater, Portland, Maine, found business so good when he exhibited Selig's "Lost in the Jungle," and the Biograph, "The Battle," that both pictures were repeated by popular request. The orchestra installed by Mr. Blumenberg is a distinct addition, and business continues big.

The Puritan Theater, Washington Street, near Northampton, Boston, which recently opened to the public, is evidently doing a very nice business, judging from the crowds in the theater. This house seats about 800.

The Tremont Theater Company have opened another theater. The last addition is the Gorman Theater, South Framingham, Mass. Vaudeville and pictures are offered.

The new Park Theater, Manchester, N. H., which has been having much trouble, due to the differences between the management and the union employees, has patched up the trouble. It is understood that only union help will now be employed in the Park.

Pawtucket, R. I., evidently likes vaudeville and pictures better than stock company productions. The Bijou Theater of that city has been using stock for many months, but has changed to vaudeville and pictures. Mr. Charles Lovenberg directs the fortunes of the Bijou.

In this connection the report is going the rounds that Mr. Charles Lovenberg, manager of Keith's, Providence, R. I., has the entire amusement situation of Pawtucket, R. I., in the palm of his hand. The Bijou, Music Hall, Scenic and Star, all of Pawtucket, are controlled by Mr. Lovenberg. These houses usually are run as follows: the Music Hall uses a straight picture program, the Scenic runs vaudeville and pictures. The Bijou and Star are not always open, but play vaudeville and pictures whenever business is brisk enough to warrant it.

The Marquise Theater, Lawrence, Mass., playing pictures, was damaged by fire on November 23. The damage was very small, and no lives lost.

A new theater is promised for Norwalk, Conn. Mr. H. J. Dull is promoting the house. A large theater, playing vaudeville and pictures, is the present plan.

Mr. P. McMahon, proprietor of the Scenic Theater, Hartford, Conn., finds business too good. He intends to take care of this overflow by building a new vaudeville and picture house, to be located on Asylum Street. Mr. McMahon has another winner in his Keeney Theater, New Britain, Conn.

Wakefield, Mass., will soon have a real live Opera House, when the enlargements and alterations now taking place in Lyceum Hall are completed. The new house will seat about 1,500 and will play vaudeville and pictures for the most part, although some road shows are probable.

Fall River, Mass., has had two new moving pictures theaters opened recently. The Eagle Theater at Pleasant Street is doing a nice business with Independent service. The Star is the other house, and is reported doing well.

The Premier Theater, Fall River, Mass., is now being managed by Mr. M. E. Regan, who succeeds Manager Rothchild. The Marcus Loew Company called Mr. Rothchild to New York, where he will manage one of Mr. Loew's theaters.

Mr. F. W. Homan, manager of the Scenic Temple, Providence, R. I., spent some time in Boston, Mass., recently.

Many moving picture theaters throughout Pawtucket Valley, R. I., have been closed for the past two weeks, due to an epidemic of small-pox. The houses are now all open again, as the disease is no longer prevalent in that section of Rhode Island.

HENRY.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Under the direction of Director Melville, The Lubin Company has been visiting Washington, securing some military dramas from Fort Meyer.

A moving picture operators' union has been organized here with a good membership for a beginning. It is hoped that this will effect better service at the machines and consequently better projection of pictures.

A new vaudeville house, The Imperial Theater, has opened its doors to the public, and its program will emphasize the spirit of the time by including the motion picture as a feature.

Manager Aiery has recently introduced an excellent light for projection, which is "something different" from the other houses. As usual, it is some scheme of his own, and he won't tell us exactly how it is accomplished. The Alhambra is dotted with just such improvement devices of the manager's ingenious mind.

The Maryland, as one of the pioneer houses of the Capital City, finds a way of retaining a big attendance by presenting an exceptionally long program. The brilliant red front of this house forms an attraction, as well as its artistic embellishments. Proprietor Wunder and Manager Story are very solicitious of the patrons of the Maryland.

IN THE SOUTHWEST.

The San Marcos Theater Company has been organized at San Marco, Tex. Directors were elected as follows: J. R. Portert, A. B. Rogers, C. C. McNeil and Frank Bradley. An up-to-date opera house will be erected.

Vaudeville and moving pictures will be offered by Manager B. H. Powell, of the Empress Theater, which is being erected at 111 West Main Street, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, by the Powell-Creak Amusement Company. It is hoped to open some time in the course of the holidays. The building, which will cost $60,000, will seat 1,000 persons. The lobby, thirty by twenty feet, will be of white marble. A $10,000 Kimball pipe organ will be a part of the equipment.

MOTION PICTURE PATENTS COMPANY

NOTICE

THE Edison patent (Re-issued No. 12037) relating to motion picture cameras was re-issued on December 5, 1911, as No. 13329, to the undersigned. The patent contains the following claims:

1. An apparatus for taking photographs suitable for the exhibition of objects in motion, having in combination a camera having a single stationary lens; a single sensitized tape-film suppofted on opposite sides of, and longitudinally movable with respect to, the lens, and having an intermediate section crossing the lens; feeding devices engaging such intermediate section of the film and moving the same across the lens of the camera at a high rate of speed and with an intermittent motion; and a shutter exposing successive portions of the film during the periods of rest, substantially as set forth.

2. An apparatus for taking photographs suitable for the exhibition of objects in motion, having in combination a camera having a single stationary lens; a single sensitized tape-film supported on opposite sides of, and longitudinally movable with respect to, the lens, and having an intermediate section crossing the lens; a continuously-rotating driving-shaft; feeding devices operated by said shaft engaging such intermediate section of the film and moving the same across the lens of the camera at a high rate of speed and with an intermittent motion; and a continuously-rotating shutter operated by said shaft for exposing successive portions of the film during the periods of rest, substantially as set forth.

3. An apparatus for taking photographs suitable for the exhibition of objects in motion, having in combination a camera having a single stationary lens; a single sensitized tape-film supported on opposite sides of, and longitudinally movable with respect to, the lens, and having an intermediate section crossing the lens; a continuously-rotating driving-shaft; feeding devices operated by said shaft engaging such intermediate section of the film and moving the same across the lens of the camera at a high rate of speed and with an intermittent motion; a shutter exposing successive portions of the film during the periods of rest; and a reel revolved by said shaft with variable speed for winding the film thereon after exposure, substantially as set forth.

4. An apparatus for taking photographs suitable for the exhibition of objects in motion, having in combination a camera having a single stationary lens; a single sensitized tape-film supported on opposite sides of, and longitudinally movable with respect to, the lens, and having an intermediate section crossing the lens; feeding devices engaging such intermediate section of the film and moving the same across the lens of the camera at a high rate of speed and with an intermittent motion, said feeding devices comprising means proportioned to cause the devices to so advance the film that its periods of rest shall exceed its periods of motion; and a shutter exposing successive portions of the film during the periods of rest, substantially as set forth.

5. An apparatus for taking photographs suitable for the exhibition of objects in motion, having in combination a camera having a single stationary lens; a single sensitized perforated tape-film supported on opposite sides of, and longitudinally movable with respect to, the lens, and having an intermediate section crossing the lens; feeding devices provided with teeth engaging the perforations of such intermediate section of the film and moving it across the lens of the camera at a high rate of speed and with an intermittent motion; and a shutter exposing successive portions of the film during the periods of rest, substantially as set forth.

MOTION PICTURE PATENTS COMPANY.

LICENSED Film Stories

GAUMONT.

THE MAID OF ARGOS (Dec. 23).—To save the city of Argos Myrtis, a beautiful maiden, is selected by the high priest for sacrifice. After taking leave of her father and lover, she is lead to the sacrificial tree to await the will of the deity.

Shortly afterward, the high priest, Crates, steals out to her, and, inflamed with passion, offers to save her life.

Her lover, Amyntas, who has been watching in concealment, however, rushes out, and with a dagger, strikes the wicked priest to the ground.

Hand in hand the lovers then go to the temple, and there it is decided that the blood of the high priest is sufficient sacrifice.

THROUGH THE ENEMY'S LINES (Dec. 19).—Just before the battle of Marengo, Lieutenant Bertrand is sent out by Napoleon to locate the position of the Austrian army. After capturing a peasant and disguising himself in his cloak, Bertrand drives the peasant's horses to the house in which the Austrian general is staying.

There he secures valuable papers, but is discovered and forced to seek safety as best he may. After a series of narrow escapes, he manages to get through the Austrian outposts, although in doing so he is wounded and finally falls from his horse.

Found by his comrades, he is carried to the emperor. This daring deed brings victory to Napoleon.

ECLIPSE.

THE MIRACLE (Dec. 20).—After the death of his royal brother, Otto, ambitious for power, immediately plans to do away with the baby prince, who has been placed in his care. He accomplishes his purpose in a fiendish manner.

The death of the little prince causes great sorrow throughout the castle. His little sister is heart-broken, and prays long and often for the return of her brother.

One evening, during the prayer, an angel appears, and, taking her by the hand, leads her to the family vault. There the figure of Christ is visible, who, after opening the tomb, gives the living body of the baby prince into the arms of the angel, and then vanishes. The angel and the little girl carry the child into the chapel and place him in the crib surrounded by the sacred statuary.

Then the princess runs to tell her mother the good news. The doubting mother decides to follow her and reaches the chapel just as Otto's coronation procession is entering in triumph.

The marchers are astounded at the sight of the living child, and all except the wicked Otto join with the delighted mother in loud rejoicing at the miracle.

ESSANAY.

THE THREE BEARS (Dec. 19).—The story tells how little Goldilocks drops asleep and dreams a very strange dream. It will be remembered that the big bear, the middling-sized bear, and the teenty tiny bear leave their porridge to cool and go for a walk. Little Goldilocks wanders through the woods, espies their cottage and enters. Delighted by its quaintness, she looks about the room, finds the porridge and samples each bowl, finally eating all of the teeny tiny bear's breakfast. Then, feeling sleepy, she goes into the adjoining room, where she curls up in the teeny tiny bear's bed and sleeps until the bears return. Goldilocks is discovered, chased out of the house and pursued by the bears, but luckily, before the bears catch her she wakes up to find it was only a dream.

WINNING AN HEIRESS (Dec. 21).—Charley Sapleigh reads in the papers how several rich heiresses had eloped with the family chauffeurs, and decides to learn to drive an automobile, hire out to some wealthy family and win an easy fortune. Sapleigh takes a quick course in an automobile school, and gets a position with Mrs. Van Richley. Although he has heard the name of Muriel several times, he has never seen the heiress, as he supposes she is, but he receives a rude shock when asked to take Mrs. Van Richley and Muriel for a ride, to find that the latter is a pet monkey. This is enough for Sapleigh, who decides to take a more laborious, but surer road to fortune.

THE FOILING OF RED DUGAN (Dec. 21).—Judge Blake sentences "Red" Dugan, an old offender, to twenty years in the penitentiary, and Red swears vengeance. Dugan escapes and goes to the Judge's house, gains entrance, and, finding the judge alone in his library, orders him to hold up his hands. The judge's little son, Ralph, has been romping about, playing cowboy, and has secured his father's revolver from a drawer in the dining-room sideboard, when he hears the threatening voice of Dugan in the next room. Quietly he steals to the portieres and levels the gun at the convict's head, ordering him sharply to hold up his hands. The convict drops the gun, the judge sees it, and Dugan is at the mercy of the two. A guard from the penitentiary then bursts into the room and Dugan, in irons, is led out.

THE MILLIONAIRE BARBER (Dec. 22).—The proprietor of the Palace Hotel, in a small town, advertises for a barber. Jack Crothers, a city barber, replies to the ad in person, but before he has time to see the proprietor, is accosted by a reporter from the local paper, who he jokingly tells that he is a Denver millionaire. Crothers finds himself suddenly greatly elevated in the esteem of the hotel proprietor and guests. He is given the best room in the house and introduced to the Reynolds' wealthy guests. Marguerite Reynolds is the charming daughter, and Crothers sees possibilities of marrying into wealth. However, several difficulties arise, precarious circumstances which almost spoil his game. He is asked to subscribe $500 to a fund for aged school teachers, and his bluff is called when he cannot pay for a dinner while on a trip with the Reynilds in their auto. Then, the Reynolds' auto is stolen and $500 reward is offered. Crothers gets the auto back and almost gets the money, but it is taken out of his hands by the old school teacher, just as he is about to pocket it. It is then that Reynolds, Jr., calls his bluff. Reynolds has found a photo of Crothers, in barber attire, and the latter is glad to get away from the suburb alive.

BRONCHO BILLY'S CHRISTMAS DINNER (Dec. 23.)—The sheriff of Rattlesnake County, Nevada, has received a notification from the district attorney, to post dodgers along the highways, announcing that the notorious outlaw and badman, Broncho Billy, will be given his liberty and no prosecution of his crimes if he surrenders to the sheriff within seven days. It is a few days before Christmas, and after the sheriff has executed the order in regard to Broncho Billy, he goes to his home, where he finds his wife writing a letter to their daughter, who is at college. Christmas Day we see the young lady take the stage coach for the long, but picturesque and pleasant ride over the mountains. Although Broncho Billy has found one of the notices, appraising him of the mercy that the law has offered him, he regards it with contempt, for on this very day he has made plans to waylay the stage-coach, knowing that on Christmas Day it must be loaded with rich booty. At the halfway house the stage pulls up for a minute to allow the driver and his partner to stop and wish the proprietor a Merry Christmas. The girl is left alone to watch the horses. When they are inside, a number of roistering cowboys come out from the inn, wildly shooting their guns, and the horses, becoming panic-stricken, break and run at full gallop down the turnpike. Broncho Billy is waiting for the stage and when it dashes by with its fair driver he realizes that the horses are running away. Forgetting his former criminal intentions, Broncho springs into his saddle, and starts in pursuit of the flying coach. After a long ride, he reaches it, springs from his horse to the driver's box and takes the reins from the girl's hands. He thus saves her life and the stage-driver, and others now riding up, persuades him to go on with them and eat dinner at the girl's home, to which they, too, have been invited. The incident results in Broncho's complete redemption and he swears off outlawry for good.

SELIG.

EVANGELINE (Dec. 18).—With a pathetic charm that brings a sob to the throat of its auditor, we are told the sad story of two young Arcadian lovers—Evangeline, the beautiful, and Gabriel, son of Basil, the blacksmith. Upon their wedding morn, all of the men in the peaceful Arcadian province are summoned to the church to hear a proclamation by the British. When assembled they are all seized and shipped off by the English tricksters to be distributed among the New England states. Among those thus deported is Gabriel—the new bridegroom. Evangeline sets out in search of her lover and husband. She wanders down New England for years—longing, hoping, praying, but to no avail. At last when she is an old woman she finds her bridegroom in a hospital on his death bed. The shock proves so great that she succumbs to death herself, after a murmured prayer of thanks to the Almighty, for restoring her loved one to her.

FOR HIS PAL'S SAKE (Dec. 19).—Billy and Tom, pals of long standing, are invited to a party given by Florence, Billy's sweetheart. In jest, Tom and Florence flirt too much to suit Billy, and he leaves in a huff.

Florence regrets her actions and Tom promises to bring Billy back. He returns to his rooms, where he is confronted by a revolver and a very stern looking Billy behind it. Tom orders him to put it down and refusing, they fight, in which Tom is victorious. Billy apologizes and they are friends once more, and pledge their friendship with a drink in the town dance hall.

Anita, a Spanish girl of the town, uses her black eyes so successfully on Billy that he soon forgets Florence, and despite the pleadings of Tom, is bound to marry her. Tom, knowing her for what she is, resolves to show her up to Billy.

On arriving at Billy's room, where they have gone after leaving the saloon, Anita asks Billy for a drink of water. Seeing his chance, Tom takes a roll of bills from his pocket, and proceeds to count, watching Anita covertly. The money talks very loud to Anita and she forgets, in turn, Billy for Tom. He takes her in his arms just as Billy returns with the water. Infuriated he tries to draw his gun, but Tom has him covered, and forcing him to stay, he kisses Anita and they leave.

Arriving at the corral instead of putting Anita on a horse as she expects, Tom orders her away. She demurs, but Tom is of pretty stern stuff, and she goes her way, while Tom returns to Billy and explains his actions. Billy, overcome with remorse, begs Tom to "fix it" with Florence to forgive him. Tom promises to do his best. Going to Florence's home, he persuades her to walk with him. She wonderingly consents, and they arrive at the corral, where Billy is waiting. Everything is forgotten and the boys are "Pals" once more.

BROWN OF HARVARD (Dec. 21).—The story of this most popular play deals with Tom Brown's efforts to save his fiancee's "black sheep" brother Wilfred Kenyon, from disgrace. An unfortunate state of affairs exists between Wilfred and Marion Thorne, the sister of Gerald Thorne, a sturdy Southerner, who is tutoring his way through college and incidently stroking the varsity crew. This situation is misunderstood by all but Tom. Matters reach a climax on the day of the big boat race between Harvard and a champion English crew. Thorne as he is about to enter the boat is given an anonymous note to the effect that Marion is about to leave town with one of the college men. He throws the race and rushes to his sister, whom he finds in possession of Tom's check for an amount to cover her expenses. The check has been forged by Wilfred. Crazed with grief and anger he rushes back to the boathouse. In the meantime Tom Brown, Thorne's substitute, has stroked the Harvard crew to victory, and as he is carried into the boathouse by his admirers he is faced by the irate Thorne, who brands him as a scoundrel, producing the check to substantiate his charges. Brown remains silent, preferring to be misunderstood rather than expose his loved one's brother. Wilfred finally confesses and wrongs are speedily righted.

THE LITTLE WIDOW (Dec. 22).—Alice Graham, recently bereaved of her husband, prepares to leave, with her baby, for her home in San Francisco.

On the same boat is John Forman, who, having "struck it rich," has decided to return to the Southland. They become acquainted when Forman resents an insult perpetrated on Alice by Jim Medford, a gambler, also from the Klondike.

Later, through some fault of the engines, the ship catches afire, and in the ensuing panic, no one remembers the little widow but Forman, who misses her. He dashes below and drags her and her baby out of the burning cabin, obtains life belts and they cling to the life raft with others, and are finally cast ashore.

The survivors are taken to the home of Harry Weston, the lighthouse keeper. Alice gives him her bag of golddust for safe keeping, and he hides it, safely, as he thinks. But Medford, who has waited for just such a chance for revenge on Alice and Forman, discovers the gold, steals it, and though nearly trapped, rushes from the house.

He gains the beach, but seeing that he cannot escape, scatters the dust upon the sands. Thinking all the gold is lost, Forman, who has followed Medford, makes good the loss from his own bag, and once more earns the profound gratitude of Alice.

Four years later, investments fail, and John Forman finds himself an almost ruined man. But "bread, scattered on the waters, returns," and Alice, reading of his losses, sees where she can prove her gratitude, and forthwith sends him a check for an amount sufficient to cover his margins. He retrieves his fortune, and when, a month later he seeks to return the money, he is sought to keep it, which he does, as well as Alice and her little daughter, Lillian.

BIOGRAPH.

AS IN A LOOKING GLASS (Dec. 18).—The wife patiently pleads with her husband to leave off his drinking and care more for his family of herself and two children. Her endeavors, however, are in vain, for he returns to their home in the evening in a beastly state of intoxication. The wife is nearly heartbroken, but their little son is highly amused at the antics of his drunken, besotted father, and the next day while the mother is at market, the children play at housekeeping with the boy as dad, he going through the performance enacted by his father on the day before. The father, now sober, views this from the next room, and it makes him so ashamed of himself that he swears to be done with drink for good, which oath he religiously keeps.

A TERRIBLE DISCOVERY (Dec. 21).—Taunted by the gang over the conviction of his brother by the District Attorney, Dick swears to make the attorney suffer. His plan is a novel one, which might have succeeded but for the daring of the lawyer's ten-year-old son. Dick disguises himself as an old woman, and owing to the attorney's benevolent nature, Dick finds it easy to gain entrance into the house by feigning illness. The

Gaumont

A GAUMONT EVERY TUESDAY and SATURDAY

KOSMIK FILM

AN ECLIPSE EVERY WEDNESDAY

ECLIPSE

CURRENT RELEASES

Gaumont, Tuesday, Dec. 19

THROUGH THE ENEMY'S LINES

War Drama. About 985 ft.

Lieutenant Bertrand, a gallant captain, is sent out by Napoleon to reconnoiter the enemy. After many narrow escapes he returns with the information to his emperor.

Eclipse, Wednesday, Dec. 20

THE MIRACLE

Drama. About 1040 ft.

The beautiful story of a baby prince who is killed by a wicked kinsman, but is restored to life through a miracle in answer to his sister's prayers.

Gaumont, Saturday, Dec. 23

THE MAID OF ARGOS

Drama. About 980 ft.

A story from Greek mythology, telling of a beautiful maiden, Myrtis, who was to be sacrificed for the sake of the city, but was saved by her lover, Amyntas.

ECLIPSE

Advance Announcements Free. Write to

GEORGE KLEINE

166 No. State St., Chicago, Ill.

LICENSED BY THE MOTION PICTURE PATENTS CO.

Gaumont

MOST of the genius and talent during the life of the moving picture business have been spent on improving films and projecting machines—It is highly important that both should be right, but the Screen is the last word. If both your films and machine are right, and your mechanism for showing the final result is wrong, your whole show is junk.

The result of the above deduction is the—

"PERFECTION CONCAVE SCREEN"

Absolutely Correct in Shape, Color, and Dimensions. Three Patents Pending covering every Point and Detail — and its Good Points are Many.

Will you order now or will you be satisfied with our descriptive booklet which will be ready for mailing in a few days? At least send us your name and let us place you on our mailing list. Anyone who can make the Moving Picture Entertainments more attractive is Your Friend.

INVENTORS SPECIALTY MFG. CO., 401 Ashland Block, CHICAGO, ILL.

lawyer is in the house with only the boy, who is in his own room on the second floor. It looks for a time that Dick will be successful in perpetrating his dire design, but the boy suggests that his father lower him by a rope from the window. This is a perilous move, but the boy bravely undertakes it. The youngster once outside, races off and brings a couple of mounted police to the rescue.

MELIES.

THE RANCHMAN'S DEBT OF HONOR (Dec. 25).—Having sold out a good stock of cattle, the ranchman "sets 'em up" for the boys at the town café, and in paying the bill, displays an enviable roll of greenbacks. Frank Hawley, a professional gambler, entices him into a game of poker, where, by the crooked work of the gambler and his confederates, the ranchman loses all and in the hope of "coming back" borrows from Hawley, only to lose again.

It is the ranchman's "debt of honor" and he takes Hawley home with him to show him a goodly stock of horses, the sale of which will more than pay the debt. But Hawley becomes at once interested in the ranchman's daughter, Mary, who, however, has a lover, and spurns the gambler's attentions, dealing him a blow on the face for forwardness.

Scene from "The Ranchman's Debt of Honor." (Melies.)

Hawley becomes more than ever determined to have her for his wife by fair means or foul. He directs the theft of the ranchman's horses, then demands his money. But he did not count on losing his fat wallet in the very stables that he robbed, which Mary finds and brings to her father just as Hawley is demanding her hand most threatingly.

To claim it would be to admit the theft, so he is forced to swallow the bitter pill of his own carelessness, and to see Mary and her cowboy lover about to start life as one on the handsome balance remaining in the wallet after paying the "ranchman's debt of honor."

VITAGRAPH.

Reel No. 1.

VANITY FAIR (Dec. 19).—Amelia Sedley, accompanied by Miss Becky Sharpe, returns from boarding school. Becky is a natural born flirt. Bashful Joseph Sedley falls desperately in love with her. He takes her to Vauxhall Gardens, where he makes an ass of himself, is very much ashamed, and refuses to keep his appointment with Becky the next day, sailing for Scotland to escape her wiles.

Amelia, with her gentle sweetness, hands Becky a letter from Sir Pitt Crawley, requesting her to repair to Queen's Crawley at once. The next morning, bright and early, she takes her departure to enter Sir Pitt's household as a governess, where she meets Rawdon Crawley, youngest son of Sir Pitt, who falls captive to her charms, bringing upon himself the displeasure of the whole Pitt family. He, notwithstanding, marries Becky.

Reel No. 2.

After their marriage, Becky Sharpe and Rawdon Crawley take up elegant lodgings at Mayfair. Rawdon, who is a captain in the English Army, is resplendent in his uniform. They are visited by their military friends; Captain Dobbin is there with Amelia Osborne and her husband, Lieutenant Osborne, who is fascinated by Mrs. Crawley.

A week later they sail for Brussels. At Brussels they attend a ball given by the Duchess of Richmond, at which Becky meets the Marquis of Steyne, and where they receive notice of the Battle of Waterloo. All is excitement and the officers are soon on their way to the field of action, where Lieutenant Osborne is killed. A month after the battle, Becky Crawley turns to the ensnaring of Lord Steyne, who with crafty and villainous intent, lays siege to the overthrow of Captain Crawley in order that he may continue his alliance with his wife. Crawley gets heavily in debt at the gaming tables of Lory Steyne, is unable to pay and the unscrupulous Steyne throws him into prison.

Reel No. 3.

Colonel Rawdon Crawley writes a note to his wife to raise money to secure his release. She replies falsely that she is sick but will implore Lord Steyne to show Rawdon leniency, signing herself, "Yours affectionately, Becky." Colonel Crawley, in despair, sends to his brother for assistance. Pitt hastens to his brother's succor. Rawdon immediately goes to his wife's apartments and finds her with Lord Steyne, whom he throttles, and leaves Becky forever.

Major William Dobbin marries Amelia Osborne. Amelia and Major Dobbin learn of Becky's downfall. They visit her in her misfortune and find her dissipated but unconquered. She refuses aid from Mr. and Mrs. Dobbin and is left by her friends to her own waywardness.

THE VITAGRAPH MONTHLY OF CURRENT EVENTS (Dec. 18).—The December issue will bring to our notice one of the finest body of men in the world, the mounted police of New York City, in their annual parade.

From the East our attention is called to the West, where we are shown one of the largest wheat fields in the country, where farming is a fine art and reaping and threshing is carried to such enormous proportions that the machines employed resemble a train of cars in slow and systematic progress.

The B. P. O. E. now pass before us in magnificent regalia with all the attending grandeur peculiar to this great order. Thousands of Elks inhabit the land.

A seventy-four ton girder, the largest ever made, hauled by the Meade Transfer Company through the streets of New York City, drawn by a team of 42 horses, to the highest building in the world, which is now in course of construction.

"The Boy Scouts" are shown, giving us an exhibition drill and a practical demonstration of what it is to be a member of this great American institution.

Columbus honored by his countrymen in their annual procession now passes before us. Setting forth in hundreds of gaily decorated floats the great achievement of their favorite son, who discovered America and made this old world go 'round.

Other important events are recorded in this number.

FIRES OF DRIFTWOOD (Dec. 20).—On a fierce stormy night, Amos Stockford, a young captain of a fishing vessel, is gathering driftwood. Suddenly he sees signals of distress from a passing steamer. Going to his cabin, he secures a lantern, kisses his wife and child and hastens with the life saving crew to the assistance of the wrecked and fast sinking boat. It is too late to save its occupants, with the exception of a very handsome woman, whom Stockford takes to his home and who is cheerfully welcomed by Mrs. Stockford. The woman infatuates Amos. He loses interest in his wife and child and elopes with the woman to a foreign port.

The captain's wife struggles to make a living for her child. It doesn't take long for the woman in the case to tire of the young captain as soon as she comes in contact with another in better circumstances. They have scarcely started on their flight across the ocean when she meets and fascinates a new admirer for whom she immediately discards the captain. Ashamed to return home he makes up his mind to prove himself worthy of his wife's forgiveness by placing himself in a position by which he can make up, to some extent, the sufferings which he has caused her.

Three years later, Christmas Eve, his wife tries to make this one day in the year a happy one for her child. She spends her last penny purchasing some gifts. On Christmas morning Amos Stockford returns to his home, well laden with gifts and means sufficient to make them comfortable for many a day. He appears before his wife and child as one from the dead. He begs her pardon and forgiveness for the wrong he has done. She overlooks the past and exemplifies the spirit of the day which commemorates the Giver of all good gifts and Him who offers love and mercy to all.

A REFORMED SANTA CLAUS (Dec. 22).—The employees of Harrison's mine have been out on strike for a long time. The men wait for him until he is leaving his office in the evening. They try to state their case but he entirely ignores them. They attack him. In terror, he flees before them, escaping by entering the home of a poor widow with two children. She is just preparing for the children's Christmas. She has a Santa Claus suit in which she expects to get some friend to dress to carry out the Christmas belief in old Saint Nick. When Harrison is admitted into the house he tells the widow that he is being pursued by the strikers and asks her protection. She tells him to get into the Santa Claus suit, which he does; and he is just carrying out the part of distributing the gifts to the children when the angry mob burst in the room. They detect the disguise of their employer but hesitate to practice violence when the widow appeals to them and points out the effect that such an occurence might have on her little children. The men depart from her home.

Mr. Harrison, grateful for his escape, thanks the poor widow, not forgetting to add to her happiness by making a liberal present of money. When he reaches his own home, he is dejected and downcast. His thoughts turn to the scenes through which he has just passed, bringing him to a realization of the condition of those worse off than himself. He calls up the leaders of the striking employees and tells them he will grant their claims and they can go to work on the day after Christmas. His mind easier, his heart lighter, he orders a large Christmas tree and many gifts to give his own child, to whom he has given little heed in the past—a Merry Christmas, and to make it complete, he invites the widow and her children to make merry with them.

THE OLD DOLL (Dec. 23).—Delia Andrews and Fanny Smith are close friends. Delia has a doll of which she is very fond. Delia's parents move to the city. When leaving the old home she finds it a very hard trial to tear herself away from Fanny. Before leaving she presents Fanny with her old doll, and a little gold ring, which she asks her to keep always in remembrance of her.

Many years later Delia marries, and Fanny does likewise. Delia enjoys all the comforts and luxuries of life, while Fanny is left a widow with a little child. She is now living in the city, but has lost all trace of Delhi. To support herself Fanny takes in dressmaking. She receives an order from Delia through the housekeeper. The gown completed, she delivers it and while alone in the reception hall she sees Delia's purse on the table. In a moment of temptation she steals it. The theft is discovered.

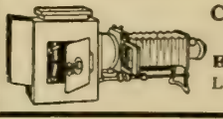
Fanny is suspected and soon the police, with the housekeeper, Delia and her husband are at the home of the poor woman. Searching for the purse they open a trunk. Delia sees the old doll. She asks Fanny where she got it. Fanny tells her and shows her the little ring. Delia clasps her to her bosom, orders the search stopped, and introduces Fanny to her husband. He and his wife make Fanny and her little baby welcome members of their household.

EDISON.

SANTA CLAUS AND THE CLUBMAN (Dec. 19).—The first scene is Christmas Eve and there is a lovers' quarrel following which the young man hies himself to his club and proceeds to partake too freely of the flowing bowl. At the door of the

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

Stereopticons, Slides, Accessories



CHAS. M. STEBBINS

1028 Main St.

KANSAS CITY, MO

Large Line of Edison Goods

Established 1899

LISTEN

Mr. Theater Manager and Exchange Man—why don't you yourself buy the greatest Christmas present your town, your customer, your patron and your hearth desires. Buy a local Motion Picture Making outfit and photograph your town occurrences; photograph the one who has a grouch against you, show him on the sheet and he will smile and be your friend. This local picture outfit has been reduced from $800 down to $395, for real professional work, guaranteed; no toy. Outfit comprises camera, with lens, tripod, printer and developing racks, trays, winder and drying drum. Send for catalogue at once and rush your order. I keep supplies for the trade, best lenses, all machine repairs have great original specialties. I have the projector all others have been copied from

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER, 219 Second Ave., New York

INDEPENDENT

SERVICE FROM THE

SWAAB FILM SERVICE CO.

is an improvement over your present service. Try it and be convinced.

Motiograph and Power Machines always on hand, and General Supplies.

129 NORTH EIGHTH STREET

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Looking for Sure Money?

THEN

"Remember the Maine"

AND

Wire in quick your best State Right's bid

FOR

"The Mystery of the Maine"

The Most Successful Feature Film in Existence

THE MYSTERY OF THE MAINE
THE MOST AWE-INSPIRING SPECTACLE OF HISTORY
PRODUCED IN MOTION PICTURES
UNITED STATES NAVY
"REMEMBER THE MAINE"

Fac-simile of our 3 and 8-Sheet Lithograph

Appeals to All the Classes, from the Newsboy to the Millionaire

TWO REELS OF AWE-INSPIRING AND SPECTACULAR MOVING PICTURES

Public Exhibition at Lew Field's Herald Square Theatre
Afternoon and Evening of Sunday, December 10th

RAISING-THE-MAINE FILM COMPANY

145 West 45th Street (Suite 804) :: :: :: New York City

club two little street waifs, a boy and a girl, beg from him, and he calls an officer to have them taken away. Instead of doing this the officer gives them a nickel and tells them to ride to their home. In the street car they fall asleep and when the car men find them there they decide to let them stay in out of the furious snow storm which is blowing outside. And thus it happens that the clubman, coming home late, stumbles into the same car in the edge of the barn and finds the little waifs, but believes them a figment of his overheated brain. He soon falls asleep and dreams that the Santa Claus poster at the end of the car, advertising a toy store, comes to life, and summoning from the top of the car the advertisements of candy, clothes, shoes, etc., provides a Christmas for the two sleeping waifs. When the clubman wakes the morning after, he remembers his dream, and after filling the children's hands with money he awakens them and takes them to his own apartment. Arriving there, he sends his man out for a Christmas tree, presents, clothing, etc., and telephones the little sweetheart asking her and her mother to come and help make a Christmas celebration for these two little waifs. The little lady is reluctant, but comes to see what it is all about, at least, and of course there is a happy Christmas finish to the story.

THE SIGN OF THE THREE LABELS (Dec. 20).—There exists in Europe a secret society of hotel employees which has a system of labeling the trunks of those guests who do not tip with a certain stamp, so that when the trunk is delivered to any other hotel the waiters, etc., know from whom to expect tips and from whom not to expect any. Thus it happens that a bride and groom starting off on their honeymoon to Europe make their first mistake in not tipping the hotel employees on their leaving. They proceed at once to label their baggage so that upon their arrival at the next hotel they will be taken care of accordingly. Upon their arrival at the next hotel they are at once spotted as people that do not tip and the hotel employees proceed to treat them in a most shocking manner. They order breakfast and it is spoiled; they fail to get any service whatsoever, and are at last forced to take their meals out. Gaston, the bellboy, succeeds in securing one of the bride's stockings, and placing it in the back pocket of the groom and through a series of humorous situations it falls into the hands of the bride. This causes a matrimonial squabble which almost ends in a divorce case, but chance favors them and the book of rules of the secret association falls into their hands and they realize at once the source of all their difficulties and proceed to lavish tips upon the servants with splendid results.

HOW SIR ANDREW LOST HIS VOTE (Dec. 22).—The first scene introduces us into a drawing room in England where amateur theatricals are taking place and we see one of the big financiers, the Hon. Grant Richmond, of the country in the audience. The next day at his club, word is brought to him that the Navy Bill is about to come up before the House and that if Sir Andrew, the influential member, speaks in its favor it will pass. The question is what the financial man and his friends can do to prevent the bill coming to a vote or passing. As Sir Andrew proves not to be amenable to argument, the case looks hopeless, but the financial man suddenly bethinks him of the amateur players and he evolves a brilliant plan. Sir Andrew having left the club, Mr. Richmond dashes out, jumps into his automobile and passing the member on his way to Parliament, rushes on until he comes to the house wherein he saw the amateur performance. Knowing that the member must pass this house on his way, he begs them to play the drama as though it were some family incident and to drag the resolute Sir Andrew into it. In a spirit of fun they take up the project and, when Sir Andrew passes the gate with his friend, a young woman, apparently in great distress, runs forth and begs him to come to her assistance. Telling his friend to go on to Parliament, he follows her into the house and there finds apparently a deep family intrigue, a young man apparently lifeless lies upon the floor, a small bottle which seems to have contained poison, beside him. The amateur drama goes on until after the hour for adjournment has been reached.

PAT CLANCY'S ADVENTURE (Dec. 23).—Curiosity took Pat Clancy down to the dock one day, where he stood watching a lot of roustabouts loading a ship with long narrow boxes. He noticed one box with a loose cover full of Winchester rifles. "Filibustering," thought Pat. Upon being informed by the Spaniard in charge that Guatemala was their destination and that strong men were needed to carry on the good work, Pat became deeply interested, expressing a strong desire to accompany the expedition, with the result that he signed a contract. After a short, uneventful voyage, they arrive on the shores of Guatemala. While on the way to the interior of this wild tropical country Pat makes a brief halt, distributes rifles and some military coats he brought with him to a few of the roustabouts and drills them with the view of leading the revolutionists to victory.

These maneuvers are highly amusing to the Spaniard, who quietly requests Pat to give up the rifles and take those contained in the other boxes. Pat and his awkard squad readily accede to this, but find to their surprise that the other boxes contain pickaxes and spades for the purpose of building a much-needed railroad.

Thus tricked by the Spaniard, Pat is forced to work hard with a pick and shovel, but not for long, for the very next morning at daybreak he escapes to the nearest port. Meanwhile the underpaid semi-slaves go on a strike, overpower the guards and almost kill the Spaniard, who escapes within an inch of his life, and becomes a stowaway on the very ship on which Pat is working his way home. In due time a banana-laden vessel arrives in a Southern port of the U. S. A., where the Spaniard is arrested for vagrancy and sentenced to ten days' labor cleaning streets, much to the gratification of Pat Clancy, who has the satisfaction of echoing the Spaniard's remark, "Strong men are needed to carry on the good work."

KALEM.

HE WHO LAUGHS LAST (Dec. 18).—Jack and Jim are rejected by their sweethearts, Kitty and Molly. The girls are really in love with the young men, but want to have a little fun at their expense, and to further this idea, plan a joke on their sweethearts. As they need aid in carrying out their scheme, they take two of the boys on the ranch into their confidence. Making the two young men up to look like girls, both Kitty and Molly send identical notes to Jim and Jack, asking them to meet them at their usual trysting place. Then riding off with the two disguised young cowboys, they have them sit at the foot of a tree, practically hidden from view by the low limbs of the tree. Then the girls take up a position in the upper branches of the same tree. As Jim and Jack approach, they see the back of the head and hats of what they think are the two girls, but they are soon undecieved, and they stride away, with the hearty laughter of the girls ringing in their ears.

"Turn about is fair play," and Jack and Jim swear to get even. Fixing up two of their friends as Indians, they send them out to intercept the girls. At the psychological moment Jack and Jim appear on the scene and rescue the girls from the apparently murderous Indians. Arriving back at the ranch house, the girls tell the folks about their rescue, and of the heroic actions of Jack and Jim. As they are finishing their story, Jim and Jack step back and the two supposed Indians take their place. Pulling off their disguises, they show who they are. The girls are furious at the trick played upon them, but their mother tells them they ought to call it square. They exchange sheepish looks with each other, and finally agree that "He who laughs last, laughs best."

THE FLASH IN THE NIGHT (Dec. 20).—Kate waits at the railroad terminal for her sweetheart, Tom, the engineer. While signing the register in the telegraph office, Kate suggests the telegraph code for signal purposes. That night Kate puts the plan in operation by signalling with a light from her window as Tom on his engine rushes by. A few months later, while visiting her father's office, Kate becomes suspicious of his clerk. Telling of her suspicions, her father decides to examine his accounts at home that night. When Mr. Wilson asks for the cash book and ledger to take home with him, the clerk's fears are aroused and he plans to destroy his false entries. When the house is dark he crawls in through a window, makes his way to the library and searches for the books. Kate, coming downstairs to signal to her sweetheart, catches the clerk trying to open her father's desk. A struggle takes place and Kate is finally bound to a chair. Leaning forward, she pulls a cord attached to an electric lamp on the table and signals to her lover h-e-l-p. Tom, from his engine, sees the signal. At the end of his run, only a few blocks away, he jumps from the engine, and with his fireman, runs to the house. Ordering the fireman to enter from a window he sees is open, he breaks in the front door and they succeed in capturing the wayward clerk.

BETWEEN FATHER AND SON (Dec. 22).—Raphaelo meets Preciosa and is enraptured by her beauty and charms. Preciosa sends Filipo, a farm hand, on an errand of charity. While on his way he is waylaid by a party of bandits. Raphaelo arriving on the scene, the bandits are frightened away, and he helps Filipo back to the ranch, where he again meets the fair Preciosa. Returning to his home Raphaelo tells of his love to his father, Diego Di Valejo. The next day, on being introduced to Preciosa, Valejo falls desperately in love with his son's fiancée. Becoming persistent in his attentions, Valejo is spurned by Preciosa. Smarting under his failure, Valejo, in vengeful passion, concludes to mar Raphaelo and Preciosa's happiness by inciting suspicion in Raphaelo as to Preciosa's fidelity. His plans do not come to a successful fruition and the lovers eventually triumph.

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad. last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

Fort Wayne Electric Works
of GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA 733

McKENNA

BRASS RAILINGS
EASELS
GRILLES
CUSPIDORS
BRASS
KICK PLATES
STAIR TREADS, DOOR SILLS

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH, PA.

HERE AT LAST
A place to buy parts for M. P. machines for less
One of our SPECIALS
Intermittent SPROCKETS $1.50 FOR POWERS EDISON Machines
Write for Price List
PITTSBURG M.P. SUPPLY CO., Pittsburg, Pa.

HEADQUARTERS FOR ASBESTOS
Curtains and Picture Booths
SEND FOR BOOKLET
C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
39 Pearl St., BOSTON

20,000 roll tickets, $1.40; 50 5-8 cored carbons, $1.15; stereopticon objectives, 50c to $3.00; stereopticons, $15.00; rheostats, $3.00 to $5.00; arc lamps, $1.75, $2.00 and $3.25. Condensers, 50c; calcium jets, $2.80; acetylene jets, $2.50; gas generators, $3.50; moving picture objectives, $2.75; jackets, $2.75. List of moving picture repair parts at fair prices. Sprocket wheel, 85c; films, 1c a foot. Catalogue on request. L. HETZ, 300 E. 23d St., N.Y.

BIGGER and BETTER
SEND YOUR SUBSCRIPTION
TO-DAY FOR
The Moving Picture Paper That Is Worth While

Domestic	-	$3.00 Per Annum
Canada	-	3.50 " "
Foreign	-	4.00 " "

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Box 226 Madison Sq. P. O. N. Y. City

Established 1856 WURLITZER World's Largest Music House

Read What Mr. Quimby Says

ABOUT

Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments

Casino Theatre, Zanesville, O.—Their Wurlitzer PianOrchestra is stationed in the wings on the stage

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Co.
Cincinnati, Ohio.

Zanesville, Ohio, September 11th, 1911.

Gentlemen:—

The Model No. 31 A PianOrchestra installed by you three weeks ago in my Casino Theatre, I am pleased to say has been a revelation to me and beyond my fondest hopes of what I expected when I bought it. Business has increased about 10% even in the face of the fact that I have dispensed with my orchestra. The music is the best that I have ever had in my seven years in the picture business, notwithstanding that I have used a five and six-piece orchestra seven days a week for the past three years.

For spot songs the instrument is a perfect accompanist, the singer buying the songs that correspond with those that are on the music rolls. As the song rolls contain five or six different songs one roll will run two weeks.

The pipe organ tone gives the place a different atmosphere than it has ever had before and I consider this one of the best improvements and investments I have ever made.

I can by pushing the starting and stopping buttons follow the pictures nicely and have not had one minute's trouble to date. The audiences have at different times given such overtures as "Poet and Peasant" and "William Tell" good rounds of applause at the finish.

The new music arrived today and I thank you for your promptness and courtesy in shipping same so promptly. With kindest regards, I am Very truly yours,

H. C. Quimby

Write to the nearest Wurlitzer Branch for Big New Wurlitzer Catalog showing the world's largest and only complete line of automatic musical instruments. Also 32-page booklet showing Wurlitzer instruments in leading Picture Theatres.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Co.

World's Largest Manufacturers of Automatic Musical Instruments

CINCINNATI 117 to121 E. Fourth St.

CHICAGO 329 to 331 So. Wabash Ave.

NEW YORK 25 to 27 W. 42d Street Bet. B'way & Fifth Ave.

PHILADELPHIA 1805 Chestnut Street

ST. LOUIS 1136 Olive Street

CLEVELAND 800 Huron Road

BUFFALO 701 Main Street.

COLUMBUS, O. 57 East Main Street.

LOUISVILLE 426 West Green Street

DAYTON, O. 131 S. Ludlow St.

LUBIN.

LOVE DECIDES (Dec. 18).—Mildred Mellon was her aged father's housekeeper. She was sought in marriage by an elderly man who lived on a neighboring farm, but to this neither she nor her father wished to consent. Then one day her father was so seriously injured that his death followed soon.

Mildred was now left alone and when the estate was settled it was found that she was penniless as well. She sought a home in several places but without success. Eventually her elderly admirer renewed his suit and she finally married him.

Two years elapsed; Mildred, her husband and baby were happy in their home. A young artist, sketching in the neighborhood, applied for board and they received him. One day Mildred came upon him sketching. He offered to paint her and the baby, which he did.

Almost before they knew it, the two young people thought more of each other than they should. They both attended a church picnic later and the artist took her for a long walk. Her husband, who had remained at home to look after the baby, came to seek her. He found the artist pleading with Mildred to run away with him. Her husband called upon Mildred to return to him and she clasped her baby, kised it and sank into her husband's arms. Then her husband ordered the artist to go.

ART vs. MUSIC (Dec. 20).—Music and art were the professions, respectively, of Ethel Vernon and John Whittier, who believed themselves to be deeply in love, until the necessity arose for each to criticise the other's work. Their opinions were not complimentary, and the result was a quarrel. Each determined to go to the city, casting aside love and devoting their energy to their professions.

It happened that they took studios in the same building. One day, while John was busy painting, he was annoyed by the piano-playing in the next room. He pounded vigorously on the wall. This aroused the anger of Ethel, for it was she, and she determined to give the unfeeling brute a piece of her mind. Their surprise may be imagined when they recognized each other. They resumed their former intimacy to some extent, but with the distinct understanding that it was purely platonic. Each rather pitied the other's lack of success, and thus pity soon led to a desire to help.

Ethel induced an art dealer to buy what John considered his masterpiece, and John inveigled a music dealer to buy Ethel's latest composition. But alas for good intentions! The music dealer was almost distracted by the clatter that Ethel's composition made and the art dealer declared that Jack was little better than a sign painter.

The dissatisfaction of these men of business brought the whole benevolent scheme to the knowledge of the two young people. Confession followed, love was revived, and they started together on the pathway of a happy life.

THE KIDDIES' CHRISTMAS (2 Reels, Dec. 21).—Arthur, ten years old; his sister Alice, soon to be nine; Dick and Daisy, twins, seven, and Toddlekyns, soon to be five, organize a conspiracy to waylay and rob Santa Claus. Thinking they have not been properly considered in the past, they conclude that Santa Claus doesn't know what children ought to have, and they decide to set him right. Also, they think he ought to be up to date, and get an airship and an automobile in place of his ancient reindeers and sleigh. Accordingly, after talking to their parents about their grievances, they write Santa Claus a letter, putting the case in plain terms. Santa Claus gets this letter, with millions of other letters, while he is directing his army of workmen in his great shop in the Region of Eternal Ice and Snow.

He is almost buried alive in the letters that are sent to him, and summons a lot of gnomes and fairies to open and arrange his mail for him. When he gets the one written by the conspirators, he acts on it promptly. First, he issues a general order to turn the reindeers out to pasture in the snow fields, and orders an airship and an auto. Then he issues a proclamation, which his winged heralds make known throughout the world. The conspirators, asleep in their nursery, hear the heralds sound the proclamation through their trumpets, Santa proclaiming that he is the best judge of the manner in which his business should be conducted and that children who are discontented with the way he treats them will surely be punished. This puts Arthur on his mettle, and he solemnly pledges the rest of the children to arm themselves and hold up Santa Claus when he comes, and take away his entire bag of Christmas toys. Santa comes, by the way of the chimney; the children are ready for him. He is overpowered and bound, and his pack taken. Like regular bandits, the conspirators concern themselves chiefly with their loot, and Santa slips his bonds, and rolls to the fireplace. The children, eager for the fruits of their crime, plunge hands into the bag and find only a bundle of switches. Then they shake the bag upside down and nothing falls from it but ashes. They turn just in time to see Santa vanish up the chimney, thumbs on nose and wriggling his fingers. They climb the stairs all the way to the attic, Toddlekyns always bringing up the rear, and race over the house-tops, peeping down chimneys. Finally, they see Santa's conveyance standing by a chimney and reach it just as Santa bobs up out of the chimney. They fling away their weapons, fall on their knees, and beg Santa not to abandon them. Santa forgives. The children awake in their nursery, greatly surprised to find their stockings well filled, and mamma and papa at the door smiling a Merry Christmas. While they are making merry over their toys, Santa glides away homeward over the house-tops.

PATHE.

THE FATAL POSING (Dec. 20).—A young artist is in love with a poor girl, whom he uses as a model in his effort to win a ten thousand dollar prize. In his ambition, he forgets the exposure he is subjecting his sweetheart to, and she dies on the night of his success. This so blights his happiness, that he returns the prize to the donor.

DAD'S SMASH-UP (Dec. 21).—A grouchy old father refuses to let his daughter marry the man of her choice. He intercepts a note from her, to her sweetheart, making an appointment in the park. Dressing himself in his daughter's clothes, he goes to keep the appointment. The lover, however, has been detained, and sends a friend in his motor car to explain to the girl. The friend takes the supposed girl in his car, and they go for a joy ride, which ends in the automobile jumping over a cliff and rolling down an embankment. The two are not killed and get home in time to find that the real girl has married the real lover.

ACTOR'S HEART (Dec. 23).—This delightful Christmas story is of an old actor and his little daughter. They have fallen upon evil days and Christmas is approaching. The little girl begs her dad to write to Santa Claus for some presents. The old man goes into the street to hide his grief from his little daughter, over his inability to provide for her. Outside he meets some of his old-time friends and tells his story. They quickly arrange a benefit, and on Christmas Eve, when the little girl is dreaming that Santa Claus is coming down the chimney with his pack loaded with gifts, her father and his friends are rapidly getting ready to play Santa Claus to his little girl, when she awakes.

PATHE'S WEEKLY (No. 51—Dec. 18).—St. Cloud, France—Nine balloons participate in the "Landing Contest" organized by the Aero Club of France.

London, England—The survivors of the famous charge of the Light Brigade, the remnant of the "Six Hundred," who rode to death at Balaclava, meet and drink the new King's health.

Constantinople, Turkey—The Italo-Turkish War. The Turkish fleet leaves the Golden Horn with sealed orders.

Lisbon, Portugal—The Republican soldiers conduct their Royalist prisoners to the Fortress del Duque.

Janesville, Wis.—A cyclone traveling from Southwest to Northeast leaves a trail of devastation across Rock County from a quarter of a mile to four miles wide. Anton Schmitt's home is entirely destroyed. Four people were killed here.

Charkoff, Russia—The holy image of the Virgin Azieranskaya is transported from the Kouriajskij monastery to the Pokrovskij monastery.

London, England—The super-dreadnought "George V." is launched. The monster battleship is 600 feet long and cost $10,000,000, and is twice as powerful as the original dreadnaught.

Tripoli—Italian-Turkish War. 1—The field artillery disembarks. 2—While awaiting orders to advance into the interior, the Italian troops are encamped on the edge of the desert. 3—General Caneva and Rear-Admiral Borea Ricci, the new governor of Tripoli, returning from a tour of inspection.

Havana, Cuba—How the work of raising the Maine from the mud in Havana harbor looks to-day.

Special for the Ladies: Paris, France—The fashions in hair-dressing for this winter are exceptionally pretty.

And many others.

C. G. P. C.

PRINCESS CHARMING (Dec. 19).—This delightful fairy tale, known to every child, is beautifully told in this exquisitely colored film. The old story is too familiar to everyone to need repetition. The exhibitor who shows this picture will undoubtedly fill his house with children.

PROVIDENTIAL BREAD (Dec. 22).—An aged musician feeds all his bread crumbs to the birds in the park. One day a little orphan girl snatches some of the crumbs, to mitigate her starving condition. The old man's heart is touched and he adopts her. She develops a wonderful dancing talent and goes on the stage, where her success is almost instantaneous. After a prolonged trip, she returns home just in time to save the old man from poverty and death.

Among the Exhibitors

Bristol, Pa.—Efforts are being made to form a stock company here and erect a new theater.

Atlanta, Ga.—The moving picture theater at 98 Whitehall Street, was damaged by fire to the amount of $200.

Boston, Mass.—Superb Theater Co., capital $25,000. H. M. Ramback, O. Grodburg and W. Roxbury.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Bell Theater Co., 1415 4th Street S. E., will erect a moving picture theater, to cost $1,800.

Sandwich, Ga.—The Montgomery Addfffwrfgwfdr

Sandwich, Ill.—Wm. Burkhart has leased the Bellz Bldg., and will remodel first floor into moving picture theater.

Savannah, Ga.—The Montgomery Amusement Co. has purchased the Odeon & Folly Theaters, and a new theater will be built on the site of the Odeon Theater.

Sacramento, Cal.—Florence J. Clunie will remodel the interior of the Clunie Theater, at a cost of $800.

Plant City, Fla.—S. E. Mays will erect an opera house.

Tampa, Fla.—Chas. Wright and Tucker Savage will expend $6,000 to remodel Orpheum Theater.

St. Louis, Mo.—Vaudeville Theater Co. will erect a 2-story theater building at a cost of $30,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Geo. Hogg is estimating on plans for a moving picture theater, to be erected at 2846-48 North 22nd Street, for Adolph Bonnem.

Nashville, Tenn.—The Crystal Theater will be extensively remodeled. Wm. Wassman, manager.

Grundy Center, Ia.—Boyd & Wesp are figuring on the erection of a new brick building here.

Hastings, Neb.—The Electric Theater has been sold by Messrs. Gerlach & Tremayne to J. E. Newbater, of this city.

Decatur, Ill.—Chas. G. Powers will establish a new moving picture theater in the building to be erected at Water and North Streets, by J. J. Moran.

Clinton, Ia.—E. L. Rowland and Bruce Quick will erect a new moving picture theater at 1008 South Fourth Street.

Chicago, Ill.—Gottschalk & Kussell will erect a one-story theater at 2801-13 Sheffield Avenue, to cost $1,000.

Minneapolis, Minn.—W. M. Koon, 1347 Nicollet Avenue, will erect moving picture theater, to cost $4,000.

Portland, Ore.—Rudolph Christman will repair moving picture theater at 1092 Hawthorne, at a cost of $800.

Chippewa Falls, Wis.—Plans have been prepared for the new Lyric Theater, to be erected here.

Chicago, Ill.—A. L. Katz will erect a new moving picture theater at 5619 South Center Avenue, to cost $3,500.

Chicago, Ill.—O. Landowsky will erect a one-story theater at 3819 Clarendon Avenue, to cost $6,000.

St. Louis, Mo.—A new moving picture theater will be erected at 818 North Kings Highway, to cost $30,000.

Baltimore, Md.—Lyceum Theater & Amusement Co. Capital $25,000.

Detroit, Mich.—Philip Gleichmann, of the Cadillac Film Co., will erect a new theater at Broadway & Gratiot Avenue, to cost $200,000.

Pomona Cal.—The Congregational Church at Third and Thomas Streets, will be replaced by a new opera house.

Gary, Ind.—The A. B. Marcus Bldg. will be remodeled into a moving picture theater.

Gary, Ind.—C. C. Cronin will establish a moving picture theater in the Jones Theater Building, Broadway and 10th Streets.

Richmond, Cal.—Ground has been broken at Fifth and St. McDonald Avenue, for the erection of a new theater, to cost $15,000.

Kent, Ohio.—Alex Marchand has sold the Fairy Theater, on East Main Street, to W. G. Costley.

Cleveland, Ohio.—L. A. Griffin has been awarded the contract for the erection of a new theater at West 25th and Archwood Avenue.

Missoula, Mont.—E. J. Myrick has sold the Bijou Theater to Hagens & Bedard.

Kansas City, Mo.—Frank P. Smith will erect a new theater at 11th and M'Gee, for the Pantages Vaudeville Circuit, to cost $600,000.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The Kozy Theatrical Co. will erect a new theater building at 730 Madison Avenue, to cost $10,000.

Coalgate, Tex.—Carson & Co. are constructing a moving picture theater on Main Street.

Kansas City, Mo.—Geo. B. Hanson will erect a moving picture theater at 1508 Spruce Street, to cost $4,000.

Princeton, N. J.—Plans are being formed for the establishment of a new theater at Princeton University, to cost $200,000.

Operators!

I guarantee quick and satisfactory repair work on all machines. Only genuine parts supplied. Get my prices on ONE DROP OIL and BULL DOG CEMENT the best articles of their kind on the market

H. A. MACKIE

853 Broadway, Cor. 14th Street New York

'Phone: 2478 Stuyvesant

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO.

145 West 45th Street, NEW YORK, U.S.A.

21 Reels Every Week

7 Days—3 Reels Daily

Action and Progress

AN action of great importance in the progress of the film industry is recorded in the announcement that many of our film exchanges are now open and doing a flourishing business.

This announcement is made, not upon the opening of these various exchanges, but after they have been opened, many of them, for some time.

Our programme has been accepted by the exhibitors, who register very accurately the taste of the public, in a most gratifying manner.

Our exchanges report an enthusiasm on the part of both exhibitors and the public that is very gratifying to us and spurs us on to further efforts to present to the exhibitors of the country an exclusive programme that will be the premier programme of the industry.

Exhibitors who are unable to secure films that satisfy their patrons are invited to write direct to this Company, and we will see that their communications reach the proper parties.

If an exchange has not opened in your territory, interest yourself in securing an exclusive exchange franchise. A very valuable asset in any territory. We do not sell our franchises. Correspondence from responsible business men invited.

Secure the following exclusive service with its franchise endowment:

Monday,	"Plantation"	"Clarendon" "Mono"
Tuesday,	"Rose"	"Deu. Biograph" "Helio"
Wednesday	"Federal"	"Mondia" "Latium"
Thursday.	"Washington"	"Hepwix" "Film d'Art"
Friday,	"Mohawk"	"Cricks & Martin" "Aquilla"
Saturday,	"Oklahoma"	"Deu. Bioscope" "Savoy"
Sunday,	"California"	"Messters" "Comerio"

7 Days—3 Reels Daily

National Film Distributing Co.

145 West 45th Street, NEW YORK, U.S.A.

Independent Film Stories

MAJESTIC

LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD (Dec. 17).—The dear old grandma has come to Red Riding Hood's home, bearing a present for her grandchild which she has made herself. This is a beautiful hood made in granny's cleverest and most loving way. Little Red Riding Hood is charmed by it, and expresses her joy freely. Granny then goes home to her lonely hut in the woods, escorted by her niece.

One beautiful autumn afternoon little Red Riding Hood is sent by her mother to take some goodies to Grandma. She repairs on her way, but grows tired and sits to rest under a tree. She stops and dreams the well-known story:

How a wolf in the guise of a friendly dog came and asked her where she was going. She told him, and the said wise wolf sped to granny's cot in a shorter direction. Arriving there he satisfied his wolfish appetite on poor grandma's aged carcass and donning her night cap took her place in the bed. Little Red Riding Hood appears and enters the bedroom, gladsomely exhibiting her presents. The wary wolf, after a confidential chat, jumps at her. She screams, her father, the woodsman, and his trusty men rush in, despatch the wolf and save her. Awakened suddenly by her own screams Red Riding Hood cannot break the spell of that awful dream. So she goes timidly to the cottage, peeks cautiously in at the window, finding granny alive and well.

COMET

A GAME OF BRIDGE (Dec. 18).—Nothing seemingly appears to mar the domestic bliss of Mr. and Mrs. John Osprey until his wife elects to play bridge. She loses steadily and is soon plunged into debt. In order to replenish her losses she resorts to stealing. Her first act of indiscretion is the pilfering of a valuable brooch belonging to Mrs. Brooks. The theft is known only to Gordon Bart, a friend, who restores the brooch and no one apparently is the wiser. Mrs. Osprey, however, is tempted again. Her husband, who is an expert in diamonds, is visited by three Japanese agents of a rich Japanese nobleman, who leave in his care a precious stone, with orders to dispose of same immediately. Mrs. Osprey promises to find a purchaser. He then places the diamond in a large safe. Mrs. Osprey, who has watched the procedure, sees her chance to extricate herself from debt and steals the treasure. In order to make it appear that it was taken by burglars she leaves the large safe, where the diamond has been placed, open. The ruse succeeds and a search is forthwith instituted for the gem. Mrs. Osprey is a pronounced somnambulist and in one of her walks buries the diamond in the garden. The butler watches her and steals the diamond. The next morning he tries to pawn it, but fails. He is seen by Mr. Bart, who eventually wrings the truth from him. After the missing stone has been recovered Bart suggests that in order to prevent Mrs. Osprey from repeating her thefts it would be better for him to pay all of her debts, which he forthwith does. This generous act soon brings Mrs. Osprey to her senses and she decides to renounce gambling forever.

THE MAN WITH THE CAMERA (Dec. 22).—A gang of scheming burglars connive and scheme. One of the thieves comes across an announcement in one of the dailes to the effect that Mr. and Mrs. Starbuck have temporarily closed their home to spend a fortnight at Atlantic City. The burglars decide to rob the place.

Three of the thieves go to the office of the chief of police. One is equipped with a moving picture camera and another with a tripod. They represent themselves as moving picture men, produce fake credentials and bluff the chief into giving them a license to operate and take all the pictures they desire. They select the Starbuck home. One burglar places the camera in front of the house, another climbs to the porch and then opens the window with the aid of a jimmy. The place from top to bottom is ransacked and with their booty safely piled up the robbers depart in their automobiles under police escort. Of course, the police soon ascertain how they have been tricked. The burglars are soon caught and dealt with according to law.

GREAT NORTHERN.

HIS FIRST MONOCLE (Dec. 16).—James, whilst walking in a fashionable district, noticing the air of distinction which an eye-glass seems to bestow on the wearer, forthwith decides to sport himself one. He purchases a monocle, and in the privacy of his own room attempts in vain to make the wretched thing stick in his eye. At length he glues it in and then sets out to attend a ball. There he has the misfortune to tread on the train of a lady's skirt, and strip it entirely off. When tea is handed around, he mistakes a gentleman's bald pate for a marble pedestal, and rests his cup on it. The old gentleman thinks it is a fly on his head, and brushes the cup and saucer to the ground. Not perceiving his mistake, James adds sugar and milk to where he thinks the cup is, with the most ludicrous results. After a number of other unpleasant mistakes, including the last, where he enters a lady's bedroom in mistake for his own, James reaches home, and having, with the aid of hot water, removed the piece of glass from his eye, swears never again to be led into making such a fool of himself.

GREECE (Dec. 16).—The successful results which have been achieved in color cinematography by our process are strikingly shown in this film. A clear impression is conveyed by the delicate tints of the warmth of color of this semi-tropical region, and the scenes depicted are full of interest. The Corinthian Canal is an unusual sight, and the views of Greece from Corfu Harbor are pretty. The German Emperor's villa there is included.

POWERS.

CUPID'S BIG SISTER (Dec. 19).—A sweet girl's little brother is one of the standard nuisances of the spooning business, and usually he's a rather unromantic kind of a proposition. His interest in the courting of his sister is an entirely mercenary one, and swains have learned that the quickest road to some girls' homes is via the sweet tooth of her little brother. That's how the artist happens to be getting along finely with Sue, until somebody comes along who has something for the little fellow that wins him quickly—that's an automobile! To a little country lad a ride in a tonneau is the consummation of all earthly bliss, and when this wealthy young Romeo comes along with the joy on four wheels and all cranked up, his road to success looks clear. But you can never tell about the small boy's caprice; here it gets him into various brands of trouble and the mere fact that his sister acknowledges his relationship is all that saves his hide from a merry tattoo.

But he's a wise little youngster and plays his game knowingly, so that in the end he is voted by the happy couple to be the best little Cupid that ever was. And he is!

TOURING BRUSSELS (Dec. 19).—For a delightful little trip in the old world, this little scenic wonder captivates. Just makes you feel as if you were right there, and you'll agree it's one of our best reasons for sticking to our travel releases. It will make you want more of them.

HEARTS OF ITALY (Dec. 23).—There is no question but that even in this enlightened day the law of Camoira and stilleto is a strong factor in the lives of many Italian families. Rosita Maroda finds it almost the guide of her destiny because of the not unfounded fears of her parents, and were it not that the youth in her rebelled, it might even have been the cause of her marrying such a villain as Luigi Cardone. But a fate inexplicable draws her on to foreign shores, and at last she leaves the old home and comes to America.

Here all is well until Luigi, too, arrives and in that Babel of New York's crowded settlement they meet—he a conniving villain, she the mother of a lusty babe. Slowly the strands of the interrupted vendetta connect once more, but Guido, Rosita's husband, is equal to the problem. The cruel Luigi is enmeshed in his own snare, and the hand of Providence comes to the rescue of the little family.

ECLAIR.

HER ONE DAY'S DREAM (Dec. 14).—Mid sunshine and flowers, the tragic love of a dainty Japanese maiden for an impulsive American artist and the terrible sacrifice she made when she found this love denied her is told in a succession of wondrous scenes beautiful in the photographic value and strong in plot and action.

REPUBLIC.

BEFORE YORKTOWN (Dec. 24).—Jerome S. Beresford, a lieutenant in His Majesty's Army during the Revolution, was a conspicuous figure in the war that made famous the name of Washington. Wounded in a skirmish while far away from headquarters, his comrades ask for assistance at the home of Dr. Adams. Beatrice, the only daughter of the aged doctor, volunteers to act as nurse and in the close companionship of the sick room, the two enemies fall in love with one another.

Lieutenant Beresford, almost in perfect health, is about to return to his army when he receives a visit from Major Fitzgerald, the head of the British Army in the vicinity. The Major becomes insulting when the old doctor and his daughter refuse to drink to the health of King George. He insists upon kissing Beatrice, who throws the contents of a wine glass into his face. During his absence from headquarters the plans of the Yorktown fortifications are stolen from his room by Beatrice's young brother, who is seriously wounded while escaping.

After the Britishers leave the home, Beatrice finds her brother and receives his dying command to deliver the plans to General Washington. Disguising herself in her brother's clothes, the young girl starts on her perilous undertaking. She is captured and brought before Major Fitzgerald, who recognizes her and demands the kiss she had refused him at her home. In desperation the girl seizes a heavy brass candlestick and knocks the Major senseless. She is about to escape through the window when Lieutenant Beresford intercepts her and demands the plans, which she reluctantly surrenders and the Lieutenant aids her to escape. Upon regaining consciousness the Major sees the open window and the Lieutenant leaning from it, and draws his own conclusions. He threatens Beresford with court martial, but is killed by a stray bullet before he can execute his threat.

Lieutenant Beresford is compelled to surrender to Washington and when Beatrice, who has found protection in Washington's camp, hears of Beresford being a prisoner of war she pleads for his pardon so effectively that General Washington cheerfully grants it and a happy reunion follows.

RELIANCE.

LOVE AND CHARITY (Dec. 13).—It is Christmas Eve, and the poor man looks at his motherless children with aching heart. They hang up their stockings for Santa Claus and pray that he may come and fill them. The father passes to the street and gazes bitterly at the happy throng laden with Christmas bundles. He peers into the window of a mansion and beholds the wealth of toys and candies being prepared for the rich children. In a desperate mood, he effects an entrance, determined that his children should not be disappointed. His movements are heard, and to escape detection he dons a Santa Claus disguise as the rich children rush into the room. He shows them the presents and endeavors to get away, but the children grab and hold him back, making him tell them stories, etc. The father and mother come downstairs and motion to him to go on with the deception till the children are gotten out of the room. The poor man tells his story, and the rich woman goes to his home and verifies it. She gathers up the poor kiddies in warm blankets and whisks them in her automobile to her own home, and there is a grand time had for all.

THE PLAYWRIGHT (Dec. 16).—The playwright is unable to finish the great play he is working on because of his wife's attentions. He goes to the woods to work alone, and meets his chum on a hunting trip. The latter is in love with the playwright's wife and sends for her in her husband's name. The playwright quarrels with his wife, not believing her story, and being angry with her for having disobeyed his request. She accepts the attentions of the chum. The husband comes to a part of his play which nonplusses him. A husband is supposed to accuse an innocent wife of being unfaithful, and to see how an innocent woman would answer he dramatically accuses his own wife. To his horror she confesses her growing attraction for the chum. A big scene takes place between the two men in which the chum's cowardice is shown up and bringing to the front the high character of the husband. The woman turns to him, her illusions dispelled, and the chum is kicked out of camp.

JUST SMILE (Dec. 16).—Two "Hallroom Boys" join a 'Smile Club" and try to pay their debts with smiles. It works—sometimes—and at other times it does not. After receiving a series of beatings they go home and dissolve the "Just Smile" club.

BISON.

BAR Z'S NEW COOK (Dec. 12).—The dainty cook makes quite a hit with the boys. It develops, however, that she only took the job after a quarrel with her husband, and there are many

ZIGOMAR! See page 929

EXHIBITORS TAKE NOTICE
Having bought the State right for Eastern and Central Ohio on 20 Years in Sing Sing. Without a doubt this is the best three reel Feature Film ever before the public.
For bookings address
SING SING FEATURE FILM CO., Crestline, Ohio

STOP

Supplying exhibitors with dirty, rainy films. Before sending them out, have same redeveloped, cleaned and softened.

Ortho Film Company
40 East 12th St., N. Y. C.

Sunlight, or any other light, has no effect on

MIRROROIDE

Proven by actual test to be the world's best rollable curtains and screens.

MIRROROIDE
will more than double your patronage.

MIRROROIDE
means perfect projection, perfect pictures, besides saves one-third of your juice bill.

NO HAZE, NO FLARE
NO EYE STRAIN

Used on our battleships and cruisers. The Government standard. Universally adopted in the largest theaters the world over, churches, etc. The Rev. Frederick Stockwell, of the First Presbyterian church, Newburgh, highly endorses Mirroroide as producing the finest pictures he ever saw.

MIRROROIDE
is also highly endorsed by Mr. Chapman, Gem Theater, Utica. He tells us his pictures are the talk of the city. He can't accommodate his increased patronage. Hundreds of other testimonials.

MIRROROIDE
Is the cheapest the best? Mirroroide don't lose the picture close up at a side angle.

MIRROROIDE
is a necessity to an illuminated theater and perfection in projection. Demonstration samples free. 3-yd. samples, 50 cents.

LET US SHOW YOU

BENJAMIN-GENTER CO.
Newburgh, N. Y.

YOU CAN'T DODGE POWERS

We're just soaring, high and away from all possible standards. That is an inspiration to us, and it's a reason for spending money. We are now giving you one of the most famous stars in the country.

DUPLEX STUDIO

MILDRED HOLLAND

in a repertoire of plays, including her world-known "Power Behind the Throne." In addition to these (regular releases) our Boost department is going to fire out to you the grandest line of matter you ever saw—free. But you've just got to demand

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS

Release for Tuesday, December 19.	Release for Saturday, December 23.
"CUPID'S BIG SISTER" and "TOURING BRUSSELS"	A full reel feature. "HEARTS OF ITALY"

Not going to say a word—read the synopsis, then don't rest till you get them.

Powers Motion Picture Co.
511 West 42nd Street New York City

THE ENTERPRISE (Portable) CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Price with carrying case, $35.00

Is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the

ONLY SATISFACTORY PORTABLE OUTFIT

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most satisfactory for the production of oxygen gas.

For Sale by Dealers Everywhere

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS 564-572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

sore hearts after hubby takes her away. Incidentally, her cooking causes many new patients for the doctor.

THE FOREMAN'S COURAGE (Dec. 15).—The brother of the foreman's sweetheart gets tangled up with the law, and is shot by the sheriff's posse. Wounded and exhausted he reaches his shack and the foreman is persuaded by the girl to don the brother's duster and lead the posse away while her brother escapes. The foreman is wounded and captured, but saves the culprit. Some time later the brother comes back and is given honest employment by the foreman. He is arrested at his sister's wedding, but released by the kindly sheriff.

AMBROSIO.

JORIO'S DAUGHTER (Dec. 6).—This subject is a dramatization of the tragedy of the famous writer, Gabriele d'Annunzio. It gives a vivid idea of the life and superstitions of the peasants inhabiting southern Italy. Mila is the beautiful daughter of Jorio, "the sorcerer," and elopes with Aligi. Aligi's father, who is madly infatuated with Mila and fights a duel with another admirer, follows the couple and is killed by his son. The parricide is about to be executed when Mila swears to the mob that she alone is guilty as she had bewitched Aligi, and caused him to commit the awful deed. Aligi is released and Mila burned at the stake.

SOLAX.

FICKLE BRIDGET (Dec. 13).—Bridget is an Irish cook. Rudolf, the German grocer, and Mike, the iceman, both get a "crush" on Bridget. Bridget is partial to neither of them.

While Bridget entertains Rudolf and Mike the family which employs her impatiently awaits the arrival of the soup. Her employer forcibly ejects her friends and proceeds to give Bridget a tongue-lashing, but is forced to make a hasty retreat under a resistless fire of crockery.

Bridget is about to decide to leave when she receives a telegram informing her that she is the heir to a fortune left to her by a dead uncle. She immediately quits her job.

After Bridget is established in fine quarters, Rudolf and Mike begin to lay seige to her heart. They soon find a rival in the form of a fencing master in pecuniary difficulties.

They plan to wreak their vengeance on this intruder, but the Count challenges them both to a duel. Not being very anxious to have their hearts punctured, they both set upon the Count and beat and disarm him. Rudolf instructs Murphy to hold on to the Count while he goes off with the foils. He buys red paint, puts the paint on one foil and comes to Bridget with "I've killed the Count." She embraces the heroic Rudolf.

In the meantime Mike suspects that Rudolf has double-crossed him and so proceeds to investigate. He finds when he runs breathlessly into Bridget's parlor with the Count in front that Rudolf is in soft.

Bridget sees the Count and it is all up with Rudolf. The Count loudly challenges, "You must all fight and the one who wins shall have the blushing bride." The Count wins and Bridget gets him in a half Nelson.

THE LITTLE KIDDIE MINE (Dec. 15).—Little Toots, who is the baby girl of a prospector, inherits her father's energy. She goes out into the open country to try her luck at digging for gold. Little Toots uncovers with her pick a caché of a "Captain Kid" of the plains. At this place is buried the highwayman's ill-gotten gains. Toots laboriously and joyously drags off the bags to her mother, proclaiming with elation that she has discovered a mine full of bags of gold.

Just then Jim, the terror of the plains, comes up and claims the return of the bags. Toots' father looms up suddenly and "gets the drop on Jim." Realizing that his game is crimped, Jim seizes Toots and holds her up in front of him and rides off.

Jim makes his escape and leaves Toots by the wayside, several miles from her home. Jim plans to avenge himself by trying to shift his crime over on Toots' father. This plan fails, however, and the desperado is placed behind the bars, where he belongs.

Later, Toots goes back to the place where she found Jim's treasure and to her surprise and the surprise of her father, unearths a real nugget. Father christens the place "The Little Kiddie Mine."

CHAMPION.

THE COWARD'S FLUTE (Dec. 18).—Arthur Paget, son of the General of that name, was the coward. That is, nothing could induce him to take up arms in behalf of his country. He occupied his leisure moments in playing on a flute, and loved it next best to Lucy Larcom, and he certainly loved her dearly.

Lieut. Blaney also loved Lucy, and his second love was for gold. Aye, he loved gold better than he did the girl. But Lucy didn't know this and she admired his bravery as much as she despised the other's cowardice. Day by day Blaney won renown, and equally did Arthur Paget shrink more and more in craven fear of battle, until his own father and Evidence!

As one of the many proofs that we use brains in making up your programs, read what H. F. Rostiser, Palace Theater, South Bend, Ind., says: "Your service is excellent. Our patrons are still talking about the splendid program you sent us last week. We cannot express our appreciation."—Why don't YOU hook up with Laemmle so you'll feel like writing a letter like that?

Carl Laemmle, President

The Laemmle Film Service

New Number

204 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1517 Farnam St., Omaha, Neb.
515 Mulberry St., Des Moines, Iowa
1110 Wyandotte St., Kansas City, Mo.

The BIGGEST and BEST film renter in the World

(My Free Employment Bureau is at your service, whoever you are.)

CRITICAL INSPECTION

We invite a critical inspection of our films. We have worked hard towards the attainment of perfection. Look over the following and you will see perfect photography and subjects which represent careful direction and clever acting.

Bison Features

"BAR Z's NEW COOK" Released Tuesday, December 12
"THE FOREMAN'S COURAGE" Friday, December 15
"COWGIRLS' PRANKS" Tuesday, December 19
"AN INDIAN MARTYR" Friday, December 22

"THE RUN ON THE BANK"—Released Tuesday, December 26, is a sensational feature, in which is vividly shown a run on a bank, and how a man saved his employer's money. This is a great picture.

"GETTING HIS MAN"—Released Friday, December 29. Presenting some of the most thrilling scenes ever staged. The sheriff gets his man in the end, but is foiled in one scene where the man takes a daring plunge down the mountainside, and horse and rider come tumbling down.

COMING! COMING! THE BIG ONES! COMING! COMING!

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO., 1 UNION SQUARE NEW YORK CITY

THE FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL FILM CO.

710 COLUMBIA BLDG. Cleveland

STATE RIGHTS! TERRITORY RIGHTS!

Stupendous Three-Reel Productions
Act Quick Before the Other Fellow

"Love and Aviation"

Magnificent and Spectacular Aerial picture with a Thrilling and Dramatic Story. Bound to be a money-getter for both state rights man and theatre manager. Elegant lithos and stands.

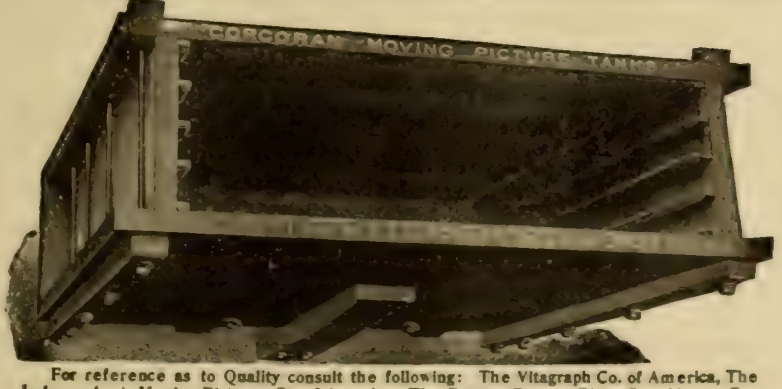
Mr. Exhibitor: Get into the state or territory rights business. Organize a stock company in your town to buy these big feature films. The feature subjects are becoming more popular every day. Write for free illustrated booklets.

ZIGOMAR! ZIGOMAR! ZIGOMAR! ZIGOMAR! ZIGOMAR!

Know the meaning of that word? It stands for the most sensational film production in years—a $25,000 detective subject, depicting a chase through seven countries of Europe. ZIGOMAR was the cause of the chase. His gang of plunderers left the BRAND OF THE BIG "Z" wherever they appeared.

All our films copyrighted and passed by Censor Board.

You can see them at our Chicago office, Delaware Building, 36 W. Randolph Street, or at Cleveland offices.



For reference as to Quality consult the following: The Vitagraph Co. of America, The Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America, The Powers Picture Plays Co., Nestor Co., Thanhouser Co., Rex, Champion, Melies, Gaumont, St. Louis Motion Picture Co., Kinemacolor Co. of America, N. Y. Motion Picture Co., Bison.

Corcoran Moving Picture Tanks

Develop your films to perfection. Save Time and Reduce Your Expenses by using a "Corcoran Film Development Tank." All up-to-date houses are now installing the "Corcoran System."

Send for Price List No. 5

A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.

No. 11 JOHN STREET :: NEW YORK CITY

Import Department

International Film Traders

5 West 14th St., New York

Weekly Importations

Feature Films

Masterpieces of the World's Greatest Producers ranging in length from 1000—4000 ft, selected by our own European Agents.

Artistic Posters 3 Sheets and more.

Features sold outright without restriction.

Correspondence solicited.

mother turned from him in utter disgust. But he found comfort in his flute when he could look for it nowhere else—not even to his Lucy.

The brave Lieut. Blaney, captured by the enemy in battle, was tempted to betray his general's plans. As a result of this act, victory perched on the banners of the enemy. Arthur's father, the General, was in imminent peril. His troops were cut up and in full retreat. It was agonizing to Lucy and Arthur's mother, who viewed it from the window. Suddenly a noble inspiration evolved Arthur's soul. Dashing forth, he met the retreating soldiers, inspired them with his wonderful playing and led them back to fight, turning defeat to glorious victory.

He was brought back from the field, wounded, but triumphant. His parents honored him, Lucy adored him. His rival, Blaney, was dead and stained with ignominous dishonor.

BY DECREE OF FATE (Dec. 20).—Charles Morton, George Campbell, and Martha Redmond are the trio held in the web of the story. Morton thought that he, above all others, was the favored one in Martha's sight, so one day when he called on her with a bouquet of flowers, it surprised him to find that George Campbell was his rival.

Now Charles, being hot-tempered and unreasonable, flung down the flowers and rushed madly from the presence of the woman he loved. "What fools we mortals be!" And Charles was no exception, for he betook himself to a saloon to drown his sorrow in drink. His wild entrance thereto resulted in a collision with a "bum." Words came to blows, and with a bottle Charles struck down the man. Though his act was unintentional, the fellow died. His sentence of five years was a light one, considering that death might have been the penalty.

What strange things may occur in five years? Martha Redmond married George Campbell, the rival; the man whose presence had sent Charles Morton on his wild tare that day; she and her husband had departed for parts unknown.

Awakening to the great responsibility of life, Charles had studied medicine. He now set out for the West that he might devote himself in its wildest spots to the cause of the profession. And soon came his chance to prove his real worth, and he accepted it with the spirit of a brave man. A man was down with malignant small-pox. Charles unhesitatingly visited the victim and found his once-hated rival! He did not falter, however. Night and day he labored for that life, doubly so, for she was concerned. Despite heroic measures, the patient passed away, and Martha became a widow.

Charles had performed his duty, and no selfish thought had influenced, nor any possibility of winning favor. He deemed himself unworthy. That very sentiment ennobled him. And Martha understood! It came to her like a revelation, when one day she was about to leave for the East. Fate decreed that she should stay. Martha stayed and Charles was made happy by her.

THANHOUSER.

THE TOMBOY (Dec. 19).—A wealthy miner, having no near relatives, leaves his two little daughters to the guardianship of a former chum of his, who had left the West with a fortune and returned to his old home in an Eastern city. The guardian is rather overwhelmed by his responsibilities, but induces his old aunt to come and keep house for him, and prepares to give his charges a hearty welcome.

The guardian is a young man, and is surprised to find that one of his wards is of marriageable age, beautiful and vivacious. He promptly proceeds to lose his heart to her, and while she admires him immensely the girl is finally thoroughly impressed with the idea that her guardian would gladly be rid of her.

This feeling is intensified when she attends a reception and her awkardness is made more manifest. She decides that she is out of place in her new surroundings, and runs away after writing a pitiful note to her guardian. She takes her horse with her and has some wild, undefined plan of making her way out West again, where she believes she will be loved and appreciated.

Fortune favors her, for she runs across a Wild West Show, where her beauty and horsemanship promptly win her congenial employment. She is sorry to be separated from her little sister, but believes that it is for the best, and that her guardian "will make a lady" of the little one, as she asked in her last note.

The younger sister mourns constantly, however, and is finally taken to the country by her worried guardian. There she and another child attend a Wild West show, and chance so ordains it that she and her sister meet.

The elder girl weeps over the sister and decides to take her with her. The little one, however, has a better plan than that. She has learned from her guardian how he misses the elder girl, and being a bright child, has shrewdly figured out the facts in the case. Furthermore, she loves both her sister and her guardian and does not want to lose either.

So she slips away, finds her guardian and whispers to him the glad news that the missing one has been found. It requires no urging on her part to induce him to go with her. He tells his elder ward that he cannot live without her, that she is more to him than any other woman, and begs her to become his wife. Convinced of his love, she finally consents, and finds that the Girl from the West is the girl for the Man from the East, that is, when she is the girl he loves.

CINDERELLA (Dec. 22).—A meek, mild Baron, with one motherless daughter, married again, and his second choice was an unlucky one. For not only did the woman browbeat her husband and make his life unhappy, but she beat and ill-treated poor little Cinderella, and made her a servant. The cruel stepmother had two daughters of her own, who were given every luxury, and they aided their mother to make the life of their stepsister very sad indeed.

The King's son gave a grand ball, and the Baron and his family were among the invited guests. But when Cinderella wanted to go, she was cuffed and jeered at, and told that she must stay in the kitchen, her proper place, so the stepmother said.

Little Cinderella helped the others to get ready for their night of enjoyment, and then sat in the kitchen alone in her rags. Really no one could blame her if she cried.

Fortunately for the poor child she had a fairy Godmother, but up to this time she had never been in evidence. But the Fairy Godmother, who had been keeping an eye on the Baron's household, decided that it was about time for her to make her influence felt.

So she dropped into the kitchen via the fireplace (Fairy Godmothers seldom use doors; it is hard to say why, but they don't) and told Cinderella that not only was she going to the ball, but she was going in style. Her magic wand enabled her to provide a coach, coachman, footman and horses out of a pumpkin, a lizard, some mice and a rat. Then another turn of the wand changed Cinderella's rags into a fine ball gown, and she started for the castle in high spirits. But she was told that she must be home by midnight and like a dutiful little girl she promised. Also, the Fairy Godmother told her that at midnight all her finery would revert to its former state.

Cinderella created a sensation at the ball, and the Prince devoted all his attention to her. The wicked stepmother and her daughters did not recognize in the gorgeous guest the forlorn child that they had treated like a slave.

In fact, Cinderella had such a good time that it was midnight before she knew it. She ran away as fast as she could, but half way down the steps her gay garb turned into rags, and the coach and attendants became mice ,pumpkins and lizards.

As she fled she dropped one of her slippers, and the Prince found it. Then he caused proclamation to be made that he would marry the lady who could wear the slipper if she could produce the mate to it. The stepsisters tried it on, with other dames, but failed to prove that it could fit. Then Cinderella asked for a test. She proved that the slipper was hers, and as she did so her rags turned back to a ball gown again. And the Prince married her, and they lived happily together forever afterward. What became of the wicked sisters no one knows or cares. But probably the father of Cinderella had a happier life, for the chances were that his wicked wife was afraid to annoy him, fearing that the Fairy Godmother might get busy again.

AMERICAN.

THE GOLD LUST (Dec. 21).—The sheriff's daughter learns to love Jack Caxton, but her father is very much displeased, as he wishes her to marry his young foreman. Learning that a large consignment is at the bank, the foreman visits the saloon in search of his pals and finding one of them, urges him to rob the bank. In effecting the holdup, the cashier puts up such a strong resistance that he is killed. A cowboy riding by notifies the sheriff, and taking the treacherous foreman with him, he starts on the trail of the bank robber. He sends the cowboys to search in another direction. Coming up with the robber, a brisk fight ensues and he is killed and the gold recovered.

Knowing that the sheriff's daughter scorns him, and the lust for gold overcoming him, the foreman shoots the sheriff and steals the gold. He returns to the sheriff's house and tells the daughter that her father was wounded by the robber and had sent for her, his plan being to kidnap her and leave the country with the girl and the gold. Jack Caxton comes upon the sheriff and learns the truth. The sheriff dies and the posse coming up imagines he is guilty of the murder. He calls their attention to the approaching figures of the foreman and the sheriff's daughter. They hastily conceal themselves and hear the foreman map out his plans to the frightened girl. He is overpowered and led away by the posse and Caxton remains to comfort his grieving sweetheart.

THE DUEL OF CANDLES (Dec. 25).—A poor prospector and a prosperous ranchman, who in reality is a horse thief, are in love with the widow's daughter. The girl gives her heart to the poor man much to the disfavor of her mother. When news of her betrothal reaches the horse thief's ears he plans to get even. He captures the prospector at work and forges a letter in the prospector's handwriting to the girl's mother, saying that he is going East to marry a former sweetheart. Believing it true, the girl is soon persuaded to marry the rich ranchman.

The poor man is soon liberated from the horse thief's camp, where he was imprisoned and goes immediately to the ranchman's unhappy wife. She begs him to take her away, but he will not do it, as she is not his legally wedded wife. Just then the horse thief comes in. The poor prospector gives him a chance for his life. He places two candles on the table (one for each man), lights both and bids the wife to leave the room. Who'sever candle burns out first must die by his own hands. They swear to it.

Fate has it that the husband's candle burns out first. His treacherous nature asserts itself and in an instant he pounces upon the prospector in an effort to murder him. In the struggle that ensues the horse thief's gun goes off, mortally wounding him. The wife runs in and finds that Fate has liberated her from a distasteful union.

NESTOR.

ONLY AN ICEMAN (Dec. 11).—John Mayfield is rich, young and healthy, but seems to be unhappy. So, changing his stylish and costly garments for those of an ordinary laborer, he writes his own recommendation and sallies forth in search of a job.

The Monopoly Ice Co. and John are soon connected, and the new iceman proves to be a veritable boon to poor people. He dispenses ice freely and, in some instances, he even contribtues his own cash to alleviate the suffering of needy ones.

Violet Claire, a charming young heiress, is delighted to temporarily fill the place of Nora, the cook, who is suddenly called away. In her menial capacity it falls to Violet to hail the iceman, who happens to be John. It's a case of love at first sight.

The day's work over, John is one ton of ice to the bad and has to make good. There is no room for such as he in the Monopoly Ice Co., and he is peremptorily fired. At home John eats with rare good appetite. In an endeavor to draw solace from his calabash pipe, he dozes into the Land of Dreams, and the girl appears before him with her witching smile. He awakens and determines to buy the ice wagon. Meanwhile, Violet also dreams of the handsome peddler of frozen water.

On the morrow, John purchases the ice wagon and his first delivery is at the Claire mansion. Here, forgetting the ice, he helps the "cook" with the kitchen work. They know how to combine work with pleasure, and while busy with the combination the maternal parent "butts in," and the pseudo iceman is again fired.

John Mayfield sends his auto and an invitation to Mrs. Claire and her daughter. The ladies eagerly accept. John asks for Violet's hand; Mama is undecided, but John is soon made happy.

THE LAW OF THE RANGE (Dec. 13).—As Sheriff Randolph and his son, Walter, came in sight of Carter's saloon, they noted the boys excitedly mounting their horses to go in pursuit of Bill Herbert, who, not content with picking a quarrel

LECTURES

The MOVING PICTURE WORLD has prepared the following Lectures by W. STEPHEN BUSH, in Booklet form, at $1.00 each, postage prepaid

How To Put On THE PASSION PLAY
(Second Edition)
For Pathe Freres World Renowned Production

How To Put On THE CRUSADERS
OR JERUSALEM DELIVERED
For the World's Best Film Co., Feature Film (Copyright, 1911).

KEY and COMPLETE LECTURE for
DANTE'S INFERNO
For Monopol Film Co.'s Five Reel Production of the Milano Films Co. (Italy).

Copyrighted and Published Only By
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
25 East 23rd Stree NEW YORK CITY

FREE

Send postal card with name and address plainly written and receive free of charge sample pages of "Orpheum Collection" of Moving Picture (dramatic and descriptive) music. Until further notice these splendid collections will be offered at the following special prices:

No. 1 (post paid).....58 cts.
No. 2 (post paid).....58 cts.
Both numbers post paid for $1.15.

Clarence E. Sinn
1501 Sedgwick St. Chicago, Ill.

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
2549 Archer Avenue, :: CHICAGO, ILL.

LISTEN, MR. EXHIBITOR!

When you get all the Independent Films released by Thanhouser, Nestor, Reliance, Bison, Imp, Rex, Solax, Powers, American, Eclair.

2	reels	6	times	per	week,	$14.00
2	"	7	"	"	"	15.00
3	"	6	"	"	"	16.00
3	"	7	"	"	"	17.00

WHY HESITATE

NATIONAL FILM BROKERS, 186 N. La Salle St., CHICAGO

AN INVITATION TO EXHIBITORS

Exhibitors from coast to coast are cordially invited to visit the exhibition rooms of the Western office of the Moving Picture World, Suite 306, 307, 309, No. 167 West Washington Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Representatives of the paper will be glad to extend every courtesy, and give you information, if desired, with regard to the various propositions that are advertised through the columns of the Moving Picture World.

CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

INFORMATION BUREAU, MOVING PICTURE WORLD
167 West Washington St. CHICAGO, ILL.

Advertisers, send us samples of your product and a liberal supply of catalogues with Pete, the half-breed, had cowardly shot him in the back. Taking their lead, the sheriff galloped after him, but Herbert cleverly eluded them, and the men were forced to return, believing he had reached the state line.

In the meanwhile, Walter, being refused shelter at Carter's for Pete, had persuaded his mother to put the half-breed in a small unused room, and there he remained until thoroughly recovered. Later, as the grateful Pete wended his way homeward, he beheld Herbert in the act of holding up the Pony Express, and although the half-breed was unable to go to the young man's rescue, being entirely unarmed, he crept stealthily after the outlaw, watched until Herbert hid the plunder in his shack, and then followed cautiously after.

While this was transpiring, Walter had gotten into an argument with Big Hank, and in the struggle to obtain possession of the gun, it had been discharged. The bully was only slightly wounded, but panic-stricken. Walter had galloped away, only to be pursued by the sheriff and his posse, who mistook the fleeing figure for the hold-up man.

Seeing Herbert's shack, and glad of any haven, Walter bounded through the door and securely fastened it. The sheriff and his men dashed up, hurriedly forced their way into the place, and discovered Walter amid the outlaw's plunder.

With bowed head and trembling hands, the unhappy father placed the handcuffs upon his son, when to the surprise of all, the half-breed, with Herbert as his prisoner, appeared and made the explanation which brought joy to the entire party.

IN THE EARLY DAYS (Dec. 16).—It would only be a matter of a few months—perhaps weeks, before he would be able to send for her; so Tom Jordan assured his wife, as he set out for the West to invest their savings in a small ranch. And, indeed, ere, six months had passed, Lucy received a letter, telling her to come. Accordingly, with little Ned and baby Annie, the delighted wife started at once, and was almost at her journey's end, when a hostile band of Indians attacked the stage-coach. As the driver stopped to return their fire (the passengers were well armed), little Ned, screaming with terror, jumped to the ground and fled into the woods, while Lucy, with the baby still in her arms, ran after him. Hearing his mother's voice, the child turned as Lucy, who had been struck in the head by an Indian's bullet, sank to the ground. In vain did the boy implore her to speak to him; then, more frightened than ever, he hurried on, but this time in the direction of the stage-coach.

Here, thanks to the wild chase which the boys of Bar S Ranch had made to the stage's rescue, for they had seen the Indian attack from an adjoining peak, the redskins had been driven back; so, hastily lifting Ned inside, the men gave the signal to start, and it was not until they reached their destination and Tom sprang forward to greet his wife and children, that they realized Mrs. Jordan was not there.

Between his sobs, the little chap confirmed their worst fears; Lucy Jordan had been killed by the Indians. Such, however, was not the case, as the young wife, with Annie still clutched to her breast, had already staggered to her feet, when Nathan Anderson, called White Beard, the hermit, found her and assisted her to his cabin. But her memory was a blank; from whence she came or where she wished to go, Lucy was unable to tell him. Believing the mother and child to be the only surviving members of a family that had been massacred, Nathan promptly offered them what hospitality lay in his power. So the weeks lengthened into months, and months into years, until Annie was fifteen years old, and it was she, who, running through the woods to bring aid to "grandfather" Nathan, who had been taken with a fainting spell, met her father and brother riding to the adjoining ranch.

Once at the cabin, where they found Nathan had recovered, Tom instantly recognized his wife, while she gazed at him in wonder; then slowly, but surely, the veil was lifted, her long-lost reason returned and she sprang joyfully into his arms.

MUTT AND JEFF MAKE THE FEATHERS FLY (Dec. 16).—The pangs of hunger drive both Mutt and Jeff out in the cold world.

Jeff snoops around the exterior of a grocery store, the proprietor of which happens to be lynx-eyed and ready-footed. Mutt meets with better success. A farmer is on his way to the market with a truckload of vegetables and poultry. A sympathetic chicken deserts the wagon and soon becomes Mutt's property.

At home Mutt makes the feathers fly, then proceeds to roast the bird. The fowl's fragrance emitted from the stove gently wafts Mutt to sleep. Enter Jeff. Chicken! In a moment nothing but the bones are left and, as in the bones there is strength, won't Mutt be strong? He is, and Jeff is compelled to do the Marathon act on a full stomach. The little fellow is saved from a rough "pan-handling" by the arrival of the owner of the late chicken and a guardian of the law, who "leads" Mutt to the lock-up.

LUX.

BILL AND HIS CHUM TIRE OF MARRIED LIFE (Dec. 15).—Bill had a quarrel and determined to escape married bliss. He tripped merrily down the street as usual, and encountered his chum, who was in the like woful condition. After holding council they both decided to quit this world of sin in the most comfortable manner they could strike upon. Their jump from a high window proved an utter failure, as their fall was broken by the blind of the shop below. They tried to drown themselves, but that also proved a failure. However, the finding of their hats and coats gave rise to grave fears in the now repentant bosoms of their irate spouses. They next tried gas. Just as they were feeling really indisposed and beginning to wish that they hadn't, their tearful wives arrived upon the scene and promised to be good.

REX.

THE LOGGING INDUSTRY (Dec. 14).—The picture shows a great branch of human endeavor, with a sufficiency of human interest. Owing to the graet loss of life and the wholesale destruction of timebr due to the most ruthless and relentless foe of unsettled domains—the forest fire—the Government employs fire wardens to make daily inspections of the forests.

Then there's a scene showing men, experts in the work, felling trees. The men must measure the exact distance and direction the tree will fall.

In rapid and thrilling succession the picture goes on to show "bucking," the operation of trimming the tree after it has fallen; the "donkey" engines hauling logs across the canyon by means of cables and loading them on the trucks; the logging train that hauls the logs a distance of ten miles from the logging camps—one of the best equipped logging trains in the service; dumping the logs from the trains into the water, where they are cut and marked ready for the buyers.

And then—a great forest fire! In many instances these fires are started through carelessness; but Nature makes man pay a dreadful penalty for his negligence. A panoramic view shows the utter destruction caused by the fire. It means more than destruction for the towns around; it means distraction as well, devastation, destitution!

But listen, the logging industry doesn't entail only danger and hardship. There's fun, too—real gaiety—"burling," the pastime of the lumber jack, consisting of rolling the great logs, from which the bark has been peeled, at great speed.

IMP.

BILLY'S SEANCE (Dec. 16).—Billy is out for a stroll when he spies a prepossessing-looking young woman. He follows and she enters the office of a spiritualist. Producing a tip, he is initiated into the mysteries of table rocking and other occult practices and becomes interested.

In the seance he is impressed with the idea that he is out to mystify his friends, and the soothsayer sells him a book, which explains all about it. Repairing to the club he cons the book and engages in experiments. The results are magical and he hastens to announce the fact to his friends. They are skeptical and treat his efforts lightly. They make all manner of sport of his demonstrations and Billy waxes wroth. He is rudely disturbed and casts about for a method of revenge. Adjoining the room is the electrical apparatus and Billy enlists the services of the electrician by means of a generous bribe. A wire is strung to the table and the plans carefully made to humiliate the unbelievers. They are called in and Billy pompously announces that he will give a table-rocking demonstration. He proceeds to do so solemnly and the friends place their hands on the table as directed. The current is turned on and they are imprisoned, being unable to move their hands from the table.

Billy dances about in joy and his friends yell in agony. Billy declines to release them and takes keen delight in torturing his tormentors, but their cries reach the ears of two policemen, who rush in. The electricity is turned off and the friends accuse Billy of cruelty.

Billy squares it with the cops by throwing a bundle of money on the table, but when they reach for it the current is again switched on and they cannot remove their hands from the table. The finale is ludicrous in the extreme. (Copyrighted, 1911, by the I. M. P. Company of America.)

THE BUNGALOW BURGLARS (Dec. 16).—The Fords take possession of their bungalow and are delighted. They wish to have others share the advantage of living in the country and, unbeknown to each other, invite Guy and Agnes down for a week's end visit. The guests have never met. On the evening of their unannounced arrival, the Fords go to the city, not expecting them.

The young woman arrives first, to find the doors locked. She must get in, as the trip back to the station is a long one over a lonely road. She crawls through a window and gains egress. Once in, she reads of two burglars—a man and a woman—both handsome and bold, who are preying upon

We furnish you the finest singers, bands and orchestra music. Let Caruso sing for you, or Melba. Have Paderewski, the greatest pianist, render selections for you. Or the great actor, Robert Hilliard, render the difficult masterpieces of the stage. All this is possible by means of our wonderful electric sound conveyor—the magnetic reproducer. Why pay a singer $20 or $25 a week, when we furnish the best from $5 to $10 a month? Be the first to secure this wonderful invention in your city. We give exclusive rights. MUSIC PRODUCTION CO., 5228 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill.

THE TOURNAMENT FILM CO.
TOLEDO, OHIO.
Owners of the following feature films:
1911 Cheyenne Cowboy and Indian Frontier Celebration.
Fall Round-Up on the Y-6 Ranch.
State Rights for These Films for Sale.
Bookings Can Be Made by Writing Us.

Solved at last REID'S DIFFUSER
Gives DISSOLVING EFFECT with SINGLE STEREOPTICON
Every Operator—Every Exhibitor—should have one. Can be used with any machine. Prepaid for $2.00 bill
Reid Diffuser Co., 26 Waverly Ct., Chicago, Ill.

CURTAINYLINE
What is Curtainyline? Curtainyline is a haphazardly coined name for a curtain coating, but for this name and the right to manufacture and sell the said curtain coating under the said trade name of "Curtainyline," I paid a good sum of money. This curtain coating is a water-paint of very simple ingredients, but it is correctly proportioned and scientifically mixed by special machinery for that purpose and when properly applied to your screen (which is a very easy and inexpensive operation) it gives you a so-called "day light" screen, improving the pictures fully one-hundred per cent over the ordinary curtain and a considerable per cent over an aluminum or silver metallic coating. Write me how to make a "Day Light Curtain." Curtainyline has been on the market about three years and has proven universally satisfactory. A can of Curtainyline will cover 150 to 160 square feet. Price $3.00. Ask your Film Exchange or Dealer for it. If they don't have it I will send you a sample can, charges prepaid on receipt of $3.00

E. E. FULTON, Jobber
154 West Lake Street CHICAGO
Everything in the Moving Picture Line
Specialties: "2-in-1" Film Cement, "P.M.Special" Oil, Ticket Holders, "Curtainyline" (screen coating)
Carbon Sharpeners, Current-Savers, Lenses, Condensers, Etc.
Middle West distributor of the Powers machine and parts. Immediate shipment

Cheering News for Southern Exhibitors Using Independent Service

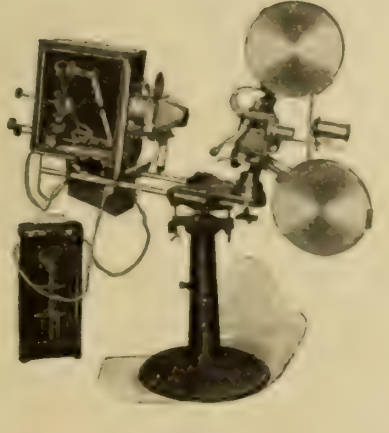
ON ACCOUNT of the number of inquiries we are receiving from Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and Florida for service, and finding ourselves unable to take the proper care of these from St. Louis, we have decided to open several buying Independent exchanges in the above-mentioned territory. We want to locate in cities centrally located, having good railroad facilities, and best adapted for a film exchange. We need your assistance to select the best points. Please communicate with us at once.

Yours very truly,

Swanson-Crawford Film Company

726 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.

One Hundred and Fifteen Thousand People in the First Fifteen Days



was the attendance at the lectures of the Southern-Union Pacific Railway System at the Land Show, Chicago, November 18th to December 9th, 1911.

This great railway system has given most substantial proof of their unbounded faith in the moving picture through the expenditure of more than Twenty-five Thousand Dollars for a three weeks' exhibition of the wonders lying along the roads controlled by them. This company had erected for their purpose two complete moving picture theatres seating about 500 people in each and conducted alternately one-half hour lectures.

The Machines used were one 1908 Model Motiograph and one 1910 Model Motiograph—"Nuf Sed."

1912 MODELS NOW BEING SHIPPED

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY

564-572 WEST RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO

For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere

isolated houses in that vicinity and she is somewhat frightened.

In the meantime, Guy has arrived and is conveyed over to the bungalow. He enters also through the window and reads the same newspaper account. Agnes sees him enter and at once concludes he is the bold burglar mentioned. He hears her in an adjoining room and thinks she is the woman burglar he has just read about. Each is frightened, but resolves to stay and see it out.

They meet and are agreeable, one trying to outdo the other in hospitality, all the while trying to circumvent each other and foil an intent to loot the house. Finally, they become separated and Guy secretes himself in one closet and Agnes hides in another, each awaiting the arrival of their friends.

When the Fords return home they repair to their respective rooms, there to find their guests concealed. They each sally forth to capture a burglar, with the result that the whole thing is explained and introductions follow. The young people are very much impressed with each other to the delight of their hosts. (Copyrighted, 1911, by the I. M. P. Co. of America.)

THE GIRL AND THE HALF BACK (Dec. 18).—Early in life Dick Alliston and Victor Fisher have learned that "all is fair in love and war." One of them proceeds to carry out this unwise teaching in due course. Both were in love with the same girl, and Dick contrived by the means of a misleading letter to the fair little lady to obtain an advantage of his rival—an advantage which had its climax on the football field.

Victor was placed out of the game by means of this letter and had the mortification of being banished to a part of the field where he had to stand and watch the game in progress, powerless to help his side. However, the fair Alice gets to learn that she has been deceived by means of the letter, which is produced on the football field. The result is that Dick is put out of the game, Victor takes his place, wins the game for his side as well as his sweetheart, both of them forgiving, in their new-found happiness, the bad boy, Dick, when all is over. (Copyrighted, 1911, by I. M. P. Co. of America.)

CHINESE WAR CRUISER "HAI-CHI" (Dec. 18).—In this subject, a series of views is given of the Chinese Cruiser "Hai-Chi," while she was lying in Charleston Harbor a few weeks ago. There are besides the view of the big ship herself, pictures showing the movements of her great guns, deck scenes, Chinese Sailors, Chinese band playing American airs, ship's mascot, a fine Angora cat, Sir Thomas, and other interesting views, making a highly attractive and novel subject.

THE PROFESSOR (Dec. 21).—Professor Grimes, a crank on scientific matters, is addicted to somnambulism without the knowledge of his associates. He is impetuous and easily disturbed, consequently, he is feared by Susie Davis, his private secretary.

The story opens with Grimes receiving a large sum of money from a caller. As he is inclined to be miserly, he starts for the bank to deposit the money, but finds it is closed. Returning home, he places it in the safe.

Grimes has a nephew, Ralph, who is being hounded by a creditor, and he hasn't the money to liquidate the indebtedness. He tells his troubles to Susie Davis, his sweetheart, and she assists him, giving him the money she has saved through frugality.

The next morning the professor misses his money when he examines the safe and is wild. He secures the services of a detective and that investigator is not long in discovering that the nephew has paid a debt with quite a large sum of money. Ralph is under suspicion. He proves his innocence by the girl to the satisfaction of the sleuth, who is in a quandary as to how the money disappeared. He resolves to keep a watch on the safe and does so.

In the still hours of the night Professor Grimes slowly descends the stairs, walking in his sleep, and returns the money to the safe. The mystery is cleared up. In the morning Grimes is confronted by the detective, who explains to him the mystery of the safe robbery. Ralph and Susie are rewarded by being restored to the good graces of the uncle, who wishes them to forget all about the incident. (Copyrighted, 1911, by I. M. P. Co. of America.)

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING COMPANY.

Monday, December 11th, 1911.

Plantation, "Broken Violin" (Am. Dr.).....1000
Clarendon, "A Fool & His Money"..... 700
Clarendon, "Food and Water"(Com.)..... 300
Mono, "Cook That Didn't Cook" (Com.)..... 508
Acquila, "Sunrise and Sunset" (Dr.)..... 440
Hepwix, "Behind the Scenes" (Com.)..... 400
Hepwix, "An Amateur Burglar" (Com.)..... 575

Tuesday, December 12th, 1911.

Rose, "Montana Ranchman" (W. Dr.)..... 980
D. Biograph, "Pro Patria" (Military Dr.).... 981
Helios, "Angel of the House" (Dr.)..... 499
Messter, "Military Gymnasts" (Military)..... 501

Wednesday, December 13th, 1911.

Federal, "Child of Nature" (W. Dr.) 996
Mondia, "Making of a Ladys' Man" (Com.).. 450
Mondia, "Struggling Author" (Com.)..... 545
Latium, "World and its Ways" (Historical)...1000

Thursday, December 14th, 1911.

Washington, "Girls I Used to Know" (Am. Dr.) 988
Hepwix, "Without Her Father's Consent (Dr.) 525
Hepwix, "Double Elopement" (Com.)..... 465
Film d'Art, "Mignon" (Operatic) 1331

Friday, December 15th, 1911.

Mohawk, "Sign of the Red Men" (Indian Love Story) 935
Cricks & Martin, "Kind-hearted Percival" (Com.) 1000
Acquila, "Just as the Sun Went Down" (Dr.)..1000
Clarendon, "Speedy, the Telegraph Boy, Finds a Pocket-book (Com.)..... 1000
D. Bioscope, "Secretly Married" (Dr.)..... 1331

Saturday, December 16th, 1911.

Oklahoma, "Indian Runner" (Indian Dr.)..... 985
D. Bioscope, "The Little Hero" (Dr.)..... 958
Savoia, "Double Deception" (Com.)..... 700
Savioa, "In Ardenes, Belgium" (Scenic)..... 309

Sunday, December 17th, 1911.

California, "Darling of the Mine" (W. Dr.).. 923
Messter, "Love and Smartness" 1003
Comerio, "Embarking of Italian Army" (Mil.) 500
Comerio, "Venice by Night" (Educational).... 210
Comerio, "Lakes of the Alps" (Scenic)..... 260

Among the Exhibitors

Richmond, Cal.—Turner & Dahken are engineering the plan for the erection of a naw moving picture show at Fifth and McDonald.

Lorain, Ohio.—Lorain Amusement Co. Capital $10,000, G. A. Resck, R. C. Horn and J. M. Jones.

Louisville, Ky.—Plans and specifications have been prepared for the Pastime Theater Co., who will erect a new $8,000 theater at 18th and Gallagher Streets.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—E. Mehesy, Jr., will erect an addition to theater at 272 South Main Street, to cost $4,000.

Los Angeles, Cal.—The Chas. Alpin Amusement Co., will erect a new theater at Spring and Fifth Streets.

Aurora, N. Y.—Aurora Grand Opera House Co. will erect theater. Capital $10,000. John T. Henderson, E. K. Henderson and Chas. Lamb.

Winston-Salem, N. C.—Jones, Hill & Hall awarded contract to Pike & Bullard, to erect theater to cost $4,200.

New York, N. Y.—W. H. McElfatrick has prepared plans for a new four-story theater to be erected at 115th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue, to cost $125,000.

Muskegon, Mich.—Lou Somers and Carl Ray have leased the property formerly occupied by the Young Men's Club, and will establish the Orpheum playhouse.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Pennsylvania Construction Co. will erect a one-story moving picture house at 2846-48 North 22nd Street, to cost $10,000.

Cleveland, Ohio.—The R. & F. Co. Capital $5,000. F. R. Forbes, B. A. Round and L. D. Round.

Chicago, Ill.—Oscar Eiger will erect a new $6,000 theater at 539 West North Avenue.

Streator, Ill.—Chas. Vance has sold the Dreamland to Harry Carroll.

Llewellyn, Pa.—Chas. Peiffer and Albert Acaley will, in the near future, start in the moving picture business.

New York, N. Y.—Shampan & Shampan have plans for the construction of a new movin gpicture house at 153-5 Monroe Street, for Geo. G. Segal, to cost $10,000.

Chicago, Ill.—Stockholm Amusement Co. Capital $8,000, will erect a theater. J. M. Delaney, R. W. Delaney and A. L. Heald.

Detroit, Mich.—Burton & Hoffman, of the Home Bank, will erect a new moving picture show at Chene and Grandy Streets, to cost $5,700.

Denison, Ia.—A new opera house, to cost $25,000, will be erected here.

La Crosse, Wis.—Plans are being made for the erection of a new $25,000 theater here, to be called The Orpheum.

Minneapolis, Minn.—F. J. Lake will erect a new moving picture theatr at 1305 W. Lake St., to cost $2,000.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Edward Kezick is preparing plans for a new theater to be erected at Green Bay Ave. & Ring St.

Chicago, Ill.—A new moving picture theater will be erected at 2611 Lincoln Ave., for Fred Hartman, to cost $5,000.

Laramie, Wyo.—A new opera house is being considered for this town.

Antigo, Wis.—Manager Hanson, of the local Palace Theater, in conjunction with his father, has purchased the Majestic Theater at Wausau.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Two important business changes have been made in Allegan. Basil Barker has sold his interest in his news and cigar store to his partner, Robert Vahue. Earl Cotton, owner of the Variety Theater, has sold out to J. O. Ellenberger, of Sturgis. Cotton has purchased the Star Theater from William McClelland.

Pineville, Ky.—Commercial Club is promoting erection of opera house.

St. Edwards, Neb.—The R. E. Case Bldg., on Third Street, is being torn down to make room for a new opera house.

Denver, Colo.—A new $100,000 theater is to be erected on Curtis Street, near 18th, to replace the Bijou Theater.

Brainerd, Ill.—The Princess Theater Circuit Co. have purchased the Grand Theater.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Plans have been made by T. F. Kelley for a moving picture theater to be built on Jane Street for M. W. Leighton.

Bay City, Mich.—A. A. Wolff is planning to erect a new moving picture theater at the corner of Third and Johnson Streets.

Denver, Colo.—A new theater, to cost approximately $100,000, is to be erected within a few months on Curtis, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth Streets, where the Bijou motion picture theater now stands. The amusement place will be built by S. L. Baxter, proprietor of the Isis Theater.

Newark, N. J.—A moving picture theater is being erected at 371 South Orange Avenue, for Zapelkoy & Breecher. The building, as planned by Cohen & Besman, will be of brick, one story high, to measure 22 x 97 feet in ground dimensions. The cost is about $5,000.

Utica, N. Y.—E. T. Kennedy is erecting a new picture theater at 636 Bleecker Street, at a cost of $18,000, which will be able to accommodate 750.

Reading, Pa.—A new moving picture theater is being built on East Philadelphia Avenue.

Waterbury, Conn.—A new moving picture theater is being established by A. F. Strickland, which will be able to seat 600.

Chicago, Ill.—The Victoria Theater Corporation will erect a new $146,000 theater at 2145-51 Sheffield Avenue.

Louisville, Ky.—The Preston Amusement Co. will erect a moving picture theater here to cost $5,000.

Boone, Ia.—A new Virginia theater is to be erected on 8th St. & Allen Sts.

Williamsport, Pa.—An addition will be built to the Lyceum Theater, to cost $3,000.

Shamokin, Pa.—J. P. & Wm. D. Nields have begun the remodeling of the building at the corner of Independence and Liberty Streets for the erection of an up-to-date moving picture theater, to be known as the American. The price of admission to be five cents.

Wilkinsburg, Pa.—The new Rowland Theater, situated on Wood Street, which has been under course of construction for the past months, has thrown open its doors to the public, and is now playing to capacity. This new enterprise has been erected by Mr. Richard A. Rowland, president of the Pittsburg Calcium Light and Film Company, at an estimated cost of $80,000, and possesses the distinction of being one of the most elaborate and commodious theaters ever established and decorated in the interior. The exterior is finished in white terra cotta, which gives it a handsome appearance.

Connellsville, Pa.—John T. Laughbrey has purchased the Nickelet Theater, on North Pittsburgh Street, from E. T. Clabaugh.

Seattle, Wash.—C. Allen will erect a moving picture show at 1327 East Madison Street, to cost $3,500.

Seattle, Wash.—Hans Peterson will erect a new theater at 2423 Jackson Street, to cost $3,500.

St. Joseph, Mo.—T. Saxe will remodel the Schlitz Theater into a moving picture and vaudeville theater, to cost $20,000.

Urbana, Ill.—This city is to have a new vaudeville theater, to cost $12,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Allegheny Amusement Co. will erect a new theater at 3139-49 Frankford Ave., to cost $45,000.

Niles, Ohio.—Plans have been prepared by Jack Stafford for a new theater, to be erected on Furnace Street.

Detroit, Mich.—Otto A. Seestedt, 351 25th, will erect a $6,000 theater at Baker and 22nd Streets.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Halton Powell Co., capital $5,000, to operate theaters. F. C. Overton, K. K. Stokes & H. C. Overton.

Provo, Utah.—The Rex Theater Co will erect a new theater here, to be called the Princess.

Ft. Wayne, Ind.—The Fairy Theater has been sold by J. P. Mollatt, to Chas. Clark.

Butte, Mont.—The Montana Amusement Co. will erect a new $50,000 theater on West Park Street.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Schultz & Seeler will erect a $10,000 moving picture theater for David J. Brown, at Thomas and Murray Avenues.

Galesburg, Ill.—Kennedy Bros., proprietors of the Nickelodeon Theater, have sold out and John B. Mayes will manage same.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Alhambra Theater here, at 1628-34 Passyunk Avenue, has been sold to a syndicate headed by W. W. Miller.

Indianapolis, Ind., Elwood.—Ernest Bouillet and Dennis Laughlin have purchased the Princess Theater from Charles Mahan and Allen Mason.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Geo. Hogg is figuring on plans for a one-story moving picture theater at 2516-20 West Lehigh Avenue, for W. J. Stewart.

Reading, Pa.—James Graul will erect a new moving picture theater at 1643 Moss St., to cost $3,000.

New York, N. Y.—Harrison & Sackheim, architects, have plans for an addition and the enlargement of the new theaters at Second Avenue and 79th Street, to cost $1,500.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Silver City Amusement Co. will erect a $14,000 show house at 28th and National Avenues.

Porterville, Cal.—Walter Godley, of the Novelty Theater, in Mill Street, has approved plans for the complete reconstruction of the theater.

W. E. GREENE
FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

THE OLDEST AND LARGEST INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE IN NEW ENGLAND

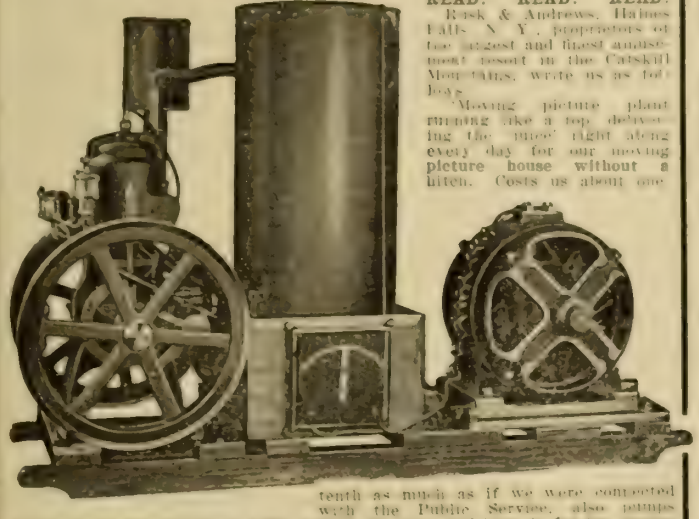
Mr. Exhibitor :

Start the Season right by using an Independent Service from a Reliable House. We are buying the Output of the Sales Co. and have some choice services open. Write, wire, or call today at

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.

Telephone: 2187-3790 Oxford

The Biggest Sensation Yet is the $250.00 Detroit Moving Picture Electric Light Plant



READ! READ! READ!

Rask & Andrews, Haines Falls, N. Y., proprietors of the largest and finest amusement resort in the Catskill Mountains, write us as follows:

"Moving picture plant running like a top delivering the current right along every day for our moving picture house without a hitch. Costs us about one tenth as much as if we were connected with the Public Service, also pumps water to all our buildings, 2,000 gallons per day, and have it for fire engine in case of fire."

Used and highly endorsed by the U. S. Army.

Many write us that the total cost of light for running their show for a week is less than one dollar. Think of it.

Gives you better light than you can buy. Gives you the same light in the afternoon as at night. Can be operated by a boy ten years old.

Larger sized plants at proportionately low prices. THE SALVATION OF THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS. Write for Bulletin No. 101. You will find it the most intensely interesting little book you ever read if you are interested in moving pictures.

IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT. Wire your order and let your remittance follow by mail.

DETROIT ENGINE WORKS. Dept. No. 102. Detroit, Mich., U. S. A. Sole manufacturers of the best and only real moving picture electric light plant in the world.

WE WILL PAY YOUR FARE TO DETROIT to see this wonderful plant in operation if there does not happen to be one of them at work in your immediate vicinity, the fare to be deducted from the purchase price. Write for full information regarding this liberal offer.

Four Years' Success
FOR HALLBERG
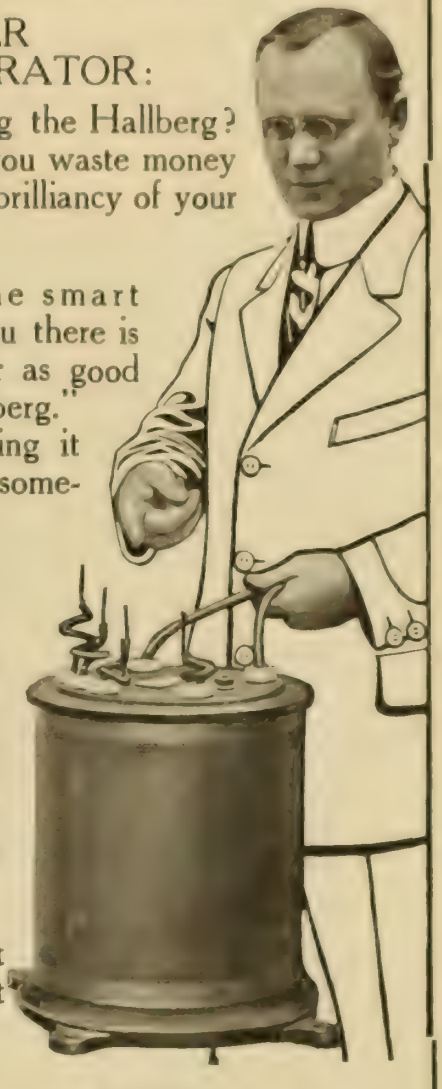
ELECTRIC ECONOMIZER



Mr. MANAGER
and OPERATOR:

Are you using the Hallberg? If not, why do you waste money and sacrifice the brilliancy of your picture?

Don't let the smart "Alecks" tell you there is any current saver as good as the "Hallberg." Insist on getting it even though something cheaper is offered.

It is easy to save current, but it is a H——L of a job to get a better light at the same time. "Hallberg" does the trick.

Read what users say about it—

Breed Theatre, Norwich, Conn., Oct. 17, 1911.

Mr. J. H. Hallberg:

I have used your Hallberg Economizer on my picture machine for four years and would not be without one.

Yours very truly,

CHAS. MCNULTY.

Ideal Theatre, Ashtabula, O., Oct. 17, 1911.

J. H. Hallberg.

I bought a Hallberg Economizer from you for my house in Greenville, Va., some time ago, which is giving very satisfactory results and have used one for my own theatre at the same time.

With regards, yours truly,

F. L. LANE, Prop.

Over 2000 in use for A. C. as well as D. C. and my G. E. Mercury Arc Rectifier is the thing for those who want D. C. at the arc on A. C. circuits

J. H. HALLBERG
36 East 23rd Street - - NEW YORK

INDEPENDENT Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Nov. 20—The Test (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 23—The Master of the Vineyard (W. Dr.)1000
Nov. 27—Jolly Bill of the Rollicking R (W. Com.) 1000
Nov. 30—The Sheriff's Sisters (W. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 4—The Angel of Paradise Ranch (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 7—The Smoke of the Forty-five (Dr.)...1000
Dec. 11—The Man Hunt (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 14—Santa Catalina, Magic Isle of the Pacific (Scenic and Educational)..1000
Dec. 18—The Last Notch (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—The Gold Lust (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 25—The Duel of Candles (Dr.).....1000

CHAMPION.

Nov. 27—The Mother Goose Series (Juvenile).. 950
Nov. 29—The Two Browns (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 4—Yankee Doodle (Juvenile).....
Dec. 4—Our Navy (Naval)..... 950
Dec. 6—The Indian Fortune Teller (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 11—A Traitor on the Staff (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 13—The Saving of Dan (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 18—The Coward's Flute (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 20—By Decree of Fate (Dr.)..... 950

COMET.

Nov. 20—The Office Boy's Dream (Com.)..... 960
Nov. 24—Diamond Locket (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 27—Grandma's Toofache (Com.)..... 955
Dec. 1—The Late Mrs. Early (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 4—Billy's Letters (Com.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Dead Canary (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 11—The Ups and Downs of Rafferty (Com.)
Dec. 15—Just In Time for Dinner (Dr.).....
Dec. 18—A Game of Bridge (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 22—The Man With the Camera (Dr.).... 985

ECLAIR.

Nov. 6—Life Under the Sea (Educational)....
Nov. 13—The Legend of the Eagle (Dr.)..... 925
Nov. 21—Hands Across the Sea in '76 (Am.-Dr.) 2000
Nov. 23—Portguguese Centaurs (Military)..... 600
Nov. 23—The Automatic Lighter (Com.)..... 400
Nov. 28—Miss Masquerader (Am. Com.)..... 400
Nov. 30—The Five Daughters of Mr. Durand (Com.) .....
Nov. 30—Gussy's Congratulations (Com.).....
Dec. 5—In Humanity's Cause (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—There Fell a Flower (Com.)..... 660
Dec. 7—Manners and Traditions of Piemont (Educational) 660
Dec. 12—The Musician's Daughter (Am. Dr.)..
Dec. 14—Her One Day's Dream (Japanese Dr.)

GREAT NORTHERN.

Nov. 4—The Actor as a Soldier (Com.).....
Nov. 4—Through the South of France (Sc.)...
Nov. 11—A Woman's Wit (Com.).....
Nov. 18—A Rendezvous in Hyde Park (Com.-Dr.)
Nov. 18—High Scotland (Scenic) .....
Nov. 25—The Theft of Mona Lisa (Com.).....
Dec. 2—The Penalty of Her Ambition (Dr.)..
Dec. 9—Buttons and Hooks (Com.).....
Dec. 9—Winter In Switzerland (Scenic).....
Dec. 16—His First Monocle (Com.).....
Dec. 16—Greece (Scenic) .....

IMP.

Nov. 20—From the Bottom of the Sea (Dr.)..2000
Nov. 23—Executive Clemency (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 27—Uncle's Visit (Com.).....1000
Nov. 30—Over the Hills (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 2—Percy, the Masher (Com.)..... 750
Dec. 2—President Taft Dedicating the Naval Training Station at Chicago, Ill. (Topical).. 350
Dec. 4—The Dumb Messenger (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 7—Tony and the Stork.....1000
Dec. 9—Her Birthday (Com.-Dr.)..... 750
Dec. 9—Columbia Interscholastic Chase (Athletic.) 350
Dec. 11—Why the Check Was Good (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 14—The Little Stocking (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 16—Billy's Seance (Com.)..... 500
Dec. 16—The Bungalow Burglars (Com.)..... 500
Dec. 18—The Girl and the Half Back (Dr.)....1000
Dec. 21—The Professor (Dr.).....1000

LUX.

Nov. 17—Saas Grund, a Village in the Alps (Sc.) 295
Nov. 17—The Mystery of Beaufort Grange (Dr.) 695
Nov. 24—A Passing Cloud (Dr.)..... 655
Nov. 24—Bill and Bertie's Wedding Day (Com.) 325
Dec. 1—Bill As a Veterinary Surgeon (Com.) 488
Dec. 1—The Making of An Aeroplane (Ind.).. 419
Dec. 8—The Man In the Auto (Dr.)..... 650
Dec. 8—The Adventures of an Amateur Hypnotist. Com.) 350
Dec. 15—Bill and His Chum Tire of Married Life (Com.)..... 521
Dec. 15—Mistaken for the Culprit (Dr.)..... 459

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

BISON.

Nov. 10—Wenoma's Broken Promise (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—The Winning of Wonega (Dr).....
Nov. 17—The Ranchman's Mother-in-Law (Com.-Dr.) .....
Nov. 21—The Broken Trap (Dr.).....
Nov. 24—White Fawn's Escape (Dr.).....
Nov. 24—A Bad Man (Com.).....
Nov. 28—A Western One-Night Stand (Com-Dr.)
Dec. 1—An Easterner's Peril (Dr.).....
Dec. 5—The Empty Tepee (Indian Dr.).....
Dec. 8—A Range Romance (W. Dr.).....
Dec. 12—Bar Z's New Cook (Com.).....
Dec. 15—The Foreman's Courage (Dr.).....

AMBROSIO.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Nov. 1—Judas (Dr.) .....
Nov. 8—Dolly's Doll (Dr.) .....
Nov. 8—Tweedledum's Motor Car (Com.).....
Nov. 15—The Convict's Song (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—The Golden Wedding (Dr.).....
Nov. 29—The Little Duke (Dr.) .....
Nov. 29—Tiny Tom, Apache (Com.).....
Dec. 2—Tweedledum Goes Into High Life (Com.) .....
Dec. 2—The Accusing Dog (Com.).....
Dec. 6—Jorio's Daughter (Dr.).....
Dec. 13—The Marquis of Lantenac (Dr.).....
Dec. 13—The Launching of Two Italian Dreadnoughts (Naval) .....

ITALA.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Nov. 4—Foolshead's Holiday (Com.).....
Nov. 11—A Victim of Competition.....
Nov. 11—The Effect of a Racket (Com.).....
Nov. 18—Foolshead, a Professor of Innocence (Comedy) .....
Nov. 18—The Life of Bees (Edu.).....
Nov. 25—The Tailor Wants His Pay (Com.)..
Nov. 25—The King of Noose Throwers.....
Dec. 2—Severed from the World (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—An Up-to-Date Doctor (Com.).....

MAJESTIC.

Nov. 26—The Courting of Mary (Com.).....
Dec. 3—Love Heeds Not Showers (Com.)....
Dec. 10—Keeping Mabel Home (Com.).....
Dec. 17—Little Red Riding Hood (Juvenile.)
Dec. 24—The Actress (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 31—The Caddy's Dream (Com.)..... 400
Dec. 31—Will You Marry Me? (Com.)..... 600

NESTOR.

Nov. 20—His Vacation (Com.).....
Nov. 22—The Cowboy Pugilist (W. Dr.).....
Nov. 25—Desperate Desmond Pursued by Claude Eclaire (Com.-Dr.) .....
Nov. 27—Happy Hobo's Help (Com.).....
Nov. 29—When the West Was Wild (Dr.)....
Dec. 2—A Western Feud (Comedy).....
Dec. 2—Mutt and Jeff's Scheme That Failed (Com.) .....
Dec. 4—Just Two Little Girls (Dr.).....
Dec. 6—Struck Gold (Dr.).....
Dec. 9—Desperate Desmond Adducts Rosamond (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 11—Only An Iceman (Com.).....
Dec. 13—The Law of the Range (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—In the Early Days (Com.).....
Dec. 16—Mutt & Jeff Make the Feathers Fly (Com.) .....

FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL FILM CO.

Nov. 20—Love and Aviation (Dr.).....
Nov. 20—Zigomar (Dr.).....
Dec. 18—The Love Chase (Com.).....
Dec. 20—The New Ranch Owner (Com.).....
Dec. 23—Desperate Desmond Foiled by Claude Eclaire (Com.-Dr.) .....

POWERS.

Nov. 11—For the Tribe (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—When First We Met (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—The Tell-Tale Parasol (Com.).....
Nov. 18—The Old Leader (Dr.).....
Nov. 21—Rivals (Com.) .....
Nov. 21—Views of Montserrat, Italy (Sc.).....
Nov. 25—Jug o' Rum (Dr.).....
Nov. 28—Too Much Injun (Com.).....
Nov. 28—The Lineman and the Girl.....
Dec. 2—The Wanderer's Return (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—Views of Lake Como (Scenic).....
Dec. 5—The Little Thief (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 5—The Secret Order of Horns (Com.)..
Dec. 9—Two Men and a Girl (Dr.).....
Dec. 12—The Little Chaperone (Com.).....
Dec. 12—Views of Genoa, Italy (Scenic.).....
Dec. 16—When Heart Wires Cross (Com.-Dr.)..
Dec. 19—Cupid's Big Sister (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 19—Touring Brussels (Scenic) .....
Dec. 23—Hearts of Italy (Dr.).....

RELIANCE.

Nov. 4—The Greater Love (Dr.).....
Nov. 8—Marriage (Dr.) .....
Nov. 11—The Track Walker (Dr.).....
Nov. 15—The Moonshiners (Dr.).....
Nov. 18—The Injustice of Man (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—Helpless Man (Dr.).....
Nov. 25—A Daughter of Italy (Dr.).....
Nov. 2—A Happy Thanksgiving (Dr.).....
Nov. 29—A Happy Thanksgiving (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—The Poison Cup (Dr.).....
Dec. 6—The Turn of the Wheel (Dr.).....
Dec. 9—The Turnstile (Dr.).....
Dec. 13—Love and Charity (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—The Playwright (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—Just Smile (Com.).....

REPUBLIC.

Dec. 5—The Savannah Auto Races (Topical)..
Dec. 17—In the Days of the Six Nations (Dr.)
Dec. 24—Before Yorktown (Hist.-Dr.).....
Dec. 31—The Pride of Lexington (Hist-Dr.)..

REX.

Sept. 28—The Derelict (Dr.).....
Oct. 5—Lost Illusions (Dr.).....
Oct. 12—Chasing a Rainbow (Dr.).....
Oct. 19—Her Sister (Dr.).....
Oct. 26—A Breach of Faith (Dr.).....
Nov. 2—The Tale of a Cat (Dr.).....
Nov. 9—Saints and Sinners (Dr.).....
Nov. 16—The Return (Dr.).....
Nov. 23—The Price (Dr.).....
Nov. 30—The Strangers (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—The Measure of a Man (Dr.).....
Dec. 14—Logging Industry in the Northwest (Ind.) .....

SOLAX.

Nov. 8—An Interrupted Elopement (Com.)....
Nov. 10—Grandmother Love (Dr.).....
Nov. 15—Baby Needs Medicine (Com.).....
Nov. 17—Only a Squaw (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—Husbands Wanted (Com.).....
Nov. 24—The Will of Providence (Com.-Dr.)..
Nov. 29—A Troublesome Picture (Com.).....
Nov. 29—Fun On Board the "U. S. S. Vermont" (Naval) .....
Dec. 1—A Revolutionary Romance (Mil.-Dr.)..
Dec. 6—Baby's Choice (Com.).....
Dec. 6—The Paper Making Industry (Ind.)..
Dec. 8—The Little Shoe (Dr.).....
Dec. 13—Fickle Bridget (Com.).....
Dec. 15—The Little Kiddie Mine (Dr.).....

THANHOUSER.

Nov. 3—Their Burglar (Dr.).....
Nov. 7—The Missing Heir (Dr.).....
Nov. 10—The Last of the Mohicans (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—The Higher—the Fewer (Com.).....
Nov. 17—A Mother's Faith (Dr.).....
Nov. 21—A Master of Millions.....
Nov. 24—The Baseball Bug (Com.-Dr.).....
Nov. 28—The Tempest (Dr.).....
Dec. 1—Beneath the Veil (Dr.).....
Dec. 5—The Newsy and the Tramp (Com.-Dr.)
Dec. 8—Brother Bob's Baby (Com.).....
Dec. 12—The Lady from the Sea (Dr.).....
Dec. 15—Deacon Debbs (Com.).....
Dec. 19—The Tomboy (Com. Dr.).....
Dec. 22—Cinderella (Juvenile) .....

YANKEE.

Nov. 3—At Daisy Farm (Dr.).....
Nov. 6—A Coward's Regeneration (Dr.).....
Nov. 10—He Didn't Like the Tune (Com.)...
Nov. 13—Into the Light (Dr.).....
Nov. 17—The Two Rooms (Dr.).....

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000 - - $1.25 20,000 - - $4.60 50,000 - - $7.50
10,000 - $2.50 25,000 - - $5.50 100,000 - - $10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

THE MAJESTIC

will release two subjects each week, beginning in early January.

¶ We have overcome the many difficulties experienced by every new company, and each new picture will note a step in our progress.

¶ An absolutely necessary requirement in producing a good picture is a strong scenario. We have been particularly fortunate in securing the work of able and thoughtful writers, conversant with the needs of the moving picture business.

Dec. 10 "Keeping Mabel Home" — Approx. 1000 ft.

Introducing MABEL TRUNNELLE and HERBERT PRIOR, former Edison stars, in a delightful comedy with a clever plot. Mabel's parents plan a trip abroad to secure a duke for her; the handsome lover, disliked by parents, plans to defeat them by a clever ruse. See the crazy duke, watch him eat! Note the funny situations and how the handsome lover wins Mabel.

Dec. 17 CHRISTMAS PICTURE—By Special Request

LITTLE MARY PICKFORD in

"Little Red Riding Hood" — Approx. 1000 ft.

An appropriate Christmas picture for the children—a clever portrayal of the famous Nursery Rhyme—showing Mary taking "goodies" to her Granny—followed by the terrible wolf—reaching Granny's home to find Granny eated by the wolf—calling of the woodsmen to dispose of the wolf—and the awakening of Mary from her dream.

Dec. 24 "The Actress" — Approx. 1000 ft.

A strong emotional story, showing MABEL TRUNNELLE as the actress, whose duty calls her to portray a light hearted character on the stage, while at home her child lies at death's door. This film is one of the strongest yet produced and will be a big feature wherever it is shown.

A SPLIT COMEDY REEL

Dec. 31 "The Caddy's Dream" — Approx. 400 ft.

A farce comedy, showing how it took 20 years for a clever caddy to find the golf ball and the ridiculous situations in which the lovers are placed, while growing from youth to old age. A real, sure laugh and a hearty one.

Dec. 31st "Will You Marry Me?" — Approx. 600 ft.

Another farce comedy, showing the determination of the young fellow to get married—he proposes to every girl he meets and is finally tricked by the girl he loves.

THE MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

145 WEST 45th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

TOM D. COCHRANE, General Manager

Sold through the Sales Co.

Classified Advertisements.

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY—Moving picture operator and electrician, six years' experience. Locate or travel; best of references. JOHN BORK, Stevens Point, Wis.

AT LIBERTY—A-1 operator, five years' experience. Steady and reliable. Can furnish references. W. K. RICHARDS, 807 Cherry St., Findlay, Ohio.

MANAGER—A thoroughly experienced man desires position as manager in moving picture or vaudeville theater, or where both are being run. Can give gilt-edged references as to ability and honesty. MANAGER, 1870, Moving Picture World, New York City.

AT LIBERTY—Moving picture stage director. Prominently identified with leading companies. Patents and sales companies for over six years. Unlimited original scenarios and satisfactory credentials. Address, H. L. B., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

AT LIBERTY—Live theater manager who can produce results. Have original ideas. Ten years' experience in vaudeville and motion pictures. Best of references. Will accept proposition, North, South, East or West. Straight salary or salary and percentage. Address, THEATER MANAGER, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Picture and vaudeville theater seating 1,200 ground floor. City 40,000. Will sell whole or partners. MANAGER, Happyland, Auburn, N. Y.

FOR SALE—New vaudeville and picture theater, fully equipped. 400 capacity. Address, BOX 232, Burlington, Wis.

FOR SALE—Moving picture theater in city of 2,800 inhabitants within fifty-seven miles from New York. Only one other moving picture theater in city. Seating capacity fully 300. Has been established five years. This is a good proposition for some live man. Only reason for selling, owner has other interests demanding his attentions. Will sell at a bargain. Address, S. H. B., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

Moving Picture Theater Agency List.
Box 485, Madison Square P. O., New York City.

Lot 4-a—Southern California, only theater in 1,500 population, together with two houses one block from theater. $3,000.

Lot 15-a—Kansas, exceptionally fine house, capacity 540. Equipment best that money can buy and appointments first class in every respect. $12,000.

Lot 29-a—Northern New Jersey, house that has lacked proper management, can be improved, little opposition. $3,500.

Do you want to buy, sell or rent a moving picture theater anywhere? Address, MOVING PICTURE THEATER AGENCY, Box 485, Madison Square P. O., New York City.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—A manager for the Canadian Film Manufacturing Company, Winnipeg, Canada, producers of motion pictures. A wide-awake man who will take financial interest desired. Write, E. J. GIFFORD, 254 Young St., Winnipeg, Canada.

HALL FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Hall 35 x 70, with good stage and anterooms. Seating capacity about 400. In live city of 45,000 near Boston. Suitable for moving picture theater. Address, T. W. CARTER, 30 Kilby St., Boston, Mass.

THEATERS WANTED.

Moving Picture Theater Agency List.
P. O. Box 485, Madison Square, New York City.

WANTED—Picture theater in Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas or Oklahoma. Seating not less than 700, prefer 1,000. Refer No. 1-w.

WANTED—Picture theater, no vaudeville, 299 seats, Greater New York, full particulars. Refer No. 2-w.

WANTED—Picture theater in Middle West, must be paying proposition. Refer No. 3-w.

WANTED—Picture house, central Georgia, vicinity of Pensacola, Fla., or Los Angeles or vicinity. Must be paying. Refer No. 4-w.

Do you want to buy, sell or rent a moving picture theater anywhere? Address, MOVING PICTURE THEATER AGENCY, Box 485, Madison Square P. O., New York City.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FOR SALE—Set of musical electric bells, 28 notes and key board, $50. Will send on trial. Never been used. DAN BARTON, 266 East Irving St., Oshkosh, Wis.

FOR SALE—The Italian-Turkish War film, length 925 feet, with 20 lithographs, at the rate of 9 cents a foot, never used. Will explain in writing reason for selling. Address, ALFONSO SIRIANNI, manager Gem Theater, Carbondale, Pa.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Moving picture machine outfit, cheap. Write quick. Machine is complete and was used only a week. L. WORDEN, 52 Ceape Street, Oshkosh, Wis.

FOR SALE OR EXCHANGE—Complete moving picture machine outfit. Never been used. What do you offer or what have you for a trade. L. WORDEN, 52 Ceape Street, Oshkosh, Wis.

LICENSED Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Nov. 27—Sunshine Through the Dark (Dr.).....
Nov. 30—A Woman Scorned (Dr.).....
Dec. 4—Why He Gave Up (Com.).....
Dec. 4—Abe Gets Even With Father (Com.)..
Dec. 7—The Failure (Dr.).....
Dec. 11—Saved from Himself (Dr.)..... 999
Dec. 14—Taking His Medicine (Com.)..... 673
Dec. 14—Her Pet (Com.)..... 323
Dec. 18—As In a Looking Glass (Dr.).....
Dec. 21—A Terrible Discovery (Dr.).....

EDISON.

Nov. 29—The Troubles of A. Butler (Com.)..1000
Dec. 1—Pull for the Shore, Sailor (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 2—A Man for All That (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Awakening of John Bond (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 6—John Brown's Heir (Com.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Heart of Nichette (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 9—The Daisy Cowboys (Com.)..... 990
Dec. 12—Buckskin Jack, the Earl of Glenmore (Com.-Dr.) 1000
Dec. 13—An International Heart Breaker (Com.) 700
Dec. 13—Eskimos In Labrador (Edu.)..... 300
Dec. 15—Brockton Fair & Horse Show, Brockton, Mass., Oct. 3rd to 6th, 1911 (Topical) 990
Dec. 16—Stage Struck Lizzie (Com.)..... 650
Dec. 16—A Trip from Colorado Springs to Cripple Creek (Scenic)..... 350
Dec. 19—Santa Claus and the Clubman (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 20—The Sign of the Three Labels (Com.).1000
Dec. 22—How Sir Andrew Lost His Vote (Com.)1000
Dec. 23—Pat Clancy's Adventure (Com.).....1000

ESSANAY.

Nov. 30—'Twas Ever Thus (Comedy).....1000
Dec. 1—The Quinceville Raffle (Com.)..... 750
Dec. 1—The Girl In the Taxi (Com.)..... 300
Dec. 2—The Mountain Law (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Madman (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 7—The Long Strike (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—Getting Even With Emily (Com.).....
Dec. 8—Stray Bullets (Com.).....1000
Dec. 9—A Frontier Doctor (W. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 12—The First Man (Com.).....1000
Dec. 14—The Hack & Schmidt Bout (Com.)....
Dec. 14—A Polished Burglar (Com.).....1000
Dec. 15—A Goodfellow's Christmas Eve (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 16—The Cowboy Coward (W. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 19—The Three Bears (Juvenile).....1000
Dec. 21—Winning An Heiress (Com. Dr.)..... 300
Dec. 21—The Foiling of Red Dugan (Dr.)..... 700
Dec. 22—The Millionaire Barber (Com.).....1000
Dec. 23—Broncho Billy's Christmas Dinner (Dr.)1000

GAUMONT.

Nov. 25—The Escape from the Dungeon (Dr.).. 825
Nov. 25—Cave Homes on the Canary Isles (Sc.) 180
Nov. 28—A Busy Cupid (Com.)..... 758
Nov. 28—Review of the Austrian Army (Sc.). 232
Dec. 2—The Promoter (Dr.).....1140
Dec. 5—Jimmie Tricks the Landlady (Com.).. 475
Dec. 5—The Challenge (Dr.)..... 525
Dec. 9—Camoens, the Portuguese Shakespeare, Lisbon, 1578 (Hist. Dr.)..... 610
Dec. 9—Important Scenes in Paris, France (Sc.) 320
Dec. 12—Heroism (Dr.) 610
Dec. 12—Arabian Customs (Ind.)..... 366
Dec. 16—A Queen's Treachery, or the Betrayal of Charles VI of France (Hist. Dr.)1000
Dec. 19—Through the Enemy's Lines (War Dr.) 985
Dec. 23—The Maid of Argos (Dr.)..... 980

KALEM.

Nov. 29—Among the Irish Fisher Folk (Edu.).
Nov. 29—The Franciscan Friars of Killarney, Ireland (Top.) .....
Dec. 1—How Betty Captured the Outlaw (Comedy) .....
Dec. 1—A Glimpse Into the Yellowstone National Park (Scenic).....
Dec. 4—Arrah-Na-Pogue (3 reels) (Dr.).....3000
Dec. 6—The Long Arm of the Law (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—Too Much Realism (Com.).....1000
Dec. 11—Molly Pitcher (Historical-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 13—Norma From Norway (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 15—Bill's Flute (W. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 18—He Who Laughs Last (Com.).....1000
Dec. 20—The Flash in the Night (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 22—Between Father and Son (Dr.).....1000

LUBIN.

Nov. 29—The Crab Industry (Ind.)..... 400
Nov. 30—A Nicotine Conspiracy (Com.).....1000
Dec. 2—Western Chivalry (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 4—A Head for Business (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 6—Sins of the Father (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 7—Love's Labor Lost (Com.).....1000
Dec. 9—The Teamster (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 11—A Girlish Impulse (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 13—Mr. and Mrs. Suspicious (Com.)..... 400
Dec. 13—Quick! A Plumber (Com.)..... 600
Dec. 14—The Substitute (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 16—A Timely Lesson (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 18—Love Decides (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 20—Art versus Music (Com. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—Kiddies' Christmas (2 reels—Xmas Dr.) 1800
Dec. 23—The Sergeant's White Peril (Military Dr.) 1000

MELIES.

Nov. 16—The Miser Miner (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Nov. 23—An Oil Country Romance (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—The Reason Why (Com.).....1000
Dec. 7—A Western Girl (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 14—The Better Man (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—The Mission Father (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 28—The Ratchman's Debt of Honor (Com. Dr.) 1000

ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

Nov. 22—Guy Fawkes or the Gunpowder Plot (Dr.) 1010
Nov. 29—The Mysterious Stranger (Dr.)..... 610
Nov. 29—Salt Industry In Sicily (Ind.)..... 872
Dec. 6—The Luckless Banker (Dr.).....1002
Dec. 13—The Tragedy of Old Age (Dr.)..... 798
Dec. 13—Harbor of Marseilles, France (Sc.)... 215
Dec. 20—The Miracle (Dr.) 1040

PATHE.

Nov. 25—The Lost Necklace (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 27—Pathe's Weekly No. 48 (Topical)..1000
Nov. 29—Incendiary Indians (Dr.)..... 745
Nov. 29—Glimpses of San Francisco (Scenic).. 250
Nov. 30—Oh! What a Thanksgiving Day (Com.) 775
Dec. 2—Bear Hunt Romance (Dr.)..... 990
Dec. 4—Pathe's Weekly No. 49 (Topical)....1000
Dec. 6—Hobo Luck (Am. Com.).....
Dec. 7—The Poisoned Arrow (Am. Dr.).....
Dec. 9—Her Little Slipper (Am. Dr.).....
Dec. 11—Pathe's Weekly No. 50 (Topical)....1000
Dec. 13—The Flower Girl of Los Palmas (Am. Dr.) 990
Dec. 14—An Episode of the Early Mormon Days (Am. Dr.)..... 820
Dec. 14—The Magic Suit Case (Trick)..... 150
Dec. 16—A Mother's Remorse (Am. Dr.)..... 995
Dec. 18—Pathe's Weekly No. 51 (Top.).....1000
Dec. 20—The Fatal Posing (Am. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—Dad's Smash-Up (Am. Com.).....1000
Dec. 23—Actors' Hearts (Am. Dr.).....1000

C. G. P. C.

Nov. 28—Picturesque Hungary (Scenic)..... 290
Nov. 30—A Life-Saving School in Australia (Educational) 220
Dec. 1—Rover is Jealous (Com.)..... 560
Dec. 1—Capturing Polar Bear Cubs (Adv.).. 290
Dec. 1—Examination of the Stomach by X-Rays (Educational) 150
Dec. 5—The Secret of the Confessional (Dr.)..
Dec. 6—Fishing in the Ceram Islands (Sc.)..
Dec. 7—French Cuirassier Manoeuvres (Military)
Dec. 8—Eva's Faithful Furniture (Com.).....
Dec. 8—Gathering and Preparing Cocoanuts in the Philippine Islands (Ind.).....
Dec. 12—Youth versus Age (Dr.)..... 795
Dec. 12—Small Trades in Malacca (Edu.)..... 200
Dec. 15—In the Grip of Alcohol (2 reels) (Dr.) 2000
Dec. 19—Princess Charming (Juvenile) .....
Dec. 19—Landscapes in Japan (Scenic).....
Dec. 22—Providential Bread (Dr.).....
Dec. 22—In Japan—Nara (Scenic) .....

SELIG.

Dec. 1—In Japan (Scenic)..... 500
Dec. 1—Seeing Cincinnati (Scenic)..... 500
Dec. 4—A Diamond in the Rough (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—A Frontier Girl's Courage (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 7—The Maid at the Helm (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Plumber (Com.)..... 600
Dec. 8—A Day With a Circus (Novelty)..... 400
Dec. 11—The Chief's Daughter (Dr.)..... 500
Dec. 11—April Fool (Com.)..... 500
Dec. 12—A Romance of the Rio Grande (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 14—George Warrington's Escape (Hist.-Dr.) 1000
Dec. 15—Industries of the South and West (Edu.) 1000
Dec. 18—Evangeline (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 19—For His Pal's Sake (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—Brown of Harvard (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 22—The Little Widow (Dr.).....1000

VITAGRAPH.

Nov. 28—The Freshet (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 29—The Voiceless Message (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 1—The Last Cent (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 2—The Husking Bee (Comedy).....1000
Dec. 4—Saving the Special (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Hypnotist (Com.).....1000
Dec. 5—A Slight Mistake (Com.).....1000
Dec. 6—The Black Chasm (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—War (Historical-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 9—His Wife's Secret (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 11—One Touch of Nature (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 12—The Military Air Scout (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 13—The Ventriloquist's Trunk (Com.)....1000
Dec. 15—Love at Gloucester Port (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 16—The Sick Man from the East (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 18—Vitagraph Monthly of Current Events (Topical) 1000
Dec. 19—Vanity Fair (3 reels—Dr.) 3000
Dec. 20—Fires of Driftwood (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 22—A Reformed Santa Claus (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 23—The Old Doll (Dr.).....1000

Ring Yuletide in

WITH

DEAGAN BELLS

OR

DEAGAN CHIMES

A SET OF OUR FAMOUS

Musical Electrical Bells

You could not get a greater attraction for the holidays. Better order your set now, and avoid the rush for Christmas.

We make the Electric Bells in various sizes from

$40.00 up

The most popular sets of Bells we are now making are the

No. 310 outfit

25 Bells, 2 Octaves Chromatic, C to C

Complete with resonators, keyboard and all electrical apparatus.

Price of this outfit is $75.00

Will be shipped to you for examination and trial on receipt of $5.00 to guarantee express charges.

Every set of bells guaranteed one year.

Aluminum Chimes from $40.00 and up

Write for circulars and descriptive matter

J. C. DEAGAN

3800 N. Clark Street
CHICAGO, ILL.

THERE IS

ONLY ONE

BIO RECOGNIZED STANDARD CARBON

Try it and you will forget the names of all other brands. Then it will be

"BIO" FOR YOURS

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

NEW YORK 165 Greenwich St. MILWAUKEE 114-116 Huron St. SAN FRANCISCO 19 Sutter St.

AND ALL LIVE FILM EXCHANGES

ILG VENTILATING FANS

ARE STANDARD FOR THEATRE VENTILATION

We are specialists in theatre ventilation. We have over 200 fans and blowers in Chicago theatres. We have alone.

ILG Self Cooled Motor Fan.

ILG FANS ARE NOTED FOR—
the self cooled motor —low power consumption—quiet running—ease of installation—freedom from repairs. We have a capable engineering department and will be glad to lay out your system.

SEND US A SKETCH OF YOUR THEATRE WITH SEATING CAPACITY AND TELL US THE CURRENT AND VOLTAGE AVAILABLE, WE CAN THEN TELL YOU HOW TO PLACE THE FANS, WHAT THEY WILL COST TO INSTALL AND OPERATE. ILG FANS CAN BE INSTALLED BY ANY ELECTRICIAN.

ILG ELECTRIC VENTILATING CO., 160 WHITING STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

To Obtain the Best Result You Must Use the

BEST CARBONS

Motion Picture Machines require Carbons that are particularly adapted for the purpose.

Use "Arco-Biograph" Brand

The Distinguishing Mark of our Specially Manufactured

CARBONS

for Motion Picture Machines

CARBONS for all Makes of Flaming Lamps Carried in Stock.

L. E. Frorup & Co., Importers

232-234 Greenwich St., New York

The Famous Seamless Silver Screen

Embodying Reflection, Refraction, Absorbtion, Perspective and Depth

Results of Long Devoted Study and Experiments on Scientific Principles

REALIZING

A SCREEN that will absorb the rays and defects in the films, by producing bright Daylight Pictures with Maximum Depth and Perspective

The reason you may have a brightly lighted theater.

The reason you get the same effect from the pictures in any part of the theater.

The reason there is no glaring effect to annoy the eyes of the patrons.

The reason you get good pictures from the use of either alternating or direct current.

The reason you would not part with the SILVER SCREEN after you have installed same, for ten times its cost.

NOTICE.

Not a SCREEN of invisible Seams, but an absolutely SEAMLESS SCREEN

Made of material to last

No refinishing or replacement necessary

Join the hundreds who are installing the SILVER SCREEN

Join those who are seeking information of the best SCREEN on the market

Every owner a Booster.

Sold on easy payments.

Liberal discount when sold for cash

Shipped on approval

Write us at once and state which proposition you desire

Agents wanted in unassigned territory
Good chance for men of ability

The Silver Screen Co., 229 Colonnade Bldg., Toledo, O.

CINES CO. of ROME

Studios and Factories, Rome and Padova

CAPITAL { Preferred Stock Lire 2,000,000
Ordinary Stock, 3,750,000

Fully Paid-up Lire 5,750,000

ITALIAN-TURKISH WAR.

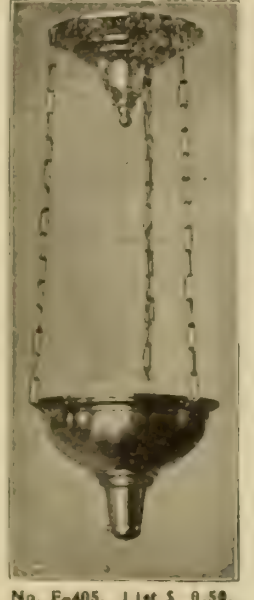
The first series are now all sold and the next shipment expected about end of month, showing Aviator in Warfare, Episodes of last engagement, Insurrection of Arabs. Approximately 1000 ft.

Orders executed in strict rotation.
Posters.

Branch for the United States of America

445 Broome St., cor. Broadway
New York City

TELEPHONE, SPRING 9232
TELEGRAPHS, CINES NEW YORK



No. E-405. List $ 0.50.
Ask discounts of your Electric dealer. If he does not carry, write us direct.
Engineering Reports Free

AT LAST

It is possible to have daylight pictures to run continually in a lighted theatre.

Beautiful even illumination with inexpensive indirect lighting fixtures. Not an electric bulb in sight. The light thrown to the ceiling and diffused through the room. No annoying side lights.

Theatre lighting revolutionized by this Eye COMFORT SYSTEM of Indirect Lighting.

Hundreds of installations being made.

Our engineering department will furnish you free of expense, reports and recommendations on request.

BETTER LIGHT AT LESS EXPENSE

Investigate—Write today

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.,
235 Jackson Blvd., Chicago.

Gentlemen:—
Send full information regarding lighting of our theatre

Length ..... Width ..... Ceiling Height .....
Name ..... Address .....

THE CARL BARCKHOFF COMPANY

Builders of PIPE ORGANS

with or without self playing attachment

POMEROY, OHIO, U. S. A.

ESTABLISHED 1819

Over 3,000 Barckhoff Organs in use in the United States which testify to their superiority and durability in construction, workmanship and character of tone.

We make a specialty of Organ Chimes manufactured from the choicest Bell Metal. Not made by any other builder.

TRANSARC

Price $50.

Dimensions, 8⅛" x 10⅛" x 11"
Core Loss, 55 Wats.
Volts at arc, 35.
Amperes, 30-40-50-60.

Construction

The core is of the "SHELL" type construction with highest grade of steel lamitations, exposing the outside surface to the air, while the coils mounted therein are carefully wound and treated in the most approved manner and protected from any possible damage thereto, being mountel inside the core. For illustrated catalogue and full information apply to

THE ST. JOHN CORPORATION
180 Broadway, NEW YORK CITY
Sole Distributors for MOHAWK ELECTRIC CO., Albany, New York.

ANNOUNCEMENT

We have purchased the sole rights to manufacture

The Celebrated Radium Gold Fibre Screen

Positively the only successful DAYLIGHT Curtain on the market

Write for particulars

American Theatre Curtain & Supply Co.
Main at Chestnut, St. Louis, Mo.

American Moving Picture Machine Co.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE

STANDARD

Automatic Moving Picture Machine

101-102 Beekman Street New York

Do You Know, Mr. Exhibitor,

That the public wants to know what they will see before they pay their price of admission to your theatre?

The Only Way to Show Your Programme

is by using a method that cannot be improved upon for ages to come.

Our Best Proof

are the hundreds of easels in front of theatres, through the country. Look at one in your city today. Then cut out this slip and mail to us. The Easels are $10.00. The Posters $2.00 per week for the entire output.

To give you a start, we will send you all or any part of old releases from July 10, '11, to Oct. 30, '11, for $1.00 per week.

Exhibitors Advertising Company
Suite 604-605-606
117 North Dearborn St.
Chicago, Ill.

EXHIBITORS ADVERTISING CO.,
117 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Enclosed find $10.00 for frame and check for $..... for Posters, to commence with the week of ....., 1911.

Name .....

Theatre .....

Street .....

City .....

Changeable ILLUMINATED Program Sign

"PATENTED"

EASILY OPERATED, QUICKLY CHANGED, INEXPENSIVE

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 28th, 1911

To Whom It May Concern:

I have been a user of the Zenith Electric Announciator for several months in my various houses, and I am pleased to say that the results have been most satisfactory. I consider it a necessity to a well regulated theatre. (Signed)

Montgomery Amusement Co.,
by F. T. Montgomery, Pres

Write for descriptive matter and money-making particulars.

Zenith Manufacturing Co
P.O. Box 252 Cincinnati, Ohio

INDEPENDENT FILM SERVICE

FILMS that [illegible] BRING BACK LOST TRADE. A [illegible] pleases but [illegible] as good

Look at these prices

2,000 ft.—6 times a week	$14.00
2,000 ft.—7 times a week	15.00
3,000 ft.—6 times a week	18.00
3,000 ft.—7 times a week	20.00

Songs and Lithographs Free—Express one way

SEND FOR LIST

STOCK ROLL TICKETS—75c per M in lots of 20M or more
Bargains in Second Hand Machines—Write Today

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
105 No. Dearborn Street : : Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE

Mirror Screen 8" x 11" . .	$200
Outfit No. 310 Deagan Bells .	60
B. C. Edison Phonograph (Cost 125)	75
1 Piano, Krell (Good Condition) .	100
3 D. C. Electric Fans . .	25

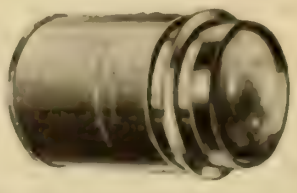
TERMS CASH

THE ABOVE ARE BARGAINS

PRINCESS THEATRE : Anderson, Ind.

A GUNDLACH PROJECTION LENS

Will Certainly Improve Your Pictur



will make it sharp, clear and brilliant, and if you give the height and width of the screen and the distance from the Lens to the center of the screen we can furnish a Lens to make the picture just the right size.

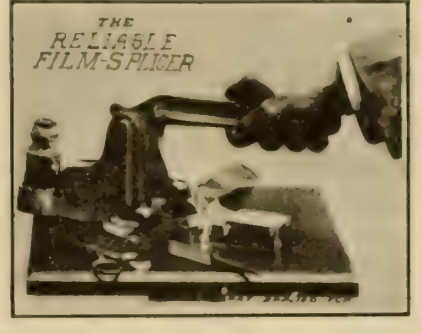
Gundlach Projection Lenses are furnished to order with Powers and Motiograph Machines. They are sold by all Film Exchanges subject to approval.

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Company
808 Clinton Ave., So. Rochester, N. Y.

The Reliable Film Splicer

Patent applied for

DURABLE AND EVERLASTING



Makes smooth, everlasting splices quickly. Matches sprocket holes perfectly.

IT WELDS THE FILM

Price Complete $5.00

Ask your Exchange to show you how it works;

Manufactured only by

A. J. Wellmann
Box 368, Catlettsburg, Ky.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX — EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

BOUND VOLUME No. 9

July to September, 1911
(THREE MONTHS)

NOW READY

$1.50 EACH NET $1.50

Postage 60c. extra, or Express Charges collect

PUBLICATION OFFICE

Moving Picture World, 125 East 23d St., N.Y. City

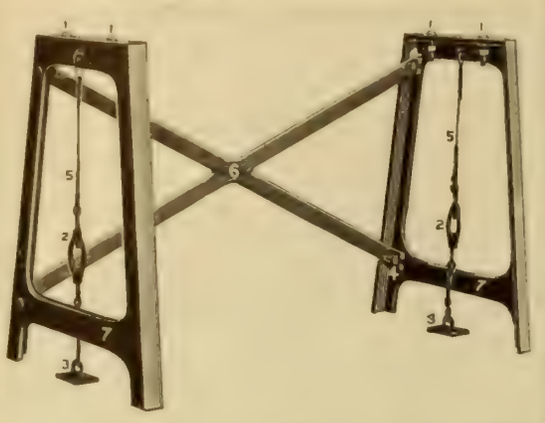
MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and any one can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of three dollars ($3) cash with order, we will send by express, charges not prepaid, or $3.50 by registered mail, prepaid, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.



WE MAKE SUPPLIES

to produce a steady, clear, sharp and flickerless picture.

$12.00 for a non-vibrating machine table that you can't bump out of alignment; you only pay express if you find it unsatisfactory after 30 days' trial.

Improved Intermittent Action Complete, including Star, Cam, Arbor and Sprocket, $12.00.

Two Pin machines rebuilt, with Lavezzi Improved Intermittent Action, former price $30.00, now $25.00.

100 Pointers on machine adjusting, repairing, etc., free to Operators and Managers.

LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS 2940 Herndon Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK
DEMAND UNLIMITED.

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, and pays well. We teach you by mail how to write and sell your plots. Many successful graduates.
FULL DETAILS FREE.

ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE SCHOOLS
911 Chicago Opera House Building CHICAGO

LUMIERE'S METHYNOL A PEER OF DEVELOPING AGE TS
(USED SAME AS METOL)
Special Prices $4.50 a pound in Lots 10 lb. (in Tin)
$4.25 a pound in Lots 20 lb. (in Tin)
Sold only by LUMIERE JOUGLA CO.
75 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK Phone Stuyvesant 531

THE E-Z SLIDE

MAKE THEM YOURSELF
CLEAR AS GLASS — WILL OUTLAST GLASS
You can write or print on them as easily as on a sheet of writing paper.
Ask your Film Exchange for them or write to
BATTERSHALL & OLESON 39 W. Adams St. Chicago, Ill.

FILM FOR SALE 300 Reels Independent Film—Imp—Bison—Nestor, Etc.—No Junk—Renovated- Fine Condition — 10 to 25 Posters—Price $10.00 to $12.50.
FRENCH FILM RESTORING CO., Columbus, Ohio

FEATURE FILMS

We buy them all—Dante, David Copperfield, Romeo and Juliet, Fall of Troy, Clio and Phyletes, Train Robbers, The White Slave, All Prize Fights, Passion Play and thirty others.

Today is the time, before your competitor beats you to it. Heralds—Colored Announcement Slides, Banners and Lithographs sent in advance. Send for description now.

THE FEATURE FILM COMPANY, Toledo, Ohio
We Buy More Features than any firm in the U. S.

PURE AIR

is as necessary in your theatre as Fire Exits. The public demand sanitary conditions. On receipt of your remittance for $1.96 we will ship four quarts of our

Aroma Foam Perfumed Disinfectant,

one quart each of Geranium, Luxuran, Azuran and Vidor and will include large compressed air sprayer and an artistic colored slide for use on your screen. Sanitary Service Corporation, 82 Wall Street, New York City.

Address all communications to Laboratory,
293 FULTON STREET, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

You can rent - - GOLDEN SONG REVUE

From your Exchange. The biggest attraction ever put on slides. Endorsed by over 100 leading Vaudeville Theatres.
Cartoons by R. L. Goldberg. Made exclusively by

LEVI CO., Inc. 1560 Broadway, New York City

DIRECT Jobber for Powers, Edison and Motiograph Machines

WHOLESALE

EVERYTHING IN MOTION PICTURE EQUIPMENT EXCEPT THE FILM

MACKIE HAS IT

H. A. MACKIE, Inc., 851-853 Broadway, Corner 14th Street, NEW YORK CITY

RETAIL

PEARL WHITE CONDENSERS 65c. EACH. SOLD ELSEWHERE FOR $1.

OPEN MARKET!

OUR FEATURES ARE RENTED WITHOUT RESTRICTION TO ANY EXHIBITOR

OUR RELEASES

"NAPOLEON AT ST. HELENA"
2,000 FT 8 SHEET POSTER ORIGINAL

"THE WAY TO RUIN"
3,000 FT TWO 3 SHEET POSTERS. ORIGINAL

"QUEEN OF BABYLON"
1,100 FT. POSTERS.

"LIFE AS IT IS"
3,000 FT. POSTERS ORIGINAL.

"DUKE OF GRANADA"
2,000 FT. POSTERS ORIGINAL.

"THE VICTIMS OF ALCOHOL"
2,000 FT 8 SHEET POSTERS. ORIGINAL

"HELL!"
2,000 FT. POSTERS.

"ITALIAN-TURKISH WAR"
1,000 FT POSTERS. (CINES).

IF YOUR EXCHANGE CANNOT GIVE YOU THESE FEATURES, COME TO US

OUR FEATURES ARE RENTED BY THE DAY

FEATURE FILM CO.
108 EAST 12TH ST.
Phone 3444 Stuyvesant. NEW YORK CITY

WATCH THIS SPACE FOR FUTURE FEATURE FILMS.

$285.00
IN CASH PRIZES FOR SCENARIOS

The "Imp" Company wants the best 500-foot comedy scenarios it can buy for its third release. To stimulate the interest of the best writers we offer special prizes for the four best comedies received at the "Imp" office before the first of the year. Names of winners will be used on title of prize films as well as advertised in the papers. Address scenarios to Carl Laemmle, "Personal," care of "Imp" Company, 102 West 101st St., New York City.

1st Prize,	$100.00
2nd Prize,	75.00
3rd Prize,	60.00
4th Prize,	50.00

The "Imp" Company will unhesitatingly pay the highest prices for all other scenarios submitted during this contest and found available by Mr. Laemmle. We want to be known as the company that makes the best comedy films on earth—and we are willing to pay for it! Lets have the best you've got—and quickly!

The "Imp" Company
102 W. 101st St., New York, N.Y.
Carl Laemmle, President

G. W. Bradenburgh
Cinematograph Films
233 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa
Phone, Market 334
Cable: Brad-Films, Phila.
Code: A. B. C., 5th Edition

Italy-Turkey War
980 ft., price 8 cts. ft.
One-sheet four color posters

The Only Film Showing Actual War

Scene 1—Governor-General of Tripoli.

Scene 2—Turkish gunners in the forts.

Scene 3—Italian cruiser shelling coast, showing exploding shells, etc.

Scene 4—Havoc of shell striking on board R. N. Carlo Alberto.

Scene 5—Italian squadron shelling Turkish camps at Derna.

Scene 6—Sinking of Turkish cruiser Aka-Bey by Italian cruiser Prevesa.

Scene 7—After the Ultimatum: Bombardment of Tripoli; destruction of Benghazi, showing customs house being destroyed by the ten-inch shells of the R. N. Roma.

State Rights given away on orders in quantities.

Photography perfect; will allow examination.

All films cash with order.

Next week's release:

Capt. Fox and The Chinese Rebels
Posters? Yes!
ANOTHER WAR FILM

Independent Film Service
231 North 8th Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

EXHIBITORS:

We have contracted for the EXCLUSIVE AMERICAN RIGHTS for a series of film productions conceded to be the GREATEST NOVELTIES EVER ATTEMPTED IN MOTION PHOTOGRAPHY, BAR NONE. Correspondence solicited from first-class houses only, as the prices of these features will be prohibitive for the smaller exhibitor.

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the United States

International Film Traders
Incorporated
5 West 14th St., New York City

We Offer
300 more to the Trap Drummers

Get your order in at once. At our special offer price—$10.0

This high-grade Orchestra Drum, 10 thumb screw rods, transparent drum heads, solid shells, maple, rosewood, walnut.

Size, 3 x 14—3 x 15—4 x 15—4 x 14. This offer for September and October.

E. P. Zeidler Drum Co., Cleveland, O.

SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made saleable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism and revision for a fee of only $2.

Exhibitors!
Bad Business?

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Manufacturers!

Manuscripts developed, $10 each. Send in that scenario that has your staff puzzled and a practical working script will be returned.

Epes Winthrop Sargent
21 East 20th St., N. Y. City

25c. in Stamps

Brings this to you.

Nothing like it ever published before.

Will prove a constant guide and money maker to every proprietor, manager and operator.

Send 25cts. today.

Special Jobber of Edison

Powers
Motiograph

Moving Picture Machines

The "Hallberg Economizer"

Used in connection with any of the above moving picture machines, produces the finest results on your screen that money can buy.

I Equip Theaters Completely

And carry in stock only the highest grade goods required for your theater.

Free catalogues, circulars and pamphlets furnished of individual items you require.

J. H. HALLBERG
36 E. 23rd St., New York

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill.
New York Office, 1165 Broadway.

The A. H. Andrews Co.

Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 673 Mission St.

Branches in all Leading Cities

Get Our Prices Before You Buy

The Wisconsin Lumber and Veneer Co.

Port Washington, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT
144 W. 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

It pays to discriminate when you buy

THEATRE SEATING

WRITE TODAY for Cat. V2 (Mov. Picture Chairs) and Cat. V3 (Upholstered Chairs)

Send Floor Sketch for Free Seating Plan

Widest range of styles and prices. Large Stocks

American Seating Company

218 S. Wabash Ave., CHICAGO — 19 W. 18th St., NEW YORK

WE CAN HURRY

YOUR ORDER OUT.

STAFFORD Chairs excell all others.

HEAVY FIVE PLY seats and backs.

The last-forever kind, that you are using long after you have forgotten the price.

STEEL CHAIRS TOO

We carry several kinds of good chairs in stock, all guaranteed.

ASK FOR CATALOG 305

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILL.

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS

ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue

OH! MR. EXHIBITOR!!

THINK OF THE MOTHERLESS, THE FATHERLESS, AND THE

Childless homes as the result of theater panics. Protect the lives of your patrons by installing our "ANTI-PANIC" THEATER CHAIR. 26 Dead at Cannonsburg, 176 at Boyertown, 575 at Iriquois Theater, Chicago. Make these horrors impossible.

Our chair is a friend to the Public.

It advertises your theater and makes your business grow.

It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.

IT IS THE ONLY SANITARY CHAIR

It will make your theater all aisles.

It is the world's greatest theater chair, perfected to the highest degree.

Write today for Circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

☆ G.MÉLIÈS ☆

PADRE ERNESTO RISKS LIFE TO NURSE THE DON

THE MISSION FATHER

PADRE ERNESTO, in saving a slave from the brutal anger of Don Hernando, a powerful nobleman, incurs the latter's displeasure and abuse. Yet he alone volunteers to nurse the Don when that nobleman contracts the dread disease small-pox. When Hernando recovers and the Padre dies, the slave becomes enraged that the noble Padre should have been sacrificed for an unworthy brute, so swears to avenge his death. But as he is about to strike the blow, the Don falls in prayer, truly repentant, and the slave realizes that the victory of the Padre's death lay in the saving of Hernando's soul.

APPROX. 1000 FT. 12-21-11

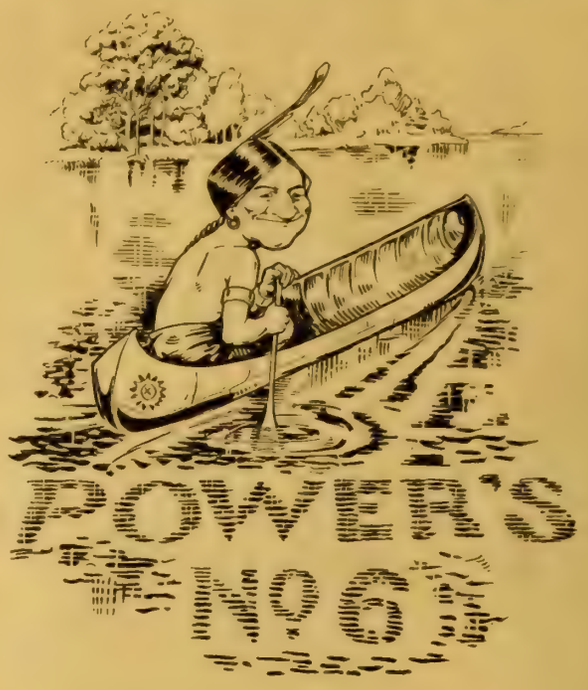
G. MELIES, 204 EAST 38th ST., NEW YORK CITY

RUNS SMOOTH
NOISELESS

POWER'S

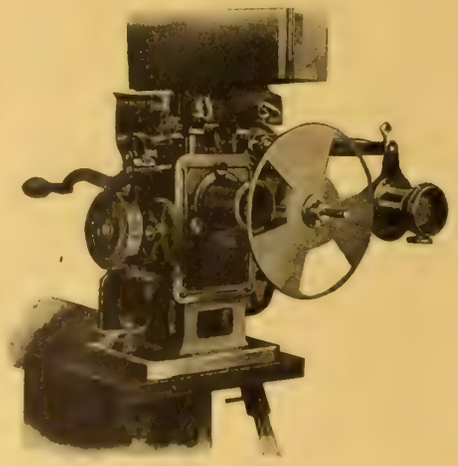
CAMERAGRAPH
No. 6

THE PATHFINDER
TO SUCCESS



We have been making moving picture machines since the game began. Power's No. 6 is the very best product of inventive genius and mechanical skill. It has blazed the way for others, it is and always has been the leader.

Into it have been incorporated stability, perfect mechanism insuring utmost ease of operation, absence of noise, a picture projection which is clear, steady and without a flicker; these are but a few of the virtues of the Power's No. 6. It has made our reputation, and will add to yours.



Get a POWER'S No. 6, and Have the Indian Sign on the Other Fellow

Catalogue G will tell you all about it

NICHOLAS POWER CO.

115-117 NASSAU ST. N. Y. CITY

For fourteen years the leading manufacturer of moving picture machines

CAREY PRESS, N. Y.

Vol. 10, No. 12 December 23, 1911 Price, 10c.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "Desperate Desmond Fails" (Nestor).

125 East 23rd Street New York Chicago 169 W. Washington St.

Let us help decorate your lobby for the holidays—Mail us the coupon in the lower left-hand corner

THE THANHOUSER

"GREATEST DECEMBER"

"SHE"

Request Now "Greatest December's" Greatest Picture!

IN 2 REELS

RIDER HAGGARD'S MYSTERY MASTERPIECE

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 26.

A Special and a Feature Issued as a Regular Thanhouser Release

AS A GORGEOUS, MYSTIFYING MOTION PICTURE

Released Friday, December 29

Last of the "Greatest December" Issues

THE EXPERT'S REPORT

Scene from "She"

Here is the wonder-subject you have been waiting for. To be booked at any exchange NOW. Ask to-day. Don't join the line when it stretches clear around the block. Remember, there are two kinds of dandy one-sheets for the picture and a rich three-sheet Artposter. You can bill it like a circus. And once your display pulls the people inside, the picture will astound and stun them with its startling effects and amazing mystery situations.

is something novel in the dramatic way, introducing a "twist" that will thrill and satisfy any audience. Try to be at your exchange when they put on the reel for inspection. Get a line on the "twist" we're tipping you about, for use in your advertising. And don't forget that "The Thanhouser Kid" drops to the bottom of a well in this picture. Mention THAT in your advertising. Here is a good, strong story that any patron will appreciate.

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N.Y.
Send me FREE Lobby Decorations for your "Greatest December" features. I am / am not getting "The Thanhouser News."
Name_____
Address_____
Exchange_____
CLIP AND MAIL THIS DAY

EXTRA! Plenty of Billing Matter for "SHE!"

Thanhouser Company beg to announce that the exhibitor can secure from his exchange two kinds of one-sheet four-color lithos for "She," and a three-sheet Artposter. The supply of the three-sheet Artposters is limited and it is requested that you give your exchange NOW an idea of how many three-sheet Artposters you will require.

THANHOUSER COMPANY

New Rochelle, N. Y.

Sales Company Agents for U. S. and Canada

FOUR-A-WEEK ESSANAY

Do Your Christmas Shopping Early. Book These Releases Now!

The second of our Child's Fairy Stories Series

RELEASED TUESDAY, DEC. 19th

THE THREE BEARS

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

The story of Goldilocks and the Three Bears is familiar to every man, woman and child. It is an excellent production, with much quaint humor, and will prove a hit with adults and children alike.

A split reel of comedy and drama

RELEASED THURSDAY, DEC. 21st

WINNING AN HEIRESS

(Length, approx. 300 feet.)

Sapleigh becomes a chauffeur in order to marry an heiress. It is a rude awakening he has when he finds that "Muriel," whom he has believed to be the pretty daughter, is in reality a pet monkey.

Released with

THE FOILING OF RED DUGAN

(Length, approx. 700 feet.)

A thrilling dramatic story. "Red" threatens revenge when sentenced to the penitentiary for a long term. He escapes and makes an attempt on the judge's life, but the latter is saved by the courageous Jimmy, the judge's son.

A scream in every foot of this full reel comedy

RELEASED FRIDAY, DEC. 22nd

THE MILLIONAIRE BARBER

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

There is novelty in the plot of this excellent comedy, and the comedy situations are immense. A barber passes himself off for a millionaire and has a gay time until his real identity comes out. It is then "back to the clippers" for him.

A Western Christmas picture with "Broncho Billy"

RELEASED SATURDAY, DEC. 23rd

BRONCHO BILLY'S CHRISTMAS DINNER

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

An excellent Christmas release, with thrills, sensations and excitement—but best of all, it is big with the true spirit of Christmas good cheer and good will. Absolutely the best holiday release this year.

Essanay Film Mfg. Company

521 First National Bank Building, Chicago, Ill.

OFFICES IN

LONDON : : BERLIN : : BARCELONA

3 NESTORS A WEEK Get Them!

NESTOR

Oldest and Best — "The Worth-While Film" — Always a Feature

3 NESTORS A WEEK Get Them!

Monday, December 18th

THE LOVE CHASE

Scene from "THE LOVE CHASE"

How love lends wings, laughs at locksmiths, finds the way and surmounts barriers is amusingly shown in "THE LOVE CHASE," a charmingly sweet and delightfully pleasing Nestor Comedy in 975 joyful feet. GET IT!

DAVID HORSLEY, BAYONNE, N. J.

NESTOR SOLD THROUGH THE SALES CO.

Wednesday, December 20th

THE NEW RANCH OWNER

An enterprising Road Agent gets the surprise of his eventful career by impersonating Lord Arling, the New Ranch Owner, 1000 feet of entrancing Western Comedy full of mirth-provoking situationsand spirited action. GET IT!

COMING RELEASES

Monday, Dec. 25th
"THE BEST MAN WINS"

Wednesday, Dec. 27th
"A WESTERN GIRL'S LOVE"

Saturday, Dec. 30th
"MUTT AND JEFF BREAK INTO SOCIETY"
and "THEIR AFTERNOON OFF"

Saturday, December 23rd

"DESPERATE DESMOND FOILED BY CLAUDE ECLAIRE"

Scene from "DESPERATE DESMOND FOILED BY CLAUDE ECLAIRE"

Desperate Desmond's diabolical doings are a success. Beautiful Rosamond is in his power and Claude Eclaire—well, Claude has his inning, and the villain, like McCluskey, goes to the bottom of the sea. Don't miss this Foto-Burlesque. GET IT!

ÉCLAIR

Shall It Be Sunday?

ECLAIR now issues one AMERICAN Reel on TUESDAY and one PARIS-Americanized Reel on THURSDAY. Heavy demand necessitates releasing another American Eclair. We asked the trade what day of the week would be best for this regular release. MOST EVERYBODY SAID SUNDAY, BUT WE WANT TO BE SURE.

Suppose you drop us a line and give your preference, after looking over the present Independent program carefully.

We've Engaged Notables

Men and women prominent in the moving picture limelight. ECLAIR accepts only the best talent with a reputation.

Announcement will be made next week naming these new ECLAIR acquisitions.

Courtesy to concerns using them at present forbids our giving names now.

Coming Soon!

The Greatest Two Reels Ever Given to Pictures—

ALCOHOL

A production and a sermon in one.

SEND FOR BOOKLET

of the story and further particulars. State if you are on our mail list or not.

COMING RELEASES

TUESDAY December 19	A Tragic Joke	Unusual Detective Drama
THURSDAY December 21	A Heart Bowed Down	Wondrous Child Story
TUESDAY December 26	The Wrong Bottle	An Almost Tragedy
THURSDAY December 28	The Silent Call	A Railway Drama
TUESDAY January 2	Divorcons	Victorien Sardou's Great Comedy
THURSDAY January 4	Old Papers—Old Souvenirs	An Unusual Drama
TUESDAY January 9	A Doctor's Duty	A Hospital Story
THURSDAY January 11	The Inventor	A Tale of Conspiracy
TUESDAY January 16	Mamie Bolton	A Wall Street Comedy

Get On Our Mail List for Details and Story

ECLAIR FILM CO. GENERAL OFFICES AND STUDIOS Fort Lee, N. J.

BRANCHES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO.

145 West 45th Street, NEW YORK, U.S.A.

21 Reels Every Week

7 Days—3 Reels Daily

OUR FRANCHISES

We are pleased to state that at this time twenty-eight states are now being offered the National Exclusive programme of twenty-one releases each and every week.

We are working as fast as conditions will allow, and should it be that you are in a territory not being served, we beg of you to be patient for a little while. We are bending all our efforts to cover the balance of the territories still open.

Our franchises are valuable, and we do not propose to grant them to whomsoever might apply. We have selected men with records in the business world whose character and financial standing lend strength, which we believe their connections with our organization will prove.

The conditions of our franchises of exclusiveness to exhibitors are very stringent. Our aim to protect the exhibitors is the fundamental basis of our contract.

In case your territory is not being served, interest yourself in the exchange franchise, which we grant free to responsible business men.

We invite the public to review our programme daily at our exhibition rooms.

THE PROGRAMME OF QUALITY AND VARIETY

EXCLUSIVE PROGRAMME

MONDAY
Plantation, Clarendon, Mono
3 Reels

TUESDAY
Rose, Deutsches Biograph, Helio
3 Reels

WEDNESDAY
Federal, Mondia, Latium
3 Reels

THURSDAY
Washington, Hepwix, Film d'Art
3 Reels

FRIDAY
Mohawk, Cricks & Martin, Aquilla
3 Reels

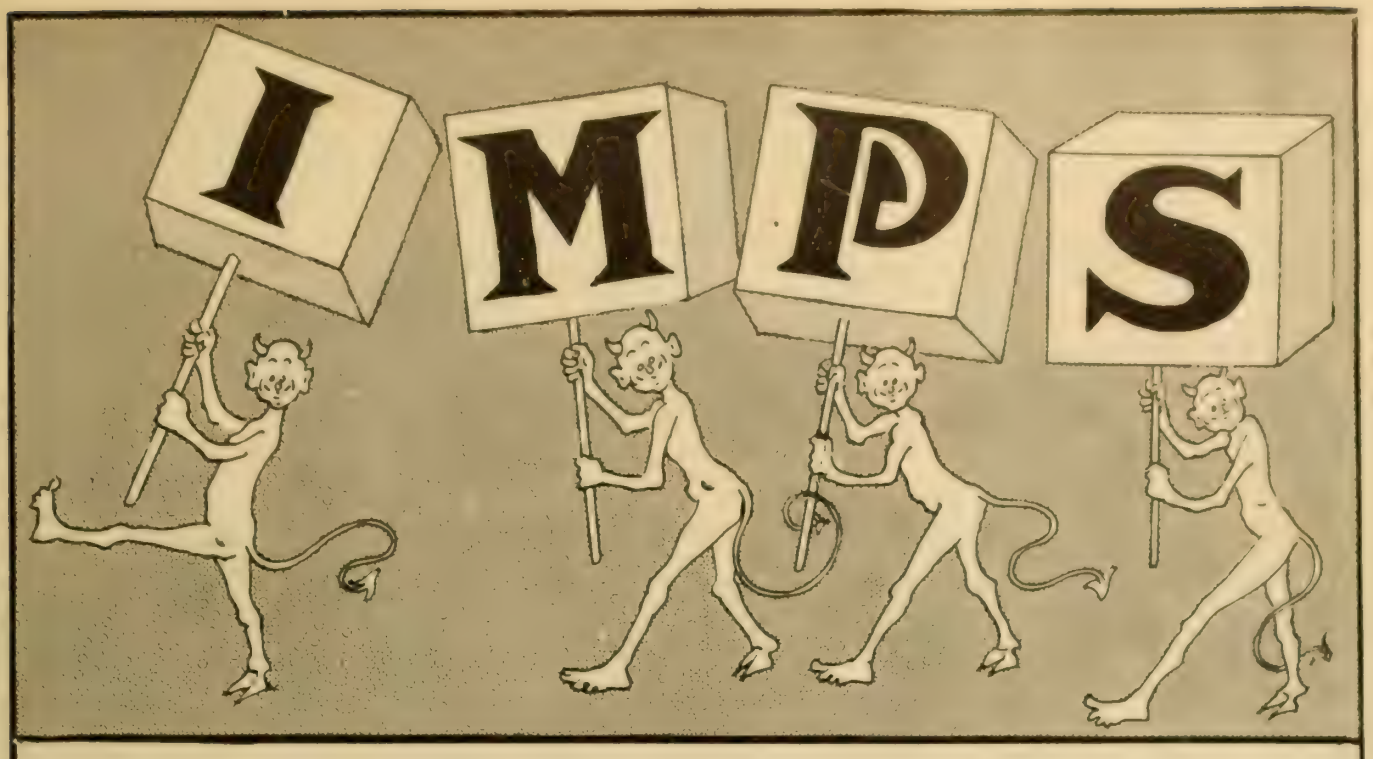
SATURDAY
Oklahoma, Deutsches Bioscope, Savoy
3 Reels

SUNDAY
California, Messters, Comerio
3 Reels

7 Days—3 Reels Daily

National Film Distributing Co.

145 West 45th Street, NEW YORK, U.S.A.



Four Imps on Three Reels

Bringing out a "split" reel every Saturday means that we are really producing FOUR different Imp subjects every week—a plan which represents a terrific outlay of money and which you should take fullest advantage of by MAKING SURE YOU GET THE MONDAY IMP, THE THURSDAY IMP AND THE SATURDAY "SPLIT" IMP e-v-e-r-y w-e-e-k. T. T. Lynch, Ottumwa, Ia., says: "I think so much of Imps that I have changed the name of my theatre to the "IMP." Chas. J. Snelling, Alva, Okla., wrote to his exchange and said: "What would you want for a twelve-roll service and MAKE IT ALL IMPS?" I. Feinstein, Jefferson Theatre, Hoboken, N. J., says: "Keep up the good work and THREE IMPS A WEEK WON'T BE ENOUGH."

"At the Stroke of Three"

A peach of a love story, thrilling and exciting throughout. Released Monday, Dec. 25th. Copyright 1911. Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.

"The Portrait"

One of the best dramas the IMP ever produced. Original and powerful. Released Thursday, December 28th. Copyright 1911. The Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.

"A Lesson to Husbands"

This is the first half of our Saturday Split of Dec. 30th. On the same reel you will get a corking farce entitled "Broke"

With a real laugh in every one of its 600 feet. Released Saturday Dec. 30th. Both subjects copyrighted 1911. The Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.

HINT—Be sure of AT LEA ST THREE packed houses every week, by using THREE IMPS EVERY WEEK. Picture postcards of KING BAGGOT are mighty good souvenirs to give your patrons. Ask about them.

The Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America
CARL LAEMMLE, Pres.
102 West 101st St. New York

WM HOUSTON KENYON
ALAN D KENYON
ROBERT N KENYON
RICHARD EYRE
PENNINGTON HALSTED
GEORGE W MILLS, JR
GORHAM CROSBY
SAMUEL M WARD, JR
JOHN O GEMPLER
W C WITTER

SM.

LAW OFFICES OF
KENYON & KENYON
49 WALL STREET
NEW YORK

PATENTS, TRADE-MARKS
COPYRIGHTS

CABLE ADDRESS "AMAXIA NEW YORK"

TELEPHONE 7637 HANOVER

December 8th, 1911.

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.,

111 East 14th Street, New York.

Gentlemen:

The Edison Reissue camera patent No. 12037, owned by the Motion Picture Patents Company, has just been a second time reissued as No. 13329, December 5, 1911, for the balance of the term of the original patent, that is to say, to August 31, 1914.

In our opinion this new Reissue is invalid and void.

The new Reissue chiefly consists of a disclaimer (by omission) of claim 4 of Reissue No. 12037, which claim was held invalid by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in March, 1907, (151 Fed. 767) and the delay in disclaiming which was referred to by the same Court in May, 1911, (187 Fed. 1007) as the reason for refusing preliminary injunction on any claim of the patent.

The Motion Picture Patents Company, in order to secure the new Reissue No. 13329, was under the law obliged to surrender the old Reissue 12037, and with that surrender all existing litigation for alleged infringement and all claims for alleged infringement of that Reissue 12037 abate and come to an end. The new Reissue can be enforced only by entirely new litigation. In our opinion the new Reissue was granted by the Patent Office without authority in law, and further, in our opinion, if the new Reissue is litigated it will be declared invalid and void.

Very truly yours,

Kenyon & Kenyon

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES CO.
111 East 14th Street, New York City

A BIG SACRED SUNDAY FEATURE with Santa Claus as the Harbinger of Hope and Faith

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

Released SUNDAY, DECEMBER 24 . . Shows the Rising Sun breaking a dawn of a new era of better things and three-a-week.

Write

For Lobby Displays

Feature

It NOW

Wire Your Exchange
Three a Week
Starts
Sunday, December 24

Released
Wednesday, Dec. 27
When Marian Was Little

Navie Little Marian, only sixteen, practices her alluring coquetry on her brother's college chum. She primps up like a big girl and gets the Indian sign on Dick. See Little Marian Swane at her best.

Released
Friday, Dec. 29
The Divided Ring

After the death of their parents, two children are separated and adopted by different families. Before their separation they divide between them their mother's ring. After their separation the children are reared in different environments. The story is an example of the effect of environment on character.

Solax

The Musical Sensation in motion pictures. THE VIOLIN MAKERS OF NUREMBERG IS RELEASED, Friday, December 22. With it is also released a three-sheet and a special lobby display.

Solax Company, Congress Avenue FLUSHING, N.Y.

SALES COMPANY Agents in U. S. A. and Canada

GREAT NORTHERN

CARL ALSTRUP
Flaying Leading Parts in
All Feature Comedies

Release for Saturday, December 16th

HIS FIRST MONOCLE

A delicious comedy film with every scene a laughable one.

ON THE SAME REEL:

GREECE

An admirable travel subject, depicting many interesting scenes amongst which the Corinthian Canal, Corfu Harbor, and the German Emperor's mansion are included.

Release for Saturday, December 23rd

THE TWINS

A corking good comedy film with a laugh all the way through.

ON THE SAME REEL:

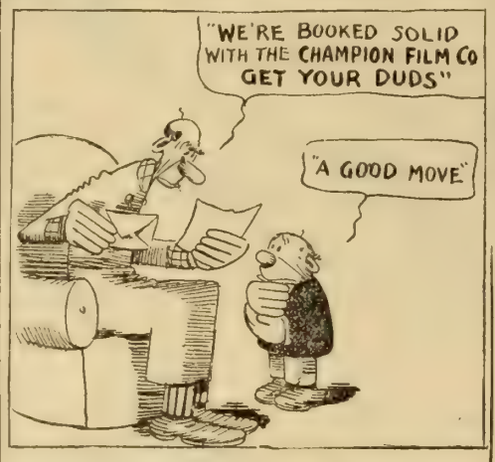
FROM OSTERSUND TO STORLIEN

A superb travel subject. A magnificent as well as realistic picture which is bound to delight everybody.

All First-Class Independent Exchanges Handle Our Product

Sold Only Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 E. 14th St., N.Y.
(NORDISK FILM CO. OF COPENHAGEN.)



Sherlocko and Watso

Already Favorites

in the public eye, will appear in Champion pictures, in special dashing, laugh-convulsive Comedies. We have the exclusive privilege for this feature. Therefore, every exhibitor must employ every means for booking this Cash Box Delight.

The Champion Film Co.

MARK M. DINTENFASS, Gen'l Mgr.
Now located in new offices at
145 West 45th St. New York City

The Week's Releases

For Monday, Dec. 25th, 1911

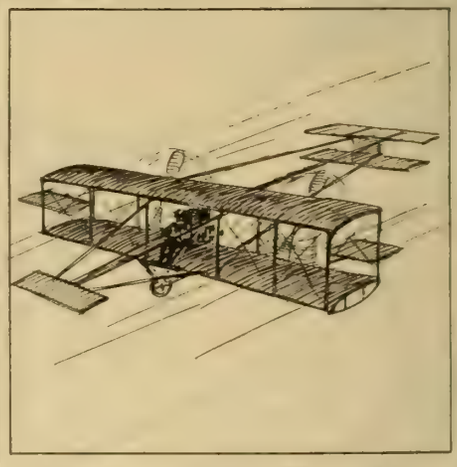
"Bonnie Of The Hills"

Parted from her sweetheart, Bonnie leaves her western home to educate herself at an Academy. A subsequent meeting and auto ride leads to their hold-up by bandits. Bonnie cleverly outwits and captures them. The sweethearts are then re-united.

For Wednesday, December 27th, 1911

"The Doctor's Close Call"

A young doctor, seeking to recover his health in the West, is captured in the company of bandits. His faithful sweetheart back East reads of his peril and courageously saves him.



Robert G. Fowler

The Renowned Aviator

accompanied by a Champion camera man, is making an interesting air cruise from New Orleans to the Atlantic seaboard. Fascinating scenic pictures of beautiful and pleasing value. Overhead city flights will also be included.

Digest This News?

CHRISTMAS EVE!

Sunshine and song without, the sound of bells in the air! Christmas cheer and Christmas gaiety and gladness everywhere!—Everywhere? Ah, no! Even this night, when the world rejoices, there are some who are desolate, some whose hearts are drear, some for whom the merry Christmas chimes strike only a knell!

"THE MARTYR"

REX Xmas Film,

Released Thursday, Dec. 21st

tells us the other side, the shadow lost and forgotten in the Yuletide brilliance. The sweet spirit of the One of Galillee moves through the thousand feet, and we throb and thrill at the truth of it. "The Martyr" is one to her own mother-love, and the Christmas Eve of many years come and go, and with the passing of each a little more respect and a little more of her children's love go with it. The sympathy and sentiment and sweet sadness which Miss Lois Weber instills into the role will characterize it as a master work of dramatic art.

It's an emotion picture!

It's a picture truly without peer or parallel!

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO.

573 Eleventh Avenue
New York City

Sales Co. says, "The Martyr" like every other, will do a lot of good!

OH! SEE THE BIRDIES!

IN spite of the fact that the house was green, we tried to light our cigars, and it was Sunday. But the horse continued galloping, and the sun sank into the East, even though the birds chirped Ah, it was a merry tale, but the sad situation didn't make the thermometer any warmer. There he sat, head bowed on his arms, and the carpet tacks frolicked and sang! Until at last the weather came, and it rained happily

Suddenly the tables were oblong, but he still wore the wig. His face had a terrible expression for half past two in the evening. There was a fierce glint in his lips, and his eyes curled scornfully, as the tears ran up his forehead. The bandanna handkerchief roamed around the room, and came back pleased at the vain quest Then a cry arose and left the room

Oh, it was awful to contemplate! Strong men on roller skates, sailing off into the distance and telephoning that they would be late for dinner. Weak women lifting tons of feathers, making light of their occupation And as they labored, delight went out, and silence was heard on all sides Even the trees were barking. And the brook rippled on, and the sidewalked.

So it went for four hundred years and a month; but a time came when the mystery was cleared, and the grass grew again and the battlefield was closed for the evening

. . . . . .

The secret will be released for the first time on Sunday . . even sooner than that!

THE GEM MOTION PICTURE CO.

Gaumont

A GAUMONT EVERY TUESDAY and SATURDAY

KOSMIK FILM

AN ECLIPSE EVERY WEDNESDAY

ECLIPSE

CURRENT RELEASES

Gaumont, Tuesday, Dec. 26

FROM PITY TO LOVE

(COLORED)

Drama. About 826 ft.

The story of a maid's devotion which finally ends in love.

SCENES OFF THE COAST OF NORTH AFRICA

Travelogue. About 124 ft.

Eclipse, Wednesday, Dec. 27

THE STOLEN TREASURE

Drama. About 680 ft.

The dramatic story of a stolen jewel box, which is finally restored to its rightful owners.

FAIR EXCHANGE IS NO ROBBERY

Comedy. About 322 ft.

Gaumont, Saturday, Dec. 30

CURING A RECKLESS STUDENT

Drama. About 1,010 ft.

Charlie leads a gay life at college, but is "cured" of his reckless ways in a very effective manner.

ECLIPSE

Advance Announcements Free. Write to

GEORGE KLEINE

166 No. State St., Chicago, Ill.

LICENSED BY THE MOTION PICTURE PATENTS CO.

Gaumont

Comet

Released Monday, December 25th

The Tie That Binds

(1000 Feet)

A dainty comedy of domestic differences in Gotham's social high life. Beautifully presented by the Comet Stock Company

Released Friday, December 29th

The Crude Miss Prude

(1000 Feet)

A Comedy Romance of Intelligence Office life. One of the funniest stories of modern times.

The Exhibitor who stands for a "Story" instead of a "Comet" is being sidetracked.

Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

Comet Film Co., 344 East 32nd St. NEW YORK CITY

LUX FILMS

The Films the Exhibitor Demands

RELEASED DEC. 22, 1911

A Japanese Love Story

DRAMA

Length, 977 Feet

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th St. New York City

Telephone 3427 Stuyvesant

Sold Only Through

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING and SALES COMPANY

ONLY EASTMAN RAW STOCK USED

VITAGRAPH

VITAGRAPH MONTHLY CURRENT EVENTS.
MONDAY DECEMBER 18th.

A Sight Seeing Tour of unprecedented wonders. A Grand-Stand view of World Marvels. A Holiday Week delight.

"VANITY FAIR." THREE REELS.
TUESDAY DECEMBER 19th.

This is the best possible and the One Big Offering of the Season. It comes in just right for the Holidays. The New Era Feature Film that will catch the Holiday crowds.

"FIRES OF DRIFTWOOD."
WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 20th.

Follow this: a storm at sea; a wreck; a woman saved from the deep; she turns out to be a siren who lures her rescuer from his home and family. She deserts him for another. The deluded rescuer returns home penitent on a Christmas Eve, is forgiven and reunited to his wife and child.

"A REFORMED SANTA CLAUS."
FRIDAY DECEMBER 22.

A general strike is on. The head of the Mines is pursued by the strikers; rescued by a poor widow who disguises him as Santa Claus. He thinks of the misery of others. In gratitude for his escape, he accedes to his employees' demands, makes himself happy and gives a Merry Christmas to all.

"THE OLD DOLL."
SATURDAY DECEMBER 23.

It makes you think. "The Old Doll," like old friends, is better than the new. It brings back tender recollections of the past and brings two childhood friends together again in later years.

FIVE A WEEK

Next Week Next Week

"SOME GOOD IN ALL"—A Merry Christmas to all.....Monday, December 25th
"THE YOUNGER BROTHER"—Military Drama.....Tuesday, December 26th
"TESTING HIS COURAGE"—Equal to the Test.....Wednesday, December 27th
"A DOUBLY DESIRED ORPHAN"—Doubly desirable.....Friday, December 29th
"IN THE CLUTCHES OF A VAPOR BATH"—A Laugh Producer.....Saturday, December 30th

The Vitagraph Company of America

NEW YORK, 116 Nassau St.
CHICAGO, 109 Randolph St.
PARIS, 15 Rue Sainte-Cecile
LONDON, 25 Cecil Court

LUBIN FILMS

Released Wed., Dec. 20, '11. Length about 1,000 ft.

"Art vs. Music"

A most laughable comedy in which two young lovers, the one aspiring to be a composer and the other an artist, are parted through their self imposed devotion to their respective arts. Afterwards meeting under unforseen circumstances, each taking pity on the other's lack of ability, they surreptitiously endeavor to lend to each other a helping hand. The result, while unexpectedly humiliating to both, leads to a happy ending and cures them of their fads.

Scene from "THE KIDDIES' CHRISTMAS"

Released Thurs., Dec. 21, '11. Two Reels

"The Kiddies' Christmas"

A spectacular production in two reels portrayed by the Lubin Company of famous players. This picture is the sensation of the year and is produced at an enormous expense. It shows, besides the spectacular, scenic and mechanical effects, live animals, such as polar bears, sea lions, etc. You cannot afford to miss this.

Released Sat., Dec. 23, '11. Length about 1,000 ft.

"Sergeant White's Peril"

Sergeant White, a gallant young officer, rescues a pretty senorita from the clutches of a wicked Mexican and is in return rescued by his faithful horse after he has been shot by the Mexican and is drifting wounded down a stream. The horse brings the troop of soldiers to his master.

Released Mon., Dec. 25, '11. Length about 1,000 ft.

"One Way to Win"

Deals with a joke by means of which a lovesick barber overcomes parental opposition and gains a blushing bride and sufficient capital to start him in business for himself. It is to be hoped that he treats his own customers better than he did those of his former employer.

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY,

CHICAGO: 208 N. FIFTH AVENUE
LONDON: 45 GERRARD ST., W.
MODEL NEW STUDIOS, 20th and Indiana Avenue Philadelphia, Pa.
BERLIN: 35 FRIEDRICH STR.

THE HOUSE OF
SELIG

WILL RELEASE JAN. 1st, 1912

NOTE:

Electrotypes of this two column newspaper ad can be secured from our office. Price $1.10.

We also have one and three column ads prepared for exhibitor's use.

Art photos of Miss Taliaferro, 8 x 10 in., for lobby display or souvenirs, 20c each, $2.00 per dozen.

---

1 Sheet Lithos
3 " "
8 " "

Drawn from life, four colors.

SELIG'S SUBLIME MASTERPIECE
CINDERELLA
IN THREE PARTS
The Moving Picture Beautiful
An all-absorbing, dramatic creation of lavish pantomimic glory. A twenty thousand dollar production with one of America's highest priced dramatic stars leading a cast of three hundred and fifty actors, among them, all the popular Selig favorites.
The cost of this wonderful production to you is next to nothing
---An Hour Show—For Old and Young Alike—Don't Miss It!
WITH
MISS MABEL TALIAFERRO

NOTE: Name of your theatre, date, prices, etc., can be set up by your local paper if you use these ads.

NOTE:

Lecture and manual of instructions for properexhibition of Cinderella, price 25c. each.

Musical program, press sheet, cut proofs, etc., free.

Cuts in all sizes and screens for sale at cost.

Send in your name at once for our mailing list and we will send complete descriptions, prices etc., on all Cinderella publicity matter for exhibitors.

DEC. 25—A Modern Rip
An exceedingly human drama of everyday life. About 1000 ft.

DEC. 26—The Bully of Bingo Gulch
A strong western comedy drama pictured in beautiful Colorado. About 1000 ft.

DEC. 28—Paid Back
The tense, dramatic recital of a modern newspaper scoop. Founded on true incidents in real life. Single reel feature.

DEC. 29—Their Last Chance
The West has proved the background for many fine comedies. Here is one of it's best. About 1000 ft.

SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

20 EAST RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Branch Offices: 12 Gerrard Street, London, W., Eng. Hamburg Budapest St. Petersburg

TRADE MARK

Thomas A Edison

Profit by others' experience when you start in the motion picture business.

Experienced exhibitors have found that it pays to buy the best machine first. Don't waste your good money on a cheap machine in order to find this out for yourself—profit by the experience of others.

There is not enough difference in cost between a cheap machine and

THE

Edison Kinetoscope

TRADE MARK

Thomas A Edison

the best motion picture machine made, to make it worth your while to consider any machine but the Edison and run the risk of failure of your show.

With the Edison Kinetoscope the success of your show is practically assured. Clear, steady pictures—no flicker—bring the crowds and keep them coming constantly. The Edison's simplicity keeps your operating cost down, its durability minimizes your maintenance and repair cost. It will outlast any other motion picture machine made. Write us to-day for complete particulars and copy of the Edison Kinetogram.

Scenes from "PAPA'S SWEETHEART"

EDISON FILMS

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 26th

(Two subjects on one reel.)

"PAPA'S SWEETHEART"

CAST.

The Widower	Marc McDermott
His Children	Gladys Hulette, Yale Boss, Edna May Weick
The Other Woman	Elizabeth Miller

A simple and appealing story. Through a young girl's startling resemblance to the portrait of her beautiful mother, her father, a widower, is saved from what would have been an unhappy marriage.

"MODERN WEAPONS FOR FIGHTING FIRE"

New York City

This will interest all. It shows how the horse-drawn apparatus is being replaced by automobiles, and the high-pressure service at work. The latter is most sensational.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 27th

"THE STUFF THAT DREAMS ARE MADE OF"

CAST.

A Country Farmer	William West
His Daughter	Mary Fuller
Her Sweetheart	Yale Benner
The Rich-man	James Gordon
His daughter	Laura Sawyer

Burlesque melodrama, through which the hero, the heroine, the villain and the villainess go through the most awful adventures. The beginning and ending makes the story plausible. Those who remember "Why Girls Leave Home," will find an even bigger treat in this.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 29th

"A ROMANCE OF THE CLIFF DWELLERS"

CAST.

The Maiden	Laura Sawyer
Rivals for her hand	James Gordon, Herbert Prior

Taken at the Cliff Dwellers' Canyon, Manitou, Colorado, this tragic story is bound to excite wide attention. In a series of wonderfully beautiful scenes, we are shown how, at a period long before the discovery of America, these people loved, hated, fought and were punished.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 30th

"UNCLE HIRAM'S LIST"

CAST.

Uncle Hiram	William West
Jimmie Long	Yale Boss
His Mother	Mrs. Wallace Erskine
His Sister	Marion Brooks
His Little Sweetheart	Leonie Flugrath
Lars Olesen	Charles Ogle
Seth Jones	Robert Brower
Samanthy Jones	Alice Washburn
Jeremiah Brown, a storekeeper	Richard Neil
The Doctor	James Gordon

A tale of a country village with many different types. Uncle Hiram, the village censor, kept a "Skunk List," on which he inscribed the names of all guilty of meanness. How Jimmie got on, and how he got taken off, forms the plot.

THOMAS A. EDISON, Inc., 72 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

DOUBLE YOUR BOX OFFICE
RECEIPTS

PATHÉ'S
WEEKLY

HAS DONE THE TRICK FOR EVERY ONE WHO BOOKS
IT EVERY WEEK

KALEM

"Driving Home the Cows"

A Civil War Masterpiece

Released Monday, January 1st

Simple in its theme, touching in its pictures of home life and stirring in its battle scenes. In every way a feature production.

"The Cowboy Artist's Jonah Day"

A Sure Fire Western Comedy

Released Wednesday, January 3rd

Pete thought his sketches would make him famous. So they did, but not in the manner which he expected.

"The Dude Cowboy" on the Same Reel with "The O'Kalems' Visit to Killarney"

Released Friday, January 5th

This split reel combines a rollicking comedy with a novel scenic picture, showing the O'Kalems visiting picturesque spots about Killarney, Ireland.

SPECIAL MUSIC FOR ARRAH-NA-POGUE

Complete piano score and four-piece orchestration, postage prepaid, for 50 cents.

Three half-tone electros of ARRAH-NA-POGUE, postage prepaid, for 50 cents each.

KALEM COMPANY

INCORPORATED

NEW YORK, 235-239 W. 23rd St.
86 Wardour St., LONDON, W.
BERLIN, 35 Friedrich Str.
PARIS, 13 Rue du Faubourg Montmartre

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY — 125 E. 23d. Street NEW YORK
(Beach Building) — J. P. CHALMERS, Editor and Manager. — Telephone call, 1343-1344 Gramercy

SUSCRIPTION RATES: $3.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada, $3.50. Foreign Countries, $4.00, Post Paid.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES ON APPLICATION.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS (No Display), Three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

WESTERN OFFICE: 169 W. Washington St. (Post Bldg.), Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Main 3145. Automatic Phone 32732.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Address all correspondence "Moving Picture World, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square, New York," and not to individuals.

Vol. 10 — DECEMBER 23, 1911 — No. 12

INDEX TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS ... 979
AMONG THE EXHIBITORS ... 1010-18
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES ... 986
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES ... 997
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent) ... 990
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed) ... 988
CORRESPONDENCE ... 998
FACTS AND COMMENTS ... 968
HARRISBURG, PA. ... 1002
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES ... 1012
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES ... 1020
INDIANAPOLIS ... 1002
INQUIRIES ... 982
IN THE NORTHWEST ... 1002
IN THE SOUTHWEST ... 1002
LICENSED FILM STORIES ... 1000
LICENSED RELEASE DATES ... 1022
LOUISVILLE, KY. ... 1000
MABEL TALIAFERRO TALKS ABOUT PICTURES ... 974
MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES ... 992
MAYOR'S PICTURE THEATER COMMITTEE REPORTS ... 983
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR, THE ... 974
NEW ENGLAND ... 998
PHILADELPHIA ... 998
PICTURE EDUCATOR ... 1000
PRACTICAL SOLUTION OF [illegible] PROBLEM ... 999
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT ... 984
REVIEWS OF NOTABLE FILMS ... 976
SCENARIO WRITER, THE ... 980
SHE [illegible] ... 990
SOMETHING NEW ... 970
SONG SLIDE RELEASES ... 1000
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent) ... 992
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed) ... 1004
WASHINGTON, D. C. ... 1002

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
FROUP, L. F. ... 1000
KIEWERT, CHAS. L. ... 1015
REISINGER, HUGO ... 1016

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
FORT WAYNE ELEC. CO. ... 1025
HALLBERG, J. H. ... 1030-1009
H-G ELECTRIC CO. ... 1024
MACKIE, H. A. ... 1028-1027
MOORE BUBBLE CO. ... 1026
SCHNEIDER, E. ... 1019
ST. JOHN CORPORATION ... 1028

FILM BROKERS.
EXPORT FILM BROKERS ... 1017
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS ... 1029
NATIONAL FILM BROKERS ... 1029

FILM DEALERS & IMPORTERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS ... 1014

FILM EXCHANGES.
ANTI-TRUST FILM CO. ... 1017
BRADENBURG, GEO. ... 1029
FEATURE FILM CO. ... 1014
FEATURE FILM CO. [illegible] ... 1026
FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL FILM CO. ... 1015
GREENE, W. E. ... 1009
HEFZ, I. ... 1024
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE ... 1025
SWAAB FILM SERVICE ... 1019

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
CHAMPION FILM CO. ... 958
COMET FILM CO. ... 960
ECLAIR FILM CO. ... 953
GEM MOTION PICTURE CO. ... 959
GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO. ... 958
IMP ... 955
LUX FILM CO. ... 960
MAJESTIC FILM CO. ... 1021
MOTION PICTURE DIS. & SALES CO. ... 956
NESTOR FILM CO. ... 952
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO. ... 957
POWERS PICTURE PLAYS ... 1005
REX MOTION PICTURE CO. ... 959
SOLAX MOTION PICTURE CO. ... 957
THANHOUSER CO. ... 950

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON, THOS. A., INC. ... 974
ESSANAY FILM CO. ... 951
KALEM CO. ... 960
KLINE, GEO. ... 1000
LUBIN MFG. CO. ... 962
MELIES, GASTON ... 1031
PATHE FRERES ... 965
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO. ... 963
VITAGRAPH CO. OF AMERICA ... 961

MISCELLANEOUS.
A. B. C. CO. ... 1015
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO. ... 1017
ASSOCIATED M. P. SCHOOLS ... 1017
BANNER ADV. CO. ... 1011
BATTERSHALL & OLESON ... 1017
BAUSCH & LOMB ... 1007
BERLIN ANILINE WORKS ... 1028
CHICAGO PRODUCING CO. ... 1029
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS ... 999
COMMERCIAL STUMERS ... 1017
EXHIBITORS ADVERTISING CO. ... 1011
EXHIBITORS ADV. & SPECIALTY CO. ... 998
FRENCH FILM RESTORING CO. ... 1007
HOKE, GEO. M. ... 1027
INFORMATION BUREAU ... 1028
LAVEZZI MACHINE CO. ... 1029
LUMIERE JOLIGLA ... 1017
MCKENNA BROS. ... 1017
MORGENWECK, E. J. ... 1029
MORTIMER FILM CLEANER CO. ... 1019
MOVING PICTURE PATENTS CO. ... 1007
NATIONAL TICKET CO. ... 1026
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO. ... 1031
NEWMAN ELEC. LAMP CO. ... 1017
PERLMAN, I. ... 1029
PFLUEGER, M. P. SUPPLY CO. ... 1009
REALTY BROKERS ... 1028
REID DIFFUSE CO. ... 1027
ROYAL TYPEWRITER CO. ... 1023
SARGENT, E. W. ... 1000
SUPERIOR FILM SERVICE CO. ... 1007
THEATRE FILM & SUPPLY CO. ... 1028
TISDALE, F. M. ... 1017
TRAINER, C. W. ... 1029
U. S. FACTORIES CO. ... 1015
WILLIAMS, BROWN & EARLE ... 1027

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN M. P. MACHINE CO. ... 978
EDISON, THOS. A., INC. ... 974
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO. ... 977-1024
POWER, NICHOLAS ... 1002

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
DEAGAN, J. C. ... 1027
SINN, CLARENCE E. ... 1000
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH ... 1007
ZEIDLER DRUM CO. ... 1027

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO. ... 977
ANDREWS, A. H. ... 1000
BENNET, GEO. W. ... 1030
HARDESTY CHAIR CO. ... 1000
STEEL FURNITURE CO. ... 1000
WISCONSIN [illegible] ... 1000
STAFFORD, E. H. ... 1000

PROJECTION SCREENS.
[illegible] SPECIALTY CO. ... 1000
MIRROROID CO. ... 1027

SONG SLIDE MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN MOTION SLIDE CO. ... 1000
CHICAGO SONG SLIDE CO. ... 1002
EXCELSIOR SLIDE CO. ... 1000
HOFF, J. C. ... 1000
KANSAS CITY SLIDE CO. ... 1000
LEVI CO., INC. ... 1002
NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO. ... 1000
SCHEU & VAN ALLEN ... 1000
SIMPSON & [illegible] ... 1000
UNITED SLIDE ADV. CO. ... 1002
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO. ... 1027

SPECIAL RELEASES.
CINES CO. OF ROME ... 978
NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO. ... 954
RAISNU [illegible] MARNE FILM CO. ... 1000
TOURNAMENT FILM CO. ... 1000

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS SUPPLY CO. ... 1027

Facts and Comments

IT is plain to many observers, that affairs in the world theatrical are slowly but surely approaching a crisis. Disaster seems to overtake more than the usual number of companies and many attractions of seemingly great strength are closing in the middle of the season. More than one cause contributes to this state of affairs, but the chief cause, no doubt, has been the steady progress of the moving picture and its latest special development—the feature film. Managers are haunted by the fear of dark houses and are looking with favor and desire upon a moving picture entertainment, which is out of the common and possesses novel and attractive features, at the same time being long enough to make a full evening's entertainment. At the present time few such attractions exist and the demand exceeds the supply.

*

It is difficult to forecast with any degree of accuracy the eventual results of this state of affairs, but one thing seems certain: the special feature will force recognition from all classes of manufacturers. The Licensed film makers at the present time supply only their exchanges with features and the exchanges treat the feature as part of the regular releases and supply first of all their exhibitors. Only when the feature has reached an age, which makes it impossible as a substitute for a regular theatrical attraction, will the Licensed exchanges rent out their films to others than regular patrons. It seems very probable, however, in view of the recent successes of feature films, that the special or occasional exhibitor, looking for big attractions in motion pictures, will not be denied much longer and he will get what he wants. The recent importation of great features clearly points the way.

*

There is grave danger, that this wholesome and natural demand for good fine features may in some quarters be misunderstood and result in the production of sensational and blood-red trash. Two or three such "features" could do an incalculable harm to the motion picture, just as its rise in popular favor and esteem seems assured. The motion picture is very apt to be judged in the near future by its features. Good, clean films are gaining friends for the picture everywhere and are opening eyes to the possibilities of the great art. The work of the pioneer is always important and its character often determines the future for many years to come. The "Get Rich Quick" spirit caring nought for the future and intent only upon rapid profits would be fatal to a proper and profitable development of this new and important phase of the motion picture.

* * *

LET us not take too literally the frequent boast, "That he who will may take the glory, if I can have the money." The sentiment is as false in fact as it is vulgar in form. If there were an atom of truth in it the art of making motion pictures would have died in its infancy in a cradle of dollars. With an assured market for their products can it be that the dollar is the sole ambition of the men who make films? If the indifference to art and reputation reflected anything more than the miry soul which first coined it into words, quality in pictures would be a fanciful dream, with the triumph of the inferior and mediocre as a solid background of reality.

*

As a matter of fact, there can be no art, worthy of the name, unless there are artists eager for the approval of their own best instincts and the applause of their fellows. Despite the gibes and jeers of critics, who are always offended at seeing good in others, the fact remains, that a most laudable desire to reach the highest possible perfection animates at least half a dozen producers, whom every exhibitor could name as quickly as we could. A desire for material gain may well exist with an ambition for a great name—indeed, the lower motive is ennobled by the higher aim. The start of some, who now strive for renown no less than for money, was obscure and unpromising in the extreme. The early products of all have in the course of the years improved vastly. Who will deny that the pinnacle of fame is the goal of many?

*

Let men with stunted intellects sneer and belittle and cover up their own pitiable pettiness, they will never impeach the fact, that the lure of the laurel is no myth and that there is reward in fame as well as in dollars.

* * *

IN a recent article, entitled "The Enfranchisement of the Moving Picture," THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD spoke of the present inequitable discrimination of the law in favor of the newspaper and against the motion picture, treating the subject from all possible points of view. As usual in due season our original discussion of the subject has waked the echoes of esteemed contemporaries, whose reluctance to give space to the motion picture is more than overcome by the offer of advertisements. The value of an echo should not be underestimated, whether it be natural or like the phonograph, artificial. We rejoice in the dissemination of correct views and sound ideas and hope that these columns will continue to furnish materials to such writers as may at times suffer from a lack of originality.

* * *

ON the firing line and looking at things through the spectacles of the practical exhibitor things are seen at first hand and impress the writer more vividly than the reports that come into the sanctum through the words of third parties. Thus we observed but recently one great advantage of the feature film from the exhibitor's viewpoint: The profit in the return engagement. Features on a repetition often pay better than on their first exhibition. This of course has not always been true, but with the increasing intelligence of moving picture audiences the repeating of features has become exceedingly profitable. Said one exhibitor of many years' experience to the representative of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD: "Four, or even three years ago, I would not have dared to show such films as 'The Two Orphans' and 'Foul Play' to my audience; they were not ripe. To-day I repeat these features and sell out." Great credit is due to the enterprise which has produced so many features recently and has meanwhile well sustained its general good average.

A Practical Solution of the Sunday Problem

By W. Stephen Bush.

IF the numerous organizations of exhibitors desire to have a plank in their platforms, which is more than merely ornamental and may be carried into practice with profit and prestige to the entire moving picture interests, let them everywhere begin without delay an intelligent and vigorous agitation for the legal right to open their theaters on Sundays. With the right sort of management such a campaign will beyond all doubt result in a complete victory.

In some states the moving picture entertainment is under certain restrictions now authorized by law, while in some cities Sunday privileges rest on nothing more secure than the toleration of liberal-minded local executives, who may at the very next election be succeeded by a fanatic with all the prejudices of a seventeenth century witch-burner. Such privileges are not worth a year's purchase.

Agitation for the right to keep the moving picture entertainment open on Sundays must rest for its logical basis on the educational value of the pictures and all proposed legislation must be framed on the theory that the public good and welfare is substantially promoted by legalizing with proper safeguards the exhibition of moving pictures on Sunday. The first step in such an agitation must be an appeal to the intelligence and sense of justice of the respective communities. A whining prayer for toleration, the striking of some kind of a bargain for police protection or non-interference, is unworthy of the standing of the motion picture. The campaign must be prosecuted with energy and there must be no fear to strike a blow straight from the shoulder whenever the situation demands the exposure of falsehoods or the rebuking of willful ignorance.

The agitation must be systematic and had best begin with an address to fairness and common-sense through the medium of the press. Of course it will be best to have the campaign thoroughly mapped out before the first paragraph is given to the press. There is no time like the present in this case and materials for a sound logical series of arguments should be prepared at once and the good work kept up in such a manner as to force the matter on the attention of the general public. Buy space if you must, but this, we believe, may not be necessary with many papers, in fact only with such as are actively hostile against the proposition. There are plenty of men in the journalistic profession to-day, who, remembering the traditions of better days, still regard the editorial page as a free forum for the discussion of public affairs. This kind of editors will either help you or observe a neutral attitude, and in neither case is a contribution to the counting room expected. Some aid and comfort may also be looked for from enlightened ministers. The very fact that moving pictures are used in churches on Sundays is a sound argument in favor of a proper Sunday entertainment for the general public.

Let us next remember that no agitation, however well conducted, will have any practical value, unless the thing you agitate for is tangible and definite and can be understood by all. We must be prepared at any time during the campaign of education to answer the question: "What do you want and how do you want it?" In the present case the answer should come in the shape of a carefully drawn draft of a proposed legislative enactment. Then there will be something concrete and actual to talk about. The measure, upon which the exhibitors are to concentrate their efforts and which they are to submit to the legislatures of their respective states at the next meeting, should be ready at the very moment the campaign is opened. Few newspapers would refuse to print the general provisions of such a proposed law, because it is a live topic and has decided news value.

A state law is much to be preferred to local regulations in cities, townships or villages. The proposed legislative relief should, of course, be drawn by a competent legal adviser with actual experience as a practical legislator. The present law in Massachusetts allows Sunday entertainments, but leaves it all to the discretion of the police. Such a law, though it may at times work to advantage if the police representatives are intelligent and liberal, is vicious in principle, because too much discretionary power, no matter in what hands it may be lodged, is bound to be abused and lead to arbitrary practices.

The sounder plan would be to place the control of the Sunday entertainment in the hands of certain state officials of a higher grade with distinct limits to their discretion. This should be the gist of the proposed law: Whenever the general character of a moving picture entertainment is educational or religious it is to be permitted on Sundays and a charge for witnessing such exhibition shall be lawful. The formal consent of the licensing officials is to be obtained, but there should be a clause making it mandatory upon the officials to issue the license, whenever the program is of the character required by law and notice of the proposed entertainment is given within a prescribed limit of time. An unjust refusal of the officials to issue a license in a proper case could at once be taken into court on a peremptory writ and a ruling obtained in short order.

For the purposes of such an act it would be well to have an accurate definition of the words "educational" and "religious" and we tentatively submit this definition: Any subject shall be deemed educational if it illustrates either the customs or institutions or the scenery of this or any foreign country, or if it shows the workings of any domestic or foreign industry, or if it presents scenes or episodes from the history of the nations, or if it is based on a classic masterpiece of ancient or modern literature. A subject shall be deemed religious if it is based on any part of the sacred scriptures, or on any incident taken from sacred history.

It might be well, in order to gain favor for the proposition, to make a lecture on at least one of the proposed features of the program for Sundays a mandatory provision of the law. Such a clause would establish a presumption in favor of the good faith of the promoters of the law. It would prevent the opposition of many elements, whose support for such a measure cannot well be dispensed with.

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD will do all in its power to lend practical aid to the campaign for the legalizing of the Sunday moving picture entertainment. Such data as may be useful in advocating the legislation before committees, information concerning the growth of the picture, its improvement, its possibilities, its educational value, the number of films available for Sunday programs may be had for the asking.

As to the funds necessary for such a campaign, it seems to us, that there ought to be no difficulty about an intelligent co-operation between manufacturers and exhibitors. In the present state of affairs nothing would add more dignity to the moving picture, nothing would secure more respect for it among the best classes than a good, clean educational entertainment on Sundays.

Something New.

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

"Two dollars, please!" With that demand ringing in my ears I realized that there was something new going on when I asked for two balcony seats at the box-office of a theater entirely devoted to exhibiting moving pictures. It came in the way of a surprise, if not a decided shock, after plunking down dimes for the little shows and quarters for the big ones during many moons, but I was not there in the capacity of a critic, and wanted to have my presence unknown, attending this theater as I do hundreds of others for the sole purpose of studying a problem that all playwrights must solve, the question of popular appeal. When I settled down in a comfortable seat, and my heart resumed its normal pulsation, I was really glad that I was to witness the highest-priced exhibition of the kind in this city because there is always something to learn in each new experience and this performance was in line with past prophesies I have made in these columns. The most important part of the show, the audience, was not remarkable in any particular, so far as general appearance was concerned, but seemed to be carefully attentive and highly appreciative throughout.

It is not my purpose to describe this entertainment, but rather what it suggests, yet, in passing, I take pleasure in mentioning that the general character of what was offered was superior to anything of the kind I have ever seen in a theater devoted to moving pictures. This was principally due to the quality of music given in support of the pictures, affording them a beauty and dignity never before reached in my experience. While according high approval, however, to this distinct advance over other, similar entertainments, and to the general refinement of the appeal as well as to many of the minor details, I was bitterly disappointed in the leading feature, whose subject has never been of more than limited and passing interest, and has now gone so stale that it fell flat on those in front.

One thing made plain to the promoters of this enterprise and to outside observers is that a motion picture performance on a large scale, supported in good style by appropriate music, can stand a run of several months in large cities, weeks in towns, and days at the smaller stands. This is a very much more important result of the experiment than may appear at first glance, because the entire screen representation was without a particle of that emotional fire and thrill that holds an auidence spellbound and sends its members forth to scatter broadcast praise. The purely mechanical work was of exceptional quality, but dramatic appeal was as lacking as in an art gallery. It simply constitutes a step taken in the right direction from an artistic standpoint.

Why people go to the theater is a subject that has been discussed in all sorts of ways with a general conclusion that they do so for a change. The old form of variety show, consisting of dances, musical specialties and short farces, has seen service since we were boys and girls, and is still doing time, especially among managers who do not realize that the war is over. People went to the variety show because it made a joint appeal to the eye and the ear with frequent changes of bill, and offered a charm of diversity to scatter the tedium of daily grind. It was neither an uplifting nor an artistic performance, yet it entertained millions of people as long as it presented what its name implied, variety. It fell into a decline when it grew as monotonous as the cowboy plays and Indian dramas are now becoming, or descended to depths of degeneracy which clean-minded people would not tolerate in their midst. Still it represented what attracted millions of people seeking indoor amusement, the restless love of something new that has helped to make the human creature progressive. When it became old and vulgar and stale, the way was opened for a new form of low-priced entertainment and moving pictures appeared at a crucial moment to meet the demand. They were something new. Their novelty, however, was not sufficient to hold public interest, and one enterprising firm stole a march on all the others in presenting actual photodramas written especially for presentation on the screen, directed by a man of artistic sense and imagination, the rôles assumed by competent actors and the settings chosen with some knowledge of what was beautiful and appropriate. Again we had something new, and this time what has always held human interest, stories of human life, heretofore depicted on the stage and in novels, now thrown on the screen at such low cost that the humblest might enjoy them. Since that time there has been nothing new, if indeed there there has not been retrogression on the part of those who believe in getting all the golden eggs at once. Utilizing old novels and poetry for the sake of extending presentations into two or three reels scarcely constitutes an advance in the new art. These may be mildly instructive to the ignorant and in very rare cases reminiscent to cultivated patrons of the little theaters, but people are not interested in the issues of other days—there are plenty of vital ones on hand for treatment—and there are few ancient novels that lend themselves to modern dramatic treatment.

What we want is something new!

The exhibitors I have had the pleasure of meeting while visiting moving picture theatres of all classes in New York may not be representative of those throughout the country, but I have found them to be both intelligent and progressive. Those that I have met are united in hoping that the year 1912 will not only see a general advance in quality of productions for the screen, but will bring forth some decided novelties even if they are revolutionary in character. It does not require any personal investigation to learn that theater owners throughout the country would like to have their auditorium seats filled during exhibition hours both afternoon and evening, with a line at the box-office for good measure, and most of them would welcome with open arms any change that would make the industry as conducted at present thrill with new life, hence it is safe to prophesy, in a country where there are always men of the hour capable of discovering a response to the trend of popular taste, that some very interesting if not marked changes will take place in the production of moving pictures during the next twelve months. I do not mean that we will have a few variations from the regular routine, but that progressive individuals will inaugurate one or another new movement in the character of both production and presentation.

What will the new development be?

I am going to venture the assertion that it will be in the form of a complete musical drama, written and composed especially for screen presentation.

We will have PHOTOPERA.

At last there seems to be a likelihood for the exhibiting business in New York being controlled by one city department instead of by seven. At the last meeting one committeeman thumped another on the nose for not agreeing with him. We suggest putting the seven chairmen in one ring for a "battle royal" and let the winner be the moving picture boss.

Mabel Taliaferro Talks About Pictures.

PLAYS CINDERELLA FOR SELIG AND THEN TELLS ASHTON STEVENS THAT MOVING PICTURES WILL GET ALL THE BIG ACTORS SOME DAY.

By Ashton Stevens, in Chicago Examiner.

PICTURES. I see this pleasant journey to the dressing room of Miss Edith Taliaferro only in pictures. I wish I could draw it, or snap it on a roll of motion picture celluloid such as Sister Mabel Taliaferro poses before every day the sun shines brightly.

Sister Edith has her own special and infallible sunshine in Kate Douglas Wiggin's "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." But Sister Mabel, translating her "Cinderella" onto long photographic reels at Mr. Selig's picture farm, must depend on the weather man. It is a cloudy day and Sister Mabel can't take us out to Mr. Selig's, there to look at and even listen to a mute play in the making. We must talk our pictures in the tiny porcelain-white dressing room.

I have come in by the stage door, and there, on the dark stage, is a picture at the very first blink. Miss Edith has put something in or taken something from her square little trunk, which is no bigger than the funny woman's trunk in "A Chinese Honeymoon." It could hold a couple of pounds of tea, or Miss Edith herself, but not both.

Edith's Voice Is Curiously Adult Off Stage.

Miss Edith is closing it by the well-known process of sitting on it. She rises to her full stature (as Kate Douglas Wiggin would not say) and is at least four inches taller. Her voice is low, quiet and adult—curiously adult in its natural, off-stage contralto. There is dignity in her voice, and, even in the dusk of the almost lightless stage, there is humor in her dark eyes. A middle-aged youth intruding on the picture soon forgets that he felt like offering Miss Edith a fatherly knee and a morsel of pure food candy.

We shake hands gravely, and I am taken into the so-white dressing room, where I feel like an elephant in a bird-cage. In taking off my 7⅜ hat I bumped it against a 6½ curled white dog standing on a high shelf. But it does not bite. It is not a regular actress' dog—I mean the regular dog of an actress. It is a toy and may be stroked without danger.

MISS MABEL TALIAFERRO.

Miss Edith says nothing about the dog, and I make up my mind not to pry and poke into her nursery secrets. Besides, the toy may be a serious property in Miss Mabel's performance at Mr. Selig's.

"Mabel will be here any minute," her sister says, "and you musn't on any possible account allude—as I sometimes do—to Mr. Selig's establishment as a 'factory.'"

"What am I to call it, a 'gallery'?"

"A gallery—where the camera shoots the actors! No; she wouldn't like that either. Just call it a plant. She doesn't mind 'plant.'"

And tapping ever so politely at the open door, who comes in but Sister Mabel, in a blue tailor suit and blue eyes and fair hair and gloves as white and tiny as the dressing room itself.

The sisters are in contrast. I can't tell which is the taller; but Miss Edith is sturdier, and darker in her black tailoring, and more mirthful in the brown corners of her eyes, even though she is the stiller one.

Sister Mabel in Role of Family Policeman.

She greets Sister Mabel as one greets the family policeman when there is a block to be walked on a black night; and Sister Mabel gets her head promptly, and at once [illegible] might by carelessness be personally responsible for it. And then Sister Mabel says that she mustn't intrude on our talk.

"And by the way," she adds, "what have you been talking about?"

Sister Edith is silent, and I can think of no other word than forbidden "factory." So I say:

"I was just on the point of telling Miss Edith how it jolts my sense of proportion when people say how perfectly her part fits her in 'Rebecca.' You might as well say how perfectly 'Rebecca' fits the style of Kate Douglas Wiggin!"

"It's kind of you to put it that way," says Miss Edith. "Of course, I couldn't play Macbeth, nor even Lady Macbeth, but I hope I can play parts that are urban as well as parts that are 'country.' Since I've been playing 'Rebecca' I've had a dozen plays of the same type submitted—only of course they weren't so delightfully written — Mabel, you must tell him about the moving pictures and the wonderful people that have worked at the fact—plantory."

"I can't tell you about the wonderful people that have posed for Mr. Selig in picture dramas. That is a secret—now. If I could only give you the names! Nine Great Names have played at the plant."

"Tell him about 'Romeo and Juliet,' Mabel."

"Are you picturing Juliet?"

"Oh, no," says Sister Mabel. "If I were I'd tell you. I'm proud of this wonderful work; but there are others—well, that is to say there are Names that I may not mention."

"That was before I knew how really wonderful the pictures are. I went in to get a 'Cinderella' performance. You know I've always wanted to play Cinderella?"

"Yes, and for over three years we have had all kinds of authors trying to give us the right version of 'Cinderella.' But we couldn't get the simplicity. They weren't writing the real story of 'Cinderella,' but Christmas pantomimes. They thought of gorgeousness; I thought of simplicity. And I believe that there would be a very satisfactory part for me in a really simple Cinderella."

Soon Forgot to Show Her Indignation.

"But Mabel—tell him what you thought of the picture factory—I mean plant, of course, but you yourself thought it was a factory till it got you."

"Perhaps I did," Sister Mabel smiles serenely. "I have been here on a long rest, and when 'moving pictures' were suggested to me I went indignantly 'up stage.' Which only showed"—addressing Sister Edith—"how inexperienced I was."

"Not to mention ignorant," Sister Edith smiles back, adding: "I've never visited the p-p-plant."

"Ignorance, too, if you like," speaks Miss Mabel. "I was just as ignorant in the matter of vaudeville when Mr. Tyler booked me for five weeks in the New York houses. Now I'm in love with vaudeville—but, naturally, pictures come first. If you could only see that plant, the immensity of its resources, the perfect staging and stage management, the care that is taken to make every inch of the film flawless. I've learned more in my five weeks at the plant than I learned in my nineteen years on the stage."

"Your how many years on the stage!!!"

"Nineteen. I adopted the profession when I was two and a half."

"Listen to the veteran," Sister Edith slips in. "I'm a mere interloper. Sixteen counts all the years I've put in on the stage."

"Were you born in a dressing room, Miss Edith?"

"Not that I remember. But at the age of two I became a actress—You were telling us, Mabel, how much you have learned in five weeks at the—the establishment. It must be grand for gestures!"

"You don't have to make foolish gestures; you just move and act and talk as you would in any theater."

"Talk?"

"Of course you talk. You have a written part which you learn and speak, and you don't have to windmill your arms all over the stage to make yourself understood in the pictures."

"What do you do, Mabel, when the clock strikes the magic twelve times in 'Cinderella'—carry a big Ingersoll hung from your neck and look at it to verify the twelve?"

"You don't need twelve strikes in our pictures; and a visible clock could be dispensed with. Cinderella has only to look this way when it comes midnight."

And Miss Mabel looks it for us with a wonder look blent of wistfulness and terror.

"We don't make fool 'signs,'" she continues. "We don't hold up ten fingers and then two to spell twelve o'clock."

"Why not hold up two hands and two feet and get it in a single gesture?" And the sometimes incorrigible Miss Edith fits the action to her words.

"Laugh if you like," laughs Miss Mabel, "but the pictures are just the same a great thing. You can perfect a performance for silent pictures as you cannot perfect one on the noisy stage. The performances are taken on reels a thousand feet long. The shortest scene is a hundred feet. If the least thing goes wrong in a scene, that part of the reel is destroyed, and we go on again—and sometimes again and again and again—until the scene is perfect. And the plays are such worthy, moral ones. Why, do you know that Mr. Selig won't have a policeman in his picture dramas!"

"What's the need of police if the performances are as moral as all that?" the younger puts in. And somehow the talk goes another way, and we are discussing that latest agony of player person, the actor or actress that never associates socially with "stage folk, you know."

"Give me what I call 'the trouper,'" says Miss Mabel, "and I'll show you an actor or an actress."

"I'm a trouper," says Miss Edith.

"Indeed you are, and proud of it," comes from her sister. "We're both troupers, 'vagabonds,' if you like, and we hate stage snobs."

"In the first place," Miss Edith observes sagely, "snobs can't act. And I say, Mabel, do you have any snobs out at the—the whatchemacallit?"

"Cannery?" I suggest. And four indignant eyes greet mine, with a suppressed twinkle or two.

"Mr. Selig unmakes snobs while they wait," Miss Mabel answers with dignity. "A snob out there has a good chance to see just how a snob looks. The camera does not lie. And let me tell you, both, that the day is coming when all the great American players will follow the example of Duse and Bernhardt and give performances for moving pictures."

STEARNS GIVES PICTURE SHOW FOR PRISONERS.

Max Stearns, proprietor of The Exhibit, Columbus, Ohio, made arrangements with the warden of the Ohio State Penitentiary at Columbus and gave a picture entertainment for the benefit of the inmates of that institution. The program consisted of a comedy, a Thanksgiving story and the Pathe Weekly. The cost of this enterprise was borne entirely by Mr. Stearns.

WHAT WAS HER OBJECT?

It is with pleasure that we give space to the following set of resolutions adopted by the Cleveland local of the Moving Picture League of America. We respect their righteous indignation against the unwarranted aspersions cast on the showhouses of Cleveland by Miss Kate Davis, and admire the thorough measures they have taken to maintain their good name. Cleveland, as we have said before in these pages, has some of the finest moving picture houses in the country. They are well conducted. Whatever could have been the cause of Miss Davis's outburst, she is not to be classed with reformers, whose work is constructive and not destructive; such work, for example, as that done by the ladies on the National Board of Censorship, who give their time and effort to upbuilding instead of reviling the industry.

Whereas, Miss Kate Davis, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., having made statements in her recent Sunday evening sermon at the Old Stone Church, this city, and also issued statements to the "Plain Dealer" representatives to the effect that (1) "Cleveland's Moving Picture Shows are of a much lower moral standard than those in Detroit or Columbus"; (2) "They are hotbeds of iniquity"; (3) "Training schools for criminals"; (4) "Recruiting stations for the white slaver and disorderly house," and other similar statements well calculated to injure the characters and cast a public reflection upon the members of this association if such or any part of her statements were true, and

Whereas, Miss Davis, having given the name and address of a prominent officer of the Juvenile Court, of this city, as authority for her statements in reference to the evil effects of the local picture theaters upon the juvenile population, etc., etc., and

Whereas, Our committee, having investigated thoroughly and made a detailed search for facts regarding the conditions complained of, said search being in the various city departments, and

Whereas, That the said investigation shows that Miss Davis' statements cannot be verified by official figures in one single instance, but on the contrary said statements were made without the slightest authority or official sanction,

Therefore be it Resolved, That we condemn her statements as reckless, slanderous and false, publicly spoken for sensational purposes and cunningly calculated to assist her candidacy for the position as State Film Censor in Pennsylvania.

We further, condemn the action of Rev. A. B. Meldrum, of the Old Stone Church for permitting a "professional sociologist" and alien office seeker to use his edifice as a medium for her utterances without first ascertaining whether the same were founded upon facts or otherwise.

We further, tender the assistance of this association to any official body who are honestly desirous of correcting any evil they may judge detrimental to the morals of our 500,000 weekly patrons.

L. H. Wilk.

Secretary Cleveland Local No. 1, Moving Picture League of America.

MISS GRACE CUNARD.

From footlights to film is the way the stories of most photoplayers run these days. Grace Cunard, heroine of the Republic subject, "Before Yorktown," is no exception, for her theatrical career dates back almost as far as she can remember, when at the age of fifteen she played leading juvenile parts in stock. She has since appeared with different companies, starring in "College Days" during the season of 1910.

The Moving Picture Educator

EDUCATIONAL REELS FOR INDEPENDENT EXHIBITORS.

"Santa Catalina" (American).

THE American Film Manufacturing Company has two travelogues for release that should be heartily welcomed by picture lovers. One is entitled "Santa Catalina," the magic isle of the Pacific, and the other a "Midwinter Trip to Los Angeles and Vicinity." The first is on a split reel with a most interesting film, which shows the United States Pacific Coast fleet in review at San Diego, the two combining to form a strong educational attraction.

Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American, personally directed the taking of these views, and he is to be congratulated on the departure he has made to relieve the monotony of Western dramas, and on his success in furnishing us with something well worth while.

His manner of treatment of the vessels of the fleet will be appreciated by everyone who seeks definite knowledge. We are shown the whole fleet en masse and, afterwards, each vessel passes by, with a sub-title giving the name and some valuable historical information connected with her history. The photography is fine all the way through.

"Santa Catalina" is a veritable scenic gem. As is known, the title is the name of one of the islands in the Catalina group, off the coast of California. We are first treated to a view of Avalon, the chief harbor of the island. Here we see the placid waters dotted with pleasure and other craft, and are given a fine panoramic view of the steeply sloping land, clothed with shrubbery and woods, and here and there pretty homes peeping out of their umbrageous retreats.

Next we visit Moonstone beach where we catch sight of tourists gathering the attractive pebbles, and soon arrive in waters which are so clear that a coin dropped in them can be distinctly seen on the bed of the ocean. Here the native divers show their skill in diving and securing coins that have been thrown overboard. The queen of the divers—an Amazon in stature and muscular symmetry—is seen posing for the leap, and, for a moment, she flashes in the air, then cleaves the water without the sign of a splash in her wake.

We now arrive at the most interesting stage of the trip—at the submarine gardens, and to explore their hidden wonders and beauties we take passage in a glass-bottomed boat. The camera man has so adjusted his instrument and lenses that the clear water unfolds to us even the rock formation of the ocean's bed. We catch clear sight of seaweed and coral kelp spreading out their branches in the sal-aqueous atmosphere. Look yonder, at the hideous black mass from which project eight wriggling arms. It is an octopus in search of food. Note how the sea urchins and small fish of great variety disport themselves in the silver sea.

It is with a sigh of regret that we pay a visit to the famed seal rookeries on Catalina for that means the final scene in this delightful little film. We get a fine, close-up view of the big fellows on a truncated cone of rock, and see some of them dive in fear from their lofty sunning quarters, while the cunning and more experienced try to hide in the crevices.

Give us more films like this, Mr. Hutchinson, and we will be your debtors. This reel will be released December 14th.

"Midwinter Trip to Los Angeles and Vicinity" (American).

A "Midwinter Trip to Los Angeles and Vicinity" is a full-reel travelogue. It will be released on January 1.

The film opens with a view of Marengo Avenue, Pasadena. Lofty pepper trees form a Gothic archway throughout, until we reach Westmoreland Place, the home of California millionaires. The celebrated Busch gardens are then visited and, after viewing their beauties, the ascent of Mt. Lowe is begun. We pass over the longest curved trestle in the United States and, moving through grandly picturesque scenery, arrive at the "gate above the clouds," an opening through solid rock, just permitting the train to pass through. The top is finally reached, at a height of 6,100 feet above sea level, or 2,000 feet higher than the site of Lick Observatory.

The Cawston ostrich farm is then paid a short visit and we see two of the big birds—dubbed by their keepers, Mr. and Mrs. Taft—fed with oranges. An alligator farm is the next stopping place and hundreds of the saurians of all ages and sizes, are seen. Two of them "shoot the chutes" for our amusement at the dictation of the keeper.

Oil wells in process of working, in the yards of Los Angeles residents, are next viewed after which a beautiful view is given of the San Gabriel Mission.

The home of the late Paul de Longpre, America's famous flower painter, is next presented, forming a magnificent scene, with its rich Moorish architecture, wooded grounds and commanding site. The film closes with the view of a pigeon farm, where it is an ordinary sight for tourists to witness half a million of them being fed. J. S. McQ.

EDUCATION AND THE CINEMATOGRAPH.

By His Excellency Herr Von Hentig, Ex-Minister of Education in Germany.

THOUGH the cinematograph has played an important part in the history and education of men for so short a period, it has already its own history. Do we not all remember the first representations by means of living pictures, and how we laughed at them? Now, even the opponents of the cinematograph have become wiser; they act according to the saying, "If you would fight an enemy, you first have to know him." However, the cinematograph is now a recognized factor in education, and that this is so has been demonstrated by its adoption in the schools as an aid to the study of geography.

Personally, I call myself a very old friend of cinematography, the value of which as an aid to education I flatter myself that I recognized long since. Some time ago I secured the co-operation of a few kindred spirits who had the interests of German education at heart, and the result was the formation of a society under the name of "Science for the Million." We secured the valuable patronage of the King of Wurtemburg. The society is prepared to work in conjunction with film manufacturers, and to the credit of one firm, Messrs. Pathe Freres, be it said that much valuable information has already been affored in the shape of educational films. I join with others interested in the subject in placing on record the highest appreciation of what has already been accomplished by this very enterprising firm. Still there is much more to be done, and it is not proposed to enter into competition with the film manufacturers, but rather to aid them in the effort to put high-class and instructive films on the market, by making out synopses of appropriate subjects and having them widely distributed. This brings me to a consideration of what a wealth of our own history, I am sorry to say, is almost unknown, and which will lend itself to picturesque cinematograph representation. More national films must always be the cry.

We also wish to bring the cinematograph into the schools, and in this respect we are fortunate in the co-operation of such experienced men of letters as Dr. Neufert, in Charlottenburg, and Dr. Fischer, in Berlin. The objection has been raised that the schools already have sufficient in the way of stereoscopes and projecting machines. But I would advocate that their use is not sufficiently widespread. Further, there is this great disadvantage with the stereoscope, that it can only be used by one pupil at a time, and even then must be adjusted to suit each sight. Consequently, a lecture in which it figures is personal and wastes valuable time. With the cinematograph, however, not only a whole class, but, if needs be, a whole school, can be demonstrated to at the same time. But one thing must be insisted upon—the cinematograph must be brought to the schools, not the schools taken to the cinematograph. Personally, my opinion is that the cinematograph is particularly adapted to school teaching, for it seems to me that the children will follow with such close attention a representation on the screen that there will be absolutely no necessity for an accompanying explanation from the instructor. On this point I lay great stress.

A short time ago I witnessed a film of the discovery of America by Columbus, and frankly I must confess that, had I been a child who knew nothing of the subject, I should have learned more from it than from hours of verbal instruction. My society also proposes to hold educational evenings. The Kaiserin Friedrich Theater is available for the purpose of medical demonstrations, which are under the supervision of Professor Dr. Kutner and Herr Alfred Dietrich. Further scientific demonstrations will shortly be held, and it will easily be seen that we are stepping into the arena with no lack of preparation. It may also be added that we hope for the friendly co-operation of the authorities; we are already working hand in hand with the Police Information Department, and by aid of the support which we are sure will be accorded by the public at large, we hope for speedy attainment of our cherished ideals.

LEARNING HISTORY FROM MOTION PICTURES.

By Mary Chamberlin.

THE educational value of moving pictures has now been officially recognized by the Board of Education of the City of New York. Their introduction as an integral part of the present system of free public lectures will serve at once to enliven interest and instruct the people.

We all have studied a certain amount of history at some time or other. Some of us were compelled to at school, and some of us delighted in it, but all of us, if we would be frank, have forgotten nearly all we have learned. A few important events and a couple of dates, such as 1492 and 1776 have made their impression, but the really interesting little points seem to have faded out of our minds altogether. Who, for example, remembers that Lord Nelson fought his last battles with his right arm gone, and who but a school teacher could describe any famous battle in detail?

You may read about anything, and, no matter how tragic or interesting it may be, other things that you really see happen, crowd it out of your mind. If you are fortunate enough to be present at some great national celebration you never forget the reason for the demonstration, and if you see a great warship launched you remember its name, and perhaps even the date. A mere reading of the newspaper accounts, however, will not fix the details in your mind and keep them there.

But now that motion pictures in our vaudeville and picture houses are showing us important current events all over the world within a few days or weeks of their happening, there is no excuse for being behind the times, or forgetting to realize that wonderful things are going on around us. To brush up one's memory it is only necessary to see the historical event depicted in motion to fix it for all time. How easy it is to sit comfortably in a theater and to be shown the famous battles as they really were, the photographs often being taken with remarkable detail on the very battlefield. Pictures which portray incidents in the lives of illustrious men and women and thus reveal to us their real natures and their interesting personal histories are truly worth while. They serve to endear to us characters now frequently forgotten.

The recently exhibited moving pictures of the raising of the Maine in Havana Harbor, taken by a young and enterprising photographer, Jack Read, Jr., with the special permission of the government, illustrate clearly the instructive character of the cinematograph as the accurate recorder of historical incident.

Of course, it is trite to repeat that the motion picture is a grand thing for the children. Indeed it is, but a lot of us "grown-ups" can also well afford to take in a fair amount of the instruction it gives, and appreciate the fact that it everlastingly impresses us with little or no effort on our part.

STILL ADVANCING.

The success of the exhibition of suitable pictures in the Brooklyn schools has been so pronounced that it has been decided to commence a similar course in the schools of New York (Manhattan Borough). It is interesting to note that while in certain quarters there are those professedly interested in educational moving pictures and pleading their cause, even while they are wasting their time in interviews and professions, others are going ahead and doing the work.

It is those who do things who are first in a cause, not those who say things. It is a pleasure to record these doings and to chronicle their growth almost daily. From continuous reports the use of the cinematograph in schools is a settled fact; its more general adoption is only a matter of time to permit the overcoming of ignorance, prejudice and lack of opportunity; with sometimes lack of the necessary convenience and capital. As with every other form of progress these difficulties will gradually vanish, so that a few years hence so general will be the use of the picture that its uphill climb will be forgotten.

EDUCATION WITH PLEASURE.

NEVER before has education been so absolutely entertaining, or an entertainment so thoroughly educational as is now possible by moving pictures. Intellectual development is thus progressing along parallel lines and no matter which object is first sought the other must accompany it. "Precept upon precept" and "line upon line" has long—perhaps too long—been the "monotonous grind" of the classroom. For years past teachers have been leading their pupils of the higher grades to the actual "examples" where by "seeing for themselves" they could the more readily and more thoroughly learn the arts and sciences as also the commercial and industrial pursuits, besides solving sociological problems at close range and by positive experience. These methods were always attended with many difficulties, besides the cost of much time and money. Travel, the visiting of other countries, to become acquainted with the ways of men, to see how the world lives, is now brought to the wall of the lecture room. Industrial centers and great manufacturies are now made living pictures; indeed the sight of all these activities without bustle and noise is more beneficial to the student, as there are now no deterrents to a quiet study of the subject. For the more convenient study of all these subjects the General Film Company, of New York, have classified their productions with a view to assisting everyone who can use and benefit by the educational moving picture.

The general classification is as follows: "General Works," which include pictures for the combined purpose of an educational entertainment and include subjects taken from history, literature, the drama and the opera.

"Religious."—Herein are included subjects suitable for church lectures and Sunday-school entertainments. An especial aim of these pictures will be, as far as possible, to have religious events portrayed in the country to which each event refers.

"Sociology."—Social problems of the country and economic questions and conditions of the cities are here studied, giving views of various enterprises already used for the benefit of humanity.

"Natural Science."—This large field, which also includes natural history, is one of great importance. The study of animals, natural phenomena, fish, etc., together with fruit growing, mine and canal construction; also laboratory experiments.

"Useful Arts."—The field of domestic economy is large, all kinds of manufacturing, architecture, building, etc. The arts of bookmaking, gardening and kindred pursuits are presented under this head, which offers great facilities for learning.

"Fine Arts."—Designing, manufacturing of pottery, the making of musical instruments are included under this head, together with drama and similar suitable features calculated to edify and refine as they entertain.

"Literature."—What a world of meaning to the youth of all schools when English literature becomes a living book. With productions from such authors as Dickens, Shakespeare, Scott, Victor Hugo, Dante and Harriet Beecher Stowe, a new life will spring forth in this most valuable study.

Philosophy, physiology, history, geography are each receiving due attention, so that a perfect series may be at the service of educators and students.

With such a valuable series coming to the aid of schools upon the illuminating rays of the fascinating cinematograph, is it not true that such an education is fraught with much pleasure? Drudgery and monotony in learning are hereby abolished and even where the pictures cannot go into the details of that which alone is acquired by study, surely they have opened doors which will render individual study easier and more attractive even as it must be when children have more to learn as the world progresses.

THE PICTURE SHOW IN YOUR TOWN.

To School Authorities, Principals and Teachers.

What about the picture theater in your locality; is it acceptable to you or not? That it may not be all that you might desire is conceded, for it is unfortunately too well known that the moving pictures have been as much abused as they have been used. The abuse of the moving picture has been threefold. Those who gave exhibitions of a distasteful character; those who used the picture places for nefarious purposes, and those who condemned them with an unwarranted wholesale censorship. Each of these evils is now under control and in some instances entirely abolished.

How is it in your community?

If the exhibition is not according to your views, this is written to help you to make it so. Become acquainted with the exhibitor and tell him what pictures you desire he should procure; let him distinctly understand that your support depends upon his appreciation of your wishes. It is a good thing to have yourself well posted upon the subjects which are now being largely produced for the benefit of those under your instructive and advisory care.

On these pages of the Moving Picture Educator you will receive guidance and suggestions which you may profitably use, so that, Mr. Exhibitor, will prove that you know what you are talking about. The cinematograph has not yet made its appearance in the schools in every locality. The time is not yet ripe for so great an advance. Meanwhile there need not be any delay; the local exhibitor may be asked to devote at least one evening a week to educational subjects. This course has been followed in England, France and Germany, and also in several parts of the United States. That it should become general is the only natural demand to make. If those having in charge the education of youth will follow these suggestions they will be helping forward a movement second to none in the history of education.

If it is possible that any difficulties present themselves the writer of these articles will only be too willing to assist in any way possible. Any communication addressed to the Education Department of the Moving Picture World, 125 East 23d Street, New York City, will receive every attention; indeed such communications are solicited for the purpose of developing every form of educational cinematography and securing the best possible results everywhere

TWO SIDES.

From New Jersey come two accounts of entirely different characters. In one a church, rising with the tide of progress and opportunity, is using the moving picture with much satisfaction and profit. In the other case a clergyman opposed the granting of a license to a picture theater on the ground that the moving picture was "a social and moral evil." Being pressed to give the reasons for his charge he confessed that "he had never seen a picture show and never would."

It seems beyond belief that a so-called man of education would express an opinion and pass judgment upon what he admitted was his own ignorance. This is a good illustration of the hindrance of ignorance in the guise of learning. On the other hand, the clergyman had seen the pictures, also the good that was in them and the possibilities of their proper use to the extent of adopting them to the advantage of his own influence and the cause of his church. He stands as an example of common sense, good judgment and progress. Whereas, his less enlightened brother is the victim of his own self-confessed prejudice and lack of knowledge, even of his own times; a man suitable for the middle ages, but too far behind for to-day. The man who lifts up and uses that which, in evil hands, may be an evil is a benefit to his people, while the man who sits in the dark and throws stones is a hindrance to even a stiltified religious progress.

Happily the numbers of these two kinds are rapidly growing, the one larger and more numerous, and the other "wonderfully and beautifully less;" may they both continue to grow in their respective directions.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The record of current events by the Vitagraph Company for December contains several items of interest. The conveying of a sixty-five-ton girder for one of New York's great buildings will interest many in those parts of the country where the only knowledge of great buildings and extraordinary constructions is to be found in print. This mammoth piece of structural ironwork will enlighten many not only of the triumph of industrial labor, but convey an idea of the nature of the skeleton of that building of which it is but a "bone."

The mounted police drill as a series of military evolutions would not be of much importance, but, as part of the necessary disciplinary exercises of the police force of one of the greatest cities of the world, will convey to many minds the importance of the great problem of policing a great city.

London, Paris and Berlin are proud of the city constabulary, but this picture will give Young America the knowledge whereby he may become proud of his own metropolitan force.

History, patriotism and the pride of two nations are shown in the Columbus Day parade. While recalling the momentous question of the discovery of a great land and the birth of a greater nation, it also affords occasion for the Italian celebration of the doings of perhaps her most celebrated son. The details of the parade may be studied with profit.

Fraternalism will find in the "Elks Field Day" an occasion to rejoice in the many added benefits of their various forms. Helping the bereaved only is a thing of the past with these societies, pleasure and profit for the living is one of the orders of to-day besides the benefits obtained by the [illegible] exercises; such events, as this proves, are indulged in by the healthy members.

A local football game may cause many clubs to be ambitious enough to wish that they, too, might be depicted in the picture representations of to-day, while onlookers can see a game without attending it and the "fans" may enjoy constant repetitions.

President Taft at Pittsburg keeps us posted as to his manifold duties, while the benefits science confers upon suffering humanity are shown by a representation of "first aid to the injured" in a mine explosion.

NOTES.

"Their's not to reason why!
Their's not to make reply!
Their's but to do and die."

These words, well known to the scholars in every English-speaking school in the world, have become immortal. Although recording one of the most brilliant and most tragic events in warfare, "The Charge of the Light Brigade" or "The Noble Six Hundred" has become a classic. Inspired by this response to the call of duty, thousands of young people have learned the combined lessons of obedience, and devotion to right, in spite of all odds. It is hoped the time will never come when this remarkable incident shall be forgotten. It will therefore be a surprise to many to know that some of the survivors of that memorable event are still alive. Pathe's Weekly No. 49 has a picture of these survivors who met recently to drink the health of their new king, George V. of England. A view of this picture will add both interest and value to the famous poem and the more famous incident which inspired it.

* * *

Every man and boy in America will take pleasure in seeing the reproduction of the national game of football as played by the Army and Navy teams from West Point and Annapolis. The national sports are indicative of the life, health and intelligence of any people and the privilege of seeing one of the greatest of games in one's home town is something little anticipated but a short time ago.

* * *

The raising of the Maine from the muddy depths of the harbor of Havana, while interesting to every American, is also interesting to many people in other countries. The pictures appearing from time to time showing the progress made in this work are followed with close attention. When the work shall have reached its final stage, and the mystery of a great international disaster shall have been solved, great relief from doubt will everywhere be felt. The last picture is awaited with eager anticipations.

* * *

What seems to fortell a "guarantee" proposition between big business firms and moving picture exhibitors has been launched by the local agent of the E. M. F. Automobile Company, in Fort Smith, Ark. Acting under advice from the home office, in Detroit, the Grand Opera House of Fort Worth was "bought up" for the evening of November 23 and a free show was advertised widely and given. Included in a mixed program was the special reel showing the making of an E. M. F. auto, from the pig iron to the speed and endurance tests. The idea was both novel and successful.

THE EXHIBITOR'S LIBRARY.

Experience has amply shown that the feature film will be the money-maker of the future, but it is all in the way you put it on. Presented properly, it is a money-maker, otherwise it is often a loser. For the benefit of the exhibitor, who wishes to profit by the experience of competent men, the Moving Picture World has prepared special booklets for the proper presentation of the "Passion Play," "Dante's Inferno," the Milano production only, and "The Crusaders or Jerusalem Delivered." The "Passion Play" (Pathe production) has passed into a second edition and has been worth hundreds of dollars to exhibitors. One exhibitor writes that he has let out his lecture so often that it was finally worn out and now asks for a new copy. The booklets contain a complete lecture, running evenly and smoothly with the pictures, press matter, musical suggestions and hints as to good effects. The price of each book is one dollar, prepaid.

Reviews of Notable Films

"SHE," An Adaptation by the Thanhouser Co. Two Reels. Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush.

A STORY like "She," the weird and mysterious tale from the gifted pen of Rider Haggard is a natural temptation to an ambitious and capable maker of films and to the eventual profit and prestige of the Independent exhibitor, the Thanhouser Company have succumbed to the temptation in a two-reel production. About two years ago, when the two and three-reel production was still regarded as a curiosity, the Edison Company made a motion picture version of the story in one reel. It was an artistic masterpiece, and despite the fact that only the few who had read the story could thoroughly understand and enjoy the picture, it gained no small popularity and was justly considered one of the early moving picture classics. The Thanhousers in filming popular fiction and well-known dramas, such as "David Copperfield," "A Doll's House," "The Lady From the Sea," are guided by a controlling desire to make the story clear to the general public, only a very small portion of whom may safely be presumed to have read Ibsen or Haggard or even Dickens. In the present production they have succeeded in making a mysterious and complicated novel very plain to the average moving picture patron and in so doing they have at the same time kept up their high standard of art and dignity in rendering this strange piece of fiction into moving pictures.

The story deals with the mysteries of Egyptian worship, with the tricks and wonders of that magic, which even in the most ancient times has surrounded the land of the Pharaohs with a certain indefinable awesome spell. Of course there are scores of stories touching upon the strange worship and the veiled ritual of old Egypt, but none of them have the bold stroke of the English writer who, himself a traveler on the dark continent, joined the old and the new together and by giving the main story a distinctly modern setting and introducing besides mysterious high priests and priestesses and savage tribes, a blond young Englishman of twenty-five, very much a child of our own days, he has invested the novel with an unusual interest. Before we realize it we have forgotten the improbabilities of the tale and begin to believe in re-incarnation, in the fires of youth and the flames of death and actually enjoy being mystified.

The skeleton of the story is something like this: A daughter of the Pharoahs, Amenastas, is in love with a young priest of Isis, Kallikrates, and induces him to forswear his vows and elope with her. They journey a great distance through the desert and to a place on the coast of Africa where they are discovered by a strange and ancient people and taken before the queen, a woman of mystic power who lives forever and who is known as "She who must be obeyed." She falls in love with Kallikrates and, because he will not kill his wife, the daughter of the Pharaohs, and espouse her instead, she kills him with a blast of her mystic power. Amenastas defies "She" and escapes with her child, whom she christens Tisisthenes, the Avenger, and wills that he, or his descendant, at some time shall return and avenge the death of Kallikrates.

For several thousand years the record of the death of Kallikrates is passed down by his descendants until it reaches a young Englishman, Lionel Vincey, the adopted son of a Mr. Holly, who has accepted the trust from the father of the boy with instructions to open the casket containing the evidence of the crime, which is to be opened when the boy reaches the age of 25 years.

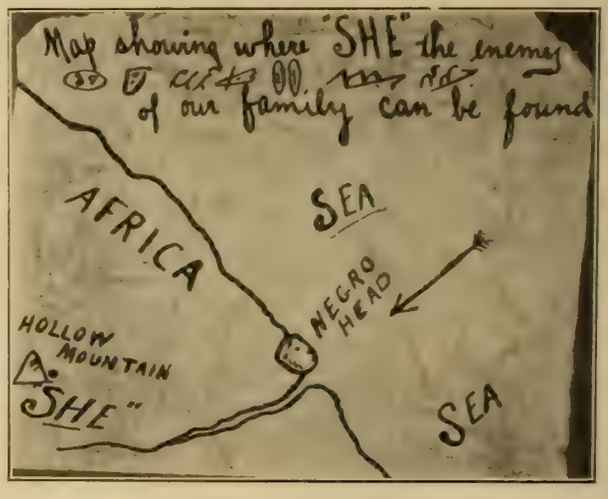
When the strange mission is explained to young Vincey, he decides to undertake the task of finding "She" and revenging his ancestor. Holly and a servant accompany Vincey and, after a remarkable series of adventures, they are brought to the presence of "She who must be obeyed."

"She" is cognizant of the mission of the young Englishman, but when she bares her breast and invites him to complete his work of vengeance, he is unable to do so, having come so completely under the spell of her marvelous beauty. "She" insists that he is the re-incarnation of Kallikrates and that he has returned to become her spouse. She leads him to the tomb of his ancestor, whose body she has kept in a perfect state of preservation for more than two thousand years. Vincey is shocked at the resemblance of the ancient priest to himself. "She" then destroys the mummy and declares her undying love for Vincey. He, in turn, acknowledges his love for her and the loss of his desire for vengeance.

Hoping now to endow Vincey with eternal life and make him as imperishable as herself, "She" leads him to the hidden cave of fire and bids him bathe in its mystic flames. Vincey hesitates and, to encourage him, "She" steps into the flames herself. As she stands there in all her radiant beauty with the flames caressing her form, a sudden and awful change occurs. From a figure of youth and beauty she turns to an old and shrivelled hag and falls shrieking to the ground, where she dies.

Vincey and his companion, Holly, make their way out of the accursed cave of fire with great difficulty and through many dangers, finally returning to their home in London. But the awful experience has turned Vincey's hair from gold to snow-white and made a lasting impress upon his memory.

To picture this weird tale in its entirety would be impossible. The Thanhouser company has not attempted this, but have taken the thread of the story from the initial causes and has pictured the events in their logical sequence, giving us a better interpretation than could otherwise be obtained in pictures.



Ancient Chart Showing Location of the Hollow Mountain.

Thus, in the first reel, we are shown a scene in the temple of Isis with the daughter of Pharaoh endeavoring to seduce the young priest and turn him from his vows. It is a pretentious scene and well staged. The settings suggest, with great realism, the massive Egyptian architecture of ancient times, remnants of which still exist.

Finally yielding to the importunities of Amenastas, the young priest, Kallikrates, leaves the temple with her and, later, they are seen traveling across the desert and embarking in a small boat by which means they finally arrive in the domains of "She," and are escorted to her presence. The Oriental atmosphere is simulated with unusual effect. As the priest and his paramour depart from the temple the towers and domes of the city are to be seen in the distance. A camel, with attendants in Bedouin attire, have been provided for the fugitives and the spot where this scene was taken suggests an Egyptian desert.

The second reel introduces Holly and the incident of his acceptance of the son of his friend and the casket containing the record of the death of Kallikrates, to be opened when the boy reaches the age of 25 years. When the casket is opened at the appointed time the chart showing the location of the mystic city of Kor, the abiding place of "She," is shown and then we see the adventurers upon their way

SCENES IN THANHOUSER'S

"SHE"

The Courting in the Palace.

"She" Leads Leo On.

Leo Sees His Ancestor.

In the African Desert.

through the ancient canal where they are met by the messengers from "She" and led to her palace in the mountain. Unquestionably, great care has been taken by the Thanhouser Company in selecting the settings for these scenes. A more faithful portrayal of the scenes described in Rider Haggard's story could scarcely be imagined.

Omitting the several adventures and horrible events which occurred to the travelers before they reached the presence of "She," the Thanhouser version takes us, with impressive ceremony, directly to her cave palace. The scene in the Cave of Fire is most convincing and an excellent interpretation of the storied description of that awful climax. Passing over the terrifying adventures attending the escape of Vincey and Holly from the city of Kor, the reel concludes with Vincey seated in his London home, a melancholy figure, as he consigns the records of Kallikrates to the flames of his hearth fire.

There can be no doubt of the solid popularity, even at this day, of the strange fancies embodied in the printed page and set free again by the picture in motion. I think one reason of this popularity lies in the fact, that the story points no moral and does not seek to preach. We get so much cheap moralizing and preaching nowadays, that a tale, which is nothing more than a narration of events and episodes and a description of characters and scenery, is on occasions a most welcome relief.

DANTE'S INFERNO IN NEW YORK STATE.

Dante's Inferno, the Milano production of five reels, has been showing this week at Gane's Manhattan Theater on Broadway, New York City. The success has been so phenomenal that Mr. Gane has arranged for six months' option on the exhibiting rights for New York City, outside of Coney Island. Bookings are now being arranged for other towns throughout the State by the Superior Feature Film Company, of 32 Union Square, New York City. This company has recently been organized to handle the Dante production in this State, and also other feature films. The paid-up capital of the company is $25,000, and the incorporators are D. Keizerstein, Edward H. Rosenberg, and Nathan Drapkin.

WHAT LECTURING TO THE PICTURES MEANS.

By Prof. Preston, Boston, Mass.

Every film does not require a lecture, but there are none that would not thereby be rendered more attractive. The importance of this attraction is not sufficiently appreciated, as the following remarks of an exhibitor would seem to indicate:

"A lecturer is only essential to a house that is catering to an uneducated class of people, that to an educated audience a lecture would seem absurd. Furthermore, that a lecturer was apt to prove distracting to an audience, and that the audience would not understand the picture as well as it would have had there been no lecturer."

As a rule, nearly every picture, when seen for the first time, will prove hard to understand until it is half over. The audience may be heard making the following remarks: "What is he doing that for?" "Is she in love with him?" or "Is that her father, and why did so and so happen?" All of which goes to show that the lecturer can make the first part of a picture, which often is lost entirely, as interesting as the ending.

The lecturer studies all of the minor details and brings them out plainly at the commencement so that the audience, you will find, is sitting with all attention on the picture; no more whispering or talking—from the youngest to the eldest it is all made plain and no point has been overlooked.

The lecturer who lectures intelligently cannot detract from any picture. Of course, if he undertakes to play a part or walk about while lecturing, then he is bound to draw the attention of his audience to himself and consequently spoil his picture and his lecture as well.

The lecturer is not supposed to act; he is telling a story that is being acted by real actors and actresses before an audience who are listening to his well-told tale and watching the people of whom he is speaking. They do not expect the lecturer to impersonate a half-dozen characters, or do any acrobatic stunts. If he will adhere to his own part of the work, his explanations will strengthen rather than detract from the picture. The applause he receives at the end of his lecture will tell him plainly how well his endeavors have been appreciated, and if he has brought out all the strong points of his story, that, too, will show itself at once in the applause of his audience.

When a house first introduces a lecturer, of course the audience is going to look him over and wonder what he is going to do or say. Remember, he is a new feature and will be picked to pieces; but do not forget, the public is a good fellow, and if your lecturer knows his business he will soon make himself a part of the entertainment. The audience will forget to look at him and marvel at his wonderful memory, for the audience does not know of the "ad lib." work of your lecturer.

The so-called "rowdy" is one of the best listeners and very appreciative. The uneducated will lean upon your lecturer; the educated will come first out of curiosity and, when your man has proven himself, you will see he has a steady following of the "better class."

A quiet, easy manner, a clear, distinct voice, a plain, simple English language that can readily be understood by the educated and uneducated alike will soon show itself felt in your audience and it will not be many days before your audience will begin to look for the familiar face of your lecturer with the same feeling that is shown to the members of a popular "stock company" in your local theater.

INDIANA EXHIBITORS ORGANIZE.

Meeting Held at Indianapolis Dec. 12th with Good Attendance—H. S. Dickson Elected President.

There was an enthusiastic meeting of moving picture exhibitors of the State of Indiana held at the Claypool Hotel, Indianapolis, Ind., on Tuesday, Dec. 12. Mr. M. A. Neff, president, and C. M. Christensen, secretary of the National League, were present. Andrew Smith, secretary of the Indiana Bankers' Association and treasurer of the Indianapolis Commercial Club, delivered an address of welcome at the morning session, after which the question of organization was discussed by Messrs. Neff and Christensen.

H. F. Dickson, of Winchester, Ind., was elected president of the temporary organization.

At the afternoon session the constitution of the Ohio State League was, with a few minor changes, adopted as the constitution of the Indiana League, and a committee of five was appointed to make the changes and submit them at the next meeting, which was fixed to be held on the first Tuesday of February (6th), 1912.

In the meantime a State organizer will be engaged to call upon every exhibitor in the State to urge them to become members. The new League starts out with a membership of fifty-five.

After the meeting a banquet was served in the Claypool Hotel, at which sixty persons were present.

HOLLAMAN IN EDUCATIONAL FILM COMPANY.

The articles of incorporation of the Motion Picture Educational Film Producing Company have been filed with the Secretary of State, at Albany, N. Y. The purpose of the new corporation is to manufacture and deal in pictures intended expressly for educational purposes. Richard G. Hollaman, John D. Tippett and Louis C. Jackson, all of New York, are named as directors of the company, which is capitalized at $10,000.

BRADENBURG'S CASE GOES TO THE GRAND JURY.

The hearing in the case of the Federal Government vs. G. M. Bradenburg was continued in the Federal Court, Philadelphia, last week. The defendant was held for the grand jury and he will be given another hearing at the coming session in Philadelphia. Bradenburg was apprehended some time ago for violation of the copyright law, the complainant alleging that he wilfully exhibited and sold copies of "The Temptations of a Great City," a copyright film owned by the Monopol Film Company. A feature of the hearing was the array of witnesses, seventy in all, some coming from great distances. The Federal authorities are assisted in the prosecution by the Great Northern Film Company, the Monopol Film Company and the State Rights Protective Union.

RIP VAN HOTALING.

Ever since William Penn and Ben Franklin put Philadelphia on the map the newspaper and vaudeville writers have delighted to advertise the supposedly somnolent Quaker burg as an excellent place to which to go for a nap, but Arthur D. Hotaling, the comedy director for the Lubin Company, reversed the situation last week when he came over to the big town. Being a Philadelphian, he didn't know it had been snowing, so he motored over Thursday and Friday. He was invited to a beefsteak dinner that was scheduled to start at eleven o'clock. He turned up, but it was only to explain that he had decided that he wanted to sleep and he turned and hiked back to the hotel for a long nap. Lots of Philadelphians, when they come to town, do not go to bed at all for a couple of days, but the Lubin director declares that New York puts it all over Philadelphia as a place to sleep. We said he was the comedy director, didn't we? He is the one who put on "A Gay Time in New York" from hearsay.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

AND while we are setting things straight we want to refer to a letter from Melvin G. Winstock of the People's Amusement Company, Portland, Oregon, who seems to see in a recent appreciation of a very tasteful invitation submitted by him, some lurking and hideous sarcasm. We fail to find the sarcasm alluded to in the notice we wrote; to the contrary, we found Mr. Winstock's offering so much out of the ordinary in the matter of restraint that we spoke in high appreciation. The trouble seems to be that Mr. Winstock remembers the writer from the old hammer-throwing days when he was a dramatic critic. He's in good company. Frank Marion, of the Kalem company, still blames the writer for some stuff written years ago by Shep Friedman against the motion pictures some six months after this writer's connection with the Morning Telegraph was terminated. It's tough to get the name of being a "knocker," but we were not knocking Mr. Winstock for his decidedly creditable effort.

Mr. Winstock sends an eight-page program devoted to the six theaters operated in Portland by his company. The bare program announcement is given where the space might permit a one or two-word elaboration of the conventional "Comedy" or "Dramatic" classification, but the sheet is well-gotten up with a little pertinent reading matter of so good a class that we are sorry more space is not devoted to this.

Self-Supporting Advertising.

Opinion seems to be divided as to the value of foreign advertising in the house announcements of photoplay theaters, many declaring that the use of business announcements of tradesmen cheapens the sheet and detracts from the value of the house advertising. There are arguments to be used on both sides of the question, but the debate seems to favor the intelligent use of outside advertising to make possible the pretentious sheet.

The chief argument of the antis seems to be that it is in poor taste, but ideals are less useful as an asset than a bank account, and no one argues that Charles Frohman displays poor taste in receiving a revenue of several thousand dollars from the program privilege from each of his theaters, nor would one argue that the Steinway piano company showed poor taste in importing Paderewski that the line "The Steinway Piano Used Exclusively" might appear on all programs. With such examples who shall argue that the butcher and baker should not be permitted to have an advertisement in the program of the Gem Theater if the advertisements make the Gem program a possibility? Ideals are all right, but twenty years in amusement enterprises have shown that business hustle is more profitable than altruism.

Here's a Winner.

In this connection we quote from a letter from Joe T. Steed, proprietor of the Belle Theater, Ensley, Ala. He writes:

> Enclosed you will find a program that I got up for The Colleen Bawn. The picture cost me $20 extra and I got $40 worth of advertising out of the program so that I make $20 out of the advertising.
>
> We gave a children's matinee here every week putting a coupon in the Sunday paper, and we always give every kid in town on that day and they all go home and tell their parents about the matinee. Children's day always means about $40 extra on the day and it seems to keep the interest up through the week.

Read that twice, some of you who think that outside advertising does not belong. Mr. Steed shows $20 profit before he brings the reels into the house and the extra attendance and the cumulative advertising that is bound to follow is all building up on that clinched twenty. If the sheriff comes around to the Belle Theater it's to buy a ticket or flash his badge for a pass.

Keen Work.

It's pretty good showmanship all the way around, from Mr. Steed. That children's matinee bears out what we have said time and again, that a full matinee brings a full night house.

Mr. Steed gets 60 square inches of advertising space for himself out of the "Colleen Bawn" advertisement, gets it absolutely free, and gets all the extra business and his program profit. And just to quiet up the attendance he started a guessing contest with a coupon worded as follow. He cuts one of the coupons taken from the boxes and the attendance guess is [illegible] gives a line on the probable business for two days.

? ? FREE GUESSING CONTEST ? ?

THE ONE GUESSING THE Nearest TO THE

Attendance TO SEE THE Great Colleen Bawn Picture that will be shown at the

BELLE THEATER

Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 22-23,

Will be given Three Months FREE Admission. To the 2nd nearest guess TWO Months Admission, and the 3rd nearest guess ONE Month's Admission.

Name.....

Your attedance guess.....

Notice—Deposit this Ticket in Box at the Door.

We would suggest that Mr. Steed could have bettered his display in the "Colleen Bawn" by using a job face for the title and playing up the name of the theater, while the cast would have interested many. It's about the only comment we have to offer.

More Good Work.

More adroit work is submitted by Dean R. Magnes, of the Mission Theater, Salt Lake City, who seems to be very much on the job. He encloses a ticket issued by Keith O'Brien, the largest store in the Mormon capital, which is given every purchaser in the "Bargain Basement," whatever that is. The tickets are sold to the merchant at six cents each, cash in advance. A second slip admits two to any matinee and is issued by the Herald-Republican in a scheme to boom the want ads. One thousand of the tickets pay for such advertising as the house obtains that is not given free in connection with this offer.

The scheme is simple and is designed to induce the readers to go through the want advertisements. Somewhere in the want columns the letters forming the name of the house are enclosed in brackets, each in a different advertisement. The readers cut out these advertisements, paste them on a coupon provided in the paper and are given a pass on presentation of the coupon at the business office of the paper. There are no blanks in this scheme. Any person who will present the coupon properly fixed up gets the tickets. Seven of the want ads carry one of the letters forming the word Mission thus: (M). A half-page Sunday advertisement is carried, a part of which is paid for by the coupons.

Other Mission Schemes.

A diamond ring is drawn for each Saturday night, two numbers being drawn. If the holder of the first number does not show up within a week the ring is given to the holder of the second number. The numbers are thrown on the screen at each show, attendance at the drawing not being insisted upon. It's a good scheme where it can be tried, but it would be well to have local legal advice as to whether the scheme is a lottery before proceeding.

Practicable anywhere is a spoon distribution. Each patron is given a lettered coupon. When the various letters spelling the word Mission are obtained they may be redeemed at the box office for a spoon. In such schemes it is customary to limit the distribution by providing only a certain number of one of the essential letters. There may be scores of the other letters in proportion to the "Ms," for example, but the number of "M" coupons will determine the number of spoons given out. In this instance the "M" coupon is printed in the paper as a starter. The coupons are given only on the paid admissions and not on the newspaper or merchandise coupons. The house runs a quarter page daily and a half page on Sunday and all this effort merely backs up four reels of dated stuff.

Hustling in Allentown.

Our own Hugh Hoffman went down to Allentown to lecture "Auld Lang Syne" as a part of the opening of the Noflaw Theater, and brings back the four-page program. There is something more than two and a half pages of reading matter and of this not a page even mentions the theater, being filled with pick-up stuff from this paper and a poem from Puck. Possibly later on some of this space will be sold to outside firms, but just now the house needs the space and uses it to good advantage. The advance stuff is temperately, but attractively worded. One good idea is to have special days. Wednesday, the musical end predominates, Fridays are given over to educational reels, with lectures, and on Saturday particular attention is paid to subjects having a popular appeal. The idea is recommended to others as a business-getter for off days, which may be so built up into the best days of the week through specialization.

Special Complimentaries.

C. T. Smithers, of the Idle Hour circuit, with houses in Aberdeen and Watertown, S. D., says that he would use more Hennegan heralds if he could order in time, but that he has to depend on the local printer because of the short notice given. A house-to-house distribution is made and if the dodger sent is a fair sample of the work, the local printer knows his business.

Mr. Smithers uses complimentary tickets in the most effective way, making lists of persons likely to be interested in specific subjects and sending them tickets when some reel bearing on this topic is to be shown. These people come to see the special reel and develop the habit of coming when there is no such attraction. The tactful catering to fads or specialties is a delicate form of flattery that seldom fails to win out when it is not overdone. It is not a scheme that will bring as large returns as a wide distribution, but it brings to the house a class of persons whose patronage is desirable, particularly in a small town, where the celebrities are known.

Advance Information Essential.

In much the same strain, but in greater detail, Emil Kehlem, Jr., of the Fresno (Calif.) Theater, writes. In part, he says:

Your "Advertising for Exhibitors" always commands my closest attention, hence, the enclosing of some sample Advance Bulletins for our various theaters. They are the result of several years' gradual growth, commencing originally from the little "one-pager." You will see that there is very little advertising, in fact, the Foul Play Bulletin contains more than we usually have. It is true that advertising cuts the cost of printing, but we prefer to stand the extra expense for the sake of a more interesting Bulletin.

My ambition is to have a sixteen-page Bulletin, but (and the following is my constant prayer to the manufacturers, and now, to you), it is ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY that the exhibitor have advance bookings in plenty. He should, at least, receive knowledge of his bookings, say, on the Wednesday preceding the following week. Cuts have to be made, the Moving Picture World, and all advance literature from the manufacturers must be carefully read, proofs read, and what not must needs be tended to, so as to get your advertising in the hands of your Saturday and Sunday crowds.

It may be a little more difficult for the exchange to give the Lyric Theater, in Oakland, much time, as they run three-day-old film, but, here and in Stockton and San Jose, where we have theaters, we should get two weeks' advance notice. Sometimes we do, and sometimes we do not. If you are knocked off your stride in getting out your Bulletins, your business suffers. At present, I am compelled to issue these bulletins under varying degrees of pressure. The three enclosed Bulletins are examples of "great, greater and greatest pressures." "The Black Arrow" was rushed through in half a day, and at that, by telegraph. It can't be done properly that way.

The "Nickelodeon" is a theater now. And, the day is past, or it ought to be, when an earnest exhibitor is compelled to advertise his plays on the very day that he presents them. The uplift of the protoplay is synonymous with advance information, for the exhibitor who desires to get the information to the public. They have to be told what is coming. One of your correspondents complained most bitterly, some months ago, because he "showed" to 180 people with "The Tale of Two Cities!" Think of it. Fortunately, we had time to advertise the same, and we had close to 7,000 in two days. This was at the Lyric, which seats but 400.

Our new theater in Oakland will seat 1,500, and then we will be able to do things.

But please start a campaign in conjunction with the manufacturers, for ADVANCE BOOKINGS TO THE EXHIBITORS, and the photoplays will drive cheap vaudeville into oblivion.

One Remedy for Vaudeville.

There is a lot of meat in that last paragraph in particular. About the only real excuse a photoplay manager ever had for running cheap vaudeville was that it could be depended upon to be in the house at a certain time, giving him something he could talk about. Make it possible for the active manager to properly boom his films and the sort of vaudebille that will play three or more shows a day will be sent back where it belongs, which is most assuredly in company with high-grade pictures.

Ever since the business began managers have sought foreknowledge of their programs. Thus far they have not been successful save where they can afford to contract for specified first runs. Even second and third runs may slip up through express troubles or delay in return, yet the business will never come to its greatest prosperity until this riddle is solved. Frankly, there are but few exchanges that give the matter much thought. The exhibitor must take what is given him and be hanged to him, and so long as the other exchanges are of the same mind there is no hope in sight. The concerted action of the exhibitors would reverse this condition and other evils, but there is a lack of such concerted action. The Moving Picture World has agitated this subject time and again and has given its columns freely to any movement that promised relief to the exhibitor, but the man to work the reform is the man who pays the price and only the constant and concerted action of the exhibitors will be of any avail.

A Matter of Many Angles.

The problem presents many aspects, not the least interesting being the attitude of the average exhibitor. There seems to be a lack of get-together that defeats the efforts of the managers who appreciate the need for radical changes, and at present it would seem that the only real relief will come when the inert manager drops out of the business that has grown beyond him. In some sections of the country circuits are formed to take a set of reels from an exchange and send it over a prescribed route. The bulk business places the members in a position to demand more than a single house can ask, and once the reels are on the circuit advance work is possible save in the early houses; those getting the reels the first three or four days. Mr. Kehlem has several houses in his string, perhaps he can unite with others and not only insure advance information, but effect a saving in the matter of printing by ordering heralds for all the houses at one time with only a chance of perhaps two pages.

Will some of those who are in on such a circuit contribute their experiences for the benefit of others?

The samples shown prove Mr. Kehlem's ability to make much out of very little. It is a pity he is not given broader scope. Those who can help the advance of pictures should be permitted to do so.

IN CORRECTION.

Mr. N. E. Chaney, whose offer to supply any interested exhibitor with a copy of his new self-supporting program on receipt of a two-cent stamp, calls our attention to the fact that his address was incorrectedly stated to be Hillsdale instead of Hillsboro, Ohio. Those who sent to Hillsdale and had their letters returned will please try again, addressing the Orpheum Theater, Hillsboro, Ohio.

ADVERTISING LIKE A CIRCUS.

The above cut illustrates the way Mr. F. W. Peters, manager of the Casino Theater, Galveston, Texas, advertised the Kalem feature production, "Colleen Bawn." The background of the posters is of a light green tint and they form one of the prettiest advertising displays in that city. The house seats 300 and is owned and controlled by E. H. Hulsey, who has moving picture theaters in Oklahoma City, Okla.; Houston, Tex.; Little Rock, Arkansas, and Galveston, Texas.

Casino Theater, Galveston, Texas.

The moving picture has come to stay. Why not make use of it to educate the children of the land in the good and inspiring things of life?—Kansas City Journal.

The SCENARIO WRITER

CONDUCTED BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

BE A LITTLE COMMERCIAL.

High art is an excellent thing, but it doesn't always bring checks, and it is to be supposed that scenario writers plan stories because they like to see their names on a piece of paper that the banks will respect. This being the case, are you going to write stories to suit yourself or the demand?

It's nice to be able to write what you please, but it doesn't always pay. In a recent letter a scenario writer objects to an objection to certain action, the primary objection being based on the fact that the action would rob the heroine of proper sympathy. Admitting that fact, the author argues that the action is perfectly natural. It is, but it isn't always the perfectly natural action that is wanted. A hero may chew tobacco and still be a hero, but if he goes through 1,000 feet of film with a "quid" in his mouth he isn't going to be popular with the producer nor with the public, should he get that far. Tobacco chewing may be perfectly natural, but it is not essential to the story, so why insist upon it? Probability is necessary, but absolute realism is not always wanted, and if realism detracts from the popularity of a principal character, idealize a little even if it is not "art."

The case in point was a young girl who permitted herself to be kissed by a man not her lover. Lots of young girls are kissed by people not their lovers, but it's out of place in a film where the absence of printed explanation makes the action seem forward to the point of looseness of morals. It's not always the case; not even generally the case, but if it looks bad and doesn't help the heroine any, be commercial and cut such things out. Zola is all right between covers, but he can't always be filmed.

"Use No Hooks."

It doesn't seem as though some such warning should be necessary on manuscript scenarios offered for sale, but there are many studios where the property rights of the author are not only ignored, but where a willfully negligent editorial force seems bent upon destruction.

It is only a couple of weeks ago that the writer's courteous offer to supply the editorial room of a leading independent concern with an apparently much needed cake of soap was declined with thanks, but with a semi-apology for a rejected manuscript that was returned plentifully though not artistically decorated with greasy thumb prints, necessitating a recopying of the first page before it could again be sent out, and in the same week a judge sitting in one of the Maine courts wrote of a Licensed studio: "I have just received from the ———— my scenario. It was creased crosswise and so badly mussed that I am debating whether to throw it away or have it recopied."

These are only two recent instances, but examples could be multiplied a hundredfold without the least trouble. Worse still, the evil seems to be growing and it is time that manufacturers gave positive instructions to their scenario staffs that manuscripts should be returned to the writers in practically the same condition as that in which they were received.

In accordance with custom, the editor is not regarded as being responsible for the safety of a manuscript submitted, but he is supposed to use all reasonable care, and this care is most emphatically not exercised when he creases or marks up a manuscript.

A manuscript does not become the property of a concern until the purchase price is paid, and until then the editor has neither the moral nor the legal right to use the property of another as a memorandum pad, and yet a number of concerns mark up scripts with register numbers, comments, the name of the director who is to read the script and even sketches of the scene plots of other productions. Then the script is found unavailable; it is slapped back into its envelope and it is fired back to the author who either has to recopy the marked pages or the entire script, since the new pages will not match in color the imprint of the ribbon first used and the difference in shade is in itself announcement that the script has been rejected.

Were there any excuse for this, comment would be unnecessary, but there is no excuse save personal uncleanliness and indifference. In the offices of the Munsey publications hundreds of scripts are handled daily; the best of these being read by two or more of the editors and may be in the office a couple of months, and yet the script invariably comes back to the author as crisp and clean as when it was sent out. If you are an author known to them it may be that the final reader will return the script with a comment sheet, which is merely a slip of paper on which the various editors have written their remarks. It's a matter of a moment to slip another half sheet of paper under the clip and make all marks on this, but most of the scenario editors do not take this simple precaution and mark up the scripts with the same wanton disregard for the property of others that leads the unintelligent to deface public property with initials and ribald sentences.

One concern, recently organized, inks in a number on the first page of each script. It aids in keeping the record straight, but why not put this number on the envelope and keep the script in that envelope? It's just as easy, and it does not deface the script. Literally hundreds of scripts are being thus maltreated every week, and practically without protest, since the average writer is afraid that an objection will result in "getting in bad" with that studio. Some time ago it was suggested that an extra sheet of paper front and back would help preserve a script from injury, but this precaution should not be necessary. The editor should be sufficiently intelligent to observe proper precaution.

One source of trouble lies in the studio system of deferring to the producer. The editor is most emphatically a secondary consideration. If he gets a good script he gives it to the producer and if the producer likes it he makes the picture. The stock company manager who produced only the plays he personally liked would not run a job about as long as it took to give him two weeks' notice, but in the studio the producer is an autocrat and a first baby in the home of the grandparents.

The producer has no literary training; he never had his own stuff come back looking as though it had been in a coal mine instead of an editorial office, so he carries the script for a few days or weeks, possibly in his pocket where the paper is worn and crinkled, then he reads it without caring whether his hands have been washed since breakfast or not and finally turns it back to the editor, a limp and filthy thing, to be sent back to the helpless author.

This system is all wrong and is one of the reasons why good scripts are hard to obtain. The bulk of the submissions are made by those who are just starting in and who are thankful to get their copy back in any shape. The experienced writer is apt to fall away or at least stay out of the studios where these practices obtain.

Now and then a script is unavoidably damaged, but in such cases the studio should pay the damages. All scripts are submitted "at owner's risk," but they are also submitted with the tacit understanding that all due care will be observed. This care is not given; on the contrary, the studios are growing increasingly negligent. In self defense manufacturers should require their editors to be responsible for damage and they in turn should be permitted to hold the producers accountable.

(To be continued if necessary.)

Two Cents an Ounce.

The postal rate on scenarios or any other manuscript is two cents for each ounce, the same as any other sealed or unsealed written matter.

Don't smile and say you know it. Figure out if you always pay the postage at the full rate. Ask yourself if you are are careful as you should be. A two cent due stamp is not always the best sort of an introduction to an editor and worse still is the surprisingly common habit of using some twos and a one on a letter. Out of any hundred scripts received by any concern there will be from two to five letters paid in odd cents. A single green stamp on a sealed letter is a shrieking confession that the writer is so inexperienced that even the postal rate is still a mystery. The green stamp yells at the editor "I'm a greeny. Pay me $10 instead of $20 and I'll take it and say thanks, because I know no better." The postage due stamp merely argues the sloven, but neither is a recommendation. If you have no postal scales take the stuff to some branch post office and send it out fully paid. Get it started right no matter what the finish may be.

Keep Posted.

Do you read the Stories of the Films printed in every issue of the Moving Picture World? If you don't, why don't you?

You need to keep posted on the current releases, that you may not duplicate ideas, and you also need to know the style of stories the various companies are releasing. It is the only place where you can find all of the stories of all of the makers, and if you don't keep posted how can you expect to keep abreast of the times?

Do not content yourself with merely "skinning them over." Read and study them. See how new twists are given old situations, how odd effects are obtained, and what each company is doing. It means both time and money to know, for instance, that the Biograph and the Bison do not use the same style of release and that the Imp is releasing a weekly reel of comedy. You wouldn't try to sell shoes to the man who runs a butcher shop, or try to unload a consignment of eggs on some custom tailor. Why try to sell a Biograph story to the American, or waste stamps sending a lurid Western to the A. B.? The stories of the films is your market report. Read it every week.

What Essanay Wants.

Archer McMackin advises contributors that the editorial staff of the Essanay Company does not read scripts intended for production by the Western company, but wants material suitable for production by the Chicago company only. This demand is mostly for comedy.

That's as far as Mr. McMackin's advice goes, but it's safe to add that there will be no use trying to land a story on the Anderson section of the company. The Westerners write all their own stories.

Two Chances.

It's a poor plan to write with any specific player in mind, but if you have a script that should fit a comedy lead like "Bumptious" send it to the Imp. Half reels are best.

The Majestic can take stuff that fits Miss Pickford, who is at her best in slightly rompish ingenue parts.

What of It?

Four complaints have been entered to the effect that a certain company does not appear to read scripts submitted. What of it? It's not necessary to read a script through to determine its value. If the company is oversupplied with scripts or prefers the home-made variety, it is not necessary to read at all. No company is under obligations to read all scripts.

Inquiries

LEONARD L. H.—It is possible that "Grandfather's Violin" was reminiscent of a somewhat similar film released several years ago," but it is more probable that the old story suggested an improved version.

B. F. S.—The Pathe Freres, and others, have operators in South America, but they make scenic and educational films. There is no established photoplay company, if that is what you mean.

V. G. B.—Your question was practically answered recently in the news columns, where Mr. Sautter's success in "Little Miss Fixit" was alluded to in an editorial on page 795. It is probable that he will be back in the pictures when his theatrical tour closes.

CLAUDE M.—Miss C. Taka was the O'San of Thanhouser's "The East and the West."

JINK.—If Jink who recently asked this department for information as to how he might obtain a photograph of Miss Marion Leonard, will send his address to Mr. C. J. Siler, of the New Third Avenue Theater, 96th Street and Third Avenue, New York City, Mr. Siler will very generously present him with one of his. We presume that the Gem Company will presently have some to spare so the rest of you hold back, as Mr. Siler has only one he is willing to let go of.

JOHN A. S.—You say that you're a steady reader of this paper, and then ask us how you can get a position with a picture company, while we've used all the ink on one typewriter ribbon the past couple of months explaining to other inquirers that it cannot be done. The companies are now in a position to obtain all the experienced photoplayers they need, and have a heavy reserve list. Under such circumstances, how do you suppose that you can find a place? It is no longer necessary to run a school of instruction for the education of photoplayers and the dramatic schools professing to teach you how can do you no good. Better give up the idea and save yourself and the directors a lot of worry. One company has more than 1,000 names on its waiting list—and some pretty big names, too.

ANN C. B.—Read the scenario page to keep posted on scenario wants. Meantime, the Lubin, Essanay, Vitagraph, and, we think, the Kalem companies will give you hints on scenario writing, if you will enclose a stamped and addressed envelope with your application.

MRS. M. G. B.—Under the law of 1909, a copyright protects the author for an original term of 28 years, and may then be renewed. If, as your question seems to suggest, you ask the information with a view to using a copyrighted story, on which the original copyright has run out, we would point out that this may have been renewed, and the fact that you are not aware of the renewal will be no defense in any legal action that may follow.

FRANK C.—The Coward, in the Pathe production with the same title, is Mr. Headland. We are not advised as to his first name.

CLARENCE L.—Miss Myrtle Steadman was the girl in Selig's "The New York Cowboy," and Miss Lawrence was the Lubin player for whom you ask.

E. C.—Miss Isabel Rea was King Baggot's wife in the Imp's "Executive Clemency." (2) George L. Tucker and Miss Ethel Grandin had the lead in the same company's "Uncle's Visit." William Robert Daly was the tramp. (3) We know of no company working in Central Ohio, though there is a film company in Cleveland, with a studio elsewhere. (4) We presume that pictures were made of the Yale-Harvard football game, but we have seen no announcement. Possibly they will show up in the Pathe Weekly. (5) C. G. P. C. stands for Compagnie Generale Pathe Cinematographique, and is used by the Pathe Freres to distinguish the European from the American-made product. Many of the exhibitors call it the "C. G. Pathe Company," but this is incorrect. The Pathe and C. G. P. C. use the Pathe release dates interchangeably; that is, there are no specified days for C. G. P. C. film.

L. BICKEL.—The artist's wife in the Thanhouser "Adrift" was Miss Lucile Young. Her woman friend was Miss Katherine Horn. (2) Miss Clara Williams, formerly an Essanay leading woman, was with the Powers company, but she is at present en tour with a dramatic production.

JAMES D.—There are not only motion pictures in Japan, but a very creditable publication devoted to cinematography and printed ideaograph. There are a number of prosperous houses in South China and recently the U. S. Consular and Trade Reports asked for bids for a sectional theater for Eastern Siberia, the sides and roof to be portable and to fit floors of concrete laid down in several seaports.

LUCY B.—The fact that you have beautiful hair might help you with some hair tonic manufacturer, but with wig makers still doing business we imagine that hair alone will not get you into a picture company. It is cheaper to buy an experienced actress some more hair than to spend a half year teaching you to act. See answer to John A. S. above.

ADMIRER.—(Where have we heard that name before?) The very prevalent report as to the death of Miss Mabel Normand is incorrect. There are a lot of self-important young men about the picture houses who cover a lack of knowledge with starling fabrications. Miss Normand changed companies and the report appears to have been given out in many cities that she was dead merely because she is no longer seen with her former associates.

L. M. G.—The Selig production of "Blackbeard" was made on the Pacific coast. Sydney Ayres was the Blackbeard.

CURIOUS.—Under service conditions motion picture film is not explosive. Most machines are so arranged that only a few inches of film can burn while threaded up.

PAUL D.—The photoplay theater in Chinatown, New York, is not now running, but there are three theaters, one Licensed and two Independent, just on the edge of the quarter, that are very liberally patronized by the Chinese. In one of the houses a six-year-old Chinese boy, who speaks both English and Chinese, is brought to the theater each evening to explain the reels to his father in Cantonese.

L. W.—There is no legal bar to your using a news item as a basis for a scenario, but perhaps others have seen the same item and have followed the same course and you may find yourself in confliction with two or three other stories on the same topic. Do not pick up the startling news feature that will be widely copied, but get your inspiration from some obscure paragraph that may be built up.

B. M. M.—If you will turn over a few pages you will find the information you seek in the advertising columns.

W. L. D.—We do not know the present whereabouts of Jack Standing. He has not been with the Lubin company for about three weeks.

T. P. A.—The Vitagraph story printed in the Motion Picture Story Magazine under the title of "The Code of the Hills" was subsequently released as "Beyond the Law," which explains your inability to satisfy your patron's curiosity.

GRACE G.—The reason some theaters charge more for the rear seats is that the picture is seen to greater advantage from a distance. The reason for this will become apparent if you will sit in the front row and then move toward the rear. A picture eight feet wide on the screen is magnified 96 times. One ten feet wide is enlarged 120 times the original size. This results in a rather coarse definition when seen close to, but moving back the slight imperfections cease to be apparent and merge into a softer and more pleasing effect. If you will take a newspaper half-tone and examine it closely you will find the apparent blacks and whites cut up into tiny squares. Move the paper away a few feet and these squares merge into apparently solid masses of color. It's precisely the same idea.

BEN.—Why not send your "popularity" votes direct to the studio? They probably have rubber stamps for filling in the blanks and you can sidestep the labor of hand work.

BENNIE FROM LUBINVILLE.—is thanked for the list of names recently sugested, and this goes double for the stenographer to whom the [illegible] editor is indebted for his Lubin replies and who also sent in a list.

A. LEROY BROWN, LANSING, MICH.

Lansing, Mich., picture theater men are having a controversy with the city authorities over the question of Sunday closing. A city ordinance prohibits any sort of public amusement exhibition on Sunday, but no attempt has been made to enforce it until recently, when Mr. Brown and others were arrested for running picture theaters on Sunday and found guilty by the trial court. It is thought that the case will be appealed.

Mr. Brown, whose likeness is here reproduced, became an exhibitor of pictures when he was but 19 years old. His first attempt was a failure, which he considers as a good experience. Since then he has owned several theaters in Lansing and elsewhere. Recently he disposed of his other interests to give his entire time to his new $12,000 house in Lansing. Mr. Brown is a great admirer of the Moving Picture World and says that it has done more to educate the moving picture exhibitor than any other medium.

THE NET RESULT OF SENSATIONALISM.

The Philadelphia Press, one of the most influential newspapers published in Pennsylvania, makes a specialty of home and educational material and, following up these specialties, calls for a rigid enforcement of the law enacted at the last session of the legislature providing for censorship over all films and slides shown in the State of Pennsylvania. The law has always been a dead letter and it would never have been heard of again but for the proposal to exhibit films showing Beulah Binford and Mrs. Patterson, women who recently figured in sensational murder trials.

COLORADO INSANE ASYLUM ADOPTS MOTION PICTURES.

Dr. Bussey, superintendent of the Colorado Insane Asylum of Pueblo, Colorado, has installed animated pictures for his 1,200 patients, with hopes of obtaining better results for their cure. The manager of the Maze Theater here, Mr. L. C. Shepard, has installed the plant and is giving a show twice each week. Of late, many asylums throughout the United States have realized the value of the motion picture and have adopted it with good results.

Mayor's Picture Theater Committee Reports.

Question of Admission of Children Eliminated—More Specific on Booths—Practically Same in Other Respects.

Mayor Gaynor received the report of his special committee on Moving Pictures and Picture Theaters on Tuesday, Dec. 12. The report, letter in form, reads much as published in The Moving Picture World, page 547 of the issue of Nov. 18, the most important being the elimination of the section relating to the admission of children under the age of sixteen years.

Regarding this matter the Mayor's committee, recognizing the fact that the subject was already regulated by the Penal Code, saw that it would be useless to attempt to regulate the attendance of children by a city ordinance which would be contrary to a State law, so it passed the subject up with the recommendation in a supplementary report to the Mayor suggesting that the State law be amended, and that, in the event of the amendment being adopted, a suitable regulation might then be incorporated in the city ordinance.

Regarding booths, the revised report provides that films may be "rewound and spliced in some other approved fireproof enclosure," and that, "where miniature motion picture machines are employed in connection with private exhibitions, the requirements of the above paragraph may be so modified as to permit instead of the regulation booth an approved fireproof box, unventilated, and of a size only sufficient to enclose the machine." Reference to ventilating the booth in paragraph III of Sub-section "F" is amended to require a vent flue with a cross-sectional area of not less than fifty square inches, and that it shall be fireproof.

This, we are informed, completes the work of the Mayor's committee, and that it will be submitted to the Board of Aldermen as the recommendations of the Mayor for the proper treatment of the motion picture theatre problem. Just what bearing the report will have upon the proposed ordinance now being considered by the Aldermen is problematical. It is reasonable to infer, nevertheless, that Mayor Gaynor will use his influence and his power to secure the adoption of an ordinance framed along lines most satisfactory to him.

It is worthy of note that the report of the Mayor's committee has omitted all reference to the question of censorship as applied to the pictures direct, upon the ground that the authority given the Bureau of Licenses is sufficient to cover that question. This contention seems entirely reasonable and should have the support of the picture interests.

NEW YORK EXHIBITORS FACING TROUBLE.

When we characterized in our columns last week the meeting of the New York Exhibitors' League as a "farce-comedy," we said nothing which we feel in duty bound to retract. The nucleus of that organization is a splendidly loyal and hard-working coterie of gentlemen who have sacrificed much for others of their brethren who are less energetic. There are, however, a few exhibitors who come to meetings of exhibitors in every city with petty grievances to be aired. And these grievances have but one result, which is to confuse the workers who are trying to do something. The Exhibitors' League of New York is a well-founded institution. The officers are doing their work, and doing it well, but they are hampered by unparliamentary actions much too frequently; hence

Will He Wait Till the Horse Is Stolen Before He Locks the Door?

our "farce-comedy" criticism, which applies to a thousand meetings. Here one thing is sure: the exhibitor who is full of intemperance is more loyal than the one who stays away from the meeting.

The principal fuss seems to have been over dues. A few [illegible] to be needed. You will get many New York exhibitors out at [illegible] dollars do not realize it. Some of them [illegible] $5 or $10 a day without thinking that it may cost them thousands of dollars to-morrow. That is as plainly as it can be put. We repeat what we said last week: that there is no room for the New York exhibitors to quibble over $5 or $10 dues. What each exhibitor in Greater New York should do is to walk directly up to the president's table at the next meeting and lay down $100, without question. A man should not require voluminous explanations in making payment in an organization like this. Let them trust their officers and the work will be done. We repeat again: if independence is not worth $100 to any exhibitor, he might as well get out of the business. If he is not making enough money to afford $100 for independence he ought to try some other business. If every exhibitor would come to the front and lay down his money, without any "ifs," "ands" or "whys," in one day there would be $50,000 in the treasury, which would form the foundation of the strongest moving picture exhibitors' association on record.

MISS MARGARET FISHER.

Among the recent additions to the players of the Imp Company will be found Miss Margaret Fisher, recently engaged to play leads and ingenue parts. The engraving is from a photograph of Miss Fisher in the leading part of the Imp subject, "The Girl and the Halfback." Miss Fisher has had considerable experience in pictures, having been a member of the stock photoplayers of the Selig and Essanay companies.

NEW PRINCESS OPENED AT HOPKINSVILLE, KY.

On the evening of November 27 the principal event at Hopkinsville, Ky., was the opening of the new Princess Picture Theater, by George A. Bleich, proprietor. Mayor Meacham, of Hopkinsville, was present, and made an address to the audience, in which he noted the great progress made in the manufacture of motion pictures. The house is described as a paragon of excellence and comfort. The new house, including the site, cost $20,000, and will seat several hundred people. It has a very handsome front and is richly decorated in the interior.

Projection Department

Edited by F. H. RICHARDSON.

INVITATION.—Ye editor is in receipt of an invitation from San Francisco M. O. Operators' Union to attend a midnight matinee tendered the union by the Kinemacolor Company of California; same to be at Alcazar Theater, Friday, Dec. 1. Sorry, gentlemen, but the invite got here too late. Anyhow there is so much snow that walking isn't good. Thanks for the invite, however. Hope you had a good time.

CHASING THEM THROUGH.—The motion picture exhibition business has been afflicted with many and diverse evils, but perhaps the very worst of them all is the practice known to the initiated as "Chasing 'em through," or "Shooting 'em through." Translated into the language of every day citizens this means over-speeding the projection machine.

It is an abuse brought into being by and through the five cent store-room theater, in which the seating capacity was limited. Competition was and is fierce and instead of turning their attention to securing patronage by giving a better, high class show, managers sought to hold and increase it by giving a bill of great length. To such a ridiculous extent was this carried that small five cent houses were running as many as six and seven reels to the show, while four reels and a song was by no means unusual.

Now it would require about seventy-five minutes to run five reels and a song, allowing two minutes to each reel for change, and six for the song, and run them as they should be run. With a five cent house of say 200 seating capacity, paying rental for a four reel, daily change service, it needs no elaborate figuring to prove this to be a financial impossibility. To get around the matter the "manager" instructs the operator to "chase 'em through."

This was not the only cause of the practice but it was, and still is, one of the chief reasons for the introduction of Mr. Chase-'em-through upon the scene. But no matter what may be the excuse advanced by the manager, the practice is nothing short of reprehensible. It is an outrage on the business as a whole. It is a shameful abuse of the films owned by the exchange and it is an injury to every exhibitor who is compelled to run the films thereafter.

The "chase-'em-through" show is a farce. It is an absurdity. It is a travesty on projection, and the manager who allows it in his house, or, worse yet, orders it, is doing his level best to murder the goose that lays the golden egg. It won't be his fault if the butchery is not accomplished either.

Often have I sat in an audience and watched the most beautiful production turned into a ridiculous and totally absurd series of jumping jack pantomime. Back and forth the figures flitted like galvanized dummies. The nurse at the dying child's bed moved around as though she were run by electricity and the wires of her motor had gotten crossed—but you have all seen the wretched, incongruous performance time and again, so why describe it.

"But," says the manager of the "shoot-'em-through" show (Oh yes, it's a show all right; generally a holy show too) "what business it is of yours anyhow. I'm running this house and it seems to me a man ought to have the privilege of running his own business as he sees fit."

Let us examine this claim. In the first place when the manager threw open his doors and invited an audience to pay money to see his "show" he assumed an obligation to put one on; not a rank, silly imitation. The audience is to an extent a partner in the particular performance it attends and the manager has no more moral right to ruin what they have paid to see than he has to go out on the street and rob them of a sum equal to the price of admission at the point of a gun. Morally he is just as much a thief in one case as in the other. But this is not really the worst side of the matter after all. There is a very much worse one and it is high time some one told the chase-'em-through "manager" exactly the truth concerning things.

Aside from the injury such men are doing the business as a whole in the effect their performance has on the public, there is a phase of the matter which even more directly affects every exhibitor and film exchange. The evil effect of Mr. Chase-'em-through does not stop with his own show.

A film is made to be run at a certain speed, approximately sixty feet per minute. Film stock is designed and calculated to withstand the strain of that speed. It will even stand a moderate increase without material damage, but it was not designed and will not, without material injury, stand the speed of the chase-'em-through fiend.

At normal speed of sixty feet of film per minute a section of the film about six inches long, between the upper and lower loops of the machine, must start from dead still, move forward ¾ inch, overcoming the friction of the tension spring, stop and start again sixteen times to every second of time. Sixteen times every second the teeth of the intermittent sprocket must jerk down the piece of film between the loops, using the sides of the sprocket holes of a film about 5-1000 inch in thickness for purchase. Imagine the strain on that thin, delicate substance. It is really amazing that it stands up under such usage, but it does.

Mr. Chase-'em-through, however, increases that speed and runs through a thousand feet of film in ten minutes or less. The intermittent is then jerking the strip of film in excess of 25 times a second, instead of sixteen. Naturally the result is worn, strained sprocket holes, films ripped in two, and general damage. And now we get down to the nub of things. Mr. Chase-'em-through has damaged the films. Possibly he hasn't actually torn a film in two, but he has done far worse for he has, to some extent, injured every sprocket hole in the entire film. A great many exhibitors will have that film as a part of their show thereafter and every single one of them will have to suffer for the abuse Mr. Chase-'em-through has perpetrated. So you see it really isn't altogether "his" business and no one's else, is it?

And still the story of wrong is not finished for there is an exchange which has paid a hundred or more dollars for that film. It has rented it to Mr. Chase-'em-through with the tacit understanding that it would be taken care of and not abused. It has been abused in the worst possible way, and the exchange has been wronged.

Mr. Chase-'em-through also is subjecting his projection machine to usage it was never intended for by its maker. Pretty soon it, being subjected to terrific strain, gets into bad shape. Of course it does. The wonder would be if it didn't. But Mr. Chase-'em-through blames the poor machine. He declares it a swindle. He curses it loud and deep. He makes demand on its manufacturer for free repairs on the grounds that it hasn't lasted "any time at all." He probably swears by all that is good that it has had the very best of treatment and the manufacturer, not knowing the truth, oftimes does repair the machine without cost to the Chase-'em-through exhibitor. In fact the story of over speeding is one of wrong from start to finish. There is not one single redeeming feature in connection with it and not an excuse for it which will stand the light of day.

"But," I think I hear some manager whose fur I have rubbed in the wrong direction and whose corns I have trampled, shout, "my seating capacity is limited and at least on Saturdays I cannot handle the crowds. I must shorten the show when there is a rush or I won't make my salt. What am I to do?"

The answer is plain and simple: shorten the show by cutting out half a split reel, or even a whole reel, if you must, but run what you do run at least slow enough so that the audience can tell whether it is a funeral procession or a horse race they are looking at. In other words cut down the subjects until what is left can be run as they should be run in the time allotted to the programme. If you cannot make money running your show that way then I am sorry to say that the business would be distinctly benefited by your introduction to some other field of human endeavor.

CORRECTION.—Messrs. Brown and Dowell, San Diego, Calif., write: "In regard to our article in the Nov. 25th issue would say that the drop due to resistance was not mentioned by us as this would not come under resistance of ARC. The 10-12 Volt drop covers the resistance of the carbons, carbon-arms and the arc or flame but not the circuit. Of course the greater part of the drop comes from part 3, which we neglected to mention, and equals about 35 volts. You say that the theory that the core reduces arc (flame) resistance is new to you but sounds reasonable. Assuredly it must for, as you can see, if the core volatilizes more readily than the surrounding part, forming more vapor and thus a better conductor for the current, it follows that there must be less resistance. The larger the conductor the less the resistance you know. We shall not discuss other points, until questioned. As to rheostats, we regret to say that we cannot comply with your request, as we are putting these on the market shortly, for a reasonable price. We are, however, willing to co-operate with you in the betterment of projection through the department whenever we can do so without interfering with business."

Without disputing the proposition as stated, I believe the division of resistance is split up too fine for the knowledge of the average operator to deal with understandingly. While theoretically it is well to acquire knowledge along any possible line, still I cannot see any practical benefit to the operator, who has a world of really practical lore still to attain, in knowing that the total drop of from 45 to 50 volts on a D. C. projection arc is divided up into three distinct elements. I mention this, not to criticise you, but to call attention to the fact that at this stage of the game it is heardly advisable to go thus deeply into matters purely technical. It tends rather to puzzle than to teach. We will be glad to have your contributions at any time, but try to avoid technicalities and make things as plain and understandable to "the other fellow" as you can.

WOW! HERE'S TROUBLE.—Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I see in the Projection Department that you are in the midst of an exciting discussion as to the practicability of using motor-generator sets in connection with a moving picture are light without the introduction of any resistance other than that of the arc itself. In Washington, where it is required that the machine circuit be connected to the two outside wires of a 3-wire system, thus necessitating the use of 220 volts, primary, motor-generators are in general use without resistance and as I have worked in no less than seven houses under these conditions I can state that while a light may be kept by current supplied in this manner, after a fashion, it is done only by the most heroic and strenuous efforts on the part of the operator. It will be apparent that when the arc is struck a direct short circuit takes place and this usually brings down the speed of the "set" to such an extent that it is almost jarred loose from its moorings and you frequently have to try several times before succeeding in getting the arc to form when you separate the carbons. After the generator has recovered from this sudden overload and is running normal you can then take a chance with putting on a picture. If the indicator on the field rheostat is turned so that you are supposed to be getting the maximum amount of light there is great difficulty in getting the arc to burn quietly and without hissing, buzzing, and otherwise showing its displeasure at the situation. On the other hand if you "cut in" more resistance in the field you must keep your left hand on the feed handle as faithfully as you keep the right hand on the crank, for unless the carbons are fed continually and kept at exactly the same distance apart the light will go out and the same difficulty as before mentioned is encountered in lighting it again. The distance between the carbons can not, as a rule, be over ⅛ of an inch (for D. C.) and as I said, the slightest change in line voltage, length of arc, or even a slight jar of the lamp house will cause the arc to break without even the warning flaming that usually precedes this occurrence when using a rheostat. I will not go into the electrical or mechanical reasons why the current thus supplied is not satisfactory (from the operator's standpoint, at least), but it does seem that when you are supplied with the exact amount of current needed that you lack the "elasticity" which I think the current should possess in order to adapt itself to any circumstance causing a little more or less load to fall upon the secondary generator. The above is not an effort on my part to "knock" motor generator sets but is actually the difficulty I and many other operators have found in maintaining a light where they are used. If this sounds foolish and a display of ignorance, please destroy it and don't show me up before the many wise ones who I am afraid just wait for an opportunity like this to feast on some poor misguided crank turner's pretentions of knowing something."

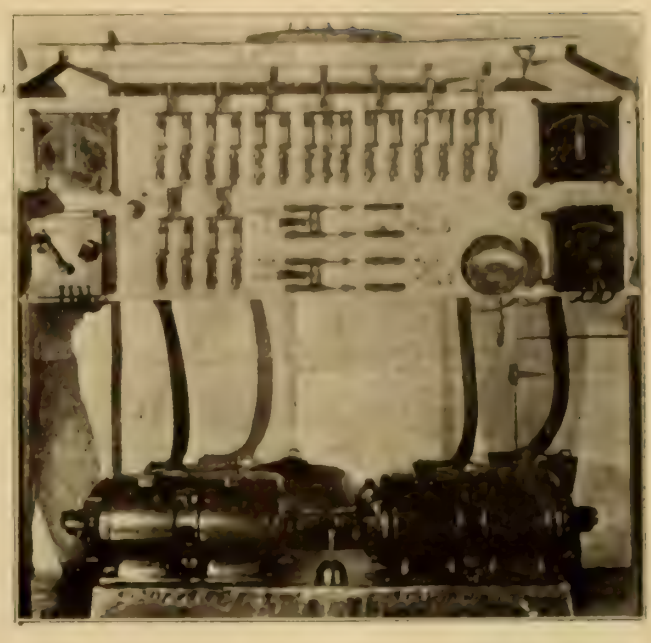
The foregoing is from the Washington operator who had us all puzzled over the umbrella some time back. He is not located in Brooklyn, it seems. I have given the letter space because I regard the motor-generator discussion as of great value at this time and I want to see all sides of it set forth, especially by those who have had actual experience with them. From what the brother says I take it the Washington sets are D. C.—that is to say, D. C. motor and D. C. generator. We would be glad to hear from other Washington operators as to their experience with them. We also will welcome anything which will throw added light on the subject. It would seem that the suggestion, offered by a brother last week, of cutting in resistance while the arc is being struck might be of value. However, I can say that I myself have used a D. C. motor-generator set without resistance, the generator being of a type built especially for such work, and had no trouble whatever in striking or handling the arc. The machine was not practical, however, and was taken off the market for the reason that sparking at the brushes was excessive and soon burned out the commutator. I believe Mr. Hallberg might be able to give us some valuable information as to the difficulties set forth by Brooklyn, if he will be so kind, putting it in as plain language as possible.

A SPLENDID OPERATING ROOM.—Mr. Frank Chartrand, chief operator (Harry Birch, assistant operator, and Jas. Paggon, relief), Clune's Broadway Theater, Los Angeles, Calif., writes: "Am constant reader of the World and enjoy the Projection Department very much. It is a great help to the average operator. Attached hereto find photos of our operating room. Have seen several pictures of operating rooms but none equal to our own. It is up to date in every respect. Every convenience possible is employed, even to toilet and wash room. We have two Hallberg motor-generator sets supplying current from 110 volt D. C. circuit, three Motiograph machines, two being in use, alternating to avoid any wait between pictures. We also have dissolver, cyclopticon for rain, snow, fire and cloud effects, color wheel and spot light. Picture is 25 x 22, projected 110 feet. Can pull 30 to 50 amperes, but only use 32 to 35 on account of having a very bright screen. The switchboard shown in one of the pictures was built by Mr. Loper, our manager, who is an electrician of note.

"It is the best of its kind I have seen for some time. We can throw over from generator to rheostat or vice versa, without any stop. We also have a motor re-wind and many other conveniences. Size of room is 18 x 22 by 22 feet in height. House seats about 990, has nine-piece orchestra. Show runs 11 A. M. to 11:30 P. M."

It certainly is a pleasure to look at that room. It is, of course, larger than is really necessary but that's a mighty good fault and one not often found. Lack of space obliged me to trim top and bottom of photo so that realization of the height (22 ft.) is lost. Switchboard is a dandy. I must correct you as to size of picture. If it is 25 feet wide it would be about 18¾ high. Height is approximately ¾ of width, you know. You boys certainly ought to, and no doubt do, deliver the goods on the screen. There would be no excuse for anything less than high class projection with that outfit. Our readers will please note how the wall shutters are supported. In case of fire all shutters would automatically drop by their own weight the instant the master cord burned in two and if there is a large vent pipe from ceiling to open air, to carry off the smoke, the audience would hardly know anything out of the ordinary was happening.



BE CAREFUL, GENTLEMEN.—We have had reports of a number of small operating room fires within the past few weeks. No one was injured and the property loss was in no case large. It, however, points the moral that the operator must be ever on the alert to prevent such a catastrophe. There is no excuse for an operating room fire, or there very seldom is. Nine times in ten it is due to rank carelessness on the part of the operator, though that statement must be qualified in that it is too often primarily the fault of the exhibitor himself for employing a young, inexperienced boy in the operating room, or it may be a cheap man who is old enough but lacks knowledge and experience. The competent, experienced operator seldom or never has a fire. There is no reason why he should, except from pure carelessness. But the danger is ever present and eternal vigilance is the price of safety. All of these small fires have their effect in furnishing the reason for drastic fire laws and high insurance rates.

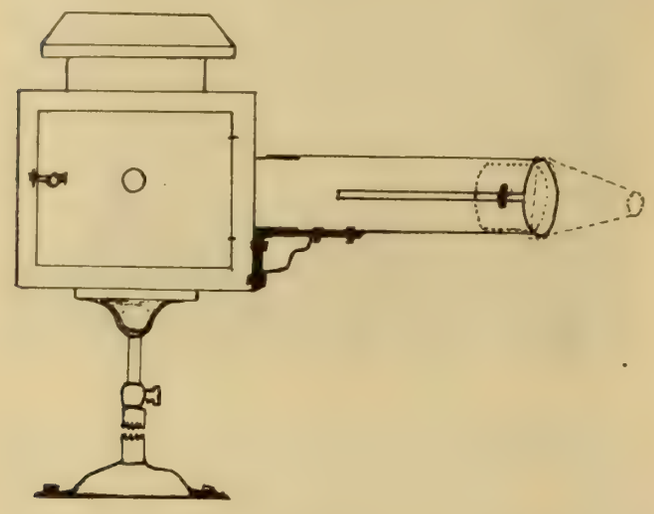
CAMERA WANTED.—Mr. C. Wallace, White Theater, Salinas, Calif., desires to purchase a second hand moving picture camera. Says projection there is excellent, due to study of, and interest taken in the work.

NOT ORGANIZED.—Atlanta, Ga., writes: "The Convention of the American Federation of Labor found only one of the theaters, showing motion pictures exclusively, fully organized. It is to be hoped that this state of affairs will not continue. The Nimo was the [illegible]

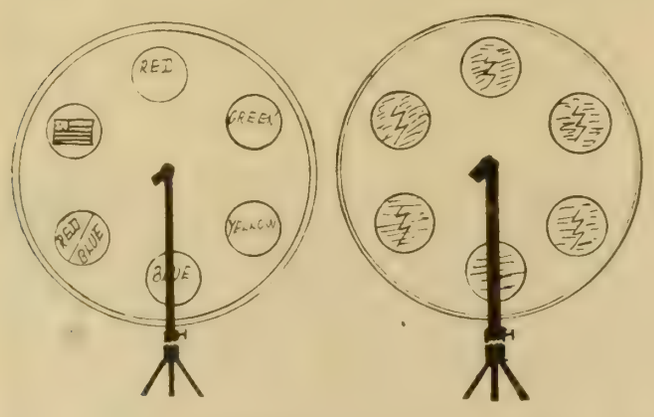
Operating Room, Clune's Broadway Theater, Los Angeles, Cal.

It is a large theater, seating but about 200. Programme consists of [illegible] reversed reels, supplemented by two of the best singers in the city, viz: Mr. James Flynn, tenor, and Mr. Guy Hanis, singing comedian. Orchestra consists of three pieces, piano, violin and drum, all members of A. F. of M. Operating room is well equipped. Has Powers Six, Ft. Wayne motor-generator set, etc. The operators are capable men, both members of the I. A. T. S. E. The house enjoys excellent business, being well managed and up to date in every particular.

NEW STUNTS.—Washington, D. C., writes: "Am on the road most of the time with my Powers Five, hence only occasionally see the World. However, recently caught a copy of the fly and send herewith sketch of my spotlight, in use two years.



The extension is 4½ inch stovepipe. Slot in same is ½ inch to allow wing nut to slide back and forth, carrying lens with it. The stand is an old store counter stool with collar added to admit of raising and lowering. The funnel is an ordinary automobile funnel and with it I get a spot down to one foot in diameter on very short throw, and 4 feet at 45 feet throw. Lamphouse is a Lubin. I also submit sketch showing how I get lightning effect, and one of the color-wheel, made from two ordinary household trays. For supporting these devices I use an ordinary musician's music stand. The lightning effect is made by affixing glass plates, 4 x 4 inches square, in the holes in the metal wheel. These plates are covered with mucilage and lampblack in which the jagged line is scratched; use care to get all alike by laying one over the other to do the scratching. These plates must be set to the lens so as to strike in the same position on stage scene. Then once around quick with the wheel and cut off light until time to repeat.



The color wheel is self explanatory. The holes for gelatine, or colored glass, are 3½ inches in diameter and the glass, if glass is used, 4 x 4 inches square. The flag, if desired, is made of strips of colored tissue paper pasted on the glass with mucilage.

The brother also sends in sketch of cyclone effect he evolved and has used with excellent effect but space obliges us to hold it for later date. He says that, in answer to "Who Knows of a Good Town," there are dozens of them in Canada, 4,000, 5,000 and 8,000 population, having no show. Some of them have current—some none. Will supply names for the asking."

Would suggest that he send in the list, inasmuch as he is on the road and not always reachable. His present address is Geo. W. Orme, 413 2nd St., N. W. Washington, D. C. We are obliged to Brother Orme for the sketches.

INTERESTING LETTER.—Mr. W. B. Martin, Alameda, Calif., writes: "At times, as I read the different queries sent in, I wonder what class of projection is being done in the east, where so many of these questions come from. The trouble with most operators lies in the fact that they are not in sympathy with their work—anything is good as long as they get the salary. I would not have a man in either of my two houses here who was not interested enough in his work to get the best possible results at all times. I believe much of the inferior projection in any place gets by from the fact that the house manager is not a practical operator himself and does not know good from bad work. Every manager, to be successful, should know projection from A to Z. Why not elevate some of the operators to positions of this kind, provided they have the executive ability. Results would then be required, absolutely. As a rule, I think projection is at a very high standard around the Bay, especially in San Francisco. You have received many letters from Local No. 162 of San Francisco, setting forth the high class work that its members turn out, and I, as an outsider, will say that I am satisfied that in no place will you find men any better, if as competent, as members of that union. An incompetent man does not get in and those that are members know their business and produce the results on the screen—what they are paid for. The San Francisco local has a reputation for its members that it may well be proud of. I am heartily in sympathy with your effort to raise the standard of projection. With me, good projection is a hobby. Anything to make it better. If you could see the screen results in my two houses here, I am sure that you'd agree that I have learned some of the rudiments."

Many thanks for your words of appreciation, Friend Martin. You wonder where the queries come from and truthfully say that projection is perhaps at its best in San Francisco. Just let those who read that statement roll the fact over in their minds that projection is better paid for in that city than anywhere in the U. S., if not in the world. Piece that fact together with the fact that projection is at its best there and see if you can't make two out of one and one. The queries you speak of most emphatically don't come from men getting from thirty to forty dollars a week.

Now, Mr. Operator, don't pack up your one screwdriver and pliers and hit the trail for Frisco. It won't do you any good. There's plenty of operators there now and they are operators, too. Don't imagine by this that I mean there are no operators outside of Frisco. By no means. What I do mean, however, is that, as I have preached for lo these many years, high salaries mean high class work and high class work means increased box office returns, far out of proportion to the added salary expense. Some of the reports of poor projection come from houses paying an operator as low as $10 per week. What in the name of Heaven do you expect for that sum? What you say regarding house managers is absolutely correct. The manager who knows good projection from bad won't stand for the poor article. You'll see him rooting around for a better operator in a hurry if his picture isn't satisfactory. I heartily commend your letter for the careful perusal of both operators and managers.

CAN'T BE DID.—Pittsburg, Pa., writes: "Have trouble with focus of picture. Have a 65 foot throw and it is at about an angle of 45 degrees with the screen. Picture is out of focus on one side. How can I remedy it. Will I have to have a special lens?"

If you have an angle of 45 degrees on a throw of 65 feet I very much doubt if you can get a clear picture. You did not say what width the picture is and that would have considerable bearing. You might be able to get an extra good lens which would help matters to some extent but a remedy I think is impossible if the angle is that great, particularly if the picture is a large one. Just for an experiment take an ordinary business card, or paper of that sort, and cut a circle out of it just large enough to fit in the front lens mount. Cut a perfectly round hold in it ½ inch less in diameter than the lens. Take out the front combination and unscrew the ring which holds the front lens. Lay the paper ring on the lens and clamp it there with the screw. This will decrease your light somewhat and may not help. Try it anyhow and report. I believe you will have to move the operating room before you get good results, always supposing the angle is as great as you say.

LIKES THE WORLD.—Kenora, Ont., writes: "Enclosed find money for subscription. I find the World to be very interesting and helpful. Have been an electrician for seven years and operator for five. Have used the old Lubin two-pin, the Powers Five and now have Edison Underwriters Model. I must criticise the two-wing outside shutter of this mechanism. It makes a lot of flicker. Can overcome it to some extent by running seventy a minute but with light films it shows even at that speed. Am making a three-wing shutter which I hope will be better. Have you any of the latest books published on various makes of machines, also describing various troubles that may occur such as film running off lower sprocket, picture vibrating or jumping up and down on screen, cause of film buckling over aperture, thus throwing picture in and out of focus?"

The Edison company will furnish you a three-wing shutter for your machine. A two-wing shutter always produces considerable flicker at normal speed. The troubles you speak of have all been described and their remedies given time and again in the Projection Department. The writer is author of a handbook, of which upwards of 5,000 copies have been sold. It has given universal satisfaction. Price, $1.50 by mail. Order it of the M. P. World. Would suggest that you procure the book and also send $3.00 for one year's back numbers of the paper. You will more than receive their value in what you can glean from the department. Beginning next January we will run photographic instructions on all leading machines as fast as possible.

MICA SLIDES.—Princeton, N. J., writes: "I note your request for opinions as to mica stereopticon slides. Will say that I received two sets of mica song slides in regular service recently, same being furnished by a firm in Philadelphia. These slides were bound with tin and I had to handle them with my pliers. They got so hot it was impossible to touch them with the fingers. I blistered mine and then refused to run them any more. They do not show up as well as glass slides. The heat turns the mica brown in course of time."

We are obliged to you, Princeton, for the information. We have never used mica slides but should imagine they would not be equal to glass. Certainly slides bound in tin would be very hard to handle as the metal would get hot very quickly.

ADDRESS WANTED.—Lompoc, Calif., writes: "Your department is certainly a great help to me, as is also the handbook recently purchased. Am after better light. Use two 7½ condensers, 30 ampere fuse plugs, No. 4 and 6 wires, 22½ foot picture on a 90 foot throw; 110 volt, 60 cycle current. Have a 55 ampere Formastat working on its highest contact. Am I getting 55 amperes? Can you supply me with name and address of some operator in Upper or Lower Burlington, B. C.? Wish his assistance in locating a relative supposed to be there. I recently wrote San Francisco M. P. O. Union, seeking admission to that organization. I received a very decent reply (something one don't always get, by the way) from its Presi-

[illegible] and Business Agent Mr. Woods stating that Ernest is not to associate with operators. I went to get in some large place where I can secure position as second man and study the business. Drummers from Ernest tell me my work compares favorably with that of Ernest men, but I am not satisfied and wish to improve. I find that by cutting out the slides in my M. P. World, placing them in frames where the public can read them it has increased the interest of the public in the show. Many come regularly who did not do so until I started that stunt. We use 19 reels per week and I arrange to have one particularly interesting subject every evening. We have a six-piece orchestra and the house is making money, being the only one in town. It is the opera house. Mr. J. O. Welling the proprietor, however, wishes to locate in some large place where his children can attend a conservatory of music. He, therefore, wishes to sell the house. Good chance here for a live man."

If your Dynamat is a 110 volt, 35 ampere machine you should by getting that amperage, but you must not expect anything very swell in the way of light when projecting a 20 foot picture with 35 amperes. A. C. You would have to put about 70 amperes, using 35 carbons, to get really good illumination on such a picture with A. C. As to the address of an operator in Burlington, B. C., our books do not show any subscriber at that point. All we could suggest is that you address a chance letter addressed "Operator, Moving Picture Theater, Burlington, B. C.," placing return address on the envelope.

In not being satisfied with your own work you are on the right track toward good projection. The self satisfied man never gets ahead. Possibly you might get a chance as second man in Los Angeles, I do not know what the condition is there. The only thing I can suggest as to your light is to watch the lamp heads inside the lamphouse closely. Using heavy amperage they burn very quickly. You will do well to cut off the wires back as far as they have turned brown possibly as often as once a week, depending on how many hours a day they are used. Also keep the carbon contacts clean. Wires are large enough and everything else seems to be O. K. The San Francisco union is run on a strictly business basis, as all unions should be, therefore a "decent reply" to a business communication may, of course, be expected.

TROUBLE.—New York City writes: "(1) We had four clusters of incandescent lamps on ceiling, working independently and handled by four switches in operating room. Exit lights were also on separate switch. Manager wanted all house lights and exit lights to light from downstairs and from one switch. I connected the cluster circuits in operating room by connecting all wires on one side (positives) and all wires on other side (negatives) together with a jumper and then run to switch below, bringing [illegible] wires up from basement to [illegible] and to screw. I also connected exit lights to same switch, which placed all wiring on the one system. I also placed snap switch on exit light circuit. They work all right but here is the trouble. When I am ready to operating room with [illegible] 18 to 20, all is well, and when I use [illegible] lights, and everything is O. K., but if I close both switches at same time it is heavy strain which blows a 60 ampere fuse. Where is the trouble? (2) How many lights in operating room, when fuse is blown to protect motor. Full 25 amperes through rheostat. What size is fuse that should protect those from basement to upper cutout? (3) Why [illegible] wires [illegible] do they deliver amperes or only voltage? Do the carbons make the current flow?"

(1) You cannot have started the proposition correctly. As you describe it the wiring is all right, except merely as being unnecessarily heavy. However, it is evident your lamp connections are [illegible] the polarity crossed somewhere. However, the proposition of having all lights, including exit lights, handled from one switch is very bad, indeed, and, unless I am in error is directly contrary to the rules of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity. Better look out. If an inspector sees that job I imagine you will get into very serious trouble. Your questions 2 and 3 show your knowledge of electrical action to be very weak, indeed, therefore, if for no other reason, you ought not to have attempted to do wiring. My advice is to get an electrician to straighten out that wiring and do it quick. (2) Twenty-five amperes, of course, provided only your lamp is on that circuit and the rheostat delivers that volume of current. (3) Really, my boy, I don't feel like answering such foolish questions. For the love of Heaven have you got a New York license? If you propose to stay operating you had better buckle down to some good, hard study and do it real quick, too. I like to be of assistance but with your present knowledge, or rather almost total lack of it, I am compelled to say that you have no business whatever in an operating room. Were you an operator in a small town it would be different. You are not. You are operating in a city, presumably under license by the authorities, and it is certainly not at all to their credit that you hold a license.

In anticipation of the holiday season, Thomas E. Lawrence and Carey Wilson are rushing to completion their new Criterion Theater to replace the present house with the same name at Rutherford, N. J. The new house will have a seating capacity of 700 and will be devoted to vaudeville and pictures.

CUP PRESENTATION BY THE BISON STOCK CO. TO MR. J. FRED BALSHOFER, AT LOS ANGELES.

Mr. Fred J. Balshofer, General Manager of the Bison Company and Vice President of the New York Motion Picture Company, was tendered the [illegible] recent at a banquet held at [illegible] given by the members of the Bison Company on the evening November 2, 1911. The [illegible] the following engraved inscription: "Presented to Fred J. Balshofer, General Manager by the members of the Bison Motion Picture Company, on the occasion of his birthday, November 2, 1911." J. B. Sharry, Wilfred Lucas, Raymond B. West, Gertrude Astor, Frank Opperman, Alfred Vosburgh, Robert Newhard, Anna Little, Phyllis Gordon, Evelyn Graham, Anna Cappelman, Louis Morrell, Gertrude Hoffman, Paul Hurst, Hobart Bosworth, Howard Davies, George Gebhart, Stanton Heck, William A. Carroll, Marion Brooks, William Quirk, Jay C. Brodie, A. D. Allen, Roy Pedley, Elmer L. Matthew, Arthur Ortego, J. J. Hoar, Edward Wells, Wil [illegible] Morgan, Sally Phipps, Wm. J. Mong, Dave Hilliard, Pat Hartigan, Harry Davis.

Comments on the Films

Licensed.

"APRIL FOOL" (Selig), December 11.—From the opening of this picture, one expects a more or less flat ending, but the audience is completely "taken in" and finds itself most surprisingly fooled. The very flatness of the opening scenes, after the two hall room boys see the offer, made by a paper, of $200 for the best April Fool joke, was necessary and gives to the end an astonishing punch that puts the picture over in fine shape. The boys dress up as women, but no one is likely to recognize them. The men who follow them into the editorial office and the editor whom they ask for protection, doesn't picture amazement when they take off their wigs any more truly than do the spectators.

"THE CHIEF'S DAUGHTER" (Selig), December 11.—A picture with a plot that is very pleasing, although slight; it tells how a friendship between the white women of a settlement and the cherished daughter of a chief was the means of bringing peace out of war. Because of it, the hatchets were buried. Especially beautiful is the devotion of the chief's daughter. She is in the fort. Her tribe is attacking. She proposes to the leader of the settlers that he take her to the top of the wooden palisade and threaten the chief that he will kill her unless peace is made. The natural scenes among which it is set are extremely beautiful. The acting is pleasing. The conduct of the picture is praiseworthy.

"A GIRLISH IMPULSE" (Lubin), December 11.—Lubin art at its best, conduct, setting and acting, makes this picture a pleasing contribution, but one can't help seeing that the scenario behind it is not very strong. Its chief short-coming is the fact that nothing very important is at stake. The girl (Miss Lawrence) had written in a letter to a former lover, with whom she had broken her engagement, because he proved undesirable, that she considered another man "a stuttering, big-eared gawk." But that very man, the stutterer, afterward became her fiancé. The other man, a lightweight villain, tried to make trouble with it, but failed. Aside from this not very vital theme, the picture is very good indeed. It has humor and humanity and a very pleasing atmosphere. Mr. Johnson plays the stuttering man.

"MOLLY PITCHER" (Kalem), December 11.—No one needs to tell frequenters of motion picture halls that this is a military picture of 1776 and Revolutionary times. Its greatest asset is Molly herself, who is a good actress as well as charming to look at. In the first scene she showed herself a better soldier than the wounded actor she displaced at the cannon. Aside from its pretty scenes, including a battle, the picture makes no deep impression. The rescue of Molly's sweetheart, for instance, from the British-Hessian prison, was not at all convincing. As shown, there was no n d of rescuing him; he could have walked out. However, Revolutionary pictures are popular. This will be liked too.

"SAVED FROM HIMSELF" (Biograph), December 11.—A well-acted story for the most part, especially by the man who played the young clerk in the hotel who was saved in temptation by his sweetheart's argument and his mother's prayer. He had been speculating and had lost his all unless he could get $2,000 at once. The money was in the safe. He took it. The girl, a stenographer in the hotel, became suspicious and saved him just in time. It is dramatically pictured and very well set. It is very acceptable.

"WAR" (Vitagraph), December 8.—This stirring picture has been reviewed at length on page 800. Dec. 9 issue.

"TOO MUCH REALISM" (Kalem), December 8.—Considerable life is injected into this picture by a girl who decides to give some motion picture actors a taste of realism that will make their film lively. Accordingly she secures the assistance of a number of other girls. They get themselves up regardless and break into the picture. To on-lookers it seems a part of the drama, but when the manager explains the situation the girls speedily find themselves "on the inside looking out." They are game, though, and decide that it is all a huge joke.

"THE HEART OF NICHETTE" (Edison), December 8.—There is a certain degree of novelty in this picture, although it seems built along the general lines of a Vitagraph story of a clown and small boy. A famous dancer in it takes her ballet to a dingy garret and performs for a fever-crazed child lying upon her pallet of straw. The doctor and the dancer had been interested in each other once, but separated because the dancer would not leave the stage. The sick child was the agency for bringing them together again. The situations are dramatic and there is a certain appeal in the helplessness of the child which touches the heart, even though the one who sees it knows that the scene is only pictured. The players, as soon as they begin the dance, succeed in making it real, through its emotional appeal.

"GETTING EVEN WITH EMILY" (Essanay), December 8.—The husband was set aside for the poodle; he had to sleep on the settle. He retaliates by bringing a goat to the house. The goat makes it so unpleasant for the wife that she shortly recommends that both pets be disposed of. There is fun in it and the audience was in sympathy with it.

"STRAY BULLETS" (Essanay), December 8.—A chase and knock-over picture along formal lines. The irrepressible small boy makes such excellent headway with his rifle, by stray shots through windows, that he seriously disturbs an entire apartment building. The tenants give chase and after some difficulty the boy is captured and what comes to him need not be described. It is probably quite safe to assume that he didn't use his rifle any more in that vicinity.

"THE PLUMBER" (Selig), December 8.—This picture is a delightfully exaggerated illustration of what is commonly attributed to plumbers. A water pipe bursts under Bridget's rolling pin and the day is taken up by the plumber's helper with frivolous matters while on his way and the water constantly grows deeper in the house. Late in the morning the plumber arrives, but has to go back for his tools. The gentleman of the house arrives. The plumber's reception is cordial and warm enough when he comes back.

"A DAY WITH A CIRCUS" (Selig), December 8.—A series of scenes picturing unfamiliar events connected with a large circus. It consists mainly of incidents connected with the daily routine. It is good.

"THE TEAMSTER" (Lubin), December 9.—This picture tells a story of sentiment in which a lowly and despised character loves from a distance and, in a great emergency, does a heroic deed and dies with the kiss of the lady on his lips. It doesn't come up to "Tony, the Greaser" on any count. Its greatest fault is that the woman he asks to kiss him is married and her husband is standing beside. This is not pleasant and no heroism, self-sacrifice or mighty deed of valor on the lowly one's part can sweeten it or make it palatable. It is a military story. The picture is full of men and horses, a troop of the 15th Cavalry.

"THE MAID AT THE HELM" (Selig), December 7.—A sea yarn, in which Mr. Bosworth plays the part of a maniac who gets control of a whaling vessel after its captain has taken most of the crew out in the boats with him to capture a whale. His object was a crazy notion that a girl, whom the ship had picked up from a wreck, would be his if he could get the captain out of the way. He gains control of those left on board at the point of the only gun left on board. The girl, however, outwits him and shoots him and has him locked in the cabin. She then, at the helm, herself steers the ship back to where the captain and crew are in the small boats. It is competently constructed and very well acted. The sea scenes are realistic and very praiseworthy. But the story seems a little brutal. It would have been pleasanter if the part the girl took hadn't been so hard and ruthless. She did what a man ought to have done.

"THE FRONTIER DOCTOR" (Essanay), December 9.—There is a very pleasing child's part in this love story of a widower, a frontier doctor. The child is his daughter and consoles him when he lost the woman who had engaged herself to him. A younger man won her away from him. This man was hurt a little later. The doctor knows that he could have killed him, but cured him nevertheless. His latter theme has been used several times and it isn't pleasing in itself. A new player takes the part of the young woman. She is, herself, pleasing, but does not have a great faculty for the expression that makes a picture effective. Perhaps she has come from the stage where the voice is depended upon and experience will teach her the difference, for she shows intelligence. The doctor and his little girl were put over in fine shape.

"THE DAISY COWBOYS" (Edison), December 9.—This picture exists for the sake of a novel incident from which it takes its name and which comes at the end of the film. The girl from the East captured all the cowboys' hearts, but one of them (Gumption) was more in love than the rest. He asked the girl, by letter, to meet him at the spring. He didn't sign. She was to leave an answer on a plant just outside her window. She wrote that she would be at the spring and directed her unknown admirer to wear a daisy. Two of the boys got it by mistake. All the boys came with daisies, except Gumption, who sat in sorrow, contemplating suicide. She escaped from the others and found him and consoled him. The best scenes in the pictures are lovely. There are two in which the lighting is very pretty indeed; one is the light through a window, the other fire light.

"IMPORTANT SCENES IN PARIS" (Gaumont), December 9.—These tinted pictures of boulevards, buildings and streets and of the Seine are very acceptable.

"CAMOENS" (Gaumont), December 9.—A beautifully painted picture, with a romantic story about a man named Camoens, who wrote poems. This man is shown to be a Portugese and the picture shows him as living and dying in Lisbon about the time of the great epic poet Camoens, but the hard-luck story of this man is not very similar to the hard-luck story of the great Camoens, adventurer, soldier and poet. It is not historical, but it is interesting.

"ONE TOUCH OF NATURE" (Vitagraph), December 11.—"And a Little Child Shall Lead Them," is the theme of this picture. After separation, because of a marriage of their son and daughter, which was objected to because of differences in religion, the two elder men are brought together again by seeing the little grandchild. The remainder of the story details the difficulties and misunderstandings which brought about the estrangement. The reunion and the grandchild are the important features and are properly emphasized.

"THE FIRST MAN" (Essanay), December 12.—A comedy built of improbabilities, but pleasing because it is not permitted to drag; the players are pleasant and intelligent and the photography good. The girl, by her father's will, had to be kept secluded and away from all men until she was of age. Two maiden aunts saw to her bringing up. The story got about and a reporter was sent to write her up. He managed to get the interview and was "the first man" she had ever met. He proved was a very shrewd one, but Cupid seems to have made good use of it. A sentiment accident at the gate brings the man back to the house as an invited fellow guest, whom the two aunts cannot turn away. Love knows no bars. The girl was eighteen, she supposed she had to wait until she was twenty-one before she came of age, but the young man taught her and the aunts that this wasn't necessary.

"BUCKSKIN JACK, THE EARL OF GLENMORE" (Edison), December [illegible]. The backgrounds of this romantic story are happily in keeping. It contains some exquisite scenes and pictures around a magnificent dwelling which passes very well as the home of the Earl of Glenmore. It is not a very convincing story as conducted, but there is a sterling quality in it; it is like a good apple with a knotty coat. The earl was "discovered." He was a cowboy and was flabbergasted when he learned that he was the earl and had three cousins to look after. He appears at the ancestral home. He is dressed in a dignified way, but as a cowboy. He wore a soft hat, frock coat, flowing tie, boots and a revolver. The English girls and men didn't like his manners, which was strange, seeing he was an earl. The old English butler seemed also to show contempt for his manners, which was still stranger. He, although greatly misunderstood, manages to save one of his distant cousins from a bad man. She sees through it in time and with her sister tries to make up. At the end, the sister and the earl seem to be in love.

"A ROMANCE OF THE RIO GRANDE" (Selig), December 12.—About the only weakness of this well-ridden Western romance is the confusing looseness of its beginning. Care wasn't taken to set the characters out in their proper, unmistakable places, so that we might know who they were and where they belonged. It is a chase and rescue picture. The girl is the daughter of a settler passing through the country in a prairie schooner. The danger comes from Indians and the rescuers are cowboys, led by the hero, who has fallen in love with the girl. The picture's quality comes from well-photographed, desert scenes and Rio Grande scenes, and also from good riding and a well-managed accident to the prairie schooner. It also has a conventional Indian fight around the overturned wagon.

"ARABIAN CUSTOMS" (Gaumont), December 12.—A very welcome picture. The Arabs are in the public eye just at present. They are a primitive people, far behind Europeans in civilization. One would take these scenes of Arabian life as biblical pictures. It is very well colored.

"HEROISM" (Gaumont), December 12.—While not artistic in any strict sense, this slight picture of a human story is effective, because it shows human emotions truthfully. The external events pictured are not convincing, but that doesn't matter greatly. The father of a French family has two sons. One had just come back from Africa with a wound and a medal of honor. The younger brother felt a little jealous, but later a fire breaks out. The younger son risks his life to save a woman and is badly injured. An officer who has witnessed it decorates him before he dies.

"THE MILITARY AIR SCOUT" (Vitagraph), December 12.—This picture furnishes a new thrill and gets it over with remarkable effect. It shows an airship sailing out over a fleet. Then, through binoculars, we see what the air scout did to the fleet; we see angry, dynamite-lashed waters and the hostile ships go down. It isn't realistic; it didn't need to be. But it makes the audience think it dreams. A slight, but very acceptable love story sets this incident off and gives it a place in life. It surely is a picture worth seeing.

"LOVE'S LABOR LOST" (Lubin), December [illegible]. Is a modern comedy that is not very amusing. The audience looked at it in silence except at two instances, when a messenger in a hurry slipped skilfully while going down some steps, and again when the same man took a plainly premeditated header down a bank. It was conducted with not much skill, but there are some very pretty pictorial effects in it. Two men chance to meet at the same girl's. They quarrel; the girl leaves the room; the maid brings their hats. Each at his own club excites much sympathy. A challenge is accepted; about ten men in tile hats arrive at the dueling place, but none among them knows how to conduct a duel, so they toss up to see who shall choose the weapons. This gives time for the messenger from the girl to arrive with the news that she is going to marry a third man. The way the girl got news of the duel was not at all realistic; it hardly could have happened as shown.

"THE LONG STRIKE" (Essanay), December 7.—The opening scene of this picture, an immense factory on Chicago's water front, gave promise of big things that wasn't fulfilled. It is a strike melodrama and it was conducted and acted according to old-fashioned standards, which kept it from being very effective. It also has peculiarities that weaken it. The hero, son of the president of the company and sent to the scene by his father to handle the expected strike, had to ask the heroine, who was on her way with her father's pail, how to get to the works; he carried the pail for her as they walked ahead. This man's course all through the story is more or less unconvincing and in the end he is discredited. The girl went back to her old lover and gave him the cold shoulder after she had got his father to go over his head and end the strike. The object of such a melodrama is to demonstrate that love is stronger than all other ties, and to show the complicated and winding path it has to take to accomplish its ends amid the forces that a strike sets going. It ought not to be hard to do this. But the threads of such a picture must be [illegible] we find it unsubstantial.

"THE FAILURE" (Biograph), December 7.—The failure do not always make a success, however. Where the two are man and woman, but they must unwittingly put under a handicap of this picture. This fact is [illegible] at failure is [illegible] from the first. It has a far more human and [illegible] way of regarding it. The picture has the same very fault, as in part its oldest gags, is highly commendable. But, after the situation has been stated, it becomes a bit obscure for a few scenes. It seemed unnecessarily timid in stating the reason for the hero and heroine's being found at the dance hall. The man seemed to be making what he could by singing there; she seemed to be there with other street girls. He had been a failure, losing job after job, until his sweetheart gave him up. She, it seems, had been deserted by a man and [illegible]. The player who portrayed the scene, creditable from every point of view, did remarkably well. The failures meet at the dance hall. A human heart leads the girl to encourage the man; but he is always failing. He gets a chance to break away from the city and make good on a farm, but has no car fare. She pawns her rings for him. He won't accept the money from the street girl. By a ruse, she manages to make him take the money. At first it seems as though he were about to go away toward the light and leave her there in darkness; but the ending is very good.

"MR AND MRS SUSPICIOUS" (Lubin), December [illegible]. Each suspected the other and each determined to assume a disguise and follow the suspected party. He put on a woman's dress. She donned man's apparel. A highwayman held her up, suggesting her to be a man. A [illegible] woman rushed to the victim's assistance and administered such telling blows that the robber was only too glad to retreat. The woman picked up the insensible man and hurried to a nearby cafe. There mutual recognition occurred. Mr. Suspicious picked up his wife and hurried home, where mutual explanations resulted in mutual forgiveness.

"QUICK! A PLUMBER" (Lubin), December [illegible]. A comedy on the rough and tumble order. The gentleman in driving a nail to hang a picture punctures a waterpipe in the partition. His wild, but vain attempts to stop the stream are funny. Then away he rushes for a plumber. On his way back he oversets everything and everybody in his path. The kitchen has become a lake in which the cook is wading, vainly endeavoring to stop the flood. Eventually the plumber arrives. Without an iota of excitement or disturbance he turns off the water and the excitement and flood subside together.

"THE VENTRILOQUIST'S TRUNK" (Vitagraph), December 13.—A comedy in which a traveling ventriloquist and his puppets play important parts. The boarders at the hotel pretend to suspect something and so frighten the professor that he drops his trunk from the window and it hits the constable in its fall. He manages to get it loaded into a passing wagon and they drive away at breakneck speed. The scatteration process begins, and ultimately the trunk follows the miscellaneous articles. The professor is forced to open his trunk and discloses his puppets, whereupon there are fainting spells and other amusing difficulties to close a very lively film.

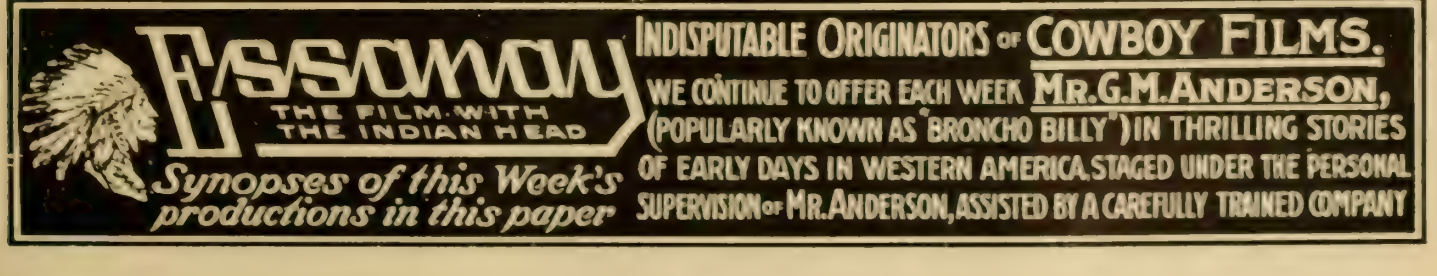
"THE FLOWER GIRL OF LAS PALMAS" (Pathe), December 13.—A story of love and jealousy. A Mexican living apart from his wife falls in love with a flower girl. [illegible] and his own wife appears to join in the fracas. However, the flower girl herself succeeds in effecting a reconciliation and all seems well.

"THE TRAGEDY OF OLD AGE" (Eclipse), December 13.—The turning of this old man out because his days of usefulness are over is a disagreeable beginning. When the child looks for and finds him, eyes become suspiciously moist. And when he has rescued the child from danger the audience is ready to applaud the family's decision to take him back and give him a good home.

"HARBOR OF MARSEILLES, FRANCE" (Eclipse), December 13.—A series of views giving an excellent impression of the great harbor and its manifold shipping. Other important points of interest, like Château d'If, the prison of the Count of Monte Cristo, are shown. The photography is admirable.

"ESKIMOS IN LABRADOR" (Edison), December 12.—The first scene is desolate enough. It is a mission station and bears the highly euphonious name of Hopedale. Following this are various scenes in Eskimo life, including a family at their meal. The close is an Eskimo woman in full dress and exhibits with considerable accuracy the details of Eskimo full dress. The contrast with women of our own country is startling.

Much apprehension is being felt over the sudden disappearance of citizen F. P. Shaw, of Los Angeles, Cal. He was principal of the How-to-become-a-moving-picture-actor school and succeeded nicely for three weeks, with a popular $10 course of three weeks training. When last seen he was leaving his office to deposit a satchel full of money. Foul play is suspected.



ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON,
(POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES
OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL
SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

Independent.

"ONLY AN ICEMAN" (Nestor), December 11.—A little, heart interest romance, full of pleasant comedy and as delightful human nature. It tells how John Mayfield, rich man and weary of idleness, took a job as iceman for the fun there was in it. He mistook for a cook a daughter of a fairly well-to-do family and fell in love with her. She mistook him for an iceman, yet fell in love with him. John got fired at the end of the first day; he had given away too much ice. He had to buy the wagon in order to see Miss Violet again. Her mamma discovered him courting her and he had to become the rich Mr. Mayfield to win his bride. It is very pleasing indeed. There are good photographs of interesting and very pretty scenes and there is good acting.

"THE LAW OF THE RANGE" (Nestor), December 13.—It might have been called "A Kindness Returned," for the despised half-breed, who was cared for by the hero, was later the means of saving his benefactor from suspicion of being a highwayman and after no slight exhibition of heroism. The picture is filled with struggles of all kinds. There is a chase by a hard-riding posse; there are two wrestling matches in which men grapple for a pistol and an attack by a posse on a hut in which the innocent hero had taken refuge. There is also a good hold-up scene in it. The story is interesting, but the photographs are not very good.

"IN THE EARLY DAYS" (Nestor), December 16.—A melodrama along shop-worn lines and played simply to get the situation over. The Indians attack a stage in which are a mother and two children. The mother, wounded in the head, loses her memory. She jumps from the stage and is lost with her baby. The father, who is waiting, is told the news. Fourteen years later there's a chance meeting and a mutual recognition.

"MUTT AND JEFF MAKE THE FEATHERS FLY" (Nestor), December 16.—On the same reel with the above is this last installment of the Mutt and Jeff series; it is the end of them. They have been much more funny than in this picture; yet it has something of the quality common to the others. Mutt stole a chicken and Jeff ate it and then Mutt got arrested.

"THE MAN-HUNT" (American), December 11.—With odds five to one against him, the fugitive makes a safe escape from the posse following on horses and shooting; but the country is very rocky. The hunted man is hidden by the heroine, who makes him swear to lead a straight life. A year later, this fugitive, now a sheriff, saves the girl, who is very romantic, from eloping with an outlaw. The picture has the usual stirring action, the same grand backgrounds and is fairly well acted. But although there is some novelty in the situation, it doesn't bite very deeply into life. It is undoubtedly interesting.

"MOBILIZATION OF THE PACIFIC FLEET AT SAN DIEGO" (American), December 14.—At the same time that the Atlantic fleet gathered recently on the Hudson, at New York City, the Pacific fleet gathered at San Diego, California. The "American" Company has furnished us with very good views of the big ships, one by one, and of the fleet as a whole.

"SANTA CATALINA, THE MAGIC ISLE OF THE PACIFIC" (American), December 14.—Besides showing many interesting views of the famous island resort, the picture has some marvelous views of submarine plants and also some good pictures of seals. The film has been reviewed on page 729 and needs no further notice here.

"THE LOGGING INDUSTRY OF THE NORTHWEST" (Rex), December 14.—Extremely beautiful pictures of forest life in logging camps. It shows lumbermen who work with marvelous skill, in felling immense trees. It shows how the logs are handled. It has pictures of a forest fire, and closes with scenes where lumber-jacks are enjoying what is called "burling," making some great log turn in the water under their feet. A team of six men make one log spin.

"BILL AND HIS CHUM TIRE OF MARRIED LIFE" (Lux), December 15.—Bill is shown as occupying one apartment with his wife; his chum's apartment is on the other side of the wall. Both are tired of married life. Both try to drown and then help each other out. They also try other means of shuffling off this mortal soil, but take good care that no harm comes to them. Their wives have grown anxious and swear to be kinder. There is amusement in all of it.

"MISTAKEN FOR THE CULPRIT" (Lux), December 15.—A comedy of errors, in which red paint is thought to be blood and an artist is accused of murdering himself. He got red paint on his shirt and went in swimming, leaving his clothes on shore where a tramp stole all but shirt and shoes. The shirt was found, and the artist, dressed from a cornfield hat rack, accused of murdering the artist. The tramp later is also arrested. He had taken a retainer to paint a portrait, and then skipped. The artist confronts the tramp and all is cleared.

"THE LITTLE STOCKING" (Imp), December 14.—Baby's little stocking got among her father's things when he was packing to go out to the gold fields. He found it and wrote promising to bring it back filled with gold. He and his partner are lost in the desert. He dies; his partner is saved. He tells the story of the little stocking to the boys in the saloon, and they almost fill it with nuggets and send the partner to the East to deliver it to the widow. She has become very poor; the landlord demands the rent, which she can't pay. Outside, the snow on the trees, seen through the window, tells us that it is winter. The partner arrives the day before Christmas and peeping through the window, sees the situation and goes to get Christmas toys. The woman is being dispossessed when he returns with a big basket full of playthings for the little girl. It is a Christmas picture that will please, and probably please highly.

"JUST IN TIME FOR DINNER" (Comet), December 15.—An unusually good and realistic picture of a leave-taking of a soldier from his family is given in the first part of this picture, when Captain Bartlett starts for Cuba. It is not, however, a war picture, but a human and heart-touching picture of village life. The characters are well contrasted and clearly brought out. The picture shows technical skill, care and wisdom, and the scenes [illegible] and very pretty. The captain, before leaving, paid off the mortgage on the farm and trusted the lawyer to deliver the papers to his wife. News comes that the captain has been killed. The lawyer burns the papers, but falls in love with the supposed widow. The family are in dufficulties. The captain returns just at Christmas to confound the law shark. It is not a perfect picture, but commendable as very interesting and pleasing.

"THE UPS AND DOWNS OF RAFFERTY" (Comet), December 11.—Rafferty was a hod carrier, but loses his job in the first scene. He then becomes a barkeeper, shows that he knows the business, but is arrested for "tapping the till." A political friend gets him out of the scrape and makes him a policeman. He lets a burglar "put one over on him" and has to go back to his bricks and mortar. There is both human nature and fun it it. It is a very fair light comedy.

"FOOTBALL GAME," Carlyle Indians vs. Johns Hopkins (Comet), December 11.—Some of the exciting moments in the game are shown; but it is hard to distinguish the players or to get much idea of the progress of the game. Morton's brilliant run and touch-down are shown, however.

"BUNGALOW BURGLARS" (Imp), December 16.—Bungalows are usually a long way from the station. Mr. Ford had invited a man friend to spend the holidays in his bungalow. He came, missed the automobile and had to walk, consequently looked disheartened, far more so than he need have looked. Mrs. Ford had invited a girl friend. She caught the car and was there when the man arrived; but both the Fords were away. Each of the friends suppose the other to be a burglar. Both act very suspiciously in the sight of the other. When the Fords come the misunderstanding is cleared. There is a good deal of amusement in the situation and the picture seems to make the best of it.

"BILLY'S SEANCE" (Imp), December 16.—A very funny picture. Billy becomes interested in spiritualism and is enthusiastic enough to study it openly at the club. The boys play a trick on him. To get even, he employs the electrician to help him make an electrical connection with the table. He then gets his friends to put forth their hands on it and gives his accomplice the sign. The camera then speeds up and the antics of the electrified friends are very amusing. Two policemen attempt to arrest Billy. When last seen, they, too, were under control.

"WHY THE CHECK WAS GOOD" (Imp), December 11.—The story explaining why the check was good was told by a business man to a bank president. The business man's name was on it, but it looked like a forgery. The poor old man who had presented it was kept waiting and the signer was asked to come to the bank. He found an old friend and benefactor in the old man and after he had had the teller cash the check, he tells the story. It is a very human and interesting story and, for the most part, is clear and well drawn. Just why the check came into being was not clear to his reviewer. The maker of it had been, it seems, the business man's father, of same name perhaps, and had handed it to his son when he cast him adrift for playing pool. The son went through a year of very hard luck, but never cashed the check. He was caught stealing by a shoe man, who when he heard his story clothed and fed him. Before he left the shoe man, he slipped the check in his pocket. He became a successful man. The shoe man became very poor. At length, remembering the check, he changed it in some way and tried to cash it in. This brought the business man to the bank where he meets his old friend. There is something about the check not explained, but enough is told to be interesting.

"BAR Z'S NEW COOK" (Bison), December 12.—A comedy, formal in outline, but with some freshness in its conduct. The early scenes, both as to the sets and the business, were so like a recent Bison picture that opens with the same situation, a drunken Chinese cook, that the reviewer was under the impression that he had already seen the picture. After the foreman started out to find a new cook, the situation took a new turn. A pretty young woman (Miss Grandin, a new Bison surprise, plays the part) after a quarrel with her husband is shown looking for a job in an intelligence office. The foreman engages her and takes her to the ranch. The boys get a glimpse of her and all rush to tidy up. She is embarrassed, and decidedly over-seasons the stew, about a pound of pepper went into it. One of her admirers makes the outfit eat their grub at the pistol's point, whether they like it or not. They then hurry out to Dr. Green's. The boss had to eat his grub with the others. He wanted to fire the new cook, but the boys wouldn't have it. Meanwhile, the girl's husband has learned her whereabouts and arrives at the ranch after supper, when the whole crowd is out singing. When she runs to her husband's arms, there's a sorry looking bunch of punchers. At the end they sing "No Wedding Bells." It's a good comedy, but Bison has done better.

"DEACON DEBBS" (Thanhouser), December 15.—The situation developed here has been seen once or twice before; but there's enough freshness in it to keep it alive, as a picture if not as a comic story. Besides, there's a good series of views of the recent Coney Island carnival included, and they are very interesting. Deacon Debbs was Jack's uncle. He was on his way to pay Jack and his wife a visit. Mother had wired ahead to let them know and had told them to give him a good time. When the telegram came there was a great hiding of decanters and cigars. Poor Deacon Debbs had a dull time. They took him to a lecture on "The Esoteric Nature of Prehistoric Fish" and then, by a ruse, slipped away to the Merry Isle for a lark. Uncle wrote a note, after he had packed his grip, telling them that he was going to leave his money to some one who would know how to spend it. As he was slipping out, he came on Jack having a quiet drink and smoke and relieved him of cigar and glass. Then he began to enjoy himself. There's fun it it, but it isn't the best comedy Thanhouser has turned out.

"THE LADY FROM THE SEA" (Thanhouser), December 12.—This picture was reviewed at length on page 705; it needs no further comment here.

"THE MARQUIS OF LANTENAC" (Ambrosio), December 13.—A story of the royalist uprising known as the Vendee of Brittany. It was just after the French Revolution. The republicans offered a large reward for the marquis, the leader of the royalist band. The royalists make a dash and capture three republican children. They retreat to a tower, but are surrounded. The children are offered for the life of the band, but the offer is refused. The royalists find a secret passage out, but leave the children to be burned. The marquis with fine noblesse oblige risks and loses his liberty to free the children. The story is well told and very romantic. It will be acceptable.

"LAUNCHING OF TWO ITALIAN TORPEDO BOATS" (Ambrosio), December 11.—A film that shows the preliminaries and ceremonies at the launching of these modern battleships. It is a very commonplace affair indeed.

"THE MUSICIAN'S DAUGHTER" (Eclair), American), December 11.—The old musician and teacher is seen. Before it was prepared by tragedy very poor. Lost fortune, his great work was pirated by unscrupulous publishers, wife died. The daughter inherits the music of composers, but the old man has lost his talent and has been taken to the asylum. The daughter has to carry the burden and to the sacred library and also becomes a big-hatted person. But one of her pupils endears her to the audience. Her struggle was a real one and very true. Her father got well and gave her his blessing. The audience seems to have taken to the story and the characters and loses the impression created now and then. The scenic settings gave the audience an opportunity to see the old musician's home. Also the abstract was good and not to be believed, but was not clear and complete.

"HER ONE DAY'S DREAM—SCENES FROM JAPANESE LIFE" (Eclair, Japan), December 14.—This unusually entertaining and instructive picture, posed in Japan by Japanese players, tells the story of a Japanese woman's brief joy for one day, between a Japanese girl, she was married, and a French painter. The girl's husband saves the painter's life by stabbing the tiger. The dramatic element is all right. The girl is devoted to her husband, however, as other part can be very trying and consume usually in a theatrical big hand.

"TICKLE BRIDGET" (Vitagraph), December 14.—A farce in which a drunken cook is left a fortune. She is courted by three rivals, one a French count, who challenges the others. They capture the count and it might have gone hard with him if the third man had suspected the second. The duel really takes place in Bridget's parlor and the count wins the blushing bride. It, except the ending incident, isn't very original and the first part isn't pleasant. There is some good comedy in the ending scene; but the whole situation was framed only as a farce.

"GREECE" (Gaumont Natural), December 16.—Very interesting views of the classic land of Greece. A few more "leaders" telling the names of places shown would have helped. As it is, it needs a lecturer to make it understood. But the pictures will surely be appreciated and it is very commendable.

"HIS FIRST MONOCLE" (Great Northern), December 16.—A comedy and is all it claims to be and is well carried. The young dandy wanted to appear distinguished but his first effort made him insufferable and he had to glue the monocle on. The consequence was that one eye was closed tight and he couldn't see out of the other. At an afternoon reception, he caused much amusement by his blunders. It is very laughable.

"THE TRAITOR ON THE STAFF" (Champion), December 11.—A war [illegible] but it offers great temptations to those who like to guy pictures.

"THE TAMING OF DAN" (Lubin), December [illegible] saving; he was an ugly brute. He was maltreating one of the ranch horses when the owner's daughter [illegible] later, to get even with her, he captured her while out in the lonely woods, and made her go a long distance with him. They [illegible] and the girl begins to pray. A man [illegible] member his mother and converted him. The leader says that the wolf became a wife a very strong pack he was. Lubin and the boys rescued the girl and [illegible]. They had the two interesting and [illegible]. But to [illegible] the girl's [illegible] probably be guyed in some localities. Yet it has interest.

"A LITTLE CHAPERON" (Pathe), December [illegible] weak points, like the letter incident, this is a very pleasing comedy. One of its strongest points is the [illegible] The little chaperon herself is especially pleasing. She got [illegible] first-class [illegible] although the producer's directions to her [illegible] her efforts at times. A burglar still in [illegible] She was a [illegible] the little [illegible] so the young people [illegible] that [illegible] left the [illegible] for a minute and the [illegible] the young man.

"A GLIMPSE OF GENOA, ITALY" (Gaumont), December [illegible] picture of a [illegible] It is one of the [illegible] interesting drawings this [illegible] but the [illegible] some of the views are crinkly.

"THE FOREMAN'S COURAGE" (Essanay), December 11.—In the Western, after the often-approved formula, Dick, the foreman, was the sweetheart of Hazel, the bandit's sister. Dick was at her house when the bandit [illegible] the bandit's duster and rode away. The sheriff saw the duster and followed. This gave the bandit a chance to escape. It is not long before the sheriff brings down the foreman and they ride back, past the bandit's cabin, where the girl is able to supply evidence that exonerates her lover. Later, there's a Western wedding. Bob was there in disguise. The picture has no particular strength; parts of it are interesting, but it is not always kept absolutely clear.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

[Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY—A-1 operator, five years' experience; sober and reliable; can furnish references. W. K. RICHARDS, 807 Cherry St., Findlay, Ohio.

FIRST-CLASS DEVELOPER, several years' experience on rack system, and foreman over two years of the developing department, wants position. Address letters, EDGAR MITCHELL, Gen. Del., Passyunk Station, Philadelphia, Pa.

COMPETENT OPERATOR desires position anywhere outside of Greater New York. $12.00. Have had experience all makes machines. OPERATOR, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

LICENSED OPERATOR willing to go out of town. Capable and reliable. EDWARD SCHWARTZ, 811 East 35th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

If you want a manager who will increase the box-office receipts, one who isn't afraid of work, a booking machine man, one with plenty of ideas and pass them every day and can furnish the best of references and will go any place on earth, address D. E. S., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

CHARACTER SINGER. Week engagement on northwest side of Chicago only. Reasonable and investigate. Address B. B., care Moving Picture World, Chicago, Ill.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Picture and vaudeville theater seating 1,200, ground floor. City 40,000. Will sell whole or partners. MANAGER, Happyland, Auburn, N. Y.

Moving Picture Theater Agency List
Box 485, Madison Square P. O., New York City.

Lot 4-a.—Southern California, new theater in 1,500 population, together with two houses one block from theater. $8,000.

LOT 7-a.—Connecticut, a bargain to quick buyer, will stand fullest investigation. Capacity 468, rare chance. $3,500.

LOT 13-a.—Indiana, house new and strictly fireproof, best ventilation and equipment possible. 368 seats. Cheap for prompt action.

Lot 15-a—Kansas, exceptionally fine house, running 540. Equipment best that money can buy and appointments first class in every respect. $12,000.

Lot 29-a.—Northern New Jersey, house that has lacked proper management, can be improved, little opposition. $3,500.

LOT 30-a.—New York, capacity 600. Population 35,000. Cost $19,000 to build. 50x100. Within easy distance New York City. Ten years' lease $10,000, or can buy out property within three years for $9,000 additional.

Do you want to buy, sell or rent a moving picture theater anywhere? Address, MOVING PICTURE THEATER AGENCY, Box 485, Madison Square P. O., New York City.

FOR IMMEDIATE SALE.—$16,000 buys the best line of motion picture houses in Illinois. For full information, address, E. M. B., care Moving Picture World, Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE.—Moving Picture Theater, 250 opera chairs, two machines, piano, newly decorated and painted. City 30,000. Doing good business. E. & D., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

FOR SALE.—Moving Picture Show in Indiana town of 1,200, seats one hundred, standard equipment, everything in good condition; reasons for selling, other business; right place for man with time. Price [illegible]. Write for particulars. A. L., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

HALL FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Hall 35 x 70, with good stage and anterooms. Seating capacity about 400. In live town of 45,000 near Boston. Suitable for moving picture theater. Address, T. W. CARTER, 40 Kilby St., Boston, Mass.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE OR EXCHANGE—Complete moving picture machine outfit. Never been used. What do you offer or what have you for a trade. L. WORDEN, 52 Cedar Street, Oshkosh, Wis.

FOR SALE—Moving picture machine outfit, cheap. Write quick. Machine is complete and was used only a week. L. WORDEN, 52 Cedar Street, Oshkosh, Wis.

FOR SALE—1 Standard Automatic Moving Picture [illegible] Write for particulars. L. F., care Moving Picture World, New York City.

THEATERS WANTED.

Moving Picture Theater Agency List
P. O. Box 485, Madison Square, New York City.

WANTED—Picture theater in Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas or Oklahoma. Seating not less than 700, prefer 1,000. Refer No. 1-w.

WANTED—Picture theater, no vaudeville, 299 seats, Greater New York, full particulars. Refer No. 2-w.

WANTED—Picture theater in Middle West, must be paying proposition. Refer No. 3-w.

WANTED—Picture house, central Georgia, vicinity of Pensacola, Fla., or Los Angeles or vicinity. Must be paying. Refer No. 4-w.

Do you want to buy, sell or rent a moving picture theater anywhere? Address, MOVING PICTURE THEATER AGENCY, Box 485, Madison Square P. O., New York City.

MISCELLANEOUS

WANTED to [illegible] in the Middle West. Also some singers and singers wanted. Write. PRINCESS THEATER CIRCUIT CO., INC., St. Cloud, Minn.

WANTED—[illegible] Announcement," "Good Night" and "Hats Off" film. Must be [illegible]. Also some good [illegible] PEERLESS MOVING PICTURE THEATER Supply [illegible], N. Y.

FREE—[illegible] Will [illegible] Our address. You need [illegible] to patrons. No hitch. [illegible] Address E. B., care Moving Picture World, Chicago, Ill.

WANTED—[illegible] Moving Picture Theaters to [illegible] LOUDSPEAKING PANE RESISTING PANEL BOARD for [illegible]. Must [illegible] CHARLES S. BROWN & COMPANY, [illegible] Pearl St., Jersey, Mass.

EXCHANGE—[illegible] W. J. CREED, Southampton, L. I., N. Y.

FOR SALE.—Feature film attraction, reels, lithos, [illegible] OTTO [illegible].

GOLD MINE FOR SALE—[illegible] Two reels. Posters (exclusive state right). Latest creation. Virgin territory. LESLIE PERRING, Abilene, Kansas.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"THE LITTLE STOCKING" (Imp).

Following their usual custom, the Imp Company are going to make a little Christmas present to the trade and incidentally the public. To that end they have prepared a unique and original Christmas story entitled "The Little Stocking." A word of credit is due the Imp Company for the extra pains taken with this Christmas release, for it is quite evident that they have concentrated their best efforts to make a picture far above the usual run of Imps. It is the best Imp Christmas story that we have ever seen. The story itself is original and entirely out of conventional lines. It tells a story of family separation that ends in eleventh-hour happiness on the day before Christmas. Some of the scenes are laid in the West and there are portrayals of rugged manliness that will appeal to all hearts.

As the story opens, an Eastern man in straitened circumstances is bidding good-bye to his wife and little daughter on the day of his departure for the West to seek his fortune among the gold fields. In his valise is a pair of white stockings intended as a present for the little girl. He bids her put them on; but before one stocking has been put on by the little girl he hears the whistle of the train and departs hastily, carrying the other white stocking away with him in his valise.

Scene from "The Little Stocking" (Imp).

We see him next upon his arrival at the Western camp where he forms a partnership with one of the miners and they share a cabin together. In unpacking his grip he comes across the little white stocking and laughingly explains to his partner how he came away from home with it in his grip. The Easterner then writes a letter to his wife saying that he has discovered the white stocking among his effects and that some day he will return it, but only when he is able to bring it back filled with golden nuggets. The two partners start out to prospect and soon come to the edge of the great American desert where a sign-board warns them to be plentifully supplied with water before starting across. The men continue on their journey through the desert, but before they get across their water supply runs out and their suffering is intense. They are finally reduced to a hopeless condition for lack of water and fall perishing upon the sands. A party on horseback finds them there, scarcely alive. The Eastern man soon dies, but his partner is revived and taken back to the camp where in time he recovers.

Christmas is drawing near and there comes a letter from the East, telling a tale of destitution and begging for assistance from a hand that is now dead. In going through the effects of his unfortunate partner, the honest, rugged Western miner comes across a letter referring to the little stocking and remembers what his dead partner wrote about its being some day filled with gold. Acting upon the thought the good man gets the little stocking and goes with it to the camp saloon where the miners are enjoying themselves. There he tells to these rough men the story of his partner's game, but luckless struggle with fate, reading them also the letter of appeal from the East. Upon his suggestion the miners stuff golden nuggests into the little stocking until it is filled. With the stocking in his possession the miner takes a train for the East arriving there just in time to save his partner's wife from eviction on Christmas day.

The Western scenes are particularly well selected. The story is strong and the acting is unusually good. That it will fulfill its mission as a Christmas picture there can be no doubt.

"THE TENDERFOOT FOREMAN" (Essanay).

Edna Fisher, the charming little leading lady with the Essanay Western players, is now well on the road to recovery and will again soon be seen in the Essanay productions.

Just prior to the making of Broncho Billy's Christmas dinner, in which she was thrown from a stage-coach, Mr. Anderson had just completed "The Tenderfoot Foreman," a rousing cowboy drama, in which he and Miss Fisher appear in the principal parts. The story is characteristic of the best of Mr. Anderson's work and with the capable Miss Fisher is sure to be a hit.

The story tells of a young Western woman, daughter of a ranchman, who has just died and who has just made the request in his will that she do not attempt actual management of her estate. However, Jane (Miss Fisher) feels thoroughly capable to run the big "Double K" and refuses to heed her lawyer's advice that she turn the ranch over to the management of a capable ranch foreman.

A week as proprietress however, finds her feeling certain vague regrets that she had not heeded her father's and her lawyer's advices. The boys of the "Double K" are a rather bad lot and under the supervision of Buck Bradley, a surly puncher, take her instructions grumblingly and perform their duties with a carelessness and indifference born of their dislike of taking their instructions from a woman.

Argument or kindly treatment of her "boys" prove of no avail. On the other hand their grumblings increase. Dissatisfied with the food at their meals they grouchily leave the table with the food half untasted or roar out their displeasure to Sally, the kitchen maid. One day, Jane, herself, enters the dining room to get at the bottom of the thing. Buck Bradley, bullyingly thrusts a plate of meat and the coffee pot at her and tells her that that sort "of stuff ain't fit fer hard-workin' men." The perfectly good food is left on the table and the boys, muttering threats against her, leave the room.

Jane is in a quandary what to do. She must have another foreman and finally resolves to secure a new manager and advertises for one.

A few days later the advertisement is answered. The applicant, dressed in the "store clothes" of a tenderfoot, appears and makes known his desire to be her foreman. She looks at him for a moment and laughs.

"But you are a tenderfoot and these men are rough," she explains.

"Just give me the chance," laughs Jack Reed (G. M. Anderson).

So, rather doubtfully, Jack is employed. He straightway makes it plain that he means business when one of Buck's lanky cowboys gruffly addresses Jane. Jack seizes the man's hat, pulls it from his head and reminds him that he is in the presence of a lady. The cowboy starts for his gun, but a clean uppercut from Jack lays him sprawling on the ground. The whipped bully picks himself up and muttering a threat slips away. The girl looks at her new foreman admiringly, but with an anxious look in her eyes.

"You'd better come in the house and get my daddy's .44," she says, "I'm afraid you're going to need it."

It is an hour later that Jack, now in the proper outfit, and wearing "artillery," is visited by a committee of puncher's headed by Buck Bradley. The conversation is short but to the point.

"Anyhow," Buck concludes, "don't yuh come to dinner, fer if yuh do yuh'll eat bullets."

The serious thing happens when Jack, in self defense, shoots Buck Bradley. The band of bullies, with their leader now decapitated, plan to waylay Jack and get even. He is easily led into the trap, a rope is thrown about his neck and he is appointed to make his peace with his Maker in mighty short order.

Jane, in the meantime, has learned of the threatening lynching and has ridden for the sheriff. On the return the girl enters the house, after having directed the sheriff and his men to the probable scene of the lynching, and falls on her knees and prays for the life of her hero-foreman.

Twenty dreary minutes creep by like twenty years to the girl, when the door bursts open and Jack appears on the threshold.

"It's all right, girlie," he cries, "I was freed." And Jane, with a cry of delight, runs to his arms.

"LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD" (Majestic).

Sheer merit compels us to again notice the product of the Majestic Motion Picture Company. This time it is the "Little Red Riding Hood" picture released by that company this week. The story is familiar to all. Mary Pickford is a delightful "Red Riding Hood" and all the other parts are well cast, even the wolf who, in this instance, was a most intelligent dog and gave a better representation of the part than could possibly have been given by a masquerade wolf.

Scene from "Little Red Riding Hood" (Majestic).

Most notable in this picture are the beautiful views obtained. The picture was taken on the estate owned by Ernest Thompson Seton at Cos Cob, Conn. Some of the scenes are entrancing and the photographic effects are unusually lovely.

This picture will delight the hearts of Independent exhibitors, who will appreciate the good photoplay and good acting the Majestic Company is giving them.

"TAMING A HUSBAND" (Majestic).

If Independent exhibitors are looking for good comedy, they will find it in the releases of the Majestic Company. One scheduled for early release is entitled "Taming a Husband" and is quite as wholesome as the most prudish could desire, while it is full of fun and laughs. Hubby finds fault with his wife's cooking and tells her to go and learn how from his mother. She goes and, with mother's assistance, puts up a job on hubby. What the wife and mother cook up for his lunch would never find a place in Mrs. Rorer's cook book. Hubby chases them both off to the matinee and tries to cook something fit to eat, but is not a success. Then he remembers that his stenographer claims to be a good cook, so he calls her in and, between them, a good dinner is prepared in time for the return of the wife and mother, who compliment him on his ability.

It begins to look as though Hubby was going to get away with his little game, but the stenographer, who had to leave as soon as the dinner was cooked, forgot her umbrella and came back for it just in time to run into the wife. Of course she had to tell how she happened to be there and then the wife has an inspiration. As a result hubby gets into a terrible mess and is thoroughly tamed when he comes out of it alive. Get the picture and you will agree with us that it is especially good.

"WHAT'S IN A FACE?"

Ask Mr. Lee Beggs, New Character Comedian of the Solax Company, Who Plays the Leading Role in "His Musical Soul."

Some forty years ago, away out in that part of the country where the folks are skeptical and ask to be shown, the rotund and corpulent Lee Beggs was born. Mr. Beggs has ever since his birth been a living argument for the "fat men." Everybody loves the "fat man" around the Solax Studio, with the possible exception of little Magda Foy, the Solax Kid; but then little Magda has a little heart and she can only love "one" at a time. Sh! hush!—her love affair is a secret!

When Mr. Beggs was not yet above the spanking age he decided that there was more fun in being an actor than in studying geography. So one day Mr. Beggs begged himself into the theatrical business. His first responsibilities were the onerous labors of a "prop" boy. His salary consisted of free admission to the show. The beggarly existence of a "prop" boy didn't satisfy Lee Beggs for long. He had higher aims. His manly heart, palpitating in a body weighing two hundred pounds, was set on becoming a real actor. That he became a real actor is evidenced by his twenty-five years of continuous engagements in vaudeville and the legitimate. He played with Julia Marlowe, and had many engagements in stock in various sections of the country. He was stage director and manager on a number of occasions.

Mr. Lee Beggs.

In all, Mr. Beggs believes he has played anywhere between 500 and 1,000 parts. He is a newcomer in motion pictures and is a great believer in the future of the silent drama. He has his own ideas on what constitutes the requirements of a good moving picture actor. Mr. Beggs doesn't have to use many words to express himself. His face speaks for him before he opens his mouth, and that is saying a good deal. Mr. Beggs appeared with success in "The Interrupted Elopement," "Fickle Bridget," "A Troublesome Picture," "The Will of Providence" and "His Musical Soul."

WILL IMPORT FEATURE FILMS.

The Feature Film Company, of 108 East 12th Street, New York, announces that it is importing a large number of exceptionally good feature pictures, not handled by any other agency. It will make a specialty of subjects of from 2,000 to 5,000 feet in length and will supply posters without charge. This company will also handle feature domestic subjects.

"DRIVING HOME THE COWS" (Kalem).

A little classic in pictures has just been produced by the Kalem Company, based upon a war-time poem by Katherine P. Osgood, which appeared in a periodical in 1865 under the title given. The story told in the poem has been so faithfully portrayed in the picture that no better description can be given than is contained in the verse itself, which is here reproduced:

Out of the clover and blue-eyed grass
He turned them into the river lane;
One after another he let them pass,
Then fastened the meadow bars again.

Under the willows and over the hill
He patiently followed their sober pace;
The merry whistle for once was still,
And something shadowed the sunny face.

Only a boy, and his father had said
He never could let his youngest go.
Two already were lying dead,
Under the feet of the trampling foe.

But after the evening work was done
And the frogs were loud in the meadow swamp,
Over his shoulder he slung his gun
And stealthily followed the footpath damp.

Scene from "Driving Home the Cows" (Kalem).

Across the clover and through the wheat,
With resolute heart and purpose grim,
Though cold was the dew on his hurrying feet
And blind bats flitting startled him.

Thrice since then had the lanes been white
And the orchards sweet with apple bloom,
And now when the cows came back at night
The feeble father drove them home.

For news had come to the lonely farm
That three were lying where one had lain,
And the old man's tremulous, palsied arm
Could never lean on a son's again.

The summer day grew cold and late;
He went for the cows when the work was done.
But down the lane, as he opened the gate,
He saw them coming one by one.

Brindle, Ebony, Speckle and Bess,
Shaking their horns in the evening wind,
Cropping the buttercups out of the grass—
But who was it following close behind?

Loosely swung in the quiet air
The empty sleeve of the army blue,
And worn and pale from the crisping hair
Looked out a face that the father knew.

The great tears sprang to their meeting eyes,
For the heart must speak when the lips are dumb.
And under the silent evening skies
Together they followed the cattle home.

This picture was made at the Jacksonville studio, amid typical Southern scenery, and these are most beautiful. The work of the players reveals careful thought and a high conception of the subject, and the portrayal is dignified and touching. Altogether it is one of the best things the Kalem players have done in some time.

"CHRISTMAS PRESENTS" (Solax).

The people in Flushing one day crowded around a five and ten cent store on Main Street and watched with curiosity a burly cop arrest a little girl for breaking the plate glass window, because, as she later explained, she couldn't get the nice Christmas things displayed.

The breaking of the glass was her protest to society. The little girl felt that nature had conspired against her. In her little breast there surged a spirit of revolt against existing conditions. The child's story was exploited in the Flushing and the Brooklyn papers. The Solax scenario editor got on the job. He worked up a story around the incident and the child. The result is a Christmas story with Santa Claus hovering over the characters and instilling them with a new faith and love for humanity.

The sacred character of the story makes it a fine Sunday release. In fact, the Solax Company thought so much of it that it decided to make "Christmas Presents" its first release on the three-a-week program. The public will have an opportunity to see it for the first time Sunday, December 24.

Scene from "Christmas Presents" (Solax).

The story revolves about a widow who is "up against it" and her little child, who suffer quietly the restrictions of poverty. The mother gets into trouble because of the mistakes of others. She is befriended by a police sergeant.

Her little daughter, like more little girls, wanders off to see the big Christmas displays in the shop windows. While gazing with hungry and envious eyes upon dolls and houses and toys, she makes the acquaintance of a benevolent woman of wealth. This woman is moved by the child's longing glances and so buys for her a big French doll.

The plot is complicated by a dull-headed policeman who arrests the child, but it all turns out happily at the widow's humble home on Christmas Eve, for Santa Claus is the harbinger of hope and love besides material gifts.

IMP SCENARIO CONTEST.

The I. M. P. Company desires to announce that the scenario contest which it has been conducting will close on Dec. 31, 1911. This contest is for comedy subjects, and the prizes offered are: $100, first prize; $75, second; $60, third; $50, fourth. So far a large number of high-class comedies have been submitted, but there is still time for further entries.

CHAMPION AVIATION PICTURES.

Champion is about to release two pictures featuring Miss Blanch Scott, the woman aviator, who takes a prominent part in the story which includes a flight in an aeroplane. The titles are "The Aviator's Success" and "Aviator and Autoist Race for a Bride."

Robert C. Fowler, accompanied by a Champion camera man, is now making flights in the Southwest, taking areoplane views of cities.

The Champion Company has moved to its new offices in 145 West 45th Street, room 801 of the Exchange Building, and is now settled and ready for business in the new location.

SUPPLY AND DEMAND.

In the evolution of the business will the supply of educational pictures create the demand, or will the demand spur the manufacturers to more and greater efforts in this direction? It seems to us that the latter condition prevails. We hear constantly from exhibitors who desire but who have difficulty in procuring educational films, even to the extent of gratifying their ambition to advertise an educational program one day each week. The exhibitors of Independent films are the chief complainants, and we are pleased to record the fact that they are now getting more attention from the manufacturers. Looking back over the Sales Company's program for the past few weeks, one can pick out from every manufacturer on the list one or more reels of an educational nature. They may not have been prepared or issued as strictly educational reels, but there are enough of sufficient educational value to make up several very good programs. And the percentage is on the increase. Almost all of the other foreign makers issue almost every week one educational reel or half-reel. Among the Imps we found three in two weeks' releases, and almost every one of the American members of the Sales Company have one or more to their credit, while the youngest of the group, the "Republic," shows a tendency to specialize in this field.

This week we call attention elsewhere to an educational reel by the American Film Manufacturing Company, and in an interview with the president, Mr. S. S. Hutchinson, he assured us that more of the same class were in preparation. But, most encouraging of all, we are told by the manager of the Eclair Company that a scientific department has for some time been in operation at their Paris plant. This department has been specially equipped for educational and scientific work and is under the direction of an eminent French scientist. Powerful microscopes are here used in connection with the camera, and it is the intention of the Eclair Company to work along definite lines in the preparation of a series of educational films for use in schools and colleges. We have seen the first two subjects. One shows how the common housefly is a serious menace to health. The work of the microscope is here shown to perfection. The pictures are marvelous in their clearness, of absorbing interest, and convincing beyond question. The other reel shows how bees gather their honey, how they are hived and handled, how the honey is extracted from the combs and prepared for the market. These are two educational subjects of the highest order of merit that will be added to the Independent program early in January, and the Eclair Company are prepared to issue one each week if they meet with encouragement. We hope that they will.

LEVI SPOT-LIGHT SLIDES.

Fred A. Apfelbaum, secretary of The Levi Co., Inc., inventor of spot-light song slides, patent No. 1,010,214, received his papers from Washington last week. The patent has been assigned to The Levi Co., Inc., 1560 Broadway, New York, who will manufacture them exclusively in the United States and Canada.

Considerable difficulty was found at first in getting the spot light so that it would fit every theatre, due to the different size houses and screens. After experimenting some time they announce that their efforts have been crowned with success and that the new improved spot-light song slide can be used in any vaudeville or moving picture theatre.

The idea has been favorably commented on by almost everyone in the profession, and now that it is a practical success, it will, no doubt, be a valuable asset to this enterprising company.

SIMPSON'S ADVERTISING SLIDES.

Mr. Alfred L. Simpson, the maker of Simpson's celebrated slides, informs us that the new department recently organized for the manufacture of slides for advertising and scientific purposes is making great progress. Mr. Simpson wishes to announce the fact that only poses from life will be used for these slides. In view of the fact that A. L. Simpson, Inc., enjoys an envious reputation for manufacturing slides of the "worth while" kind, and have as customers some of the largest colleges in this country, we are pleased to note the large and fertile field for operation, to reward Mr. Simpson for his efforts in this direction.

VANCOUVER EXHIBITORS ORGANIZE.

At a recent meeting of the motion picture theater exhibitors of Vancouver, B. C., an organization was formed and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: J. R. Muir, president; Charles Schuberg, secretary-treasurer; W. P. Dewees, vice-president; William Brown and W. Armstrong, directors. The organization will be known as the Vancouver Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association.

BOOMING FEATURE FILMS.

F. Mandelbaum, president of the Feature and Educational Film Company, returned last week to the general offices of the company at Cleveland, after a trip through the Central States in the interests of the two new F. & E. features, "Love and Sacrifice" and "Quincy Adams Sawyer." Mr. Mandelbaum reports that these two productions at the exhibitors' conventions held at Indianapolis and Chicago proved the best features that have been placed on the market to date. He also visited the Chicago and Detroit branches of the F. & E. Company, where bookings were booming, and disposed of several state rights on his trip.

HALLBERG INSTALLS MERCURY ARC RECTIFIERS.

In many of the up-to-date moving picture theaters operating on alternating current circuits, especially those having vaudeville and such where the elimination of noise from the alternating arc is desired, Mercury Arc Rectifiers are being installed to change the alternating current into direct current at the arc. Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports that he has recently installed 40-ampere Rectifiers for G. A. Robinson, Colonial Theatre, W. Hoboken, N. J., and Carl Michelfelder, Star Theater, Fall River, Mass. Also 30-ampere Rectifiers for A. A. Jackson, St. Ann's Ave., The Bronx, N. Y. City; Temple Theater, St. Mary's, Pa.; Palatka Gas & Fuel Co., Palatka, Fla., and Montgomery Amusement Co., Jacksonville, Fla.

"IMP" CHANGES CORPORATE NAME.

Notice is given by the Independent Moving Pictures Company of America that it has asked permission of the courts to change its corporate name to "The Imp Films Company." The reason given for the change is that the company is better known by the proposed shorter title and that it is used generally in addressing the company in preference to the longer and original title.

METCALF OUT OF CINCINNATI-BUCKEYE FILM CO.

McMahan & Jackson, of the Cincinnati Buckeye Film Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, announce that C. K. Metcalf, in the shipping department of the company, is no longer in their employ.

THOSE "MAINE" PICTURES.

In last week's issue announcement was made that the Solax Company had some pictures of "Raising the Maine" which would be exhibited at Herald Square Theater, New York. This was an error; can't explain how it happened, but it did. The truth of the matter is that the pictures referred to belonged to the "Raising the Maine Company" and were exhibited under their direction. These pictures are being handled by the latter company on the State rights plan. Address them at 145 West 45th Street, New York.

RUSH & ANDREWS' NEW HOUSE.

Rush & Andrews, proprietors of the "Wauwanda" at Haines Falls, N. Y., last summer, are comfortably established in their winter "Wauwanda" at Woodridge, N. J. Their present quarters are in what was formerly the Masonic Hall. "Uncle John" will put on his "local happenings" as usual

Scene from "The Tie That Binds" (Comet).

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 18th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—As in a Looking Glass (Dramatic) .....
KALEM—He Who Laughs Last (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—Love Decides (Dr.) 1000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 51 (Topical) 1000
SELIG—Evangeline (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Vitagraph Monthly of Current Events (Topical) 1000

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 19th, 1911.

EDISON—Santa Claus and the Clubman (Dramatic) ..1000
ESSANAY—The Three Bears (Juvenile) 1000
GAUMONT—Through the Enemy's Lines (War. Dr.) 985
C. G. P. C.—Princess Charming (Juvenile) .....
C. G. P. C.—Landscapes in Japan (Scenic) .....
SELIG—For His Pal's Sake (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Vanity Fair (Three Reels) (Dr.) ...3000

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 20th, 1911.

EDISON—The Sign of the Three Labels (Comedy) 1000
ECLIPSE—The Miracle (Dramatic) 1040
PATHE—The Fatal Posing (Am. Dr.) 1000
KALEM—The Flash in the Night (Dr.).....1000
LUBIN—Art versus Music (Com. Dr.) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Fires of Driftwood (Dramatic) 1000

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 21st, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—A Terrible Discovery (Dramatic) .....
ESSANAY—Winning an Heiress (Com. Dr.) 300
ESSANAY—The Foiling of Red Dugan (Dramatic) ... 700
LUBIN—Kiddies' Christmas (Two Reels, Xmas Dr.)..1800
MELIES—The Mission Father (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Dad's Smash-Up (Am. Dr.) 1000
SELIG—Brown of Harvard (Dramatic) 1000

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 22nd, 1911.

EDISON—How Sir Andrew Lost His Vote (Comedy).1000
ESSANAY—The Millionaire Barber (Comedy) 1000
KALEM—Between Father and Son (Dramatic) 1000
C. G. P. C.—Providential Bread (Dramatic) .....
C. G. P. C.—In Japan—Nara (Scenic) .....
SELIG—The Little Widow (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—A Reformed Santa Claus (Dramatic) .1000

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23rd, 1911.

EDISON—Pat Clancy's Adventure (Comedy) 1000
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Christmas Dinner (Dr.)..1000
GAUMONT—The Maid of Argos (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—The Sergeant's White Peril (Mil. Dr.) 1000
PATHE—Actor's Heart (Am. Dr.) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Old Doll (Dramatic) 1000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 25th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—Caught with the Goods (Comedy) .....
BIOGRAPH—A Mix-Up in Raincoats (Comedy) .....
KALEM—The "Revenue and the Girl (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—One Way to Win (Comedy) 1000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 52 (Topical) 1000
SELIG—A Modern Trip (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Some Good in All (Xmas Dr.) 1000

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 26th, 1911.

EDISON—Papa's Sweetheart (Dramatic) 625
EDISON—Modern Weapons for Fighting Fire, New York City (Vocational) 375
ESSANAY—A Story of the West (Dramatic) 1000
GAUMONT—From Pity to Love (Dramatic) 826
GAUMONT—Scenes of the Coast of North Africa (Sc.) 124
C. G. P. C.—The Burglar's Hard Luck (Comedy) .....
C. G. P. C.—Aboard a French Battleship (Naval) .....
C. G. P. C.—The Kromats (Acrobatic).....
SELIG—The Bully of Bingo Gulch (Com.-Dr.) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Younger Brother (Mil. Dr.) 1000

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 27th, 1911.

EDISON—The Stuff That Dreams Are Made of (Com.) 1000
ECLIPSE—The Stolen Treasure (Dramatic) 680
ECLIPSE—Fair Exchange Is No Robbery (Com.) ... 322
PATHE—Mother-in-Law Raises —— (Com.) 1000
LUBIN—The American Girl.....1000
VITAGRAPH—Testing His Courage (Dr.) 1000

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 28th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—The Voice of the Child (Dramatic) .....
ESSANAY—For Memory's Sake (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—The Soldier's Return (Dr.) 1000
MELIES—The Ranchman's Debt of Honor (Dr.) 1000
PATHE—His Daughter's Bracelet (American Dr.) 1000
C. G. P. C.—Mushroom Culture (Edu.) .....
SELIG—Paid Back (Dr.) 1000

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1911.

EDISON—A Romance of the Cliff Dwellers (Dr.) 1000
ESSANAY—A Bird in the Hand (Comedy) 1000
KALEM—The Maid's Double (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Yann, the Troubadour (Dr.) 950
SELIG—Their Last Chance (Comedy) 1000
VITAGRAPH—A Doubly Desired Orphan (Dr.) 1000

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 30th, 1911.

EDISON—Uncle Hiram's List (Com.) 1000
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Adventure (West. Dr.) ..1000
GAUMONT—Curing a Reckless Student (Dr.) 1010
LUBIN—Father and the Girls.....
PATHE— The Doll (American Drama) .....
VITAGRAPH—In the Clutches of a Vapor Bath (Com.) 1000

Reduced Fac Simile of one of our Border Designs or Poster Frames

Price, 10 for $1.00 Money Order or Postage

PASSION PLAY POSTERS

Largest and Most Complete Line in the U. S.

½-sheets, 3 for 25c; (6 styles) Full sheets, 2 for 25c; (4 styles) 3-sheets, 25c each (2 kinds)

Large Size Posters for Licensed Features

ARRAH-NA-POGUE, MOLLY PITCHER, WAR, LIFEBOAT, LOVE AT GLOUCESTER PORT, VANITY FAIR, CINDERELLA, ETC., ETC.

3-Sheets, 30c 8-Sheets, 75c Full Sheets, 15c

SPECIAL LINE OF CHRISTMAS and HOLIDAY PAPER

Exhibitor's Advertising & Specialty Co.
Arthur D. Jacobs, Pres. Ben Title, Sec'y and Treas.
105 EAST 14th STREET, - - - NEW YORK

Send Money Order No Checks or C.O.D.

Calendar of Independent Releases.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 18th, 1911.

AMERICAN—The Last Notch (Dramatic) 1000
CHAMPION—The Coward's Flute (Dramatic) 950
COMET—A Game of Bridge (Dramatic) 1000
IMP—The Girl and the Hair Back (Dramatic) 1000
NESTOR—The Love Chase (Comedy) .....

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 19th, 1911.

BISON—Cowgirl's Pranks (Comedy Drama) .....
ECLAIR—A Tragic Joke (Am. Dr.) .....
POWERS—Cupid's Big Sister (Com. Dr.) .....
POWERS—Touring Brussels (Scenic) .....
THANHOUSER—The Tomboy (Com. Dr.) .....

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 20th, 1911.

AMBROSIO—Tweedledum Marries an American Girl (Com.) .....
AMBROSIO—The War in Tripoli (War) .....
CHAMPION—By Decree of Fate (Dramatic) 950
NESTOR—The New Ranch Owner (West. Com.) .....
RELIANCE—Locked in the Vaults (Dr.) .....
SOLAX—Love, Whiskers and Letters (Com.) .....

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 21st, 1911.

AMERICAN—The Gold Lust (Dr.) 1000
ECLAIR—A Heart Bowed Down (Dr.) .....
IMP—The Professor (Dr.) 1000
REX—The Martyr (Dr.) .....

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 22nd, 1911.

BISON—An Indian Martyr (Dr.) .....
COMET—The Man with the Camera (Dr.) 985
LUX—A Japanese Love Story (Dr.) 977
SOLAX—The Violin Maker of Nuremberg (Dr.) .....
THANHOUSER—Cinderella (Juvenile) .....

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23rd, 1911.

GREAT NORTHERN—The Twins (Com.) .....
GREAT NORTHERN—From Ostersund to Storlien (Scenic) .....
ITALA—Foolshead's Christmas (Com.) .....
IMP—A Pair of Gloves (Com.) 600
IMP—Niagara Falls Celebration (Topical) 400
NESTOR—Desperate Desmond Foiled by Claude Eclaire (Com.-Dr) .....
POWERS—Hearts of Italy (Dr.) .....
RELIANCE—The Doctor's Dilemma (Dr.) .....
RELIANCE—A Pair of Shoes (Com.) .....

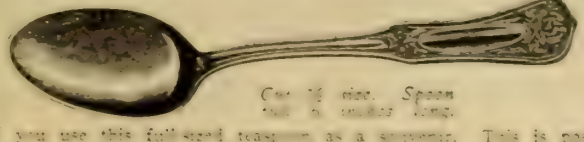
SUNDAY, DECEMBER 24th, 1911.

MAJESTIC—The Actress (Dr.) 1000
REPUBLIC—Before Yorktown (His. Dr.) .....
SOLAX—Christmas Presents (Dr.) .....

NEW PICTURE THEATER AT NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

The Hampton Hotel property in Northampton, Mass., has been leased to the Theater Amusement Company, of Springfield, Ohio, which will build a picture theater on the site. Nathan Goldstein, president of the Amusement Company, announces that work will be commenced at once and that the theater will be ready for business about February 15th, 1912. A modern building will be erected for stores and offices and the theater will have a seating capacity of 1,600.

You Will Have to Turn Them Away



Cut ½ size. Spoon is 6 inches long.

If you use this full-sized teaspoon as a souvenir. This is positively the biggest value ever offered on silverware. Made by Wm. A. Rogers and absolutely GUARANTEED TO LAST FOREVER. Not cheap silver-plated, but made of nickeled silver, which will outlast the best plated ware made. Do not confuse it with the cheap silver-plated brass ware offered in competition; there is absolutely no comparison.

VERY SPECIAL AT ONLY $5.50 PER GROSS. Sample by mail 50c.

A COLORED SLIDE FREE WITH A TWO GROSS ORDER.

Other pieces at correspondingly low prices. Catalog of assorted pieces upon application.

TAKITO, OGAWA & CO., 156 W. Lake St. Chicago

What They Think of

BISON FILMS

Now being released

The Answer is

PERFECTION

GET THE FOLLOWING FEATURES:

"THE RUN ON THE BANK"

Released Tuesday, Dec. 26

A SENSATIONAL SUBJECT. A GREAT MOB SCENE. A STRONG PLOT.

"GETTING HIS MAN"

Released Friday, Dec. 29

A THRILLER. HAIR-RAISING RIDING. A SPLENDID FEATURE THAT YOU WILL REPEAT.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

1 UNION SQ. N. Y. CITY

Correspondence

NEW ENGLAND.

Messrs. McCue and Cahill, the well known moving picture men of Brockton, Mass., will direct the exhibition of moving pictures of the Brockton Fair. The pictures will be exhibited at the Commercial Club of Brockton. The Brockton Fair is the event of its kind in New England.

A ten year lease has been signed by a Boston theatrical syndicate, for the theater in the new brick block to be erected on Main Street, Melrose, Mass. The location is just in the center of the city. The contracts for the erection of the building call for its completion within a period of 60 working days. Vaudeville and pictures are to be presented.

Chief of Police Whitney suspended the license of the Mahaine Theater, all day November 21. It seems that the theater is only allowed to hold 934 people, by the terms of its license. Manager W. C. Howitt found business so good that a few in exces of the 934 allowed were permitted to enter the auditorium. After the license was suspended Manager Howitt told Chief Whitney that the reason for this was due to the fact that many of his audience had come from long distances. Rather than disappoint these people the house had been over filled. Under these circumstances, the license was re issued by the Chief. The Mahaine Theater is in Great Barrington, Mass.

The city of Montpelier, Vt., has granted to J. E. Leland and others, a permit to run a photo play exhibition on Monday and Saturday nights in the Auditorium of the City Hall. The program must be kept up to an unusually high standard of quality, and no advertising will be permitted on the outside of the hall.

John McMurray and Ralph Pinkham have jointly taken over Boulevard Hall, Saratoga, Street, East Boston, Mass. After the hall has been renovated, the house will open with 4 reels of Licensed pictures and illustrated songs. Both these men are conversant with their business, and should make a success. Mr. Pinkham was a member of the General Film Company's staff until recently.

The situation in Pawtucket, R. I., is peculiar, to say the least, as the whole theatrical situation is in the hands of one man, as told last week. A strike of union musicians was averted, because their demands were acceded to at the last moment. It seems that all the musicians at the Bijou, Star and Munsic Hall theaters were given notice to leave. Upon learning this a general strike was threatened, but the union was placated by the "combine."

A new photoplay theater is promised for North Abbington, Mass., as Mr. James Lydon has decided to build on North Avenue.

It is stated on the best authority that the new vaudeville and picture house now being built on Washington Street, Boston, is to be one of the famous "Olympia" theaters of New England. The house is contracted to open March 1, 1912, and will be one of the most expensive and finest in the country.

Mr. George T. Rock, sixth vice-president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, is meeting with good success in Boston. Mr. Rock's mission is to persuade exhibitors to sign the new wage scale for union operators of Boston—Local 182. No trouble is being anticipated just now, as Mr. Rock declares the local managers are all very willing to do their share toward helping along the new wage scale.

The Broadway Theater, Lawrence, Mass., is closed and the reopening has not as yet been announced by Manager W. C. Fleming.

Manager Arthur E. Lord is certainly packing them into the Olympia and Pastime theaters, Lynn, Mass. The Olympia is a large house, and the Pastime a small one, but both are doing big business.

Manager E. L. Knight, of the Bijou Theater, Springfield, Mass., is doing very well this season with a bill of vaudeville, pictures and illustrated songs.

Mr. F. C. Morgan, of the Music Hall, Milford, Mass., finds business good and expects to acquire an interest in a Chelsea, Mass., theater.

The Theatrical Stage Employes of Hartford, Conn., are now completing the arrangements for their annual ball and entertainment which will probably be held December 15. A big time is expected.

The Star Theater, Dover, N. H., after being closed some time, because of poor business, again opened its doors on November 25, and offers vaudeville and pictures. The house is managed by Mr. James E. Townsend.

The McCue & Cahill Amusement Company has just been incorporated for $5,000. Those incorporating were: John W. McCue, John J. Cahill, Emily J. Gurney and William B. Cross. Messrs. McCue and Cahill are among the most prominent New England firms devoted to this line of business, owning and controlling a score of houses.

Messrs. Contos and Zevitas have leased their theater, Zenicon Temple, Roxbury, Mass, to a local moving picture concern. Both Mr. Contos and Mr. Zevitas have extensive interests in the confectionery business and sold out on this account. Zenicon Temple is situated in a thickly populated district and is a winner. Vaudeville and Licensed pictures are offered. HENRY.

PHILADELPHIA.

Two steep runways leading to emergency exits in Lubin's Palace mark the stage ends of the two side aisles, where once scores of standees paid an extra dime for the privilege of having a handicap advantage for vacated reserved seats. Now the runways serve to use up the standing room with resulting direct loss, and to emphasize the perils of fire and panic netting still further loss. The story of these runways, better than any other argument, serves to demonstrate the value of enforcing uniform courtesy in moving picture houses. It seems that the Palace was unusually crowded one night when a political leader happened in with his daughter. They were very early and gained first row seats without trouble. Later the place filled up quickly and a crowd formed in front of the first row, obstructing the view of the stage. The unthinking help, overplaying the proposition, began packing standees in the aisles in violation of both a State law and a City Ordinance. This move shut off the stage to all in the first two rows, near the aisle, and a polite protest was made to the special officer by the policeman, who knew the law, and the police regulations. The protest brought forth nothing but contemptuous silence from one source and impudence from another. Two days later the Department of Public Safety, with strong pressure behind, got busy and the runways were ordered in and more or less unpleasant surveillance has been maintained ever since. A courteous answer and diplomatic rearrangement of the overflow would not only have saved the situation, but made friends for the house in powerful company. Thus it appears that even the least important of the subordinates in a moving picture house can cause a great loss to the owner and create trouble where none is necessary.

Mr. Walter R. Linn, of Carlisle, Pa., one of the best known dramatic writers in the country, has retired from the newspaper business, and will devote himself to developing scenarios for moving picture films and to play writing.

At all of the sessions of the Child Welfare Congress, under the auspices of the City of Philadelphia, one or another of the orators took a slap at the moving picture business as a whole, without emphasizing the tremendous value of the educational work being carried on by film makers. Finally, Superintendent Brumbaugh, of the Public School System, directed attention to the fact that all of the travel and scene pictures used in nearly all the houses at one time or another, had a definite educational value, and he proposed that Penn Square Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.

This handsome structure is the Penn Theater, located at Euclid Avenue and East 55th Street, Cleveland, Ohio. It is a remarkably elaborate temple of photodrama, both inside and out. At present the auditorium seats 650, but plans have already been made for an additional 350, to be placed in a balcony which is soon to be built. The appointments at the Penn Square Theater are sumptuous and insure the comfort of every patron.

Particular attention is paid at the Penn Square to the matter of projection, and there are numerous ingenious electrical devices, which have been built for the better presentation of the picture upon the screen. The operating room is a veritable jungle of electrical apparatus, and resembles an electrical laboratory which, in fact, it is. There are several different voltages of electricity coming into the building, all of which pass through special apparatus for improving illumination. Needless to say that an operator who can hold this job at the Penn Square Theater, can make good anywhere.

The manager is Mr. Emil C. Meyer, who ably conducts the establishment. The Penn Square people are putting up another theater at Woodland Avenue and 38th Street, which will have a seating capacity of 1,600. This new theater will also be managed by Mr. Meyer.

DON'T LOOK FURTHER!!

HERE IS SURE MONEY!!

"REMEMBER THE MAINE"

and wire in your best State Right's bid for

"THE MYSTERY OF THE MAINE"

THE NEW YORK TIMES

MAINE IN MOTION PICTURES.

Views Taken in Havana Harbor Shown at Herald Square Theatre.

The first public showing of motion pictures taken in Havana harbor during the work of uncovering the wreck of the battleship Maine took place at the Herald Square Theatre yesterday afternoon. Some of the films were exhibited before the Maine Monument Committee several weeks ago, but the present reels contain later views.

The series began with the building of the caissons, showed the gradual lowering of the water inside the coffer dam, and the cleaning of the parts of the wreck as they were exposed. The pictures showed clearly the force of the explosion that destroyed the ship and the present condition of the vessel.

Preceding the wreck pictures there was a series of views of the recent fleet motion in the Hudson River and another series showing Admiral Togo on

ONLY FILM IN EXISTENCE APPEALING TO ALL CLASSES FROM NEWSBOY TO MILLIONAIRE

THINK IT OVER

THE MYSTERY OF THE MAINE
THE MOST AWE-INSPIRING SPECTACLE OF HISTORY
PRODUCED IN MOTION PICTURES
UNITED STATES
"REMEMBER THE MAINE"

Fac-simile of our 3 and 8-Sheet Lithograph

Two Reels of Awe Inspiring and Spectacular Moving Pictures, with a Stirring Lecture. Protected by U. S. Copyright

Different Styles 1, 3 and 8-Sheet Lithographs Furnished at 7c a Sheet, and Lobby Displays

RAISING-THE-MAINE FILM COMPANY

145 West 45th Street (Suite 804) New York City

P. S.—We have just received a request for a private exhibition to the Department of the Navy, at Washington, D. C.

some plan be devised to induce house managers to make more frequent use of this character of pictures.

An unverified report places another Nixon & Zimmerman theater with pictures in the Diamond Street district of the city, close to the proposed new station of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and the Ridge Avenue car lines.

The contract has been let for the construction of a one-story moving picture parlor for Mr. George H. Chapman, at Orthodox and Tacony Streets. The work will be started immediately.

The Erie Avenue Amusement Company have opened a moving picture parlor at Erie Avenue and Marshall Streets.

Messrs. Lasher & Freeman will open a moving picture parlor shortly at Fifth and Reed Streets, to be called the Mirror Theater. Title will be taken in the name of the Mirror Theater Company.

Mr. V. R. Carrick, of the Philadelphia Projection Film Company, No. 44 North Ninth Street, is in Atlanta, Ga., on a business trip.

The Montgomery Theater, at No. 600 East Girard Avenue, will be opened in about ten days. Seating capacity will be 500.

The Twentieth Century Theater, of Manyunk, is to be enlarged and many new alterations will be made.

The Wilmington Theater Company has been incorporated in Dover, Delaware, to conduct theaters and amusement places of all kinds, capital, $20,000. The incorporators are: William E. Harris, William G. Shaw and Casper T. Toppin, all of Wilmington, Del.

The Noflaw Theater opened with an elaborate vaudeville and moving picture bill at Allentown, Pa. The house has a seating capacity of 1,600. The American Seating Company furnished the chairs.

Mr. George W. Benatham will open a new moving picture house in Allentown, Pa., in about ten days, seating capacity, 700.

The Operators' Union is rapidly gaining strength here, new members are being admitted at every meeting, and the outlook for the year has been very good.

Mr. Morris Spiers has opened a new house at No. 2716 Girard Avenue. Seating capacity, 500.

Director George D. Porter took charge of the Department of Public Safety on Monday last, and when asked to define his position on the moving picture business, said:

"The questions of safety and decency in moving picture establishments ought to concern the immediate managers more than the police officials. It is poor business to maintain a firetrap, and worse to pander to the depraved tastes of the few. If the place be unsafe, it soon becomes a matter of common knowledge, and the patrons worth having go elsewhere. If the pictures are questionable, only the low attend and their very presence drives all the desirables away, so that in the end the question regulates itself.

"I have been interested in the Boy Scout movement ever since it was inaugurated, and I think I know something about boys. The moving picture parlor keeps boys away from worse places and the adroit manager knows that boys are his best advertisers. It is not the policy of this administration to transform the police into a band of mean spies, but every police regulation looking to safety and decency will be enforced to the letter and with the least possible injury to the theater owner.

"These gentlemen ought to get into harmony and close relationship with Superintendent Taylor, of the Bureau of Police, and anticipate trouble by avoiding it.

"There will be no drastic proceedings against any theatrical venture conducted within the bounds of reasonable decency. In all subjects of complaint, the accused will have his day in court, so long as I have aught to do with the policy of the Department of Public Safety. My office shall always be open to the theatrical managers who come to explain as well as to the private citizen who shall come to complain."

Superintendent Taylor, of the Bureau of Police, has been in the Department many years, but during the past four years he has been shorn of his power, and was merely a clerk working under his subordinate, the Assistant Superintendent of Police, "Tim" O'Leary. O'Leary went out with the Reyburn administration, and Taylor was put in supreme command of the police by Director Porter. Superintendent Taylor is a very religious man and one who is inclined to take a narrow view of matters, to which he cannot give his unqualified indorsement. Director Porter, however, has the heart of a boy, and the brains of two ordinary men. He is clean all through and cannot be "reached" in any way except by simple logic and the truth. Only a smart alec will try to put anything over on the new Director, who would not hesitate a second to personally arrest all offenders, and close the place up instanter, in the face of gross abuse of privilege. The wise manager will get into line with the views of the new Director, and thus enjoy four years of undisturbed peace.

Mr. George Werner has opened a new moving picture parlor at Twenty-seventh and Girard Avenue. It has a balcony and seats 100 people.

The Mirror Amusement Company, of 1332 South Fifth Street, which has just recently opened, have purchased, from the Calehuff Supply Company, a large mirror screen, 12 by 16, at a cost of $645.

The Fulton Theater is again open, under the management of Howard Rogers, at Chester, Pa. This house was formerly run by colored people, for colored people, but since it has changed hands, it will be open to the white population of the town.

The largest theater in the State of Pennsylvania devoted exclusively to moving pictures, has been opened at Eighteenth and Ridge Avenue. It is called the Ridge Avenue Theater, and seats 1,800 people. It was erected at the cost of $45,000, and is a masterpiece in construction.

The Nixon Theater presented one of the heaviest acts ever seen on a vaudeville stage. The act consists of four huge Indian elephants, the combined weight of which is 16,000 pounds. This huge mass of bone and muscle is controlled by one delicate woman, professionally known as Madame Arnold.

The new Peoples' Settlement Building, in Wilmington, Delaware, is to be equipped with a motion picture plant, the gift of Mrs. Dexter A. Hall, of Boston, Mass. It is expected to make educational use of the gift, in connection with instruction and training of the settlement children.

Mr. M. Spiers has opened his new Royal Palace, Twenty-seventh Street and Girard Avenue. His equipment consists of a mirror screen, 11 x 14' 8", and two model B Edison machines, with two economy Edison transformers. He also has a mirror screen and two Edison Model B's in his other parlor, the Girard Palace.

The singing of a popular ragtime song by two members of the audience quieted a crowd of almost 500 persons in the Majestic Theater, No. 2424 Kensington Avenue, when a reel of films took fire from a nearby light. The house was crowded to its capacity when the scare occurred. Charles Maryms, operator of the machine, was changing films, when the tag on one of them became ignited. Two boys in the front of the house started to sing, and the piano player furnished an accompaniment with much vigor. Mr. Joseph Burger, manager of the house, said the loss would be less than fifty dollars.

Mr. George Bennathim's New Hippodrome, Allentown, Pa., will open shortly with two Model B Edison machines and economy transformers.

Mr. Wilmer Stewart, of Indiana, Pa., and Wallace Cunningham, of Jacksonville, have started a Nickelodeon in Latrobe, Pa.

Articles of incorporation have been filed for the Century Amusement Company, under the laws of Pennsylvania, to produce and exhibit vaudeville and motion pictures, plays and to conduct any and every form of amusement and entertainment. The incorporators are: Abraham Ginsburg, Benjamin Kaplan and Abraham Winderman.

Mr. Joseph M. Sweet, of the Calehuff Supply Company, has started on a Southern trip, and expects to be gone several months. Mr. Sweet is well known to the trade in that section, and expects to burn the wires with orders.

Ambitious to perfect and patent a highly specialized device for handling slides in a moving picture machine, Joseph Leopold, the police of Bethlehem charge, stole 156 pounds of brass from the plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company. John Hookas was arrested with Leopold as an accessory. Leopold made a confession, in the course of which he outlined his moving picture improvement to the Chief of Police, who declined to divulge it, because he believed, with Leopold, that it has merit. The idea is to show song slides in conjunction with ordinary reels.

CLEMENT H. CONGDON.

LOUISVILLE.

The Princess Amusement Company, which operates several photo theaters in Louisville, has installed adjustable electric signs in front of each. The name of the principal film is flashed to the public every night. Abundant use of electricity has helped them as it has other businesses.

The management of the Royal Theater, at Eighteenth and Broadway, has announced that it will put up 20 turkeys for the public on Christmas day. Every patron receives a numbered coupon as he enters the theater. The turkeys will be raffled off on the appointed days, the holders of the winning coupons being entitled to the birds. The scheme was unusually successful at Thanksgiving time, and the theater was crowded to its capacity every day.

The finishing touches are being put on the Majestic Theater on Fourth Avenue, near Chestnut Street, and will be open to the public about Christmas. The exterior work has been completed, as has most of that on the inside. The Majestic will be the largest show house of its kind in the South, having a seating capacity of 1,500. The front of the building was converted into stores, which readily rented. In point of appearance, the Majestic compares favorably with any in Louisville, photoplay or otherwise. The interior decorations will be luxurious, no expense being spared. L. J. Dittmar is proprietor of the place.

It is reported that the Talbott Syndicate, of St. Louis, is planning to enter the Louisville moving picture and vaudeville field. It is stated that a new theater with a seating capacity of 3,000, will be erected in the Gateway city. The same reports include Toledo, Ohio, in the invasion.

The Hippodrome, located on the southeast corner of Second and Market streets, Louisville, has been completed and has held its formal opening. The management indulged in a two-column advertisement in a daily paper, inviting the public to inspect the new place. Every woman patron was presented with a souvenir in the shape of flowers. A feature of the new building is its excellent provisions for fire. Exits leading to both Second and Market streets are available in this case. Perfect ventilation is provided through a modern ventilating system. Comfort is also insured by the size of the seats, which are 20 inches in width and 32 inches from back to back.

The theater is exceptional from an artistic standpoint. The interior is finished in soft pastel shades of old rose and ivory, beginning with the deeper shades and gradually blending into soft and delicate tones. The lobby is finished in marble, bevelled mirror and walls of green and ivory. There are over 500 Tungsten lights in the lobby alone. The decorative illuminations in both the lobby and auditorium are of Venetian designs in lantern effects.

The operating room is built according to approved methods, and the machines are late models, being Powers No. 6. The labor unions have been met with the promise that none but union operators and musicians will be employed. Only first-run pictures will be shown, three of these being shown each day.

Following a small fire in the Hippodrome Theater, of Lexington, Ky., Manager L. H. Ramsey announced that fireproof operating booths had been ordered, and would be used both at the Hoppodrome and the Lexington Opera House. The Board of Public Works issued an ultimatum after the fire, stating that the booths must be installed or the theaters closed. The fire did little damage. It was caused by an electric light coming in contact with the films. The crowd was kept under control and the flames were soon extinguished.

John H. Stamper, formerly manager of the Star Theater, of Lexington, Ky., has made arrangements to lease the corner of the Phoenix Hotel, of Lexington, for use as a moving picture theater. The hotel is to be remodeled in the near future, plans having been prepared.

The Princess Theater, of Hopkinsville, Ky., has opened to the public. It is the most modern in the smaller towns of the State. A feature is the use of a solid wall instead of a curtain for the showing of pictures. A dressing room for ladies also is provided, and this has proven popular with the gentler sex. The house has a seating capacity for 700 people. Its cost was $20,000. A balcony also is a feature out of the ordinary. This is for both white people and negroes, the latter having a separate entrance to the house. L. H. Davis erected the theater, G. A. Bleich being the lessee.

The Lyric, a new motion picture house, was opened in Winchester, Ky., on December 6. It is up-to-date in every respect. H. H. Phillips will manage the place, Woodson Moss also being interested.

Clark & Drollinger have taken charge of the Odeon Theater of Earlington, Ky. The house will henceforth be known as the "Imp." The price of admission has been reduced to five cents.

The Hippodrome Theater, Jackson, Ky., has been improved with a steam heating plant, the public demonstrating their appreciation by patronizing the house extensively.

The Crescent Amusement Company, which operates two moving picture theaters in Bowling Green, Ky., will invade the Nashville field in the near future. Owner Masters has been looking over the ground in the Southern city. The location has not yet been determined.

R. L. Jones, formerly connected with the Majestic Theater, of Louisville, has joined the force of the Manring Theater, at Middlesboro, Ky. Mr. Jones will have charge of the operating department and has ordered a No. 6 arc lamp.

The Memphis Deaf Mutes' Association has practically completed arrangements to stage a moving picture show. Instead of having their play photographed in the regulation way, however, the company will appear in their proper persons before the audience, enacting by the aid of facial play and gesticulation, a moving picture play. The Association has been given a scenario of a play by the firm of Thomas Edison. "Beulah Was Won," is the title of the play, which is an adaptation from one of Dickens' novels. The company also has promised to send a farce comedy to be acted by the mutes. Between the two performances, real moving pictures will be projected on the screen, showing the deaf cadets of the New York School for the Deaf, taking part in the drills and reviews. The purpose of the entertainment is to raise a fund for the erection of a church for the benefit of the deaf mutes of Memphis.

Nashville will have another photoplay theater, the latest being at 320 Church Street. Tony Sudekum has leased the place, which is to be remodeled. A handsome front will be installed

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

PITTSBURGH.

Mr. Harry Warner, of Youngstown, Ohio, was in town recently, and reported that business is all to the good at the Rex Theater. Mr. Warner, although a young man in years, has had a very broad experience in the moving picture field. He was one of the owners of the erstwhile Duquesne Amusement & Supply Co., a licensed exchange that has been taken over by the General Film Co.

Mr. F. R. Allison, of The Feature Amusement Co., of this city, is feeling justly proud of producing some wonderful moving pictures of the Austin flood and disaster, which can be termed for their value in authenticity and interest, as a production second to none. The opening scene shows the dam as it was before the break—then

MOTION PICTURE PATENTS COMPANY

NOTICE

THE Edison patent (Re-issued No. 12037) relating to motion picture cameras was re-issued on December 5, 1911, as No. 13329, to the undersigned. The patent contains the following claims:

1. An apparatus for taking photographs suitable for the exhibition of objects in motion, having in combination a camera having a single stationary lens; a single sensitized tape-film supported on opposite sides of, and longitudinally movable with respect to, the lens, and having an intermediate section crossing the lens; feeding devices engaging such intermediate section of the film and moving the same across the lens of the camera at a high rate of speed and with an intermittent motion; and a shutter exposing successive portions of the film during the periods of rest, substantially as set forth.

2. An apparatus for taking photographs suitable for the exhibition of objects in motion, having in combination a camera having a single stationary lens; a single sensitized tape-film supported on opposite sides of, and longitudinally movable with respect to, the lens, and having an intermediate section crossing the lens; a continuously-rotating driving-shaft; feeding devices operated by said shaft engaging such intermediate section of the film and moving the same across the lens of the camera at a high rate of speed and with an intermittent motion; and a continuously-rotating shutter operated by said shaft for exposing successive portions of the film during the periods of rest, substantially as set forth.

3. An apparatus for taking photographs suitable for the exhibition of objects in motion, having in combination a camera having a single stationary lens; a single sensitized tape-film supported on opposite sides of, and longitudinally movable with respect to, the lens, and having an intermediate section crossing the lens; a continuously-rotating driving-shaft; feeding devices operated by said shaft engaging such intermediate section of the film and moving the same across the lens of the camera at a high rate of speed and with an intermittent motion; a shutter exposing successive portions of the film during the periods of rest; and a reel revolved by said shaft with variable speed for winding the film thereon after exposure, substantially as set forth.

4. An apparatus for taking photographs suitable for the exhibition of objects in motion, having in combination a camera having a single stationary lens; a single sensitized tape-film supported on opposite sides of, and longitudinally movable with respect to, the lens, and having an intermediate section crossing the lens; feeding devices engaging such intermediate section of the film and moving the same across the lens of the camera at a high rate of speed and with an intermittent motion, said feeding devices comprising means proportioned to cause the devices to so advance the film that its periods of rest shall exceed its periods of motion; and a shutter exposing successive portions of the film during the periods of rest, substantially as set forth.

5. An apparatus for taking photographs suitable for the exhibition of objects in motion, having in combination a camera having a single stationary lens; a single sensitized perforated tape-film supported on opposite sides of, and longitudinally movable with respect to, the lens, and having an intermediate section crossing the lens; feeding devices provided with teeth engaging the perforations of such intermediate section of the film and moving it across the lens of the camera at a high rate of speed and with an intermittent motion; and a shutter exposing successive portions of the film during the periods of rest, substantially as set forth.

MOTION PICTURE PATENTS COMPANY.

some the scenes of the awful rent and yawning open-rage in the dam. Next a scene of Mr Harry Davis as he scans of the news and culls up various [illegible], as well as The Pittsburgh Co., [illegible] team of the disaster. Next we see the brave [illegible] operator through whose cool-headedness and admirable bravery so many lives were saved. Last come pictures of the ruins on Main Street with the piles of debris and wreckage the site of the paper mills the remains of a half buried automobile two wrecked typewriters from one of the paper mills—the army of laborers clearing the debris—the removal of the dead engineer from the overturned locomotive—miles of wreckage from both fire and water, and many other features which undoubtedly tend to make this film a valuable historical and feature production.

Messrs. Warner & Lande, of The Pittsburgh Photoplay Co., at 412 Ferry Street, have blown themselves to a brand new, neat, little Cadillac gas buggy.

The Rowland Theater, in Wilkinsburg, was opened to an enthusiastic attendance on Nov. 23rd. This house was built at a cost of $114,000, and it is one of the most elaborate playhouses in the country. Mr. A. R. Rowland is the manager and owner.

Mr. Frank Ellis, the owner-manager of the Pastime Theater, at 623 Herron Ave., prides himself in having one of the best regulated little houses in the neighborhood. The seating capacity of this theater is about 300. The projection is exceptionally good, to which due thanks should be given to the operator, Dan Calverly. Dan knows his business, and shows it, too. The house is equipped with a special silvered screen and uses two Edisons on duty. The throw is about 56 feet on a 12 by 14 curtain. Licensed films are used.

The Empire Theater, under the able management of Mr. A. A. McTigh, did better last season than it had ever done before. Situated on Collins Ave., E. E., in the very heart of a high-class district, this theater had changed hands quite often. It was opened with legitimate about fifteen years ago, and it was not until Mr. McTigh changed the entire policy that it began to come up above the deficit column. The house seats 2,500, and uses Independent film from the Pgh. Photoplay Co. Three performances a day are given to an admission of five, ten and twenty-five cents. A good illustrated song by a real singer is also used. The projection at this theater is excellent. The projection equipment consists of a No. 6 Power's Cameragraph in a portable asbestos booth. Milton Baily is responsible for the extra good projection.

An entire change in the shipping department has taken place at the Independent Film Exchange. Messrs. Ted Loulinger and Frank Guckert, formerly the day shippers, will after this answer to the roll call as night shippers, while Messrs. Leigh Hunt and Jos. Ferguson will be responsible for the day shipments.

Mr. Lee Jack Warner, of the Pittsburgh Photoplay Co., was in New York recently.

Representatives of the Vitagraph Co., the Pathe Co., the Selig Co., and the Powers Co. were visitors at the Smoky City on Halloween Day, and many feet of negative were taken of the doings of the country's chief executive in this little burg.

Mr. Maurice Costello, Vitagraph's leading man, and one of the foremost actors of the silent drama in the world, was around town recently. This is Mr. Costello's home town.

EDDIE WHEELER.

INDIANAPOLIS.

On December 12 the Indiana Exhibitors' League, a branch of the Moving Picture League of America, held its first annual convention in this city, the sessions were held in the Claypool Hotel. Delegates from all parts of the state were in attendance. Officers of the league are: President, H. S. Dickson, Winchester; secretary-treasurer, F. J. Rembusch, Shelbyville; executive committee, the officers, and H. F. Prentice, Terre Haute; Joseph Bommerstein, Fort Wayne; D. S. Haynes, Evansville; Earl Rife, Logansport; and Edward Hornung, Michigan City.

A thorough discussion of moving pictures in relation to school purposes will be held by the Principals' Club of the Indianapolis public schools at a meeting of the club, to be held in Shortridge High School on the evening of December 19. Miss Neil Green will read a paper on "The Educational Possibilities of Moving Pictures," which is to be followed by an exhibition of moving pictures suited to school purposes by the H. Lieber Company.

The Motioscope Company, of this city, which has been in business several months, has been reorganized and incorporated with an authorized capitalization of $25,000. The company in the future is to make a specialty of making motion pictures in automobile factories, showing the process of manufacture all of the way through. It is planned to use these films for advertising purposes and to also lease them to moving picture theaters for entertainment. Those interested in the company are L. R. Scriensky, A. Wolfson and M. N. Simon.

Benjamin Barton and Charles Olson, interested in several moving picture theaters in this city, have closed a deal for a lease of the Grand Theater, at Newcastle.

A theater exclusively for colored people, the first of its kind in the city, is under construction in Indiana avenue, running back to Senate avenue. It is to make a specialty of pictures and light vaudeville. The theater is to be a one-story brick structure, absolutely fireproof, finished in mahogany, and costing about $15,000. It will be known as the Walker Theater. It will seat 1,500 persons. The Walker Amusement Company has been organized and incorporated to conduct the theater. This company has an authorized capitalization of $10,000, the directors being E. H. Reed, E. T. Walker and Charles Alcon. Earl Walker, until recently manager of the Crown Moving Picture Theater in this city and formerly manager of the New Grand Theater, in Chicago, is to be manager of the new theater. William Haueisen is owner of the building.

The Family Theater, running pictures and light vaudeville, has begun extensive remodeling. A balcony seating 800 persons is being built and the interior is being remodeled generally. The improvements are to cost $5,000.

The Indianapolis board of health has lifted its order excluding children from moving picture theaters and other public gatherings. The order was made on account of the diphtheria epidemic. The board has issued a statement complimenting moving picture theater owners for their strict compliance with the order.

Fire caused about $1,000 damage in the Cozy Theater, in Anderson, on the night of November 14. Necessary repairs are to be made at once. An explosion in the machine operating booth caused the fire.

Dennis Laughlin and Ernest Bouillet have purchased the Princess Theater, at Elwood, from Charles Mahan and Allen Mason.

C. L. CUMMINS.

HARRISBURG.

When it comes down to exhibitors selling a five-cent ticket for one of the leading theaters to which there is a coupon attached, entitling the holder thereof, to admission to either of two other theaters on the same street, it is naturally time for the other exhibitors of this city to take up the matter with the Motion Picture Patents Company, which they have done.

These business-killing managers who are making a specialty of giving two admissions for five cents, have lately added a special feature of giving carnations to each patron of their theater on Saturday, and Dame Rumor has it now that commencing next week, they will sell a five-cent admission ticket for any one of their three theaters, which will entitle the holder thereof to free admission to both of their other theaters.

Aside from these suicidal actions on the part of those managers who seem to have adopted the motto of "Rule or Ruin," the moving picture industry is running along the regular line. All managers enjoying fair patronage, while the projection in general is far above that which your correspondent has seen in other cities.

Mr. Jacob Silverman, of Altoona, Pa., has been in Harrisburg during the past two weeks looking after the interests of the Pastime Photoplay, during his brother, Ike Silverman's, absence.

J. A. Farrah, traveling representative of the General Film Company of Wilkes Barre, Pa., was in the city recently, in conference with the other exhibitors, relative to the two-for-five and three-for-five admission inaugurated by the management of the Victoria, Lyric and Star Theaters.

MAXWELL H. HITE.

IN THE SOUTHWEST.

Loss of $1,800 was caused to Nichols' moving picture theater show in Bartlett, Tex., by fire recently.

Carson and Company are constructing a one-story brick building on Main Street, Colgate, Okla., which will be used for a moving picture show.

Ten cases against managers of moving shows in Fort Worth, Tex., growing out of the alleged violation of the Sunday law by having their photoplay houses open on Sunday, were tried and resulted in acquittals.

Moving pictures on practical farming subjects and slides are used by the poultry, live stock and domestic science and special training which is sent out by the Agricultural & Mechanical college through Oklahoma.

Rev. Robert Gordon, who recently went to Topeka, Kan., uses moving pictures as the principal part of his sermons, but astonished the residents by his first advertisement—two columns in heavy black type.

One of the two ordinances prohibiting the operation of theaters and moving picture shows on Sunday has been repealed by the city commission at Fort Worth, Texas. This leaves the city with an ordinance conforming to the state statute.

G. E. Ward, Box 127, Lampasas, Texas, has announced that he wishes capital to patent, in at least five leading countries, an electric device which will positively control the talking machine in true unison with the subjects as they appear upon the screen. He declares it would be applied to all Kinetoscopes without radical changes. It is not complicated and is of few parts.

The James G. Glass Construction Company of New York, is building a new Opera House at San Marcos, Texas.

Business men of various Texas towns who saw the moving picture show given in connection with the public health exhibition of the United Charities at Dallas, were sufficiently interested to make arrangements to have these films shown in their home cities.

Rabbi George Fox of the Tempel Beth El, at Fort Worth, Texas, has declared in favor of the properly censored Sunday shows. "If ever there was a time when men need recreation it is now. We work at a fearful rate of speed. The machinery of social life is very complex: the men and the women who toil in the stores and factories strain themselves almost to their very souls, for competition is keen, and the human body and mind must work fast and think fast so that the next one shall not overtop. The millions of wheels, turning billions of times, shatter nervous systems; the countless rows of figures, conned by the thousands of workers, fag the brain, and the men in the executive positions who stretch every nerve to discover something that the competitor has not, strain their minds. And from all of this men need a rest. Life is strenuous and we love to live. Cost of living is high and many now have cut off their luxuries. Five and a half or six days of incessant body-destroying toil force men to seek an altogether different kind of life during the few hours of respite from work, and the human brain and body are so constructed that that which is most easily digested mentally or that which needs least thought or that which pleases the sense most, is just what is needed for recreation. There ought to be time enough for those who wish it to indulge themselves in whatever innocent pleasures they desire, when they are not at work. And if this opportunity is not given them, our city will loose its working men. Many of those who cannot indulge in innocent amusement because of the law, take to harmful ones where the law will not reach them; those who are able, leave the city and stay away Sunday, and those who make their headquarters here not only stay away and spend their money elsewhere, but what is more harmful, they speak of the city in a slighting way."

H. C. Stolp has sold his interest in the Deandt Theater, at Amarillo, Tex., to Anding & Berger, who are now constructing a $20,000 theater at Childress and opening a picture and vaudeville house at Wichita Falls.

F. H. M.

IN THE NORTHWEST.

Press dispatches blame the death of five-year-old Sinclair Chissus, of Redford, Michigan, to a film showing Halowe'n bobgoblins and witches in a Detroit moving picture show, instead of heart disease, with which the boy was ailing.

B. B. Jackson, assistant superintendent of the Minneapolis public schools, returned from a convention of the Social Center Association of America at Madison, Wis., firmly impressed with the idea that public school buildings of the city should be used for motion picture shows of historical and educational value. Nearly all moving picture shows of Minneapolis promised to aid Tag Day campaign in that city by exhibiting slides which show the results of Tag Day by brightening lives of poor children and caring for sick persons. One manager offered to devote fifty per cent of his proceeds to the purpose.

The Washington State Association for the Prevention and relief of Tuberculois has adopted moving pictures to help the cause and three films were recently exhibited to students and teachers at the State University at Spokane.

Following the action of the Lansing, Mich., city council,, in rescinding a resolution providing for submitting to the people the question as to whether moving picture shows should be allowed to remain open on Sunday, warrants for four managers, charged with violating the "Closed-Sunday" ordinance were secured by the city attorney.

The Silver City Amusement Company will erect a $14,000 theater at Twentieth and National Avenue, in Milwaukee, Wis. The Crowley Realty Company has let contract for a $10,000 theater at National and Thirtieth Avenues. This makes five new amusement houses for the south side of Milwaukee in the course of a year.

Rev. Perley P. Womer, pastor of Park Congregational church of St. Paul, has adopted moving pictures as a part of the regular Sunday service. "David and Goliath, or the Battle Between Brain and Brawn," was the first film shown.

The New Majestic Theater Company of La Crosse, Wis., has purchased the Orpheum Theater, at La Crosse, Wis.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Ned E. Depinet, for several years traveling solicitor for the General Film Co., New Orleans office, has tendered his resignation to that company, to join the ranks with the Consolidated Film & Supply Co. of New Orleans. Mr. Depinet leaves with the best wishes of the manager and the goodwill of his former employers.

"WHEN ARE THEY GOING TO?"

G!

A. L. Simpson, Inc.

"I Fondly Dream Dear One of Yours"—Pub. by Simpson.
"Bamboo Land"—Pub. by J. H. Antlerbrede & Co., Indianapolis, Ind.
"Oh, You Little Rascal"—Pub. by Geo. N. Meyer Music Company.
"Tell Me, Sweet Rose"—Pub. by F. B. Haviland Co.
"Moontime Is Spoontime (When You're with the Girl You Love)"—Pub. by J. H. Antlerbrede & Co.
"Drifting in Dreams with You"—Pub. by J. H. Antlerbrede & Co., Indianapolis, Ind.

Levi Co.

"That Baboon Baby Dance"—Pub. by Shapiro.
"It's Lonesome on Broadway"—Pub. by Shapiro.
"They Don't Speak to One Another Now"—Pub. by Shapiro.

Excelsior Slide Co.

"Snowtime, Deary"—Pub. by Blood-Kuehler Co.
"Baby Is Calling"—Pub. by J. W. Wieneckson Co., Hammond, Ind.
"Cindy"—Pub. by Kendis & Paley, New York.
"Alabama"—Pub. by Newton B. Heims Co.
"Rose of Erin"—Pub. by G. Taylor.

DeWitt C. Wheeler.

"By the Light of the Jungle Moon"—Pub. by J. H. Remick & Co.
"I Think of Home and Mother When It's Christmas Time"—Pub. by J. H. Remick & Co.

The [illegible] Where Lincoln Went"—[illegible] Pub. Co., Boston.

Niagara Slide Co.

"I Love"—Pub. by Berlin.
"Knight of the Road"—Pub. by Berlin.

Scott & Van Altena.

"Take Me Back to the Garden of Love"—Pub. by Ted Snyder.
"Come Over, Joe"—Pub. by Jeff T. Branen.
"I Never Had a Man to Love Me Like You"—Pub. by Harry Von Tilzer.
"In Dear Old Ireland Where the River Kenmare Flows"—Pub. by Will Rossiter.
"Nobody Bothers About Me"—Pub. by Fred Heberlein Co.
"Chicken Rag"—Pub. by J. Fred Helf Co.
"My Bombay Maid"—Pub. by F. B. Haviland.
"She Never Was in Ireland But She's Irish Just the Same"—Pub. by Fred Heberlein Co.

FILMS OF NEW YORK.

With fifteen manufacturers of motion pictures actively engaged in business in New York, it remained for a Philadelphia concern to send a troupe to the city to photograph bits of New York scenes in response to the demand from the out-of-town exhibitors. New York sights are so familiar to New Yorkers that they fail to realize that the man in Grand Island, Neb., never has seen the famous sky line or the East River bridges, so the troupe from Philadelphia is just now adding comedy to the sights, to the huge delight of the small boys, who are quick to recognize their friends from the "movies" in flesh and blood.—Times, Pekin, Ill.

Doing business with us is like making love to a rich widow

You Can't Overdo It

Send for Our Latest Catalogue and Prices

Chicago Song Slide Exchange
6th Floor, Powers Bldg. Dept. I.
N. E. Cor. Monroe & Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The Slides that Please the Eyes
SCOTT & VAN ALTENA
Special Slides for Scientific Advertising Purposes
59 Pearl Street New York City

:: The ::
SPEIGEL MOTION SLIDE
The slide that entertains your patrons
The slide that brings the Advertisers results
The slide that pays the exhibitor better rates
A trial will convince you Write for illustrated catalogue
THE AMERICAN MOTION SLIDE COMPANY
611 First National Bank Building - CHICAGO, ILL.

ADVERTISING SLIDES
FOR ANY BUSINESS
THE EXCELSIOR CO.
61 West 14th St., New York City
Makers of SLIDES for 16 YEARS 16
"NUFF SAID"

Get Novelties in Advertising and Scientific Slides
A. L. SIMPSON, Inc.
113 West 132nd St. New York

Song Slides For Rent
FULL WEEK'S SUPPLY
UNITED SLIDE ADV. CO.
61 West 14th St. New York City

You can rent - - GOLDEN SONG REVUE
From your Exchange. The biggest attraction ever put on slides. Endorsed by over 100 leading Vaudeville Theatres.
Cartoons by R. L. Goldberg. Made exclusively by
LEVI CO., Inc. 1560 Broadway, New York City

LICENSED Film Stories

MELIES.

A WOMAN'S GRATITUDE (Jan. 4).—Pedro, a half-breed, crazed with drink, is brutally choking his wife when Tom Brown, a middle-aged prospector, happens along and rushes to her rescue, dealing Pedro many a hard blow, which he does not soon forget. This is evidenced by the half-breed's immediate determination to have revenge at any price.

Tom continues his way to the Assay Office, where his specimens of ore indicate that he has struck a rich copper vein. The good news spreads like fire and does not miss the ears of Pedro. The latter follows Tom to the place of his claim, struggles with him and throws him over the cliff. Then Pedro tears Tom's claim to pieces and places his own upon the stake in its stead.

Scene from "A Woman's Gratitude" (Melies.)

Meanwhile Pedro's wife, who had seen the two pass her house, scents a plot, and follows on foot the tracks left by their horses, arriving just in time to discover Pedro's dastardly work. In vain she looks for the man who had once saved her life, but he was not to be found. At the foot of the cliff, injured and wounded, he tears a bit of his flannel shirt and with it flags the express train.

The grateful woman, meantime, pieced Tom's claim together and rides to the Register's office, where she exposes Pedro's crime. At the same time there comes a telegram telling of finding Tom Brown, assaulted by one Pedro.

The latter is thrown in jail, but Tom, when he recovers, pays the half-breed's fine on his wife's account, and by his noble action inspires reconciliation and happiness into the home of Pedro, where it had never existed before.

KALEM.

THE "REVENUE" AND THE GIRL (Dec. 25).—The revenue officers plan to attack an illicit still located in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Kentucky. Martin is sent ahead to reconnoitre. While on his way he meets a daughter of the hills, who, suspecting his design, sets him on the wrong trail. Riding on a short distance he learns he is going the wrong way and turns back. Taking up the trail of the girl, he follows her to the still and is captured by the lookout. In the meantime the revenue officers, becoming anxious, search the hills with powerful glasses. From the side of a far-away hill they see three or four men apparently coming out of the earth. Noting the location, they come upon the moonshiners and effect a capture. Returning to the place where they saw the men come out they find the entrance to a natural cave. Entering, they capture the balance of the moonshiners and set fire to the still. Bess, who has been away, returns to the still after the capture, and finds the cave filled with smoke. Knowing that Martin, the revenue officer, is confined in an inner room, she, at the risk of her life, enters, cuts the revenue man's bonds and drags him to air and freedom. In the meantime, the revenue officers have taken the moonshiners to their nearby home preparatory to taking them to the nearest county seat for trial. Bess and Martin arriving at the house, Martin tells of his rescue by the brave girl. While Martin is describing his capture and rescue, Bess learns that her father and brothers are bound and prisoners in the adjoining room. A plan to free them quickly enters her head. Turning to the revenue men she says, You'all must try our mountain water before you go." Taking the bucket she starts out for the well. Quickly changing her course, she runs around a corner of the house, crawls in a window of the room where the captives are held prisoners. Cutting the cords that bind them they rapidly make their escape.

Returning to the house Bess gives each of the revenue men a drink of water and engages them in conversation in order to give time for the prisoners to get a good start. A few minutes later, however, their escape is discovered and they are about to arrest Bess on suspicion of aiding them. One of the revenue men picks up a note in the room recently occupied by the prisoners, reading: "Give you our word never to cross with the law again. You will find your horses at the Spider Creek Bridge. We mean to play the game square. Don't touch the little girl. Remember she saved Martin's life.

"The Gormands of Kentucky."

The "Revenues" decide to take the matter philosophically and start off on foot for their horses.

THE HIGHER TOLL (Dec. 27).—Just before her father's death, Helen made him a promise that she would care for her young sister, Dorothy, and this promise she fulfilled to the letter.

Two years later Dorothy meets Edgar and becomes interested in him. Edgar is presented to Helen, and they appear to be mutually attached to one another. Shortly afterward Dorothy, with innocent modesty, confesses to Helen that she is in love with Edgar. This fills Helen with consternation, but she determines to sacrifice herself that Dorothy may be happy.

The general foreman of the girls' ranch is very much in love with Dorothy and tries to force his attentions upon her, this eventually causing his discharge. In his mean, low way he blames Edgar for his dismissal, and determines to wreak vengeance upon the newcomer, but is unsuccessful, and his bad actions react only upon himself.

Edgar, while apparently at first is strongly attracted to Helen, learns that he really loves the younger sister, Dorothy.

Helen at her father's grave, renews her pledge, and thus pays "The Higher Toll."

THE MAID'S DOUBLE (Dec. 29).—This story deals with two girls who were exact doubles, the one an unscrupulous maid, and the other, Jane, a young lady of high social standing. The maid takes a valuable necklace from her mistress and leaves for the railroad station. Jane, who has just returned from a long visit abroad, receives a note from her fiance's mother, inviting her to pay them a visit. She arrives at the station at the same time the maid appears in her flight.

The loss of the necklace is discovered and a detective engaged by the owner. In the maid's room he finds clues which establish a suspicion already formed, and he hastens to the station to arrest her.

The maid and Jane meet. The former's confederate comes in and informs her of the approaching officer, and she then notices the striking resemblance between herself and Jane. In her haste to seclude herself, she picks up Jane's hand-bag instead of her own. The detective arrives and arrests the protesting Jane, who does not know what to make of the proceeding, but the officer is doubly sure that he is right when he picks up a hand-bag and discovers the missing jewelry.

While Jane is being led off to prison, her sweetheart, Jack, hastens into the station. The maid has just read Jane's note, found in the hand-bag, when Jack rushes in and takes her in his arms, thinking she is Jane. The maid, anxious to lose her identity, keeps up the illusion and accompanies Jack to his home.

At police headquarters Jane implores the sergeant to take her to Jack's home for identification. To this the officer finally consents, and a detective is sent with the unfortunate young lady. The maid's treachery is disclosed and she is taken to prison, while Jane receives a belated welcome from Jack and his mother.

ECLIPSE.

THE STOLEN TREASURE (Dec. 27).—Tommy and his sister Mary, two beggar children, are invited into the house of a kind-hearted lady, where they receive food and money. Unfortunately, however, they happen to catch sight of a jewel box which is lying upon the desk.

Returning home, after delivering their gain, they innocently tell of the treasure. The wicked father finds out from them the exact location of the box, and soon afterwards sneaks out and secures it.

His actions are watched by the children, however, who after recovering the booty, return it to the rightful owners.

For this they are rewarded bountifully, whereby proving again the old adage: "Honesty is the best policy."

FAIR EXCHANGE IS NO ROBBERY (Dec. 27).—Mrs. Brown trades her costume for a pair of bloomers, and parading the streets, causes no little amusement. When the crowd of admirers increases, she manages to make her escape in a taxicab.

GAUMONT.

FROM PITY TO LOVE (Dec. 26).—Count Henry, learning that he is a leper, seeks seclusion in a tenant's cottage. There he is told that the only known cure for the dread malady requires the heart's blood of a young girl.

Louisa, the tenant's daughter, pities the count greatly, and decides to go to the physician to offer herself for sacrifice.

The count will not allow the deed, however, and reaches the cottage just in time to prevent it.

Learning that the doctor's diagnosis was wrong, and deeply touched by the girl's devotion, Henry resolves to ask Louisa to change her pity to love.

SCENES OFF THE COAST OF NORTH AFRICA (Dec. 26).—Showing the curious customs and dwellings of the inhabitants of some of the Canary Islands.

CURING A RECKLESS STUDENT (Dec. 30).—Charlie is a general favorite at college, and although he neglects his studies, he does not fail to indulge in all the college pastimes, including gambling.

This gay life soon reduces his supply of funds, and he is forced to write home for more.

To raise the required sum, his doting father decides to sell his body to the university. In attempting to carry out this purpose, he unintentionally relates the whole story to the head master. The latter is greatly incensed and summoning the class for a lecture on anatomy, with the aid of the boy's father, teaches Charlie a lesson that he will never forget.

ESSANAY.

A STORY OF THE WEST (Dec. 26).—Jim Griggs, an outlaw, being transported from the scene of his arrest to the county jail in a neighboring town, knocks out the sheriff and escapes through the car window when the train is going at a good speed. He is pursued, but finds a hiding place in the garret of a prospector's cabin. The prospector a few minutes later is wounded by an explosion of dynamite, his arms being completely paralyzed. The man-hunters arrive, searching for Griggs, but when they leave the prospector's wife, in an effort to give courage and strength to her husband, asks him to imagine that they are about to be robbed of their savings, bringing out at the same time, several bags of nuggets. The outlaw, above, sees this, and biding his time, soon sees an opportunity to make away with the gold. The wife, however, discovers him and a fight between the two results. The prospector hears the noise, and with superhuman strength rushes out and aids his wife. The strength in his arms returns and the outlaw is soon overpowered and turned over to the sheriff and posse.

FOR MEMORY'S SAKE (Dec. 28).—Jim and Helen are lovers and until the small fortune of Helen and her family are swept away, the future seems roseate for the happy couple. Helen now refuses to accept Jim's proposal of marriage, and obtains employment on the stage. Fifteen years later, Jim's little sister, now grown to young womanhood, follows in the footsteps of her brother's sweetheart. By an odd coincidence they are employed in the same company. Not until Helen shields the girl from the insults of the stage manager, which results in their both being discharged, does she learn that Leone is Jim's sister.

ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper

INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON, (POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA. STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

I OPEN MY BOOST PACK THIS WEEK---GET YOURS!

Beginning with this week, I'm going to be the genuine Santa Claus of the moving picture business. I'm going to do it all through my special BOOST DEPARTMENT, and what I want the exhibitor to tell me is for you? I'm ready now to send you gifts all through next year, but I want to send you something useful—something that will help your business, because I know that if your business is good, mine will be, too. So I want to boost yours first. Meanwhile, I'm satisfied to know that my along lines that will make me worthy of your enthusiastic support. The very first pictures my new staff gave me made my heart leap for joy. I'd be a fool to go into big advertising if my present product did not back up the statements I make here. I'd only fool you once, then you'd point to me as the biggest fakir in the business. And I wouldn't blame you, BUT I'm not going to give you the chance. I'm going to do things so that when you read that I pronounce a film good, it's no "bunk." You will learn to bank on my word and trust in me. I'm now in complete personal charge of my business, and when I tell you something it's because I know it's so. The only possible excuse I'll have for deceiving you is when my expensive staff is deceiving me; but am I paying them money to do that? Answer it yourself.

How Shall I Spend My Money

DUPLEX STUDIO IS WORKING

Now you've got it from me in person, and I want you to chew on what I've said until you get it down. Wait until you catch me in bad faith, and then fire it into me for all you're worth,—but not until then!

Released Tuesday, Dec. 26th.

"THE SIGN OF THE HELMET"

AND

"WHERE STEEL MEETS CLOUD"

Released Saturday, Dec. 30th.

"A MAIL BAG ROMANCE"

A full reel feature

Read the synopses, in this issue, and see if they don't even SOUND different from the ordinary run of pictures. Then get 'em!

POWERS MOTION PICTURE CO.

511 W. 42nd Street, New York City gets Her persuades Helen to return home with her where she meets Jim and consents to be his wife.

A BIRD IN THE HAND (Dec. 29).—It is New Year's Day and Jim and his wife are despondent because they have no turkey for the dinner. Jim confesses his wife that he will get a turkey, by fair means or foul, and leaves the house. Unsuccessful in a turkey raffle he decides to pawn his suit, which he sells for five dollars. In the meantime, his wife pawns the other suit and the two find that they have two turkeys, while Dick has no suit. Unbeknownst to Jim the wife gives her turkey to the Salvation army, while Jim gives his to the janitor. The loss is discovered and the two are in hysterics when a box, containing pies and a turkey, arrives from mother. This turkey is pulled to the table, while Jim, with a rusty musket, parades the room on guard.

BRONCHO BILLY'S ADVENTURE (Dec. 30).—Broncho Billy, on a pilgrimage, pulls up at a small tavern and takes a room there for the night. The pretty daughter of the tavern-keeper has many sweethearts, but the father, fearing he will lose his daughter, starts a row with them, wounding one seriously. Broncho Billy takes the wounded man's part and makes the tavern-keeper provide a bed for him, while the doctor is sent for. The others are determined to lynch the tavern-keeper, but are prevented from doing so by Broncho Billy, who, however, declares that if the girl's sweetheart dies, he will turn her father over to the wounded man's pals. Luckily, the young man recovers and the old tavern-keeper is persuaded to give the young couple his blessing.

EDISON.

PAPA'S SWEETHEART (Dec. 26).—In the first scene we see a group of children at a window watching for the arrival of their father. Following this we learn that the little family lacks a mother.

The next scene brings us to a theater-box party. The father of the little family meets another woman. It soon becomes evident that he intends to marry again and at last he brings this other woman to the house. While he is present, she seems to be fond of the children, but once he is out of the room we see that her fondness is hardly skin-deep. Soon the mother's picture is removed from over the fireplace and evidently the new wedding will take place. Little Margaret, taking care of the children, finds them hard to amuse one day, and going up into the garret, finds some old clothes, in which they all dress.

By chance she puts on the very costume which was used when her mother posed for the big portrait, now absent from its place over the mantel, and so it happens that when the father comes home at night, there comes down the stairs into the light, apparently a vision of the little wife he loved. We can almost feel with him the sudden awakening and realization that she was his only love, and that her daughter need be his only sweetheart now.

MODERN WEAPONS FOR FIGHTING FIRE, NEW YORK CITY (Dec. 26).—The shipping and water-front buildings are safeguarded by a fleet of nine fireboats, which for speed and power are unequaled. When called upon, these boats can throw from sixteen to twenty-five powerful streams.

The high pressure system installed has been wonderfully successful. Pumping stations have been built in the downtown district, where the turning in of an alarm puts their powerful pumps into action, which immediately throws a pressure upwards of one hundred and fifty pounds into the mains.

Another feature is the gradual replacing of horse drawn by motor driven apparatus.

The superiority of motor apparatus is proven in long runs. While the horses probably out-distance the motor in a short dash, it is the motor that will lead in a run of any great length.

Steam pumping engines are being replaced by gasoline pumping engines, which not only throw a more powerful stream, but reach the fire and get into action in a much shorter space of time.

THE STUFF THAT DREAMS ARE MADE OF (Dec. 27).—Nell was poor, but pretty, and was loved by a poor country boy. Nellie's father had a farm, and the aforesaid farm had a mortgage, and, of course, that mortgage was about to be closed by a rich old man, who had a proud young daughter who smiled on the poor country lad. And little Nellie's heart beat fast and hard, until she fell asleep looking at the firelight. And when next we see [illegible] Nellie Brown again she has become Nellie, the poor typewriter, in a great city. Neille is loved by Mr. Villain. Her brave young lover knocks Mr. Villain down, and therefore enters Miss Heavywoman, who at once falls in love with the poor young man. Nell is locked in a safe and hurled down from the thirty-third floor of a sky-scraper. But ere she reaches terra firma, our young hero catches the safe in his arms and releases poor Nellie, only to fall into the hands of Mr. Villain, disguised as a detective, and taken to prison for robbing the safe. What hero was ever cast into prison who was not rescued by Miss Heroine? This was no exception to the rule, and consequently, Miss Heavywoman was foiled. Then poor Nellie Brown awakes and wonders at the queer stuff dreams are made of.

A ROMANCE OF THE CLIFF DWELLERS (Dec. 29).—The story itself deals with the primitive instinct of mankind—to desire was to take at strength of arms, and thus one of the chiefs chose for his own a maiden fair who was loved in turn by a young brave, and whose admiration she returned. But like unto the dark ages, whenever a man desired a maid he took her with or without her leave. Thus far did the chief go, but her lover decides to match his strength of arms for so fair a bride, and they fight upon the cliff's edge. But here the maid takes up the bow of fate and sends an arrow into the heart of her captor. Thus the two forest lovers are united, but a life for a life is the law of their race and the lover is brought to the council chamber and tried before his kinsmen. To shield the woman he loves he remains silent. He is tortured at the council fire, but still he will not speak until his groans of agony and despair reach the ears of the maiden, who, braving all the members of her race, confesses and is condemned to take the awful plunge over the falls into the black pool at dawn. The man and maid are permitted to watch the coming of the day together. Then they are parted and she goes forth to meet her death alone. Placed in a canoe, and covered with pine boughs, she is lashed in and slowly left to drift onward to her fate. An awe-inspiring moment, and the frail bark plunges downward into the dark depths below.

UNCLE HIRAM'S LIST (Dec. 30).—Uncle Hiram is the oldest resident of the village, and has appointed himself public censor. To this end he institutes the "skunk list," to which he adds from day to day the names of those who trespass beyond his ideas of the lines of proper decorum.

One day Jimmie Long is playing marbles, when a boy considerably older attempts to take them from him. Jimmie resents this and in the fight that follows, he lays his opponent low by striking him with a club. Uncle Hiram seeing this, though not knowing the cause, p[illegible] Jimmie on the skunk list as a coward. All pleas are in vain, and when his sweetheart scorns him, Jimmie is heart-broken. He can't eat and at night his bed is surrounded by goblins who jeer at him in fiendish glee for being a coward. Jimmie resolves to redeem his good name and to this end proceeds to lick most of the boys in the village. But Uncle Hiram refuses to erase his name. Jimmie rescues a puppy, which a man is about to drown. Again Uncle Hiram refuses. Finally Jimmie is pasing Jones' barn, when some boys rush out, telling him the barn is on fire, and that one of their number was unable to escape. Jimmie goes into the burning barn, finds the boy, but is unable to drag him out and is also overcome. He is rescued in the nick of time and carried home, seriously burned. Through all his pain he has but one thought, he must see Uncle Hiram. Uncle Hiram is brought from the fire, where he is directing the volunteer department, to Jimmie's bedside, and Jimmie repeats his plea to have his name erased. This time Uncle Hiram relents and not only takes Jimmie's name from the skunk list, but adds it to the list of heroes, such as George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

VITAGRAPH.

SOME GOOD IN ALL (Dec. 25).—John Lane is a prosperous business man, a widower, who lives in a large house with his seven-year-old daughter Betty. Lane has an enemy, one Ben Hartley, who, by the aid of some forged papers, threatens to expose Lane and put his in prison. The night of the story opens with Lane receiving a letter from Hartley, who demands $10,000, to be paid at midnight, that night. Lane has not that much ready money in the house, and no way to get it. He thinks it all out and decides to commit suicide. He stands before a mirror and is about to pull the trigger, when Bill, the burglar, steps into the room, stopping him.

Bill has broken into the house, and is going through it, enters the room occupied by little Betty. His heart is touched by the beauty and innocence of the sleeping child, and he is about to leave the house when he witnesses the preparation of Lane's suicide. He pleads with Lane not to do it, leading him upstairs and showing him the sleeping child, and calling upon the father to consider his duty and responsibility to her. Lane shows Bill the letter, but the latter waves it aside, still playing on the father's love for his daughter. While they are talking, the door bell rings. Hartley is coming for his blackmail. Bill tells Lane that he will look after Mr. Hartley; Lane admits Hartley to the house and they enter the library. Bill steps from behind a screen, holding both of them up; he forces them into a closet, first relieving Hartley of the wallet containing the evidence against Lane. He gives the papers to Lane, after which he puts them both into the closet. They finally get out; Lane destroys the fictitious papers and orders Hartley from the house. The child, awakened by the noise, rushes down to her father, who smothers her with kisses. Bill the burglar, is seen looking in a window.

THE YOUNGER BROTHER (Dec. 28).—When the two Werner brothers are called to the front it is not strange that the mother is very solitous about the younger brother and enjoins the older boy to care for and defend him at all hazards. The English army is transported to the Soudan and is now encamped in the midst of the activities of the campaign. A messenger arrives and announces that the Arabs and the Dervishes are preparing to attack the encampment.

The younger of the two brothers is directed to act as an out-post on the border of the desert. He had scarcely taken up his position on picket duty when he is dragged away to an Arabian village and imprisoned. A messenger rides into camp and informs the older boy that his brother is taken captive. He reaches the Arabian village and learns that his brother is soon to be put to death. The older brother overpowers a Deverish priest and dons his robes. He approaches the executioner and declares that Allah refuses the young man put to death. He is released, but before the two brothers reach a place of safety, the real priest who had been bound rushes to the Arabian camp, explains what has happened and together with a number of Arabs go in pursuit of the brothers. Just as they are captured a company of English Fusileers and Scotch Kilties come to their rescue and put the Arabs to flight.

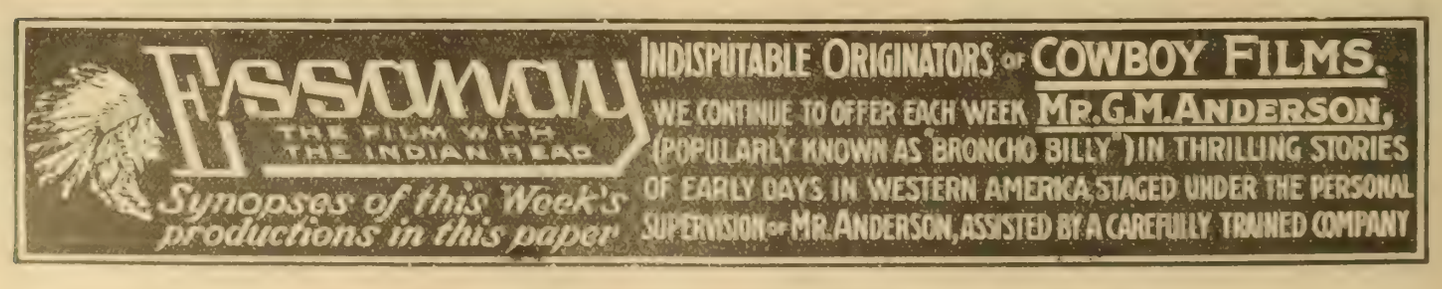
At the close of the war, the brothers are received with open arms by their parents.

TESTING HIS COURAGE (Dec. 27).—On his first visit to the West Robert Marsden is looked upon as a tenderfoot. The ranchers, to fill him with a fear and dread of the dangers of the Wild West, tell him of the celebrated bandit and terror of the country, "Red Mask." Marsden, in conversation with Evelyn, the ranch owner's daughter, at whose home he is staying, tells her that he is not at all disturbed by these terrible tales, and that he would not go out of his way to avoid meeting the man-killer. Evelyn makes up her mind to test his courage.

Dressing herself as a cowboy, she takes up a position at the corner of the roads where she knows that Bob will have to pass on his way to town. She falls in her own trap, however. "Red Mask" passes that way and holds her up at the point of his revolver. The keen eye of the outlaw at once detects that she is a woman, and stripping the mask from her face, indulges in a hearty laugh.

At this moment Bob Marsden appears upon the scene and commands "Red Mask" to throw up his hands. He dare not refuse when he sees that Bob has the drop on him. Evelyn comes to Bob's assistance, and between the two he succeeds in taking the bandit to the sheriff, securing the reward. On his return home Bob offers the reward to Evelyn, to whom he says it rightfully belongs. She refuses to take it. He tells her that there is only one reward for him. She asks him what it is and he replies, it is she. She pays it by consenting to become his wife. As a man of nerve and courage Bob Marsden is [illegible] to none.

A DOUBLY DESIRED ORPHAN (Dec. 29).—Mrs. Johnson, a widow, and Mr. Brown, widower, childless and alone, are very unhappy and long for the companionship of home and family. By a strange coincidence, both hit upon the same idea, of adopting an orphan and bringing it up as their own. Mrs. Johnson visits the Hills[illegible] Orphan



ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON,
(POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES
OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL
SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

DANTE'S INFERNO

Milano Five Reels—Helio's Two Reels

NOW OPEN FOR BOOKINGS

IN

New York State

Now showing with tremendous success at Gane's Manhattan Theatre on Broadway

Secure Your Bookings Now

Superior Feature Film Company

32 Union Square, New York City

Exclusive Owners of New York State Rights

More Money In The Cash Box

When you attract bigger crowds you make more money. And if you show your pictures to better advantage than your competitors, you most certainly will get and hold more people all the time. You can show every film to best advantage by using the

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lens

This lens gives clear, large, brilliant pictures that are sharp and evenly lighted down to the very edge of the field. The Bausch & Lomb Projection Lens on your moving picture machine means more money in your cash box.

Send for descriptive literature 62D.

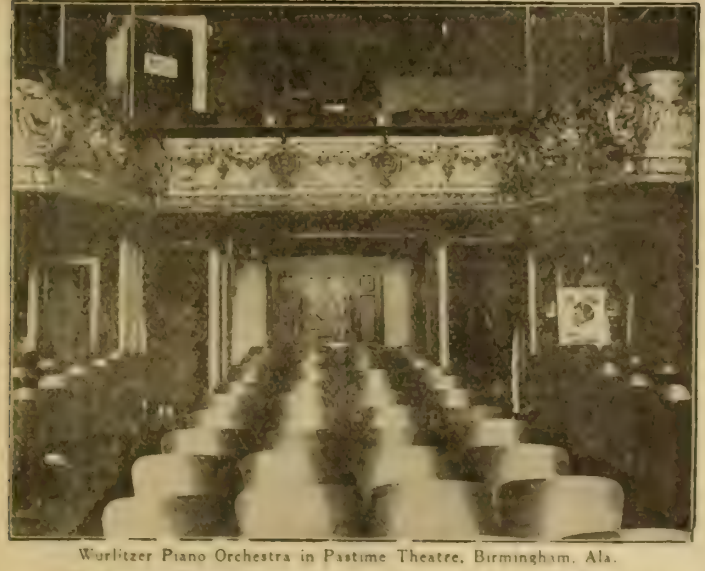
Our name, backed by over half a century of experience, is on all our products—lenses, microscopes, field glasses, projection apparatus, engineering and other scientific instruments.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

NEW YORK WASHINGTON CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO
LONDON ROCHESTER, N.Y. FRANKFORT

WURLITZER

World's Largest Mfrs. Established 1856



Wurlitzer Piano Orchestra in Pastime Theatre, Birmingham, Ala.

Write for 32-page booklet, showing

Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments

in the leading picture theatres of the country.

The Wurlitzer Instruments furnish better music than musicians and reduce expenses. 50 different styles; time payments; big catalog free. If you can't call, write to our nearest branch.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company

CINCINNATI 117 121 E. 4th | NEW YORK 25-27 W. 42d | CHICAGO 329-331 S. Wabash | PHILADELPHIA 1811 Chestnut
ST. LOUIS 912 Pine | CLEVELAND 800 Huron Road | BUFFALO 701 Main | LOUISVILLE 426 W. Green | COLUMBUS 77 E. Main

Mr. M. P. Exhibitor:

As a Magnate for your Box Office that will stimulate your business and fertilize your Bank Roll you must have Good Feature Attractions.

This is your opportunity to secure exclusive service for all the best Feature Films and Slides on the market.

There is a place for you on our circuit.

And our services cost you nothing.

We personally review each attraction before accepting them and thus warrant only the best, while our service assures you of the best possible prices.

If you desire the good money getting Features for your program and wish to save both time and money, write us at once for a place on our circuit.

Tell us the location and size of your house.

We'll book you the Feature to fill it.

We are here to assist you and our motto is Service.

Don't delay but write us today.

Serviceably yours,

THE TISDALE FEATURE ATTRACTION SYNDICATE OF CHICAGO

401-2-3 Chemical Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

F. M. TISDALE, Pres. F. R. MARTIN, Mgr.

Asylum, and after inspecting the many little inmates, selects as her choice, Helen, a pretty little miss about ten years of age.

Mr. Brown, shortly after Mrs. Johnson has left, comes to the asylum and makes the same choice. They both ask the other to withdraw in favor of the other. The head nurse suggests that Mrs. Johnson and Mr. Brown marry each other, and then they both can have the child for their own. They therefore repair to a minister, are married, and return to the asylum for Helen, whom they take to their hearts, and smilingly accept each other with that happiness and contentment of mind which makes the two one, and the three a complete and happy family.

IN THE CLUTCHES OF A VAPOR BATH (Dec. 30).—Too fat for comfort, and fearing an increase in avoirdupois, Bunny purchases a Vapor Bath, guaranteed to make the fat thin and do the trick with neatness.

In his anxiety to make a trial of the bath he forgets to lock the library door. He places a newspaper on top of the enclosure, and with his head protruding like a turtle, he tries to read the news of the day while he is taking off weight. The door blows open and the draft sweeps the newspaper off the top of the bath. In his efforts to secure it and his fear of the maid entering the room he finds himself in a pretty fix. He is moving about like a sandwich man when a sneak thief enters, and finding our fat friend helpless, proceeds to help himself to Bunny's clothing, containing his coin and jewelry. Giving Bunny the laugh, and gracefully bidding him a fond farewell, he closes the door and leaves.

The thief had scarcely taken his departure, when Fatty's wife, with two lady friends, enter the room and once more he finds himself an object of ridicule and laughter in the eyes of the visiting ladies, very much to the embarrassment of his wife. Finally escaping from his predicament, he proceeds to make junk of the vapor bath, consigning it to the wood pile.

SELIG.

A MODERN RIP (Dec. 25).—Rip, through his inability to say "no" to a proffered drink, has become the ne'er-do-well of the village. Too shiftless to work and care for his wife and little daughter, Rip spends his time fishing. And selling his catch of the day, buys candy for the children instead of taking the money home to his family.

His daughter reproaches him, laughingly, and starts home with him, but Rip meets an old friend, who invites him to have a drink. Despite his daughter's pleadings, Rip goes into the saloon, where he remains until he has spent all his money and is intoxicated.

On the way home, when he finally does come home, some street boys taunt him, and he in retaliation, upsets a grocer's stand, and is taken off to the village calaboose, where he spends the night. In the morning, thoroughly sober, he sees his daughter, who has not forsaken him, and the pitiful sight stirs the latent threads of manhood in him, and he resolves to do better. He is finally liberated by the kindhearted grocer.

Fearing his wife's reception of him, Rip goes fishing, leaving his daughter to placate her with a bit of ribbon which he has bought. While still on the pier, Rip suddenly sees a small child fall into the water, and not hesitating one moment, jumps in after her, and brings her to safety. For this heroism, he is acclaimed a hero, and led to his home in triumph, where his wife, who has prepared a warm reception for him, is led to forgive him. The father of the child, as a reward, gives Rip his first good job, and the end of this picture finds Rip, thoroughly reformed, and his wife and family happy and contented.

THE BULLY OF BINGO GULCH (Dec. 26).—Hiram Hughes, foreman on "Pop" Lynd's ranch in Bingo Gulch, has quit his job. He has had enough of "Wild Jim," who is the pest of the ranch. In despair, Pop goes to Bingo, where he places a sign on the post office, advertising for a new foreman. "Easy" Thompson, the star performer of the "Circle Bar Ranch" show, has had enough of circus life and resigns his job. "Easy" stops at the post office and reads Pop Lynd's sign, "Foreman wanted who can handle Wild Jim." He decides to tackle the job and asks the bystanders the way to Pop's ranch.

At the ranch, "Wild Jim" is having another spree and Pop has a job on his hands. He tries to make Jim go to work but is knocked down for his intervention. Jim then attempts to caress Jess. At this moment "Easy" rides in, rescues Jess and knocks the bully down. Pop, encouraged by "Easy," discharges "Wild Jim." "Easy" gets the job as foreman, and, incidentally, falls in love with Jess.

A few days later, "Wild Jim" sends a note to the cowboys of Bingo Gulch Ranch saying that he is on his way to "get" the new foreman. "Easy" sees the note and starts off alone to meet Jim. Pop and Jess, in terror for "Easy's safety, call all the cowboys and start off to save their new foreman from "Wild Jim." The rescuing party comes on "Easy" and "Wild Jim" near the Bingo post office. They find a very tame bully indeed. "Wild Jim" is wobbling along on "Easy's" bicycle, while "Easy" is nonchalantly riding along behind on Jim's horse. "Wild Jim" is sent away from Bingo on the bicycle, and "Easy," Jess and the cowboys ride back to the ranch. "Easy" shyly proposes to Jess and is accepted.

PAID BACK (Dec. 28).—Judge Darrow, surrounded by all the comforts of a luxurious home and the love and affection of a beautiful daughter, and yet, the foremost thought and interest is centered upon the transaction of the busy commercial world.

Mary loves Dick Livingston and that she is loved in return plainly displeases the father who orders the young suitor from the house. Clandestine meetings are planned, but soon they come to the attention of the irate father and both are ordered to leave.

After her marriage to Dick, she sends an appeal to the father for forgiveness. The enraged father flies into a frenzy and endeavors to destroy anything that would remind him of his daughter. Time rolls on and many circumstances and happenings enter into the unhappy life of Mary. A boy was born to the humble and heart-broken wife.

Mary's appeal to her relentless father avail her naught, but added suffering. Dick, Jr., is a bright, intelligent and industrious son. Just entering upon his career in the busy world, being associated with one of the great daily publications, opportunity at last comes to the son to fulfill the vow of vengeance sworn at the deathbed of his poor unhappy mother. He is assigned on an important case involving suspected bribery, and in the supposedly secure rooms of a great hotel, the transaction that Dick is enabled to see through the keyhole of an adjoining room and later the securing of the actual proof of the transaction by exchanging clothes with the waiter, who had been summoned from the buffet with refreshments—the desired information gained a hurried 'phone message to his editor and preparations are at once made to hold the press until the greatest sensation and a surprise to the journalistic and political world was edited and in the form, Darrow is apprised of the coming appearance of the story, and is desperate—but it is too late—Young Dick Livingston had a debt to pay and revenge was the only asset that could liquidate the obligation and he fought it to that end as stubbornly as the crest-fallen father once did against the pleadings of his only daughter.

THEIR LAST CHANCE (Dec. 29).—Misses Mary and Priscilla West, two elderly spinsters, read an article in the newspaper about the elopement of a lady who won the heart of her boarder by her culinary art. An inspiration seizes them ,and they put up a sign, "Gentlemen Boarders Wanted." Jack Welton sees the sign and becomes a tenant, and becomes devoted to Dorothy West, a niece, who has come to live with her aunts. Montrose Keeble and "Alk Ike" Jones become boarders, and likewise slaves to Dorothy. The spinsters try their charms on the two later boarders, but with small success. Ike finally gets the chance to propose to Dorothy, but Jack, being Johnny-on-the-spot, manages to substitute Montrose for Dorothy. Upon discovering the ruse, Ike is furious and insists upon a duel. Jack, however, persuades them not to fight, and he formulates a plan in which he is sure to be the winner in the end They agree to a fake duel in which both shall pretend to have fallen on the field of honor. As Jack makes them believe that Dorothy will surely rush to the side of the one she thinks the most of, they agree that the loser shall immediately leave the place. They fall for his plan and land themselves in further complications with the old maids. They extricate themselves from their dilemma by hasty flight, while Jack wins the girl, and the sisters realize that they are doomed to a life of spinsterhood.

BIOGRAPH.

CAUGHT WITH THE GOODS (Dec 25).—The celebrated Biograph sleuths again almost catch the real criminals. However, they make a wholesale arrest and are self-satisfied. The vice committee engages their services in getting evidence against a certain gambling parlor. They, with their usual bungling, let the gamblers escape and arrest instead the entire vice committee, who, as a last resource, make the raid themselves, seizing the gambling paraphernalia. Hence, the sleuths, finding them in posession of the good, arrest them as the gamblers.

A MIX-UP IN RAIN COATS.—Brown and Jones are business partners. Brown is a newly-wed, while Jones is still in the lover class. Brown and Jones purchase rain coats that are very much alike, and Jones, receiving a note from his sweetheart, puts it in his rain-coat pocket. That evening there is a switch about of coats owing to Brown taking Jones' coat by mistake. Well, the rest may be imagined.

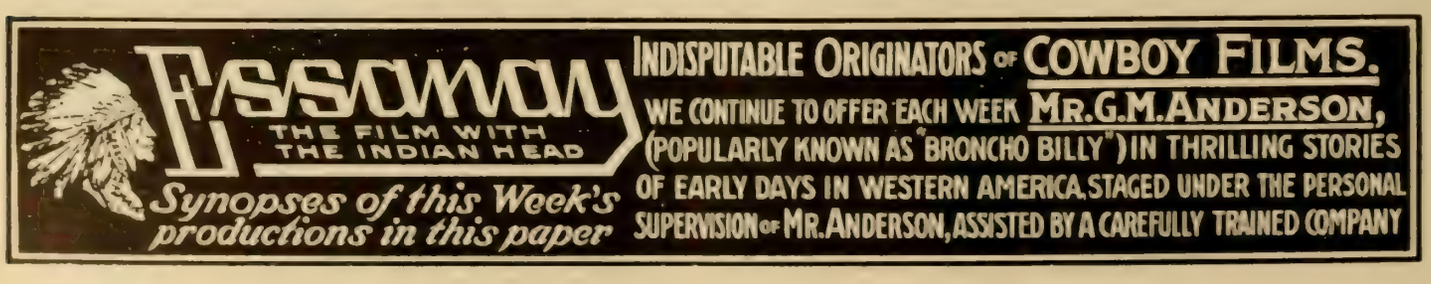
THE VOICE OF THE CHILD (Dec. 28).—The young business man becomes so engrossed with the building up of his new business, that he, to a degree, neglects his wife and little child. Of course, like all enthusiastic business men, he does not realize that his wife tires of the everlasting harangue of business. It is "business, business—always business." Hence it is small wonder that the wife listens to the posionous flatery of the husband's college mate, whom he introduces to her. This false friend tries to strengthen his sinister purpose by arousing the suspicion of the wife against her husband by placing a photograph of his stenographer in his coat pocket, which is found later by the wife. This is apparently most convincing, and the wife consents to go away with this wretch. The maid overhears their plans and informs the husband ,who would wreak vengeance, but the child's cry of "Mamma, Mamma" averts a tragedy of a soul and body.

LUBIN.

SERGEANT WHITE'S PERIL (Dec. 23).—While out riding one day, Sergeant White comes upon a senorita in the clutches of a Mexican. He orders the bad man to empty his gun and be on his way. White's orders are obeyed, but the Mexican gets his revenge by shooting the sergeant while he is crossing the bridge. The girl is again captured and is brought to the brigands' camp. The sergeant, who has fallen into the raging torrent below, manages to catch a branch of a tree. In the meantime, the sergeant's horse runs to the soldiers' camp, and the faithful animal leads the rescuers back to the imperilled sergeant. Unexpectedly the soldiers arrive at the brigands' stronghold, the leader is killed, the remainder is captured, and the sergeant and the girl again meet.

ONE WAY TO WIN (Dec. 25).—Minnie Brown and Billy Ray are very much in love with each other. Poor Ray is refused the daughter's hand by the father, who wishes to secure a husband for his daughter with money. Billy, is a poor barber and one day, while working in his shop, he tells a newspaper reporter, a friend of his, his troubles. His friend suggests that he allow him to put an article in the paper, whereby he, Billy, will fall heir to a fortune. This meets with Billy's approval and the next day there appears in the daily papers an article stating that Mr. Ray has a large fortune left him. Sure enough, the keen eye of Minnie's father sees the article in the paper. He at once plans with his wife to send Billy a letter of apology in regard to the treatment he received when asking for the daughter's hand, and asks him if he won't kindly call, as the girl wishes to see him. Billy loses no time on receipt of the letter, and finding his way to the Brown home, is received by the father and mother with open arms. He asks a small loan of his future father-in-law of $500, which he readily handed to him. A wedding is quickly arranged, and after the ceremony Billy and his bride start for a wedding tour. After the party leaves the house his newspaper friend hands Mr. Brown the letter that Billy left for him, stating that the newspaper article was only a bluff in order that he may win the girl, and thanking him for the loan of the five hundred dollars, with which he intends to open a barber shop in the next town. The wedding guests enjoy the joke and there is nothing left for Mr. and Mrs. Brown to do but to join in the hearty laugh.

THE AMERICAN GIRL (Dec. 27).—Mrs. Preston receives a letter from her friend, Lord Dunbar, stating that he is going to visit her and incidentally remarking that he dislikes American girls, whose habits are too mannish. Dorothy Ames, who is staying with Mrs. Preston, happens to read this letter and is very much put out over its contents, as she is a lover of riding astride and indulging in other masculine sports. Everybody in the household greets him with the exception of Dorothy, who being dressed in riding togs, tries to conceal



ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON,
(POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES
OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL
SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

To Obtain the Best Result You Must Use the

BEST CARBONS

Motion Picture Machines require Carbons that are particularly adapted for the purpose.

Use "Arco-Biograph" Brand

The Distinguishing Mark of our Specially Manufactured

CARBONS

for Motion Picture Machines

CARBONS for all Makes of Flaming Lamps Carried in Stock.

L. E. Frorup & Co., Importers

232-234 Greenwich St., New York

W. E. GREENE
FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

THE OLDEST AND LARGEST INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE IN NEW ENGLAND

Mr. Exhibitor :

Start the Season right by using an Independent Service from a Reliable House. We are buying the Output of the Sales Co. and have some choice services open. Write, wire, or call today at

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.

Telephone: 2187-3790 Oxford

THE PENALTY OF SUCCESS IS CHEAP IMITATION

This is Conclusively Proven By The Number of So-called Current Saving Devices That Have Come And Gone During The Past Four Years Of Successful Operation For The "HALLBERG" Standard Electric Economizer.

The Other Fellows Have Not Made Good. That Is Why Sales of "The Hallberg" Continually INCREASE. The "Hallberg" Economizer is Daily Replacing These Cheaper Devices.

The "HALLBERG" Makes Good, And The Exhibitor, Manager Or Operator of Moving Picture Theatres Who Knows What Is Good Wants It.

It Is Easy To Save On Electric Bills, But The "Hallberg" Is The Only Current Saving Device Which At The Same Time Gives A Splendid Light.

GUARANTEED TO SAVE
On 100 to 125 Volts A.C., 60 to 70%.
On 200 to 250 Volts A.C., 75 to 85%.
On 100 to 125 Volts D.C., 50%.
On 200 to 250 Volts D.C., 70%.
And To Improve Your Light 50% Over Use On Rheostat.

Over 2000 in use for A. C. as well as D. C. and my G. E. Mercury Arc Rectifier is the thing for those who want D. C. at the arc on A. C. circuits

J. H. HALLBERG

36 East 23rd Street - - NEW YORK

[illegible] She is sent by [illegible] expresses his dislike for [illegible]

[illegible] dressed as a Quaker girl, and [illegible] manages to have him propose to her. [illegible] and thinking that she is [illegible] to pay her back.

[illegible] given by Mrs. Preston in honor of [illegible] Dorothy Dorothy is present dressed in full ball gown. Dunbar ignores her entirely, and devotes his time in flirting desperately with other [illegible] the distaste of Dorothy.

[illegible] and riding one day and ordering a horse, follows her. At last he overtakes her, and together they stroll into a conservatory, where he asks her for a flower she is wearing, and renews his declaration of love. After an amusing [illegible] she recovers her heart to him.

THE SOLDIER'S RETURN Dec. 28).—Irene [illegible] father is a small ranchman in [illegible] circumstances, is sought in marriage by John Reynolds, a well-to-do Western farmer. Having in mind the material advantages accruing from such a match, Irene's father is naturally favorable to [illegible] and is much chagrined and disappointed to learn that she has already plighted her love to Tom King, a handsome young cowboy. [illegible] at this stage when the war with Spain [illegible] An attachment of cavalry on their way to the front, pass through the village and the sight of the soldiers determines Tom to enlist in response to President McKinley's appeal for volunteers. He bids his sweetheart an affectionate adieu and departs with the troop for the far-off Philippines. Shortly after his arrival, he participates in a battle and is seriously wounded. By some error his name is printed in the newspaper reports of the [illegible] as being among the dead. A copy of this paper accidentally falls into the hands of Irene, who has faithfully and loyally waited for news of her soldier lover, and she is overwhelmed with grief over the loss which she feels she has sustained. During the time Tom has been away, things have gone badly with the Jerome household, and they have been reduced to a point where it is hard to keep the wolf from the door. John learns of their plight and renews his attentions to Irene, suggesting that while he realizes that she does not love him as much as he would like her to, their marriage would serve to give her a husband's protection, and at the same time place him in a position to care for her parents. In response to this appeal and at the solicitation of her mother, Irene finally consents to marry John and they become engaged. Tom, in the Philippine hospital, finally becomes convalescent, and his thoughts naturally revert to the girl he left behind, and he drops her a letter, telling her of what has occurred, and that he will shortly be homeward bound. This letter falls into the hands of Mr. Jerome, who, reluctant to have anything interfere with the contemplated marriage between his daughter and John, and feeling that he is acting in the girl's interest, destroys it and says nothing to her, as if it has never been received. Tom returns, however, to his native village before the marriage is performed, and when Jack learns the truth, he nobly steps aside in Tom's favor and the lovers are finally reunited.

FATHER AND THE GIRLS (Dec. 30).—Colonel Scott is the father of four daughters, who are simply devoted to their handsome old dad, do everything possible for his comfort, and are an extremely congenial family until the arrival of Mrs. Payson, a young, handsome widow, from the East. The Colonel becomes infatuated with the widow, which pleasant news is quickly communicated to the girls by Miss Higgins, a gossiping neighbor. The colonel prevails upon his girls to call upon Mrs. Payson, which they do reluctantly, and are shocked at the sight of the widow, who, having just returned from a ride (attired in mannish riding suit), is indulging in a glass of wine and a cigarette. She offers the girls refreshments, including a cigarette, which they frigidly refuse, and quickly take their leave, determining that such a woman shall never take their dead mother's place. They finally decide upon a plan to cure the colonel of his mad infatuation, and with the assistance of their old family servant, pretend to be emulating the widow's example, and are discovered by their father, who has just returned from the purchase of an engagement ring. He is greatly shocked and severely reprimands the girls, who tell him they intend to follow the widow's example in the future. The colonel is sick at heart and determines to be done with the widow forever; this resolve being strengthened when he sees the widow in divided skirts, with her face painted and powdered, calling for the girls to go [illegible] He [illegible] the girls into the house and leaves for his club, where he writes a letter telling his daughters he will never return home until he can find it in the same condition as it was in their dead mother's life. The conspirators, happy in the fact that their father's eyes have been opened, quickly send him an answer reading, "Come home, daddy dear," and once again order and dignity reign in the house of Scott.

PATHE.

MOTHER-IN-LAW RAISES (Dec. 27).—A much [illegible] man has life made so miserable for him, that he decides to do something desperate. While he is evolving this plan, his son is making love to a girl in the chorus. The father, after having his life made miserable at home, writes a note to his wife, saying that he is going to commit suicide by jumping into the river. He arranges this little hoax nicely, and goes to his club. His wife is frantic with grief; his mother-in-law jubilant. When the hour comes for the husband to return, he finds that he has left his key in the clothes he has deposited on the river bank. He gets caught in a downpour of rain, and when he finally breaks into his wife's presence, he looks like a drowned rat—the ghost rescued from the river. The son enters with the chorus girl as his wife, which shock proves too much for mother-in-law.

HIS DAUGHTER'S BRACELET (Dec. 28).—A ranchman gives his daughter a bracelet on her birthday. Later he visits an Indian camp to buy land. In the meantime, the Indians have gone on the warpath, and have captured his daughter, who has been enjoying an afternoon ride. Upon her capture, the bracelet has been taken from her and given to an Indian girl. Here the ranchman discovers it, and realizing his daughter is in the camp, makes a search for her, finds her, and in a series of thrilling adventures, succeeds in rescuing her.

YANN, THE TROUBADOUR (Dec. 29).—A troubadour, with his tame leopard, visits a castle, where the countess falls in love with him. This love affair is discovered by her husband, who has the troubadour chained in a dungeon with his leopard. To the opposite wall he has his wife chained. This is done, that the leopard, becoming famished, will attack his owner before the eyes of the woman.

THE DOLL (Dec. 30).—An obstinate father refuses to give his consent to the marriage of his daughter to a young fellow with more ambition than money, so they elope. Six years fail to bring fortune to this couple, but a beautiful little girl has blessed their home. The paths of the grandfather and this little girl cross later, though both of them are unaware of the relationship between them. A strong tie, however, seems to draw them together and this ultimately brings about a reconciliation for all.

C. G. P. C.

THE BURGLAR'S HARD LUCK (Dec. 25).—A burglar enters the house of a wealthy couple in their absence, and in looking for his spoils, he manages to smash up pretty nearly everything in the house. The owners return, however, while he is at work and each produces a revolver. They force him to repair everything he has broken. This, of course, is trick photography and it is of the best kind.

Among the Exhibitors

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Fern Amusement Company will erect another moving picture theater in this town. It will be erected on Third Street near Clark.

Edgerto, Wis.—Will Bardeen has purchased Mike Schmidt's interest in the Scenic Theater.

Rhinelander, Wis.—Herman Zander has closed a deal with F. C. Kruckeberg by which the former secures the leases on the Bijou Theater and the Grand Opera House in this city, giving Mr. Zander now control of all the theaters in this city.

Watertown, Wis.—B. W. Haskins has sold the Majestic Theater to Paul Bitz and H. Werner.

Detroit, Mich.—Ground for the erection of a $200,000 theater will be broken soon on Broadway, north of Gratiot Avenue. David Stott, owner of the property, has leased it for a number of years to Plimpe Cretcemans of the Cadillac Film Co., Griswold Street, and Ben Jacobson, of the Hough-Jacobson Printing Company.

Mr. Stott will erect the building.

The theater, it is said, will be ready for opening in April.

Minot, N. D.—The George H. Webster theatrical exchange, of Fargo, which owns seventy-six theaters in the United States and Canada, has bought the Arcade Theater, at Minot.

Perth Amboy, N. J.—Another moving picture house was opened in this city when Perth Amboy Amusement Company threw open its doors to the public at their place, in 397 State Street. Remodeled and converted into a high-class motion picture Pluto is managing the new place.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Old Snyder Avenue Baptist Church, at the northwest corner of Seventh Street and Snyder Avenue, has recently been re ture theater, which will be able to accommodate when construction is completed about 1,000 persons. The management of this new enterprise is under the direction of Margaret T. Donohue. It will cost $875,000.

Perth Amboy, N. J.—Messrs. William Brown and David Suapper are planning to establish a picture house, which will be known as the Royal Theater.

Allentown, Pa.—Mr. George W. Bennethum, proprietor of the Victor Motion Picture Theater, has secured a long lease on the building situated at 608-10 Hamilton Street and will convert it into a new picture house, which will be completed soon.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The Fairview Amusement Company is planning to establish a high-class moving picture theater at the southwest corner of Floid Avenue and Warner Street, which will be under the proprietorship of Mr. John J. Hickey.

Biddeford, Me.—Mr. Fred Hanna will establish a high class moving picture show in the National Hall here.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Plans for a moving picture theater to be erected at 1518-1520 West Lehigh Avenue, for W. J. Stewart, are posted for estimates by George Hogg. It will measure 48 by 100 feet. A moving picture theater is to be erected at 2486-2488 North Twenty-second Street, for Adolph Bonnen, plans of which are also posted by George Hogg.

Danbury, Conn.—Heyman Levy, who recently disposed of his Majestic moving picture theater in this city, has sold his Norwalk theater to J. Duke Murray.

Los Angeles, Cal.—H. W. Nixon and Harry R. Taylor, of the Consolidated Amusement Company, of Los Angeles, announce that they are negotiating for a site for a new theater, picture and vaudeville house in San Diego to cost $100,000.

New York City.—A new motion picture theater is being planned to be erected at the southeast corner of Second Avenue and 79th Street, which will cost about $15,000.

Baltimore, Md.—The Wilson Theater, which has for some time been closed, has re-opened under new management and is now exhibiting animated pictures in conjunction with vaudeville.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Mr. C. D. Thompson's new picture house is now being remodeled and enlarged so as to accommodate the large crowds.

Jacksonville, Fla.—Messrs. Fitzhugh and Davis have opened a new moving picture theater here.

Waterbury, Conn.—A high-class picture theater is being established here by Mr. A. F. Strickland, which will be able to seat about 600 patrons.

Concord, N. H.—Mr. Fuse B. Powell has opened a new moving picture theater in the Durgin Building.

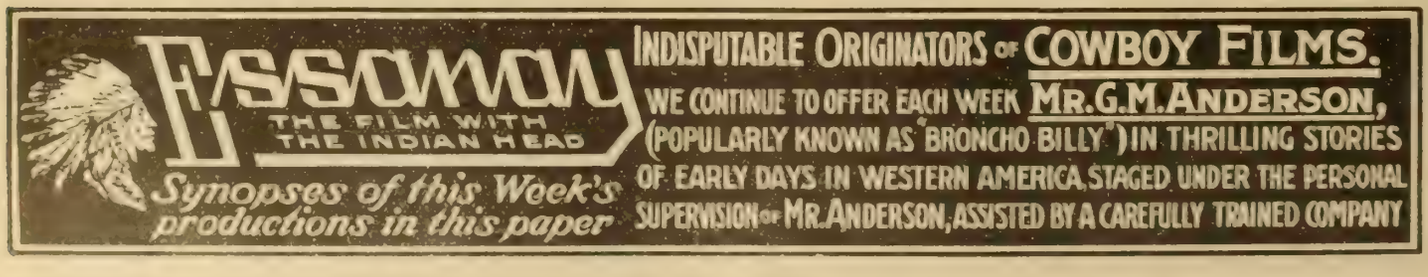
Harrisburg, Pa.—Mr. E. H. Condran has leased the Realty Building and will convert it into a high class picture theater.

St. Joseph, Mo.—Arrangements are being made for the erection of an elaborate and commodious picture theater, to be built at Fifth and Edmond Streets.

Scranton, Pa.—The Pleasant Hour Nickelet, in the Dunn Building, has reopened under entirely new management.

Eau Claire, Wis.—Another moving picture theater is to be built here by L. H. Clark and A. A. Johnson.

North Adams, Mass.—A motion picture show will be opened in the Columbia Opera House within a few days. Rev. Father William Lattanzi, owner of the property, has had the interior of the theater thoroughly renovated.



ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON,
(POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES
OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL
SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

TO LIVE A YEAR WITHOUT EATING

is hardly more difficult than to Operate a Photoplay Theatre Successfully without some form of Advertising. It has been proven that the theatre front must be made the vital means of attracting Mr. and Mrs. Passerby's trade with proper conditions for their comfort and entertainment if you would make them patronage permanent. Is your front attractive enough?

YOU CAN'T EXPECT THE MAXIMUM OF BENEFIT FROM EVEN AN ATTRACTIVE FRONT, UNLESS YOU USE GOOD SIGNS AND CHANGE THEM FREQUENTLY

TRIM YOUR LOBBY WITH A FEW OF OUR DISPLAY CARDS AND "SEE THE DIFFERENCE"

DURABLE, HAND MADE AND ATTRACTIVE 3 X 12 FEET DISPLAY BANNERS $1.00 POSTPAID EACH

6 PREPAID in U.S. for $5.00

WITH DATE $1.15 TO ORDER $1 =

FOR EACH BANNER IN EXCESS OF 6, ADD 80c.

Shows title in 15-inch Letter (in colors)

ANNOUNCEMENT, VAUDEVILLE BANNERS, Etc.

TO ORDER ONLY

9 to 12 ft. $1.50 - 12½ to 15 ft. $1.75 - 15½ to 18 ft. $2.00

Other Sizes in Proportion. Sent Postpaid same day order is received

LOBBY DISPLAY CARDS

ALL HAND WORK

Such as Lithographic Lobby Display Cards, Stills, Signs, Announcements, Special Signs, etc.

Other Sizes in Proportion

Orders amounting to $5 or more sent prepaid

Showing Full Sheet Size (to order) only 50c. Black and white or colors.

WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CIRCULAR with SUGGESTIONS FOR COPY, Etc

BANNER ADV. CO., Toledo, O.

No. E-405. List $ 0.50.
Ask discounts of your Electric dealer. If he does not carry, write us direct.
Engineering Reports Free.

"DAYLIGHT PICTURES"

WITH ANY CURTAIN OR MACHINE

AT SMALL COST WITH

The Eye Comfort System of Indirect Illumination

Since the first advertisement in this paper, a few months ago, theatres in all sections of the country have installed this system. All enthusiastic, and acknowledge that theatre lighting has been revolutionized.

Even illumination throughout your theatre can be obtained without a light in range of vision.

No glaring side lights to detract from the detail of your picture, and more perfect depth and perspective are assured.

Our engineering department will furnish you, free of expense, reports and recommendations on request.

BETTER LIGHT AT LESS EXPENSE

Investigate—Write today

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO., 235 Jackson Blvd., Chicago

Gentlemen:—Send full information regarding lighting of our theatre.

LENGTH ..... WIDTH ..... CEILING HEIGHT .....

NAME ..... ADDRESS .....

Independent Film Stories

REPUBLIC.

THE PRIDE OF LEXINGTON (Dec. 31) is a romance founded on facts of history, and pictures. Jane Mc'rea, beloved by David Jones, who through a sense of loyalty to King George leaves the colonies to join the British army, placing Jane in charge of his friend, Aaron Knox.

The story follows Jane from the first entrance of the British into Lexington during the campaigns of Ethen Allen, and on the field of Bunker Hill where she is taken prisoner. A Hessian, Count Von Meyer, furnishes the dark side of the story as he falls in love with Jane and is spurned for his improper advances. Jane is befriended at different times by both General Washington, of the American army, and General Howe, of the British army. The latter shows the spirit of a true English gentleman when he gives Jane a release from Boston and saves her from the unwelcome attentions of Von Meyer.

The final scenes of the story are laid at Fort Edwards, New York, where Jane, despite the warning of Aaron Knox, tries to meet David when she learns he is with the British, and when crossing the lines, accidentally meets Von Meyer, who renews his suit and on her refusal allows her to fall into the hands of the Indians. David is also killed in his attempt to save Jane, and Aaron lives on through the years, faithful to the one love that filled his life.

Throughout the story runs a vein of quaint comedy, furnished by one Billy Smith, a man, strong physically, but mentally weak, but who through his friendship for Jane proves a hero at the close of this dramatic picture.

CHAMPION.

BONNIE OF THE HILLS (Dec. 25).—Bonnie is alone in the world—but a short while before her dear old daddy was put away beneath the sod. She is tenderly patting the grave and caressing the headstone, when there came on the scene two Eastern hunters. The elder of the two is exhausted, and the younger man, who is the son, makes known their predicament to the huntress, who invites them to her shack.

Straightaway the two young people fall in love, but the boy's father will have none of it. And the girl, possessing a high-strung vanity, can never give her heart when the covering is so uncouth; and so they part, not, however, without an understanding. Around the girl's neck the Eastern lad places a gold locket, given him by his sweet little sister, and which contains his sister's photo and his own.

Now Bonnie has a staked claim that her father left her, and nobody knew of it. So one day she started East for a certain young ladies' academy, conducted by a Miss Argyle. When the principal saw the heap of money our heroine carried, there was no question about the cordiality of her reception. A young girl came to the school for whom Bonnie formed a deep attachment. And it so chanced that this was the sister of the man Bonnie loved, and whose locket she was wearing.

Bonnie and her chum were out riding one day when who should chance along but her companion's father and brother. An introduction followed, but there was no recognition on either side. However, they drove on in their auto. At a lonely spot in the road two highwaymen surprised them and they were forced to alight.

As her sweetheart's father stepped from the machine Bonnie noticed that his coat pocket held a trusty gun. In an instant she turned the tables on the outwitted outlaws; up went their hands, and as prisoners they entered the machine and were driven to police headquarters. A few hours later the little chum was explaining to her mother Bonnie's part in the adventure. Then father and son came in from the station, and they recognized in our heroine the lovely young huntres who had befriended them. At the time of the auto drive Bonnie had worn a veil, and therefore they had not known her. But now, however, the young couple embraced to their hearts' desire, to the keen satisfaction of all.

THE DOCTOR'S CLOSE CALL (Dec. 27).—The young doctor, who is run down in his health through his devotion to his profession, gains our sympathy, not only because he is really one of those likable sort of fellows, but more especially on account of the girl who has given him her whole heart. There can be no mistaking the profundity of her passion for the young medical man, and when she realizes that the parting must come her grief is pitiable to behold.

In the West the young doctor is soon on the high road to recovery. Out in the wilds he does a service to a young rustler who has been injured, and, like the good Samaritan, he asks no questions of his patient, but simply ministered to the ailment, thus winning the gratitude of the band. They constrained him to stay among them for awhile, which he did, not knowing their true status. But one fine day they were attacked by cowboys, and the doctor, of course, had to pitch in and do his share of the gun work. With two others he was captured, and then he saw that he had been among horse-thieves.

It wasn't long before he and his comrades were threatened with hanging, when their captors decorated them with a hempen tie. It seemed to be "all up" with the doctor. But that faithful little girl back East had been watching daily for his return. Her fidelity is rewarded. A morning paper described the capture of the rustlers, giving their photos, and one of which bore the likenes of her heart's desire, the young doctor.

She got her father on the 'phone immediately—he was a senator—and soon he made his influence felt at Washington, getting an order from the Secretary of War to put the town where the arest was made under martial law; and thus, in the very nick of time, when the doctor and his two companions were about to swing, they were savey by the Government troops.

The senator and his daughter at once made for the town, and upon their arrival the Eastern lassie became the recipient of one of the bigest bear hugs she had ever experienced—for the young doctor had become a veritable Hercules, his strength being fully restored.

NESTOR.

THE LOVE CHASE (Dec. 18).—Wealthy George Balker has two ailments: a gouty foot and a lovely daughter. The gout keeps him from taking active part in the doings of Daisy, the daughter, who persists to disobey and displease papa for the love of handsome Walter Coxsey. Joe, the faithful valet, however, is ever vigilant, and proves to be no stumbling block in the tortuous path of true love.

Walter, with the aid of many disguises, succeeds in taking Daisy away from home, and, though the alert Joe and gouty George promptly give chase, the lovers lead from start to finish. The most strenuous efforts of the valet are made null and void. The gout necessitates slow going for the pursuers, while the pursued ones fly. After a most eventful and exciting chase, the modest office of Hiram Bassel, justice of the peace, is invaded. The good old judge needs the money, and, in a twinkling, Daisy ceases to be a Balker and is transformed into Mrs. Coxsey. Papa Balker, semi-supported by Joe, arrives on the scene, and balks for all he's worth. While the parental storm is at its height, the gouty foot makes a kick at Walter, who sidesteps, causing the gout to commit suicide by colliding with a solid object. Then papa straightens up and a beatific smile spreads over his face. Unaided, he walks nimbly over to his son-in-law and fervently graps his hand.

THE NEW RANCH OWNER (Dec. 20).—The announcement that Sir Henry Arling, the new owner of Circle X Ranch, intends to raise sheep instead of cattle, excited much unfavorable comment among the cattle raisers of that section, especially as Foreman Raymond's generous offer to buy the place had been met with a curt refusal from the Englishman. This, however, did not one whit dismay the ambitious Mrs. Raymond. If his lordship sold the ranch to her husband and Ned Arnold, Louise might marry the young man and settle down, but if Sir Henry came over to take possession of his property, her daughter should be Lady Arling.

It was thus that matters stood when Lew Marks read in the town's weekly paper that the new owner would arrive the following day. Here was a chance to make a neat little sum. Except in his disguise, he had never been seen; so what would be easier than to waylay Sir Henry, secure his papers, pose as the Englishman, sell the ranch and disappear. Hurrying to their secluded shack, Marks informed his partner of the plan, and the two men were soon on their way to select a lonely spot where it would be safe to tie their prisoner until they had disposed of the property.

The outlaw would have suddenly changed his mind, could he have at that moment observed the tar and feathers that the boys of Circle X Ranch, headed by Ned Arnold, were preparing for the young Englishman. But ignorant of all this, Marks carried out his original plans, and was soon in the buckboard which Foreman Raymond had sent to the hotel to convey Sir Henry to his new home. But ere they reached the ranch, the boys, all masked, surrounded the buckboard, and not only tarred and feathered the astonished outlaw, but putting a rope around his waist, compelled him to keep up to their horses' pace. Fortunately for the Englishman, in taking a short cut, they discovered his lordship, and although in the confusion, Marks managed to get away, Sir Henry gladdened their hearts by insisting upon instantly returning to the railroad station, while he quickly dispatched a note to John Raymond, stating that the foreman might have the ranch at his own figure.

"I Wonder Whether They're Going to Make GOOD FILM!"

G!

DESPERATE DESMOND FOILED BY CLAUDE ECLAIRE (Dec. 23).—Rosamond and Claude are having a delightful time on the lake. Desperate Desmond spies them. Aided by Gomgotz and other wild men, he boards a "moving" islet and quickly succeeds in separating the lovers. While he takes Rosamond in one direction, the man-eaters drag Claude toward a large boiling pot, which is cheated of its intended victim by the miraculous appearance of some bird-hunters.

The villain and the hapless heroine reach the ship in safety. Bound and gagged, Rosamond is hidden in one of the lifeboats, and Desmond proceeds to do the stowaway stunt by concealing himself in the interior of a barrel.

With the aid of a powerful fieldglass, Claude sees the situation and rushes to the wireless station. Marconigrams flash back and forth between ship and station. Then captain and crew search for Desmond, whose hiding place is finally discovered through cigarette smoke issuing from the barrel's bung-hole. Claude and hunters join the sailors and force the villain to uncover the whereabouts of Rosamond. Reunited, the lovers are happy again.

This time Desperate Desmond shall not be permitted to escape, and accordingly he is locked in a large safe and thrown overboard. The safe lands upon an immense turtle. The turtle ascends to the surface and slow but sure, makes for the penitentiary. Here, a safe-breaker, now breaking stones, opens the safe and the wicked Desmond is himself again. The villain again demonstrates that there is some good in the worst of us, by letting the safe-breaker break jail and depart with him on the turtle's back.

BISON.

COWGIRLS' PRANKS (Dec. 19).—The boys are ordered to turn in early by the foreman, as there is to be a round-up on the following day. Time hangs heavily with the girls, so they decide to start something. Sneaking into the bunk-house, they steal the trousers and chaps of the cowboys, and throw their boots away. Attiring themselves in the masculine garments, they saddle the boys' horses and start off to town as they have often see the boys do. At the saloon they compel the bartender to give them a drink. In the meantime the boys awaken and discover the loss of their clothes. Wrapping blankets about themselves they sally forth in quest of the thieves, and, being bootless, their tender feet are bruised by the stones. They tell their troubles to the ranchman and his wife, and finding the girls' discarded clothing, they gain an inkling of the situation. The boys are compelled to don the skirts, having nothing else to wear. The boys then discover the loss of their horses, and a team is hitched to the big carry-all. The girls are found in a penitent mood. They are taken out by the ear and bundled in the wagon by the ranchman and his wife, and taken home. The next day the girls, with aching heads, are gathered around the well with wet towels about their heads, drinking the cool water, and vow never again to imitate the boys.

AN INDIAN MARTYR (Dec. 22).—Grey Fawn is seen in the Crow camp, with a very attentive lover. She is in love with a Sioux, however, and meets him clandestinely. The Crow's suit is favored by the Chief, Grey Fawn's father, and she decides to elope with the Sioux. She is followed by a warrior, and the two are captured, the Sioux being condemned to death. Grey Fawn is grief-stricken and retires to her tepee, where she gives vent to her sorrow. The Crow lover is deeply touched, and is finally persuaded by Grey Fawn to promise his aid. The guard watching the Sioux is overpowered and the trio escape, closely pursued. At the water's edge a canoe is found, and there being but one paddle, the Crow gives his rifle to the Sioux, who gets away with Grey Fawn. The Sioux is condemned to death and is tied to the stake. Great heaps of fagots are piled about him, which are set on fire. The execution is cleverly shown by flashing back to the two lovers and then to the Indian camp, where nothing remains but smoldering embers, indicating the disposition of the Crow.

AMBROSIO.

THE MARQUIS OF LANTENAC (Dec. 13).—This is a thrilling subject of warfare, massively staged and with a large cast. The Marquis of Lantenac heads the revolutionists, and is defeated in battle, retiring to his castle, which is bombarded by the enemy. Through a secret passage the Marquis and his men escape, as the foe have laid a bomb against the walls and have lighted the fuse which will blow the castle to atoms. The Marquis discovers that three children have been left locked in one of the rooms, and makes a heroic rescue. He is captured, however, and executed, and goes to his doom with the remark: "The life of three children is worth three centuries of old kingdom!"

RELIANCE.

LOCKED IN THE VAULTS (Dec. 20).—Robert Tyler, the son of a wealthy broker, marries a stenographer, and is disowned by his father. A baby is born to the young couple and Robert hopes this will soften his father's heart, but his letter is returned unopened. Several years elapse, and

Mr. Manager

Do You Blame Your Operator

for being obliged to Test the screens every time he starts a picture to secure the right focus, light and distance? How can he help it? It is all the same shape—top, bottom and sides.

He will tell you that a specially concaved screen, with every ray of light that strike the screen exactly the same length as every other ray at point of contact, must produce a more even and a more perfect picture, with fewer "Ghosts," "Scratches" and "Glimmers," than a flat surface would.

HELP HIM TO HELP YOU

Furnish him with a screen, with a central point on which to focus, with a certainty that all portions of the picture will receive exactly the same light effect.

The "Perfection Concave Screen" is made to order. To quote prices it is necessary to know distance of screen from lens—height of lens above stage, and size of projected picture. (Also whether stationary or movable.) Our new illustrated booklet will be out in a few days.

Let us place you on our Mailing List

INVENTORS SPECIALTY MFG. CO., 401 Ashland Block, CHICAGO, ILL.

DON'T BE BACKWARD
ABOUT COMING FORWARD

To take advantage of a proposition which means the increasing of your receipts. Every live exhibitor realizes the necessity of good display advertising, and they also know that it is necessary to keep up with the pace of progress, and to adopt the most modern and up-to-date system.

SPECIAL OFFER

In order to increase our circulation, and as a matter of advertising, we make the following offer until the first of the year:

We will furnish you with one of our Display Frames, which is six feet in height and three feet in width, made of red oak and finished with a beautiful dark green finish, together with a hand-painted name-piece for the top of the frame and also fifteen stock posters, such as "Always a Good Show," "Our Feature To-morrow," "Illustrated Songs," "Admission 5 Cents," etc., for which we charge you only ten dollars.

We will furnish you with 36 Posters per week, for as many weeks back as it is necessary for you to go, in order to give you a billing for all your pictures, and up to the present time, for which we will charge you one dollar per week. We will continue to forward to you each week, by mail, a Poster for each of the 36 releases for the following week, for which we will charge you two dollars per week, payable in advance.

DON'T FAIL TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE ABOVE OFFER AT ONCE. FOR IT IS ONLY GIVEN FOR A LIMITED TIME.

EXHIBITORS ADVERTISING CO.

Suite 604-605-606 117 North Dearborn St.
Chicago, Ill.

Import Department

International Film Traders

5 West 14th St., New York

Weekly Importations

Feature Films

Masterpieces of the World's Greatest Producers ranging in length from 1000—4000 ft. selected by our own European Agents.

Artistic Posters 3 Sheets and more.

Features sold outright without restriction.

Correspondence solicited.

the young couple face hard times, owing to the loss of Robert's position. Mrs. Tyler resolves to go to work, and in scanning the "Help Wanted" columns, sees an ad of Robert's father for a stenographer, and secures the position under her maiden name. One night she is compelled to work late and Robert and the little girl go to the office to call for her. The baby wanders into the vault and is accidentally locked in by Mrs. Tyler. Robert's father is the only one who has the combination, and he calls him up. He is unable to talk to his father, however; for hearing his son's voice, the old man promptly hangs up the receiver. In a frenzy, he dashes off to his father's house. The father tries to elude his son, but is grasped by the shoulders and thrown into a chair, while the younger man forces him to listen. Horrified, the old man orders his auto and rushes to the office, where the child is released. A reconciliation between father and son is brought about by the child.

THE DOCTOR'S DILEMMA (Dec. 23).—The surgeon discovers that his wife loves another man, and tries ineffectually to compel her to disclose his identity. They quarrel and he leaves for his office. He is called to an accident case, the patient being unconscious. The doctor finds a letter on the desk from his wife to the man, proving him the mysterious lover. In the first moment of rage the doctor puts away his instruments and starts to leave, but his sense of duty masters and he saves the man's life. When the latter is convalescent, the doctor confronts him. The man begs forgiveness and writes a letter to the wife telling her of the nobleness of her husband's character, and saying good-bye forever. The doctor gives the letter to his wife, and she realizes that her infatuation for the other man has been replaced by the love for her own husband.

A PAIR OF SHOES (Dec. 23).—The children of a shoe merchant break their doll, and the father comforts them, arranges the doll's remains in a shoe box and tells them to bury it. A hurried purchaser comes in, quickly buys a pair of shoes, and dashing out, grabs the wrong box with the broken doll. Arriving home he finds a telegram from his fiancée saying she will meet him at the ferry, and that the wedding party will go from there direct to the church. On the ferry the man takes off his old shoes and throws them overboard before opening the box. His surprise can well be imagined when he finds the broken doll. The waiting bride and her family consider that the shoeless bridegroom has insulted them, and give him a sound beating, the bride refusing to marry him.

SOLAX.

LOVE, WHISKERS AND LETTERS (Dec. 20).—A [illegible] lover, who imagines his sweetheart has kissed a bewhiskered stranger, furiously discovers a scathing letter [illegible] his enemy. In his excitement the lover sends his sweetheart a letter intended for his partner, and his partner is the bewildered recipient of the letter [illegible] to the sweetheart. [illegible] before things have reached a climax [illegible] bewhiskered stranger is only a "long lost brother." So he sets out in a hurry to intercept the letter. His adventures are not [illegible] to nasty and jealous lovers.

THE VIOLIN MAKER OF NUREMBURG (Dec. 22).—The story revolves about two pupils and comrades who are apprenticed to an old and successful violin maker of paternal and sympathetic inclinations. He hears that the king of his country has announced to the townspeople of Nuremburg that the maker of the best violin would be titled the Violin Maker to the Court, and pensioned on an annuity. The old man apprises his pupils of the king's proclamation.

The old teacher is anxious to have his pupils enter the competition, so as an incentive to both of them, he promises the hand of his daughter to the winner. The old man does not know, however, that both of his pupils are really in love with his daughter, and that the younger of the two is the one she prefers.

The older of the pupils is a better violin maker than the younger one. They all know this and, of course, the younger man is unhappy and disconsolate. But he does not figure on the generous nature of his comrade, who, knowing that it would be useless for him to try to win the fair maiden's hand, secretly exchanges violins on the night before the tournament.

The younger pupil wins both the title and the girl. The older one retires and gives up his thoughts to his art and lives with the satisfaction of knowing that he has made the prize-winning violin.

THANHOUSER.

SHE (Dec. 26). (Part One).—The first scene shows us the outer court of the temple in Egypt, in the year 350 B. C. Here Amenartas, the Pharaoh's daughter, waits to meet her love, Kallikrates. He has just taken the vows, becoming a Priest of Isis. She urges him to renounce these vows and flee with her from Egypt.

We next see them during the sacrificial ceremony in the temple. The young priest goes about his sacred office constantly feeling the eyes of the woman he loves upon him. At the close of the ceremony he can resist her appeal no longer and they make their escape.

They leave the city behind them, and on the desert meet some friendly Arabs. The young priest is weak from fasting, and his wife secures for him the camel owned by an Arab chief, so that they may continue their journey. They thank their Arab friends, leave them, and on foot make their way to the water's edge.

After traveling "twice twelve moons" they land with their infant son on the coast of Africa, near a rocky precipice, known as the Negro's Head.

In her cave in the hollow mountain, "SHE," the white witch of Africa, who has learned the secret of eternal youth, sees the approach of the Egyptian, by her magic power. "SHE" determines that he is the perfect man, that "SHE" will have him bathe with her in the fires of eternal youth, and together they will rule the world. "SHE" summons him.

In his camp in the desert the messengers of "SHE" find Kallikrates, his wife and child, and bring them before "SHE." "SHE" shows the Egyptian the fires of eternal youth and offers him her love, but when he remains true to the love of his wife, "SHE" strikes him dead. His wife, Amenartas escapes with her child. At the river bank, the wife embarks with her child, whom she calls Tisisthanes. She swears that this child shall return and avenge his father's death, or if not he, his male descendants.

Over the smouldering fires of eternal strife "SHE" tries in vain to restore the vital spark to the body of the man she loved. Unable to give her loved one life, "SHE" has his body mummified by a marvelous process, which makes him look as though he did but sleep. Beside her dead love, "SHE" weeps and prays, that though "SHE" cannot restore him to life, some day, though it be in the remote centuries to come, her love will be reincarnated, and return to claim her.

(Part Two.)

We now see a room in England, in the year 1885 A. D. Holly, an Englishman, whose face is so ugly that it has won him the appelation of "the monster," receives, by the will of his friend, the fortunes and custody of that friend's son, Leo Vincent. This child is the direct descendant of the Priest of Isis, whom "SHE" destroyed centuries before. With the child, is sent a letter of instructions and an antique chest. The letter explains that Leo is to open the chest on his twenty-fifth birthday and follow the instructions it contains.

Through the ages "SHE" waits beside the body of her dead love, still praying for his reincarnation and return.

On his twenty-fifth birthday, Leo opens the chest and finds in it the story of his ancient ancestor and the information that although many men of his family had spent their lives in seeking "SHE," none of them had ever found her. Leo also finds instructions to carry on the work, to seek "SHE," learn her secret of eternal youth, and then destroy her. Leo determines to set out on the mission.

Leo and his guardian, Holly, approach the shores of Africa, and note the strange rock, the Negro's Head. "SHE," in her cave, sees in a vision, Leo approaching. He strongly resembles his ancient ancestor and SHE feels [illegible] he is the reincarnation of her [illegible] love. "SHE" waits for him.

Through rocky caverns Leo's boat glides to the coast beside the colony inhabits. At a convenient landing place, now fallen into ruins, Leo's boat is stopped by a tribe of natives, who pay [illegible] to "SHE."

They blindfold Leo and Holly and lead them to the cave of "SHE." "SHE" welcomes Leo as her lost love. He tells her he has come to destroy her, to revenge the death of his ancestor. "SHE" gives him the knife from her own girdle and, baring her bosom, bids him strike. Before her unveiled beauty, Leo is powerless to destroy her. "SHE" then bids him follow her and leads them through a strange passage.

In a rocky cavern "SHE" shows Leo the mummy of his ancient ancestor, and so like is it to the young Englishman, that he feels he is gazing upon himself. "SHE" then destroys the mummy as she feels she has found her living love. "SHE" leads Holly and Leo over a rocky precipice to the cave containing the "fires of eternal youth." "SHE" begs Leo to step into the flame so that he, too, will never die. Leo fears to take the step. To encourage him "SHE" steps first into the flames. The quality of the fire has changed in the centuries since "SHE" last bathed in them. "SHE" suddenly shrivels up before the eyes of the astonished men. "SHE" grows suddenly old, until she resembles an ape. With outstretched arms, and a cry to Leo not to forget her, "SHE" dies. Holly and Leo, half crazed with the terrible sight they have witnessed, find their way back to the native village. They are directed, by an overland route, as to how they can leave the country and they do so.

Safely returned to England, Leo, whose golden hair has been turned white from his horrible experience, destroys all records of "SHE," the mysterious. His family has been avenged.

THE EXPERT'S REPORT (Dec. 29).—The president of a great oil company hires a noted expert to investigate certain lands in a nearby town. The president knows the expert by reputation only, but his standing is high, and he is vouched for by one of the heavy stockholders.

The expert accepts the commission, and visits the town. There he meets a widow, with two daughters, who owns a farm which she has heretofore regarded as of trifling value. But the young man brings joy to the family by telling them, after his inspection, that their land is undoubtedly oil property, and worth a fortune.

A neighbor of the widow's has tried to curry favor with the expert, hoping thereby to sell his father's property, but the man from the city, while he willingly inspects the property, declares that it is worthless.

When the expert, his work completed, starts toward the railroad station, en route to the city, he again meets the son of the landowner, who asks for a final hearing. In the villager's rude shack, they talk the matter over. They quarrel and finally come to blows.

Late that night, a man, bound hand and foot, is thrown into a dried up well. In the morning, the president of the oil company again meets his expert, he declares that the widow's property is valueless, but that the land of the surly neighbor is a wonderful site.

Aroused to enthusiasm by his expert's report, the president goes post haste to the village accompanied by his employee. There he meets the aged landowner, and after much dickering, they agree upon a price.

In the meantime, the widow's two daughters, while wandering through the countryside, hear cries for help and locate the man in the well. Alone and unaided they rescue him. The story he tells causes them to hasten with him to the shack, where he tells the president of the oil company of his experiences. The result is that a carefully planned plot is blocked at the very moment that it seemed certain of success.

AMERICAN.

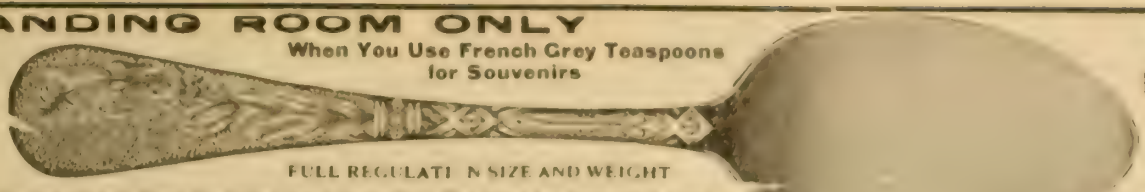
BONITA OF EL CAJON (Dec. 28).—Bonita was the daughter of a gang of outlaws. Her father's lieutenant tried to kiss a girl who impressed him and whom he saw sitting outside her home. When her sweetheart, Jack Dickson, arrived, she related her experience. Jack immediately starts to locate him. In the mountains he meets Bonita, and the girl is much impressed by the ranger's handsomeness. The meeting is observed by the lieutenant, who informs Bonita's father. Bonita is given instructions to decoy him into camp as he is dangerous. Instead of adhering to the orders given her, she apprises the ranger of the outlaws' intentions. Bonita, true to her father, tells him of the rangers' contemplated raid. They break camp and go directly to the home of Jack's sweetheart, who is placed in the care of Bonita.

Bonita notices on her neck a locket containing Jack's picture. She flies into a jealous fury, but as her passion subsides, she decides to rescue the girl from the outlaws. This she does by exchanging places with her and sending her to her lover.

The rangers, through the aid of their leader's sweetheart, soon find the outlaws. Bonita is killed by a bullet from her father's gun in saving the life of Jack Dickson, who in self-defense kills the father.

STANDING ROOM ONLY

When You Use French Grey Teaspoons for Souvenirs



FULL REGULATION SIZE AND WEIGHT

5c. EACH

Send 10c for sample and Plans for giving away souvenirs. The plans are indorsed by the managers of the largest houses in the country. Copies of same mailed with sample.

UNITED STATES FACTORIES CO., Manufacturers, General Offices 421 Dickey Building, Chicago

They will fill your house to capacity every performance

LAST 25 to 40% LONGER THAN THE ORDINARY SORT

FOR . . . BETTER MOTION PICTURE PROJECTIONS USE THE . . . BIO

BIO CARBONS

RECOGNIZED BIO CARBONS BRAND STANDARD MIL

BIO

THERE IS ONLY ONE "BIO" --- TAKE NO SUBSTITUTES

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO. AND ALL LIVE FILM EXCHANGES

New York: 165 Greenwich St. Milwaukee: 111 Huron St. San Francisco: 19 Sutter St.

GIVE ⅓ MORE LIGHT THAN ANY OTHER ON SAME CURRENT

Advertising space in the Moving Picture World costs less than that in other publications, considering our guaranteed circulation. Write for rates.

FOR SALE

For quick and positive results, advertise in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD 125 East 23rd St. New York

SPECIAL THREE-SHEET POSTERS

Under the direction of the Lubin Company, besides our regular one-sheet posters, we will have ready for shipment December 11th a splendid three-sheet poster for which will be especially appropriate for the season.

The Kiddies' Christmas

EXHIBITORS CAN SECURE SAME FROM THE LICENSED EXCHANGES OR DIRECT FROM THE

A. B. C. COMPANY, -- -- CLEVELAND, OHIO

THE FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL FILM CO.

710 COLUMBIA BLDG. Cleveland Sixth City

Several More States Left--Wire for Prices--Act Quick

ZIGOMAR, the most sensational film production of the age. A success of two continents.

Love and Aviation, a poem in picture; no more beautiful a play was ever produced. It will live forever.

Get a Sure Money-Getter. We start you with bookings. Come to Cleveland, Chicago or Detroit and see these subjects, all in three reels. We will pay your expenses if a deal is made.

THE F. AND E. FILM COMPANY. E. Mandelbaum, Pres.

Chicago, 36 W. Randolph St. 710 Columbia Bldg., Cleveland Detroit, 305 Lyons Bldg.

LUX.

A JAPANESE LOVE STORY (Dec. 22).—Lieutenant Mordaunt and his little sweetheart, Yum Yum, has many pleasant hours in the land of the Rising Sun. So winning are the ways of the little Japanese maiden, that Jack Tar falls very, very deeply in love with her. When love enters all else is forgotten, and thus, when the time for the departure of the fleet arrives, the lieutenant awakens to find that it was all a dream, and that it is now time to be up and doing and leave his little sweetheart behind him. The fleet returns to port, and Mordaunt goes home to his people. Staying at the house are three of his cousins, who greet him boisterously, for being female cousins, they look forward to jolly times with the breezy sailor. Mordaunt's thoughts still turn to the land of the Rising Sun and to his little sweetheart far across the ocean. To their great disappointment, the cousins find a great change in their once cheerful playmate. In place of the breezy sailor man is a poor love-sick swain, who can do naught else but sigh the hours away. The girls find the source of the trouble in the shape of a half-finished letter to Japan, and they decide to have some fun. Arraying themselves in Japanese clothes, they annoy their cousin considerably by appearing before him in the garb he loves so well, only to disappear again into a thicket or behind a tree. Finally, the tormentors are surprised to see their big, manly cousin burst into tears. From that moment Mordaunt becomes more and more melancholy, and in fact, his parents begin to entertain grave fears as to his health. Meanwhile the little Japanese girl beyond the seas has not remained idle. With the energy and enterprise of her race, she has decided to follow her lover beyond the seas. After a long and weary voyage, the little Japanese maiden arrives in Europe. Having carefully rehearsed her part beforehand, the winsome Yum Yum finds little difficulty in finding her way to her lover, who is, by this time desperately ill. At first Mordaunt does not recognize Yum Yum, on acount of her European dress, which becomes her so well, but when she again dons the kimono and flaunts again her dainty fan, the lieutenant recognizes her, and all their troubles are forgotten.

IMP.

A PAIR OF GLOVES (Dec. 23).—A pair of ladies' gloves was found in Jim Robertson's overcoat by that lively young man's pretty little wife. Of course they belong to the "other lady" or "some other lady." Anyhow, they didn't belong to Jim's wife, who, jumping to a naturally feminine conclusion that Jim was playing double, rushed home to her parents for consolation. Then the trouble starts for poor Jim. It is ultimately shown that the offending pair of gloves were placed in hubby's pocket by mistake, but not before there has been much unhappiness of the comedy kind. (Copyrighted 1911, by I. M. P. Company of America.)

NIAGARA FALLS CELEBRATION (Dec. 23).—The presence of some Canadian soldiers on United States soil at a recent Niagara celebration, is one of the many features, shown in the film, that preceded the descent of the Falls in a barrel by the intrepid Leach.

We see Leach preparing to enter the barrel. Then we trace the progress of the tiny vessel through the rapids and whirlpool. Finally he is seen coming out of the barrel. Incidentally an airship joins in the celebration and at the conclusion of Leach's feat a flock of carrier pigeons is let loose.

There are views of the "Maid of the Mist" under the Falls, and of the bridge with a train at rest upon it, above the Falls. The picture gives some vivid representations of the tumultuous waters, and Leach's progress is clearly traced through them. (Copyrighted 1911, by I. M. P. Company of America.)

ON THE STROKE OF THREE (Dec. 25).—At the crisis of a life Joe Perkins was confronted by a grave problem. Forgery would save the girl he loved, as well as her father, from ruin. Should he take the risk?

He had led a foolish and vicious life in his earlier days. Farmer White gave him a job and there was his opportunity to make good under new conditions. And Joe did make good. What was more to the point, Joe fell in love with Agnes, old White's daughter, and Agnes fell in love with Joe.

Then came the crisis. Farmer White went to town on business. While he was away news reached Joe that there was a run on the local bank. All Farmer White's money was there—$12,000. Joe had been a forger. Should he go back to his old game, forge a check, get the $12,000 out of the bank and save Farmer White and his daughter? He took the risk, wrote out the check, and got the money from the bank on the stroke of three.

Up in New York Farmer White read the news of the crash. Going home, as he thought, a ruined man, he was confronted by Joe, who confessed all; was forgiven; was united to the girl he loved.

Joe had taken a risk which saved three people from misery and injured nobody. (Copyrighted 1911, by I. M. P. Films Company.)

THE PORTRAIT (Dec. 28).—While painting the demure little model, Vera, who sat for him day after day, Reginald Spencer was unconscious of the fact that she was falling very deeply in love with him.

Success comes Reginald's way and he has a commission to paint the portrait of a handsome society girl. Between the artist and this lady something like affection springs up and poor little Vera finds herself out in the cold. But with feminine intuition she is not long in discovering that she has a rival, whom she identifies with the original of the portrait that Spencer is lavishing so much time on.

There is to be a private view of the portrait in the artist's studio. The society girl, her mother and several friends arrive, only to discover, when Spencer draws aside the curtain, concealing the masterpiece from view, that it has been hacked and cut out of all recognition. Of course, the society people desert him on this terrible catastrophe and he is left in the depths of misery.

Poor little Vera creeps in to confess that she was guilty of the destruction of the picture and avows love of him as her reason for it. Spencer repulses the girl and off she goes in her despair to commit suicide. In the nick of time Spencer appears to prevent her mad act, and realizing how much she loves him and he loves her, a happy ending is assured. (Copyrighted 1911, by I. M. P. Films Company.)

COMET.

THE TIE THAT BINDS (Dec. 25).—No storm seems to mar the domestic life of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wallace and they are looked upon by neighbors, friends, relatives and acquaintances as an ideal couple. The head of the house, though, soon finds fault with his food. Other quarrels follow and their marital differences become so pronounced that they seemingly are unable to agree on anything. They have a little son and the day of the christening arrives. They discuss a proper name for the child, but the views of the wife and husband do not seem to jibe. Another tilt ensues and the husband leaves home.

Two years have elapsed. We find the husband in his own apartment lonesome and dejected. He is thinking of his wife and child and wonders how they are faring. There is another side to the portrait. The scene is in a nursery. Baby is playing on the floor and with the fondness of a mother, Mrs. Wallace looks on. Around her neck she wears a picture. It is that of her husband. Baby soon falls asleep. The wife then removes the locket and places it around the neck of her slumbering darling. Carrying her little one, she gently tucks it into a small wicker basket and upon it attaches the appended note: "Open immediately and feed." Wife then takes the basket containing her baby to the apartments of hubby while Mrs. Wallace hides behind the portières and awaits developments. When the husband finds the basket he naturally opens it and investigates. When he sees the locket he knows that it is his own child, and then and there the estranged pair are brought together.

THE CRUDE MISS PRUDE (Dec. 29).—Priscilla Prude, an old maid, decides that it is time for her to seek a better half; so she hies herself to an employment agency and engages a chaperon. The first person selected is Pansy Blossom, a pretty and winsome young girl. Hullie Baxter calls on Priscilla and when he sees Pansy his heart goes out to her immediately. Their feelings are mutual with the result that they elope.

Nothing daunted, Priscilla hires Miss Bookstorm. Unlike Pansy, Miss Bookstorm is just the opposite in looks. Professor Hudley comes to see Miss Prude, but is attracted to Miss Bookstorm. It seems that they are fitted to each other. She is a very learned woman and a lover of books. Miss Prude is bored by their conversation and falls asleep. While in this condition the professor and the new chaperon make love and when discovered by the old maid are forthwith dismissed.

Mrs. McInscare is the last chaperon to be engaged. She is anything but attractive. In fact, her features are repulsive and when Mr. Popaway, one of Miss Prude's many beaus visits her, the sight of Mrs. McInscare disturbs his peace of mind and he flees. Left alone to her own thoughts, and without any chaperon, Priscilla concludes to try her hand at the camera herself. Maybe she might get a husband that way. She goes to the same employment agency where she has been so unsuccessful and gets a position as companion to May Jones. Johnny Wilson calls on May. He greets her by kissing her hand. Miss Prude regards this as a breach of the rules of propriety and May is immediately sent to her room. Then Priscilla elects to entrench herself in the affections of Johnny. She warns him that all young men should beware of young girls. If he wants a wife, why not take her. Johnny is caught in the net, proposes to Priscilla and the latter winds up by getting Johnny for her husband.

"WHY THIS MYSTERIOUS DRAG?"

G!

SONG SLIDES

NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO.
23 N. Ninth Street Phila, Pa.

World Series, Athletics vs. New York, 25 plain slides, $5.00; 25 colored slides, $8.50. The Great Austin Flood, 22 plain slides, $4.50; 22 colored slides, $8.00. Italy-Turkish War, 30 plain slides, $6.50; 30 colored slides, $10.00.

SONG SLIDES

"ELECTRA" CARBONS

PINK LABEL

None Better None so Good

SOLE IMPORTER

HUGO REISINGER, 11 Broadway, New York

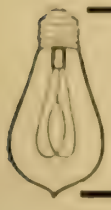
NEW FIELD BIG MONEY EASY WORK

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, and pays well. We teach you by mail how to write and sell your plots. Many successful graduates.

DEMAND UNLIMITED. FULL DETAILS FREE.

ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE SCHOOLS

631 Sheridan Road CHICAGO



INCANDESCENT ELECTRIC LAMPS

For Theatres, Lobbies, Decorations, Etc.

12 Cents Each

We save you the Jobber's Profit. 4, 8 or 16 Candle-Power same price. 110 Volts. Colored Lamps, 1 Cent Extra.

NEWMAN ELECTRIC LAMP CO.

3346 BONAPARTE AVE. CINCINNATI, OHIO

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY

"Das Lichtbild-Theater"

The most up-to-date and most comprehensive Journal of the Cinematograph Industry in Germany.

Editor-Proprietor: LUDWIG BRAUNER

BERLIN SW 68. MARKGRAFENSTRASSE 92 92.

Annual subscription abroad $3.00. Write for specimen copy.

FILM FOR SALE 300 Reels Independent Film—Imp—Bison—Nestor, Etc.—No Junk—Renovated- Fine Condition — 10 to 25 Posters—Price $10.00 to $12.50.

FRENCH FILM RESTORING CO., Columbus, Ohio

In answering advertisements kindly mention The Moving Picture World.

INDEPENDENT FILM SERVICE

STATE YOUR WANTS.

We'll make the RIGHT PRICE and give the RIGHT SERVICE.

Have little used Powers No. 6 fitted with new 1912 Model Motiograph Lamp House to sell. Low Price.

Bargains in Tickets and Carbons. All kinds of Machines and Supplies.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO., 105 N. Dearborn Street, Chicago

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and any one can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of three dollars ($3) cash with order, we will send by express, charges not prepaid, or $3.50 by registered mail, prepaid, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

LUMIERE'S METHYNOL A PEER OF DEVELOPING AGENTS

(USED SAME AS METOL)

Special Prices $4.50 a pound in Lots 10 lb. (in Tin)

$4.25 a pound in Lots 20 lb. (in Tin)

Sold only by LUMIERE JOUGLA CO. Phone Stuyvesant 531

75 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK

EXPORT FILM COMPANY

Dealers in New and Second-Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines

Second-Hand Films $5.00 per Reel up

Cameraphone Film with two sets of records like new

Complete Lists sent free on request

EXPORT FILM COMPANY, 32 Union Sq. E., New York City

THE E-Z SLIDE

MAKE THEM YOURSELF

CLEAR AS GLASS — WILL OUTLAST GLASS

You can write or print on them as easily as on a sheet of writing paper.

Ask your Film Exchange for them or write to

BATTERSHALL & OLESON 39 W. Adams St. Chicago, Ill.

LOOK! LOOK! LOOK!

THEATRE MANAGERS — TRAVELING EXHIBITORS — FILM BUYERS — Send us your name and permanent address, together with this ad. and we will send you ABSOLUTELY FREE, CHARGES PREPAID,

"A REEL OF SECOND-HAND FILM"

HURRY—This FREE OFFER is limited to the first 1,000 answers received. You will then see for yourself what we have to offer and learn about our method of SQUARE DEALING

COMMERCIAL FILMERS

173 North Green Street Chicago, Ill.

ARE WE CRAZY? NO! WE BELIEVE IN ADVERTISING

SPROCKETS
FAMILY THEATRE
I KNEW IT! YOU CAN'T BEAT THOSE ANTI-TRUST FILMS
THEATRE
SAY, SPROCKETS OUGHT TO CLOSE UP
GEE - THERE'S A GREAT PLOT TO SLEEP
A.T.F. Co.
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

A FULL HOUSE BEATS ANY KIND OF A FOURFLUSH, LET US HELP YOU TO GET THAT FULL HOUSE. ANTI TRUST FILM CO. CHICAGO.

POWERS.

THE SIGN OF THE HELMET Dec. 26.—[illegible] a living [illegible] Waggles Wally coming to [illegible] apparently [illegible] opportunity that may mean [illegible] for nothing, particularly on the way, but especially in the drink line, and [illegible] If said drink is of amber hue, with a considerable amount of foam over the amber [illegible]

[illegible] that at a certain saloon the sight of [illegible] showed the swinging [illegible] a free drink for the others, and later, when Wally comes in possession of a helmet he begins to play the trick to a fine point. He even [illegible] Waggles in on the good thing. As might not be expected, they do not get the worst of it in the long run, for the little fellow is not [illegible] but muscular as well, and for once in the life of a tightwalker, the common enemy [illegible] wears blue and brass buttons is completely [illegible]

WHERE STEEL MEETS CLOUD (Dec. 26).—[illegible] do we know of the brawny structural iron workers who battle with death daily in their perilous work of building for man the gigantic sky-scrapers that his modern business life demands. Hooking [illegible] to a thin rib of steel that hangs hundreds of feet in the air, he braves a terrible death every second of his day's work, high up near the clouds, with frail, narrow planks that defy the most sure-footed, to walk on. On the end of a cable, a monster derrick swings him out, high over the heads of the gaping multitude, a mere speck against the sky.

A MAIL-BAG ROMANCE (Dec. 30).—Jack and Tom carry the mails on the same route, and both are just crazy about Dotty. Tom, with the morning mail, brings her candy, and Jack, with the next mail, brings some other dainty favor. But this kind of a see-saw game becomes a little slow for Tom, so he begins to plot to get rid of his rival.

There's nothing more sacred in the charge of the mail carrier than the registered letters that are entrusted to his care, and Tom one day manages to make it appear as if Jack had done away with the valuable contents of one; in fact, the opened envelope is found in Jack's desk, the evidence is strongly incriminating, and poor Jack winds up in a felon's cell. Tom convinces Dotty that the charge is true, and wins her heart.

But that does not end matters, for even after years inexplicable fate will claim her own, and so it comes to pass that when Tom meets with an accident that brings him to his deathbed, the better man in him refuses to meet his maker with a lie on his lips. So just before he breathes his last, he tells the story of his own crime that opens the prison doors for Jack. And Jack captures the widow.

MAJESTIC.

THE ACTRESS (Dec. 24).—It is the last rehearsal of the new play, upon whose success depends the fortunes of John Millroy.

Ellen Duran has succeeded in securing a part that gives the opportunity for displaying all the dainty graces and coquettries of a maiden.

Ellen receives a telephone call that her little girl is critically ill. Millroy places his car at her disposal, and she hurries home to find the state of affairs even more alarming than she had anticipated. She does not know what to do. The success of the play depends largely upon her. Her baby girl is crying for her continually. At last she makes up her mind, and out of the house goes a woman with baby cries ringing in her ears.

Into her dressing room flies the actress, and all through that terrible night a dainty little ingenue makes men and women chuckle with laughter.

The play ends and only kept on her feet by the desire to reach her child's bedside the actress is taken to her home. There is a terrible moment in the hall outside of the bedroom door where a weary, haggard nurse holds up a warning finger, and then the mother flies past her into the room where the [illegible] physician catches her, and in answer, points to the child, while a quiet smile of content lightens up his face.

The crisis has safely passed and too bitter a price has not been paid by the little mother for her obedience to the call of her profession.

REX.

THE MARTYR (Dec. 21).—It is Christmas, 1880. Mother and father and married brother Ned and his wife and baby and Cleo, the sweetest girl in the family for other reasons than that she is the only one, and the youngest son, Bert, are all gathered about the festive board. Ned tells his family he has a promising offer to go to England, and with well-wishes and fond good-byes he departs. While the others laugh and chat with the Christmas gaiety of young souls, the mother draws aside and weeps for the loss of her first-born, going away, perhaps forever. But the years linger not, and with them go sorrow and pang.

Comes a new Christmas, new joys—and new sor[illegible] 1890. Another [illegible] has [illegible] its wing—Cleo has married. After the dinner she and [illegible] has gone the way of many others who have faced two paths and selected the wider, and has chosen the downgrade and degradation. He leaves the house to [illegible] returns home very late, intoxicated. The father has locked the door, intending to keep him out of the house as a punishment. But the little mother stealthily and silently opens the door, and waits long hours for the wayward son's return. So the dreary months go and the weary years speed by and

It is Christmas, 1900. The father has crossed the vale that leads into the Veiled Domains. Mother is living in her daughter's home. Her son-in-law has taken his aged mother to live with them, and looks upon both old women with displeasure. Mother notices and knows, and decides to go her own lone way. With shattered hopes and a broken heart, she leaves. And the years go by.

It is Christmas, 1911. Ned has succeeded in making a failure of himself. It is the old tale of sin and vice and the wage they exact. Mother receives a note from him saying that if she does not send enough money to pay his fine he will have to go to jail. The last few dollars that stand between her and destitution are sent to the erring youth. Perhaps Ned will never know, if he did perhaps he really would regret it—the aged angel, a martyr to her own mother-love, goes over the hills to the poor house!

And when Christmas, 1920, dawns, there will be another Saluted Madonna in the Celestial Choir, with a spirit as white as the Christmas snows, ready to bless those who had caused her pain and pang, ready and eager to forgive!

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING COMPANY

Monday December 18th, 1911.

Plantation, "Village Champion" (Com.)	1000
Clarendon, "Storm at Sea" (Dr.)	1000
Mono, "Bewitched Restaurant" (Com.)	459
Aquila, "Pik-nik Dandy" (Com.)	540

Tuesday, December 19th, 1911.

Rose, "Was She Right?" (W. Dr.)	1000
D. Biograph, "Love and Duty" (Dr.)	694
Cricks & M, "English Goats" (Educational)	298
Helios, "Dawn of a Great Revolution" (Hist.)	963

Wednesday, Dec. 20th, 1911.

Federal, "Heart of a Child" (Dr.)	994
Mondia, "Scroggins Goes in Chemist" (Com.)	525
Hepwix, "Gypsy Nan" (Dr.)	425
Latinum, "Great Scott of Wheels" (Com.)	450
Latinum, "Smith's Dream of Promotion" (Com.)	520

Thursday, Dec.. 21st, 1911.

Washington, "Two Soldiers" (W. Dr.)	979
Hepwix, "Veteran's Pension (Dr.)	500
Hepwix, "On the Borders of Shannon" (Sc.)	600
Film d'Art, "William Tell" (Operatic)	1059

Friday, Dec. 22nd, 1911.

Mohawk, "Door of Death" (Dr.)	1000
Cricks & M, "The Resourceful Scout" (Dr.)	670
D. Biograph, "Mr. Sticket's Sunday Trousers (Com.)	330
Aquila, "Pik-nik Master Singer"	1000

Saturday, Dec. 23rd, 1911.

Oklahoma, "Marked Arrow" (Dr.)	1000
D. Bioscope, "Topsy-Turvy Town (Dr.)	550
Helios, "Tours Through Italy" (Scenic)	440
Savoy, "Smith Becomes Waiter" (Com.)	494
Savoy, "Peaceful Holiday" (Com.)	508

Sunday, Dec. 24th, 1911.

California, "Two Brothers" (W. Dr.)	963
Messters, "His Most Important Case" (Com.)	1000
Comerio, "Demon Dog" (Com.)	550
Cricks & M, "Billy's Bible" (Dr.)	450

Among the Exhibitors

Birmingham, Ala.—J. R. Jones is the new manager of the Alamo Theater.

Allentown, Pa.—H. E. Hartmann, proprietor of the Keystone Theater, has taken over the lease of the Lyric Theater from S. B. Walter.

Pottstown, Pa.—The new motion picture theater in East Philadelphia Avenue has opened. It has a seating capacity of 500.

Chicago, Ill.—The Victoria Theater Corporation, 2154 Sheffield Avenue, will erect a moving picture and vaudeville theater to cost $146,00.

Madison, S. D.—Leon Goetz will erect a moving picture theater in this city.

"WHEN?"

G!

Minneapolis, Minn.—M. A. Wa[illegible] have plans prepared for the erection of a moving picture theater here.

Wheeling, W. Va.—The new National Moving Picture Theater in Lafitte is now open. The theater is one of the finest equipped in the section and will seat 300 persons. Smith & Thomas are the proprietors.

Houston, Tex.—Duffy, Scoggins & Duffy have made application for a building permit to erect the Isis Moving Picture Theater in Prairie Avenue.

Bay City, Mich.—A. A. Wolff is erecting a moving picture theater at Third and Johnson streets.

Lebanon, Pa.—Arthur Lichtenthaler has opened a motion picture theater here.

Angleton, Tex.—J. Gayle will soon open a motion picture theater in this city.

Virden, Ill.—Leonard & Gardiner have opened their new motion picture theater here.

Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Charles Clark has purchased from Joseph P. Mollett, the Fairy Theater.

Glens Falls, N. Y.—A. M. Burdette, Jr., has assumed management of the Bradley Opera House and will open it as a moving picture show.

Sharon, Pa.—All contracts have been let for the new Thomas Moving Picture Theater in Shenango Street, and the entire work will be completed by the end of December.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Work has begun on the moving picture theater for Munn Brothers, at 1428-30 Market Street. The theater will have a seating capacity of 300.

Union Springs, Col.—A new moving picture show has been opened in the Stroud Hotel Building by J. S. Matthews.

Bridgeport, Ct.—M. W. Leighton will erect a moving picture theater in Jane Street.

St. Petersburg, Fla.—H. C. Stewart will operate a moving picture theater in this city.

Champaign, Ill.—The new Lyric Theater will shortly open. It is a very handsome playhouse.

Chicago, Ill.—Fred Hartmann, 2611 Lincoln avenue, will erect a $5,000 moving picture theater.

Taunton, Mass.—The Park Theater will be enlarged.

Newark, N. J.—Lowrey, Berger & Co. have had plans prepared for a moving picture theater at 1122 Elizabeth Avenue.

Perry, N. J.—E. D. Hamlin will open a moving picture theater here, to be called the Casino.

Storm Lake, Ia.—D. E. Fyock has purchased the lake resort properties of the Casino Amusement Company, which have been controlled by C. F. Aikin. Mr. Fyock is constructing a handsome motion picture theater.

Oglesby, Ill.—Frank Bothwell, Harold Hoolihan and William Lewis, have purchased a moving picture theater in this city.

Ottawa, Ill.—The Fiske & Beem store on La Salle Street has been leased by a moving picture concern, which will spend several thousand dollars in remodeling and fitting.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Globe Moving Picture Theater, 59th and Market Streets, has been conveyed to Edward Harshaw, subject to a $30,000 mortgage.

Des Moines, Iowa.—Behrends Bros. have sold their moving picture theater to Mr. Hodgin.

Peteau, Okla.—Improvements will be made in the Jo Del Moving Picture Theater, recently purchased by Messrs. Hill & Cox.

Pipestone, Minn.—A moving picture theater will be erected here by A. Berkeley.

Vincennes, Ind.—Councilman Ryan has purchased David Padgett's interest in the Rex Theater, located in the building at Second and St. Clair Streets.

Milwaukee, Wis.—A moving picture theater to cost $10,000 will be erected at Thomas and Murray Avenues by David J. Brown.

Wheeling, W. Va.—The Globe Moving Picture Theater has opened.

Rock Island, Ill.—The Family Theater has been purchased by the proprietors of the Family Theater at Davenport.

Louisville, Ky.—The Pastime Amusement Company will build a $10,000 brick and steel motion picture theater at 18th and Gallagher Streets.

Alexandria, La.—A high-class moving picture theater with a seating capacity of 350 will be opened about December 1 by Dr. H. C. Van Cott.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Work is progressing rapidly on the $25,000 moving picture theater at Market and Sixteenth Streets and it is expected to be opened during the latter part of December.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The Eureka Amusement Company will open a motion picture theater on the premises they formerly occupied as a bowling alley.

Waterbury, Conn.—John L. Fernandez is building a motion picture theater on Bank Street, near Porter.

Shakopee, Minn.—A motion picture theater will be built here by Roy Darnell.

Mankato, Minn.—Don V. Daigneau, formerly of Austin, will open a moving picture theater here.

Chicago, Ill.—A motion picture theater to cost $6,000 will be built by Oscar Eiger.

Benwood, W. Va.—A moving picture theater will be built by Robert Smith.

Washington, Iowa.—A moving picture theater is to be built here by J. C. Canfield.

Algona, Iowa.—M. Stevens will build a new moving picture theater here.

Hallettsville, Tex.—M. H. Hradliek has sold his airdome and moving picture machine to H. S. Paulis, who has also taken a lease on the opera house.

BUMM! BUMM! BUMM!
LISTEN!

Did You Ever Have the Following Features with Free Posters?

SCANDAL IN SOCIETY - - 2000 feet
OLIVER TWIST (CINES) 2000 feet
THE BRIDE OF MESSINA - 1100 feet
PASSION'S SLAVE - - 3000 feet
CARDINAL RICHELIEU'S RIVAL - - - - - 2000 feet

Come and See That We Have

[illegible]

Call or Write

FEATURE FILM CO.
108 East 12th Street NEW YORK

Watch this space for Future Feature Films

McKENNA

BRASS RAILINGS
EASELS
GRILLES
CUSPIDORS
BRASS
KICK PLATES
STAIR TREADS, DOOR SILLS

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH, PA.

FREE

Send postal card with name and address plainly written and receive free of charge sample pages of "Orpheum Collection" of Moving Picture (dramatic and descriptive) music. Until further notice these splendid collections will be offered at the following special prices:

No. 1 (post paid).....58 cts.
No. 2 (post paid).....58 cts.
Both numbers post paid for $1.15.

Clarence E. Sinn
1501 Sedgwick St. Chicago, Ill.

Say, Mr. Exhibitor

WE WANT YOUR BUSINESS. Our Prices Justify You in Making a Change

2 Reels, six times per week	$14.00
2 Reels, seven times per week	15.00
4 Reels, six times per week	16.00
4 Reels, seven times per week	18.00

N. B. Large list of Films for sale. We have a list of Films that's an eye-opener.

NATIONAL FILM BROKERS, Dept. W, 186 N. La Salle St., Chicago

NEW MODEL OF THE
ROYAL STANDARD TYPEWRITER

The LATEST Model of ANY Typewriter on the Market

HAS TWO-COLOR RIBBON, BACK-SPACER, TABULATOR
and many new and valuable patented features that other typewriters do not have

PRICE, $75

Send for "The Royal Book," 32 pages of typewriter information—the finest typewriter catalog ever issued. Yours for a postal card.

ROYAL TYPEWRITER CO.
Royal Typewriter Building - - - - - NEW YORK
A Branch in Each Principal City

LISTEN

Mr. Theater Manager and Exchange Man—why don't you yourself buy the greatest Christmas present your town, your customer, your patron and your hearth desires. Buy a local Motion Picture Making outfit and photograph your town occurrences, photograph the one who has a grouch against you, show him on the sheet and he will smile and be your friend. This local picture outfit has been reduced from $800 down to $395, for real professional work, guaranteed; no toy. Outfit comprises camera, with lens, tripod, printer and developing racks, trays, winder and drying drums. Send for catalogue at once and rush your order. I keep supplies for the trade, best lenses, all machine repairs have great original specialties. I have the projector all others have been copied from.

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER, 219 Second Ave., New York

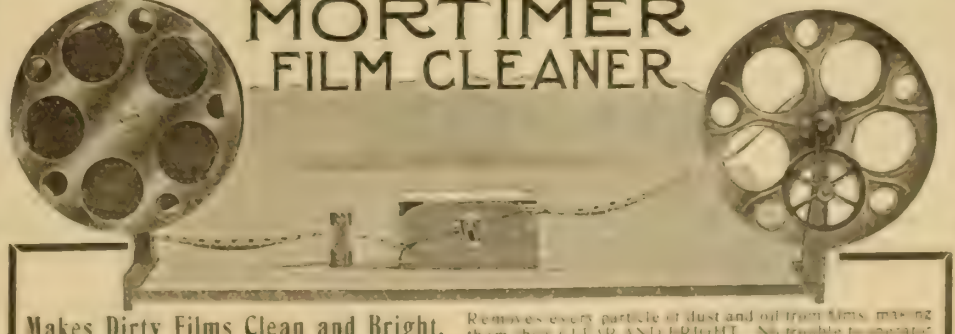
INDEPENDENT
SERVICE FROM THE
SWAAB FILM SERVICE CO.

is an improvement over your present service. Try it and be convinced.

Motiograph and Power Machines always on hand, and General Supplies.

129 NORTH EIGHTH STREET
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

MORTIMER FILM CLEANER



Makes Dirty Films Clean and Bright. Removes every particle of dust and oil from films, making them show CLEAR AND BRIGHT. No trouble to operate—cleans while film is being re-wound. Used and endorsed by leading exchanges and theatres. SIMPLE, PRACTICAL and positively GUARANTEED NOT TO INJURE THE FILM. Price of machine, $10.00; parts $1.00 per hundred. Send for illustrated booklet and testimonials. Mortimer Film Cleaner Co. 704 Fidelity Bldg. Portland, Me.

INDEPENDENT Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Nov. 23—The Master of the Vineyard (W. Dr.)1000
Nov. 27—Jolly Bill of the Rollicking R (W. Com.) 1000
Nov. 30—The Sheriff's Sisters (W. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 4—The Angel of Paradise Ranch (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 7—The Smoke of the Forty-five (Dr.)...1000
Dec. 11—The Man Hunt (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 14—Santa Catalina, Magic Isle of the Pacific (Scenic and Educational)..1000
Dec. 18—The Last Notch (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—The Gold Lust (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 25—The Duel of Candles (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 28—Bonita of El Cajon (Dr.).....1000

CHAMPION.

Dec. 4—Yankee Doodle (Juvenile).....
Dec. 4—Our Navy (Naval)..... 950
Dec. 6—The Indian Fortune Teller (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 11—A Traitor on the Staff (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 13—The Saving of Dan (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 18—The Coward's Flute (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 20—By Decree of Fate (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 25—Bonnie of the Hills (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 27—The Doctor's Close Call (Dr.)..... 950

COMET.

Nov. 27—Grandma's Toofache (Com.)..... 955
Dec. 1—The Late Mrs. Early (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 4—Billy's Letters (Com.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Dead Canary (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 11—The Ups and Downs of Rafferty (Com.)
Dec. 15—Just In Time for Dinner (Dr.).....
Dec. 18—A Game of Bridge (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 22—The Man With the Camera (Dr.).... 985
Dec. 25—The Tie That Binds (Com.).....1000
Dec. 29—The Crude Miss Prude (Com.).....1000

ECLAIR.

Nov. 23—Portguguese Centaurs (Military)..... 600
Nov. 23—The Automatic Lighter (Com.)..... 400
Nov. 28—Miss Masquerader (Am. Com.)..... 400
Nov. 30—The Five Daughters of Mr. Durand (Com.) .....
Nov. 30—Gussy's Congratulations (Com.).....
Dec. 5—In Humanity's Cause (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—There Fell a Flower (Com.)..... 660
Dec. 7—Manners and Traditions of Piemont (Educational) 660
Dec. 12—The Musician's Daughter (Am. Dr.)..
Dec. 14—Her One Day's Dream (Japanese Dr.)
Dec. 19—A Tragic Joke (Am. Dr.).....
Dec. 21—A Heart Bowed Down (Dr.).....
Dec. 26—The Wrong Bottle (Am. Com.-Dr.)....
Dec. 28—The Silent Call (Dr.).....

GREAT NORTHERN.

Nov. 11—A Woman's Wit (Com.).....
Nov. 18—A Rendezvous in Hyde Park (Com.-Dr.)
Nov. 18—High Scotland (Scenic) .....
Nov. 25—The Theft of Mona Lisa (Com.).....
Dec. 2—The Penalty of Her Ambition (Dr.)..
Dec. 9—Buttons and Hooks (Com.).....
Dec. 9—Winter In Switzerland (Scenic).....
Dec. 16—His First Monocle (Com.).....
Dec. 16—Greece (Scenic) .....
Dec. 23—The Twins (Com.).....
Dec. 23—From Ostersund to Strolein (Sc.).....

IMP.

Dec. 2—Percy, the Masher (Com.)..... 750
Dec. 2—President Taft Dedicating the Naval Training Station at Chicago, Ill. (Topical).. 350
Dec. 4—The Dumb Messenger (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 7—Tony and the Stork.....1000
Dec. 9—Her Birthday (Com.-Dr.)..... 750
Dec. 9—Columbia Interscholastic Chase (Athletic.) 350
Dec. 11—Why the Check Was Good (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 14—The Little Stocking (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 16—Billy's Seance (Com.)..... 500
Dec. 16—The Bungalow Burglars (Com.)..... 500
Dec. 18—The Girl and the Half-back (Dr.)... 700
Dec. 18—Chinese War Cruiser "Hai-Chi" (Naval) 300
Dec. 21—The Professor (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 23—A Pair of Gloves (Com.)..... 600
Dec. 23—Niagara Falls Celebration (Topical)... 400
Dec. 25—On the Stroke of Three (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 28—The Portrait (Dr.).....1000

LUX.

Nov. 17—The Mystery of Beaufort Grange (Dr.) 695
Nov. 24—A Passing Cloud (Dr.)..... 655
Nov. 24—Bill and Bertie's Wedding Day (Com.) 825
Dec. 1—Bill As a Veterinary Surgeon (Com.) 488
Dec. 1—The Making of An Aeroplane (Ind.).. 419
Dec. 8—The Man In the Auto (Dr.)..... 650
Dec. 8—The Adventures of an Amateur Hypnotist. Com.) 350
Dec. 15—Bill and His Chum Tire of Married Life (Com.)..... 521
Dec. 15—Mistaken for the Culprit (Dr.)..... 459
Dec. 22—A Japanese Love Story (Dr.)..... 977

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

BISON.

Nov. 17—The Ranchman's Mother-in-Law (Com.-Dr.) .....
Nov. 21—The Broken Trap (Dr.).....
Nov. 24—White Fawn's Escape (Dr.).....
Nov. 24—A Bad Man (Com.).....
Nov. 28—A Western One-Night Stand (Com-Dr.)
Dec. 1—An Easterner's Peril (Dr.).....
Dec. 5—The Empty Tepee (Indian Dr.).....
Dec. 8—A Range Romance (W. Dr.).....
Dec. 12—Bar Z's New Cook (Com.).....
Dec. 15—The Foreman's Courage (Dr.).....
Dec. 19—Cowgirls' Pranks (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 22—An Indian Martyr (Dr.).....

AMBROSIO.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Nov. 15—The Convict's Song (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—The Golden Wedding (Dr.).....
Nov. 29—The Little Duke (Dr.) .....
Nov. 29—Tiny Tom, Apache (Com.).....
Dec. 2—Tweedledum Goes Into High Life (Com.) .....
Dec. 2—The Accusing Dog (Com.).....
Dec. 6—Jorio's Daughter (Dr.).....
Dec. 13—The Marquis of Lantenac (Dr.).....
Dec. 13—The Launching of Two Italian Dreadnoughts (Naval) .....
Dec. 20—Tweedledum Marries an American Girl (Com.).....
Dec. 20—The War in Tripoli (War).....

ITALA.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Nov. 11—A Victim of Competition.....
Nov. 11—The Effect of a Racket (Com.).....
Nov. 18—Foolshead, a Professor of Innocence (Comedy) .....
Nov. 18—The Life of Bees (Edu.).....
Nov. 25—The Tailor Wants His Pay (Com.)..
Nov. 25—The King of Noose Throwers.....
Dec. 2—Severed from the World (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—An Up-to-Date Doctor (Com.).....
Dec. 23—Foolshead's Christmas (Com.).....

MAJESTIC.

Dec. 3—Love Heeds Not Showers (Com.)....
Dec. 10—Keeping Mabel Home (Com.).....
Dec. 17—Little Red Riding Hood (Juvenile.)
Dec. 24—The Actress (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 31—The Caddy's Dream (Com.)..... 385
Dec. 31—Will You Marry Me? (Com.)..... 615
Jan. 7—Training a Husband (Com.).....1000

NESTOR.

Dec. 4—Just Two Little Girls (Dr.).....
Dec. 6—Struck Gold (Dr.).....
Dec. 9—Desperate Desmond Adducts Rosamond (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 11—Only An Iceman (Com.).....
Dec. 13—The Law of the Range (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—In the Early Days (Com.).....
Dec. 16—Mutt & Jeff Make the Feathers Fly (Com.) .....
Dec. 18—The Love Chase (Com.).....
Dec. 20—The New Ranch Owner (W. Com.)...
Dec. 23—Desperate Desmond Foiled by Claude Eclair (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 25—The Best Man Wins (Com.).....
Dec. 27—A Western Girl's Love (Dr.).....
Dec. 30—Mutt & Jeff Break Into Society (Com.)
Dec. 30—Their Afternoon Off (Com.).....

FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL FILM CO.

Nov. 20—Love and Aviation (Dr.).....
Nov. 20—Zigomar (Dr.).....
Dec. 18—The Love Chase (Com.).....

POWERS.

Nov. 18—The Old Leader (Dr.).....
Nov. 21—Rivals (Com.) .....
Nov. 21—Views of Montserrat, Italy (Sc.).....
Nov. 25—Jug o' Rum (Dr.).....
Nov. 28—Too Much Injun (Com.).....
Nov. 28—The Lineman and the Girl.....
Dec. 2—The Wanderer's Return (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—Views of Lake Como (Scenic).....
Dec. 5—The Little Thief (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 5—The Secret Order of Horns (Com.)..
Dec. 9—Two Men and a Girl (Dr.).....
Dec. 12—The Little Chaperone (Com.).....
Dec. 12—Views of Genoa, Italy (Scenic.).....
Dec. 16—When Heart Wires Cross (Com.-Dr.)..
Dec. 19—Cupid's Big Sister (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 19—Touring Brussels (Scenic) .....
Dec. 23—Hearts of Italy (Dr.).....
Dec. 26—The Sign of the Helmet (Com.).....
Dec. 26—Where Steel Meets Cloud (Industrial)
Dec. 30—A Mail Bag Romance (Dr.).....

RELIANCE.

Nov. 15—The Moonshiners (Dr.).....
Nov. 18—The Injustice of Man (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—Helpless Man (Dr.).....
Nov. 25—A Daughter of Italy (Dr.).....
Nov. 2—A Happy Thanksgiving (Dr.).....
Nov. 29—A Happy Thanksgiving (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—The Poison Cup (Dr.).....
Dec. 6—The Turn of the Wheel (Dr.).....
Dec. 9—The Turnstile (Dr.).....
Dec. 13—Love and Charity (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—The Playwright (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—Just Smile (Com.).....
Dec. 20—Locked In the Vaults (Dr.).....
Dec. 23—The Doctor's Dilemma (Dr.).....
Dec. 23—A Pair of Shoes (Com.).....

REPUBLIC.

Dec. 5—The Savannah Auto Races (Topical)..
Dec. 17—In the Days of the Six Nations (Dr.)
Dec. 24—Before Yorktown (Hist.-Dr.).....
Dec. 31—The Pride of Lexington (Hist-Dr.)..

REX.

Oct. 5—Lost Illusions (Dr.).....
Oct. 12—Chasing a Rainbow (Dr.).....
Oct. 19—Her Sister (Dr.).....
Oct. 26—A Breach of Faith (Dr.).....
Nov. 2—The Tale of a Cat (Dr.).....
Nov. 9—Saints and Sinners (Dr.).....
Nov. 16—The Return (Dr.).....
Nov. 23—The Price (Dr.).....
Nov. 30—The Strangers (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—The Measure of a Man (Dr.).....
Dec. 14—Logging Industry in the Northwest (Ind.) .....
Dec. 21—The Martyr (Dr.).....

SOLAX.

Nov. 24—The Will of Providence (Com.-Dr.)..
Nov. 29—A Troublesome Picture (Com.).....
Nov. 29—Fun On Board the "U. S. S. Vermont" (Naval) .....
Dec. 1—A Revolutionary Romance (Mil.-Dr.)..
Dec. 6—Baby's Choice (Com.).....
Dec. 6—The Paper Making Industry (Ind.)..
Dec. 8—The Little Shoe (Dr.).....
Dec. 13—Fickle Bridget (Com.).....
Dec. 15—The Little Kiddie Mine (Dr.).....
Dec. 20—Love, Whiskers and Letters (Com.)..
Dec. 22—The Violin Maker of Nuremberg (Dr.)
Dec. 24—Christmas Presents (Dr.).....
Dec. 27—When Mary Was Little (Com.).....
Dec. 29—The Divided Ring (Dr.).....

THANHOUSER.

Nov. 10—The Last of the Mohicans (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—The Higher—the Fewer (Com.).....
Nov. 17—A Mother's Faith (Dr.).....
Nov. 21—A Master of Millions.....
Nov. 24—The Baseball Bug (Com.-Dr.).....
Nov. 28—The Tempest (Dr.).....
Dec. 1—Beneath the Veil (Dr.).....
Dec. 5—The Newsy and the Tramp (Com.-Dr.)
Dec. 8—Brother Bob's Baby (Com.).....
Dec. 12—The Lady from the Sea (Dr.).....
Dec. 15—Deacon Debbs (Com.).....
Dec. 19—The Tomboy (Com. Dr.).....
Dec. 22—Cinderella (Juvenile) .....
Dec. 26—She (2 reels) (Dr.).....
Dec. 29—The Expert's Report (Dr.).....

YANKEE.

Nov. 3—At Daisy Farm (Dr.).....
Nov. 6—A Coward's Regeneration (Dr.).....
Nov. 10—He Didn't Like the Tune (Com.)...
Nov. 13—Into the Light (Dr.).....
Nov. 17—The Two Rooms (Dr.).....

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000	- -	$1.25	20,000	- -	$4.60	50,000	- - $7.50
10,000	- -	$2.50	25,000	- -	$5.50	100,000	- - $10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

THE MAJESTIC

Has a perfect right to expect unqualified support from every buying exchange in the country.

It entered the Independent market under the most trying conditions any manufacturer was ever called upon to face—conditions which almost precluded the possibility of profit.

It has made three releases with a reasonable degree of success, and the subsequent releases will prove conclusively to every exchange and exhibitor that THE MAJESTIC is second to none in the Independent market.

It is now releasing one subject each week—ONE GOOD ONE—and beginning January 7th will release two-a-week—TWO GOOD ONES.

It will then concentrate every effort on ONLY two good ones each week.

Five First Class Quality Pictures. New and Novel Plots —Perfect Photography—Acting Above Criticism :: :: ::

INDEPENDENT Release Dates

MAJESTIC

Nov. 26 The Courting of Mary (Com.)....1000
Dec. 3 Love Heeds Not Showers (Com.)..1000
Dec. 10—Keeping Mabel Home (Com.).....1000
Dec. 17—Little Red Riding Hood (Juvenile).1000
Dec. 24—The Actress (Dr.).....1000
Dec 31—The Caddy's Dream (Com.)..... 385
Dec 31 Will You Marry Me? (Com.)..... 615
Jan. 7—Training a Husband (Com.).....1000

Dec. 17 CHRISTMAS PICTURE--By Special Request

LITTLE MARY PICKFORD In

"Little Red Riding Hood"

An appropriate Christmas picture for the children—a clever portrayal of the famous Nursery Rhyme—showing "Red Riding Hood" taking "goodies" to her Granny—followed by the terrible wolf—reaching Granny's home to find Granny eaten by the wolf—calling of the woodsmen to dispose of the wolf—and the awakening of "Red Riding Hood" from her dream.

Dec. 24 "The Actress"

A strong emotional story, showing MABEL TRUNNELLE as the actress, whose duty calls her to portray a light hearted character on the stage, while at home her child lies at death's door. This film is one of the strongest yet produced and will be a big feature wherever it is shown.

A SPLIT COMEDY REEL

Dec. 31 "The Caddy's Dream" 385 feet

A farce comedy, showing how it took 20 years for a clever caddy to find the golf ball and the ridiculous situations in which the lovers are placed, while growing from youth to old age. A real, sure laugh and a hearty one.

Dec. 31st "Will You Marry Me?" 615 feet

Another farce comedy, showing the determination of the young fellow to get married—he proposes to every girl he meets and is finally tricked by the girl he loves.

Jan. 7th "Training A Husband"

A clever comedy reel—the husband does not like his wife's cooking wants his mother to cook a meal for him. She does, then he says he can cook better than either one of them gets his stenographer to do it for him, then claims credit—is found out and then he gets what is coming to him.

Two Good Majestics a Week beginning January 7th

The Majestic Motion Picture Co.

145 W. 45th ST. NEW YORK CITY

Sold through the Sales Co.

LICENSED Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Nov. 27—Sunshine Through the Dark (Dr.).....
Nov. [illegible]—A Woman Scorned (Dr.).....
Dec. [illegible]—Why He Gave Up (Com.).....
Dec. [illegible]—Abe Gets Even With Father (Com.)..
Dec. 7—The Failure (Dr.).....
Dec. [illegible]—Saved from Himself (Dr.)..... 999
Dec. [illegible]—Taking His Medicine (Com.)..... 673
Dec. 14—Her Pet (Com.)..... 323
Dec. [illegible]—As In a Looking Glass (Dr.).....
Dec. [illegible]—A Terrible Discovery (Dr.).....
Dec. [illegible]—Caught With the Goods (Com.)....
Dec. [illegible]—A Mix-up in Rain Coats (Com.)....
Dec. 28—The Voice of the Child (Dr.).....

EDISON.

Nov. 28—The Troubles of A. Butler (Com.)..1000
Dec. 1—Pull for the Shore, Sailor (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 2—A Man for All That (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Awakening of John Bond (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 6—John Brown's Heir (Com.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Heart of Nichette (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 9—The Daisy Cowboys (Com.)..... 990
Dec. 12—Buckskin Jack, the Earl of Glenmore (Com.-Dr.) 1000
Dec. 13—An International Heart Breaker (Com.) 700
Dec. 13—Eskimos In Labrador (Edu.)..... 300
Dec. 15—Brockton Fair & Horse Show, Brockton, Mass., Oct. 3rd to 6th, 1911 (Topical) 990
Dec. 16—Stage Struck Lizzie (Com.)..... 650
Dec. 16—A Trip from Colorado Springs to Cripple Creek (Scenic)..... 350
Dec. 19—Santa Claus and the Clubman (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 20—The Sign of the Three Labels (Com.).1000
Dec. 22—How Sir Andrew Lost His Vote (Com.)1000
Dec. 23—Pat Clancy's Adventure (Com.).....1000
Dec. 26—Papa's Sweetheart (Dr.)..... 625
Dec. 26—Modern Weapons for Fighting Fire New York City (Vocational)..... 375
Dec. 27—The Stuff that Dreams are Made of (Com.) 1000
Dec. 29—A Romance of the Cliff Dwellers (Dr.).1000
Dec. 30—Uncle Hiram's List (Com.).....1000

ESSANAY.

Nov. 30—'Twas Ever Thus (Comedy).....1000
Dec. 1—The Quinceville Raffle (Com.)..... 750
Dec. 1—The Girl in the Taxi (Com.)..... 300
Dec. 2—The Mountain Law (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Madman (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 7—The Long Strike (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—Getting Even With Emily (Com.).....
Dec. 8—Stray Bullets (Com.).....1000
Dec. 9—A Frontier Doctor (W. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 12—The First Man (Com.).....1000
Dec. 14—The Hack & Schmidt Bout (Com.).....
Dec. 14—A Polished Burglar (Com.).....1000
Dec. 15—A Goodfellow's Christmas Eve (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 16—The Cowboy Coward (W. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 19—The Three Bears (Juvenile).....1000
Dec. 21—Winning An Heiress (Com. Dr.)..... 300
Dec. 22—The Foiling of Red Dugan (Dr.)..... 700
Dec. 22—The Millionaire Barber (Com.).....1000
Dec. 23—Broncho Billy's Christmas Dinner (Dr.)1000
Dec. 26—A Story of the West (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 28—For Memory's Sake (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 29—A Reel In the Hand (Com.).....1000
Dec. 30—Broncho Billy's Adventure (W. Dr.)..1000

GAUMONT.

Nov. 25—The Escape from the Dungeon (Dr.).. 825
Nov. 25—Cave Homes on the Canary Isles (Sc.) 180
Nov. 28—A Busy Cupid (Com.)..... 758
Nov. 28—Review of the Austrian Army (Sc.). 232
Dec. 2—The Promoter (Dr.).....1140
Dec. 5—Jimmie Tricks the Landlady (Com.).. 475
Dec. 5—The Challenge (Dr.)..... 525
Dec. 9—Camoens, the Portuguese Shakespeare, Lisbon, 1578 (Hist. Dr.)..... 610
Dec. 9—Important Scenes in Paris, France (Sc.) 820
Dec. 12—Heroism (Dr.)..... 610
Dec. 12—Arabian Customs (Ind.)..... 366
Dec. 16—A Queen's Treachery, or the Betrayal of Charles VI of France (Hist. Dr.)1000
Dec. 19—Through the Enemy's Lines (War Dr.) 985
Dec. 23—The Maid of Argos (Dr.)..... 980
Dec. 26—Love, Pity to Love (Dr.)..... 826
Dec. 29—Scenes of the Coast of North Africa (Sc.) 124
Dec. 30—Curing a Reckless Student (Dr.)....1010

KALEM.

Nov. 27—Among the Irish Fisher Folk (Edu.).
Nov. 29—The Franciscan Friars of Killarney, Ireland (Top.) .....
Dec. 1—How Betty Captured the Outlaw (Comedy) .....
Dec. 1—A Glimpse Into the Yellowstone National Park (Scenic).....
Dec. 4—Arrah-Na-Pogue (3 reels) (Dr.).....3000
Dec. 6—The Long Arm of the Law (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—Too Much Realism (Com.).....1000
Dec. 11—Molly Pitcher (Historical-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 13—Norma From Norway (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 15—Bill's Flute (W. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 18—He Who Laughs Last (Com.).....1000
Dec. 20—The Flash in the Night (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 22—Between Father and Son (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 25—The "Revenue" and the Girl (Dr.)...1000
Dec. 27—The Higher Toll (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 29—The Maid's Double (Dr.).....1000

LUBIN.

Nov. 29—The Crab Industry (Ind.)..... 400
Nov. 30—A Nicotine Conspiracy (Com.).....1000
Dec. 2—Western Chivalry (Com. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 4—A Head for Business (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 6—Sins of the Father (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 7—Love's Labor Lost (Com.).....1000
Dec. 9—The Teamster (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 11—A Girlish Impulse (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 13—Mr. and Mrs. Suspicious (Com.)..... 400
Dec. 13—Quick! A Plumber (Com.)..... 600
Dec. 14—The Substitute (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 16—A Timely Lesson (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 18—Love Decides (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 20—Art versus Music (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—Kiddies' Christmas (2 reels Xmas Dr.) 1800
Dec. 23—The Sergeant White's Peril (Military Dr.) 1000
Dec. 25—One Way to Win (Com.).....1000
Dec. 27—The American Girl (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 28—The Soldier's Return (Dr.).....
Dec. 30—Father and the Girls (Dr.).....

MELIES.

Nov. 16—The Miser Miner (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Nov. 23—An Oil Country Romance (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—The Reason Why (Com.).....1000
Dec. 7—A Western Girl (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 14—The Better Man (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—The Mission Father (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 28—The Ranchman's Debt of Honor (Com. Dr.) 1000
Jan. 4—A Woman's Gratitude (Dr.).....1000

ECLIPSE.
(G. Kleine.)

Nov. 22—Guy Fawkes or the Gunpowder Plot (Dr.) 1010
Nov. 29—The Mysterious Stranger (Dr.)..... 610
Nov. 29—Salt Industry in Sicily (Ind.)..... 372
Dec. 6—The Luckless Banker (Dr.).....1002
Dec. 13—The Tragedy of Old Age (Dr.)..... 798
Dec. 13—Harbor of Marseilles, France (Sc.)... 215
Dec. 20—The Miracle (Dr.) 1040
Dec. 27—The Stolen Treasure (Dr.)..... 680
Dec. 27—Fair Exchange is no Robbery (Com.).. 322

PATHE.

Nov. 25—The Lost Necklace (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 27—Pathe's Weekly No. 48 (Topical)....1000
Nov. 29—Incendiary Indians (Dr.)..... 745
Nov. 29—Glimpses of San Francisco (Scenic).. 250
Nov. 30—Oh! What a Thanksgiving Day (Com.) 775
Dec. 2—Bear Hunt Romance (Dr.)..... 990
Dec. 4—Pathe's Weekly No. 49 (Topical)....1000
Dec. 6—Hobo Luck (Am. Com.).....
Dec. 7—The Poisoned Arrow (Am. Dr.).....
Dec. 9—Her Little Slipper (Am. Dr.).....
Dec. 11—Pathe's Weekly No. 50 (Topical)...1000
Dec. 13—The Flower Girl of Los Palmas (Am. Dr.) 990
Dec. 14—An Episode of the Early Mormon Days (Am. Dr.) 820
Dec. 14—The Magic Suit Case (Trick)..... 150
Dec. 16—A Mother's Remorse (Am. Dr.)..... 995
Dec. 18—Pathe's Weekly No. 51 (Top.).....1000
Dec. 20—The Fatal Posing (Am. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—Dad's Smash Up (Am. Com.).....1000
Dec. 23—Actors' Hearts (Am. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 25—Pathe's Weekly No. 52 (Topical).....1000
Dec. 27—The Mother-in-Law Raises (Com.)....1000
Dec. 28—His Daughter's Bracelet (Am. Dr.).
Dec. 29—Yann, the Troubadour (Dr.).....
Dec. 30—The Doll (Am. Dr.).....

C. G. P. C.

Nov. 28—Picturesque Hungary (Scenic)..... 290
Nov. 30—A Life-Saving School in Australia (Educational) 220
Dec. 1—Rover is Jealous (Com.)..... 560
Dec. 1—Capturing Polar Bear Cubs (Adv.).. 290
Dec. 1—Examination of the Stomach by X Rays (Educational) 150
Dec. 5—The Secret of the Confessional (Dr.)..
Dec. 6—Fishing in the Ceram Islands (Sc.)..
Dec. 7—French Cuirassier Maneuvers (Military)
Dec. 8—Eva's Faithful Furniture (Com.)....
Dec. 8—Gathering and Preparing Cocoanuts in the Philippine Islands (Ind.).....
Dec. 12—Youth versus Age (Dr.)..... 795
Dec. 12—Small Trades in Malacca (Edu.).... 200
Dec. 15—In the Grip of Alcohol (2 reels) (Dr.).2000
Dec. 19—Princess Charming (Juvenile).....
Dec. 19—Landscapes in Japan (Scenic).....
Dec. 22—Providential Bread (Dr.).....
Dec. 22—In Japan: Nara (Scenic).....
Dec. 26—The Burglar's Hard Luck (Com.)
Dec. 26—Aboard a French Battleship (Naval)
Dec. 26—The Kidnaps (Acrobatic)
Dec. 28—Mushroom Culture (Educational)

SELIG.

Dec. 1—In Japan (Scenic).. 599
Dec. 1—Seeing Cincinnati (Scenic) 500
Dec. 4—A Diamond in the Rough (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—A Frontier Girl's Courage (Dr.)....1000
Dec. 7—The Maid at the Helm (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Plumber (Com.)..... 600
Dec. 8—A Day With a Circus (Novelty)..... 400
Dec. 11—The Chief's Daughter (Dr.)..... 500
Dec. 11—April Fool (Com.)..... 500
Dec. 12—A Romance of the Rio Grande (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 14—George Warrington's Escape (Hist.-Dr.) 1000
Dec. 15—Industries of the South and West (Edu.) 1000
Dec. 18—Evangeline (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 19—For His Pal's Sake (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—Brown of Harvard (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 22—The Little Widow (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 25—A Modern Rip (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 26—The Bully of Bingo Gulch (Com.-Dr.)..1000
Dec. 28—Paid Back (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 29—Their Last Chance (Com.).....1000

VITAGRAPH.

Nov. 28—The Freshet (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 29—The Voiceless Message (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 1—The Last Cent (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 2—The Husking Bee (Comedy).....1000
Dec. 4—Saving the Special (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Hypnotist (Com.).....1000
Dec. 5—A Slight Mistake (Com.).....1000
Dec. 6—The Black Chasm (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—War (Historical-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 9—His Wife's Secret (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 11—One Touch of Nature (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 12—The Military Air Scout (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 13—The Ventriloquist's Trunk (Com.)....1000
Dec. 15—Love at Gloucester Port (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 16—The Sick Man from the East (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 18—Vitagraph Monthly of Current Events (Topical) 1000
Dec. 19—Vanity Fair (3 reels—Dr.).....3000
Dec. 20—Fires of Driftwood (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 22—A Reformed Santa Claus (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 23—The Old Doll (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 25—Some Good in All (X Mas Dr.).....1000
Dec. 26—The Younger Brother (Military Dr.)..1000
Dec. 27—Testing His Courage (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 29—A Doubly Desired Orphan (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 30—In the Clutches of a Vapor Bath (Com.) 1000

Among the Exhibitors

Macon, Ga.—Mr. Daniel Holt is having plans for a theater made, which when completed will be known as the Savoy. The location of this new enterprise is on Third Street above Cherry and will run along the same standard as the Lyric and the Theatorium, which are also owned by Mr. Holt.

Long Branch, N. J.—E. S. Alwyn, manager of the Alwyn Amusement Company, has assumed control of the Washington Street Opera House.

Cleveland, Ohio.—Another East End picture and vaudeville theater seating nearly 1,000 is to be built at once, at a cost of $65,000, which will be under the management of J. Timendorfer.

New York City.—William Crawford has leased to the National Film Company for a term of years, the entire second floor in the twelve-story building, at 141-145 West 45th Street.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Work has been started on the moving picture theater to be erected by Huhn Bros., at Nos. 1428-1430 Market Street.

Reading, Pa.—The Peterson Amusement Company has purchased the Liberty moving picture theater here.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Plans for a moving picture theater, to be erected at 2516-2520 West Lehigh Avenue, for W. J. Stewart, are posted for estimate by George Hogg. It will measure 48 by 100 feet. Another moving picture theater is to be erected at 2486-2488 N. 22d Street for Adolph Bonnem, plans of which also are posted by George Hogg.

Spencer, Ia.—The moving picture theater has been purchased by Fraser & Auhl.

Columbus, Ga.—A moving picture theater is to be opened at 1027 Broad Street.

Marshalltown, Ia.—M. C. Roskoph has bought the Lyric Motion Picture Theater from W. J. Fahey.

Two Harbors, Minn.—Murphy Bros. have leased the Star Theater from Olson & Alstatt and will conduct a motion picture exhibition.

Winston-Salem, N. C.—A moving picture theater will be built here by W. E. Pike.

Louisville, Ky.—The Fidelity Trust Company will expend $4,000 in remodeling the theater at 226 West Market Street, which will thereafter exhibit motion pictures.

Zumbro Falls, Minn.—A motion picture theater is to be built here at once by the Zumbro Falls Company.

Wilmington, Del.—The new Majestic Moving Picture Theater has been playing to capacity since its opening.

Hillsboro, Ill.—A motion picture show has been installed in Panchis Hall by Foster & Fox.

Anadarka, Okla.—The new motion picture theater on Main Street was opened recently.

FOR CHRISTMAS

DON'T FAIL

TO GET A SET OF THESE FAMOUS

Musical Electrical Bells

RING YULETIDE IN WITH

DEAGAN CHIMES

—OR—

OR DEAGAN BELLS

The Greatest Attraction for a Moving Picture Theatre

We make the Electric Bells in various sizes from

$40.00 up

The most popular sets of Bells we are now making are the

No. 310 outfit

25 Bells, 2 Octaves Chromatic, C to C

Complete with resonators, keyboard and all electrical apparatus.

Price of this outfit is $75.00

Will be shipped to you for examination and trial on receipt of $5.00 to guarantee express charges.

Every set of bells guaranteed one year.

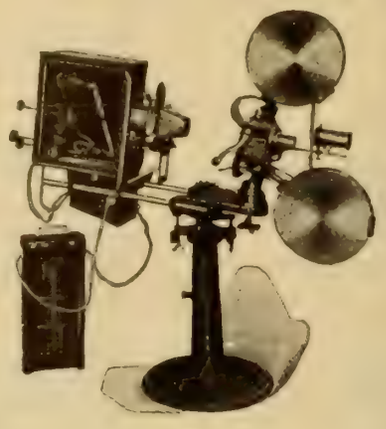
ALUMINUM CHIMES from $40.00 and up

Write for circulars and descriptive matter

J. C. DEAGAN

3800 N. Clark St. Chicago, Ill.

One Hundred and Fifteen Thousand People in the First Fifteen Days



was the attendance at the lectures of the Southern-Union Pacific Railway System at the Land Show, Chicago, November 18th to December 9th, 1911.

This great railway system has given most substantial proof of their unbounded faith in the moving picture through the expenditure of more than Twenty-five Thousand Dollars for a three weeks' exhibition of the wonders lying along the roads controlled by them. This company had erected for their purpose two complete moving picture theatres seating about 500 people in each and conducted alternately one-half hour lectures.

The Machines used were one 1908 Model Motiograph and one 1910 Model Motiograph—"Nuf Sed."

1912 MODELS NOW BEING SHIPPED

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY

564-572 WEST RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO

For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere

ILG VENTILATING FANS

ARE STANDARD FOR THEATRE VENTILATION

We are specialists in theatre ventilation. We have over 200 fans and blowers in Chicago theatres. alone.

ILG Self Cooled Motor Fan.

ILG FANS ARE NOTED FOR—
the self cooled motor —low power consumption—quiet running—ease of installation—freedom from repairs. We have a capable engineering department and will be glad to lay out your system.

SEND US A SKETCH OF YOUR THEATRE WITH SEATING CAPACITY AND TELL US THE CURRENT AND VOLTAGE AVAILABLE, WE CAN THEN TELL YOU HOW TO PLACE THE FANS, WHAT THEY WILL COST TO INSTALL AND OPERATE. ILG FANS CAN BE INSTALLED BY ANY ELECTRICIAN.

ILG ELECTRIC VENTILATING CO., 160 WHITING STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

THINK! ! !

Buying heavily of all the Independent films best calculated to pack your house every day in the week; and with every department of every Laemmle Film Service office in charge of bright, alert, brainy, energetic men—is it any wonder that my customers are the best satisfied bunch of exhibitors in the business? Why don't you climb onto the Laemmle bandwagon right this very day? WRITE OR WIRE!

Carl Laemmle, President

The Laemmle Film Service

New Number:
204 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1517 Farnam St., Omaha, Neb.
515 Mulberry St., Des Moines, Iowa
1110 Wyandotte St., Kansas City, Mo.

The BIGGEST and BEST film renter in the World

(My Free Employment Bureau is yours to command, always and forever.)

Solved at last REID'S DIFFUSER
Gives DISSOLVING EFFECT with SINGLE STEREOPTICON

Every Operator—Every Exhibitor—should have one. Can be used with any machine. Prepaid for $2.00 bill

Reid Diffuser Co., 26 Waverly Ct., Chicago, Ill.

LECTURES

The MOVING PICTURE WORLD has prepared the following Lectures by W. STEPHEN BUSH, in Booklet form, at $1.00 each, postage prepaid

How To Put On THE PASSION PLAY
(Second Edition).
For Pathe Freres World Renowned Production

How To Put On THE CRUSADERS
OR JERUSALEM DELIVERED
For the World's Best Film Co., Feature Film (Copyright, 1911).

KEY and COMPLETE LECTURE for
DANTE'S INFERNO
For Monopol Film Co.'s Five-Reel Production of the Milano Films Co. (Italy).

Copyrighted and Published Only By
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
25 East 23rd Stree NEW YORK CITY

WHILE THEY LAST

I still have a choice lot of

PHOTOPLAYER SLIDES

They are yours at 30c. each.
Cash with order

JAMES L. HOFF
Box 70, Madison Square Station NEW YORK CITY

A Good Chistmas for Your Operator

A MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK

Price $1.50 Postage Paid

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 EAST 23rd STREET :: :: NEW YORK CITY

As the Operator Looks at it

As the Operator Looks at It

Just notice how easy this operator takes it. He doesn't have to work over a dangerous juice consuming rheostat at furnace heat anymore since the

Fort Wayne Compensarc

was installed.

He can control the machine perfectly now with one hand--gets a clearer, whiter, steadier light and can adjust it to any of the three intensities without even the faintest flicker.

When we sold this machine we guaranteed it would absolutely

Cut 2-3 from the Monthly Lighting Bill

That sounded almost too good to be true, but they put one in on our 30 day free trial plan.

Did the machine "make good?" Well, the first month it reduced the bill from $22.70 to $9.24 and they operated more hours and got better light than ever before.

We can do just as well for you regardless of what voltage you are using and if you will send for our little free booklet, we'll explain how we do it

Remember you are paying the Lighting Company 66 2-3 per cent more than you need to every day you wait.

Fort Wayne Electric Works
of General Electric Company
1402 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Indiana

FEATURE FILMS

We buy them all—Dante, David Copperfield, Romeo and Juliet, Fall of Troy, Clio and Phyletes, Train Robbers, The White Slave, All Prize Fights, Passion Play and thirty others.

Today is the time, before your competitor beats you to it. Heralds—Colored Announcement Slides, Banners and Lithographs sent in advance. Send for description now.

THE FEATURE FILM COMPANY, Toledo, Ohio

We Buy More Features than any firm in the U. S.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES & LANTERNS

BRIGHTER THAN CALCIUM.

OZO-CARBI LIGHT

NO SATURATOR- OPENS NEW FIELDS FOR MOVING PICTURES.

SPECIAL SLIDES TO ORDER ALSO CARRY SLIDES ON ALL SUBJECTS.

Moore Hubbell & Co.

34 N. Franklin St. Chicago Ill Send for Catalogue.

CINES CO.

OF ROME

ITALIAN-TURKISH WAR

No. 3

The THIRD SERIES, containing a great many exciting incidents, will be released shortly. Send for Synopsis.

445 BROOME ST.

NEW YORK

Telegraph, Cines, New York Telephone, Spring 9232

AN INVITATION TO EXHIBITORS

Exhibitors from coast to coast are cordially invited to visit the exhibition rooms of the Western office of the Moving Picture World, Suite 306, 307, 309, No. 167 West Washington Street, Chicago, Illinois, or the Home Office, 125 East 23rd Street, New York City.

Representatives of the paper will be glad to extend every courtesy, and give information in regard to the various propositions advertised through the columns of the Moving Picture World.

CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

INFORMATION BUREAU, MOVING PICTURE WORLD

125 East 23rd Street, New York City. 167 West Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

Advertisers, send us samples of your product and a liberal supply of catalogues

THEATRE SEATING. Send for Moving Picture Chair Cat. "V4." Upholstered Chair Cat. "V5."
AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY
Chicago New York Boston Philadelphia

The Most Exacting Tests Applied to Our

MIRROROIDE SCREENS, CURTAINS

Have proven conclusively its superiority over all other Screens and Curtains now on the market.

MIRROROIDE

Has been adopted in the largest and best theatres in the world.

A MIRROROIDE SCREEN

Is now in New York's most magnificent theatre,

THE NEW RIVERSIDE

96th and Broadway, New York City

MIRROROIDE

Will not crack, deteriorate or peel. It will forever retain its wonderful flexibility, its silver-white brilliancy.

MIRROROIDE is a canvas-coated cloth, of pure Mercury Foil. A four-ply plating automatically applied.

MIRROROIDE

Is also the Cheapest in Price, Highest in Grade and Quality. It lasts a lifetime.

MIRROROIDE

Is indorsed by over 500 users. Testimonials from all over the world are received daily.

Is most wonderful

PROJECTING SURFACE

No haze, eye-strain or glare. Perfection in every detail. Mirroroide Screens will pack your house to the doors. You can keep your theatre brightly illuminated, and still obtain the most wonderful pictures you ever saw. Get Mirroroide now. Shipments made in three days.

One-third yard A and B Grades, 50 cents. Ordinary samples free. Get our testimonials, circulars, etc.

BENJAMIN-GENTER CO.

Newburgh, N. Y.

Operators!

I guarantee quick and satisfactory repair work on all machines. Only genuine parts supplied. Get my prices on ONE DROP OIL and BULL DOG CEMENT the best articles of their kind on the market

H. A. MACKIE

863 Broadway, Cor. 14th Street New York
'Phone: 2478 Stuyvesant

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.

2549 Archer Avenue, :: CHICAGO, ILL.

OUR NEW METAL COATED SCREENS on Linaura cloth are the best screens ever made for the money. Every Moving Picture house should use them. Be sure to send for price list and sample of this screen.

SPECIAL REFLECTING SCREEN for out-door exhibitions. Any size made to order.

If you wish any lantern slides, remember that we have the largest stock and are one of the oldest manufacturers in the United States.

WILLIAMS, BROWN & EARLE, Inc.

Stereopticons, Kinetoscopes and Moving Picture Supplies of every description.

Box 64 918 CHESTNUT STREET PHILADELPHIA, PA.

ANOTHER ENTERPRISE TRIUMPH

TOGO CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Complete with Rubber Tubing and Keyless Jet

SUPERIOR WORKMANSHIP and HIGH GRADE MATERIAL combined with SAFETY and SIMPLICITY place the TOGO far ahead of any other cheap outfit.

PORTABLE and ready for instant use - $25.00.

Anyone can operate it

MANUFACTURED BY

The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564 W. Randolph St., Chicago

FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS

"We recommend to the chemical men in the Moving Picture trade who are having difficulty in securing good negative films, the following formula for tank development:

Distilled Water.....60 gals.
Sodium Sulphite Anhyd.....½ lb
Sodium Carbonate " ..... 2 lbs.
Agfa Glycin.....½ lb.

Time 20 mins., temperature 70°. Thoroughly wash the film after development before placing in the fixing bath.

The above formula will be found to give very brilliant negatives, and will entirely overcome any danger of fog." Yours very truly,

Berlin Aniline Works, 213-215 Water St., N. Y. City

MONEY GETTERS

Feature your house right. Let us show you how, and let us supply you with the Features

We also carry SUPPLIES OF ALL KINDS

SOMETHING NEW IN AMERICA

LANGFORD and McVEY
20-Round Fight. 2000 Feet

Theatre Film & Supply Co.

64 East 14th St. 'Phone 735 Stuy. New York City

TRANSARC

Price $50.

Dimensions, 8½" x 10½" x 11"
Core Loss, 55 Watts.
Volts at arc, 35.
Amperes, 30-40-50-60.

Construction

The core is of the "SHELL" type construction with highest grade of steel lamitations, exposing the outside surface to the air, while the coils mounted therein are carefully wound and treated in the most approved manner and protected from any possible damage thereto, being mountel inside the core. For illustrated catalogue and full information apply to

THE ST. JOHN CORPORATION
180 Broadway, NEW YORK CITY
Sole Distributors for MOHAWK ELECTRIC CO., Albany, New York.

FOR SALE

Motion Picture Houses in all the large cities of Illinois.

Complete information upon request.

REALTY BROKERS CO.
122 N. Chicago St., - JOLIET, Ill.

American Moving Picture Machine Co.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE

STANDARD

Automatic Moving Picture Machine

101-102 Beekman Street New York

DIRECT Jobber for Powers, Edison and Motiograph Machines

WHOLESALE EVERYTHING IN MOTION PICTURE EQUIPMENT EXCEPT THE FILM RETAIL

MACKIE HAS IT

H. A. MACKIE, Inc., 851-853 Broadway, Corner 14th Street, NEW YORK CITY

PEARL WHITE CONDENSERS 65c. EACH. SOLD ELSEWHERE FOR $1.

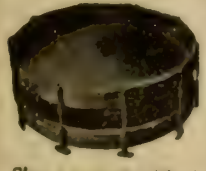
Moving Picture Machines
Stereopticons
Make Big Money

Motion Picture Theatre Supplies

We carry on hand at all times the largest and most complete line of Repairs and Supplies for all Standard Machines, also Tickets, Carbons, Screens, Chairs, etc. Can ship at once. Special Slides made to order. We also handle Motiograph, Edison and Powers Machines. Write to-day for THEATRE CATALOGUE.

CHICAGO PROJECTING CO.
219 S. Dearborn St., Dept. A, Chicago, Ill.

We Offer 300 more to the Trap Drummers



Get your order in at once. At our special offer price—$10.0

This high-grade Orchestra Drum, 10 thumb screw rods, transparent drum heads, solid shells, maple, rosewood, walnut.

Size, 3 x 14—3 x 15—4 x 15—4 x 14. This offer for September and October.

E. P. Zeidler Drum Co., Cleveland, O.

15,000
Managers and Operators Wanted
on our new mailing lists catalogue.
Now ready.
LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS
2940 Hamden Street · CHICAGO

THE TOURNAMENT FILM CO.
TOLEDO, OHIO.
Owners of the following feature films:
1911 Cheyenne Cowboy and Indian Frontier Celebration.
Fall Round-Up on the Y-6 Ranch.
State Rights for These Films for Sale.
Bookings Can Be Made by Writing Us.

Italian-Turkish War Film
Brand New—Never Used, $75.
SEND $5.00
Will ship subject to examination.
I. PERLMAN
61 West 14th St. New York City

BIGGER and : : BETTER
SEND YOUR SUBSCRIPTION
TO-DAY FOR
The Moving Picture Paper That Is Worth While

Domestic	-	$3.00 Per Annum
Canada	- -	3.50 " "
Foreign	- -	4.00 " "

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Box 226 Madison Sq. P. O. N. Y. City

G. W. Bradenburgh
233 North Eighth St.
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Italy-Turkey War
980 ft., price 8 cts. per ft.
One-sheet four color posters

The Only Film Showing Actual War

Scene 1—His Royal Highness King Victor Emanuel of Italy.

Scene 2—His Royal Highness Duke Abruzzi, Royal Navy Italy.

Scene 3—Admiral Augosto Aubry, Royal Navy Italy.

Scene 4—General Caneva, Commanding Italian Army of Occupation of Tripoli.

Scene 5—Governor-General Tripoli—Pasha Bey.

Scene 6—Turkish Gunners in Forts.

Scene 7—Italian Cruiser Shelling Coast, Showing Exploding Shells, etc.

Scene 8—Italian Squadron Shelling Turkish Camps at Derna.

Scene 9—Sinking of Turkish Cruiser Aka-Bey by Italian Cruiser Pervesa.

Scene 10—After the Ultimatum; Bombardment of Tripoli; Destruction of Benghazi, Showing Custom House Being Destroyed by the Ten-Inch Shells of R.N. Roma.

Photography Perfect
WILL ALLOW EXAMINATION
Cash with Order

Independent Film Service
231 North 8th Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

EXHIBITORS:

We have contracted for the EXCLUSIVE AMERICAN RIGHTS for a series of film productions conceded to be the GREATEST NOVELTIES EVER ATTEMPTED IN MOTION PHOTOGRAPHY. BAR NONE. Correspondence solicited from first-class houses only, as the prices of these features will be prohibitive for the smaller exhibitor.

If you are in the Market for
SECOND HAND FILMS
Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the United States
International Film Traders
Incorporated
5 West 14th St., New York City

FOR RENT
Cine's Italian War Pictures and Slides
EDWARD J. MORGENWECK
100 Third Avenue New York
Feature Films. Let us [illegible]

FOR SALE.

3	Continuous Printing Machines (including motor	$ 50.00	each
7	W. B. Hausman Printing Machines	100.00	"
8	Prevost Printing Machines—Head only	50.00	"
	or with Light Attachment	75.00	"
1	Itala Printing Machine	50.00
2	Prevost Perforating Machines (large)	150.00	each
1	Prevost Perforating Machine (small)	100.00
2	Itala Perforating Machines	250.00	each
9	Carlton Perforating Machines	25.00	"
6	Schneider Perforating Machines..	225.00	"
8	Motors, ⅓ H. P.	5.00	"
2	Gaumont Cameras (Beater type, including lens and 8 magazines	250.00	"
6	Cutler-Hammer Dimmers for Printing Machines	1.00	"
1	Pathe Projecting Machine complete	50.00
1	Gaumont Projecting Mechanism with magazines	35.00

Everything guaranteed in good working condition.
CARLTON MOTION PICTURE LABORATORIES
540 West 21st Street, New York City

20,000 roll tickets, $1.40; 5-8 camel carbons, $1.35; stereopticon objectives, 50c to $3.00; stereopticons, $15.00; rheostats, $3.00 to $5.00; arc lamps, $ [illegible] and $5.25 Condensers, 50c, calcium jets, $2.50; acetylene jets, $2.50; gas generators, $3.50; moving picture objectives, $2.75; jackets, $2.75. List of moving picture repair parts at fair prices. Sprocket wheel, 85c 8 ms. 1c a foot. Catalogue on request. L. METZ, 300 E. 23d St., N.Y.

HEADQUARTERS FOR ASBESTOS
Curtains and Picture Booths
SEND FOR BOOKLET
C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
39 Pearl St., BOSTON

HERE AT LAST
A place to buy parts for M. P. machines for less
One of our SPECIALS
Intermittent SPROCKETS $1.50 FOR POWERS OR EDISON Machines
Write for Price List
PITTSBURG M.P. SUPPLY CO., Pittsburg, Pa.

25c. in Stamps

Brings to you Hallberg's Motion Picture Catalogue and Reference Book.

Nothing like it ever published before. Will prove a constant guide and money maker to every proprietor, manager and operator.

Send 25cts. today.

Special Jobber of { Edison / Powers / Motiograph

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

The "Hallberg Economizer"

Used in connection with any of the above moving picture machines, produces the finest results on your screen that money can buy.

I Equip Theaters Completely

And carry in stock only the highest grade goods required for your theater.

Free catalogues, circulars and pamphlets furnished of individual items you require.

J. H. HALLBERG
36 E. 23rd St., New York

SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made saleable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism and revision for a fee of only $2.

REVISION—Scenarios having a reasonable chance of a sale will be edited and revised and a typewritten copy supplied for one dollar per finished page. Send the manuscript and a reading fee of one dollar. If the scenario will not warrant further expense, it will be returned to you; if it does, you will be advised as to full cost. Please note that this covers no criticism.

Exhibitors!

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Epes Winthrop Sargent

Box 70, Madison Square Station

New York City

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill.
The A. H. Andrews Co.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office, 1165 Broadway. Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 678 Mission St.

WE CAN HURRY

YOUR ORDER OUT.
STAFFORD Chairs excell all others.

HEAVY FIVE PLY
seats and backs.

The last-forever kind, that you are using long after you have forgotten the price.

STEEL CHAIRS TOO

We carry several kinds of good chairs in stock, all guaranteed.

ASK FOR CATALOG 305

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILL.

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME
THEATRE CHAIRS

ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately

Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-door use

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Get Our Prices Before You Buy

The Wisconsin Lumber and Veneer Co.

Port Washington, Wisconsin, U.S.A.

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 W. 5th Street
CINCINNATI OHIO

OH! MR. EXHIBITOR!!

THINK OF THE MOTHERLESS, THE FATHERLESS, AND THE

Childless homes as the result of theater panics. Protect the lives of your patrons by installing our "ANTI-PANIC" THEATER CHAIR. 26 Dead at Cannonsburg, 176 at Boyertown, 575 at Iriquois Theater, Chicago. Make these horrors impossible.
Our chair is a friend to the Public.
It advertises your theater and makes your business grow.
It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.

IT IS THE ONLY SANITARY CHAIR

It will make your theater all aisles.
It is the world's greatest theater chair, perfected to the highest degree.

Write today for Circular A. THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing

Why don't you send it to us?

We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

We buy second hand machines.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

G. MÉLIÈS

FATHER AND SWEETHEART SWEAR "NEVER AGAIN"

THE RANCHMAN'S DEBT OF HONOR

FRANK HAWLEY, blackguard and professional gambler, entices "Jim the Ranchman" into a game of poker, where, by cheating, he gets all Jim's money and his pledge for a debt. The gambler then falls in love with Jim's daughter, who, however, spurns his affections for those of a cowboy. Hawley plots to steal Jim's stock of horses, preventing his paying the "debt of honor," and thus forcing him to give Mary in marriage. But unfortunately his wallet drops in the stable, where Mary finds it and pays the debt of her father's indiscretion with the blackguard's own money.

APPROX. 1000 FT. 12-28-11

G. MELIES, 204 EAST 38th ST., NEW YORK CITY

Contentment in more ways than one

Results from the purchase of a

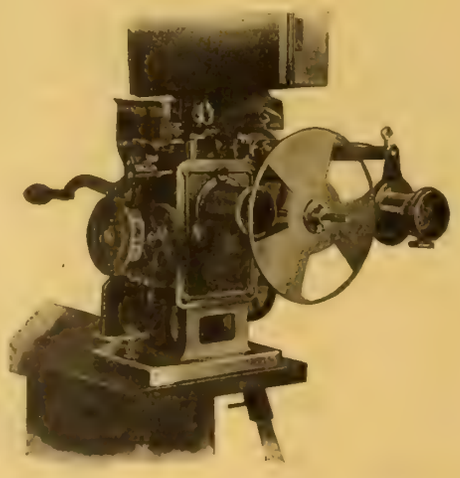
POWER'S

CAMERAGRAPH No. 6

Because you not only know that you have the very best the market affords—that the other fellow can't beat you—but you are also making good with your patrons, giving them full value and holding their patronage.

POWER'S No. 6 does this all the time. It is the product of fourteen years' experience in the manufacture of moving picture machines, and it is the undisputed leader among moving picture machines today.

Solid in construction, perfect in adjustment, noiseless in operation, projecting steady and flickerless pictures, it stands today for all that is best in moving picture machine construction.



You can have no better advertisement for your theatre than

"We Use Power's No. 6 Cameragraph"

Our Catalogue G will tell you all about it.

NICHOLAS POWER CO.

115-117 NASSAU ST. N. Y. CITY

For fourteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines

CAREY PRESS, N. Y.

Vol. 10. No. 13 December 30, 1911 Price. 10c.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "Love Will Find a Way" (Eclipse Subject.—Kleine).

125 East 23rd Street New York Chicago 169 W. Washington St.

A New Year's Resolution:—The Thanhouser TWO-a-Week EVERY Week!

THE THANHOUSER

"GREATEST JANUARY"

CUT THIS OUT AND KEEP IT ON YOUR DESK.

MEMO:--Unless I want to miss them, I must ask my ex-change NOW for "DR. JEYKLL AND MR. HYDE," Robert Louis Stevenson's Most Powerful Story (Tues., Jan. 16)

"A NIAGARA HONEYMOON," First of the Niagara Falls Scenic Gems (Fri., Jan. 19)

"EAST LYNNE" (2 reels). Greatest Filmization of the World's Greatest Drama (Fri., Jan. 26)

"AS IT WAS IN THE BEGINNING". Another Wonderful Make-You-Think Picture (Tues., Jan. 30)

RELEASED TUESDAY, JAN. 2

With New York's Great Columbus Day Parade

A COLUMBUS DAY CONSPIRACY

features a stunning girl reporter who sets out on an interview and finds a—conspiracy. The conspirator she trails only to lose him in the end. And it is very essential to the success of her anti-conspiracy plans that she know where the lost conspirator is. The measures she adopts to regain trace of the quarry, who she knows is fast nearing his quarry with a deadly explosive, are thrilling and picturesque and are natural to her quick and clever mind. The reel, as may be expected, is all-action, and the "live ones" will mark it NOW for early booking.

RELEASED FRIDAY, JAN. 5

Another "Thanhouser Psychological"

THE PASSING

is one of those easy-to-understand issues that hold deep interest for the poorer among your patrons,but especially draw the better classes—the people who think—to the picture show. No work of a psychological order will cause more thought on the part of intelligent people than this simple-story picture. As to the natural query the story suggests: Can such things be?—we leave that to you. There will be different opinions on this; let your own be the one that appeals most to your reason.

OUR XMAS PRESENT TO YOU is a continuance of the releasing of four one-a-month features ALL in ONE month, making the first month of the New Year our GREATEST

JANUARY

16 (Tues.) DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE
19 (Fri.) A NIAGARA HONEYMOON
26 (Fri.) EAST LYNNE 2 Reels
30 (Tues.) AS IT WAS IN THE BEGINNING

THANHOUSER COMPANY New Rochelle, N. Y.

Sales Company Agents for U. S. and Canada

Are you getting the Tuesday AND the Friday Thanhouser?

FOUR-A-WEEK ESSANAY

If You Want Excitement, Sensation, "Heart Interest"
Book Our Two Big Western Releases of This Week.

RELEASED TUESDAY, DEC. 26th

A Story of the West

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

A Western dramatic photoplay, powerful in plot, excellently played. It is a big thriller with the right kind of finish.

RELEASED THURSDAY, DEC. 28th

For Memory's Sake

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

A delightful dramatic story, forcefully interpreted.

RELEASED FRIDAY, DEC. 29th

A Bird in the Hand

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

Yes, "A Bird in the Hand" is worth two in the bush. Don't neglect to book this great big comedy scream before the release date. It's a real comedy riot.

HERE'S BRONCHO BILLY AGAIN!
RELEASED SATURDAY, DEC. 30th

Broncho Billy's Adventure

(Length, approx. 1,000 feet.)

The ever-popular Broncho Billy, played by that King of Motion Picture players, G. M. Anderson, meets with an adventure that you can spell with a capital "A." This picture is a sensation. Book it early.

NOTICE: We have a few more half-tone cuts of Mr. Anderson (Broncho Billy) which we will be glad to loan to those Exhibitors who can use them in their local papers. We are sending with this cut a live article about Mr. Anderson which any editor will be glad to print.

ASK FOR ALL ESSANAY POSTERS GET ON OUR MAILING LIST

Essanay Film Mfg. Company

521 First National Bank Building, Chicago, Ill.

OFFICES IN

LONDON : : BERLIN : : BARCELONA

3 NESTORS A WEEK Get Them!

NESTOR

Always a Feature

"The Worth-While Film"

Oldest and Best

3 NESTORS A WEEK Get Them!

Scene from "THE BEST MAN WINS"

Scene from "A WESTERN GIRL'S LOVE"

A MERRY XMAS AND A MERRY FILM

Monday, December 25th, 1911

"The Best Man Wins"

A tender love romance; Dan Cupid's victory; a jolly barn dance; an exciting ploughing bee, and the delightful charm of life on the farm are exquisitely shown in "The Best Man Wins." "You'll win if you get it!

Coming Monday, Jan. 1, 1912

"AN UNLUCKY PRESENT"

[Wednesday, Dec. 27, 1911]

"A Western Girl's Love"

Stirring story of the Eternal Triangle, staged amid entrancing Western surroundings, acted by select players, vividly told and capitally photographed. "A Western Girl's Love" thrills and delights. Get it.!

Coming! Wednesday, Jan. 3

"The Tenderfoot's Sacrifice"

Saturday, December 30, 1911

"MUTT & JEFF"

Break Into Society and Their Afternoon Off

A Reel of Joy in Two Parts

Part I.—Initial appearance of the New Mutt and Jeff. They shine in society and they'll shine in popularity.

Part II.—Winsome and cute baby comedy in a ravishing scenic crib. Get it!

Coming! Saturday, Jan. 6

"Desperate Desmond Fails"

DAVID HORSLEY, Bayonne N. J.

Sales Co., Sole Distributors

ÉCLAIR

ECLAIR FILMS AMERICA

ECLAIR IS GRATEFUL TO 5,6'o FRIENDS, ALL Intelligent, Progressive Business Men who take Moving Pictures Seriously and are willing to Work With us to Improve Conditions. Nearly 1,000 want the THIRD ECLAIR to be issued on Saturday. Some mention other days,but the Vast Majority Select SUNDAY FOR THE NEXT ECLAIR —And So it Must be. ECLAIR Appreciates the Tremendous Interest shown and the Many Valuable Suggestions offered. Much Good Will Result From This Co-operation.

THE FIRST SUNDAY RELEASE WILL BE ANNOUNCED NEXT WEEK

$10,000.00 FOR ADVERTISING

TELL US WHEN YOU WILL SHOW THESE FEATURES AND WE WILL SEND PREPAID VALUABLE PHOTOS And Lobby Displays Especially Made TO SWELL YOUR RECEIPTS.

YOU GET THESE AT OUR EXPENSE BOOK THEM NOW YOU NEED THE MONEY

BOOK THESE FILMS

TUE. JAN. 2	Sardou's Great Comedy	DIVORCONS
TUE. JAN. 9	Impressive Drama	A DOCTOR'S DUTY
TUE. JAN. 16	A Wall Street Laugh	MAMIE BOLTON
TUE. JAN. 23	Oceans of Sentiment	Love Finds a Way

PARIS ECLAIRS

OLD PAPERS—OLD SOUVENERS An Usual Drama	THU. JAN. 4
THE INVENTOR Story of Man's Inhumanity	THU. JAN. 11

Coming Soon—Watch for Them

"ALCOHOL" (3 Reels)
The Greatest Drama in all Time

Through the Bowels of the Earth
Spectacular Drama in 2 Reels

IMPORTANT!

WHETHER YOU USE FIRST RUN OR OLDER Service, This Great Offer Applies the Same. ARRANGE BOOKINGS NOW Then Notify us What Date and Name of Subject WE DO THE REST.

YOU WILL BE SURPRISED AND PLEASED WITH THE RESULTS

BE THE FIRST TO TRY THIS NOVEL PLAN IN YOUR OWN CITY

WE PHOTOGRAPH IN MAMMOTH MULTI-PRISM DAYLIGHT STUDIOS

Which afford Opportunity For Perfect Results, (not possible under artificial light). Ample space for large and complicated settings and wide scope for NOVEL EFFECTS, rarely found in the average picture. COMPARE ECLAIR SETTINGS WITH OTHERS AND NOTE THE DIFFERENCE.

It Will Pay You to Get On Our Mail List Now, Whether You Use Eclair Films or Not.

TUESDAY
THURSDAY
SUNDAY

ECLAIR FILM CO.

AMERICAN STUDIOS AND WORKS FORT LEE, N. J.

PARIS, LONDON, BERLIN, VIENNA, MOSCOW, MILAN, BRUSSELS, BARCELONA,—OTHERS

DON'T LOOK FURTHER ! !

HERE IS SURE MONEY!!

"REMEMBER THE MAINE"

and wire in your best State Right's bid for

"THE MYSTERY OF THE MAINE"

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MAINE IN MOTION PICTURES.

Views Taken In Havana Harbor Shown at Herald Square Theatre.

The first public showing of motion pictures taken in Havana harbor during the work of uncovering the wreck of the battleship Maine took place at the Herald Square Theatre yesterday afternoon. Some of the films were exhibited before the Maine Monument Committee several weeks ago, but the present reels contain later views.

The series began with the building of the caissons, showed the gradual lowering of the water inside the coffer dam, and the clearing of the parts of the wreck as they were exposed. The pictures showed clearly the force of the explosion that destroyed the ship and the present condition of the vessel.

Preceding the wreck pictures there was a series of views of the recent fleet mobilization in the Hudson River and another series showing Admiral Togo on

Hospital th patient ther
Feb. 18—F
District Att convinced hi
a crime migl woman at S of Dorothy being Miss A
Feb. 19—G
Dora Falk
from a rescu
Feb. 21—Ge
that he bolte
Feb. 23—M
Richmond, V
Whitman d
Francis R. A
Feb. 23—Gi
not Miss Art
Feb. 24—S
sioner Willia believed Miss Feb. 25—" inserted in n
to George S nothing to Arnold
Feb. 26—M
March 18—
Miss Arnold's
March 19—
ma suspected

ONLY FILM IN EXISTENCE APPEALING

TO ALL CLASSES

FROM

NEWSBOY

TO MILLIONAIRE

THINK IT OVER

THE MYSTERY OF THE MAINE
THE MOST AWE-INSPIRING SPECTACLE OF HISTORY
PRODUCED IN MOTION PICTURES
UNITED STATES GOVMT
"REMEMBER THE MAINE"

Fac-simile of our 3 and 8-Sheet Lithograph

Two Reels of Awe Inspiring and Spectacular Moving Pictures, with a Stirring Lecture. Protected by U. S. Copyright

Different Styles 1, 3 and 8-Sheet Lithographs Furnished at 7c a Sheet, and Lobby Displays

RAISING-THE-MAINE FILM COMPANY

145 West 45th Street (Suite 804) New York City

P. S.—We have just received a request for a private exhibition to the Department of the Navy, at Washington, D. C.

POSTPONED POSTPONED POSTPONED

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

FROM SUNDAY, DECEMBER 24th, TO SUNDAY, DECEMBER 31st

A Big Sacred Sunday feature that will interest 365 days in the year—A story of love, sorrow and happiness. The first on the three-a-week horizon.

GET IT!

Write For Lobby Displays

Feature It!

Any Sunday Audience will like it.

Released
Wednesday, Jan. 3rd

His Musical Soul

A fat man develops a love for a magical trombone because his rival is an accomplished violinist. The fat man's soul is not very musical, but he is persistent and tries hard to be a musician, but his neighbors interfere.

Released
Sunday, Dec. 31st

Christmas Presents

The story deals with an irascible old miser, a dull-headed policeman, a good-natured sergeant and a benevolent woman of wealth. These characters directly influence the life of a widow and her little wide eyed daughter.

Released
Friday, Jan. 5th, 1912

Our Poor Relations

In his opulence, a son forgets his poor mother in the country. In fact, he tells his wife and wealthy friends that he is an orphan. His suffering mother is brought to his side by fate, and the snobbish son is made to see how wrong has been his way of living and thinking.

Solax

READ The Big News. BILLY QUIRK is with us. WATCH FOR OUR COMEDIES.

Solax Company, Congress Avenue FLUSHING, N.Y.

SALES COMPANY Agents in U. S. A. and Canada

GREAT NORTHERN

Release for Saturday, December 23rd

THE TWINS

A corking good comedy film with a laugh all the way through. On the same reel—

From Ostersund To Storlien, Sweden

A superb travel subject. A magnificent as well as realistic picture which is bound to delight everybody.

Release for Saturday, December 30th

A REALISTIC MAKE-UP

A laughable comedy in which, by the kindly intervention of a real burglar, an actor is enabled to play his part to perfection. Length, 752 feet.
On the same reel—

SEA AND LANDSCAPES, DENMARK

A charming selection of scenic views. Length, 246 feet.

All First-Class Independent Exchanges Handle Our Product. Sold Only Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 E. 14th St., N. Y.
(NORDISK FILM CO. OF COPENHAGEN.)

We Offer

For New Year's Day, January 1st, 1912

"The Blood of the Poor"

It is a picture that will take hold upon the hearts of the people and make a lasting impression long after the day seen on the screen.

It is a Great Sermon.

All who read the notice of its release should not simply make a desk memo. of it, but GO SEE IT AND GET IT.

THE CHAMPION FILM CO.

Mark M. Dintenfass, Mgr.

145 West 45th St New York

COMING FEATURES

Robert G. Fowler

The Famous Aviator

in amazing and fascinating flights over cities, hill and dale. Wonderful pictures taken from the aeroplane of the Earth below.

"Sherlocko & Watso's Absorbing Adventures"

will soon be pictorially unfolded, Mr. Exhibitor, showing startling exposures of baffling mysteries.

"The Kid of Roaring Camp"

Released January 3rd

will interest you immensely. She was a little girl—an orphan. Robert Page found her and took her under his wing. Education and refinement developed her charms, and then—Dan Cupid appeared. Better see the picture.

"An Aviator's Success"

Released January 8th is an aeroplane story. Miss Blanche Scott, the woman aviator, leads.

The DELHI DURBAR First

Gaumont Independent

Release

On or About January 15th, 1912

A Magnificent Subject
A Wonderful Subject
A Feature Subject

The Greatest Film of the Last Ten Years

KING GEORGE V Crowned Emperor of India, Showing 200 Princes of India and Their Suites, With 1,000 ELEPHANTS

1,000 ELEPHANTS

In Their Trappings of Gold and Precious Stones

After the Elephants we will release

40 ROARING LIONS

embodied in one of the most sensational dramatic features of the day, entitled

THE CHRISTIAN MARTYRS

A story of the suffering and final triumph of the Christians in Pagan Rome.
Hand-colored throughout.

Remember These are our first regular releases' and although we could obtain more money by selling exclusive state rights, yet we prefer to let the regular exchange obtain these features in the same way as an ordinary reel.

Gaumont Co., Flushing, N. Y.

AGENTS

A Complimentary Letters By The Hundreds Reached Us

After the release of "Santa Catalina", the sensational AMERICAN containing the wonderful pictures of the famous Pacific Submarine Gardens.

An "Eye Opener" to many, this film conclusively proved our contention that the American public is "California Hungry," anxious to see and know more about the Sunset State.

We SPECIALIZE in Western films. Our company couldn't be improved upon—charming pantomimists, carefully drilled for a CERTAIN KIND OF WORK. The studio, in beautiful, enchanted El Cajon Valley, Southern California, is the Dream Home of the Motion-Picture manufacturer.

Watch Future AMERICANS. They'll cover all that's Best in California--her giant irrigation projects, fruit orchards, and her unrivaled playgrounds.

and remember—

THE STORY
PHOTOGRAPHIC TECHNIQUE
PANTOMIME

are THREE mighty essentials closely watched in all AMERICAN pictures.

"Mid-Winter Trip To Los Angeles"

(Release Date, Jan. 1. Approx. Length 1000 feet.)

Ever go to Los Angeles in Mid-Winter? Here's your chance to see the Nation's Playground. Beautiful Pasadena, too, with tantalizing glimpses of romance-encrusted Spanish Missions, the pigeon farm, the alligator farm, some world-famous gardens, a trip up Mt. Lowe, the Gate Above the Clouds, and the longest curving trestle in the world, with glorious panorama of surrounding country. Then there's the ostrich farm, Marengo Avenue, in Pasadena, and a perfect Wonderland of charming views found only in Gorgeous California. If you've never seen California you'll enjoy it. If you have, you'll enjoy it all over again.

"The Claim Agent's Mis-Adventure"

(Release Date, Jan. 4. Approx. Length 1000 feet.)

After years of patient work, Jim struck it rich. He filed his claim but no witnesses were present. Then he told the good news to his sweetheart, just when that claim agent was about to propose. So the agent stole the claim. Jack was powerless; but his sweetheart didn't feel that way. A black mask, a "45" and a threatening voice do wonders, sometimes. She got back that claim. How—well, you should see.

ON THE SAME REEL. Some extraordinary pictures of broncho-busting for "Flying A" pictures. See how it is done.

American Film Mfg. Co.

BANK FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO

THE REASON WHY

Exhibitors Should Book

The Greatest Moving Picture Ever Made

20 YEARS IN SING SING

(THREE REELS)

BECAUSE:-

In every house in which it has been shown it has pleased the people immensely and also proven a phenomenal money-getter.

Watch this space next week for what exhibitors have to say concerning the attraction.

Mr. Exhibitor:

Write to us for the name of the owner of your state.

Mr. State Right Man:

We have a few states still unsold. Better get in on the ground floor. Wire in today for prices.

America's Feature Film Co.

403 Schiller Bldg.

CHICAGO.

"THE COMET"

Comet

Released Monday, January 1st, 1912

Simple Lives

(1000 Feet)

A Happy New Year picture with a Happy New Year ending of the love affairs of a beautiful country girl who is induced to visit the great Metropolis and pose as an artist's model and her rustic suitor. Nothing has been left undone to make this reel one of the catchiest of bucolic stones.

Released Friday, January 5th, 1912

Temperaments

(1000 Feet)

A musical love story.—Everybody loves music and everybody who sees this picture will love poor Hans, the gifted but down-on-his-luck violinist. Entirely unlike anything you have ever exhibited and a sure-to-please subject that will make itself felt at the box office window.

Through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

Comet Film Co., 344-346 East 32nd St. NEW YORK CITY

LUX FILMS

The Crown of Perfection

Released Friday, Dec. 29, 1911

Caught by Cinematography

DRAMA—Length 636 ft

Making Pianos

INDUSTRIAL—Length 344 ft.

An interesting Industrial describing the complicated processes involved in the manufacture of pianos.

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th St. New York City

Telephone 3427 Stuyvesant

Sold Only Through

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING and SALES COMPANY

ONLY EASTMAN RAW STOCK USED

Invitation is the Sincerest Form of Flattery!

We invite you to compare Rex Quality to the next best. And we will flatter your judgment enough to prophesy your conclusion!

Mr. You, if you're on the hunt for real brilliant comedy, here's a pointer! On Thursday, December 28th, we are releasing A Christmas Comedy

"AN UNWELCOME SANTA CLAUS"

A picture just about equivalent to tickling you in the fourth rib

All the merriness and mirth, all the joy and jubilation of the season, are crowded into the thousand feet, and there's room left for a ha! ha! after the final flash!

It's good cheer will bring cheers!

It's a laugh-lassoer!

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO.

573 Eleventh Avenue

New York City

Sales Co. says Rex is never "An Unwelcome Santa Claus"

EVERYONE WANTS TO SEE IT

PATHÉ'S
WEEKLY

OTHERS
SHOW IT—
WHY NOT YOU?

VITAGRAPH

A THIEF IN THE NIGHT.

MONDAY DECEMBER 25.

SOME GOOD IN ALL

Maurice Costello

Comes in the nick of time for Christmas, bringing cheer to the despondent, life and joy to the hopeless. A little child is the guiding star that leads the thief to light and brings a savior to her father.

THE YOUNGER BROTHER

TUESDAY DECEMBER 26.

James Morrison

On the battlefield of the Arabian Border an older brother risks and saves the life of the younger by a deed of great daring, walking into the jaws of death, bringing his brother safely back to the old folks at home.

TESTING HIS COURAGE.

WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 27.

Lillian Walker

Tales of a western terror do not phase an Eastern chap. To test his courage a girl impersonates the terror, who meets her in disguise and she is saved from his embrace by the Easterner, who gets the drop on him and puts him in the "cooler."

A DOUBLY DESIRED ORPHAN.

FRIDAY DECEMBER 29.

Adele DeGarde

A widow without any children, a widower without a family; both go to an Orphan Asylum. Both want the same little girl without any parents. Both get her by marrying each other. The widow now has a husband, the widower has a wife and the little girl has two parents. Everybody happy.

IN THE CLUTCHES OF A VAPOR BATH.

SATURDAY DECEMBER 30.

Bunny

Whew! This is a hot one! Laugh and grow fat watching "Fatty" (Bunny) trying to get thin in a new fangled weight reducer. It's a "Laugh Producer," that's all.

FIVE A WEEK

Next Week	Next Week
"A ROMANCE OF WALL STREET"—Gilt-edged Investment	MONDAY, JANUARY 1ST
"A RED CROSS MARTYR"—An Italian girl's sacrifice in humanity's name	TUESDAY, JANUARY 2ND
"THE HEART OF THE KING'S JESTER"—A poetic classic	WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 3RD
"DESTINY IS CHANGELESS"—Romance of the Northwestern forests	FRIDAY, JANUARY 5TH
"THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE"—Pretty as a picture	SATURDAY, JANUARY 6TH

The Vitagraph Company of America

EAST 15th AND CHESTNUT STS., BROOKLYN, N. Y.

NEW YORK, 116 Nassau St.
CHICAGO, 109 Randolph St.
PARIS, 15 Rue Sainte-Cecile
LONDON, 25 Cecil Court

LUBIN FILMS

RELEASED WED., Dec. 27th, 1911

The American Girl

Length about 1,000 ft.

Dorothy Ames, a harum-scarum, up-to-date American girl, offended by the opinion of American girls expressed by an English Lord who visits her home, determines to be revenged by fascinating him, intending to spurn him in the end. She dresses in Quaker costume, and with her sweet, demure way she completely wins the heart of the Englishman, arranging it so that his declaration is heard by several friends, she laughing at him, which fact he discovers and vows to pay her back in her own coin. Cupid takes a hand in the game and arranges it all to his own satisfaction.

RELEASED THURS., Dec. 28, 1911. Length about 1,000 feet

The Soldier's Return

Irene Jerome, the daughter of a ranchman, is in love with Tom King, a handsome young cowboy. Her father, however, wishes her to marry John Reynolds, a well-to-do farmer. The war with Spain breaks out and Tom enlists. Irene who remains faithful to her sweetheart reads of his death in battle. Her father finally persuades her to marry Reynolds in order to assist her family who are in desperate financial straits. Meantime Tom who had only been wounded returns in time and Reynolds nobly slips aside in Tom's favor and the lovers are united.

Scene from "The Soldier's Return"

RELEASED SAT. Dec. 30th, 1911. Length about 1,000 fee

Father and the Girls

How a man was cured of his infatuation for a dashing widow through the conspiracy of his four pretty daughters who, by pretending to imitate the widow's undignified example, prevents having their dead mother's place usurped by one wholly unfit for that sacred mission.

Scene from "Father and the Girls"

RELEASED MONDAY, JAN. 1st, 1912. Split Reel

The Oyster Industry

An educational film showing the interesting process of oyster dredging: setting the oyster beds, dredging, loading on boats, unloading at wharf, shucking and canning.

Object Matrimony

Tom and Nancy, a middle-aged couple, advertise for mates. The advertisement is answered by a young couple, Jack and Bess. There is a comical mix-up when Jack runs away from Nancy and Bess runs from Tom. Jack and Bess finally meet and everything ends happily.

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY,

MODEL NEW STUDIOS, 20th and Indiana Avenue Philadelphia, Pa.

CHICAGO: 208 N. FIFTH AVE. B. NICHOLS, 86 WARDOUR ST., LONDON, W., ENGLAND BERLIN: 35 FRIEDRICH STR.

SELIG'S SUBLIME MASTERPIECE—IN THREE REELS

Jan. 1st

CINDERELLA

Jan. 1st

SELIG'S SUBLIME MASTERPIECE

"Cinderella"

IN THREE REELS, with PICTUREDOM'S GREATEST STAR

MISS MABEL TALIAFERRO

THE DAINTY, DIMINUTIVE INTERNATIONAL IDOL

The Production Beautiful, pronounced by press and critics everywhere as The Crowning Triumph of Moving Picture History. Rich, costly, and gorgeous, this production is one of indescribable pictorial magnificence. There are ninety-nine scenes of over 3,000 ft of elaborate settings, superb costumes, perfect photography, wonderful effects, and the action is incomparable in its dramatic elegance. The story is beyond doubt the sweetest ever told---that of Cinderella and her silver slipper---the story that is ever dear to the hearts of old and young alike.

Don't Fail to See This Wonderful Picture Bring the Children

NOTE:—Send for Description, Prices, etc., on 1, 3 and 8 Sheet Posters, Lobby Photos, Cuts, Electro-Ads, Lecture, etc., etc. Cut of Ad above—three column—$1.50

JAN. 2—The Cowboy's Adopted Child A tense drama of real Western life. About 850 ft. On the same reel with He, She and It. Screamingly funny comedy in pantomime. About 150 ft.

JAN. 4—The Mate Of The Alden Besse

The Dramatic Tale of two Marooned Castaways. About 1000 ft.

JAN. 5 The Other Fellow

A side-splitting comedy of mistaken identity. About 500 ft. On the same reel with Hutchinson, Kans., Semi-Centennial Celebration. Educational. About 500 ft.

THE SELIG POLYSCOPE Co

Gen. Offices: 20 East Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

SEND US YOUR NAME FOR OUR MAILING LIST. BULLETINS FREE

TRADE MARK

Thomas A Edison

Motion pictures offer the biggest money-making opportunity on the smallest capital of any business to-day.

But you can knock that opportunity sky high at the start by the purchase of a cheap machine. Get everything running in your favor at the start, and you'll be in the money at the finish. And the principal thing to have working in your favor is a good motion picture machine that operates smoothly, projects clear, steady pictures and keeps the same crowd coming back night after night. Get

THE

Edison Kinetoscope

TRADE MARK

Thomas A Edison

the best motion picture machine made, and you've solved nine-tenths of your problem right at the start. A cheap machine can put your show out of business before you fairly get started. The Edison Kinetoscope will make your show a success in just as short order.

The Edison is the simplest machine to operate, the most economical to maintain and by far the most durable. Write to-day for full particulars and copy of the Edison Kinetogram.

Scenes from "ELEANORE CUYLER."

EDISON FILMS

TUESDAY, JANUARY 2nd

"ELEANORE CUYLER"

BY RICHARD HARDING DAVIS

CAST.

Eleanore.....Miriam Nesbitt
Mr. Wainwright.....Marc McDermott

Depicting how a slumming party brought together a struggling author and a rich girl, whose love for freedom and devotion to charity had closed her heart to the appeal of love, but finally yielding, she finds a greater freedom in the ties that bind.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 3rd

"THE TWO FLATS"

CAST.

The Irish Widow.....Alice Washburn
Her Son.....Edward Boulden
The Italian Widower.....Charles M. Seay
His Daughter.....Jeanie McPhearson

An Irish woman in the flat above, an Italian in the flat below. They are bitter enemies until the arrival of her son and his daughter and then Cupid takes a hand. A brisk comedy of East Side types.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 5th

TWO SUBJECTS ON ONE REEL

"FREEZING AUNTIE"

CAST.

Mr. Henpeck.....William West
Mrs. Henpeck.....Alice Washburn
Their Daughter.....Marion Brooks
Their Nephew.....Harold M. Shaw
Henpeck's Secretary.....Edward Boulden
The Maid.....Bliss Milford

Tyrant auntie, the supposed victim of a cold-storage injection, assumes the appearance of a ghost and makes the conspirators the victims of their plot.

"CODFISH INDUSTRY, NEWFOUNDLAND"

The method of catching, preparing and shipping the fish is shown in an interesting way, with picturesque backgrounds.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 6th

"PLEASE REMIT"

CAST.

Editor of the Coyotteville Clarion.....William Wadsworth
Orphan Annie.....Elsie McLeod
The Postmistress.....Elizabeth Miller
The Cowboy.....Marc McDermott
The Blacksmith.....Bigelow Cooper
The Indian.....Wadsworth Harris

A Western comedy, showing how the misconstrued meaning of a shotgun in the hands of a bankrupt editor brought about payments from his evasive debtors and a romance with Orphan Annie.

THOMAS A. EDISON, Inc., 72 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

KALEM

"A Southern Boy of '61"

A Sterling War Drama

Released Monday, January 8th

When we advertise a war story you may always look for something meritorious. This one is fully up to standard.

"Mrs. Sims Serves on the Jury"

This farce comedy will prove laugh-provoking for sure. It is original and awfully funny. On the same reel

"Flowers for the 400" An interesting, educational subject.

Released Wednesday, January 10th

"THE O'NEILL"

A thrilling story of an Irish patriot, made in Ireland in authentic locations. This is one of the best and most exciting of the Kalem Irish productions.

Released Friday, January 12th

SPECIAL PAPER. The A. B. C. Company will issue an elaborate three sheet litho in four colors for this feature subject in addition to the regular one sheet, four color litho.

KALEM COMPANY

INCORPORATED

NEW YORK, 235-239 W. 23rd St.
86 Wardour St., LONDON, W.
BERLIN, 35 Friedrich Str.
PARIS, 13 Rue du Faubourg Montmartre

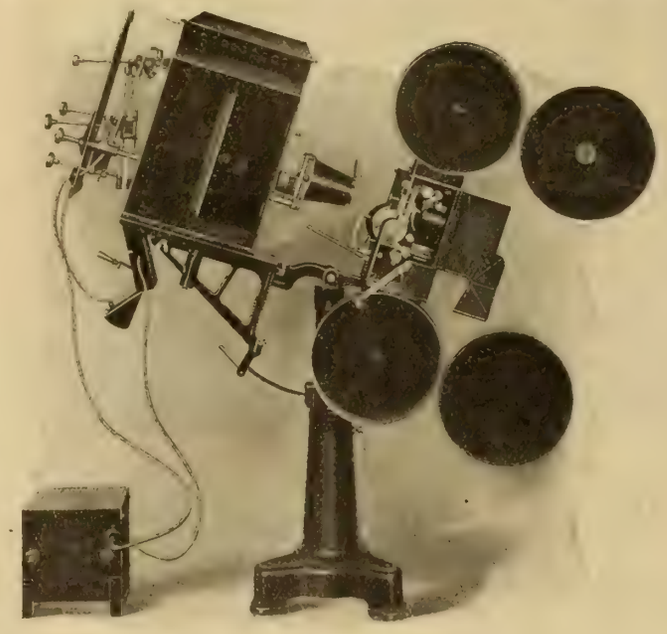
Announcement No. 6

Simplex

THE PEER OF ALL

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

The table for lamphouse is provided with a substantial swing movement which instantaneously brings the lamp into optical center either with the M. P. Projection or Stereopticon lenses, and the Tilting arrangement giving ample latitude, is governed by the moving of the support through the arc provided at the back of the stand.



The base, at its center, rests on a device by which the machine can be swung to right or left, and the center of gravity of this stand, together with its table support, and in conjunction with the Head and lamphouse, owing to careful calculation provides a machine of perfect rigidity and freedom from all vibration.

NO MORE TROUBLE WITH CITY EXAMINERS IF YOU USE THIS

THOROUGHLY FIREPROOF MACHINE

Lyric Amusement Co., Champaign, Ill., Nov. 8.

PRECISION MACHINE CO., New York.

I wish to say that the "Simplex" is the greatest machine on the market, after having used four other makes. If you care to use my judgment as a recommendation you may do so. It is from the heart, and I have had lots of experience with machines. Considering everything it is several years ahead of anything on the market today.

Yours very truly,
H. H. JOHNSON.

"Just the Machine the Department has been looking for."—N. Y. City Official Inspector

EASIEST OF ALL MACHINES TO HANDLE, THREAD AND OPERATE

Sales Office: - - - 23 East 14th Street, New York

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY — 125 E. 23d. Street NEW YORK
(Beach Building) — J. P. CHALMERS, Editor and Manager. — Telephone call, 1343-1344 Gramercy

SUSCRIPTION RATES: $3.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada, $3.50. Foreign Countries, $4.00, Post Paid.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES ON APPLICATION.
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS (No Display), Three cents per word; minimum charge, 50c.

WESTERN OFFICE: 169 W. Washington St. (Post Bldg.), Chicago, Ill. Telephone, Main 3145. Automatic Phone 52732.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Address all correspondence "Moving Picture World, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square, New York," and not to individuals.

Vol. 10 — DECEMBER 30, 1911 — No. 13

INDEX TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS....1060
AMONG CHICAGO HOUSES....1065
AMONG THE EXHIBITORS....1102

CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES....1088
CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES....1081
CAMPBELL, HARRY F., by Henry....1061
CHICAGO LETTER....1064
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)....1072
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed)....1071

FACTS AND COMMENTS....1052

GAUMONT PROGRAM....1081

HASTY JUDGMENT....1053

INDIANA M. P. EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE....1056
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES....1066
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES....1104

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR....1084
LICENSED FILM STORIES....1090
LICENSED RELEASE DATES....1106
LIVE WIRES, by Louis Reeves Harrison....1053

MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES....1075
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR, THE....1067

OBSERVATIONS BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN....1066

PICTURE THEATER NOT A THEATER....1054
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT....1098

SCENARIO WRITER, THE....1062
SONG AND SINGER....1058
SONG SLIDE RELEASES....1087
STAGING THE PASSION PLAY....1055
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent)....1066
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)....1088

WHERE TO SEND YOUR SCENARIOS....1062

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
FRORUP, L. E....1112
KIEWERT, CHAS. L....1110
REISINGER, HUGO....1089

ELECTRICAL & MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
FORT WAYNE ELEC. CO....1099
DETROIT ENGINE WORKS....1109
HALLBERG, J. H....1109
ILG ELEC. CO....1112
MACKIE, H. A....1114
SCHNEIDER, E....1099

FILM BROKERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS....1111
NATIONAL FILM BROKERS....1111

FILM IMPORTERS & DEALERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS....1100

FILM EXCHANGES.
ANTI TRUST FILM CO....1112
BRADENBURG, GEO....1097
FEATURE FILM CO....1101
FEATURE FILM CO. (TOLEDO)....1112
FEATURE & EDUCATIONAL FILM CO..1114-1113
GREENE, W. E....1085
HETZ, L....1099
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE....1101
SWAAB FILM SERVICE....1111

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN FILM MFGR. CO....1042
CHAMPION FILM CO....1040
COMET FILM CO....1043
ECLAIR FILM CO....1037
GAUMONT FILM CO....1041
GEM FILM CO....Index to releases.
GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO....1040
IMP....1108-1089
LUX FILM CO....1043
MAJESTIC FILM CO....1105
MOTION PICTURE DIS. & SALES CO....1103
NESTOR FILM CO....1036
POWERS PICTURE PLAYS....1101
REX MOTION PICTURE CO....1043
SOLAX MOTION PICTURE CO....1039
THANHOUSER CO....1034

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON, THOS A....1048
ESSANAY FILM CO....1035
KALEM CO....1049
KLEINE, GEO....1091
LUBIN MFR. CO....1046
MELIES CO....1115
PATHE FRERES....1044
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO....1047-1088
VITAGRAPH CO....1045

MISCELLANEOUS.
A. B. C. CO....1113
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO....1113
ASSOCIATED M. P. SCHOOLS....1113
BARCKHOFF, C....1093
B. B. FEATURE FILM CO....1093
BUCKEYE-LAKE SHORE FILM CO....1093
BATTERSHALL & OLESON....1113
BERLIN ANILINE WORKS....1110
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS....1083
DAVIS, H....1111
DRAKE, F. J....1111
EXHIBITORS' ADV. & SPEC. CO....1086
GAUDIO....1090
GOLLOS, A. M....1091
GUNDLACH MANHATTAN CO....1093
HOKE, GEO. M....1097
HUNTON FELL ELLIOTT....1089
INFORMATION BUREAU....1114
KNACK STUDIOS....1103
LAVEZZI MACHINE CO....1111
LUMIERE-JOUGLA....1112
McKENNA BROS....1108
MORRIS, W....1112-1111
MORTIMER FILM CLEANER....1103
NATIONAL TICKET CO....1104
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO....1085
PELMAN, J....1087
PITTSBURGH M. P. SUPPLY CO....1087
REALTY BROKERS....1091
REID DIFFUSE CO....1101
SARGENT, E. W....Index to releases
STEBBINS, CHAS. M....1111
THEATER FILM & SUPPLY CO....1091
THREE-IN-ONE OIL CO....1085
TRAINER, C. W....1108
WYINK, H....1111

LECTURES.
MARION, L. M....1089
MOVING PICTURE WORLD....1089

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN M. P. MACHINE CO....1112
EDISON, THOS. A....1048
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO....1113-1103
POWER, NICHOLAS....1116
SIMPLEX M. P. MACHINE CO....1050

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
DEAGAN, J. C....1097
SINN, CLARENCE E....1099
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH....1109
ZEIDLER DRUM CO....1103

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO....Index to
ANDREWS, A. H....
BENNET, GEO. W....
HARDESTY CHAIR CO....
STEEL FURNITURE CO....
WISCONSIN LUMBER CO....

PROJECTION SCREENS.
AMERICAN THEATER CURTAIN & SUPPLY CO....1114
INVENTORS SPECIALTY CO....1106
MIRRORODE CO....1103

SONG SLIDE RELEASES.
AMERICAN MOTION SLIDE CO....1087
EXCELSIOR SLIDE CO....1087
HOFF, JAS. L....1087
LEVI CO....1087
SCOTT & VAN ALTENA....1087
SIMPSON, A. L....1087
UNITED SLIDE ADV. CO....1087
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO....1112

FEATURE FILMS Released By AMERICAN FEATURE FILM CO....1042
CINES CO. OF ROME....1087
NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO....1097
RAISING THE MAINE FILM CO....1098
TOURNAMENT FILM CO....1111
SPERO, JOS....1108

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS SUPPLY CO....1097

Facts and Comments

WE have pointed out in these columns on more than one occasion, that the men, to whose keeping the American drama has been committed by an unkind fate, have greatly aided the motion picture industry through their utter inability to understand and satisfy the demands of the American theater-going public. Of course this help given by theatrical managers, promoters and owners of theaters has been wholly involuntary, but on that account not the less valuable. It ought to interest every friend of the moving picture, from the smallest exhibitor to the largest manufacturer, to read what competent English and American critics have to say on this subject. Arnold Bennett is quoted by an English paper as characterizing the American stage as "frankly bad." The words are well chosen and are nothing but a sort of echo of the present managerial attitude: "The public be damned." An American critic of note, Hamlin Garland, said at a recent dinner of the "Society of American Dramatists and Composers" that the native drama is "an utter disgrace to the country." A New York daily paper, commenting on these facts, remarks that the drama since its domination by the syndicate has "sunk by degrees of commercialism to a low level of mediocrity." It concludes with the complaint that "the development is downward."

*

To these indictments of stupidity the controlling interests enter the time-worn and idiotic plea: "We give the public what it wants." Therein lies the root of the trouble. The syndicate offers not what the public wants, but what the managers are pleased to imagine the public desires. Until sternly and frequently warned by THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD a good many manufacturers were going the same downward path, which has led the owlish men of the syndicate to such emphatic loss of profits and of prestige both. The industry at large owes much more than we can now imagine to the high standard and sustained excellence of the great manufacturers. The latter have shown no small aptitude for gauging the public taste and demand, with the result that more theaters are constantly opening their doors to the picture as their best hope. In the meantime it is well for all, who are interested in the motion picture, to realize that the theatrical situation must get worse before it can get better and that the intelligent exhibitor may expect an era of great prosperity.

* * *

DUTY to exhibitors compels us to say a word about the recent filming by a licensed company of Ibsen's "Ghosts," re-labeled by the company as "The Sins of the Father." If ever there was a case of a perversion of genius it was Ibsen's writing of "The Ghosts." The ordinary human being would just as soon think of making himself comfortable in an asylum for incurables as deriving any pleasure or moral from looking at such a play. The subject is disgusting at best and Ibsen has used his marvelous dramatic powers to make it horrible and revolting. To film such an atrocity is to sin both against art and decency. A mother telling her "tainted son" of the vicious life of his deceased father; the son developing "the taint" by his undue indulgence in drink and his mild assault on a woman servant and the finish of a son asking the mother to help him in committing suicide—these are things that should have no representation either on the silent or the speaking stage. The film ends with the mother just about ready to do the euthanasia act for the son. Why did the makers of this film take this sickening subject and make no mention of the author's name? Literary piracy, even when the purloined subject is as abhorrent as this, is never to be excused. In refreshing contrast to the methods of the company just referred to is the way of another company, not licensed, which has put out motion picture versions of Ibsen's presentable works, such as "A Doll's House" and "The Lady from the Sea." The latter company does not hesitate to give credit to the author and is careful to describe the works in the titles as adaptations from Ibsen's plays. It is evidently not haunted by a fear that Ibsen's ghost may come back and demand the princely price of five and twenty simoleons for scenario rights.

* * *

IT is both gratifying to ourselves and good for the motion picture industry, that our late emphatic warning against a continued overproduction of the "Cowboy-Sheriff-Indian" reels has borne fruit. One film maker goes on record as saying that these productions have "passed from popular favor" and another, in advertising for good scenarios, states that "cowboy and Indian stories will not be considered." There may be a successful revival of a better kind of these films later on, but at the present they are drugs on the market and a decided shrinkage in the supply will be a welcome relief to all except the lovers of dime-novel literature.

* * *

IN various parts of the country attempts have lately been made to have the exhibitors of a city or town unite, as do managers of theaters, and agree on certain lines of a division of territory and on a minimum price of admission of ten cents. In some places the exhibitors did get together on the minimum of ten cents, in other places the men with the largest seating capacity, imagining to see a chance of freezing out competitors with the smaller capacity, have stood by the nickel as the smallest unit of admission. In one large city in New England the local press took a deep interest in the situation and when the plan for a minimum of ten cents was defeated through dissension among the exhibitors, the newspapers devoted columns on the first page to what they called "the people's victory." The facts in the case show how deep is the hold of the picture on the public and how hard it is to get exhibitors to act together, even when self-interest would seem to commend a step in the right direction.

* * *

OUR esteemed friend of the Dramatic Mirror, whose comments lately have shown a lamentable paucity of ideas and a woful lack of originality, seeks to eke out his weekly lucubrations by an occasional fling at THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD. The quality of self-praise is not known for the sweetness of its perfume, but to the olfactory nerves of the man who enthusiastically blows his own horn, the smell is imperceptible. The latest outburst of the notorious modesty of the "Spectator" comes in these characteristic words: ". . . The Mirror, the first theatrical journal to become seriously interested in pictures, pointed out the dramatic possibilities of the films. . . ." Truly the "Spectator" is the genuine Claude Eclair of the film industry. It was he who invented the pictures, discovered the dramatic possibilities of the films, aided the poor benighted manufacturer, and out of the immensity of his inexhaustible intellect produced suggestion after suggestion, thus saving the industry from perdition and incidentally securing some valuable advertising without which the blessed sheet would be in a bad way financially. As it is now the tail wags the dog; the moving picture sustains, nourishes and preserves the dramatic end of the publication. We hope that the gigantic brains of the "Spectator" will continue to aid the industry in its proper development, and we shudder at the thought of losing his co-operation. In the meantime we admonish him not to be too modest and retiring, and suggest the violet as a proper emblem for his department, for that gentle flower is supposed to blush at its own sweetness and perfection. So long, you brave and modest Claude, hero and savior.

* * *

Hasty Judgment

WE have received two letters from Quincy, Ill., complaining of the picture entitled "The Secret of the Confessional." One of the letters is from the Rev. M. J. Foley, who is the editor of "The Western Catholic," and the other bears the signature of H. E. Nelson, manager of the Colonnade Theater. The language, both of the reverend critic and the manager, is perhaps a trifle intemperate. We are urged in both letters to look at the picture and use all possible efforts toward its suppression. If we understand the language of the reverend gentleman correctly, he intends to bring the matter to the attention of the National Federation of Catholic Societies and use all his influence to have that organization put its official ban on the picture. He believes that the condemnation of the reel by the Federation will stop its being shown in the big cities, "but, of course, anything is good enough for the smaller towns." The grave charge is made in both letters, that the picture tends "to ridicule and insult the Catholic religion."

The attitude of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD on this subject is too well known to need a new definition. We condemn without reservation the making of any picture, which will offend the religious sensibilities of any man, woman or child, no matter to what religion they may belong. Not only do we deplore the direct insult or ridicule, but even the profaning of sacred things when the exigencies of a drama would seem to demand it, we hold in utter abhorrence. We therefore approached our task of reviewing the film, against which such bitter words had been said, in a rather austere spirit. After viewing the film carefully we are unable to agree with the vitriolic censure of our correspondents. While the title is foolish and injudiciously chosen and while a feeling of tact and delicacy might have prevented the treatment of the subject in the first place, there is nothing in it which justifies the savage outbursts of priest and exhibitor.

Here is the story: A medieval duke suspects the conjugal fidelity of his wife. The woman, who has been indiscreet or worse, repents of her folly and sin and goes to confession. To get proof of the wife's faithlessness the duke has the confessional watched by some hired ruffians. The guilty woman makes her avowal to the priest and to show her desire of atoning for the past brings with her a box containing all the letters and love-tokens that might remind her of the illicit relation. The priest hears the confession, is horrified at the woman's transgression, takes the box from her and makes her kneel down and profess penitence for her sins, after which he absolves her. As the priest leaves the church the ruffians fall upon him and by main force wrest the incriminating box out of his hands.

True, the subject is as old as Boccaccio and Petrarch, the acting is theatrical in the extreme, but where is the insult to the Church of Rome? We are sure the interior of the church with the confessional in the background was taken from reality. The father confessor appears an ideal man of God, horrified at sin, but merciful to the sinner. The wife, foolish rather than wicked, repents of her sin and her religious training suggests to her an unburdening of her heart at the feet of a confessor. There is not even the slightest suggestion that the priest violated the sacred seal of the confessional; he resists, as far as his great age and feebleness allow, the assault of the ruffians and yields to nothing but superior physical force.

We should like the reverend critic and our exhibitor to define more in detail what they consider the "insulting and ridiculing part of the film." We have followed the suggestion of the exhibitor, who advised us to take a Catholic to see the picture and he would "be quick to see its faults." The man, after looking at the picture with every predisposition to criticise it unfavorably, declared he could see nothing in it "that would shock the average Catholic."

After carefully reading the letter of Rev. M. J. Foley and having seen the picture, we are inclined to doubt, whether the gentleman has looked at the reel himself. Perhaps the title offended him and he condemned on hearsay evidence without personal investigation. We will always denounce the sectarian or controversial film, but we must in fairness to manufacturer and exhibitor judge each case on its proper merits.

LIVE WIRES.

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

There are plenty of dead ones in the moving picture business—for that matter there are plenty in every business. The man who sits in his office and hears all about it may think that he knows all about it, but there is only one way to find out what is going on in the motion picture exhibitions and that is to follow the Arab motto: "Don't send; go thyself." Go every day and see the plays beginning "Mother Must Pay the Rent" and ending without the slightest variation in an embracing young couple, with or without the parental benediction. Go and see how falsely the West is represented. Out there they had electric surface lines when we were running horse cars on Broadway. They are running dining cars and sleeping cars over the trolley lines while we still have horse cars in New York City. Out there, where the farms are ploughed and crops harvested by machinery, where high-class periodicals have the largest per capita ciculation, where the percentage of illiteracy is smaller than in any other part of the world, where the schools are better than the churches, where the homes are beautiful and common people prosperous and civilization is first to approach enlightenment, one would think from moving pictures shown that there were nothing but Indians, cowboys, sheriffs, settlers on the verge of starvation—"fergit it."

I must applaud the Biograph Company for good taste in showing the "West Beautiful," and any other country that does not misrepresent that part of our country which is more truly representative of American spirit and progress than any other section.

What are the people of this country thinking about?

What subjects most engage the attention of those who think?

You will never find that out in the office unless you look deep into the subject by a careful examination of articles in all the leading periodicals. Buy a few copies of the magnificent "Country Life" and study subjects there considered, or those of any other advanced magazine circulating among the home-loving people. Get out of the rut, and there is no worse rut than that of playing one tune on a single string.

"He put in his thumb and pulled out a plum and said, 'What a great boy am I?'"

What would the dead ones do if I were to head my article "Educational Films?" Not read it or have a cold chill running down where a spine ought to be. I would not dare use the word because of a narrow conception that it means the communication of knowledge to unwilling pupils by some dogmatic pedagogue with a ruler in one hand and a Latin grammar in the other. The first definition of the word, however, is the broad one pertaining to the cultivation of the mind, the feelings and the manners. It is the direction of taste, sentiment and conduct by experience and impression, and that is the sense in which I use it—the broad and true sense understood by all live wires.

A live periodical devoted to fiction has this sentiment on the first page of each number, indicating why it is issued:

"Its prime purpose is to provide lively entertainment for minds that are not primitive."

Did you ever stop to think of how the human mind rose from its primitive condition through the very character and quality of natural affection? From the simple love of offspring, family ties, social organization and political life have been gradually evolved, and that natural kindness which is in all of us still prevails over other emotions, the conqueror of them all? Hence, the appeal of the play, which depicts love, gratitude, sympathy, generosity, courage, self-denial or succor. And whatever rouses this dominating tendency to common betterment operates as a tremendous educational force—it is not a question of the future—it is going on in every moving picture of merit shown on the screen. The man who opposes all that is fine and progressive in human affairs by sending out photoplays that are false, offensive or degrading, is not only a dead one, but he is giving all the rest of us the true measure of himself—"By their works ye shall know them." So with the exhibitor or the renter who advocates low plays. He is asserting that the mothers who take their children to the exhibition—they number many millions—are incapable of mental enjoyment and natural affection and unaffected by contemplation of what is beautiful in scenery and settings or delightful in action on the screen.

Our men have high opinions of the worth of action and behavior in the plays of passion and struggle where principles of honor or courage or gallantry are concerned, whereas they are nauseated by what is flat, stale and mentally unprofitable. Plays are ineffectual, if not demoralizing, that leave a bad taste in the mouth. It might as well be said of the stories on the screen as of those in the magazine, that they should be "to provide lively entertainment for minds that are not primitive."

In the various departments conducted by a staff of editors in this publication, encouragement and instruction are combined in the most attractive forms possible for the benefit of exhibitors, producers, playwrights, directors, actors and those engaged in mechanical work, because it is recognized that all of these contribute to a common welfare. This should be the spirit of the pictured play. The photoplay goes forth to a large and varied audience occupied with individual pursuits and special character, but a very large proportion of that audience is ready to absorb information that may be of general benefit. The best photodramas are constructed to entertain—that is their foremost purpose—but even to do this they must reach the finest motives. If one of them depicts a tragedy for the purpose of engaging human sympathy or presents a comedy for the simple purpose of a good, honest laugh, it can at the same time be so well done as to carry the thought and sentiment of the audience to high planes instead of low ones, thus adding to common ordinary happiness or quickening the nobler emotions according to the character of the story told. But it must be fully realized by those who are live wires that there lies a tremendous resource of mental pleasure in these productions which is so closely allied with the natural affections as to make them instructive as well as entertaining, especially to those of us who have grown weary of what is false and behind the times on the stage and to those on whom the full measure of our future hopes rest—the coming generation.

PICTURE THEATER NOT A "THEATER."

Pennsylvania Judge Decides That Because a Place Is Called a "Theater" It Does Not Become a "Theater" Under the Law.

Down in Pennsylvania there is a law compelling places fitted up for theatrical and operatic entertainments and museums to pay a license for the privilege. Under that statute action was brought against a picture theater manager named Beatty in Allegheny County, Pa., to compel payment of the license on the ground that he was running a theater. The case has just been decided by the judge of the Court of Common Pleas. It is indexed as C. P. No. 2, Allegheny County, July Term, 1910, No. 608. The opinion of the Court is given here in full:

SHAFER, J. This is an amicable action of assumpsit, in which the parties have stated a case for the opinion of the court. From this it appears that the defendant is the lessee and occupant on the first floor of a building in the City of Pittsburgh, of a room 26 feet by 180 feet in which the defendant carries on a moving picture show from 9 o'clock A. M. to 12 o'clock P. M. every day except Sunday, charging an admission fee of 5 cents. The entertainment furnished to the public consists of the exhibition of moving pictures upon a screen at the end of the room, and music by a small orchestra, which plays during the exhibition of the pictures. The action is to recover the license fee provided by the Act of June 24, 1895, P. L. 249, which act provides for an annual license to be paid by the owners and lessees of buildings fitted up and used "for theatrical and operatic entertainments or for the exhibition of museums." the question for determination is whether the moving picture show is a theatrical entertainment, it being admitted that it is not an operatic nor a museum. The act in question makes the giving of such a theatrical entertainment without being licensed a misdemeanor, a subject of indictment, and is therefore to be strictly construed in favor of the defendant. Without, however, applying any strict construction to the act, we are of the opinion that a moving picture show is not in any proper sense of the word a theatrical entertainment. While the word "theater," from its etymology, might indicate any place where the public is to be entertained by looking at something, its ordinary use is to indicate a playhouse containing a stage upon which persons appear to represent character or incident by speech or other means. We are of the opinion, therefore, that the defendant's moving picture show is not a theatrical performance within the meaning of the act. It is therefore ordered that judgment be entered for the defendant.. 20 Dist., R.

The correspondent of the Moving Picture World, Mr. Edwin L. Mattern, of Pittsburg, Pa., expresses the opinion that the decision of the Court of Common Pleas will be sustained by the Supreme Court.

AMERICAN PLAYERS AS FIREFIGHTERS.

The studio of the American Film Mfg. Co., in California, ordinarily a scene of activity, was greatly augmented by the appearance of the State Fire Warden recently. In Southern California martial law supercedes the civil law in case of brush fires, and it is only necessary for the warden to tag a man and say "you're it" in order to obtain recruits to fight the fires that rage along the mountain sides and valleys when the sage brush, dry as timber, affords food for the flames.

Mr. Dwan, the director in charge, was busy rehearsing some scenes completing a picture, so that he could allow Thanksgiving Day to all the employees of the company, when the appearance of the fire warden greatly accelerated the action in the scene. Performers and cowboys who face the muzzle of a forty-five every day without flinching, faded away into secret hiding places before the advance of the man with the star.

In their hurry to seek other haunts where fire wardens are conspicuous by their absence, one of the cowboys fell down and the others behind him, stumbling over his prostrate form, soon made a human pyramid five men deep. The man with the star promptly approached the struggling heap and pressed them into service, regardless of the storm of protest that it would interfere with the making of motion pictures. They were hurried to the scene of the fire and for forty-eight hours, without sleep or rest, struggled against the advance of the fire fiend.

Their Thanksgiving dinner consisted of dried corned beef served them on the job. At last, dirty and smoke begrimed, they were allowed to return to town and rest. The performers were more fortunate than the cowboys and hurried into town, for they realized if caught and forced to fight the fire it would sadly hamper the work in the studio, and the compensation paid by the State would never cover the amount lost to the company in time or money. For the future protection of the company, whose interests he represents, Mr. Dwan has taken legal steps to prevent a recurrence of a similar levy, for while the American players are as keen to protect public property as any men, they realize that there are others better suited to that strenuous toil and in greater need of the money.

Staging the Passion Play.

By Jas. S. McQuade.

I HAVE received a letter from S. L. Rothapfel, of the Lyric, Minneapolis, in which he dwells on the splendid business he has been showing to with the "Passion Play." Early this month, Manager Rothapfel made a special feature of that film, showing it for four days, and turning people away during that time, notwithstanding the Lyric's seating capacity of 1700. The demand for this film, as presented by Manager Rothapfel, was so great that he was induced to put it on again for a solid week, beginning Monday, December 18th.

As I know several exhibitors who will run this film around Christmastide, I cannot do better than give a description of Mr. Rothapfel's presentation. As a prelude to the feature the two reels, "Wild Birds in their Haunts" (Pathe) and an old picture, "The Holy Land" (Pathe), were projected. They were shown without a sound of any kind, there being no music and no effects. By this time the audience was settled, and the doors were closed, the curtains drawn, the house darkened, and the stage curtain lowered.

In the far distance the pealing of chimes was heard. This was immediately carried forward by the notes of the "Holy City," on the pipe organ. The stage curtain was raised slowly and as the organ notes rolled more sonorously over the audience, a gentle breath of the perfume of lilies was wafted out over the auditorium.

The stage had its customary settings, but in the places of the members of the orchestra were twenty boys in white vestments. The soloists of the Lyric were also in vestments, and the fountain, hidden by palms, was playing. A soft, pale blue light was cast on the water from beneath.

With the curtain still rising slowly, the baritone, Mr. Morehouse, sang the "Holy City." When the chorus was reached, the choir boys joined, and as their first notes struck, a pale blue light was gradually diffused over the stage and the artistic settings, forming an effect that was beautiful and appropriate. This effect was further heightened by the previous strewing, carelessly, of several dozen roses on the stage and on the steps leading up to the screen.

The song numbers used in the "Passion Play" were as follows:

Holy City ..... Adams
Holy Night ..... Willis
Sung by Miss Butler

Adeste Fidelis
Sung by entire ensemble

A Christmas Carol ..... Gruber
Sung by choir

Praise Ye the Father ..... Gounod
The Palms ..... Faure
Sung by Mrs. Mulhearn, introducing the passion and death of Christ in the third reel

Calvary ..... Rodney
Sung by Miss Butler

The Hallelujah Chorus from the Messiah (Handel) was sung by the entire ensemble, also the Doxology, as a finale.

Mr. Rothapfel has booked "Cinderella," Selig's great three-reel feature, as the New Year's attraction, and is arranging for a most elaborate presentation.

The work of Manager Rothapfel in Minneapolis is so keenly appreciated by prominent people in that city that club members, both ladies and gentlemen, are exerting their influence to support him, and other people of influence go to the expense of printing circular letters and mailing them to acquaintances and business men.

OLYMPIA THEATER, LYNN, MASS.

By Henry.

Greatly enlarged and extensively improved in all particulars, the Olympia Theater, of Lynn, Mass., began doing business for the present season during October. As the house stands at present it is one of the most up-to-date vaudeville and picture theaters in the country as the photos will partly verify.

Olympia Theater, Lynn, Mass.

This enormous house has a seating capacity of 3,200, with a stage 45 by 89. No expense was spared in bringing the Olympia to the highest state of theater construction. The house was redecorated in gold, crimson and cream. New heating and ventilating apparatus has been installed and an operating room of a unique kind was built. The operating room is located outside of the building and the projection is thrown between the first and second balconies. One of the novel installations is that of a moving stairway or escalator, which is a great inducement for patrons to fill the upper part of the house.

Olympia Theater, Lynn, Mass.

Nothing has been left undone for the comfort and safety of the Olympia patrons and Manager Lord should be justly proud of his house. The latest Licensed pictures and numerous vaudeville acts make up a program which is considered one of the best in Lynn.

The account of the boy who went daft on moving pictures, and hanged himself with a piece of clothes line, may revive the comparison of the moving picture show with the blood-and-thunder dime novel. If it should, there is this to be said in favor of the moving picture show—a boy can't hide it inside his geography and absorb it during school hours.—Brooklyn Times.

Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors League

Organized at Indianapolis Amid Harmony and Enthusiasm. Thorough Plans Laid for State-wide Membership.

By James S. McQuade.

THE first convention of the Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors' League was held in Indianapolis at the Claypool Hotel, Thursday, Dec. 12. The avowed purpose of the meeting was to effect a State organization in order that Indiana exhibitors might be better able to protect their interests from unfriendly legislation and other influences affecting their welfare. More satisfactory relations with exchanges, a representation in film censorship, and other minor objects will be sought through the organization.

The Morning Session.

Fifty-five exhibitors were present (five of whom represented Indianapolis) at the opening session, which was held from 10 o'clock a. m. until noon. The visitors were given an address of welcome by Andrew Smith, vice-president of the Capital Bank, of Indianapolis, also secretary of the Indiana Banks Association, and treasurer of the Commercial Club, of Indianapolis. Mr. Smith dwelt on the good services rendered by the Indiana organization of bankers in discouraging unfavorable legislation for exhibitors and by supporting measures that contributed to their interests. He also reminded them that similar results could be accomplished by organization.

H. S. Dickson, owner of the Dreamland Theater, Winchester, Ind., president of the State temporary organization and chairman of the convention, warmly thanked Mr. Smith for his words of welcome and concurred in the opinion that the moving picture business would be greatly benefited by the intelligent organization of exhibitors.

Substance of M. A. Neff's Speech.

M. A. Neff, president of the Moving Picture League of America, next addressed the convention. The substance of his remarks, in part, was as follows: Only a few years ago the moving picture was unknown; to-day there are nearly 16,000 motion picture theaters entertaining and educating millions of our citizens. The motion picture and its popularity have eclipsed any other line of business ever known.

The motion picture in commerce, education, religion, politics and history has rapidly developed our modern civilization. The historian may write, the lecturer may tell of the past, but the motion picture shows things as they really were, and not as someone else has seen them.

Schools throughout the country will shortly be teaching history, geography, and other branches of study, by means of the motion picture. It will not be long until the churches will be filled to overflowing to see pictures, and hear the lectures accompanying them—and these lectures will be delivered by men who are now condemning the picture show.

Moving pictures will be an educational factor in army and navy maneuvers, and they will exert a powerful influence in stimulating patriotism. The scenes of the War for Indepence and the Civil War, as reproduced in moving pictures, will remain in memory long after the description on the printed page is forgotten.

Surgery has been advanced many years by the picture. Germs of disease are being shown daily on the curtains and physicians and surgeons are enthusiastic supporters of the motion picture. The barefooted boy in the country is fast becoming acquainted with Broadway and State Street, and the city boy, who has never seen the country, is fast learning the manner of living and the environment in rural surroundings.

China, bowed down by the tyranny of a despotic government for centuries, has learned to feel the galling sores of her burden, through the medium of the motion picture. The latter has forced the truth home, where millions of books and thousands of devoted men and women have failed.

Mr. Neff recently met a gentleman, just returned from China, after a stay of two years, who informed him that the moving picture, more than all the other forces of civilization, was responsible for the present movement to overthrow the old despotic order of things.

In Mr. Neff's opinion, the organization of motion picture exhibitors will become the strongest in the world; but, no matter how strong or whatever the grievance of the members, due consideration and justice should always prevail in their councils. No man, organization or corporation should ever presume to intimidate or force others to submit to them in unjust matters, and the whole people should ever remember that an organization must not be held responsible or condemned for the acts of two or three of its members. There was one Judas, but the eleven remaining apostles were not condemned for his act.

It is the object of the organization to discourage the use of suggestive or low class pictures and to insist on being furnished the best films obtainable. The exhibitors, therefore, should have a voice as to the films they receive, and should have representation in national film censorship. The moving picture shows of America do a business of $500,000,000 a year, and a business of such magnitude should be able to wield a far-reaching influence.

The aphorism, "If the spirit of man is ever discovered, it will be focused by motion photography," was indulged in by Mr. Neff during his remarks.

C. M. Christenson, secretary of the National Exhibitors' League and owner of the Broadway and other theaters in Cleveland, was the next speaker. He dwelt on the benefits of organization, and referred to the good work already done in his home city, which is apparent to all interested in exhibition there.

H. S. Dickson followed, and also treated of the benefits to be derived from hearty co-operation. He spoke of the initial, temporary organization formed in Cleveland by Indiana exhibitors, during the convention of the National League last August. Since then these members have been working in the interests of State organization, and laying plans for the Indianapolis convention.

The floor was next taken by F. J. Rembusch, of Shelbyville, Ind., secretary and treasurer of the temporary State organization. Among other pertinent remarks he stated that the expenses of the meetings of the State organization about to be formed would be borne by the fund created by the initiation fees of members, which should be fixed at $5 each. The convention was then adjourned for lunch.

The Afternoon Session.

The morning session was an open meeting and the afternoon session was also open for the first hour. H. S. Dickson presided. After roll call, it was suggested by him that a constitution and by-laws be considered, recommending at the same time that the constitution and by-laws of the Ohio Exhibitors' League be considered for amendment and adoption. This was done, and later, in the closed meeting, the Ohio constitution and by-laws were adopted, after making a few minor changes. The title of the Indiana organization was next considered, and it was carried that it should be the Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. The list of officers was next considered and it was agreed to include a president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer. The initiation fee was then fixed at $5, after which a committee of five was appointed to make the necessary changes in the Ohio constitution and by-laws, before referred to, which are to be read at the next meeting. The convention then adjourned to have a photograph of the members taken in group.

The closed afternoon meeting lasted from 3.30 p. m. till 5.00 p. m. The new officers appointed for the Indiana League are: H. S. Dickson, president; five vice-presidents, viz: H. F. Prentice, Terre Haute; Earl Rife, Logansport; Joseph Bommerscheim, Ft. Wayne; R. H. Canon, Muncie, and W. R. Deaton, Warsaw; John Gavin, of Indianapolis, treasurer, and F. J. Rembusch, of Shelbyville and Indianapolis, secretary.

State Organizers Appointed.

It was carried that the next meeting should be held in Indianapolis on the first Tuesday in February, 1912, and that a State organizer should be appointed to call on every exhibitor in the State. This was afterwards amended, two organizers—one for the southern and the other for the northern half of the State—being decided upon. Charles H. Daugherty, owner of the New Irvin Theater, Winchester, Ind., was appointed for the northern half, and D. L. Bryan, of the Picture Theater, Rockport for the southern half. These organizers have been furnished with credentials by President Dickson, authorizing them to enroll members and collect initiation fees.

Some Subjects Discussed At Closed Meeting.

During the closed meeting the question of the number of reels used at a show was discussed, and the use of three reels for five cents was condemned, while two reels for that admission were recommended. Vaudeville, in connection with moving picture shows was strongly discountenanced, and straight moving picture shows strongly commended. Shortly after five o'clock the convention was dissolved and the members proceeded to the banquet hall.

The Banquet.

Covers were laid for 60 people. F. J. Rembusch was toastmaster. Among the invited guests present were: Robert Lieber, manager of the Indianapolis branch of the General Film Co.; F. Mandelbaum, of the Feature and Educational Film Co., Cleveland, and H. Brient, Floyd Brown and Louis Baum, of Manager Lieber's office staff. It was nearly eight o'clock when the banqueters arose, much of the time being devoted to pithy short speeches by nearly all of those present. It was conceded that Mr. Lieber made the speech of the evening.

Names of Those Present.

Following are the names of those present at the convention: H. S. Dickson, the Dreamland, Winchester, Ind.; H. F. Prentice, the Fountain, Terre Haute; Otis Kilby, the Arcade, Winchester; H. L. St. Clair, the Orpheum, Hammond; Ray Palmer, the New Grand, Washington; F. M. Palmer, the New Grand, Washington; Chas. Powell, the Powell's, Redkey; Geo. G. Ball, La Purdette, Lafayette; Chas. H. Daugherty, New Irvin, Winchester; Louis A. Klene, the Arc; Lafayette; C. E. McNairy, the Habit, Tipton; J. E. Anderson, the Court, Tipton; E. L. Rife, the Grand and the Tolego, Logansport; C. E. Adams, the Fairyland, Lebanon; J. W. Downey, the Arc, Monticello; C. H. Williams, the Dreamland, Seymour; A. Chrismer, the Lyric, Connersville; Celby Miller, the Palace, Greensburg; O. B. Simmonds, the Majestic, Muncie; F. W. Simmonds the Majestic Muncie; D. L. Bryan, of Bryan Bros., the Picture, Rockport; Joe Bommerscheim, the Gaiety, Ft. Wayne; R. H. Canon, the Royal, Muncie; F. D. Tallman, the Electric, Bunker Hill; M. R. Tourner, the Vaudette, Michigan City; F. J. Rembusch, the Manhattan, Indianapolis, and the Crystal, Shelbyville, Ind.; W. R. Deaton, the Royal, Warsaw; J. F. Trulock, Indianapolis; Edward C. Pachler, Indianapolis; F. L. Walker, the Lyric, Peru; Bert Hicks, the Star, Kokomo; John Larmore, Knightstown; Q. T. Lyons, the New Loreka, Knightstown; Sprague Green, the Lyric, Ft. Wayne; W. C. Yutzy, the Olympic, Lebanon; L. J. Brown, the Pastime, Brazil; W. O. Tarkington, the Lyric, Kokomo; W. L. Overholzer, the Royal, Indianapolis; R. S. Reed, Kokomo; A. M. Dickson, the Princess and the Orpheum, Wabash; C. H. Dickson, the Princess and the Orpheum, Wabash; H. S. Logan, the Eagle, Wabash; G. Lillard Jones, the Ideal, Kokomo; E. Tarkington, the Lyric, Kokomo; Ed. E. Hiatt, the Palace, Frankfort; H. C. Heisler, the Colonial, Ft. Wayne; S. M. Grimes, the Arc and Joy, Brazil; John B. Hubert, the Two Johns, Indianapolis; John A. Victor, the Two Johns, Indianapolis; H. W. Summers, the Orpheum, Anderson; M. A. Neff, Cincinnati, Ohio; C. M. Christenson, the Broadway, Cleveland, Ohio; Jos. H. Gavin, the Illinois, Indianapolis.

CONVENTION BREVITIES.

The stag aspect of the convention was happily relieved by the gracious presence of four charming ladies from Kokomo, Ind. Miss M. E. Wood and Mrs. Etta M. Albaugh, of the Star Theater, were accompanied by B. J. Hicks, manager of that house. Miss Emma Tarkington was accompanied by her brother, W. O. Tarkington, owner of the Lyric, and Mrs. G. Lillard Jones, owner of the Ideal, were also in the party. We take our hats off to Kokomo, and wonder if there are any more at home like them. Mr. and Miss Tarkington are near relatives of Booth Tarkington, the well-known author.

* * *

E. A. Schultz and L. A. Woodward, of the Enterprise Optical Co., Chicago, were busy hustlers on convention day. Seven Motiographs were sold by their combined efforts, and quite a number of good prospects are in sight for the near future. Mr. Schultz left for Dayton, Columbus and Toledo, O., after the convention proceedings had closed.

* * *

I had a chat with Herman Becker, of the Royal Theater, Vincennes, Ind., who arrived too late to take a part in the convention, but who expressed the purpose to join the League as soon as possible. The Royal is the leading picture theater in Vincennes, and seats 350 people. Manager Becker looks for good business around the holiday season.

* * *

I met the Hams, father and son, at the office of the General Film Co., one day. Mr. Ham, Sr., owns and manages the Rex Theater, Bloomington Ind., and Mr. Ham, Jr., runs the Nickelo at Linton, Ind. Both seemed pleased with business conditions. They arrived too late for the convention.

* * *

P. B. Powell, of the Royal Theater, Noblesville, Ind., was another visiting exhibitor that arrived too late for the convention. However, he called at the Claypool to meet President Dickson on Wednesday, Dec. 13, for the purpose of enrolling. Business was only fair according to Manager Powell.

Group of Members of the Indiana Exhibitors' League. Photograph Taken at the Indianapolis Convention.

"Joe" Bommerscheim, of the Gaiety, Ft. Wayne; Sprague Green, of the Lyric, and H. C. Heisler, of the Colonial, in the same city, were a trio of enthusiastic "Leaguers." "Joe" formerly ran a house in Streator, Ill., and is now making good in his new home. He told me that he made big successes with "Foul Play" and "The Battle." He booked "Vanity Fair" for two days while in Indianapolis, and expects big returns from it. Manager Bommerscheim is a strong believer in newspaper advertising. All three exhibitors are showing to good business.

* * *

H. F. Prentice, owner and manager of the Fountain, Terre Haute, is a wideawake exhibitor, who takes great pride in his new house. It was finished about 18 weeks ago at a cost of $15,000. The State inspector of Indiana, after making a thorough examination of the Fountain, pronounced it one of the safest, best equipped and ventilated in the State. Mr. Prentice has been seven years in the exhibition business. He formerly owned the old Nickelodeon in Terre Haute. Business is fair for this season of the year. As has been stated elsewhere, Mr. Prentice was elected one of the five vice-presidents of the Indiana League.

* * *

E. Mandelbaum, owner of the Feature and Educational Film Co., with head offices in Cleveland, was greeted by many friends at the convention. It was Mr. Mandelbaum's intention to give a private exhibition of the feature films, "Zigomar" and "Love and Aviation," but through an unfortunate hitch the former film was delayed by the express company and had not arrived at midnight, on Tuesday. "Love and Aviation" was shown in the Lyric late Tuesday night, and was pronounced a fine subject by all who saw it. Mr. Mandelbaum left for Chicago early Wednesday morning.

* * *

F. J. Rembusch, secretary of the Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, owns the Crystal in Shelbyville, Ind., and the Manhattan, in Indianapolis. He is building a beautiful new modern theater in Shelbyville, that will be a credit to the city and to the film business. He purchased the Manhattan about three months ago and, under his direction, business has increased encouragingly.

THERE'S CLASS IN MUSKOGEE.

Oklahoma Town Has Many Good Photoplay Houses—Uses Best Pictures—Bars the Cowboy and Indian Product.

A correspondent of the Moving Picture World, writing from Muskogee, Okla., tells a particularly interesting story of the character of the photoplay house in that thriving and enterprising city of the comparatively new West. "Strange and paradoxical as it may seem," he observes, "Muskogee, in the heart of the so-called Indian country, has taken an advanced stand in the motion picture line, both the exhibitors and exhibitions being far superior to those in a number of the older communities." Continuing, our correspondent explains: "To begin with, it is only the high-class pictures that are appreciated here, Indian and cowboy films at the present time being strictly tabooed. While these thrillers may go in the effete East, they do not take well in this country, the reason being that the motion-play Indian and cowboy do not exist. An Indian as pictured in the photoplays would be a greater curiosity in Muskogee than in New York City.

"Muskogee has seven theaters in which pictures are the principal attraction, one vaudeville house in which one reel of film is run at each performance and one house where high-class attractions are shown. The Muskogee Amusement Co. owns and operates four theaters, in all of which Licensed films are shown. These theaters are numbered from "One" to "Four" and are named "Wigwams." Practically the entire output of the Motion Picture Patents Co. is shown in these theaters, forty-eight reels being used every week. The Lenhart Theater also uses the Licensed films. The Yale Amusement Co. operates two theaters, in both of which Independent pictures are exhibited. The combined seating capacity of the different picture theaters exceeds 3,000, so it can be seen that this city is doing its full share in supporting the motion picture business.

"All seven motion picture theaters in Muskogee are well built and handsomely equipped. In the Wigwam theaters the Powers and Edison machines are used, and the same is true of the other theaters. A feature in connection with the Wigwam theaters is that all pictures are censored by a committee from the Federation of Women's Clubs. The best people of the city are the strongest supporters of the motion pictures and high class and feature films are as well advertised here as the standard attractions at the big theaters."

The Song and the Singer.

MONTE HOWARD, whose portrait appears below, is one of Harold Rossiter's best boosters. He is a conscientious hard-working gentleman, with a good voice and good stage presence and is putting over some of the Harold Rossiter hits in a manner that makes them hit a little harder. "Down in Melody Lane," "The Undertaker Man," "I'm Awfully Glad the Girl I Had Has Found Another Beau," and "Barnyard Rag" are among his best winners at the present writing. Mr. Howard is singing in and around Chicago, at present appearing in the Jones Linicke and Schaeffer theatres.

Max Reinold is another of the Harold Rossiter staff who is making friends and holding them, too, with his rendition of the many good songs from this popular house. Mr. Reinold is also working Chicago and vicinity and his repertoire includes "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," "Down In Melody Lane," "Girl of My Dreams," "Years, Years Ago," "The Undertaker Man," and "There's a Mother Old and Gray Who Needs Me Now." Tom Mayo Geary is professional manager for Harold Rossiter and says business is booming. A glance in their offices at 145 N. Clark Street (Randolph Building) seems to bear out his claim for they are always busy up there.

E. Clinton Keithley (prof. manager for The Forster Music Co., Suite 60 Grand Opera House), is radiant with the outlook for his new song "A Garland of Old Fashioned Roses." He says this number is taking the public fancy quicker than he dared to hope for. It must be going fast, for a composer's hopes are high as a general rule. But in this case the composer has something substantial to pin his faith upon, for "The Garland of Old Fashioned Roses" is a good song and an encore winner every time. The Forster Music Co. are concentrating their advertising efforts upon this particular number, though of course they have a choice collection of other good material which will interest the illustrated singer, among them being Monte Howard, of the Harold Rossiter Music Pub. Co.

"I Want to Hear a Southern Tune" (by Bob Sear and R. Jackson). This company has also taken over the catalog of the Johnson Publishing Co., which includes "I'll Meet You on the Golden Shore," "Some Day You'll Love Me," "Lucy Lee," and "The Girl For Me." They also have a couple of new ones in reserve which will be announced later. Singers would be wise to keep their eyes on the Forster Music Co. and its products; they are handing out the kind of goods you want.

Leo Feist is fortunate in having on his Chicago staff of boosters a team like Predeaux and Malchow. These gentlemen are clever musicians as well as splendid singers and their team work is away above the average. Just now they are featuring "My Loving Honey Man" and "Italian Serenade," the latter being as good as the best of the many Italian dialect songs recently produced. Another new Feist song is "Call Me Daddy," a number which has been held in reserve but is now ready for the "publicity" stage of the game. It is almost too soon to say what this song has done as it has not yet had the chance to do a great deal, but it has all the earmarks of a big HIT. It will undoubtedly be one of the winners in the coming spring and summer song campaign. Watch for "Call Me Daddy;" it's got "the markings"; the rest is up to you.

Betts and Binner (Randolph Building, 145 N. Clark Street) report things are moving along in a very satisfactory manner. The songs this house is working on just now are "Oh, That Musical Dream" (featured by Ray Samuels the Rag-time Kid), "Some One Dreams of Someone," "Laughing Eyes" (Indian song) and "That Funny Melody" (rag). These have all make good for the singers using them as well as for the house publishing them. They are also getting out some new material which will be announced in good time.

Charley Hudson (professional manager for Tell Taylor's "House of Ballads") says the song "When We Were Sweethearts," is going big. The sales promise to rival those of that ever popular "Down by the Old Mill Stream," which ran over the half million mark long ago. Another ballad of the same style is "Under the Old Oak Tree," which is good for an encore any old time. Tell Taylor has been persistently successful with songs of this character and is rapidly becoming identified with them, so much so that a singer can almost know in advance the nature and quality of one of his new ones. That these are always up to the high standard he has set for himself is proven by sales which are of steady growth. Other songs on the Tell Taylor catalog are "Davy Jones and His Monoplane," "The Roses of Erin," "Forty Years Ago," and "Fare Thee Well" (a "toot-toot" song with train whistle).

Frank Clark, who is business manager for Ted. Snyder (at the "Busy Corner"), reports that business is all that could be desired. I don't remember if he put it just that way, now that I come to think of it, for there is no limit to our desire for good business, but a long steady look at the "Busy Corner" salesrooms will convince anybody that the Ted. Snyder Co is doing about all they can conveniently be handled in its present quarters. One of their best new numbers is "The Rag-time Violin," which promises much. "Mysterious Rag" is still scoring heavily and is being featured by Lou Butler and Tom Hanley and others. "At One o'Clock in the Morning" and "You've Got Me Hypnotized" are two new ones that are making good at present and "My Bill from Louisville" is attracting attention. You want to notice these songs; you'll have to sing them to be "in the swim" this season. Another that will soon be ready for you is called "Everybody Doing It" and from what they tell me nearly everybody will be doing it (the song) before long.

Thompson and Company (145 N. Clark Street) are putting out a new ballad from which they are expecting great things. It is entitled "In My Dreams That the Moon Brings of You," words by Jos. Lyons and music by Chas. McKelvey. It is just a little different from the usual run of "moon" songs and has an inviting swing that ought to carry it across. Maud Webb (she of the gorgeous voice) sang it at the Orpheum last week and managed to take encores even from the early audiences of milkmen. Thompson & Co. also have another number which it would be worth your while to look up. This is called "Let Me Know a Day Before," and is from the pens of Casper Nathan (Lyrics) and Jimmie V. Monaco (music) and will be just the thing for those liking a slow "rag" song. Notice the catchy little lilt:

"If you should get a feelin' that you want to come and see me
—Just let me know—A day before.
I'll send the folks away so you'll have lots of time to love me,
—But let me know—A day before.
I'll show you 'round the flat, we'll have a cozy chat,
Then we can dine at nine and, honey, after that,
Oh, we'll 'let everybody be forgot till the milkman's at the door'
Just say you'll keep mum, if I let you come,
But let me know a day before."

There is a suggestion of "Auld Lang Syne" in this chorus that is certain to make them raise up and listen the first time they hear it and join in the second time.

EASTMAN COMPANY GIVES IN.

Under threat of prosecution by the government, the Eastman Kodak Company of Rochester, N. Y., has decided to sell its unpatented goods to all dealers and remove restrictions on the sale of paper and plates. Details of the change of policy have just been learned.

The independent dealers in the country have been fighting the Eastman concern many years. They declared the Rochester company restricted sales to agents and agreements have been produced by retailers in which it was distinctly stipulated that if the dealer attempted to handle goods to compete with Eastman products it would not sell to the dealer.

They charged that not only did the Eastman company sell only to a restricted number, but dictated the prices at which the product should be sold, taking the position that the goods were under its direction until they had passed into the hands of the consumer.

The new policy of the company is resulting in a big cut in the price of photographic paper. Attorney-General Wickersham, after the recent trust decisions, communicated with the Eastman Company, informing it that its restrictions on its unpatented articles were contrary to law.

The dealers will now be permitted to handle independent papers, although they are still prohibited from selling cameras and films which have heretofore been boycotted. Independent dealers will be forced to purchase the Eastman products through Eastman dealers, as the concern will refuse to sell them direct.—New York Times.

HISTORY OF THE TYPEWRITER IN PICTURES.

Pathe Freres have undertaken to depict in moving pictures the evolution of the typewriter from the days of William Sholes. The pictures will show the first rude models made by Mr. Sholes in the early days in his little workshop at Kenosha, Wis. By steps the progress of the great invention will lead up to the present methods of typewriter manufacture, showing the great factories turning them out by thousands.

MISS RUTH ROLAND.

It seems to be a happy faculty of the picture scouts of the Kalem Company to pick pretty girls from among the aspirants for picture fame. Among the latest acquisitions is that of Miss Ruth Roland, now a member of the No. 2 California Company, under the direction of P. C. Hartigan. Miss Roland began early to develop histronic ability. While but a child of three years she was known in Australia, Honolulu and along the Pacific Coast as the child actress. She is now nineteen years of age, and quite a beauty as well as a capable actress. Her accomplishments especially fit her for picture work, for she is a capable horsewoman, a good swimmer and an adept with the foils.

NEW RULES FOR STANDEES.

In accordance with the views of Mayor Gaynor of New York, the "standee" ordinance adopted by the aldermen has been amended so that it provides for keeping the aisles clear in all places of amusement. Certain spaces behind the orchestra seats will be marked by tape which can be easily broken and the tape will keep the standees from encroaching on the aisles. In this shape it is understood the ordinance will be signed by the mayor and it will go into immediate effect.

The new ordinance also makes it mandatory for proprietors of theaters to protect all lights with glass coverings; they must provide fire alarm apparatus, have fire prevention appliances, and notify the city officials of accidents.

The Fire Commissioner is ordered to detail two men where machinery and scenery are used, and these men will have control of employees and fire apparatus.

EXHIBITORS ASK FOR CURFEW.

Moving picture exhibitors of Milwaukee, Wis., at a meeting of a city council committee, came out with a request for a nine o'clock curfew. This was offered as a substitute for a bill pending to keep children out of picture theaters after 9 p. m. The exhibitors claim that children do not always go straight home, but loiter about and blame their late homecoming upon the shows.

A unique military and historical parade has just been held in Trier, Germany, in which were shown all the military costumes used in the German Army since the 9th century. A thousand years of development is an important study from any standpoint. This picture presents an interest unusual and peculiar to itself. It was included in Pathe's Weekly.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT.

FROM the Elite Theater, Cape Town, South Africa, comes the first contribution to this department from the southern continents. The advertising is a single page, 5 x 8, carrying six advertisements and the ten number program, which, by the way, runs for an entire week. Six Edisons, a Kalem, a Pathe and an Ambrosio make up the bill. No data is sent with the bill, but it is to be presumed that the advertising more than pays for the publication and it is evidence that South Africa is lined up on the side of "outside" advertising.

Starting In Right.

Harry G. Waldron, who started the Langdon and Electric theaters in Langdon, N. D., a year ago, sends in copies of his opening announcement in proof of his interest in this department, which he finds of value in his work. The announcement is an eight-sheet railroad style folder. The railroad style folds together like a time table instead of being paged as a book. The matter is so well planned that we regret that we cannot give it in full in these pages, but in a later letter Mr. Waldron writes that he will be glad to send a copy to any exhibitor who encloses a stamped, self addressed envelope. It will be most useful to those about to open a house, but there is much that is available generally. We particularly commend the frank fashion in which Mr. Waldron deals with the subject of fire risk. Instead of a sweeping statement that there is no danger of fire he explains why there is none in language that the child can understand. The best way to stop a panic is by educating your audience and this text does precisely that. It is so good that this portion is given entire, with the suggestion that it may profitably be used as standing matter by those who have space in their programs.

The exits are ample and wide enough to empty the house in less than a minute should fire danger threaten. The electrical apparatus used in the production of the picture, and all the parts of the projection machine are carefully guarded and arranged to reduce fire risk in this theater to a minimum. The entire operating room is sheet iron lined and nearly air tight, making it absolutely fireproof. The danger of fire from the projection machine is greatly overestimated. The film is of celluloid and of course, inflammable. The light rays, focused upon the film when stationary are intense enough to set it on fire in about 15 to 20 seconds. An automatic shutter on the machine, operated by a centrifugal governor, allows the light to strike the film only when at full speed. When the speed is slackened, the shutter drops. An accidental stop would never cause a film fire. In addition to this there is another shutter operated by hand. The machine used is an Edison Underwriters Model, the one approved by the New York Fire Underwriters as being entirely safe in every respect. It meets the most rigid requirements of insurance inspectors. If the light is intentionally directed upon the film, by shutter being held up by hand, the film, after a short exposure, will burn, but only the small spot exposed to the light will be destroyed. The air tight metal springs which press the film smoothly over the opening, prevent the fire from running along the film. The films while on the machine, are enclosed in metal cases. When not in use, they are kept in covered tin boxes. The entire reel of film is only about 1¼ inches in width, by 10 inches in diameter. Were this to be deliberately burned in this operating room, the chances are no one in the theater would know it. The room is ventilated to the exterior and the exit is swung outward and self-closing by a strong spring. There is not one chance in a thousand of burning a film and if a film were burned there is no danger of smoke or fire in the theater.

Other sections deal with the making of pictures, their showing, the immensity of the field covered, the intentions of the management and a description of the house. There isn't a line of bluff or brag in the entire sheet.

Some Lantern Slide Hints.

Mr. Waldron also writes:

"In one of your recent issues you mention announcement slides made by coating clear glass. There is nothing to compare with a Seed or other brand of dry plate 3¼ by 4¼. Cut off ¼ of the length and you have the standard size slide. With a fine, hard point, you can write readily. These can be kept on hand, cut in the right size and can be used as fast as you can write. I use these to announce all features, hours, prices, changes of show, in fact, everything. In addition I use a good many to carry local merchants' ads. A colored slide can't be made in time to announce special sales so I use the written announcement. In addition I have a stock of humorous slides I made by transferring the design to the plate by carbon paper then scratching the plate. The plates cost 45c. a dozen, retail."

It is pointed out to Mr. Waldron that he pays the cost of plates carefully coated and sensitized when an unsensitized plate would do as well and would not cost as much. More than this, a scratched gelatine plate can be used but a single time, where the plate coated with opaque can be used over and over again, requiring only to be recoated with the medium. For fifty cents a sufficient quantity may be had to coat a couple of hundred plates, it keeps perfectly, does not discolor on exposure to light as the unfixed sensitized slide is apt to do and it gives better results in that the latter is a clear white against a black ground and not white on gray. Cartoons can be transferred to the opaque slide as well as to the dry plate, a carbon sheet not being required, and anything Mr. Waldron says he can do with the dry plate can be done with the opaqued slide at the cost of less than a cent.

Uses for the Gelatine Plate.

But some things can be done with a gelatine plate that cannot be done with opaque, and one of these things is the colored slide that Mr. Waldron says cannot be done. To use a fresh plate for this work where the photographic process is not employed is to waste money. Any photographer has a stock of old or spoiled negatives he will sell at what they will bring for glass. Usually these are scratched so that use may not be made of the portrait, but for a small extra charge he will bleach the plate with corrosive sublimate until the silver image vanishes and there remains only the milky white gelatine coating. It might be well to harden the coating with a formaldehyde bath, if this was not done in the first place.

These plates are usually from 5 x 7 or 8 x 10 inches, according to the work. They can be cut down with a glass cutter or the local glazier will do it with his diamond. With the plates cut down to size you have a stock of blanks that may be put to various uses.

Ringing the Changes.

For quick work stain some of the slides. A ten-cent package of dye made up into a strong bath, into which the plates are dipped and left a moment, will provide a variety of colors. Etching with a hard point—what hardware dealers call a "scriber" is just the thing for this—will give a white letter on a colored ground. Writing with a crowquill pen and waterproof drawing ink will give black letters, but this will take slightly longer to dry, unless your carrier will protect the face of the slide from being rubbed when a single glass is employed.

These plates are usually from 5 x 7 or 8 x 10 inches, according to the want to make cartoon slides, outline the figures and work in the colors, using Revoli tints or Japanese color books. Very fine brushes will be required, but a little practise will permit you to do work that will compare favorably with the professional work. The coloring outfit will cost anywhere from half a dollar to a dollar and a half, including brushes.

For rush announcements of tradesmen get up a stock of colored blanks in your leisure time, colored borders, designs, cartoons or what you will. Leave a blank space for the lettering and you'll find yourself with a stock of slides that will be welcomed by the audience instead of being greeted with a sigh. The coloring is simple if you follow directions.

Getting More Elaborate.

If it's worth your while to go into the slide end elaborately make a camera obscura, place the slide blank on the ground glass and you will be able to copy any drawing instead of being confined to those pictures which are of a size to be transferred by the direct process. If you have a hand camera with a lens that will unscrew, get a new lens collar from the maker and use that for the camera obscura. If you haven't a lens you can get one good enough for a dollar or two.

Hang up the picture to be copied where a bright light will strike it, then move the camera backward or forward until the picture on the blank is just right. The closer your lens comes to the picture the larger it will be, the further away you get the smaller will be the reduction. You'll be surprised and delighted with the results you will be able to get.

For a quarter or more you can get a rubber stamp outfit, in which you can use the movable types to form any line you wish. Use "gold size," to be had of the printer, instead of the inking pad, dust over with cheap aluminum bronze and you have an opaque letter, rather ragged in outline, but effective. It is best to spread the size thinly on a sheet of glass with a printer's roller, to avoid getting too much size on the stamp. The hand inkers sold with toy presses will be just the thing, and the cost is trifling. Colored inks may also be used.

A Clock Slide.

Many houses use a clock slide to inform the audience as to the time. Usually the slide is a blank clock dial and the hands are painted in each time the slide is used. A better way is to have the clock face painted neatly and then get a set of clock hands from the local jeweler. With a rat-tail file, wet in a solution of camphor gum and turpentine, you can make a hole in the center of the glass, into which the hands may be set. Then all you have to do is to move the hands to correspond to the operator's watch. By lettering the name and address of the local jeweler on the clock face you can make the slide show a profit. Get a file with a point slightly smaller than the stems of the hands and work the taper of the file down until you get the exact diameter. Experiment with a piece of plain glass first and you'll be astonished at the ease with which holes may be bored.

For an investment of from fifty cents to five dollars you will be able to make almost as good a set of slides as can be had from the professional makers, you can make them for a cent or so apiece and get them in a hurry when you are in a hurry for them.

Photographic Lantern Slides.

If you work with a camera and can do your own developing, there is an interesting field in the photographic lantern slide. At one time the writer had a lantern slide camera, using his view camera lens. Camera was made from an old shoe box. It was rather clumsy, but it did good work and the total cost was fifteen cents for materials.

You can get the regular lantern slide plate cut to exact size, coated with a slow emulsion, and when the plate is dry it can be tinted very nicely. The photographic slide is useful in running contests in which the patrons are required to locate bits of scenery, pick out the greatest number of people in a group photograph made on some busy street, or some similar test. It is always an effective bid for business, for the shopkeeper might "fall for" a slide of his place of business where the lettered slide would not appeal to him. The photographic slide is only for the experienced camera man, but he can make good use of his opportunities.

A Waste of Gold Leaf.

We shall have to scold the Tenth Street Theater just this once. The Kansas City house has set the pace for a number of other photoplay theaters in various parts of the country, but the program for the week commencing November 5 does not show an effective trick. It is the familiar combination of green and gold, but a "lemon" gold instead of a deep gold is used that is a lemon in a double sense. A lemon gold is almost the color of a tow-headed boy's hair and as it is printed directly over the green you have to hold the cover in certain lights to read the title by refraction. If the editor of the program will look at the back page and see how much more effectively the white title of the Palace Theater stands out, we are certain that he will sin no more.

A Prose Poet.

Burr Swan, of the Pittsfield (Ill.) Opera House, takes a whole column in the local paper for advertising a special attraction, and this is how he starts:

upon the above date
I will separate my self from one hundred and twenty-five dollars on a gamble that there are more than 250 people in Pittsfield and nearby territory who will pay 50c each to listen to a musical program that I believe will be thoroughly enjoyable, really the best thing of its sort ever heard in Pittsfield.

If you picked up that paper would you lay it down until you had read the last line? And reading it, wouldn't this sound attractive?

I am assured that while these folks are sure-enough top-notchers in their line, they combine a sufficiency of common-sense to present a program that even us common-folk will enjoy.

He explains his actions in the same W. J. Lampton style of prose poetry, by saying: "I am paying them 125, as I said, because several folks who have always been my friends, assured me that the Gamble Concert Party was the best ever." He doesn't make the flat statement, but puts it up to his friends, not quoting the press notices, of which he says he was given two basketfuls. It's a snappy, meaty ad from start to finish and so uniquely worded that it is a thousand times more effective than columns of puffery would be. It's a cinch that he got his "125" back. When a man who can advertise like that goes after money he is pretty apt to get it, if it's in the town. It's not the sort of thing that can be done seven days a week, but it's probable that the rest of the Swan advertising shows the same original touch. We should like to see more of it.

Making a Name.

W. A. Wesley, of the Gardner Theater, Gardner, Mass., which is owned by Henocksburg Brothers and Wesley, but managed by the latter, writes:

I read with much interest to-day in your issue of November 18th, your Advertising for Exhibitors, I have a distinctive trade mark "Wesley Says So," and I am very careful that when I say so "it's so," I have a style of my own in advertising that I think gets the business; anyway since coming to Gardner I have doubled the business, I got a twenty line reader regarding my moving pictures every day in the Gardner News. I am sending you some of my ads. Every woman in Gardner is a coupon clipper and I get as high as 200 some days, which proves my ads are read.

Pressure on the space of this department has prevented an earlier comment on Mr. Wesley's letter, but it's better late than never, and he sends a very interesting batch of stuff.

The coupons to which he alludes are coupons which admit to the matinees at five cents. It's just another way of making a five-cent matinee in a ten cent house and making the patrons think it's a reduction. The advertisements reproduced here are displayed, one or two words to the line as in the Swan advertising. Each carries the name of the theater and "Wesley says so." These will give an idea of his style:

"Diamond Ring Free Friday Night. This Advertisement and 5c admits anyone to a Matinee of Moving Pictures." "Silver Loving Cup Free Wednesday Night, Valued at $25.00. Souvenir afternoon Wednesday. This ad and 5c admits anyone to a Matinee of Moving Pictures and Vaudeville." "Free Thursday Night, Nov. 16th., Four Burner Gas Stove from the Gardner Gas, Fuel & Light Co. Enameled Oven, Baking, Broiler and Drip Pan."

He always uses a border to throw up the reading matter.

And His Picture, Too.

He apparently believes in carrying the personality appeal straight through, for his daily bill carries a half-tone of himself on each issue. A quotation from one of the bills explains his reason. He says:

"I haven't got my picture on this advertisement to show you I am a handsome man, because I am not. It is a guarantee that you are going to see just what I advertise; you are going to see an all-feature Picture Show and if after you have seen it all and are not satisfied, I will refund your money."

In a small town personality counts for much, and the free use of the cut is not a sign of vanity. The face and "Wesley says so" combine to form a valuable trademark because, as he explains, if he says so he makes it so. He doesn't rave, but he writes attractive, pulling stuff, and he backs it up with his personal guarantee. The people realize that he is banking on this guarantee and that it is worth more than an occasional boom through misstatement, so when Wesley says so they believe—and business has doubled. That's the answer.

FOR SALE.—Several prints of a moving picture showing labor heroes being kidnapped from their happy homes by detectives. Nearly new. Good reasons for selling. Apply to Sam Gompers, Washington, D. C.

MR. HARRY F. CAMPBELL.

By Henry.

A man of considerable popularity and ability is Mr. Harry F. Campbell, who is at present manager of the Boston Film Rental Company, which deals in independent pictures and owes much of its present flowing condition to its present manager.

MR. HARRY F. CAMPBELL.

Mr. Campbell's experience covers a wide field in catering to the public, and his experience in handling large New England football games and skating rinks is of inestimable value to him in his present field of endeavor.

As manager of large college athletic events, Mr. Campbell gained his first experience in the handling of great crowds. His first experience was a signal success and from that time on he was much in demand by New England colleges.

The football season being comparatively short, he, during the winter months, turned his attention toward the skating rink business. From the skating rink business it was a natural step into the theatrical field and for several years past Mr. Campbell has devoted considerable time to all three vocations.

For four seasons, beginning 1901, Mr. Campbell managed the football games for Dartmouth and Brown universities. Then followed a period of one year's training which he took with the firm of N. W. Ayer & Sons, the great Philadelphia advertising firm, in order to perfect himself as an advertising man. The three seasons following, 1905 to 1907, found him again in the skating rink business, after which he was called to the management of the Star Theater in Boston, where he remained until April, 1910. Mr. Campbell left the Star to take up the management of the Savoy Theater, in Boston, and remained there until he purchased the Princess, Marlboro, Mass., and launched into business for himself. While still the owner of the Princess, Mr. Campbell took advantage of an opportunity of entering into the film rental business when he accepted an offer to manage the Boston Film Rental Company, where he is at present devoting his energies.

During his few years' connection with the photoplay business, he has been of great help to the New England exhibitors through his untiring efforts in matters involving legislation both for and against the pictures. So well did he account for himself in these activities that he was elected president of the Massachusetts Progress Company, an organization of exhibitors banded together for mutual protection and improvement.

Mr. Campbell expects shortly to open another photoplay house in a Massachusetts city. His policy is: the best Independent service and no vaudeville. In every way Mr. Campbell is a man whose connections with Motography are a credit to the business.

DREAMLAND THEATER, TIPTON, IND.

The Dreamland Theater, Tipton, Ind., sends us some interesting photos which unfortunately will not stand reduction, otherwise we would gladly print them. One of them shows the children's special Friday matinee. The Friday matinee is a special program, especially for children. It takes place after school on Fridays, and children only are admitted. The picture shows a large juvenile audience, and at a casual glance it would appear to be an immense Sunday school. The Friday matinee is very popular and has the endorsement of parents and teachers. The other photo shows Mr. R. F. Lavin, manager of Dreamland, piloting an automobile float. It represents a battleship, with conning towers, turrets and protruding guns. The automobile is hidden by the battleship framework in a very clever manner. This device was used during the recent horse show in Tipton and proved a clever advertisement. A banner between the two conning towers reads "The good ship Tipton, bound for Dreamland, Tipton's most popular playhouse."

"It is with pain and more or less apprehension," laments George Fitch, of the Peoria Herald Transcript, "we discover that no new garages nor moving picture theaters have been established in Peoria for over a week."

The SCENARIO WRITER

CONDUCTED BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

CREDIT FOR AUTHORS.

The Edison Company First to Give Credit to Promising Writers—Not All Names Yet Used.

COMING as a sort of Christmas present to the ambitious scenario writer is the news that the Edison Company has commenced the practice of giving credit to the author on the film title where, in the opinion of its editor, this credit is deserved.

No announcement has been made by the Edison Company, but the other afternoon in the Edison studios some new films were being run off for the benefit of Mr. Horace G. Plimpton, manager of negative production, and one of the films bore the name of an author unknown to fame. The question followed:

"It was not my intention to announce the new departure," explained Mr. Plimpton, "but I have no objection to the statement being made that where the work of the author seems to warrant it, he will be given credit for his work.

"Many of the films purchased contain but the bare suggestion of a plot which must be worked out here in the studio and in such a case we do not believe that the use of the writer's name is warranted, since the bulk of the work is not his, but there are some promising writers who are now reaching the stage where their work requires little more than a technical editing and in such cases we believe that the writer is entitled to the encouragement that the use of his name will give him. It it more or less in the nature of an experiment, but we give credit to men like Richard Harding Davis, Roy Norton, Thomas W. Hanshew and others whose copyrighted work we have produced, so why not give similar credit to those less well known?"

The subject of giving credit to the author is a matter that has been agitated ever since the making of scenarios passed beyond the walls of the studio and the general author was invited to submit his work. In the earlier stages of scenario writing it was seldom, if ever, that the outside writer possessed sufficient familiarity with the technique of the studio and the photoplay to contribute more than the skeleton of the idea and the changes required were so numerous and so radical that the use of credit was out of the question.

But scenario writers have kept pace with the advancement of the business in general. The widespread distribution of instruction sheets by the manufacturers, the publication of books and the inauguration of correspondence schools have all served to educate the writer of scenarios, the Moving Picture World having contributed importantly to this advancement. It is now possible to obtain scenarios which are practical and, with its usual kindly interest in the scenario writer, the Edison Company is the first to give full recognition. It is only a question of months when this example will be followed by others. Already the Selig Company is giving credit to its producers, and occasionally to others on the bulletin announcements, but the Edison credit goes directly upon the film.

It has been objected by some that the use of the author's name will enable him to demand more for his work, once he has established a reputation, but since the manufacturers are in a position to regulate the payments, this is not seriously to be feared, though some few writers may arrive at a personal appreciation of the value of the old West Indian proverb that states that "greedy eye chokes puppy."

The Matter of Protection.

A CORRESPONDENT writes the Western Bureau of the Moving Picture World as follows:

> "Having been interested (in my mind) for a long while in writing scenarios or picture plays, and having no encouragement from different companies who wish to obtain the required amount of money for the course of studies and the plays other than this purpose, so far as I can learn, I decided to appeal to you for information.
>
> "There is no recourse, one's ideas are being used, in my mind, and that without remedy. I should like very much to avail myself of the opportunity of trying to write a play, but not until I have a better understanding of the management. One cannot patent a play."

There is more to the letter, but enough is quoted to give the attitude of the correspondent who, instead of locking the stable door after the horse is stolen, wants to buy a padlock before she decides to buy a horse.

Since her attitude is the attitude of many others, space is given here to the mental scenario writer. But, before taking up the matter of protection, it is pointed out that the correspondence school to which she probably makes allusion is a business and not a charitable institution. It professes only to teach the author how to put ideas into practical form. The author must furnish the idea. So far as appears from the experience of its pupils, the school performs what it promises. But since the applicant wishes to pass from the mental to the physical stage of scenario writing without the aid of a school, the following course is suggested:

The Essanay, Kalem, Lubin and Vitagraph companies offer to send instruction sheets to those whose application is accompanied by a stamped and addressed return envelope. These slips contain practical hints for the guidance of the would-be author. They also offer examples of scenario form to be followed.

Get one or more of these and study the style. Then map out your ideas. Write them (typewrite them if at all possible), and send them to some company making that style of play. Send a stamped return envelope that you may receive the manuscript back in the event of its not being found suitable, and then wait a month or six weeks before you write to ask why you do not get some reply. As a general thing the longer a manuscript stays in an office the more probable is its acceptance, because the delay argues that the script has been sent to one of the directors and the editor is waiting his decision.

If your story comes back and the company presently makes a play just like yours, don't send them any more. But don't decide that they took your idea just because they put out a story about a man who wants to marry a girl and her father doesn't like him, so they elope. Maybe someone else has written the same thing. Studio experience shows that about twenty-five people make up a story with that base every week. Perhaps it was one of the other twenty-four that was made into picture.

Don't charge petit larceny until you can show that your unique combination of incident has been appropriated bodily. A suspicious mind is a poor asset for a scenario writer and if you start out with the belief that all you are going to write is going to be stolen by a thieving band of picture makers you will not succeed. Set out with a decent belief in the honesty of men and then fool the possible thieves by making your story so strongly original that it can't be stolen without betraying that fact. If you keep at it until you can write that sort of story you'll probably be surprised to find that there are more checks than thieves in the scenario business.

The woman who has written the story about the little girl who was stolen by the gypsies regards the theme as her personal property because she just thought of it, but the scenario reader recognizes, if he does not welcome it as an old friend—and sends it straight back home.

Even the most original ideas are apt to be duplicated in substance if not in detail, but if you write really original stuff and send it out with a fair mind you won't have to worry about getting your story copyrighted or "patented" or anything else. You've hall-marked it with the stamp of cleverness and that's better protection than a copyright.

Go at the work with an open mind and you'll find that you'll get fair treatment if you really have something to sell, but just because you've written a story does not make it impossible that the story should have been written before and perhaps better done; so send out only your best and be certain that the best is good. The trouble is that nine-tenths of the stuff that comes to the desk of the scenario editor is trash or so hackneyed that there isn't a company in the country that hasn't at some time done something like it.

If you buckle down to work with the intention of making your stories individual and distinctive, you'll probably gain a greater protection than the Library of Congress can afford you under the present laws.

The Use of the Leader.

FEW beginners appear to have any idea as to the proper use of leader. Most of them seem to regard the leader in much the same light as the word or two descriptive of the chapter which is used under the heading in some books and, whether or no, they put in a leader about every so often; sometimes before every scene.

Some few go to the opposite extreme and leave the leaders out even where they are required, but the majority of the offenses are in the line of useless material.

Practically every instruction sheet issued by the manufacturing companies carries the definite statement that leaders should be used only when necessary and then sparingly, but the novice, eager to make the script look like the work of the practiced, is apt to overdo the matter.

One thing that cannot be pictured is the passage of time. This always calls for a leader where the action is advanced in hours, days, months or years, and it is necessary to the story to explain just how long the interval is supposed to be. If it is the next day and the story would be as good if it was the next week, it is not necessary to say it's the next day. Let the spectator think what he will so long as it doesn't hurt the story. But suppose that we've seen a will which decrees that the hero must be married within ten days or lose a million dollars, more or less. Now it may be necessary to date the scenes. Say it's the third day or the eighth day or the last day and the situation will become clear, but don't say "The eighth day. John goes out for a walk before breakfast and is refused for the tenth time." Say "The eighth day and the tenth rejection." You've shortened the leader and you've gained a suggestion of comedy, because ten refusals in eight days is going some even in the pictures. Now we get what happens on the ninth day and the grandstand finish on the tenth. In the same way you work the passage of years. "After many years" is smoother than "After six years," but you may want to show just how many years have elapsed. In the smaller divisions there is greater scope. "In the morning," "The morning after," "With the next day's sun," and similar phrases may be exchanged for the conventional "The next day" to good effect. Try to be just a little different, but not so startlingly original that you use up too many feet of film.

But the explanatory leader is the real test of cleverness and here is the one point in photoplay writing that displays the literary skill. Most new writers are apt to think that anything that covers the situation will do, but the careful writer will spend more time over the leaders than over any other portion of the script. Make it a matter of trying to convey the fullest possible information in the fewest number of words while retaining grace of phrase. Not just the fewest words nor the most fluent expression, but a combination of the two. Suppose that the first thought is "The next day. Jim bitterly regrets his unwise action." Obviously this is too long for the importance of the statement so you cut to: "Next day. Jim is sorry." That's short enough, but it scratches the ears. Try it again. Perhaps you'll hit something like "The morrow brings repentance," and let it go at that.

The last use of the leader is to "break" scenes; to act as a sort of drop curtain to the picture. You wind up scene seven with eight people on the stage and, for some reason, you must hold them there. In scene eight you want two of those people on the scene as it starts. If there is no leader you get the rather curious effect of six people and the walls of the house facing away to show the other two players standing in the set. You may not need a leader to explain the situation or mark the "break" but you do need a leader to act as a curtain while the useless players make their exits and the scenery is shifted. Three seconds will be time enough. Keep the leader to as many words, but make it pertinent.

If you do not need to explain the situation or mark the time or "break" the scene you do not need a leader. If one or all of those three things must be done, you need a leader, but no more leader than you can help.

Writing Comedy Action.

THERE is an established superstition of the stage that the comedy that makes the actors laugh will not "get over" to the audience and the manager who hears sounds of mirth at rehearsal looks gloomy and does not share the smile.

It's pretty much the same with the comedy scenario. If it is so written that it gets the laughs, the humor is used up before it is passed on to the film. You've written a funny script, but it's not probable that you've written a funny play. This is not to be taken as meaning that the play that sounds deadly dull is going to be good comedy, but good comedy

Let it be you aim to write what will look funny rather than what merely sounds funny. The idea must be there, but in its outworking if you take pains to make it sound diverting, the chances are that you are losing sight of the action in the phrasing of that action.

In a humorous story you must make the words describe the action and since the action will not appear, the words describing the action must indicate the humor. It must be humorously phrased to win the laughs since the description of the action is all the reader gets. In the scenario the action is written in for the benefit of the producer and it is enough that the action is fully described to him. As a general rule the description of comedy action should be more full than the description of the purely dramatic, since the latter requires only that the action shall be guided while in the comedy the action must be more definitely explained as a rule. But at that be careful not to over-write.

In the humorous story you may get a couple of hundred words of humorous writing describing how Jones connects with a banana peel while he is carrying home a fifty cent plaster cast of cupid. You draw a word picture of the banana peel lying in wait for poor Jones, you chronicle his progress down the street, with skill you keep always in the mind of the reader the treacherous peel and the trouble Jones has had thus far. The reader chuckles in anticipation and when you spring your climax and tell how Jones sits up on the sidewalk with a wrenched back and a sprained temper to regard the several hundred fragments of the god of love, the reader's face is wreathed in smiles.

You can't get a laugh out a director with the plain statement that "Jones comes into picture carrying cast with exaggerated care—he steps on peel, falls—drops cast—sits up to survey the ruins—rubs back, rises and exits limping." That doesn't sound funny, but it's the foundation of a comedy scene. Just how funny the comedian makes his approach and fall is a matter for the actor and the director. All you can do is to show him what to do to get the laugh and trust to luck. If you've given opportunity for humorous action you've done enough. Don't try to establish a reputation as a humorous director with only an editor and director for your audience. It isn't worth while.

Have You a Dicky?

PROBABLY you've heard the story of the canary that was called Dicky until it laid an egg, but do you happen to have a Dicky among your discarded scenarios? Look them over and see, then change the name. There is a lot of stuff sent out as dramatic offerings that work nicely into comedy material and some comedy that might be made over into serious offerings. Of course, there are dramatic stories that are funny and comedies that are no less than tragedies, but we do not mean that sort. At best they are hopeless, but there are many that could be worked over into available scripts if only the puzzled author could see what the matter was.

It was only the other day that a story that started out as a tensely tragic tale of business life, with a frenzied stock market, a jealous husband, a misunderstood wife and all the other components of the thriller, was switched into a ripping little comedy that stands seven times the chance of the more ambitious tale. The author knew there was a story there, but somehow it didn't seem to look just right and he worked over it until every bit of "bounce" was taken from the action and there remained only the dry narrative. Then he shifted the sail and went about on another tack. The foundation was retained, but on this he built some comedy incident, retaining some of the "big" scenes, but making the others over into laughs and, instead of a story weighing a couple of tons, he found himself with a little comedy that should make appeal anywhere.

Suppose, for example, you have the overworked tale of the misjudged wife. Not without reason the husband thinks she is unfaithful. The trouble is that his reason is based on a wrongful conclusion and you drag out the same old story in which she goes out into the cold world with a sad heart and her youngest child. That's a good story; it has been a good story ever since it was first written, but it's just a little ancient. Why not give it a new lease on life and a comedy twist in one operation. Suppose that the mysterious man who skulks out of the alley happens to be the chef at hubby's club, who is supposed to grill kidneys as no one else in the world can. Suppose that the mysterious letter was one she wrote the chef offering to pay him to teach her how to duplicate his culinary performance and that, just as hubby gets ready to put his foot down, in a figurative fashion, he puts it on some deviled kidneys that even the club can't beat. Of course he feels sheepish and being sheepish, in this case, means that Persian lamb coat she has been wanting for so long.

Now you've a comedy instead of a tragedy and you stand a better chance with a comedy, but perhaps you've a comedy that seems to stand no chance because it's really not a "Dicky" at all, but it waiting to lay an egg in the shape of a check if you'll make it into a dramatic story. Give it a nest and a chance.

Making It Probable.

THIS writer overheard a [illegible] of the Great Northern Company. They are told [illegible] plans. Now and then they turn out a real [illegible] might become an improbable fantasie, but the Great Northern directors hold it within the bounds of probability.

The other night a downtown house ran "A Woman's Wit," which hinges on a young matron's extravagance and her husband's objections to her expenditures. In despair he asks the family physician, who is the family friend as well, to give some medicine to cure her of her habits. In an earlier day the film would have gone into the large catalogue of pills and potions that produce unlooked for results, but here the probabilities are saved by having the physician jokingly accept the challenge and write a prescription. The wife, let into the secret, devises a bit of nonsense that abounds in delightful comedy touches and the spectators are led to believe that the medicine actually produces the supposed effects. It's all a joke on the husband, which the audience shares with the pretty wife and the physician. It's something more than a capital comedy; it's a study in making probable the improbable and saving a humorous idea from becoming a tiresome repetition of the inane.

WHERE TO SEND YOUR SCENARIOS.

Having received a large number of inquiries from our readers to furnish them a complete list of manufacturers who are in the market for scenarios, we publish the following list. File this for future reference.

Licensed Manufacturers.

Biograph Company, 11 East 14th Street, New York City.
Thomas A. Edison, Inc., Decatur Avenue and Oliver Place, Bedford Park, Bronx, N. Y.
Essanay Film Mfg. Co., 1333 Argyle Street, Chicago, Ill.
Kalem Company, 235 West 23d Street, New York City.
Lubin Manufacturing Company, 20th and Indiana Avenues, Philadelphia, Pa.
Melies Company, 204 East 38th Street, New York City.
Pathe Freres, 1 Congress Ave. Jersey City Heights N. J.
Selig Polyscope Company, 20 East Randolph St., Chicago.
Vitagraph Company, East 15th Street and Locust Avenue, Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Independent Manufacturers.

American Film Manufacturing Company, Bank Floor, Ashland Block, Chicago, Ill.
Champion Film Company, 145 West 45th Street, New York.
Comet Film Company, 344 East 32d Street, New York City.
Eclair Film Company, 31 East 27th Street, New York City.
Imp Films Company 102 West 101st Street, New York.
New York Motion Picture Company, 1 Union Square, New York City.
Majestic Motion Picture Company, 145 West 45th Street, New York City.
Nestor Film Company, Avenue E, Bayonne, N. J.
Powers Motion Picture Company, 145 West 45th Street, New York City.
Reliance Film Company, 540 West 22d Street, New York.
Republic Film Company, 145 West 54th Street, New York.
Rex Motion Picture Manufacturing Company, 573 Eleventh Avenue, New York City.
Solax Company, Congress Avenue, Flushing, L. I., N. Y.
Thanhouser Company, New Rochelle, N. Y.
The Gem Manufacturing Company, 573 Eleventh Avenue, New York City.
St. Louis Motion Picture Company, 25th and Montgomery, St. Louis, Mo.

FIGHT PICTURES LEGAL IN GERMANY.

News comes from Berlin, Germany, that the German courts have finally decided to permit the public exhibition of the moving picture films showing the Jeffries-Johnson fight, which have been the subject of litigation between the concessionaries and the police authorities for the past year.

The police refused a license on the ground of danger to public order, but the courts, after going into the law of the subject and personally inspecting the pictures, have just decreed that there is no valid ground for suppressing them.

The films will be shown at Unter den Linden cinematograph theater for the first time, Saturday, Dec. 16.

THE VAGARIES OF THE CENSOR.

Word comes from Vancouver, B. C., that the license inspector, who is the official to pass upon the character of various public entertainments offered in that city, has refused to permit the exhibition of "Dante's Inferno" (Helios). In this decision the inspector was backed by an alderman and the judge of the Juvenile Court. It was admitted by the authorities that the picture was good, but that it was not suited to children.

CHICAGO LETTER.

By Jas. S. McQuade.

SEVERAL months ago the Rev. Mr. Harker, of Freeport, Ill., indulged in a tirade against the Sunday picture theater, in which he characterized it as being worse than the Sunday saloon and the brothel. The law of compensation, however, in this case has equalized matters within a short time, for in the same city, about a week ago, a lecture was delivered by Prof. W. T. Hewetson, before the Freeport Woman's Club, in which he showed that the moving picture has become a great force in art, in education and good morals.

Pictures Attract More Than Churches.

"To-day there are approximately 14,000 of these theaters in the United States, the average daily attendance being 5,000,000," said Prof. Hewetson. "One person out of every 20 visits the picture theater every day in the year, and more people visit these shows every week than attend our churches.

"The moving picture has a tremendous educational value. The knowledge we obtain from books is always second hand and often unreal and impractical. It lacks what the French call 'exteriorite.' That which comes through the senses, on the other hand, is likely to be more vital and impressive. Everyone knows the value of travel in broadening the mind and in enlarging the sympathies. To look at good pictures of distant peoples and scenes is to be a stay-at-home traveler, and to enjoy many of the advantages of real travel without its dangers and trials.

Moral Influence of Moving Picture.

"Any discussion of the educational value of moving picture shows must involve a consideration of their moral influence. And here, let me say, that we have to meet the prejudice that existed against the cheap theater before moving picture shows came into existence. The dime theater with its cheap vaudeville artists, its melodrama, its ballet girls and its sensation-hunting crowds was a menace to good morals and an object of just alarm to parents. But the moving picture show belongs in a very different class, and it is gratifying to note that it has well nigh driven these cheap theaters out of existence.

"Mr. Ward, editor of the Independent, thinks that the moving picture drama is on a much higher moral plane than the regular drama. The salacious plays which make up a large percentage of the repertoire of the leading city theaters would not, he says, be tolerated by the frequenters of the five-cent theater. The masses are more moral than the classes."

After explaining the great work done by the National Board of Censorship, of New York, and by the still more rigorous censorship of Chicago to prevent the release of improper films, Prof. Hewetson continued:

"Not only is the opposition on moral grounds to the five-cent theater disappearing, but when properly managed it is beginning to be recognized as a valuable adjunct to the church in the teaching of religious truth. On an island a thousand miles out in the Pacific Ocean the exiled lepers of Molokai gather daily before a moving picture screen that shows them the world of life and joy from which they are so pathetically excluded. Last year the Mayor of New Britain, Conn., endowed a moving picture plant in the South Church of that city. These two incidents speak for themselves and hint at the rare service the cinematograph may render the cause of religion."

Prof. Hewetson concluded by quoting Thomas A. Edison's enduring tribute to the moving picture:

"The motion picture is an important factor in the world's intellectual development. It will have a great uplifting effect on the morality of mankind. It will wipe out various prejudices which are often ignorance. It will create a feeling of sympathy and a desire to uplift the downtrodden peoples of the earth. It will give new ideals to be followed. For these reasons I believe that moving pictures present the right means in the hands of broadminded, intellectual and informed workers for the world's good, for the innocent amusement, efficient instruction, and the moral advance of the great mass of people."

The Freeport Standard is to be commended for giving Prof. Hewetson's interesting lecture in full, the paragraphs quoted forming only a small portion of the matter.

Nickel Theater Permitted for Reform Purposes.

The city council building committee, of Chicago, recently engaged in a novel plan for the reformation of evildoers in a north-side Italian settlement. They have decided to give a permit for a nickel theater in the district, where more than 20 murders have been committed.

The matter was brought to the attention of the committee through Oscar A. Lewis, who applied for a license to start a moving picture theater at 1132 Milton Avenue. "The building belongs to the First Swedish Baptist Congregation," said Lewis. "If we can start this show we can sell the property for the congregation and aid them in building a new church elsewhere. Besides, the show will have an uplifting effect on the people of the district."

"But the floor is seven feet above the sidewalk, a clear violation of the theater ordinance," said one of the committee.

"Church people are the worst offenders in the city in coming here to ask us to violate the law. They're always at it," declared another.

Building Commissioner Ericsson calmed the rising storm by saying that he would assume responsibility for the permit, if it was issued.

"I think this show will teach these people American ways," he said. "I believe we have an opportunity here to do a little missionary work."

Ten Governors Invite Wm. N. Selig.

The governors of Western States, who traveled in a special train throughout Middle Western and Eastern States, directing attention to the resources of and the opportunities in the West, were accompanied by two Selig representatives throughout the tour. An interesting and instructive film will be released in the near future covering the sights and industrial views observed during the trip.

In appreciation of his enterprise, the following letter has been received by Mr. Selig, signed by the governors of Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, Montana Washington, Oregon and Nevada:

"We wish to take this opportunity of thanking you for the interest you have displayed in sending representatives on the Governors' Special Train, in its mission of exploiting the Western country, and we wish to extend to you an invitation to send representatives through our respective States to make motion pictures of the industries of our State.

"We assure you that every facility will be afforded your representatives to secure the best that our State can preduce, and we personally will be more than pleased to render all the assistance necessary within our power.

"Trusting that you will see your way clear to accept this invitation, believe me, etc."

Japanese Murderer Gets Life Sentence.

Frank Minematsu, the Japanese porter-gardner, who shot and killed Francis Boggs, general manager of the Selig Polyscope Company's Western plant, and severely wounded Wm. N. Selig, has been found guilty of murder in the first degree by a jury and recommended for life imprisonment. He will end his days in San Quentin. The Jap on hearing his sentence begged to be hanged instead, so that the sentence imposed will best serve the ends of justice.

Wm. N. Selig left Chicago Thursday evening, December 7, to attend the trial, and returned Sunday, December 16.

Chicago Film Brevities.

G. M. Anderson, secretary of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, arrived in Chicago from the West, Friday, December 15. He left on the 20th Century December 18th for New York, where he will spend a few days. Mr. Anderson will remain in Chicago until after the Christmas holidays. The Essanay Western company is still quartered at San Rafael, Cal.

* * *

"Broncho Bill's Christmas Dinner," one reel by Essanay, will be released Dec. 23rd. This is an exciting Western drama, produced by Mr. Anderson, in which he has a prominent part. It is full of exciting incidents. The remarkable feat of Mr. Anderson in boarding a runaway stage from the saddle of his horse, which is going at full speed, is acknowledged a marvelous performance. Exhibitors who have seen a private exhibition of the film declare it one of the best that has come from the West for a long time. Miss Fisher, who appears in the leading role, as the college girl returning home for Christmas dinner, had her ankle broken in the taking of this film, and actually proceeded to take her part through the three following scenes while enduring great agony. "Broncho Bill" will appeal to all lovers of Western drama.

* * *

A beautiful de luxe edition of the dramatic story of "Cinderella," consisting of 115 copies, has been published by Wm.

N. Selig. The story, which is copyrighted, is by Henry Kitchell Webster. One copy of the book will be presented to each Licensed exchange and to manufacturers as a souvenir of the release of the big Selig subject.

* * *

The Savoy Theater, Evansville, owned and managed by J. R. Brannen, the pioneer exhibitor of that city, was opened last Thanksgiving Day. The Savoy is considered the most up-to-date picture theater in the State. The capacity is a little over 500. A daily change of pictures is made, two reels being used. The General Film Co.'s branch at 117 N. Dearborn Street furnishes the service.

* * *

Miss Martha Russell, formerly leading lady of Essanay's Eastern stock company, is now traveling through the South lecturing on Essanay pictures in which she appeared, and which are being exhibited during her lectures. Charles C. Pyle is her manager. It is the intention of Miss Russell and her manager to visit Havana and other points in Cuba after finishing in the South and before returning North.

* * *

"Big" Otto, the caretaker of Selig's Wild Animals, arrived in Los Angeles last week with four baggage cars containing lions, tigers, leopards, jaguars, camels, wolves, etc., and the big elephant. The animals required transportation in a steam-heated car. Three freight cars containing the horses, ponies and properties are now on the way. A series of great animal pictures, eclipsing, it is said, even the first sensational animal subjects, will be started right away.

Among Chicago Houses.

By Charles A. Young.

NORTH Avenue, always a live wire in the picture field, attracted my attention some time ago because of the number of two-reel productions released by the Independents, which were all shown first run on this street. Projection in all the shows is of superior quality, as the operators all have the advantage of direct current for their projection arcs. One singular thing I noticed was that each house has a different machine from its neighbors, there being no two alike.

Sittner's Theater, on North near Sedgwick, was the first house I visited, as when I asked at the H. & H. exchange for the first run booking on the Eclair "Hands Across the Sea" I was directed to this house. The theater is a large hall, seating 1,100, situated on the third floor. This means that there must be a good show, as Mr. Sittner said, to bring the people upstairs, and there is a show there which will compare favorably with the average Chicago house. The picture shown is about 20 feet wide at a throw of 125 feet, and is remarkably steady and well lighted for so large a picture. The work of the Motiograph may be seen at its best here, in a very steady picture for such magnification, and very free from flicker, though the time given to each reel is 16 to 18 minutes. Operator Tiedemann handled his light very well. The work of Miss Walling at the piano was excellent, and she receives a high compliment in the fact that Mr. Clarence E. Sinn, editor of the Music Department of the World, who is himself a working picture pianist, finds enjoyment in hearing her accompaniment to the pictures. The service supplied by the H. & H. Film Service is of the very highest quality, two first runs a day being used.

Janet Theater.

The Janet Theater next claimed my attention, and I found fine first-run service here also, supplied by the Laemmle Film Service. Manager Harry Hyman is well satisfied with his business, so much so that he is running matinees every day. I saw the Ambrosio production, "The Golden Wedding," here on its release day, and it made a great hit, after two two-reel subjects had been shown on the preceding two days. But it is a superb film, and deserves the first prize it won at the Turin exposition. This film was well played by Mrs. Knause at the piano, who has one of the best "hurry" numbers I have heard, making the situation tense without being monotonous enough to wear on the nerves. Drummer Cozescke is also a good picture accompanist. He surprised me a little in the running of the Comet's first release, "The Office Boy's Dream," by supplying the click of the typewriter in one scene, but I would suggest for his information that the bell on a machine rings as the end of a line is reached, not as the carriage is returned to the starting point.

The operating staff at the Janet includes Wm. E. Smith, chief operator, and Louis Henning, assistant. A Standard machine is used, which puts a picture of very high quality on the mirror screen in this house. The operating room is very good, fully complying with all fire department regulations, and Mr. Hyman's only regret is that he has not room enough for another projecting machine. The success of the Janet is only due to the things which any high-class house has—first-class films and good projection, with the accessories of good music and effects.

Ideal Theater.

The Ideal Theater, George Gilmore's well-known house, was the next I visited. Licensed service is used here, of course, with first and second runs for the first two reels. Projection is very good, the screen being of aluminum of Mr. Gilmore's own devising, and very free from the haze and shadows so many aluminum screens have, and Operator Gustave Burgard puts a well-nigh perfect picture on it, though but 27 amperes are used to cover a 20-foot picture. Mr. Gilmore showed me his original film cabinet, in which the reels are placed in several compartments in a metal case, a sliding door closing the compartment. It is a very fine and safe way to keep a film. I had also the pleasure of meeting the drummer and pianist, Ed. Fleury and Wm. Thompson, respectively, whose work is excellent.

Orchard Theater.

The Orchard Theater, on North near Orchard Street, was the last house I visited that day, and I fear I shall stir up a hornet's nest when I say that the picture on the curtain in this house is the best on the street, according to my ideals of what a picture should be. The curtain is an ordinary drop, coated with white hygienic calcimine with a trace of blue added which is practically the same as the white wall recommended by all projection experts. To be sure, this house has the advantages of a short throw and a short focus lens of large aperture, as well as a moderate-sized picture. The Kinodrome machine is used, which means a picture above criticism as far as the machine goes, and service of first quality is supplied by the Spoor Branch of the General Film Company. Operator Warren Kennedy handled his light perfectly, too, another factor in my impression that the picture here is one of the best in the city. It is worthy of note that this house was built about two years ago for the pictures, and while a stage was built, it has never been used; in fact, there is not even a drop on it except the picture sheet—more proof that the pictures well put on will satisfy any audience. And Manager Nikoden knows how to put them on, with the result that the Orchard is one of the most popular houses in the city.

Barry Theater.

The Barry Theater, at Lincoln and Barry Avenues, Hyman Brothers' new house, is a fine example of the up-to-date photoplay theater. It seats 336, and every seat is a good one. The side lights are artistic, situated in the center of the panels of the walls, but a few of them are so close to the screen as to endanger the picture, even though a Sunlight curtain is in use, resulting in a warm tone and lack of detail in the shadows in dark scenes. Projection is very fine. Two Standard machines are used, and a spotlight and dissolving stereopticon complete the operating-room equipment. I noticed particularly a three-months-old Selig film which was being shown ("The Totem Mark") with its fine photography unmarred by rain, and found that Manager Max Hyman has installed a Mortimer Film Cleaner in his operating-room. This little device seems to do its work very well, taking off all the oil and dirt on a film, and leaving the surface clean and rainless. The cost of operation is nominal—one cent apiece for the cleaning pads, each of which will clean a film. Both the operators, Frank Anum and I. Hirsch, keep their lights well, and the pictures were free from ghost. The Barry is deserving of success, and has been successful from the start.

NESTOR FILM COMPANY BUY ACREAGE.

The Nestor Film Company, which is temporarily located at the corner of Gower and Sunset Boulevard, recently closed a deal through the Los Angeles Realty Exchange for a five and a half acre tract on Hollywood Boulevard, Benefit and Hoover Streets. They will put between $15,000 to $20,000 improvement on the lot, which will front on Hollywood Boulevard.

The buildings to be erected will be used for making motion pictures. The Los Angeles Realty Exchange tried to locate the Nestor Film Company in Hollywood proper, but were unable on account of the high price of acreage property, which is held by a few land owners, who refused to sell at a reasonable price.

This company has a payroll of $3,500 to $4,500 a week, which would mean much to our city. They employ at least 150 men in making the films. This is one of the growing industries of the age.

Plans are now being made and the work will be rushed, as they expect to be in their new location in January. Mr. David Horsley is manager of the company and is a very energetic and progressive man.—From the "Hollywood Citizen," Hollywood, Cal.

OBSERVATIONS.

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN.

EYES seem too narrow. I can think of no more appropriate declaration to make than this. I know at a time when the interests of the exhibitors of motion pictures were at stake there was no more staunch or hard-working champion in their behalf than William Fox. If it had not been for his active and most persistent efforts the exhibitors at that time would have lost much money. I say much money, for the reason that I do not deal in hundreds, nor thousands.

* * *

It was Christmas Eve, and all was jollity. None thought of anything but gracious hospitality. At the height of the jollity there appeared a spectre, not in person, but in declaration. He said: "Gentlemen, I do not wish to interfere with your good time, but press of circumstances compells me to say that one of the greatest problems ever presented to the moving picture field up to the present time brings me to appear before you. At twelve o'clock tonight, every moving picture house in Greater New York must close down. The Mayor—Mayor McClellan—has so declared. I regret that upon such a joyful occasion I am compelled to bring such tidings, but it is a fact."

* * *

I have endeavored to give verbatim the remarks at the time. It was a jollification, but the words of the speaker did not fall upon a barren field. The feast went on, but thought did not cease. Those most interested felt, as Mr. Fox, that a great injustice had been done, and it was not long before Mr. Fox had the assistance that brought about a meeting —a mass meeting—of the exhibitors to protest against the unjust mandate made against them.

* * *

Mr. Fox was then an exhibitor. Since then he has become a magnate. In other words, he has become an exploiter of theatricals, with the moving pictures as a side issue. Since his combination of all the amusement enterprises on Fourteenth Street, between Third and Fourth Avenues, in addition to his many other enterprises, backed by "Tim" Sullivan and the opposite side of the street, he has something up his sleeve.

* * *

Well, he has nothing on Loew, although he has in a way. Loew has made good on the straight exhibition business. He did not depend upon political influence.

* * *

The motion, or photoplay, or moving picture, business, call it as you may, was promoted and forced to the front, in spite of all opposition and ridicule, by men who had the foresight upon which to ground their confidence when the men who would now corner it were busy with less lucrative followings.

* * *

Some of these men may say that they made their living and money before they saw the pictures. No issue is taken with them on this, nor is any objection made to their going back to the same lucrative avenues; but, for God's sake, let them stand upon their own virtues and merits, and not take the bread and butter from the mouths of those who had more nerve than they had.

* * *

I think Marcus Loew and William Fox are as fine a pair as any two men I have ever met in the business, but I cannot stand for swelled heads. They should think of the many good boys who stood by them when they were climbing the ladder, but were not so fortunate. Some of the "boys" went bad and did not come to time, perhaps, when these two magnates struck out, but some who did are still in the business and would be struck down by the tactics recently started by political influence.

* * *

It is my candid opinion that, in time, the motion picture theaters will assume the same dignity that the so-called legitimate houses now hold. But that time is not here, and any individual or political combine that attempts to launch it at the present calendar date is foolish. When the time I speak of arrives no manager will be able to use pictures as an attraction and cheap vaudeville as the money catcher.

* * *

Do you get me, Steve? These intermediate vaudeville managers are a greater menace to the regular vaudeville theaters and performers than they were ever thought to be in the motion picture field. When they can't fill their vaudeville parts they grill the public by their so-called "vaudeville try-outs." Think of the drivers who drop their reins, the waitresses who drop their aprons, and the butlers who drop their trays to portray their talents at these try-outs! And think of the under-cover talent that makes good! With a little zinc and other paper matter exercised in a judicial way, you find a lot of newcomers in the business who last as far as the Hudson. And then these aspiring vaudeville managers raise their hands in horror before the blank faces of the good talent and exclaim, "What can we do? The pictures are doing it." Oh, Pharisees!

* * *

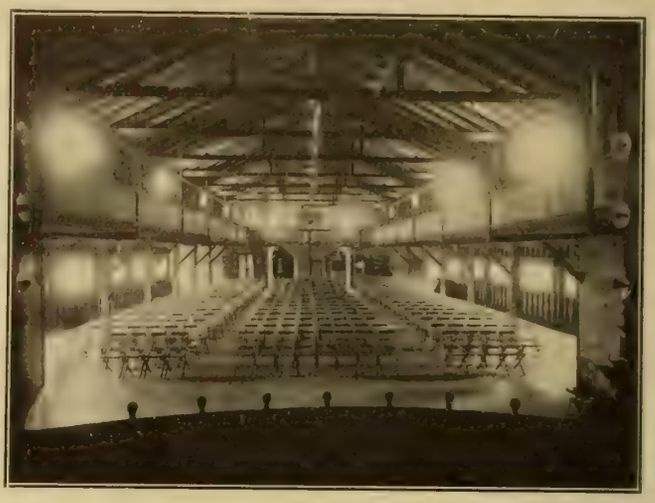
The man who makes so much money that he forgets his friends is the one who generally forgets what he has. Forgetfulness is not optional. If exercised by one it is liable to become a habit—perhaps an affliction, and then the ungrateful would give more than they lose for its abolishment.

The motion picture business is no longer a fad or fancy. It is a fact—an industry, an art, and it cannot be trifled with. It is legitimate and sound and open to all who have the necessary capital to invest in it. Every man who invests in it and conducts his place within the bounds of the law should be protected by that law, whether his seating capacity be 299 or 600, the intermediate vaudeville managers to the contrary notwithstanding.

MODEL SUMMER RESORT THEATER.

Rusk & Andrews' "Wauwanda" at Haines Falls, N. Y., Finest in the Catskill Mountains.

"Uncle John" Rusk, of the firm of Rusk & Andrews, proprietors of the "Wauwanda" picture theater, Haines Falls, N. Y., is justly proud of his place of amusement, a view of which is given herewith. Haines Falls is away up in the Catskill Mountains and is one of the popular summer resorts of that region. Not all summer resorts have picture shows, but if any of them have anything finer than the Wauwanda, it has not been heard from. The building is 55 feet wide by 100 feet long and is built in bungalow style. It has a seating capacity of 1,000 and is open from June 15 to October 1 each year. Two shows are given daily at 7.45 and 9 p. m., with matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays.



Interior Wauwanda Theater, Haines Falls, N. Y.

The interior of the building is done in natural wood, stained brown and green. Aside from the auditorium is a large public sitting room with old-fashioned fireplace and furnished with mission furniture; a buffet kitchen and check room; a retiring room for ladies and a smoking room for gentlemen. A balcony extends around three sides.

A 14 x 16-foot picture is displayed with a 90-foot throw, using a Standard machine. The light is supplied by an independent plant, which furnishes all the electricity needed to run the arc and several hundred incandescent lamps. The plant is from the Detroit Engine Co., and was installed by Mr. Rusk, who says that his "juice" costs him less than two cents per kilowatt.

"Uncle John" Rusk is a "49er" and carries several scars from wounds received in encounters with Indians. He is also an old showman and a successful photographer, as well as a handy man at most anything he may require. His attempt as an exhibitor has been very successful, for the "Wauwanda" has paid handsomely ever since it was opened.

The winter "Wauwanda" is located in Woodbridge, N. J., instead of Woodridge, N. J., as was erroneously stated last week.

DANTE'S INFERNO AT ATLANTIC CITY.

At Nixon's Apollo Theater, the finest showhouse in the State of New Jersey, Dante's Inferno, Milano Films production, played for a full week, December 4th to December 11th, to remarkably good houses at prices ranging from 15 to 50. The performance was conducted under the direction of W. Stephen Bush, who also delivered the lecture. The Apollo Theater, which runs pictures every Sunday night, is known far and wide for its excellent projection. Fred A. Moore, who manages the house, makes a specialty of light and projection and gives the matter great personal attention. The results are most satisfactory and every Sunday afternoon and night the house is sold out early. The prices for Sunday night are 10, 15 and 20, and the patrons seem thoroughly well satisfied with the exhibition and with the prices.

Information has been received to the effect that Mr. Joseph A. Palmer and his partner, Mr. Samuel Nadler, have purchased the Old Daily's Theater, on Columbus Avenue and Water Street, New Haven, Conn. The theater has a seating capacity of 255. The new management proposes to exhibit nothing but high-class motion pictures and illustrated songs.

The Moving Picture Educator

WHERE THE CINEMATOGRAPH EXCELS.

I. As a Preacher.

THE remark made by an exhibitor to the writer is the cause of this article. The exhibitor in question pointed out the fact that people will pay money to get in the moving picture theater that which they can get in the church for nothing; as for example, a sermon on temperance. Let the minister announce as a subject, "The Evils of Intemperance"; he knows full well that many of his regular congregation being so saturated with the subject, find the occasion an excellent one for staying away. From the pulpit standpoint outsiders are not drawn in and the whole occasion falls flat, despite any eloquence on the part of the preacher, or the fact that he may be burdened with facts and stories illustrative of the evils he desires to expose, and the sin and suffering he wishes to describe in his feeble efforts to aid in the destruction of the "Demon Rum."

In the cause of cinematography we find, that when an exhibitor announces the coming of "The Victims of Alcohol," he can in the first place afford to produce this as one of those subjects produced on the nights he doubles the price of admission, knowing how the crowds will respond. Who are the crowds? The people at large! Not the habitues of a certain church or lecture hall, on whom more than half of what is said is lost. The crowds are made up of the very people to whom such sermons or lectures are needed and whom the minister or lecturer would be glad to address. In the beginning, therefore, as an attractive force the cinematograph ranks in the highest place.

Now as to the delivery of its message, John B. Gough or George G. Wooley, in their most popular days, with their matchless descriptive eloquence, which has moved thousands, never could reveal "The Victims of Alcohol" as does the picture of that title.

Another great power now revealed is found in the fact that the above-named valuable and honored temperance orators could not reach as many people in one year as does the picture in one day. Again, if the preaching of these men was effective in helping humanity, and destroying evil, in how much greater proportion will be the results of the portrayal of life scenes such as those now before us?

Concerning the value of the picture as a preacher, it is well to notice that there are no discounting or detracting influences; the people are not listening to a "reformed drunkard," or a man with the subject of temperance as "a hobby," nor are they drawn by the eloquence of an enthusiast, or even a fanatic. From the very beginning they are helped by the apparent honesty and sincerity of the impersonal picture.

Of the sermon the picture preaches, it only too evidently carries its own convictions, and people universally accept it without evasion, deduction or equivocation. Why? Because they have seen life and truth portrayed in a way which they know is right. With an eloquence beyond words, convincing the soul of the beholder, the drama, or rather the tragedy of the life of the alcoholic victim and the victims of his sin is seen in all its thoroughness. Thus truth is driven home with all the vividness and reality that none can withstand, argue, dispute or gainsay.

This is the most effective preaching; every preacher knows that to excel one must exceed beyond certain limitations. That along the lines indicated the picture exceeds far beyond the possibility of the personal preacher must be admitted; therefore it excels and is more abundantly successful in attaining the desired end or in obtaining the required results. The effectiveness of the picture-sermon may readily be gathered from the common comments of the people. Horrible! is the frequent exclamation of all concerning the result of alcohol. Pitiful! is the sympathetic expletive, as the heroism of the abused wife and suffering children is portrayed, making the general verdict one of abhorence at the possibility of an agency so powerful of evil.

The universality of the picture is another strong power in its favor. All preachers are not equally capable, effective or successful; the picture obtains the same results everywhere, in a thousand places at the same time, so that its results are equivalent with it scope. Thus it stands beyond a doubt that there are occasions and they are many in which the picture excels as a preacher. To judge by results is at present, premature, but if a knowledge of past efforts in successfully reaching and convincing people is any guage, there can be no doubt that the moving picture under conditions like those named here and, with such a subject, cannot fail to be a most powerful agency for good. Let us be on the lookout for words of protest against this picture from those whose trade it will surely injure, as also we may be on the watch for the thousands of homes it may make happy, if not by cure, at least by prevention.

A GOOD MORAL PICTURE.

No educational institution need hesitate about using such a picture as "Saved From Himself" (Biograph). This is one of those pictures of which, unfortunately, there are too few, and in which the result produces a deep satisfaction to the beholder.

A young man engaged as clerk in a hotel having saved some money, desires to increase it, so that he may better equip the home he desires to make for his intended wife, who is the stenographer in the same hotel. Following unwise advice given by a schemer, all is lost unless he can procure more to "cover his margin" in a stock gamble. At this crisis a traveler visiting the hotel, places in the hotel safe a large sum of money.

Here begins the temptation. Coveting the money, the young man is seen passing through the agonies of one overcome by a desire to risk all to obtain an unlawful ambition. At night, when all have retired, a series of pictures show the various characters in their rooms; the young man struggling with his conscience, the young lady carelessly reading over her day's doings, the young man's mother—a sweet soul, to whom he enters for the usual affectionate good-night—and the traveler, restless with worry concerning the safety of his money; each unconsciously playing a strange part in the drama of life. Giving way to the temptation, the young man extracts the money from the safe, even while his mother is praying for him—a lovely picture of the parental guardianship of prayer. The young lady, looking through her papers, suddenly finds the telegram asking the young man for money. Her mind quickly unites a number of circumstances which confirm her in the idea of what is going on; an interesting combination of intuition and revelation causes her to silently steal down stairs, only to find confirmation in the suspicious and agitated young man's presence at the safe. She knows his secret.

At this juncture the owner of the money appears. Unable to sleep he has decided that his money will be as safe in his own keeping as in the hotel safe; so he asks for it. While the young woman engages the traveler's attention, opportunity is given to the clerk to open the safe, replace the money and then return it to its owner, who now retires in peace, happily unconscious of the near loss from which the young lady has saved him and of the honor she has saved to the young man.

The best place of the picture must be given to the good old mother; every picture of her might have been omitted without injury to the plot. That she is thus additionally included greatly strengthens the picture. Her confidence in her boy, her prayers for him, the kindliness with which she places a flower on his pillow and then peacefully retires, are in good and proper religious taste, and extremely creditable, giving the picture a strength it would otherwise lack, making it especially possible to speak of it in this place as one which may be wisely used anywhere.

The victory of the young man, even if not of his own gaining, causes a sense of relief and everyone is glad. The triumph of right is always acceptable to everyone and becomes the moral strength of a picture in striking contrast to the sadly numerous failures.

Picture shows are repeatedly condemned by ministers as "undesirable recreation," but if some of the people who take time to criticise this form of amusement would only investigate the matter a little more they would find that it is not quite as objectionable as they think.—Post, Bridgeport, Conn.

Projection Department

Edited by F. H. RICHARDSON.

KNOWLEDGE.—Since the writer has been engaged in the dissemination of knowledge of projection he has met with some opposition on the part of a few operators; though, to the credit of the craft, they are comparatively few. It is a mistaken idea to suppose that the spreading of knowledge will in any way injure the operator. There are, however, a considerable number of men, who, realizing their own incompetence, fear to see others in any way aided in the acquisition of knowledge.

The writer is of the opinion that so far as projection machinery is concerned the surface has only been scratched. He believes a day will come when there will be no intermittent movement to the machine at all. He believes the day is not so far distant when celluloid will not enter into the composition of films, hence the fire danger will be eliminated. He believes a day is not so far away when the silent drama will largely replace the barnstorming theatrical company and that the continuous performance of a play in motion pictures, lasting from one to two and one-half hours, will not be uncommon. This latter prediction he made more than two years ago and we already have the three-reel play with us, and it has been found to be a pronounced and distinct success.

All these things are not going to call for more operators, but are going to call for operators of higher grade, and for their services higher salaries will be readily paid. The man who opposes the dissemination of knowledge is foolish. He might as well try to sweep back the waters of the ocean as stop the wheels of progress. Moreover, as has time and again been pointed out, it is a shame and an outrage to have some of the beautiful productions practically ruined in their projection through ignorance in the operating room. The writer stands for more knowledge, and then more knowledge—all the knowledge we can possibly obtain, until the operator is in a position to place the work of the producer on the screen in a manner befitting its magnificent beauty.

CONDENSERS.—Canton, Ohio, writes: "I have a proposition for you to settle. A friend tells me the focal length of condensers should be as follows: the back condensers should be of a short focal length, either 4½ or 5½ and not over 6½, while the front lens should have a focal length equal to the distance from the center of the two lenses to the center of the objective lens, less two inches. But I can't see where it holds good in all cases. I have been using two 7½-inch condensers and have tried the 6½-7½ combination, but it does not work good. I get a round spot on the gate, but it's not sharp. It has a blue ragged edge which the gentleman says is due to wrong condensers. The picture is a 9 x 12 and the throw 105 feet, which would mean about an 8-inch E. F. objective lens. After a little study on the matter I think myself I am usnig the wrong condensers. I should think the condensing lens should be the same focal length as the objective lens, which in this case is 8 inches, and if I use a 6½ in the rear it would take a 9½ for the front, by his method. Will you kindly correct this if it is not right? He also says the focal length of the back condenser is equal to the distance from the arc to the back condenser."

I have seen this proposition stated before, just as your friend has put it, viz.: that the front lens should have a focal length equal to the distance from the center of the condensers to the center of the objective lens, but I have never been able to accept this as gospel. In the first place, taking your own outfit, the E. F. of the lens is 8 inches, which means that a point half way between its two lenses must be 8 inches from the film and the center of your condenser lens would be at least 12 inches, and probably with that kind of combination, at less than 15 inches from the gate. You would therefore have 8 plus 15 or 23 inches, less 2 inches, as the focal length of your front lens, and according to your friend's theory, that would be a 2-inch lens. In order to get a spot the lamphouse would have to be back a long ways or else your lamp would have to be pulled back from the lens, thus losing a large percentage of the light. I have never tried this scheme, but I do not think it would work, and even if it did work, you would find that a front lens of that length would be hard to get and quite costly. Aside from this, however, we do not work on the focal length of either one of the two lenses. The action of the condensers must be calculated on the E. F. of the combination, which is just one-fourth of the sum of the focal length of both lenses. When your friend says that the distance of the arc from the lens is equal to the focal length of the back lens the gentleman is disclosing the fact that he does not know much about condensing lenses after all. If the arc is so set that the rays of light go forward from the condensers in parallel lines then the arc will be at the point of E. F. of the combination, which in the case of two 7½ lenses would be 3¾ inches from the lens. As a matter of fact, however, the arc is back a little further, in order to bring the rays to a focus theoretically at a point midway between the two lenses of the objective lens, though in practice we do not pay any attention to that, but converge the rays until they form a spot on the gate a little larger than the aperture.

As a matter of fact, the writer has been trying for a long time to find the true relation between the condensing lens and the objective lens. He has examined into the merits of several theories; the one mentioned by your friend included, but up to date has not been able to fix upon any standard. So long as condensing lenses of a cheap character, having heavy spherical aberration and other faults are used, I very much doubt if any universal standard can be set.

With the unusual combination you have, it unquestionably would be better if you had two 8½ or at least one 7½ and one 8½ condensing lens; however, I have projected a 10-foot picture 120 feet, using two 7½ lenses with excellent results. It is quite possible that the ragged edge of which you complain is due to faults of the condensing lens. It is not due to the focal length, however, since if that were true the ragged edge would show up the same if you had a 4-inch focal length objective instead of the 8-inch. You have not told me what kind of current or what kind of resistance you are using, all of which might have some effect on the proposition. I see in the footnote you say that the distance from the center of condensers to objective lens is 27 inches, which is even worse than I have figured, since, according to your friend's theory, it would require a 25-inch lens.

BOOK WANTED.—Redding, Cal., writes: "Please tell me when the book of Underwriters of New York, Gas and Electricity, will be on the market."

You are just a little bit mixed in your dates, Redding. The National Board of Fire Underwriters issues a book, which you can procure by writing the National Board of Fire Underwriters, 135 William Street, New York City, enclosing 5 cents in stamps, and asking for a copy of their National Electric Code Installation Rules. The Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity of the State of New York issues a book, but it is not for general distribution and I doubt if you can obtain one, though you can try with same terms as above stated. It, however, can give you little more information than is contained in the National Code, upon which it is based.

METER, ETC.—East Tawas, Mich., writes: "Will you kindly answer the following through the department: (1) Is a 10 ampere, 110 volt, 133 cycle meter O. K. for use in my theater? House lights and moving picture lights being on same; 40 amperes on the arc. The dynamo is 60 cycle. (2) I have 110 volt, 60 cycle Ft. Wayne compenarc. The volt meter at the station always registers 120 volts. Has same any effect on my light, and in what way?"

(1) Exactly what the effect would be in using a 133 cycle meter on 60 cycle current I am not certain; but this much I do know: the meter won't register correctly. Moreover, it is not large enough. If you are pulling 40 amperes at the arc it would mean approximately 1,400 watts, whereas 10 amperes at 110 volts would only equal 1,100 watts, therefore your arc alone is loading your meter to capacity, and then some. In making the above calculation I am using 35 as an arc voltage, which is approximately correct for A. C., though it may be some higher, or a little bit less. (2) If you have a 110 volt compensarc working on 120 volts it would tend to give you more current than the normal capacity of the compensarc on any given contact; that is to say, if you set the compensarc on the 40 ampere contact it would deliver more than 40 amperes. It also has the effect of overloading the coils to some extent, but I think this would not be serious. As a matter of fact, that amount of added voltage would, I think, do no particular harm, merely giving you more amperage than you would get were the pressure 110.

GOOD REPORT.—McLeansboro, Ill., writes: "Am using a Power's No. 6 machine with improved lamphouse, aluminum curtain, 60 amperes; getting flickerless pictures and am doing an A No. 1 business; population of town about 1800. Am a regular reader of the "World" and derive much benefit therefrom. Thought I would let you know that McLeansboro can and is supporting a good moving picture house. I use a Ft. Wayne Compensarc. It is giving me splendid results. The programme is Licensed films." Plainly McLeansboro is a booster. Glad to hear such good report.

BRIGHT SCREEN—FLICKER. Kansas City, Kan., writes: "While we were using an ordinary screen our picture was flickerless; now, however, we have installed a "daylight" screen and the flicker shows very badly. I run my machine at a crank speed of 52 to 60 per minute. Is that too fast or too slow? It makes no difference how fast or how slow I run, the flicker is still there. I changed from a 3 wing to a 2 wing shutter but it does not seem to make any difference. The shutter is set true, cuts off and opens exactly right. We have 60 cycle 110 volt A. C.; am using 35 amperes at the arc which does not flutter but gives a good steady light. Can you tell me how to stop the flicker? Attached you will find a small sample of the screen. How is it I cannot use over 35 amperes without breaking my back condensing lens. Please tell me what you think of the daylight screen."

In the first place, Kansas City, the sample of screen sent shows it to be apparently cloth saturated with aluminum, presenting a rough surface which is very bright. Without going into the whys and wherefores of the thing, you will find that the bright screen always causes more flicker at a given speed than does the ordinary screen. You say you changed from 3 wing to a 2 wing shutter without any effect. As a matter of fact there should be a great deal less flicker with a 3 wing shutter than with the 2 wing article. The speed you are running would give some flicker on any screen if you used the 2 wing shutter. I cannot tell you whether it is too fast or too slow as the speed must be governed altogether by the subject you are running, as has time and again been stated in the Department. There is no reason why you should not be able to use more than 35 amperes A. C. at the arc without excessive condenser breakage. I would recommend that you clean out the top ventilating screen of the lamphouse thoroughly and then look back through the Department for the past year and see what has been said on this subject. As to daylight screens I do not care to express a general opinion.

OPAQUE SLIDE COATING. Mr. John Griffith, Mgr. Pastime Theatre, Ansonia, Conn., writes: "In reviewing the Projection Department of your paper, which is my usual Sunday occupation, I noticed St. Louis, Mo., desires formula for the Opaque Slide Coating. Good results can be obtained by dissolving one ounce of gum arabic in a pint of water, strain the mixture through muslin or some similar fabric. Dip the slide glass in the solution and then allow it to drain dry in a warm place. I usually keep a stock of the solution on hand. Can be written on with an ordinary pen and ink. Does not blur and the coating does not crack or flake off. Gum arabic can be obtained in any drug store. I wish yourself and the Department the success which excellence merits."

We are indebted to you, friend Griffiths, for your kindness in submitting the formula which, however, is not, I believe, opaque coating, since gum arabic is, unless I am very much mistaken, almost, if not quite, transparent. The coating you so kindly contribute the formula for, enables one to write on the surface of the glass the same as if it were ordinary paper, and for this purpose it is no doubt excellent. I presume it can be made opaque by mixing with the solution some dark aniline dye.

CALGARY, Alberta, writes asking the following: "(1) I am thinking of learning to be an operator and would want to be a good one. What length of time would be required to learn? I am of a mechanical turn of mind. (2) What good book can I get? (3) What are the wages in Western States?"

(1) It would be worse than useless for me to attempt to answer your question. Some men learn very rapidly while others are just the opposite. If you can get a position as helper with some really good, competent operator, and serve an aprenticeship of six months, meanwhile applying yourself diligently to a study of the business, you ought to be competent to take charge of an operating room at the end of that time. Many "become operators" in less time than this, but usually their work on the screen is something wonderful and ofttimes rather fearful to behold. (2) You will probably learn more out of the Department than you would from any one book, though in the Handbook, for sale by the M. P. World, price $1.50, you will find much valuable information in compact form. I would advise its purchase. (3) You will first have to explain what you mean by "Western States." Some people talk about the West, meaning the Mississippi Valley, which is, in fact, the intermountain region. The Western States are those west of the west line of Nebraska and Kansas beginning with Colorado, Wyoming and New Mexico, ending at the Pacific Coast. In these States the wages vary from $15 to $35 per week.

ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES. Schaghticoke, N. Y., writes: "We have 40 cycle 110 volt A. C. using rheostat to lower the voltage. I am running the show every Sunday; using Licensed films and filling the house (capacity 300) at ten cents admission. Can you tell me, through the Department, where I can get some "Announcement," "Intermission," "Good-Night" and such things in films in small quantities, say from 100 to 200 ft.?"

The announcement film may be had from the Ortho Film Co., 40 East 12th St., New York, would suggest that you write them addressing letter personally to Mr. Hochstetter, and incidentally mentioning the Moving Picture World.

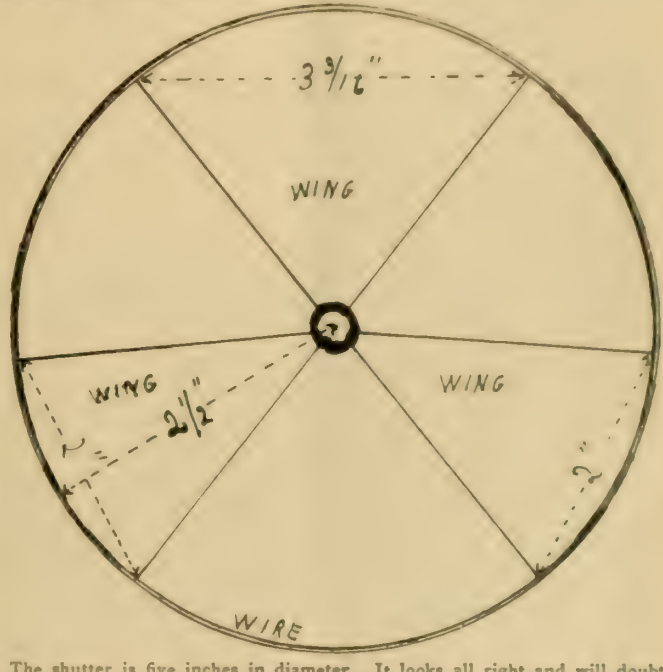
LIGHT TROUBLE. Chas. C. Mendenhall, Stuart, Iowa, writes: "Kindly answer the following through the Department. (1) I am unable to get good light on my screen. Am using 6½-7½ condenser combination; have tried others, including two 7½ lenses but it does not do any good. Have tried moving the lamp back and forth without effect. Machine is a Standard No. 2 and the lamphouse cannot be moved forward and back. Current is 125 volt D. C. using 35 amperes at the arc. Throw, 65 ft., with a 12 ft, picture. I get a rainbow effect on the curtain having shades of blue, brown and yellow, etc. Have also tried all ways imaginable of setting the carbons. I have your Handbook. Had to get a second copy from Laemmle as someone stole the first. I would also like you to put me in touch with manufacturer or agent of some good current saver. Our current here is 12c, and 15 cents per kw.

To answer your last question first, will say that, while I cannot undertake to personally recommend any D. C. current saver, you might correspond with Mr. Hallberg, New York City, whose advertisement you will find on another page of this issue. He puts out such a machine. He will doubtless put you in touch with some of his customers who have purchased one of the sets and they, in turn, can inform you as to how satisfactorily it has worked. Certainly you are paying a very high rate for current and it will be well to look carefully into the merits of Mr. Hallberg's D. C. current saver. As to the light trouble, it seems to me, however, that the fault must be due to carrying too short an arc, thus causing a tit to form on the tip of the lower carbon. This would explain the presence of the colors on the screen. The remedy is to carry a little longer arc, which will prevent the tit from forming. This 'tit," or cap, is composed of graphite formed from the carbon by a process of smelting in the arc when the carbons are so close together that the arc does not receive sufficient air to complete the votalization of the carbon. These tits are mushroom-shaped and sometimes attain extreme lengths—as much as half an inch; the top being composed of almost pure graphite. It requires a much longer time to votalize graphite than it does the carbon from which it is formed. I may be entirely in error in assuming this to be your trouble but inasmuch as you seem to have tried about everything else without effect, I am inclined to think this must be the real cause of your trouble. The distance of the lamphouse from the machine would have nothing to do with producing colored light on the screen. It might cause a dark blue ghost, but not colors.

STRIKE ENDED. The recent strike of the Cincinnati, O., union against the United States Amusement Company, operating several houses in that city, has been settled. The company is now employing union operators in all its houses.

WASHINGTON OPERATORS IN TROUBLE. There has been quite a fracas stirred up in the Capitol City, in regard to the banquet given by the Washington Motion Picture Operators' Association recently. It seems that there was a moving picture entertainment prepared for the amusement of the operators, following the banquet. This entertainment was to consist, supposedly, of Licensed films, presumably of interesting, out-of-the-ordinary subjects. It further appears that some one, no one seems to know who, or at least is willing to admit that he does, substituted some rather risque Parisian pictures. It is even said that some of these pictures were very questionable indeed. The police arrested five of the operators, all of whom promptly established an alibi as to their connection with the exhibit. We do not know what this "Operator's Association" is, or what it is supposed to represent. We do, however, know that the operators should be distinctly ashamed of themselves for allowing any one to jump them into the girl-in-a-pie dinner class. They should remember that, aside from the matter of common decency involved, such stunts are reserved as a privilege of the "Silk Hat Harry" class. We are more than pleased to know that the operators themselves have been able to clear their skirts of any implication in the preparation of this portion of the programme, and are sorry indeed that anyone would seek to force such terrible things upon them. Records do not show that any operator left the hall during the unseemly performance. Probably they could not force their way out, however.

SHUTTER, Penna. (town suppressed), writes: "This is my first to the Department. Find enclosed sketch of shutter for the Powers Five Machine. It gives much better results than the regular two-wing article. Here is an easy method of making slides for temporary messages to the audience: using a perfectly clean slide cover-glass, moisten a brush and dip it in yellow ochre. Spread a thin coat on the glass and let it dry. You may then, with any sharp, pointed instrument write whatever you wish to in the coating. Cover with another glass, binding the two together and it is ready for use. Be very sure the glass is perfectly clean before attempting to coat same, however. When there are misframes in the film put a little piece of paper in where the trouble is and then you don't have to look for it in rewinding. Recently the manager sent me to another house he owns to do some work, agreeing to pay my expenses and allow me full time. He secured a substitute in my place, of course. When I got back I had to pay the substitute, my own expenses and was not paid for the time. We have no union here and I had to stand for it or quit. Moreover pay here is poor and the men are treated without any consideration at all. The handbook is great; so is the Department. Would like to know how to start organization of operators."



The shutter is five inches in diameter. It looks all right and will doubtless reduce the flicker, but cuts some more light than the two-winger. As to the ochre coating, why use that when you can procure gelatine, which is superior. The "Make 'Em Yourself" slide outfit, advertised elsewhere, is practical, shows up well and a slide costs less than one cent. I presume you mean that you place a small piece of paper under the film at the bad spot allowing it to wind into the reel. That is practical all right, if you have the paper ready and act quick. It is incredible that any manager should be cheap enough and so lost to decency as to treat a man as you describe. Those who oppose the organization of operators can see what they get handed to them when unorganized. If that manager doesn't weigh more than two hundred pounds I would like to have him try a trick of that kind on yours truly just once. He would be up against an argument real sudden. Ordinarily I am opposed to physical violence, but there is a time and place for everything and I really don't think I would rush up and kiss him, under the circumstances. Write General Secretary-Treasurer, International Alliance Theatrical Stage Employees, Chicago, Ill., (haven't street address but that will reach him) for instructions for organizing a union.

AN ARGUMENT, Illinois (name of town suppressed), writes: Am using Powers Six Machine, 30 amperes through Powers adjustable rheostat, voltage 220 D. C. Throw is 57 feet, picture 14½. What focal length condensing lenses should I have? Had an argument recently with an electrician. One says that two 110 V rheostats could not give results if connected in series on 220 volt current. Other says they would. Which is correct?"

By the regular way of figuring, you have about a 4½ inch objective lens and should use one 6½ and one 7½, or two 7½ condensing lenses, whichever gives best results. As to the rheostats: one 110 V rheostat made to deliver 30 amperes would have 110 less 45 ÷ 30 = 2½ ohms resistance. Two in series would offer 4½ ohms. To get 30 amperes on 220 you must have 220 less 45 ÷ 30 = 5 5-6 ohms the static resistance. With two such rheostats connected in series on 220 volts you would lack 1½ ohms of enough resistance to limit the flow to 30 amperes. As a matter-of-fact, two such rheostats would deliver 220 less 45 ÷ 4½ = 40+. These figures are only approximate, since the arc voltage varies, hence the arc resistance is not constant. The "45" subtracted from the line voltage represents the resistance of the arc. No; two 110 volt rheostats cannot be used on 220 without overloading their coils, as the figures prove.

A WHOLE BUNDLE OF KICKS. Union City, Tenn., writes: "I have one of the most up-to-date little picture houses in any small town in the South. My trouble has been trying to do too much, and while I only seat 350, our patronage has been up to the limit most of the time. My one hobby has been perfect projection. My picture must be as bright as a dollar, and as steady as a clock, or there is something doing. I have been unable to get an operator that can quite fill the bill, and give me what I want. I must therefore do the operating myself. I am using A. C., 110 volts, 63 feet throw on a level, with the picture thrown from the back of the house; curtain in front. Use a Ft. Wayne compensarc, 30, 40 and 60 amperes. Picture 10½ ft., 6½ condenser back, 7½ front. My picture is clear and sharp when I get the current, but there is some trouble, and I claim it is in the transformer which is just back of my house. I have an 80 ampere meter, and have the following lights: 2 flaming arcs, 12 amps. each; 12 8 c. p. lights on the inside; 100 2 c. p. for electric sign; 14 8 c. p. for arch front; 21 2 c. p. around ticket window; 3 32 c. p. in art glass dome; 1 motor for electric piano; 100 c. p. for chandelier for lobby; 4 large tungstens for chandelier inside, not burning when picture is on, and the projection arc. I have to keep the lever of the compensarc clear back on the 60 amp. stop, or as far over as it will go. Is there any such thing as overloading the meter, or would not the meter burn out before it would overload? If you can offer any suggestion so that I could make any change of the wiring, or current, in order to get enough light through the machine to keep from jamming the carbons all the time, I would be glad to have you do so. What do you think of the rectifier for a clearer picture? Are they practical? Will they last? I also want to ask one other thing. Is it possible to get the kind of pictures one wants anywhere? Is there any head of the General Film Co., to whom we could go to for relief? We complain to managers of exchanges, they put us off, and either tell us we are kickers, or to go where we can get what we want. If we try to switch to another exchange, they say we are not in their territory, and they cannot furnish us with service. Is there no relief for an exhibitor? Will we always have to take just what they care to hand us, whether it pleases our patrons or not? A manager knows what pleases his patrons, and he wants those makes. There is no possible way to get them now. What are we in the business for, to make money, or for pastime? I, for one, am not in it for my health and I want to please my audiences. Is it possible for anyone outside the General Film Co. to buy Licensed pictures, and start an exchange? If so, I feel sure that the South is badly in need of such a company, and they would get all the business, regardless of the charge for service. I read column upon column bearing on the advance work in the manufacture of pictures. I don't believe a word of it. If the picture business is not to go up, to keep it from deteriorating there must be some great change in what the exchange manager thinks and what he hands us. The exhibitor knows what pleases his patrons' particular tastes, and cannot get it."

As to your meter, it is quite possible to overload a meter, but it will not burn out unless the overload be too heavy. It is likely to not register correctly after being subjected to overload for a time, however. But your meter is not loaded to capacity, if it is an 80 ampere article. Each of your 8 c. p. lamps consumes .27 of an ampere. Each 32 c. p. uses 1 ampere. I have no rating for 2 c. p. lamps at hand but probably it is very close to .1 of an ampere, as a 4 c. p. takes .16 and the proportionate current consumption increases slightly as the illuminating power of the globe is decreased. The motor consumption is slight. As to the projection arc, when pulling 60 at the arc you will be taking less than 20 from the line. No, your meter is not overloaded; possibly the transformer outside is, however. You can easily tell this. If the incandescents dim when the arc is struck then either the feed wires are too small somewhere, most likely between the pole transformer and your house, or the outside transformer is not delivering the goods. Your house feed wires should be not less than No. 4 wire; No. 3 would be still better. It may be your leads from main cutout to the compensarc are too small. They should be not less than No. 10 and No. 8 would be better still, though if nothing but the one arc takes from them No. 10 will do very well. From the compensarc to the lamp use No. 6 and see to it that the wires inside the lamphouse are not charred. Strip back the insulation and if they are a dark brown cut them off as far back as they are discolored. When using 45 amperes D. C., or 60 A. C., the writer amputates the wires to the back wall of the lamphouse after about 40 hours' run; oftener if they show signs of being charred by the heat. Be very sure all contacts are clean and making good electrical contact. Be very certain, also, that the inside of your carbon clamps are clean and making good electrical contact with the carbons. Altogether too little attention is usually paid to these matters and operators run with charred wires, loose, dirty contacts and then wonder what in the world is wrong with their light. The Mercury Arc Rectifier is an excellent machine. It lasts almost indefinitely, except the tubes. They are guaranteed by the General Electric Company for 500 hours service. They cost about $25 each. But with only a 10½ foot picture you should get excellent illumination with 60 amperes A. C. As to the film matter, you can make complaint to the general manager of the General Film Co., Mr. P. L. Waters, 200 5th Ave., New York City. I cannot guarantee that it will do any good, or that it will not. You have not stated the case clearly enough for me to determine just what is wrong. If you want the films of certain producers and the local exchange has not got them, then you have a very legitimate kick coming. The General Film Company has control of the business of renting the Licensed product and that carries with it the moral obligation to carry all subjects of all Licensed manufacturers, since they effectually prevent any one else from supplying them. The manager who told you to "go where you could get what you want," well knowing you could not possibly go elsewhere for the Licensed product, simply proclaimed himself a bully. Knowing his position impregnable, at least for the present, he was insolent and overbearing. The General Film Company will sooner or later come to grief, no matter how strong their position, if managers are thus allowed to treat exhibitors who are paying in the money. I am loth to believe that the General Film Company knowingly sanctions such proceedings on the part of their managers. That there are some such managers in the employ of that company, however, cannot be doubted, since reports similar to yours have been made before. It would be an act reflecting distinct credit on the General Film Company if they would take this matter up vigorously and impress upon their managers the fact that exhibitors are to be treated just as courteously as if there were open competition in the rental of Licensed films; also that pertness, insolence and arrogance by managers to exhibitors will not be tolerated.

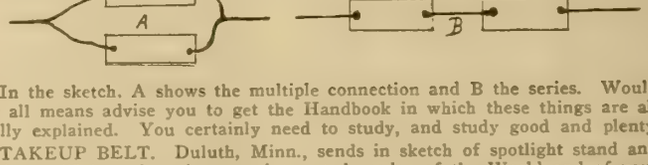
If, on the other hand, you complain that you cannot get the films you want when you want them, then that is something else again, though it by no means excuses an exchange manager for telling you what he did under the circumstances set forth. I cannot form any opinion as to what you are entitled to without first knowing the price you pay. Many exhibitors pay the lowest possible price and then demand service of high grade, which sells for a much higher rate. This is unreasonable and foolish. Then, too, you must remember that an exchange serves many theaters and many exhibitors may be demanding a certain film you yourself want, just as strenuously as you are. A film cannot be in but one place at a time. An exchange cannot possibly buy enough copies of each film to supply all customers with the reel just when they want it, unless the price of service be increased very largely. I have been an exchange manager and can swear that that functionary has troubles of his own. He needs an oil tank filled with choice lubricant and a railroad water-tank filled daily with a select brand of softsoap, to keep things running smoothly. But unless he can do this he is not the man for the position. Exhibitors are often unreasoning and unreasonable. I have smiled at a customer and poured out softsoap and oil when I really felt like murdering him with an axe. Very often the exhibitor has little or no real grasp of the business as a whole. He really believes that an exchange can hand him any reel he wants, at any time he wants it, if it really wishes to. Many exhibitors do not study the business at all, except as it pretains to their own house. The reel they want may be a hundred miles away when they want it. It may be that dozens of exhibitors have spoken for that particular reel before. It may be promised to one man for a certain date and then some unthinking, or unprincipled exhibitor gets it for one day and keeps it two, the last day being the one you were to have had it. Of course you can't have the film then, even if you have advertised it to the limit. The exchange is just as helpless in the matter as you are. The reel is at a theater, fifty—a hundred—maybe two hundred miles away and—there you are.

LIGHT PLANT. Mr. F. D. Tallman, Bunker Hill, Ind., writes: "Have been much interested in the experience of other exhibitors in using light plants of their own; making screens, etc. I am only a small fish in the pond beside most of them. Being a machinist it occurred to me that I might operate a dynamo with the same engine which runs my shop. I could thus enter the motion picture field. I acted on that idea and now have a neat little house seating 176, in the rear of which is my machine lation of the town is 800. The engine and generator are mounted on a show and when the weather is good we play to more than capacity. Population of the town is 800. The engine and generator is mounted on a wagon and two nights a week I have been playing an adjoining town. My generator is a 60 volt, 40 ampere machine, run by a 6 h. p. 2 cycle kerosene engine and I have all the nearby towns beaten for light. Made my own screen from bleached muslin. Filled it and coated it with aluminum. Its one fault is that it is almost too bright. However, it shows the picture up well. I start my engine, lock the door and do not go near it again until after the show. It often runs for three hours without a soul near it. Do my own operating. The good wife sells tickets and our little girl collects them. Have a violin and piano for music and have got it all our own way so far as the picture business is concerned. Have a Powers Six and think it puts up the finest picture possible. Not a flicker in it. In addition to the projection arc have 22 incandescent lights and a fan. When the arc is on there is not a quiver in the light, but when it is off and the engine is running light the incandescents are not so steady as the engine has practically no load at all. But when I strike the arc, Mr. Engine settles down to business and stays right there on the job. If any of the Projection Department readers wish to know more concerning the plant, would be pleased to give full information, including cost of operation and installation. My picture is 11 ft. wide; throw, 57 feet. What condenser lenses should I have? Am using one 6½ and one 7½ but unless I get carbons set just right screen is a little yellow sometimes."

Your lenses should be all right. Might try two 7½. It is essential that you do get your carbons "just right" all the time. Better send in for a Handbook, price $1.50, in which, among other things, carbon setting is fully explained and illustrated. The description of light plant is interesting, particularly the remarkable performance of the engine. Why not send in exact description, together with name of engine and generator, for publication. Complete information will be appreciated by many of our readers. Send all data, including rest of installation and operation.

RESISTANCE IN MULTIPLE. New York City writes: "Kindly advise me as to how two rheostats should be hooked up to get the maximum current from them, working on one circuit; also how to get the minimum."

For maximum hook them in multiple; for minimum hook them in series.



In the sketch. A shows the multiple connection and B the series. Would by all means advise you to get the Handbook in which these things are all fully explained. You certainly need to study, and study good and plenty.

TAKEUP BELT. Duluth, Minn., sends in sketch of spotlight stand and writes: "I have long been an interested reader of the World and of your Handbook. I have at last decided to butt in with a sketch of a spotlight stand, made by myself about a year ago. I have found by experience that a buckskin or rawhide shoelace makes the best takeup belt. It lasts longer than the ordinary belt and is in other ways most satisfactory."

The stand is excellent, but we have already published sketches of so many spotlight stands that we cannot give more space to that particular subject just now. As to the rawhide belt, we see no reason why it should not be very good.

Comments on the Films

Licensed.

"A POLISHED BURGLAR" (Essanay), December 14.—A comedy in which a young man to whom a girl's parents object as a suitor, plays burglar and scares the old folks into consenting. The fake works and he forces her father to shine his shoes and her mother to polish his nails. Here was the undoing of all his plans. When he returns with the booty, playing the hero, they notice his shiny extremities and see through the trick. He, in turn, is compelled to perform the same lowly offices, a come-down for the polish gentleman burglar which creates much amusement.

"GEORGE WARRINGTON'S ESCAPE" (Selig), December 14.—This is an excellent historical and costume picture, the scene of which is laid about Fort Duquesne, which stood on the site of the present city of Pittsburgh. It gives the adventures of a young Englishman, whose story is told by Thackery in the Virginians. It represents him as at the mercy of a drunken [illegible] sergeant whom he succeeds in [illegible]. Probably the story was exaggerated. This film will serve to renew fading memories and some of the older persons who see it will remember the occurrence. It was long before the present generation was born.

"THE BETTER MAN" (Melies), December 14.—A pleasing love story in which a clever Western girl uses a little trick to find which of her two admirers is the better man. She arranges it so that each of them receives a letter at the same postoffice at noon of the same day. Each letter reads, "To prove which is the better man deliver this letter to me as soon as possible." Both race to get to the girl first. Her trick was this: she got an old man to pretend to be in great need of help in a place which both would have to pass. The better man risked the girl to do a human act and lend a hand where one was needed. He got there second, but he got the girl. The picture is highly commendable.

"HER PET" (Biograph), December 14.—A picture telling a clever anecdote in a bright and effective way. Husband didn't like wife's poodle so hired a newsboy to steal it from the front porch. The boy brings it to the office and gets a dollar. But the wife offers a reward of ten dollars for its return and the boy sees the ad. It it too much for him. The husband had paid him to steal the dog, now he brings it back and is well paid for his honesty. The dog is a very pretty white poodle. The picture is pleasing.

"TAKING HIS MEDICINE" (Biograph), December 14.—A farce, the characters of which are a lazy country boy, his father, mother and little sister, and the country doctor. The boy wanted to fish, his parents wanted him to work, so he played sick. The doctor was called and prescribed big pills, same as he had given to a horse. Boy wouldn't take the medicine and a great old chase ensued. Once the old man thought he had him, but he wriggled free. At the end, the boy was on the roof, so the old man put the pills in a gun and then the boy took his medicine.

"THE SUBSTITUTE" (Lubin), December 14.—A very commendable picture in which a heroine, who will strongly appeal to spectators, saves a large invoice of gold from Mexican bandits. She was agent at a small station in the West and, being an operator herself, had made friends with a sergeant in a U. S. cavalry troop who also could operate the key. One day she found that her brother, an engineer on the railroad, was too drunk to do his duty. She, dressed in his overhauls and went as his substitute, driving the locomotive. That afternoon there was a cargo of gold in the express car and a gang of bandits held up the train. When no one was looking she climbed to the telegraph line cut into it and called up her friend the sergeant, who sent the troop of horsemen to the rescue. The band had got the gold and was ready to make off when the boys in khaki appear. They come galloping into the picture in thrilling style. The capture is made in a way that does credit to Uncle Sam's boys; they are real soldiers. The last scene, in which the sergeant comforts the girl with praises that were needed, because she was suffering a nervous reaction after her gallant exploit, is very satisfactory.

"THE SICK MAN FROM THE EAST" (Vitagraph), December 16.—This very pleasing comedy has two chief characters, a detective (Mr. Phillips) from the East who, in the first scene, reads of a reward of $1,000 for the apprehension of a horse thief, and the thief (Mr. Dunn) who is employed on the ranch from which the horses had been stolen. The detective comes to the ranch disguised as a "sick man from the East" who is so deaf that he has to use an ear trumpet. This gives a well utilized chance for comedy. He finds the man whom we suspect is the thief making love to the ranch owner's daughter. The situation is held up pretty effectively while the sick, deaf man is getting his evidence and the interest accumulates fast at the climax, when he makes his dramatic capture. The very few moments when the illusion wears thin do not detract much from the picture's impression and there are some very pretty scenes, especially so is the scene showing the ranch stable by moonlight. It is a desirable picture.

"STAGE STRUCK LIZZIE" (Edison), December 16.—A delicious comedy which gets much of its quality from very good acting. It gives us the experience of a stage struck maiden who is domestic help for a while, but who loses one position after another until she finds herself as a maid in an actress' dressing room. Suddenly she is given an opportunity to take a minor part and walks boldly out upon the stage. But that malady known as stage fright afflicts her, gradually increasing in violence, until she jumps over the footlights and flies up the center aisle. The clown work of this Lizzie is remarkable; it stands out clearly. We [illegible] them really acted.

"A TRIP FROM COLORADO SPRINGS TO CRIPPLE CREEK" (Edison), December 15.—In the traveling the Edison Company has presented a novel subject and one that should be very popular with Americans. It begins at Colorado Springs and proceeds through the Rocky Mountains 10,000 feet above sea level to Cripple Creek, with all that wonderful panorama spread before one. The lofty mountain peaks are piled in endless ranges. The journey has through [illegible] highest electric railroad in the world and ends in Victor, the highest incorporated village in the world. The mechanical work has been well done. The picture has all the attractive qualities of an excellent photograph.

"BROCKTON FAIR AND HORSE SHOW" (Edison), December 15.—This is a good, long film and the interest never drags. From the first to the last, it shows us what we want to see and keeps us glad that the Edison Company had the good sense to photograph it. It is a picture of a typical county fair, with flags, the Governor of the State with his staff and brass band, and the races, crowds and the "hot dogs" that give the visit to such a place its flavor. It is a good, satisfying picture.

"AS IN A LOOKING-GLASS" (Biograph), December 18.—This picture lingers on the sordid miseries in the home of a man who drinks and is brutal when drunk. Too many know all about such things. The picture's object was to give a broad enough canvas on which to paint the conversion of the drunken father. The truth is that fathers who have fallen so low as this seldom, very seldom, are converted. This one, after a spree, saw his little boy playing house and acting the drunken father just as he had acted it the day before. It disgusted him and he promised his wife not to do it again. The picture shows that he kept his promise. The Biograph players and producers have done much to hold it above petty realism by very praiseworthy art. It is not a very cheerful picture.

"HE WHO LAUGHS LAST" (Kalem), December 18.—A [illegible] picture, which gives one the feeling that the story is not clear until it dawns on him that the thread on which the scenes are strung is unusually slight. Two girls and two cowboys have the chief parts; two pairs of sweethearts. First the girls fool the boys by getting two of the ranch help to put on women's wigs and sit so that only their heads can be seen. The boys are "taken in" for a moment. It would have been funnier if the girls had used dummies. To get even the boys dress the two hired men up as Indians and give the girls a scare. There are one or two good scenes, pictorially, in the picture.

"EVANGELINE" (Selig), December 18.—Longfellow's beautiful romance is here shown in picture with the help of some well-chosen quotations, which serve as "leaders." The scenes are often very beautiful. They consist of interiors, the seaside and a glimpse of the village of Arcadia, in Nova Scotia, and then of forest and river scenes in the Southwest. The costumes are perfect and the actng graceful. Evangeline herself is pretty and very pleasing, although there seems to be little depth or grasp to her presentation. The story is not easily adaptable to either the theater or pictures; yet the Selig Company has made it clear enough and doubtless it will be very acceptable indeed as an educational film.

"LOVE DECIDES" (Lubin), December 18.—A pretty picture which will please because of its pictorial and artistic qualities rather than through the idea which it illustrates. This is not very vital; doesn't get hold of actualities with much strength. The heroine was courted by an elderly admirer, but she didn't find much in him that attracted her. Later, when her father died, she found the world a rather inhospitable, chilly place. She had no home, no money and could get no work. This admirer again renewed his plea and she accepted him. A child was born. Then a young artist tempted her to run away with him. But love for her baby decided her fate; kept her true to herself and her home. There are some very good things in it.

"VANITY FAIR" (Vitagraph), December 19.—This grand three-reel picture was reviewed at length on page 886. It needs no further comment.

"FOR HIS PAL'S SAKE" (Selig), December 19.—A story of a true friendship and one that is put over in an effective and pleasing way by every one of the five principal players. The two pals, Tom and Billy, both loved the same girl. The girl liked Billy best and Tom saw this clearly. Yet at a ranch party Billy gets jealous of Tom. It nearly comes to a fight, but Tom's character saves the day and they are still as much pals as ever. Billy then forgets the girl, Florence, and becomes infatuated with a dance hall Mexican girl. The quality of Tom's friendship for both Florence and Billy is tried by this incident, but his wisdom and magnanimity stand the test and he first "shows up" the girl from the dance hall and then brings the lovers together. It is a good, desirable picture.

"THROUGH THE ENEMY'S LINES" (Gaumont), December 19.—A story of Napoleon's war against Austria. It is an exciting picture and one in which the suspense is created and increased skilfully. Most of the scenes have great pictorial beauty, they show skill in grouping the moving figures and taste in choosing or setting backgrounds. The acting also is very acceptable. A French lieutenant is sent out to reconnoiter. He captures a farmer and dresses in his clothes to gain admission into the Austrian lines. He finds valuable papers, but is discovered and pursued. He hides in a load of hay. The Austrians think that he has escaped. A farmer hitches up and is taking the hay out of the [illegible]

Another farmer, lighting his pipe, accidentally sets it on fire. The Austrian soldiers discover the fire and uncover the spy. He manages to escape. The action at the point is, only for a moment, slow and almost crude, but, as a whole, the picture is very praiseworthy.

"THE THREE BEARS" (Essanay), December 19.—A very acceptable juvenile picture telling the well-known nursery rhyme about the three bears, a Great Big Bear, a Middle Sized bear, and a very little bear, who had porridge for dinner and went for a walk to let it cool. The scenes are often very cute. The actors in bearskins fill the bill remarkably well. It will greatly please the little children.

"SANTA CLAUS AND THE CLUBMAN" (Edison), December 19.—The Edison Company is notable because of the human quality that very often is found in its pictures. While this is not one of its best productions, it has the human element in a very marked degree; it is a thoroughly delightful and highly praiseworthy picture. The clubman had nothing to do and had grown so irritable that he ordered a policeman on the beat to arrest two children who annoyed him by begging near the club door. The cop pretended to, but gave them carfare home. They didn't have any home and their condition was so piteous that the barn men of the street car company let them sleep in an empty car put up for the night. The clubman got drunk; thought the car in the barn was the car ahead, and came in. He soon fell asleep and had an extremely pretty Christmas dream of Santa Claus. In the morning, he found the little boy and girl asleep beside him and took them home. He got a young lady to come and help make it Christmas for the kids and won a sweetheart. It is a very pleasing picture.

"LOVE AT GLOUCESTER PORT" (Vitagraph), December 15.—A seaside love story. Two lovers, seamen of Gloucester, have chosen each a girl of the town and have good reason to be hopeful. One of these girls is the daughter of the captain of a ship on which one of the men is the mate and the other a sailor. The captain takes his daughter on a short cruise. The mate becomes unnecessarily jealous and gives the sailor a dangerous job. He falls overboard. The girl alone sees it. She mans the dory herself and goes to his rescue. The dory is missing and it is thought that the two have eloped. They are cast on an uninhabited island, but are later taken off. The misunderstanding that disturbs the two other lovers for a time is soon cleared up. There are too many inconsistencies in the picture; but there are many very pretty and many very human scenes in it. The acting is very pleasing. The photographs are good.

"A TIMELY LESSON" (Lubin), December 16.—An affinity story. Few of the pictures that have handled this theme have had any real heart-interest and most have been positively unpleasant. This is no exception to the rule. The story is complicated with details that tend to obscure the main thread; they militate against the story's interest and make it, in the early scenes, drag. The wife saw with sorrow her husband and father of her child falling under the spell of a fascinating widow. Her brother had only met her husband once. She confided her trouble to him and his friend. His friend at once begins a flirtation with the widow and later marries her. The brother, slightly disguised, begins a mock flirtation with the wife. This leaves the husband, one might say, out both coming and going. It brings him back contrite.

"A QUEEN'S TREACHERY" (Gaumont), December 16.—A dramatic historical picture dealing with a mad king of France, Charles VI. The lead in the picture is divided, perhaps not very wisely, between the evil queen who betrayed her husband and a devoted, patriotic French woman, named Odette, who tried to save the king and France from disaster. This king, Charles VI, you will remember, was the king who was conquered by Henry V, of Shakespeare's play. Under compulsion of the English king, but as is shown in this picture, through the treachery of the queen, he disinherits his own son for the son of the English king. Odette in the picture is shown as inciting some of the French nobles to swear to be faithful to the Dauphin in spite of the signed paper. This Dauphin, Charles VII, was later the monarch who was saved by Jean d'Arc. The scenes are sumptuous, the costumes rich and pleasingly colored. The picture is commendable.

"THE COWBOY COWARD" (Essanay), December 16.—An exceptionally interesting cowboy character study, dealing with an individual with amiable ways, but with no insides to him, moral or physcal. He was afraid to face his man even when he was in the right, but he was willing to persuade some one else, a brave gambler, to handle the picture's bully for the sake of the heroine and then was willing to lie to the girl in order to get her love, never realizing that she would find him out sometime. He was simply that kind of a man. The player who took the part had to meet the acting of Miss Fields, as the girl, and Mr. Anderson, as the gambler, and a very good player, as the bully. Consequently he didn't appear to very good advantage, for the other three seemed to be past excellent in their parts. Perhaps it is to the player's credit that he couldn't put the part over very effectively. There are many good things in the picture, especially for the thoughtful spectator.

"THE MIRACLE" (Eclipse), December 20.—In this story a baby prince murdered by his cruel and ambitious uncle is miraculously restored to life. There are some striking scenes. The one where Christ appears at the tomb and gives the child into the arms of the angel. The sister and the angel place him in a crib among the royal statuary. There the mother finds him just as his murderous uncle's coronation procession is passing. Everyone but the uncle joins in rejoicing with the mother for the prince's delivery.

"FIRES OF DRIFTWOOD" (Vitagraph), December 20.—The Christmas story in this film does not develop till toward the last, but is none the less pleasing for that. A man leaves his wife and child and elopes with a handsome woman who was rescued from a wreck. She deserts him and he struggles manfully to secure means sufficient to make his family comfortable. He arrives home on Christmas eve, laden with gifts and asking forgiveness, which is readily granted and the family is reunited.

"THE SIGN OF THE THREE LABELS" (Edison), December 20.—A comedy which illustrates the adventures of a bride and groom in Europe who failed to tip the servants at the first hotel. The labels on their baggage were so placed that everywhere they went they were treated accordingly. After numerous moving incidents, not the least of which was a woman's stocking in the man's pocket, the association rules fell into their hands and they thus discovered the source of their difficulties. The rest was easy. They lavished tips and their troubles ceased.

"THE FLASH IN THE NIGHT" (Kalem), December 20.—A melodrama in which as its principal feature, a girl, bound to a chair by a burglar, flashes the word "help" to her sweetheart on his engine by pulling a cord with her teeth. He sees the signal and arrives with his fireman in time to catch the burglar.

"ART VS. MUSIC" (Lubin), December 20.—A man and woman were good friends until it became necessary to criticise each other's work, then there was trouble. The man went to the city and took a studio. While at his painting the noise of a piano annoyed him. He found that it was this woman practicing. Afterward they helped each other, but failed, and so, through mutual failure, their love was renewed and they decided to take the rest of life's journey together.

Independent.

"COWGIRLS' PRANKS" (Bison), December 19.—Scenes clear as a bell, a bevy of lively and pretty girls (Miss Little and Little Miss Grandin leading them) and a big bunch of punchers. The night before the round up, the girls steal the clothes of the boys and dress up in them. Think of Miss Grandin in chaps; it's worth going to see. The boys next day have the choice of going like Indians or dressing in the skirts. They choose the skirts, and are a great looking bunch! The girls, meanwhile, have shot-up the village bar, Bad Pete's. Next morning the girls have headaches. The picture was perhaps suggested in part by a Kalem release "The Round Up at Dawn." In the first scenes, it followed it pretty closely; it is livelier and there's much more to it.

"THE HACK AND SCHMIDT BOUT" (Essanay), December 14.—A comedy which successfully burlesques a wrestling match. The American easily bests the German but possibly the way he does it would not be popular with all wrestlers. The picture is very lively and creates much merriment.

"THE VIOLIN MAKER OF NUREMBERG" (Solax).—A poetical and very pleasing story suggesting, not only by its settings but by its general trend, the opera "Der Meitersinger." The incidents are not similar; one feels that the story told by this is even better. It is a true love story, human and dramatic and it is handled in a very pleasing fashion. It was reviewed at length in our issue of December 9.

"THE ACTRESS" (Majestic), December 24.—This delightful and desirable comedy was reviewed at length on page 886.

"BEFORE YORKTOWN" (Republic), December 24.—This first release of the Republic Company (it is in two reels) shows good taste and competency. It's worst faults are perhaps camera consciousness on the part of some of the characters and, in some of the scenes, a stiffness. The part of the heroine, an American maid, was perhaps the best representation in it, although one feels like questioning the taste of the scenario writer in making her insult the British colonel, who was dining with her, by throwing a glass of wine in his face. The first reel has Yorktown for its background and shows how plans of the British fortifications there were obtained by the heroine's brother. He was wounded by the British sentries and the girl starts on her way to General Washington with them. After a well-designed capture by the British pickets and escape from the colonel whom she had insulted, she reaches General Washington, a figure that serves very well indeed as the Father of His Country. The photographs are very good.

"NIAGARA FALLS" (Imp), December 23.—Opening with an exquisite picture of the falls, it continues with pictures of Beachey's flight in an aeroplane and also Leach's trip through the whirlpool in a closed iron barrel. The pictures of the leaping and boiling waters of the whirlpool rapids are very commendable. The photography is perfect.

"A PAIR OF GLOVES" (Imp), December 23.—A short farce-comedy in which much happens at a lively pace. A hat-tree in a restaurant and five or six overcoats hanging from it; a pair of gloves misplaced by one husband in the overcoat of another married man, caused the trouble. It is very light.

"THE PROFESSOR" (Imp), December 21.—This story, while interesting, is not so human as the best Imp stories. It deals with a sleep-walker (the professor) who removed a large sum of money from his safe in the night, without knowing it. He thinks he has been robbed and suspects his nephew whom he knows was in need of money. A detective goes through the case in a sensible and orderly way and proves that the nephew is innocent. The next night, the detective sits up near the safe and watches to see whether the burglar will return; this is peculiar. The old man walks again in his sleep and replaces the money; the detective sees him do it. The professor then pays the nephew's debt. The photographs are excellent.

"CHINESE CRUISER HAI CHI" (Imp), December 18.—A very interesting film. It shows the ship in detail and the Chinese crew at work. There are some intelligent looking Chinese officers in command. Rear Admiral Ching is shown.

"THE GIRL AND THE HALF-BACK" (Imp), December 18.—The early scenes of this picture drag not a little. Two college chums love the same girl. She favors the football captain. Through jealousy the captain's chum sends the other team the signals. It becomes known and the captain is accused. The girl, however, brings evidence that clears him and he plays the second half, making the touchdown that wins the game.

"THE TWINS" (Great Northern), December 23.—A slight, but amusing comedy. One twin was a military servant of a general. He was short and fat and, while he could walk like a soldier and salute, he was weak on waiting on the guests at table. His brother looked like him and was a professional waiter. He came to visit his brother and fell in love with the cook. Brother got him to take his place. The general was congratulating himself on having made a dunderheaded waiter into a perfect jewel; but was astonished to find that he had forgotten military manners. The play and the fun won't be wholly understood by uninstructed audiences, but they'll get enough and have several good laughs.

"FROM OSTERSUND TO STORLIEN, SWEDEN" (Great Northern), December 23.—Exhibitors in places where there are many Swedish people will doubtless find this picture a good one to show. It gives motion views of the scenes and villages along the railroad between these two towns and it also shows something of Swedish life out-of-doors in winter. The ground is white with snow.

"THE COWARD'S FLUTE" (Champion), December 18.—He seemed to be one of Nature's irresponsibles, did the hero of this picture. He could play on the flute though, with the best of them; but he simply wouldn't go to war and was despised by his friends, the other Southerners. But, when the troops came near the home where he, his mother and sister were living, his mother finding him in great terror, dragged him to the window and made him view the battle. This got him excited and he took his flute out there and played such stirring airs that the boys in gray turned and, charging once more, won the day. The idea behind this picture is very highly commendable. There are things in it that are not so commendable.

"BY DEGREE OF FATE" (Champion), December 20.—A dignified situation gives value to this clearly-told story of a physician's love. The girl had loved him, he had shown himself rude and rough and she had married his rival. After hard vicissitudes the doctor goes to the West. The girl and her husband chance to locate in the same village. The husband gets sick; the unknown doctor is called in and recognized. The doctor has the patient sent to a hospital where he dies and the girl then accepts the doctor's love. It tells an acceptable story.

"CUPID'S BIG SISTER" (Powers), December 19.—Cupid was an irresponsible small boy in knee pants and his big sister was charming. The two seemed to have made a defensive and offensive alliance. It's a slight but pretty flirtation and comedy romance. Some of the scenes are very pretty, indeed; some are kept on perhaps a bit too long. The players are very pleasing.

"TOURING BRUSSELS" (Powers), December 19.—Very good pictures of the Belgian capital, very instructive and commendable.

"A JAPANESE LOVE STORY" (Lux), December 22.—The tinting of these scenes, now purple, now green, now buff, etc., gives the story an unusual atmosphere; but one hesitates in wholly commending the brighter tints as successful. Several of them are almost garish. In the story, Yum Yum, a Japanese girl falls in love with a French naval officer. He is called back to France, meets his family again, but is discontented. His sisters learn his secret and dress in Japanese costume to have fun with him. The poor boy is so much in love that it makes him pathetically sick. Just before he is about to die, Yum Yum, who has followed him to Europe arrives. It is a story along the lines laid down by the Romanticists of the last century, calling up Rene memories of Chateaubrian and Lammertine. Taking it as a whole, acting and all, it seems grotesque in our scientific-age atmosphere.

"THE TOMBOY" (Thanhouser), December 19.—The tomboy came from the West and was about seventeen. She and her sister had lost their father and his will made an Easterner, the father's partner, guardian of them. The tomboy was charming in her riding habit and she, with her little sister and their guardian, made a very pretty picture out riding in Bronx Park. But she did not shine in society and her accidents and the reproofs she got made her so ashamed that she ran away and joined a Wild West show. Her guardian sought her for months without finding her; but the show came to the town where the family was spending the summer and the little sister finds her. There are some pretty horses and pretty riding in the picture which makes a very pleasing, wholesome character story. It is commendable as a picture with the heart interest and other elements that make pictures popular.

"CINDERELLA" (Thanhouser), December 22.—Delightful! A story full of the quality that will please Christmas audiences. This best of German fairy tales (and the best fairy tales we have are German) is pictured in perfect settings and carefully and artistically staged in every way. The Thanhouser company has members that perfectly fill the different parts. Cinderella, herself, is especially suitable and seems to live in the fairy part she plays as ideal princess. The picture is a joy forever.

"THE GOLD LUST" (American), December 21.—A romance of the West with some charming love scenes offset by deeds of treachery, robbery and murder. The girl, daughter of a not very wise old sheriff, is loved by a cow puncher of good character. Her father wants her to marry a man whom he trusts, but whom she despises. This character shows the gold lust. He then conspires with another evil character to rob a bank. He so arranges things that he is with the sheriff while the robbery is being done. He and the sheriff chase this robber and he kills him. They are in a lonely place and, after the other is dead, he kills the sheriff for the sake of the gold. He then attempts to abduct the girl. The hero, meanwhile, in a very conventional way, has fastened to him the suspicion that it was he who killed the sheriff. The villian makes a false step, however, and the boys understand the situation. It seems like a quickly thrown-together picture. It has thrills, hard riding, and some good backgrounds.

"THE LAST NOTCH" (American), December 18.—The emotion that we ask melodramas to give seems to slip away through the fingers of this one; it gets no real, convincing grip on us. It is shown as taking place in a glorious country of which there are some good views. The old sheriff's gun was notched to correspond with the outlaws he had killed; but he had grown old and his star was given to a young man. He went to live with his granddaughter whose ugly husband, it was soon clear, was to be the last outlaw to get a notch on the old man's gun. The girl had fallen in love with the new sheriff. She held her grandfather's holster while he pulled out his gun, after his return from the fight in the hills in which he had killed the outlaw, and watched complacently while he cut the last notch. It is a rather heartless exhibition, almost brutal.

"A TRAGIC JOKE" (Eclair, American), December 19.—A cleverly pictured detective story with some very good lighting effects. A young detective falls in love with the daughter of a broker whom we know to be connected with a gang of counterfeiters whose headquarters and plant are located in an old, disused warehouse. On April first, the broker's son and a clerk in the office, for a joke, write to the detective that he will find the counterfeiters whom the police are seeking at the old warehouse. They don't suspect that the gang is really there, nor do they suspect that the broker is connected with it. The detective does go, and a fierce fight brings the police. The broker isn't captured with the others; but the detective finds clear evidence against him. The broker leaves town next morning, lies at first. The pictures of the burning forge and of the light from it shining up on the detective's face as he peers down into the pit of the old building, are noteworthy.

"A HEART BOWED DOWN" (Eclair), December 22.—A picture that is French in atmosphere, but will be readily understood. It was a father's heart that was bowed down in his grief. Eight years before, he had harshly [illegible] died and came to Paris to try to find his two grandchildren and their mother. By means of a convincingly pictured accident, he finds the family of his son, but the widow will have nothing to do with him, because of his former harshness. He meets the two children again and one of them persuades the mother to forgive him. From first to last there is an atmosphere in the picture that makes it very acceptable. It is a very pretty picture and extremely well acted. The scenes also are artistically designed and the photographs leave nothing to be desired. Easily a star number.

"LOVE, WHISKERS AND LETTERS" (Solax), December 20.—A pleasing light comedy, not quite up to the best that Solax has given us, but with some good laughs and it is lively throughout, which very well makes up for small shortcomings. The love was between Jim and Violet. Violet's brother went to the West and grew the whiskers. He came back on a visit. Jim's friend didn't recognize him and told Jim that Violet kissed a strange man with whiskers. The letters were then written by Jim, one to his business partner about stocks and the other to Violet, breaking the engagement. Both were mailed. Jim finds out the mistake and frantically tries to get the letter to Violet. He has encounters with postmen all over town but fails. Violet gets the letter, Jim goes down on his knees. Violet shows him the letter; it is about stocks. Jim's partner accepts the dissolution of the partnership.

"THE MAN WITH THE CAMERA" (Comet), December 22.—Something new in the moving picture line; it shows how a gang of clever crooks used successfully a permit to take pictures in looting the home of the Starbucks who were away on a visit. The scheme was suggested to them by the cleverest member of the gang, a woman. A convenient finger print record, left by one of them on a window sill, gives the clue needed to identify them. An arrest of the whole gang is made after a very hot fight in their rooms. With the exception of the method by which the finger print is obtained by the police, the picture is convincing as long as one is watching it. It is a very acceptable and interesting number.

"THE GAME OF BRIDGE" (Comet), December 18.—A picture dealing with the garmbling vice in high society. The leading part pictures the wife of an expert on gems. She is losing heavily at bridge and is swamped in debt. Her husband has been intrusted with a magnificent diamond, which she has stolen. Her maid is in the secret. At night the wife walks in her sleep. The butler sees her remove the diamond. He later takes it, attempts to pawn it and is discovered, but escapes. The diamond is then brought back to the expert. This teaches the wife a lesson. She tears up a pack of cards. The plot is complicated and while what is shown is made clear enough, many minor details have been left at loose ends, as it were. This keeps the picture from being conclusive and hampers it in making its impression. It is well acted; the scenes are made with good taste and skill. The photographs are, in several instances, beautiful.

"THE NEW RANCH OWNER" (Nestor), December 20.—A Western comedy, dramatic and amusing. It turns on the dislike of cattlemen to have sheep in their midst. The new owner, an English baronet, had decided to sell his cattle and raise sheep. The cattlemen heard of it before he arrived. They determined to tar and feather him. A sharper, hearing of his expected coming, determined to capture him, dress up like him, and then by impersonating him, sell the ranch and make off with the money. The beginning of the scheme worked well, but the sharper came in for the tar and feathers. The Englishman sees the fate that was intended for him and decides to sell the ranch and return to England.

"THE LONE CHASE" (Nestor), December 18.—A brisk and pleasing comedy; it pictures how an eloping couple outwitted an irrascible and gouty father. It is not a life-portrayal in any strict sense. It is, however, acceptable; for it is never allowed to drag. In the race to the station the gouty father sees the couple safe on the train. He telegraphs ahead and has the girl detained by the Montclair police. This surprises the couple, but the lover manages to have the gouty father arrested as an all around crook. He then manages to free the girl; but hasn't much time to spare. There's an exciting chase to the next justice of the peace. The lovers' automobile wins.

"LOCKED IN THE VAULTS" (Reliance), December 20.—It was a big vault in a financier's office and a little girl (Baby Rosanna) the granddaughter of the financier got locked in. The financier had never seen the child. He had disowned his son for marrying beneath him. The son's wife, mother of the child, also unknown to the financier, had obtained a position as cashier in the office. She was working alone, overtime. The husband brought the child there to see why mamma was so late. He left them for the time and the child crept into the vault and the mother, not knowing it, locked her in. The father returns just then and, in a very tense series of scenes, hurries and compels the reluctant grandparent to come and open the safe. The picture is dramatic. Its worst fault is the rather unpleasant hardness of the old financier who could, even for a moment, refuse to come to the rescue of his little grandchild, even though he hated her.

"THE WAR AT TRIPOLI" (Ambrosio), December 20.—Shows pictures of the Hamidje Fort after the bombardment, a camp in the oasis, sailors working in the trenches, the 84th regiment at work throwing up outpost breastworks, and an advancing troop. It shows how the trenches looked the day before the battle of Messri Sidi. The pictures look out across the desert and give a much better idea of the lay of the land than any other pictures this reviewer has seen.

"TWEEDLEDUM MARRIES AN AMERICAN GIRL" (Ambrosio), December 20.—The comedian gets very seasick on the voyage to America. America is simply rich. Poor Tweedledum; it was worse than a bad dream. The American girl wore divided skirts, boxed much better than he, did rough riding where he couldn't follow and he got a hard fall. It has a clever ending with "Bon Soir" on the curtain.

"FOOLSHEAD'S CHRISTMAS" (Itala), December 23.—Foolshead does some remarkable manoeuvering in this picture. He is hurrying to keep a Christmas dinner engagement loaded down with presents. These get badly mixed in his encounters along the way. He had picked up by mistake a package containing the ether of mirth, that of rage and that of tears. These bottles get broken and the fumes pervade the house. Then follows the usual thing multiplied; a literal rough-house destruction.

"AN INDIAN MARTYR" (Bison), December 22.—The opening scene of this film shows one of the most convincingly set Indian villages that this reviewer remembers. The photographs throughout give clear detail portraits in both foreground and middle distance. An Indian maid of the village is loved by a Sioux who is not acceptable to her father, the chief. The Sioux is captured, brought in and condemned to death. She persuades another chief to set her lover free and this man is the martyr; he suffers in place of the Sioux. The tone of the photographs is soft brown and in some of them there is a myopic, Corot mistiness that is extremely lovely. The story is well designed and made very effective by sincere and restrained acting.

"LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD" (Majestic), December 17.—This picture is reviewed on page 993, of this volume.

"THE MARTYR" (Rex), December 21.—This picture was written and acted by Miss Lois Weber, and it tells a sorrowful but true story of humanity, as it is on this little round world of ours. Let us hasten to add that, while it is typically true, in part, it is not wholly typical. We hope the whole of it is not true very often; we fear that the whole bitter disappointment and sorrow comes to more than one or two mothers of wholly selfish children. It might have been called appropriately "Mother's Christmasses." In the first scene it is Christmas. Mother's presents are a washboard, a clock, a tea pot. She was thankful; the eldest daughter hardly gave cold thanks for her pretty presents. Mother had prepared a good dinner. The eldest daughter imposed her squalling baby on poor grandmamma and let her walk back and worth while she enjoyed her feast. Following these scenes, those of other Christmases come. Mother and grandmother is always doing something for someone, and what thanks or love does she get from those precious sons and daughters and their children? As the years lengthen, as her hairs grow white, we see her, a big human heart, bravely bearing up, meeting sorrow with a smile and she gets not a word of love or sympathy. The last scene is also Christmas Day, it is entitled, "Over the Hills to the Poorhouse." Poor old mother. One feels surely that it would have appealed more widely and made a deeper impression, if that were possible, if it had been softened a bit. It is a strong picture to see and remember. Its scenes are often beautiful.

"DESPERATE DESMOND FOILED" (Nestor), December 23.—Desperate Desmond is still at large. Although this resourceful desperado was again foiled in his attempt to abduct the fair Rosamond, by the noble Claude Eclair of Staten Island and Borneo, he escaped. The manner of his escape was as marvelous as a mid-summer sea-serpent; for after he had bound Claude and delivered the package to the wild men in time for dinner, and after he had carried off the fair daughter of one of Staten Island's oldest families, he was discovered. Claude had escaped, had rushed to a lighthouse and sent a wireless to the ship's captain, who at once instituted a thorough search of the vessel. Mr. Desmond, who is an inveterate smoker, revealed his whereabouts in a big barrel by the fumes that intermittently issued from its bung hole. He was quickly apprehended, shut up in the ship's combination lock safe and consigned to the deeps. It is supposed that the great safe sank many fathoms, for it came to rest on the broad back of the Great Turtle, grandparent of all the little turtles, this was reported by the friendly swordfish. The turtle carried the safe to the crack safe-cracker who was cracking rocks, "making little things out of big things," in a prison by the sea. The safe-cracker freed Desmond, who when last seen was making out to sea on his private yacht, the Great Turtle. The safe has not yet been recovered.

VITAGRAPH NOTES.

Fred Thompson, the well-known director, is off duty suffering from a peculiar accident sustained while working on a picture near a coal mine at Brewston, Pa. His foot sank into soft mud and the sudden jar of the hard ground beneath produced an aggravated case of water on the knee. He is improving, however, and expects to be at work again within a week or two.

Al Wilson is back with the company, so from now on John Bunny will not be able to tear off his usual mid-winter day dream.

Miss Leah Baird is the latest recruit from the footlights. She has enjoyed a successful career in legitimate dramatic work for several years. She is a very adorable creature and will surely be a big success in pictures. She takes to her new work with much more readiness than is usual with those who are fresh from the speaking stage.

Bill Raynous is the real white-haired papa when it comes to directing. They keep setting up scenes and knocking them down for him like ten pins in a bowling alley.

INFORMATION WANTED

As to the present whereabouts of W. J. Lowenhaupt,, formerly of 507 Fifth Ave., and later at 1931 Broadway, New York.

COLUMBUS DAY PARADE PICTURE.

The recent parade of eminent American Italians in the New York Columbus Day festivities has been reproduced in a Thanhouser film called "A Columbus Day Conspiracy," dealing with Italian life in the American metropolis. An Italian nobleman, visiting this country, is invited to view the parade from the grand stand, and he takes a seat there unaware that a crazed servant whom he discharged plans to blow him up with a bomb. A pretty girl reporter, who learns of the madman's plan, tracks the latter, but unfortunately he evades her. Then, through a novel scheme, the girl locates her madman and he is prevented from throwing his bomb. The picture is full of action and the city "local color" is very accurate. The release day is Tuesday, Jan. 2.

MOVING PICTURES IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The Board of Education should take action to have the moving picture shows in public schools resumed as quickly as possible.

Their success has been remarkable. Their educational value is beyond question.

In California and elsewhere throughout the country the use of the kinetoscope and the phonograph has been thoroughly established as an agency of public education.

The question that the New York Board of Education has now to consider is not whether the moving picture exhibitions should be continued—that should be considered as settled—the question is how to make the exhibitions secure from danger of fire.

Fire Commissioner Johnson has stopped the exhibitions in the Brooklyn schools, on the ground that the particular kind of asbestos booth that has been used to contain the apparatus does not literally conform to statutory requirements. The Board of Education should take the best expert advice obtainable and should recommend a booth that is both safe and portable.

The statute as it stands seems to leave room for discretion on the part of the fire commissioners. It says that the contruction of the booth shall be, "in substance," thus and so. If, however, it shall be decided that the statute does not leave sufficient discretion to cover the peculiar needs of the case, the statute should certainly be amended by the incoming legislature.

It is to be assumed that Mr. Johnson will do everything in his power to free himself from any imputation that his scruples are due to political influence, or are prompted by the private interests of the nickelodeon trust.

The American speaks for a wide public in insisting that this new and inspiriting form of public instruction should go on and grow to greater prevalence. Quite apart from their significance as a means of amusement, the moving picture exhibitions in the public schools are making whole communities, young and old, aware of their vested rights in the public school buildings.

Thus the people are getting ready to make the schoolhouses the rallying places of a new and nobler politics—the centers of democratic social life.—New York American.

NO REFLECTION ON MR. E. J. McCULLAGH.

In printing a report of some film disturbances, caused by the alleged irregularities of releases in Australia, the Moving Picture World had of course no intention whatever of reflecting upon the personal or business integrity of Mr. E. J. McCullagh, whom, as the original report stated, the trade regards as a man of honesty, who always keeps his word.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"THE MAIL ORDER WIFE" (Essanay).

What part does good photography in the photoplay have to "make or break" the picture? The excellence of Essanay photography has been commented upon before in this paper, but a real photographic masterpiece is in store for the exhibitors of a coming Essanay release, namely, "The Mail Order Wife." Where every expression of the face from the slightest quiver of an eye-lash to a broad smile counts in the unfolding of the story, many an excellent subject, masterly in every other detail, has lost much of its brightest action through inferior photography. In "The Mail Order Wife," taken extremely close-up, there is an excellent demonstration of how good photography aids in the telling of the story.

Scene from "The Mail-Order Wife" (Essanay).

The plot of the story is unique in motion pictures. The story is one of the kind that grips, and while the surprise finish can be felt and guessed at, there is that happy sensation of knowing that a tremendously big dramatic situation is going to develop.

The story tells of two young men, Bob Strong and John White, who have taken a government land grant in Dakota. So busy have they been that neither have had time to think of matrimony, but as the winter months have left them with little to do, they begin to feel the necessity of a woman's presence. Bob is ordering goods from a Chicago mail order house, when he suddenly looks up at John and remarks laughingly, "Suppose I order a housekeeper for us—or a wife." John, who has confessed on several times to being a woman-hater, scoffs at the idea. But nevertheless Bob adds a postscript stating that though he sees no women listed in the catalogue he would be glad if the company would send him on a wife, providing they can supply him with one.

In the mail order house, May Webster, a stenographer, opens Bob's letter and reads the postscript. At one time May had been in love with a very desirable young man, but they had quarrelled over some trivial matter and he had drifted out of her life. May, now forced to make her own living, resolves to quit a losing struggle and accept the young farmer's proposal. A letter of explanation, accompanied by a photograph of herself, is sent to Bob, who keeps the matter a secret and does not divulge his plan until one morning, after "she" has promised to come on, he tells John of the approaching marriage.

The wedding day arrives and Bob is jubilant while his partner is morose and gloomy and anon sighingly examines the photograph of an old sweetheart in the back of his watch.

In the evening Bob drives up to the house with his wife-to-be and enters. John turns slowly and as his eyes meet May's he steps back in surprise and gasps out her name.

"May!"

"John!" Then, to the great surprise of Bob, who is unable to comprehend the situation, John and May are in each other's arms. Explanations follow. John tells of having loved May five years before, but that they had parted through a foolish quarrel. Bob realizes that he has lost out and sees that the two still love each other.

Then, with a sigh, he hands John the wedding ring and tells the minister to marry them. He is a sad, shocked witness to the marriage, then congratulating the happy couple, he slips out of the room and steals silently up to his room. The photoplay is booked for release Tuesday, January 2d.

A MOVING PICTURE JEWELRY SHOP.

The Gem Motion Picture Company are very busy, at this time of writing, preparing a series of gems to be distributed among lucky exhibitors who are of the Independent persuasion. We made a call at the Gem jewelry store this week and there found a great deal going on and much to write about, so much in fact that we can only touch the high spots as we go along. We first come into a suite of comfortably furnished offices having such a restfulness about them that we were loth to leave the comfortable chair placed at our disposal while enjoying a chat with Director Taylor. During our very interesting interview with Mr. Taylor, he opened a safe or two, and there, in case we were from Missouri, showed us nearly a dozen complete negative productions and nearly as many positives of new Gems ready for the market, but as yet not advertised. Not wishing us to take his word as to their high quality he ordered several of them put through the projection machine, so that we could see for ourselves.

We are in a position, after seeing them, to vouch that they are Gems indeed. We saw upon the screen pictures that bear evidence of long experience, accurate knowledge and rare artistic judgment, which is something unusual to say of a firm that has not yet released a picture. This is not remarkable when we take into consideration that Mr. Taylor is a man who began his moving picture career with the original Biograph Company, and was responsible for some of their most praiseworthy efforts up to a couple of years ago. We recollect favorably, also, his more recent connection with the Reliance Company; but never before has Mr. Taylor had such absolute carte blanche in the development of his ideas as he has with the Gem Company. Everything that money can buy is at his disposal. He is not handicapped or hampered by any fact or condition, material or otherwise. He has a clear field and a great opportunity to do things, and he is doing them.

In the midst of our amiable chat, Miss Marion Leonard came into the room full of life and laughter, radiating her charming and energetic presence with much psychological force. She is another of the great assets of the Gem jewelry store. Of her work and reputation there is little need to speak here; she is known wherever moving pictures are shown, and as a moving picture actress is in a class by herself.

Miss Leonard has recently returned from a six months' tour of Europe and she had many interesting things to tell. While abroad she took advantage of her opportunities to study the pictures in other lands, but she found out that American products formed such a large part of most European picture programmes that there was not much to learn after all. In parts of the Continents she came across a number of strange makes of moving pictures, by smaller manufacturers, that were positively weird as judged by American standards. Of these she says that the very best were inferior to the very worst American pictures that have been seen. While in Paris she laid in a big supply of sartorial creations which she will wear in forthcoming Gem releases.

After her six months' holiday Miss Leonard returns to her work filled with enthusiasm and energy. She assures us that she is glad to get back into harness and is quite joyful in taking up the strenuous task that lies before her. For the past few weeks she has been working from morning until midnight in the preparation of Gems, but she tells us that she never gets tired of working in pictures.

To our surprise we were then escorted to a brand-new model studio. Every stick of wood about the place is fresh and new. The lights were bright and sparkling, the costumes clean and stylish. An immaculate wealth of scenery was standing about completed, or in course of completion, and everything about the place smelled new. The new Quartz lights have been installed in the Gem studio. It is claimed for them that they give a light of photographic quality unsurpassed by any other kind of studio light, not to mention a great saving in electricity.

A very competent stock company has been engaged and we watched them going through a few scenes. Any one not knowing the facts would suppose that this company had been in action for years instead of being one that has yet to mention its first release. We predict great things for the Gem Company and we know the Independent exhibitor will rejoice when he learns that with the new year there will also come a film that will make strongly for the quality uplift of the Independent product.

CATHOLIC CHURCHMEN PRAISE PSYCHOLOGICAL MOVING PICTURE.

That the good and pure in motion pictures finds no opposition on the part of the churches, but rather hearty approval, is evidenced in expressions from Fathers Greene and Halpin of St. Gabriel's Church, New Rochelle. Recently they saw a print of Thanhouser's "The Passing" and were highly pleased with the theme. "It is good to know," said Father Greene, "that when we die we are united to our dear ones who have gone before, and in its conveyance of this, 'The Passing' appeals to me greatly."

The story, a remarkable one, and quite unusual for the films, tells of a mother's love for her departed son and how that love kept the child constantly with her. As the years went on, the spirit child grew up ,or so it seemed to the mother, who grew old with him. She watched his progress as a youth until, finally, he attained manhood, though no other eyes than hers saw the Presence of whom she spoke. And, even in the end, when she crossed the great divide, he was there to show her to the Throne. The story, aside from its value as a signficant psychological study, is a strong lesson in mother love. An indifferent husband—of the type common in big cities where club life is often detrimental to home life—is well portrayed. Released Friday, Jan. 5.

YOUNGSTOWN OPERATORS ORGANIZE.

Motion picture theater operators of Youngstown, Ohio, have organized a union to be known as No. 14 of the Electrical Moving Picture Machine Operators and is auxiliary to the I. A. T. S. E. A. J. Roshell, of the Princess Theater, was elected president and Joseph Steadman, secretary.

"BACK TO HIS HOME TOWN" (Imp).

This picture throws a little light on the business of outdoor moving picture making, while at the same time it relates a diverting story. Mr. Abner Brown in paying a visit to his home town, had the doubtful honor of being mistaken for a moving picture actor by the members of two or three moving picture making companies working out of doors. The result is that poor Abner has a very bad time of it over in New Jersey and gets himself into all sorts of scrapes before he escapes and returns to his wife and family.

Scene from "Back to His Home Town" (Imp).

Scene from "Back to His Home Town" (Imp).

A moving picture joke: that is what "Back to his old Home Town" unquestionably is, and we think that "those in the know," as well as the general public will heartily enjoy the humor of the film. The release date is January 6, 1912.

Caruso has shattered the ideals of art. The Metropolitan Opera House tenor is now a moving picture patron. He took his initial plunge in his newest form of relaxation last week and Antonio Scotti paid the bill.

TWO FINE MAJESTICS.

There is no doubting the excellence of the pictures being produced by the Majestic Moving Picture Company. With each new picture we are compelled to comment upon the fine qualities of the production. Commencing business the first week of September, the first Majestic release appeared November 26. The picture in question, "The Courting of Little Mary," while it did not contain much in the way of a story, revealed ability of rare quality in the players and was remarkable for photography of the most pleasing sort. Since then the Majestic pictures have steadily improved with respect to story, until to-day the product averages up with any other make offered to the American public.

Particularly are these remarks true of the coming releases, "His Fate's Rehearsal" and "Gossip," the first a dramatic picture of great strength and strong moral teaching, the second a splendid comedy based upon a peculiar phase of human nature with which everyone is familiar.

Scene from "His Fate's Rehearsal" (Majestic).

In "His Fate's Rehearsal" is presented one of the strongest temperance lectures that has been done in pictured form, without some of the revolting features that have characterized most pictures of that character. The story is that of a young man who comes home to his wife and baby in a drunken condition and, after striking his pretty wife, lies down upon a couch in a drunken stupor and goes to sleep. The wife is greatly exercised over her husband's condition and sends for her father, who is a physician. The father makes a professional call on his way to his daughter's home. His patient is a poor woman who has sunk to the lowest depths of degradation through drink brought on by sorrow and the cruelty of a dissolute husband. She is a wreck and has to be taken to the hospital.

After disposing of this patient the doctor proceeds to the home of his daughter. When he learns her story and sees her husband he restrains with difficulty a desire to shoot him. Remembering the terrible fate of the woman he has just sent to the hospital, a plan is quickly formed to impress upon his son-in-law the probable end of his dissolute habits. When the plan is explained to the daughter she falls in with it and preparations are made to carry it out at once.

Drugging the young husband they convey him to the garret just vacated by the unfortunate victim of drink; the wife dons some old rags and, with her hair disheveled, awaits the awakening of her husband. When he awakes and sees the scene about him appalls him. That the dissolute woman at the table is his wife is past belief. Shaking the woman he seeks an explanation. She rises and turns upon him with the fury of madness and drags him into the next room where stands an empty cradle, upon which lies a mourning wreath with the word "Baby" outlined in faded flowers. The sight is terrifying to the young husband, who is loath to believe his own eyes; but there is the evidence, and when his wife returns to her seat at the bottle strewn table, he too, seeks solace in the drink that is ready at hand. But the liquor has been drugged and he again falls asleep. Then the father comes in and the unconscious form of the drunkard is taken back to his home and placed upon the couch where he first fell asleep.

Upon again awakening the memory of his experience in the garret comes to the young husband as a bad dream. The recollection is still fresh in his memory, but he looks about to find his home and wife and child as they were. Then he believes that he has foreseen his fate and pledges himself to drink no more.

The leading parts of the picture are played by Miss Trunnelle and Mr. Prior in a most effective manner.

In "Gossip" Miss Trunnelle and Mr. Prior have delightful comedy rôles and, experienced photoplayers as they are, carry their parts equally well in comedy or drama. In this picture two young people are engaged to be married. The young man is in business and, upon driving home one evening, he overtakes his stenographer who has wrenched her ankle; he takes her home in his machine. On the way he is seen by a friend who immediately starts the story, that he is friendly with some unknown woman. This story gets to his fiancée and there is some trouble for the lover. He proceeds to run the story down and compels the gossipers to eat their own words, after which he marries the girl of his choice.

The novelty of the picture is the illustration of the story as told by the gossips by a clever double exposure. By this means we are able to see what really happened and the story as it was enlarged upon and embellished by successive telling until it gained the proportion of a sensational affair. The charm of the picture lies in the fact that it covers a subject known to most of us; that it is distinctly human.

With pictures of this character the Majestic Company cannot fail to win a permanent place in the world of moving pictures. To be without them on the program an exhibitor is losing some of the cream of the independent product.

THE MARTYR (Rex).

This is a novel "mother" picture, having a bearing on the holiday season. It is probable that for every prodigal son story that has been written there could also be a "mother" story written as a parallel, so closely are the lives of mother and son interwoven, yet with such opposite effects. Every mother is a martyr to a greater or less degree, according to the circumstances by which she is surrounded. In all cases the mother is the natural preserver of the home and is usually the one who holds it together when all things seem to conspire to wreck it. There are many acts of heroism by mothers that go unhonored and unsung, and it is with one of these we have to deal in the Rex Christmas release entitled "The Martyr."

"The Martyr" is a pathetic story of the aspirations and sacrifices of a mother for her family, some of whom are wayward or selfish to a degree which makes her life a trial, but never quite enough to make her give up hope. She goes through the ordeal of having to bring up a wayward, drunken son, having at the same time to protect a younger daughter from his evil influences, as well as to shield the son from the wrath of a hard-hearted father who is in favor of casting him out.

In the natural course of events the daughter, who is her principal helper, is led away as a bride from the home of too much trouble. After the death of her irascible husband, the old lady is forced to seek shelter under her daughter's roof, but there she finds that they are already burdened with the aged relatives of her daughter's husband. The erring son has turned out to be improvident and a thief, therefore, the only pathway open to the martyr lies in the direction of the poor-house. This is her reward for her sacrifice and tender loyalty. A martyr to her mother instinct and her devotion to the duty that everyone seems to expect from a mother. This picture will bring home at Christmas-tide a realization of the duties that each one owes a mother, and of how, under all circumstances, even the best, she is a martyr for those who owe her more than she generally gets.

"The Martyr" was released Thursday December 21. It is a picture that can be of use in any season besides the Holidays, as the Christmas part of the story is only incidental to the principal theme.

SOLAX ENGAGES BILLY QUIRK.

Famous Photoplay Star Is With the Rising Sun Comedy Contingent—This Is Another Progressive Solax Move.

Billy Quirk, formerly of Pathe and Biograph, and concededly one of the best known picture comedians, has been engaged by the Solax Company. In the last few months the Solax Company has been steadily forging ahead. It has already announced several progressive changes. This latest acquisition to the stock company centers the interest of the trade in the coming Solax comedy productions.

In talking of Mr. Quirk's engagement, Madame Alicé Blaché, president of the company, said: "We are making an emphatic effort to organize a perfect comedy stock company. We want to be know as the best comedy producers in the business. We already have with us some of the best comedians—comedians who have won success and place. With Mr. Quirk among us and the other competent members of the stock company working superbly, we soon hope to have everyone in the picture business applauding and praising our product. Some time ago I announced that I would engage the best I could get. I think the trade will agree with me that I am keeping my promise."

Billy Quirk and Some of His Character Studies.

Mr. Quirk is a suave, light, clean-cut and boyish-looking comedian. When he tells people that it is thirty-five years since his eyes first sighted Jersey mosquitoes, people stare at him with incredulity. For Mr. Quirk really looks like a kid of 19. He has had four years in motion pictures. Pathe Freres and the American Biograph Company are the only firms with which he has been associated.

Talking about himself, Mr. Quirk said: "Comedy acting before such an unresponsive audience as a camera is perhaps the most difficult task an actor has to face. It isn't like acting before the footlights, where the comedian feels and is encouraged by the appreciation, applause and laughter of a live audience. With an audience in front of him, the comedian can play with his listener's sympathies. He can speak his lines slowly or rapidly, according to the average brightness of his hearers. He can use his tricks for prolonging a laugh, or cutting one short and then make the laugh come back with increased volume and heartiness. Only a polished and experienced comedian can use footlight tricks before the camera. He has to gauge his effects and use his imagination. I think, however, that I owe my success in motion pictures to my habit of being natural. I never force my comedy or overdo things. I let things move along easily and without seeming to help them."

Mr. Quirk has been in vaudeville, in musical comedy and in legitimate drama. He played in Belasco's original production of "The Rose of the Rancho." He played in Pathe's "Billy" series and in Biograph's "Muggsy" series.

"MRS. SIMMS SERVES ON THE JURY" (Kalem).

Women doing jury service is almost the latest idea in the fight for women's rights. They have women on the juries out in Los Angeles, Cal., which fact probably gave the Kalem Company's players located there the suggestion for a good picture, which they have produced under the title "Mrs. Simms Serves on the Jury."

Mr. Simms has a decided aversion for the woman's suffrage question and tells his wife as much at the breakfast table. As he is about to leave for his office a policeman enters and serves Mrs. Simms with a summons to appear for jury duty. Simms has a brainstorm and leaves the house predicting that all kinds of calamities will overtake the country when the women get to mixing into politics.

Mrs. Simms, though not anxious to serve on the jury, realizes that she must go to court, if only to get excused. Simms refuses to let her ride down in his automobile, but she gets there and soon the picture shows her in the jury box passing judgment upon a mere man who has been brought up for some offense against the dignity and peace of the State.

Scene from "Mrs. Simms Serves on the Jury" (Kalem).

In the meantime Simms, arriving at his office, talks over the situation with his pretty stenographer. Between them they frame up a scheme to get even with the suffragettes, and they are soon seen out joy riding. A policeman sees Simms' automobile burning up the highway and attempts to warn him against breaking the speed ordinance, but without avail, for the big machine goes by at top speed. Mounting his motorcycle, the policeman gives chase and eventually puts Simms and his stenographer under arrest, taking them to court. A trial by jury follows and Simms nearly faints when he sees Mrs. Simms on the jury. Mrs. Simms altogether faints when she discovers her husband and the stenographer. But she is true to her sworn duty to "well and truly try," so Simms gets his and the picture ends with the culprit looking from behind the bars, having been sentenced to six days at hard labor. The idea is a new one and is full of fun.

THE "KALEM KALENDAR."

Under the title "Kalem Kalendar," the Kalem Company are issuing a 16 page bulletin containing a synopsis of each release and other interesting information regarding the movements of the Kalem players. It is illustrated with scenes from the pictures and engravings of the favorite Kalem players.

"A RED CROSS MARTYR" (Vitagraph)
Or "On the Firing Lines of Tripoli."

War being declared, Lieutenant Troyano, a young Italian officer, makes haste to the home of Marie Petrini, his sweetheart, and bids her a fond farewell. Everyday the newspapers are scanned by those left at home. They follow the detailed reports from the seat of action. The press announces that there is a crying need for Red Cross nurses. Marie reads this appeal and resolves to go at once to Tripoli as a nurse. She leaves her home and secures an appointment.

The Italian detachment is passing through one of the village streets of Tripoli. The lurking enemy fire upon them and a conflict ensues. Among the dead is Marie Petrini. A treacherous shot from a Turkish rifle has pierced her heart. Lieutenant Scene from "A Red Cross Martyr" (Vitagraph).

Troyano up to this moment has not been aware of her presence in Tripoli. With great grief, he pays his last sad respects to Marie but his heart is filled with a desire to avenge this cruel wrong.

The Commanding General cannot accept as fair in war the shooting down of women. Immediately he sends out orders to call into play the aeroplane, with instructions to destroy the city which has so ruthlessly disregarded the innocent and the unoffending. Lieutenant Troyano begs that he be allowed to fly the aeroplane, being an experienced pilot. He is granted permission and soars above on his mission, dropping bomb after bomb with telling effect, laying the doomed city in ruins. He descends nearer and nearer the enemy, until they, taking advantage of his approach, wound him and cause him to lose control of the machine which falls a useless mass just outside the city walls. He is picked up by his comrades, who carry his lifeless form to the side of Marie and together they are buried with military honors.

This picture is up to the usual Vitagraph standard and will be released Monday, January 1.

YOU WILL LIKE THESE NESTORS.

Among the coming releases from the Nestor studios is announced "The Best Man Wins," "A Western Girl's Love" and, on a split reel, "Mutt and Jeff Break Into Society" and "Their Afternoon Off." Everyone of this handful of Nestors is above the average and some of them are top-liners. "The Best Man Wins" is a very clever comedy amid rural surroundings in which a plowing contest is pulled off to decide who shall gain the favor of the farmer's daughter. There is considerable competition between the farmers' sons of the vicinity, but the real contest comes off between the young man the girl's father wants her to marry and a young man from the East who has made quite an impression upon the girl and is anxious to marry her.

By some strange good fortune the young man from the East wins the contest and, while the dance is at its height, slips away with her and gets her promise to marry him. It is not to be easy sailing, though, for the jealous lover sees them slip away and, finding the girl's father who has no use for the Eastern boy, makes an attempt to stop the proceedings. The old man finds the young folks and proceeds to read the riot act to the young man. At this point the young man from the East plays his trump card; he hands the old farmer his credentials showing that he is a representative of the Agricultural Department at Washington, D. C. This wins the old man's consent to the arrangements made by the young folks and everybody is happy but the disappointed lover. Harold Lockwood plays the part of the Eastern boy with dignity and spirit.

The "Mutt and Jeff" number is up to the average and will provide a lot of fun for those who like that brand of comedy. The short comedy on the same reel entitled "Their Afternoon Off" is a delicious bit of fun in which two young folks, meeting in a city park, fall to romancing about their automobiles and trips to Europe. Bidding each other good bye they separate to meet the next day; one as the milkman and the other as the kitchen maid, much to their mutual surprise. But they have the saving sense of humor and decide to make the best of their opportunity. There is a good laugh in this.

"The Western Girl's Love" is a conventional Western melodrama picture with some riding and shooting and a "lost memory" incident exciting in contrast for the sorrow and happiness for the girl and the lover of her choice.

POWERS "BOOST PACK" OPENS.

Exhibitors all over the country have been noticing that something is promised them from the Powers' Boost Department, and this week marks the disappearance of the Powers Motion Picture Company's weekly "Talks to Exhibitors." In its stead the mail will bring a large envelope, and therein the anxious exhibitor will find a lobby display that ought to do credit to the most classic front. Special care has been taken in preparing the reading matter on these, so that they really constitute a message from the exhibitor to the passerby, giving just enough of the story to make it appeal.

The contents of the "Boost Envelope" will change from week to week, and from what we can learn there are some pleasant surprises in store for the exhibitors. Mr. Powers has started on a campaign that ought to bring big results.

"A REALISTIC MAKE-UP" (Great Northern)).

The Great Northern's next comedy release, "A Realistic Make-up," belongs in the front rank of its class, and it will give "class" to every program that includes it. Carl Alstrup, the Great Northern's star comedy player, is featured in this picture and his superior acting adds greatly to the tone of the production. It's not necessary to say a great deal about the photography, because the fact that Great Northern pictures are uniformly good in that respect is well known.

Just a word about the story. An actor goes to his study to work up in the part he has been given in a new play. After studying for awhile he tackles the make-up. Putting on a workman's blouse and an old cap the actor studies his features in the mirror and is a bit uncertain as to the effect. While he is thus employed we are given another scene showing a slouchily-dressed individual sneaking about the premises. The fellow enters the house and we realize from his actions that he is a burglar. Finally he enters the actor's study and holds him up with a revolver. After tying the actor's hands the burglar leisurely contemplates the situation, drinking the actor's wine the meanwhile. Next he goes to the dining room and enjoys the actor's dinner, after which he goes up to the actor's bed room and puts on the actor's pajamas.

Taking this chance the actor manages to get into communication with the police by taking the receiver from the phone with his teeth. The police arrive—two of them—and find the burglar in pajamas comfortably seated and enjoying the discomfiture of the actor who, with jumper and cap and his hands tied, looks the part of a burglar to perfection. The make-up deceives the police and they pounce upon the actor and drag him out of the house despite his protestations. He is in a fair way to be locked up when he finally succeeds in convincing the police that he is the victim and that the real burglar is the man back in the house. While this is going on the real burglar, feeling secure, goes to bed. Here the police find him on their return and he is rudely awakened. But, before they can get him out of the house, the actor decides that the fellow has done him a great service and induces the policemen to let him go free, at the same time handing them a liberal fee. The policemen are accommodating, and with the observation "Now I am sure that I have a good make-up," the grateful actor hands the burglar a liberal sum of money and sends him on his way.

FAMOUS DIRECTOR FOR THE INDEPENDENTS.

The Eclair Company of America announces the acquisition of the noted Arnaud, formerly Premier Metteur en scene of the Gaumont Co., who is scheduled to arrive in Fort Lee early in January.

M. Arnaud is well and favorably known in America for the magnificent historical and Religious subjects staged and produced under his direction for the latter firm, in fact, he devotes his effort exclusively, to large and important productions. The new and wonderful Eclair studios and laboratories offer wide scope for the display of M. Arnaud's ability in America.

"HIS MUSICAL SOUL" (Solax).

The Solax Company had a visitor over at the Studio the other day. The gentleman was shown through the studio, factory, machine shop and offices. Finally he was taken to the projecting room where a first print of "His Musical Soul," the Solax release of Wednesday, January 3rd, was being shown to the directors and players. Before a couple of hundred feet were exposed the visitor's state of mind resembled a gigantic question mark.

"His Musical Soul" is a comedy in which a fat man (300 pounds) undertakes the delicate task of wooing a slip of a girl about one-third his weight. The fat man has as much music in him as a buzz-saw or an obstreperous dumbwaiter, but a rival in the form of a curly-haired violinist with nimble fingers and graceful masculine lines, is the favored suitor, so the fat man decides that he must not be outdone in the arts of love. He buys a trombone possessing the magic of the proverbial flute, only instead of driving the rats to the sea, the trombone drives people to destruction and animates inanimate things so that they also may manifest their protest.

Scene from "Turn of the Wheel" (Reliance).

The visitor was considerably baffled. He asked thousands of questions. "How do you get the pictures to move on the walls, what do you do to make the glassware dance on the tables and the clock to do a cake-walk on the mantelpiece?" All this trick work Madame Blache, who staged the picture, tried to make clear to the curious visitor.

The visitor had an idea that strings were attached and a man behind the scenes regulated the movement of the furniture and other chattels. When told that it was all done by an automatic arrangement the visitor gasped and looked upon the Solax contingent as wonders of creative genius.

"ALCOHOL" FOR W. C. T. U.

The Eclair Film Company of America joins the "uplift movement" by producing in pictures a dramatic story in three reels on "The Ravages of Alcohol." Similar subjects have been attempted previously, but the Eclair offering is perhaps the most pretentious of its kind yet seen.

The spectator is carried through more than forty wonderful scenes depicting the lives of father and son, with the effects of the drug on the former and the hereditary influence exerted in the latter. Months were spent in staging "Alcohol," many of the scenes being massive in construction. The artists employed number several hundred.

No date has been announced for the release of "Alcohol," as the wishes of the various temperance societies will be followed largely in determining a method of distribution.

ARTHUR DONALDSON GETS OVATION.

Arthur Donaldson, well known in theatrical and picture circles in this country and who played important parts in the Irish pictures made by the Kalem Company, has made a most successful appearance before the public in Oscar Theater, Stockholm, Sweden, his home town. Word has reached The World through friends that Mr. Donaldson was given twenty-six curtain calls during the piece and that, at the conclusion of the play was "called before the iron curtain" which, it appears, is the greatest mark of appreciation that can be paid to a player in Swedish theaters.

FLORENCE TURNER APPEARS IN SAN FRANCISCO.

One evening recently the patrons of one of San Francisco's picture houses were surprised to see Miss Florence Turner, of the Vitagraph Company of America, appear before them.

It seems that a few nights before, Miss Turner "dropped in" to the Fairyland Theater, located in a residence district, in Devisadero Street, and unnoticed, saw "Auld Lang Syne."

Upon leaving, the "Vitagraph Girl" was spied by the proprietor and there was an arrangement made on the spot. When Miss Turner appeared before the audience, after her masterpiece "Jealousy" was reeled off, her weak little voice said, "I can be funny, too!" She was funny, very funny. Her first imitation was "A Sales Girl Trying Not to Sell Something." After ten rounds of good stout applause "Flo," (as mother calls her) continued with another imitation, "A Bowery Boy In the Gallery." More applause, bunches of flowers, her smile, and good-bye. She left in her automobile.

Miss Turner certainly has some ability as an actress. After seeing her act that one scene of "Jealousy," then to have her stand before an audience and get away with comedy, that's going some. Not every actress can prove a tragedienne and comedienne.

JEROME D. MITCHELL.

"BILL KALEM" GOES VISITING.

While strolling up Eighth Avenue last Sunday night our old friend, Bill Wright, of the Kalem Company, saw a green glow ahead of him. On investigation Bill found the peculiar color was caused by the green electric light globes in front of the Royal Theater, 123d Street and Eighth Avenue, this novel illumination being used to feature Kalem's headliner, "Arrah Na Pogue." Bill dropped in to visit the manager and was requested to tell the audience something about the country in which the picture was made. Bill did not require much urging, as "telling about the pictures" is his forte.

The Royal patronage—made up of the intelligent part of the neighborhood—enjoyed hearing at first hand about the genuine Irish scenes, and the great big feature films soon to be produced in the Holy Land by the same company of talented actors who produced "Arrah Na Pogue," and the other popular Kalem Irish photoplays. Friend Wright is known from Maine to California as the exhibitors' friend, and Bill never hesitates when an opportunity presents itself to do the manager a good turn.

Scene from "His Musical Soul" (Solax).

GAUMONT PROGRAM.

Great French Film Makers Celebrate Their Independence with Numerous Feature Subjects.

Now that the Gaumont Co. has fully resolved to exploit its far-famed Gaumont films in the Independent ranks, everything is rapidly forming itself in readiness. They announce the definite decision to sell their productions direct to the exchanges through the open market so that members of all and any existing organizations will find it possible to supply their exhibitors with Gaumont films.

The output of this concern will contain a very large proportion of feature reels, and it is their intention to sell these to exchanges in the same way that the ordinary releases of the various manufacturers are now being disposed of, instead of asking special prices. In order to convince the American market of the merit of the feature productions that they have ready for exploitation, they have decided to release as their initial independent attempt the Delhi Durbar, as soon as it reaches this country. This procession and the incidents which accompanied the coronation of King George the V. as Emperor of India has already been faithfully photographed by representatives of this European manufacturer in the British possession. The reel will reach this country about the middle of January, 1912, and will be put upon the market as soon as it arrives. The grandeur and magnificence of the Durbar will easily raise this release above the best of the specials that have yet been put out. It will be a genuine principle of the Gaumont firm that none of their films will fall into the class of mediocrity. The best points of vantage have been taken by the camera man so that a full and faithful record of the entire coronation procession will be projected on the screen. One thousand elephants carrying all the gradations of Hindoo royalty, as well as the glittering and gaily caparisoned equipages, will give evidence to the respect with which the British subjects regard their sovereign. This is indeed a subject that can be billed specially, and two-sheet posters and pictorial descriptive circular matter can be procured by writing to the Gaumont offices at Flushing, New York.

The second feature will be entitled "The Christian Martyrs," which will be hand colored throughout. The story depicts the sufferings and persecutions of the earliest exponents of modern civilization, and gives a realistic idea of the manner in which the pagan Romans humiliated and tortured the early Christians. The possibilities of this film as a follow-up to the Delhi Durbar will surely be realized by the trade throughout the country. They will be able to obtain an accurate idea of the quality and magnitude of Gaumont independent productions. This film will also be sold to the exchanges just as though it were an ordinary release; in fact, the Gaumont Company announce that their releases will contain a very large proportion of feature films and that these will be sold to the exchanges in the same manner as the ordinary releases are now being sold. They will not ask special and undue prices.

The Gaumont representative will shortly make a tour among all the exchanges and acquaint them with the opportunities that this manufacturer has in store for them.

The Gaumont Weekly film, which will comprise all events of topical nature from week to week, is slated for release on or about the 20th of January. The black and white films will sell at the recognized price of 10c a foot, while a nominal extra charge will be made for the hand-colored ones.

A SOCIOLOGICAL PICTURE.

Under the title "The Blood of the Poor," a rather daring effort has been made by the Champion Film Company to depict a harrowing phase of human life—a result of our present economic conditions. Subjects of this character are calculated to arouse class prejudice unless treated in the most delicate manner and it is open to question if good can result from accentuating the social differences of the people.

In this particular instance a poverty-stricken Jewish tailor with a family of small children has been served with a dispossess notice and is in despair. Learning of the distress of his tenant, the landlord offers to take the oldest girl into his service as maid to his daughter and cancel the rent. There is nothing else for the poor tailor to do, so he accepts the terms. While serving as maid, the girl comes in contact with a rich young man who is to marry the landlord's daughter, and eventually falls victim to his blandishments. The maid is discharged and the young man is only gently chided by his fiancee and her mother for his carelessness. He treats the matter as a good joke.

Returning to the old tailor, we find him struggling to make a dress coat for the young millionaire within a time limit. He gets it finished, but the strain has been too much for his starved body and he drops dead upon the couch. Following this dread event, the young man and his tailor rush in for the coat; they find it finished, but discover that it has cost a man's life. While carelessly contemplating the situation, the girl comes in to learn for the first time that her father is dead and, while bowed in grief over his lifeless form, the young man who has caused her ruin and discharge offers her money. The offer is spurned and the man walks out with a laugh on his lips.

How the upper half live is shown in a view of the festivities attending the announcement of the engagement of the young man and the daughter of the landlord—a brilliant scene.

The appearance of this picture, which is to be released Jan. 1, 1912, will be hailed in certain quarters.

Calendar of Independent Releases.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 25th, 1911.

AMERICAN—The Duel of Candles (Dramatic) 1000
CHAMPION—Bonnie of the Hills (Dr.) 999
COMET—The Tie That Binds (Com.) 1000
IMP—On the Stroke of Three (Dr.) 1000
NESTOR—The Best Man Wins (Com.) .....

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 26th, 1911.

BISON—The Run on the Bank (Dr.) .....
ECLAIR—The Wrong Bottle (Amer. Com.-Dr.) .....
POWERS—The Sign of the Helmet (Com.) .....
POWERS—Where Steel Meets Cloud (Industrial) ....
THANHOUSER—She (Two Reels—Dr.) .....

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 27th, 1911.

AMBROSIO—Tweedledum in Love with a Singer (C).
AMBROSIO—Tiny Tom's Exploits (Com.).....
CHAMPION—The Doctor's Close Call (Dr.) 1000
NESTOR—A Western Girl's Love (Dr.) .....
RELIANCE—Brotherly Love (Dr.) .....
SOLAX—When Mary Was Little (Com.) .....

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 28th, 1911.

AMERICAN—Bonita of El Cajon (Dr.) 1000
ECLAIR—The Silent Call (Dr.) .....
IMP—The Portrait (Dr.) 1000
REX—An Unwelcome Santa Claus (Com.) .....

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1911.

BISON—Getting His Man (Dr.) .....
COMET—The Crude Miss Prude (Com.) 1000
LUX—Making Pianos (Industrial) 344
LUX—Caught by Cinematography (Dr.) 636
SOLAX—The Divided Ring (Dr.) .....
THANHOUSER—The Expert's Report (Dr.) .....

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 30th, 1911.

GREAT NORTHERN—A Realistic Make-Up (Com.) ..
GREAT NORTHERN—Sea and Landscapes, Denmark (Scenic) .....
ITALA—A New Year's Guest (Com.) .....
IMP—Broke (Com.) 600
IMP—A Lesson to Husbands (Dr.) 400
NESTOR—Mutt and Jeff Break into Society (Com.)..
NESTOR—Their Afternoon Off (Com.) .....
POWERS—A Mail-Bag Romance (Dr.) .....
RELIANCE—The Birth-Mark (Dr.) .....

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 31st, 1911.

MAJESTIC—Will You Marry Me? (Com.) 615
REPUBLIC—The Pride of Lexington (Historical Dr.)
SOLAX—Christmas Presents (Dr.) .....

TWO MAJESTICS EVERY WEEK.

Commencing January 7, 1912, the Majestic will release two subjects each week, the release days being Friday and Sunday. Exhibitors who have tested the qualities of the Majestic pictures will learn this bit of news with considerable satisfaction. "Gossip," reviewed elsewhere in this issue of The World, will be the first Friday release. It is a good number for any program.

"RAISING THE MAINE" FILMS.

The Raising The Maine Film Co. has been fortunate in securing the West End Theater, on 125th St., New York, for exhibiting their pictures of the Battleship Maine, a film of national interest, portraying the hazardous work attached to the raising of that unfortunate ship which was blown up in Havana Harbor in 1898

"LOVE WILL FIND A WAY" (Kleine-Eclipse).

(Cover Illustration.)

This clever Eclipse subject is of a higher class than the majority of film comedies. A young nobleman, Count Louis Anglade, in love with the charming Miss Arlette does not meet with the approval of her aunt. Louis gets his uncle, who is an old friend of the aunt to assist him to disguise himself and be engaged as tutor for young Master Maurice Reynold. One day the young Count is discovered by the Aunt. She thinks that it is for love of herself that Louis is there. He is asked for an explanation and the true reason is disclosed. The elder lady is at first grieved, but soon gives her blessing to the happy pair.

NEW INSTALLATIONS BY HALLBERG.

The Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, on West 142d St., has installed a new Model B. Edison M. P. Machine with Hallberg Economizer, furnished by J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man." He reports also sale of Edison Model B Machines with Hallberg Economizers, as well as all supplies to L. Liebmann, 1379 Washington Ave., The Bronx, and Condit & Bartolini, Mariner's Harbor, N. Y. Powers No. 6 and Economizer to Kurz & Levy, Amsterdam Ave. and 145th St., City.

ECLAIR CO-OPERATES WITH EXHIBITORS.

Direct co-operation with the theater is the plan adopted by the American Eclair Film Company. The method involves much expense yet should prove effective as, if properly exploited by the exhibitor, an increase in receipts should follow.

According to the announcement, made elsewhere, the Eclair Company sends out specially prepared photos and lobby displays to all exhibitors who send in the name of any Eclair subject they have booked and the date it is to be shown.

This advertising matter is supplied in advance to allow time for acquainting the public of the production's coming.

Any proposition tending to improve business will be welcomed by theater managers, hence the Eclair plan should prove immensely popular.

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY MOVES.

The Champion Film Company, formerly located at 10 East 15th Street, have removed to larger and more commodious quarters in the new Exchange Building, 145 West 45th Street. Mr. Dintenfass is tickled to death with his new offices and well he might be, for his present suite, including general offices, business office and his own private office, is a vast improvement over the old "lay out" on Fifteenth Street.

Through the columns of the Moving Picture World, Mr. Dintenfass wishes to extend a cordial invitation to the trade to call. (There is a box of Romeo Perfectos on tap.)

GEORGE KLEINE IN NEW YORK CITY.

Mr. George Kleine, of Chicago, recently returned from a six weeks' trip in Europe, and was at the Hotel Knickerbocker, 42nd St. and Broadway, while in New York.

SWANSON'S TRANS-MOUNTAIN SERVICE.

The above engraving shows Mr. J. M. Probst, of Durango, Col., leading a pack horse over the mountains to Silverton, Col., with a week's film service for Miller & Ennis. The trip was made necessary by a wash-out on the Rio Grande Railroad, which cut Silverton off from communication with Denver. Mr. Probst's trip was arranged by H. T. Nolan, manager of the Swanson Film Company, and meant a 45-mile hike over the mountain trail. Some idea of the roughness of the road is given in the picture.

Scene from "The Kiddies' Christmas," 2 Reels (Lubin).

MOTION PICTURES AT NATIONAL ARTS CLUB.

Under the direction of Madame Ruth Booth Dolese, a selected program of motion pictures was shown at the National Arts Club, in Gramercy Park, New York City, Wednesday evening, Dec. 20. About 100 members of the club and a few invited guests were present. The subjects shown were "Panama Canal in 1911," Edison; "The Battle," Biograph; "Sea Birds and Their Haunts," "Life in the Pond," and "Niagara Falls," Pathe. The pictures aroused the deepest interest and frequent applause greeted many scenes. Edison's "Panama Canal" and the Pathe Nature pictures came for the most favorable comment.

EXHIBITOR AND SCHOOL WORKING TOGETHER.

Mr. A. J. Wellman, proprietor of the Lyric Theatre, Catlettsburg, Ky., is one of those exhibitors who is interested in the moving picture from its educational aspect. He finds it more profitable to cater to the intellects of his audience than to their animal spirits, and in doing so he gets more pleasure and interest out of his business himself. At the present time he has developed an excellent working plan to co-operate with the superintendent of schools in Catlettsburg, in which idea he finds a ready response from the school authorities. Each week there are five tickets for the Lyric given in every schoolroom as prizes for good work. The tickets are distributed by the teachers and are good for matinees only. There would be no child laws necessary if all exhibitors were of the same mind as Mr. Wellman, for he does not believe in children patronizing theatres alone at night, nor in filling their minds with unprofitable ideas.

It is quite plain to be seen, from the evidence at hand, that he considers himself an educator and that he has a duty to fulfill in his home city. The newspapers are also with him and are giving his co-operative plan plenty of space. Mr. Wellman, if he could do as he wishes, would give an exclusively educational exhibition every day. But owing to the scarcity of subjects he is glad to get one educational picture a day. His principal complaint is that it is difficult to book even one educational subject per day, owing to the scarcity of that class of pictures, which it is quite certain that the public dearly loves to see.

STOLEN.

1 Power's Cameragraph No. 6; Serial No. 3306
" " " " " " " 3403
" " " " " " " 3404
Suitable reward for information that will lead to their recovery.
H. A. Mackie, 853 Broadway, New York.

WITH MILDRED HOLLAND
POWERS MOTION PICTURE CO
PPP

Mr. R. S. Sturgeon (3rd from right, standing) and Members of Vitagraph Western Company at Santa Monica, Cal.

Laboratory and Headquarters of Vitagraph Western Company at Santa Monica, Cal.

"A Victim of the Mormons," a Three-Reel Special Feature to be Released by The Great Northern Film Co., February 3rd, 1912.

MISS FANNIE SIMPSON,
Versatile Player of the Solax Company.

MISS LENORE ULRICH,
Charming Member of the Essanay Comedy Company.

Scene from "Broncho Billy's Christmas Dinner" (Essanay). Miss Fisher Driving Just Before Coach Upset.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.

THEATERS FOR SALE.

Agents for Buying, Selling, Renting of Moving Picture Theaters Exclusively.

LOT 15-a—[illegible] exceptionally fine house, capacity 500. Equipment best that money can buy and appointments first class in every respect. $12,000.

LOT 30-a—New York, [illegible] Population 35,000. Cost $19,000 to build. 50 x 100. Within easy distance New York City. Ten years' lease. $13,000 or can buy out property within three years for $9,000 additional. MOVING PICTURE THEATER AGENCY, Box 485, Madison Sq. P. O., New York City.

FOR SALE—Moving Picture Theater town of 1,500. Ten-cent house. Steady income producer. Address, H. D. K., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

FOR SALE—Moving Picture Theater in city of 28,000 inhabitants, within 57 miles from New York. Only one other moving picture theater in city. Seating capacity fully three hundred. Has been established five years. This is a good proposition for some live man. Only reason for selling, owner has other interest demanding his attention. Will sell at a bargain. Address, S. H. B., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

THEATERS WANTED.

Agents for Buying, Selling, Renting of Moving Picture Theaters Exclusively.

WANTED—Picture theater, no vaudeville, 299 seats, Greater New York, full particulars. Refer No. 2-w. MOVING PICTURE THEATER AGENCY, Box 485, Madison Square, P. O., New York City.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY—After Jan. 1, thoroughly experienced theater manager—pictures, vaudeville or both—go anywhere. Best references—bank and theatrical. What have you to offer a man with ideas? Address, 410, MANAGER, c. o. Moving Picture World, New York City.

AT LIBERTY—[illegible] PULLMAN, 23 Stuyvesant P[illegible] New York City.

TALKING PICTURE [illegible] Fair salary. Man can manage reliable people. New York, six years. Address, TALKING PICTURE O'NEILL, 5610 Fourth Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

AT LIBERTY—After Jan. 1, trap drummer; all traps etc. Experienced. Can also do and have done illustrated songs. Capable of managing picture house. Address, G. R., care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

AT LIBERTY—First-class operator, with three years' experience; would like position outside of Greater New York. Address, D. MacDONALD, 317 Twentieth Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

HELP WANTED.

WANT PICTURE THEATER MANAGER that can take hold and build up good high class patronage. Kindly do not reply if not fully qualified; state terms. Address OHIO MANAGER, care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

WANTED—Pianist for new theater in Indiana city of 60,000. Must belong to union and be able to play the pictures. If you are not good don't write. Address, PIANIST, care of Moving Picture World, Chicago, Ill.

HALL FOR RENT.

FOR RENT—Hall 35 x 70, with good stage and anterooms. Seating capacity about 400. In live city of 45,000 near Boston. Suitable for moving picture theater. Address, T. W. CARTER, 30 Kilby St., Boston, Mass.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE

FOR SALE OR EXCHANGE—[illegible] Write quick. Machine is complete and was used only a [illegible] L. WORDEN, 52 Congress Street, Oshkosh, Wis.

FOR SALE—Moving picture machine cheap. Write quick. Machine is complete and was used only a [illegible] L. WORDEN, 52 Congress Street, Oshkosh, Wis.

FOR SALE—[illegible] Model No. 5 machine. Must [illegible] H. P. [illegible] complete. All in first class condition. Address, PALACE AMUSEMENT COMPANY, [illegible] Virginia.

MISCELLANEOUS

WANTED to buy or lease moving picture theaters in the Middle West. Also house managers and singers wanted. Write. PRINCESS THEATER CIRCUIT CO., INC., St. Cloud, Minn.

WANTED.—All prospective builders of Moving Picture Theaters to communicate with us in reference to our LOFT DRIED DAMP RESISTING PANEL BOARD for interior finish. Now being used in picture theaters with most satisfactory results. Address, CHARLES D. BROWN & COMPANY, Inc., 40 Federal St., Boston, Mass.

FILMS WANTED—Want to buy two Edison reels, "Bridge of Sighs," "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" Write quick if you have these reels. Best price. Must be in good condition. Will buy other features. Address, MAJESTIC THEATER, Altoona, Pa.

FOR SALE—Copy of Italian and Turkish War film. Used two weeks over my circuit. Fifty lithos, film good as new. Price, $50. Sent C. O. D. Allow examination at express office. Address, CHARLES S. SIPE, Marion, Ind.

WANTED—To exchange a valuable farm for a good picture theater. For further particulars, address W. A. COLLIER, Grove City, Pa.

Advertising Cinderella

The accompanying illustration is made from an eight-sheet poster being issued by the Selig Polyscope Company for its release entitled "Cinderella," in which the dainty Mabel Taliaferro is featured. It is a beautifully-colored creation and in keeping with the subject.

Other special advertising for this subject embraces press notices, display advertisements and newspaper cuts in several sizes, properly designed for advertisements and reading notices. The electros may be purchased at cost price: single column, 95c.; two-column, $1.50; three-column, $1.50. A set of proof sheets showing these electros and the accompanying reading matter is being sent to exhibitors. A press sheet with six readers for use in the local columns of newspapers is also being distributed.

The poster offerings, aside from the eight-sheet illustrated, includes attractive one and three-sheet designs. Small hand-bills for general distribution have also been printed. These are printed in black on various colored paper.

For the assistance of the pianist who plays the pictures, Mr. Clarence E. Sinn has prepared a list of suitable music for the three reels. This music is not in the form of a special score, as might easily have been arranged for a subject of the importance of "Cinderella," but is merely a list of published music which may be readily adapted to the various scenes, with the names of the publishers from whom the various pieces may be obtained. It will help some.

With such a complete line of advertising accessories and a picture of the character of "Cinderella," there is no reason why exhibitors who are enterprising enough to avail themselves of the opportunity, should not reap a harvest of easy money. Incidentally, a campaign such as is made possible by the material offered, ought to make photoplays unusually popular wherever it is used.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

AN APPEAL FOR BETTER GRADE OF PICTURE DRAMA.

Editor Moving Picture World.

Dear Sir:—As a patron of the motion picture playhouses, I desire to add my modicum of praise to the splendid results achieved by the actors and actresses of the various motion picture companies. The acting of each individual is most often in perfect unanimity with that of the others in the production, and the "business" of each, supplemented by the facial and bodily expression in the interpretation of the role is wonderful to a high degree, and lends to the endeavors of each a realism peculiarly forceful, notwithstanding the fact that the influence of vocal expression on their auditors is denied them.

However, is the character of the average drama which these people are obliged to act of sufficient strength and force to give them opportunity of exercising to the fullest extent their histrionic ability in the depiction of the wide range of human emotion? The life delineated in these plays is very often a distortion in every way, of the great life in which we are all so deeply concerned. The parts which the various actors are given to interpret, are quite often wholly illogical, and not at all in accord with probable and natural sequence. Sometimes these small plays are absurd to a degree of constituting an unintentional travesty upon that particular phase of serious life which the actors are struggling in so noble a manner to present. The dramas are often ridiculous and cheaply farcical, to the extent of being disgusting; and although the argument may be advanced that the silent dramas are only witnessed by the poorer and less cultured class, and therefore a class less appreciative of the higher forms of art, it can be cited as a fact, that our simpler and less aesthetic brethren have really a truer and more subtile valuation and knowledge of the causations of human passion, as he himself is swayed by the primitive emotions more readily than those upon whom refinement and education have laid powerful constraint. And in the furtherance of the argument that the uncultured have a keen and equally discerning appreciation of the higher in art, drama and music, witness the many of these people who throng the art museums and stand enraptured before the masterpieces exposed there, and the crowds of the same at the opera and theater, as they peer down eagerly from the topmost galleries. And moreover, it is acknowledged by more than one great actor that the finest appreciation of the merits of a play come from these same people.

It being apparent, from the spectator's viewpoint, that thousands of dollars are spent in elaborating a moving picture production, for costuming, scenery, high salaried actors, etc., etc., why should not a proportionate amount be expended for a real, human drama by some playwright of ability, as is done by theatrical producers? This would, no doubt, entail considerable additional expense, and would necessitate charging the playhouses a higher rate for the rental of the films than obtains now, but I believe the moving picture public would readily pay five or ten cents more if they could be assured of a higher class of production.

So I trust that as the influence for good or evil of the moving picture plays upon the minds of these especially impressionable people is great, you will allow me to enter my plea for a type of drama more representative of actual life and human feeling; with its little touches of fantasty and artistry, which give to dramatic art, displayed on the theatrical stage, its seductive appeal, and has made it one of the greatest factors in human betterment. EDISON L. SKEHAN, New York.

A GROWL FROM THE DARK ROOM.

Editor Moving Picture World.

Dear Sir:—When a proud new liner from Europe makes her way up New York Bay, as in the case of the "Olympic," a few months ago, we all shout ourselves hoarse with delight. Figuratively speaking, of course. There is, at any rate, a great deal of whistling on the river. Pictures of the new leviathan appear in the papers, the owners of the ship, the designers of the ship, the builders of the ship, the captain and his officers, some of the passengers, they all come in for taffy. But devil a one of them goes out of his way to say a kind word for the 400 or 500 poor wretches who have been locked up in the Inferno which supplies the motive power for driving the great hulk through the water.

I mean the firemen, the stokers, who work in four-hour shifts in a temperature of an average of 120 degrees, shoveling coal into the furnaces. Nobody thinks of them. Yet in their way, they merit as much laudation as the other people who help to get the new liner here. I notice from your columns that there is a parallel to be drawn between the new Atlantic liner and the moving picture.

Here you are, week after week, saying nice things about these nice pictures; the actors and actresses; the producers; the manufacturers, of course; the authors of the scenarios; the exhibitors; the operators; all these people are handed out taffy in your pages, but devil a soul thinks it worth while to put in a word of encouragement for the dark room help, who, like the firemen on the Atlantic liner, are, after all, the people who get down to the making of the picture which incites so much pleasure.

Dark room work is not a Heavenly job. It is, perhaps, the most irksome part of the moving picture business. The camera man feels the delight of bringing down his prey; he has something of the consciousness of a sportsman who makes a good shot. The operator shares in the general applause. The actors and actresses get glory, the manufacturers and exhibitors pocket the profits; the dark room helper gets so much per, and that is all. I think he deserves more.

I see a lot about combinations of manufacturers, exhibitors, and operators. What about a combination of dark room helpers, people who do developing, perforating; all the work incidental to the production of the finished picture? There must be several thousands of dark room workers, scattered throughout the various film factories of this country. Our work is at least as skilled as that of the operator, but, as I said before, nobody says a word for us. The only occasions I can recall when the dark room help was allowed in the limelight, were at the Vitagraph and Imp dinners last year. Then some of us were permitted to open our mouths. It would encourage us in our work if some times in your paper, a word of notice were given us.

I write this at the instigation of several companions in misery in the Red Light district. I don't mean the Red Light district commonly understood. I mean the dark room where they print and develop the pictures that are written about so much every week. Thank you for printing this little growl. "HYPO."

HAIL TO THE KING!

Keith's New Theater, Campello, Mass., Dec 14, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir:—You will do me a favor by inserting the following in your paper in regards to Mr. "Henry" saying that the title of "Moving Picture King," by L. A. Howard, is incorrect. I have never claimed I was the "Moving Picture King of New England," but I do claim that I have had the title of "Moving Picture King of the United States" for the past fourteen years. The title was first given to me when I played New York City, about fourteen years ago, with my first picture and vaudeville show. I have shown all over the West, and have been over the best part of Europe, and I still have some of my old Heralds of 16 years ago, with that title printed on. I have been in show business, all branches, for the past 22 years, and I am known by every first-class manager in the country. I did not return to New England from Europe until 1900. I know of several people who have used the title in late years. Mr. Foster, who is now with Keith's Boston Theater, used it about 8 years ago, and many others I could mention. All I care is to let you know I have not taken that title from anyone else, especially from Mr. Frank Howard, whom I know personally and respect, and who is without a doubt the best known picture man in New England, and well deserves the title of the "Moving Picture King of New England." If there are any showmen who used the title before me, I would like to hear from them. I remain, respectfully. "One of the old school," L. A. HOWARD.

WASTED AMMUNITION.

Rex Theater, Berkeley Cal., Nov. 27, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World.

Dear Sir:—Could you spare me a few moments' time on a certain point that I see lacking in many of the best pictures?

Many times we see a group of soldiers or cowboys riding down a ridge, shooting a hundred or more rounds of shots against the pure white sky above as a background. Of course we know they are shooting by the way the horses are jumping around, and by the action of their riders, but that is the only way you could tell in some of the battle scenes. Why could they not find a ridge having a distant dark mountain, or even tall trees, anything to get the benefit of the very thing that is to make for them a battle scene? Take the recent release, "The Empty Saddle," a beautiful story, indeed, but how much could they have improved on this picture should they have had at the time this very point in view. Great volumes of smoke went skyward all through this battle scene, but it had no background to show that there was any powder used at all. I have noticed this time and time again. The color of powder smoke and the sky is of the same whiteness and affords no contrast. There should be something dark in the extreme background, and then one could see every flash of powder and get the most important effect in such scenes. Yours truly, EARL R. HILL.

WANTS SCENARIO WRITERS CREDITED.

Brooklyn, New York, December 14, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture World:

Dear Sir:—Referring to your issue of December 16th, and your criticism on the Vitagraph Company's production of "Vanity Fair" therein.

As the unimportant individual who constructed this scenario for the Vitagraph Company (whose splendid rendition, by the way, is a source of great gratification to me, as it must inevitably be to those who will be fortunate enough to witness the film), I wish to say a few words on this subject.

As is usual in such cases, no mention has been made of the scenario composer? It is not the desire of this writer to have his name proclaimed from the housetops, with an impressive blast and blare of trumpets. He does not seek notoriety of this sort. But he does venture to contend that the mere mention of his name could possibly do no harm, but on the contrary, might benefit him in some way. True, you have referred indirectly to him when you say, "that the Vitagraph Company has reproduced a well-known work of fiction, which has lost none of its individual qualities in the transition. It comes nearer to being a flawless adaptation than anything that has appeared in motion pictures." That reference, at least, is something, but why, I ask you, in all sincerity, not only for yourself, but for others similarly situated, who are turning out conscientious work, and tending to elevate the motion picture industry, why, I repeat, is the scenario writer so persistently ignored, and his name enshrouded in dark mystery? When will he come into his own Why does he not receive at least a little share of the praise meted out to those who interpret what he conceives or makes possible for production? These are questions worthy, I believe, of careful consideration.

Illustrating the above, let us take the "Tale of Two Cities" Vitagraph production, as an instance. The principal actors, the director and company, were the recipients of unstinted praise, and deservedly so, for their wonderful work, yet the gentleman who was personally responsible for their success, the person who adapted that masterpiece of fiction, a truly gigantic task, and converted it into a scenario, for motion picture use, what of him? If there is anybody, who labors under the happy delusion that to adopt a novel from Dickens or Thackery, and do so successfully, is an easy undertaking, let that optimistic individual try his hand at it. That's all.

Some readers of this letter will undoubtedly think that the writer is prompted to pen this epistle purely from motives of selfishness and vanity. But this is not so. It is his aim simply to point out a present wrong that can be righted, and should be righted. Credit should be given where credit is due. It is only fair and just.

Too much cannot be said in praise of the Vitagraph's presentation of Thackery's great work. I have, of course, witnessed the picture, and cannot praise the artists too highly. Mr. Kent deserves much commendation for his artistic direction. You have, however, in your review, covered the film so thoroughly and competently that further comment on the subject is superfluous. This letter may possibly attract some attention, and serve to impress upon the film manufacturers (whom I have no wish to disparage by any means, having always found them the most affable and courteous of gentlemen), that the scenario writer or composer is entitled to a little more consideration and attention than he is accorded to-day. If this letter helps the cause of scenario writing in some small way, then it will have served its purpose.

Congratulating you upon the excellence of your "Vanity Fair" criticism, and assuring you that I agree with your reviewer in every particular regarding same, I beg to remain, Respectfully yours, E. G. M.

FLICKERS.

New way to catch murderers. Have the tragedy re-enacted at the scene of the crime. Exhibit the pictures at the Nickelodeon and arrest the murderer when he comes in to look at them. Oh, you Movies!

CINES CO.
OF ROME

ITALIAN-TURKISH WAR
No. 3

The THIRD SERIES, containing a great many exciting incidents, will be released December 28th. Send for Synopsis.

445 BROOME ST.
NEW YORK

Telegraph, Cines, New York — Telephone, Spring 9232

GET ENOUGH 3 IN ONE FOR A REAL GOOD TEST—FREE

Test 3 in One on your moving picture machine thoroughly. It won't cost you a cent. Send to-day for a generous free sample. (Don't mix 3 in One with any old oil in oil cans. Use nothing but 3 in One out of a clean oil can.)

Ask any experienced operator. He knows 3 in One, and will tell you that it is the ideal Moving Picture Machine oil. Lubricates perfectly star wheel, flywheel, shutter gear and every other mechanism. 3 in One won't collect dirt or clog. Contains no acid or alkali. Won't gum—won't run.

3 in One also cleans and polishes all wood and metal surfaces, and absolutely prevents rust in all climates, indoors and out. Try out this good oil right now at our expense. Send for free bottle and free book to-day!

Sold everywhere at 10c, 25c, 50c. (The 50c ½ pint size is the economical size for you.)

3 IN ONE OIL CO.
42 NO BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

W. E. GREENE
FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

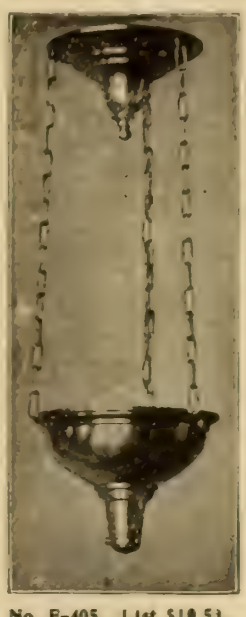
THE OLDEST AND LARGEST INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE IN NEW ENGLAND

Mr. Exhibitor:

Start the Season right by using an Independent Service from a Reliable House. We are buying the Output of the Sales Co. and have some choice services open. Write, wire, or call today at

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.

Telephone: 2187-3790 Oxford



No. E-405. List $10 53.
Ask discounts of your Electric dealer. If he does not carry, write us direct.
Engineering Reports Free.

AT LAST

It is possible to have daylight pictures to run continually in a lighted theatre.

Beautiful even illumination with inexpensive indirect lighting fixtures. Not an electric bulb in sight. The light thrown to the ceiling and diffused through the room. No annoying side lights.

Theatre lighting revolutionized by this Eye COMFORT SYSTEM of Indirect Lighting.

Hundreds of installations being made.

Our engineering department will furnish you free of expense, reports and recommendations on request.

BETTER LIGHT AT LESS EXPENSE

Investigate —Write today

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.,
235 Jackson Blvd., Chicago.
Gentlemen:—
Send full information regarding lighting of our theatre.
Length ..... Width ..... Ceiling Heighth .....
Name ..... Address .....

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 25th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—Caught with the Goods (Comedy) .....
BIOGRAPH—A Mix-Up in Raincoats (Comedy) .....
KALEM—The "Revenue" and the Girl (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—One Way to Win (Comedy) 1000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 52 (Topical) 1000
SELIG—A Modern Trip (Dramatic) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Some Good in All (Xmas Dr.) 1000

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 26th, 1911.

EDISON—Papa's Sweetheart (Dramatic) 625
EDISON—Modern Weapons for Fighting Fire, New York City (Vocational) 375
ESSANAY—A Story of the West (Dramatic) 1000
GAUMONT—From Pity to Love (Dramatic) 826
GAUMONT—Scenes of the Coast of North Africa (Sc.) 124
C. G. P. C.—The Burglar's Hard Luck (Comedy) .....
C. G. P. C.—Aboard a French Battleship (Naval) .....
C. G. P. C.—The Kromats (Acrobatic).....
SELIG—The Bully of Bingo Gulch (Com.-Dr.) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Younger Brother (Mil. Dr.) 1000

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 27th, 1911.

EDISON—The Stuff That Dreams Are Made of (Com.) 1000
ECLIPSE—The Stolen Treasure (Dramatic) 680
ECLIPSE—Fair Exchange Is No Robbery (Com.) ... 322
KALEM—The Higher Toll (Dr.) 1000
PATHE—Mother-in-Law Raises —— (Com.) 1000
LUBIN—The American Girl.....1000
VITAGRAPH—Testing His Courage (Dr.) 1000

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 28th, 1911.

BIOGRAPH—The Voice of the Child (Dramatic) .....
ESSANAY—For Memory's Sake (Dramatic) 1000
LUBIN—The Soldier's Return (Dr.) 1000
MELIES—The Ranchman's Debt of Honor (Dr.) 1000
PATHE—His Daughter's Bracelet (American Dr.) 1000
C. G. P. C.—Mushroom Culture (Edu.) .....
SELIG—Paid Back (Dr.) 1000

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 29th, 1911.

EDISON—A Romance of the Cliff Dwellers (Dr.) 1000
ESSANAY—A Bird in the Hand (Comedy) 1000
KALEM—The Maid's Double (Dramatic) 1000
PATHE—Yann, the Troubadour (Dr.) 950
SELIG—Their Last Chance (Comedy) 1000
VITAGRAPH—A Doubly Desired Orphan (Dr.) 1000

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 30th, 1911.

EDISON—Uncle Hiram's List (Com.) 1000
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Adventure (West. Dr.) ..1000
GAUMONT—Curing a Reckless Student (Dr.) 1010
LUBIN—Father and the Girls.....
PATHE— The Doll (American Drama) .....
VITAGRAPH—In the Clutches of a Vapor Bath (Com.) 1000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, JANUARY 1st, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—The Baby and the Stork (Dramatic) .....
KALEM—Driving Home the Cows (Dr.) 1000
LUBIN—The Oyster Industry (Industrial) .....
LUBIN—Object, Matrimony (Comedy) .....
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 1—1912 (Topical).....1000
SELIG—Cinderella (Three Reels—Juvenile) 3000
VITAGRAPH—A Romance of Wall Street (Dr.) .....

TUESDAY, JANUARY 2nd, 1912.

EDISON—Eleanore Cuyler (Dr.) 1000
ESSANAY—The Mail-Order Wife (Dr.) 1000
GAUMONT—A Royal Romance (Dr.) 975
C. G. P. C.—Infancy of Moses (Biblical) .....
C. G. P. C.—The Ice Formations at Odessa, Russia (Sc.)
SELIG—The Cowboy's Adopted Child (Dr.)..... 850
SELIG—He, She and It (Comedy) 150
VITAGRAPH—A Red Cross Martyr (Dr.) .....

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 3rd, 1912.

EDISON—The Two Flats (Com.) 950
ECLIPSE—True to Their Trust (Dr.) 656
ECLIPSE—A Cotton Goods Factory in France (Indus.) 325
KALEM—The Cowboy Artist's Jonah Day (W. Com.) 1000
PATHE—The Professor's Daughters (Com.-Dr.) 1000
LUBIN—A Village Romance (Com.-Dr.).....1000
VITAGRAPH—The Heart of the King's Jester (Dr.)..

THURSDAY, JANUARY 4th, 1912.

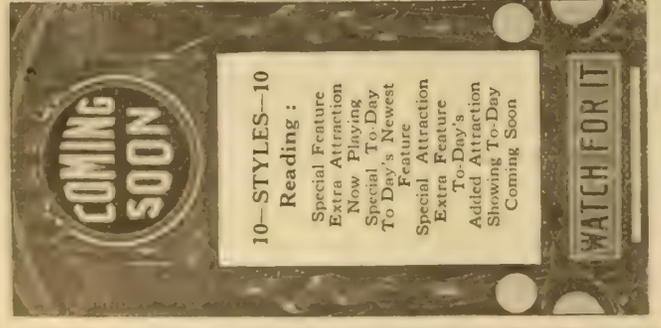
BIOGRAPH—Who Got the Reward (Comedy) .....
BIOGRAPH—The Joke on the Joker (Com.) .....
ESSANAY—The Valley of Regrets (Dr.) 1000
LUBIN—A Noble Enemy (Dr.).....1000
MELIES—A Woman's Gratitude (Dr.) 1000
PATHE—The Rebuked Indian (Indian Dr.) 1000
SELIG—The Mate of the Alden Besse (Dr.) 1000

FRIDAY, JANUARY 5th, 1912.

EDISON—Freezing Auntie (Com.) 660
EDISON—Codfish Industry, Newfoundland (Indus.) ... 340
ESSANAY—For the Love of Mike (Com.) 1000
KALEM—The Dude Cowboy (Com.) .....
KALEM—The O'Kalems' Visit to Killarney (Com. & Sc.)
C. G. P. C.—Betrayed by a Parasol (Com.) .....
C. G. P. C.—Dr. Twostep's Prescription (Trick) .....
C. G. P. C.—A Malay Village During the Rainy Season (Scenic) .....
SELIG—The Other Fellow (Com.) 550
SELIG—Hutchinson, Kansas, Semi-Centennial Celebration (Topical) 550
VITAGRAPH—Destiny Is Changeless (Dr.) .....

SATURDAY, JANUARY 6th, 1912.

EDISON—Please Remit (Com.) 995
ESSANAY—A Child of the West (Dr.) 1000
GAUMONT—Evils of Impure Literature (Dr.) 1035
LUBIN—(Title Not Given) .....
PATHE—The Cowboy's Sister (Western Dr.) .....
PATHE—The Chillouks (Educational) .....
VITAGRAPH—The Path of True Love (Dr.) .....



Another One of Our Poster Frames for 3-Sheet Boards

$1.00 for Complete Set of 10 Styles

Three Sheets 30c each and Eight Sheets 75c each
(Four-Color Pictorial Posters)

For the following licensed features:
Vanity Fair, Grip of Alcohol, Gloucester Port, Molly Pitcher, Lifeboat, Blackbeard, Flash in Night, and all coming big features

Largest and most Complete Line of PASSION PLAY PAPER

Half-Sheets	Full-Sheets	Three-Sheet	Heralds
3 for 25c	2 for 25c	25c each	$2.00 per 1,000

POPULAR PHOTOPLAYERS, complete set of 10 for $2.00
Full-Sheet Posters in Colors Postage prepaid

EXHIBITORS' ADVG. & SPECY CO.
105 E. 14th St., N. Y.
ARTHUR D. JACOBS, Pres BEN. TITLE, Secy. and Treas.

Song Slide Released.

Excelsior Slide Co.

"Suwwtime, Dearv"—Pub. by Edward Kechler Co.
"Baby Is Calling"—Pub. by J. W. Wilcockson Co., Hammond, Ind.
"Cindy"—Pub. by Kendis & Paley, New York.
"Alabama"—Pub. by Newton B. Hemus Co.
"Rose of Erin"—Pub. by G. Taylor
"Moving Picture Boy"—Pub. by M. A. Casey.
"Musical Dream"—Pub. by Betts & Binner.

DeWitt C. Wheeler.

"When I Was 21 and You Were Sweet 16"—Pub. by Remick & Co.
"Flag of Our Country, Long May Thou Wave"—Pub. by Milburn Pub. Co., Skoukegan, Me.
"To Waltz with You"—Pub. by Faben Pub. Co., Elizabeth, N. J.

Niagara Slide Co.

"If I Knew"—Pub. by Burdick.
"Knight of the Road"—Pub. by Burdick.

Scott & Van Altena.

"Take Me Back to the Garden of Love"—Pub. by Ted Snyder.
"Come Over, Joe"—Pub. by Jeff T. Branen.
"I Never Had a Man to Love Me Like You"—Pub. by Harry Von Tilzer.
"In Dear Old Ireland Where the River Kenmare Flows"—Pub. by Will Rossiter.
"Nobody Bothers About Me"—Pub. by Fred Heberlein Co.
"Chicken Rag"—Pub. by J. Fred Helf Co.
"My Bombay Maid"—Pub. by F. B. Haviland.
"She Never Was in Ireland, But She's Irish Just the Same"—Pub. by Fred Heberlein Co.

Levi Co.

"That Baboon Baby Dance"—Pub. by Shapiro.
"It's Lonesome on Broadway"—Pub. by Shapiro.
"They Don't Speak to One Another Now"—Pub. by Shapiro.
"My Killarney Rose"—Pub. by Sunlight Music Co., Chicago, Ill.
"That Oriental Rag"—Pub. by Aubrey Stauffer & Co., Chicago, Ill.

A. L. Simpson, Inc.

"Oh, You Little Rascal!"—Pub. by Geo. L. Mess Music Company.
"Tell Me, Sweet Rose"—Pub. by F. B. Haviland Co.
"Moontime Is Spoontime (When You're with the Girl You Love)"—Pub. by J. H. Aufderheide & Co.
"Drifting in Dreams with You"—Pub. by J. H. Aufderheide & Co., Indianapolis, Ind.
"I Want a Patriotic Girl"—Pub. by J. H. Aufderheide & Co.
"Pretty Montezuma Maid"—Pub. by C. J. Dan... Cleveland, O.

• • •

There's a big fat fellow out in Cleveland by the name of Lou Becht who is always "starting something." Just now he has the city's legal department all snarled up for violating the laws of Civic Trumps as embodied in the code against exhibiting prize fight pictures.

• • •

Moving picture entertainments and military drills are to be introduced to vary the dull routine of the life of the convicts in the Indiana State Prison at Michigan City, Ind., Warden E. J. Fogarty announced a few days ago.

LECTURING the PICTURES

HUGH F. HOFFMAN
Lecturer of Special Releases
NEW YORK CITY AND VICINITY

Now booking engagements for
DAVID COPPERFIELD—The Thanhouser Co's version of Dickens' best known novel (3 reels), and FOUL PLAY—Edison version of Chas. Reade's novel (in 3 reels). Other subjects on short notice.

Address care of MOVING PICTURE WORLD 125 E. 23d St NEW YORK
Telephone Gramercy 1344

:: The ::
SPIEGEL MOTION SLIDE
The slide that entertains your patrons.
The slide that brings the Advertisers results.
The slide that pays the exhibitor better rates.
A trial will convince you. - - Write for illustrated catalogue
THE AMERICAN MOTION SLIDE COMPANY
611 First National Bank Building - CHICAGO, ILL.

The Slides that Please the Eyes
SCOTT & VAN ALTENA
Special Slides for Scientific Advertising Purposes
59 Pearl Street New York City

Get Novelties in
Advertising and Scientific Slides
A. L. SIMPSON, Inc.
113 West 132nd St. New York

HERE AT LAST
A place to buy parts for M. P. machines for less
One of our SPECIALS
Intermittent SPROCKETS $1.50 FOR POWERS OR EDISON Machines
Write for Price List
PITTSBURG M.P. SUPPLY CO., Pittsburg, Pa.

ADVERTISING SLIDES
FOR ANY BUSINESS
THE EXCELSIOR CO.
61 West 14th St., New York City
Makers of SLIDES for 16 YEARS 16
"NUFF SAID"

Song Slides For Rent
FULL WEEK'S SUPPLY in one shipment
UNITED SLIDE ADV. CO.
61 West 14th St. New York City

Italian-Turkish War Film
Brand New—Never Used, $75.
SEND $5.00
Will ship subject to examination.
I. PERLMAN
61 West 14th St. New York City

SPECIAL OFFER FOR THIRTY DAYS
The original set of Golden Song Revue. 14 slides, consisting of title, six choruses, six cartoons, ending slide, professional copies, orchestrations and two display posters, for $6.00. Be the first one in your town to buy it.
LEVI CO., INC.
1560 Broadway New York

SELIG'S

CAPTAIN KATE
LOST IN THE JUNGLE
THE TWO ORPHANS
CINDERELLA

and other features helped to make the exhibitor's

Merry Christmas

Excellent as they were, these films are ordinary compared with the coming Selig productions which will make 1912, for every licensed exhibitor,

A Happy New Year

INCREASE YOUR BOX OFFICE RECEIPTS

BY USING

The Greatest Educational Feature of the Day

4 DAILY

UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD'S SLIDES OF CURRENT EVENTS
THIS SERVICE COVERS
EVERY EVENT THAT IS INTERESTING
EVERY OCCURRENCE THAT THRILLS

24 WEEKLY

News pictures of Wars, Sports and all National and International happenings by Underwood & Underwood, the world-famed news photographers. Flash these events daily while they are news and public interest is keenest. Everyone is interested in the news of the day, and this is a service of news pictures. COSTS NOTHING WHEN COMPARED WITH RESULTS.

4 SLIDES DAILY—24 PER WEEK, RATE $12.00 PER WEEK

3 current event photos 14" x 17" for outside display with printed news titles, rate $5.00 per week. WRITE TODAY FOR THREE, SIX OR TWELVE MONTHS' CONTRACTS.

HUNTON-FELL-ELLIOTT, Inc., 1326 Broadway, NEW YORK

"ELECTRA" CARBONS

PINK LABEL

THE CARBON OF SUPERLATIVE QUALITY

LASTS LONGEST. GIVES BEST RESULTS. WHITEST, BRIGHTEST AND STEADIEST LIGHT. ABSOLUTELY UNIFORM IN DIAMETER

Imported solely by

HUGO REISINGER 11 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

LECTURES ON SPECIAL FILMS

Prepared by W. STEPHEN BUSH

EACH $1.00 PER COPY POSTAGE PAID

How to Put On the Passion Play (SECOND EDITION)
FOR PATHE FRERES WORLD-RENOWNED PRODUCTION

How to Put On The Crusaders, or Jerusalem Delivered
FOR WORLD'S BEST FILM CO., FEATURE FILM (Copyright 1911)

Key and Complete Lecture for Dante's Inferno
FOR MILANO FILM CO., (Italy) FIVE REEL PRODUCTION

ORDER NOW Only a limited edition of each $1.00 PER COPY

COPYRIGHTED AND FOR SALE ONLY BY

MOVING PICTURE WORLD, Box 226, Madison Square P. O., New York City

LICENSED Film Stories

KALEM.

DRIVING HOME THE COWS (Jan. 1).—While driving home the cows one evening, a boy decides to go to war. He fails to win his parents' consent as they have already given the lives of two sons to the great cause. The boy, therefore, steals away in the night, stopping to say good-bye to his young sweetheart.

In a hotly contested battle, the boy is wounded and taken prisoner. The report of his death is brought to the lonely farm.

Upon the aged father devolves the task of driving home the cows. One summer evening as he strolls down the path, tired from his day's labors, he sees the cows coming. Behind them appears the figure of a youth with an empty coat sleeve. Great is the father's joy when he recognizes his son, and happy are the old mother and young sweetheart as they behold the brave lad coming home with the cows.

THE COWBOY ARTIST'S JONAH DAY (Jan. 3).—Pete, a Western cowboy, becomes interested in art and imagines that his sketches will make him famous. So they did, but not in the manner which he expected.

The stage coach arrived and Pete noticed a young lady passenger of striking appearance, whom he proceeded to sketch. This the young woman resented and demanded that he destroy the drawing. Nothing daunted by his failure, Pete followed the coach and learned the destination of the fair passenger.

"I'll make her acquaintance or die in the attempt!" exclaimed Pete and, suiting the action to the word he started upon a clever subterfuge. Rolling in the dust, he limped to the cottage, where he announced to the girls that he had been thrown from his horse and was in great pain. The young ladies invited him into the house and withdrew to the next room for bandages and liniments.

While they were absent, Pete could not restrain his pleasure over the prospect of becoming better acquainted. The girls coming upon him unexpectedly discovered that they had been imposed upon and forthwith ejected him from the house.

Once again Pete resorted to strategy to enter the house, but this time he encountered the father, whom he had formerly burlesqued in one of his sketches and the gentleman embraced the opportunity to be revenged by humbling the ambitious young man with the toe of a No. 10 boot.

THE DUDE COWBOY (Jan. 5).—Rose seemed to think that the boys about the ranch did not possess "class" enough to win her hand; in fact, she told the faithful Dick that her future husband must be a man from the city. When Dick met the boys and informed them of his sweetheart's declaration, they proposed a scheme whereby the haughty young woman might be humbled.

As a result Dick secured a complete disguise and attired himself as a typical tenderfoot, with all the mannerisms of a foppish dude. A letter was sent to Rose's father—who was in on the scheme—stating that an old friend was sending his son to visit the ranch.

When the dude arrived, Rose was delighted and would scarcely speak to the other boys. Following out their plans, the ranchmen, masking themselves, held up Rose and the dude while they were enjoying a ride through the country and the young man incontinently fled. Hastily doffing his disguise, Dick returned to the frightened girl, brandishing his revolver and announcing that he had driven away the robbers (?) while her cowardly lover had fled. Rose thereupon decided that the real man had to be of the West and that her ideal was a person who answered Dick's description.

SELIG.

CINDERELLA (Jan. 1).—First Reel.—Cinderella's mother dies and her father marries a cruel widow with two ugly daughters of her own disposition. The father leaves on a long journey and poor Cinderella is soon forced to act as "slavey" to the tyrannical stepmother and her daughters. They abuse and mistreat her and finally turn her out of the house. The girl, footsore and weary, takes refuge in a deserted garden. Prince Charming refuses to marry the girl the king chooses for him and is thrust into prison. He makes his escape and by a strange coincidence attempts to hide in the same deserted garden that Cinderella has chosen. The prince has changed his garb for that of a milk vender and in this apparel he meets Cinderella, who is also in rags. With each it is a case of love at first sight. He gives her a ring and she allows him to cut and keep a lock of her hair. The girl, now refreshed and happy, returns to her home, while the prince dreams of his girl in tatters.

Second Reel.

The king issues a proclamation announcing that if the prince will return he may marry whomsoever he will. The prince, overjoyed, returns. Cinderella, now happy and care-free, pays little heed to her dizzy abuse and ill treatment. She finds great comfort and solace in the ring, and memories, until one day the Prince is pointed out to her, and in him she recognizes her milk vender. And so again her childish dreams are shattered. The king gives a grand ball in honor of his son. The stepmother and sisters go, leaving Cinderella behind, brokenhearted. Her fairy godmother then comes to her assistance, however, making it possible for Cinderella to attend the ball, the only requirement being that Cinderella leave the palace before midnight. Cinderella agrees and departs for the ball in state.

Third Reel.

At the ball, Cinderella captivates the prince and his guests with her beauty and mischievousness. To him she looks familiar, but she steadfastly refuses to divulge her identity. Cinderella so thoroughly enjoys her evening with the prince that she forgets the approaching midnight hour until it arrives. Then suddenly remembering her godmother's admonition, she rushes from the palace, but in doing so she loses one of her silver slippers. Later the prince finds the slipper, and sends his couriers throughout the land, announcing that the owner of the foot that fits the slipper shall become his wife. Cinderella by chance is granted permission to try on the slipper and lo—she becomes a princess.

THE COWBOY'S ADOPTED CHILD (Jan. 2).—George Fowler, after a severe illness, dies, leaving his wife, Sarah, and baby. Some time after, things have gone from bad to worse with Sarah, and finding herself unable to support her baby, consigns it—in a note which she writes—to the one who finds it, and places it in a saddle outside a mess house for cowboys.

Jack Norton, returning from the range late, hears the baby's cry, and forthwith takes it home with him, to the horror and consternation of his cowboy friends. They spend a sleepless night and spend the following day buying toys and presents for their collective "protégé." Jack, however, soon realizes he must have a "mother" for his baby and immediately starts to the village to inquire where he can procure one.

In the meantime, Sarah has applied for and obtained a position as school teacher, and she arrives in the village just as Jack does. With them, it is a case of love at first sight and when Jack has had an introduction, he tells her of his "child" and asks for her help.

She agrees to go with him and upon arriving, of course, recognizes her baby, and tells Jack her story. The cowboys are inclined to be credulous, but Jack believes her and several months later she is installed permanently as wife, as well as "mother."

THE MATE OF THE ALDEN BESSE (Jan. 4).—The captain of the "Alden Besse" was a drunken tyrant who manhandled his men upon the slightest provocation, despite the pleadings of his daughter and the first mate who loved her in his rough way, but for whom she could feel only friendship. One night the crew killed him, and marooned the mate and the captain's daughter by sending them adrift in a small boat. Days passed upon the vast expanse of ocean, and their food was all gone and death near, when land was sighted and their boat was cast up on a coral reef, and they with difficulty made the shore. Fear of death was soon supplanted in the heart of the captain's daughter by fear of a man loving her all too well. The mate, seeing this and realizing the strength of his passion, decided to live on the side of the island, but as the months passed away his lonliness overcame him and he made his way to where she sat reading. He looked over her shoulder, and saw that she read the marriage service. At this he took heart and pressed his suit. They were destined never to leave this island, so why not read the service together and so marry? After much hesitation she agreed to this and they stood hand in hand when looking up she saw a ship on the horizon, and their signal of fire being seen, they were soon aboard and their troubles ended.

THE OTHER FELLOW (Jan. 5).—Jack Brown, before his marriage, has been a good friend to Tobie La Rue, an actress, and, she not knowing of his marriage, wants to renew their acquaintance, and writes him a note to that effect. His wife is present when he receives the note, and becoming jealous of him, resolves to "get even." So when he leaves to explain his position to Tobie, she sends her maid for a box of candy, and tells Jack that it was given to her. In the meantime, Jack has gone to the theater, and while talking with Tobie, unconsciously puts her handkerchief up his sleeve, and of course it is found by his wife, upon his return home, and he is ordered from the house. However, some hours later he gets up courage to return, and going to his room, finds the door is locked. Immediately, his thoughts revert to the box of candy that was given to her, and his mind supplies the last part of the sentence, "by the other fellow," and Jack forces the door open, where he sees a lobster in his bed, and not seeing the joke, strikes his wife. She then realizes that she has gone too far, explains the entire situation to him, and all's well that ends well.

HUTCHINSON, KAN., SEMI-CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION (Jan. 5).—Showing close-up, intimate views of many interesting events. Among other views are those showing President Taft and Champ Clark.

GAUMONT.

A ROYAL ROMANCE (Jan. 2).—Henry of Navarre, a youthful prince, is greatly attracted by a pretty peasant maid and succeeds in winning her heart.

His mother, however, arranges a marriage for him with Princess Margaret, sister of the king. This flatters Henry immensely, and he soon forgets the lovely peasant.

One day he happens to stroll with the princess by the brook and his ardent attentions are observed by the forsaken girl. Heartbroken, she allows a cry to escape her lips and falls in a swoon.

Henry is moved by her devotion and that evening sends a message for her to meet him at the selfsame place. When he arrives he finds her there, but her eyes are closed in death, bidding him a mute farewell.

EVILS OF IMPURE LITERATURE (Jan. 6).—The famous book, "The Gospel of Love," is read by thousands and brings riches and honors to the author, Paul Miral.

Among the many readers, however, is an innocent girl named Kitty, whose mother does not realize the character of the book. The evil advice and easy morals described so affect the mind of the girl that later when tempted in real life, she has not the power to resist.

The sorrowing mother then calls upon the author and in a violent scene upbraids him for gaining riches and renown at the cost of poor innocent souls.

ECLIPSE.

TRUE TO THEIR TRUST (Jan. 3).—The lighthouse keeper is suddenly stricken and comes down to his family for assistance.

His wife immediately goes up with the children to light the lamp and set it in motion. Finding that the machinery is broken, she instructs them how to turn the light by hand.

All night long the faithful children turn the light. At daybreak only, worn out by fatigue, they cease their efforts and return to their mother.

When the dying father is told of their heroism, he breathes his last in perfect contentment, knowing that his duty has been faithfully performed.

A COTTON GOODS FACTORY IN FRANCE (Jan. 3).—Showing clearly how the raw cotton is woven into cloth in the following steps: carding, reeling, winding in bobbins, preparing for weaving, weaving on looms and measuring for the final inspection.

ESSANAY.

THE MAIL-ORDER WIFE (Jan. 2).—John White's sweetheart, May Webster, refuses to marry him while her old father is in need of her, and John goes West to take a government farm. Finding that their two ranch grants adjoin each other, he and Bob Strong become partners. Five years later Bob suggests that they get a housekeeper, and in spite of John's contempt of the idea, Bob adds a postscript to an order for some goods from a Chicago mail-order house, stating that if the company has any young woman who would care to go West and marry, to include her in the order. It is May who opens the letter and reads the postscript. After some correspondence between her and Bob, arrangements are made for the wedding, but the plans are suddenly changed when the young woman appears and meets her old sweetheart, John. The old love awakens and Bob is finally forced to give the girl up to his partner.

THE VALLEY OF REGRETS (Jan. 4).—Feeling that she is being neglected by her very young husband, Lily Easton decides to leave him. Two years later, haunted by the memory of her little girl, she returns to her husband and begs forgiveness, but he refuses to take her back and tells her to continue in the life she has chosen. Two years go by, and Mrs. Easton, now a worn old woman, obtains work as a seamstress and is sent to deliver the trousseau to little Helen, her daughter, who is to be married. Neither the husband nor daughter recognize the decripit little woman, and during the ceremony she steals into the drawing room to have one more glimpse of her little girl. The sight is too much for her and she drops dead.

FOR THE LOVE OF MIKE (Jan. 5).—Mike and Mary quarrel, and Mike is ejected from the house. The next day, Mike in the capacity of a window washer, falls from a second story window and an ambulance is hurriedly summoned. The ambulance is on its way to the hospital when Mary, at her work in the steam laundry, is scalded, and the ambulance containing Mike is pressed into service to also carry Mary to the hospital. Imagine the surprise of the two lovers when they return to consciousness, and find themselves stretched out side by side. Here, they finally make up their quarrel and when the ambulance doctor and his assistant open the door, they are surprised to find the two lovers in each other's arms. "No hospital for us," they both exclaim, as they step out of the ambulance. "We want the marriage license bureau."

A CHILD OF THE WEST (Jan. 6).—Jim Riley is to be arrested for horse stealing and when the sheriff knocks at the door of Jim's shack, he asks his little girl Nellie to go and tell the man he is

Gaumont

A GAUMONT EVERY TUESDAY and SATURDAY

KOSMIK FILM

AN ECLIPSE EVERY WEDNESDAY

ECLIPSE

CURRENT RELEASES

Gaumont, Tuesday, Jan. 2, 1912

A ROYAL ROMANCE

(COLORED)

Drama. About 975 ft.

A romantic story of Henry of Navaree, a young prince who falls in love with a pretty peasant maid.

Eclipse, Wednesday, Jan. 3, 1912

True To Their Trust

Drama. About 656 ft.

Telling of a lighthouse keeper and his two faithful children.

A Cotton Goods Factory In France

Industrial. About 325 ft.

Gaumont, Saturday, Jan. 6, 1912

The Evils of Impure Literature

Drama. About 1035 ft.

The famous book, "The Gospel of Love," brings riches and honors to its author, but at the cost of poor, innocent souls.

Advance Announcements Free. Write to

ECLIPSE

GEORGE KLEINE

166 No. State St., Chicago, Ill.

LICENSED BY THE MOTION PICTURE PATENTS CO.

Gaumont

I WANT

To Lease or Purchase

Three or Four Theatres with large seating capacity, in Central or Middle West. Give full particulars; any price will be considered if you have what I want.

A. M. GOLLOS

607 MARQUETTE BUILDING :: CHICAGO

NOW BOOKING

EASTERN STATES ONLY

LOUISE M. MARION

IN HER OWN NOVELTIES

PATRIOTIC AND ILLUSTRATED POEMS

REFINED ENTERTAINING

TERMS REASONABLE

LOUISE M. MARION

PRESENT ADDRESS

The Arlington House, Ansonia, Conn.

L. M. Marion can be engaged in the Connecticut towns for one month.

Great Novelty and Drawing Card

FOR SALE

Motion Picture Houses in all the large cities of Illinois.

Complete information upon request.

REALTY BROKERS CO.

122 N. Chicago St., - JOLIET, Ill.

Money Getters

Langford & McVea—20 Rounds—2 Reels

Tracy The Bandit—1100 Feet

Tripoli War Reels—Part 1, 2, 3—also Searchlight Series.

Many European 2 and 3-Reel Productions and American Productions

Keep Your Eye on This Space: Every Week Something New

THE HOUSE OF FEATURES

Theatre Film & Supply Co.

64 East Fourteenth Street Corner 4th Avenue New York

not at home. Nellie tries to persuade the big sheriff that her father is out, but to no avail, for Jim is arrested and taken away, while he promises his little girl he will soon return. The next day the Vigilantes have learned of the arrest of the horse thief, and send a committee to demand the prisoner, and in spite of the sheriff's protests, Jim is dragged from his cell and taken out to be hanged. To prevent the lynching the sheriff decides to have the thief's child plead with the Vigilantes. The little girl awakens the men to the realization of the crime that they were about to commit, and Jim is given back to the sheriff and promised a fair trial.

EDISON.

ELEANORE CUYLER (Jan. 2).—A friend of Eleanore's introduces a young writer, Wainwright by name, and Eleanore straightway becomes interested. But when the young man comes to ask her to marry him she does not give him an opportunity to propose. Later he leaves America and goes to London to seek his fortune in the literary world there. Of course, Eleanore is more sorry than she expected. She takes up settlement work and after some months hears of Wainwright's success in London and a rumor that he is to marry a certain noble lady there. Then she begins to envy all young married couples, and consequently she is not sorry when, one night on her way back from settlement work, she is rescued from the unwelcome attentions of three tough citizens by Wainwright himself, who, having returned to America, has gone to that part of the city in the possible hope of running across her. Of course, this incident makes her realize that she sometimes needs a man's protection, and Wainwright clinches the argument in the most satisfactory manner.

THE TWO FLATS (Jan. 3).—An Irish widow moves into a flat and proceeds to arrange her household, doing considerable hammering, to the great annoyance of an Italian widower who lives directly underneath. The widow writes her son to come home and protect her from the "insulting Dago down-stairs," while the Italian writes his daughter to come home and comfort him. Her son and his daughter start for home and become acquainted at the railroad station, but neither knows where the other lives. In watering her flowers, a few drops splash into the room. He retaliates by knocking her pots off the sill. The "Dago" takes the widow's table cloth, when she throws the crumbs out of the window.

The Italian explains the situation to his daughter, who has just arrived home. She starts up-stairs to return the widow's table cover, while the widow's son goes down-stairs with the "Dago's" broom. They meet in the hallway and are surprised to find that they both live in the same house. They form a great liking for each other and frequently signal one another from their windows. On one occasion he drops a bouquet from his window to the girl: the Italian gets it, and, thinking it is a peace offering from the widow, he immediately goes up-stairs to pay his respects, and they become good friends.

A comical mishap causing a crash of china and glassware brings their respective son and daughter into the room. After due explanations the scene terminates happily in typical East Side fashion.

FREEZING AUNTIE (Jan. 5).—Mrs. Henpeck strenuously objects to her husband's secretary as her prospective son-in-law and insists upon his immediate removal.

Before this can be accomplished, Henpeck's nephew, George, arrives home from Australia, with a wonderful preparation, which will freeze live cattle for transportation purposes. He intends also experimenting on human beings, but finds neither Henpeck nor the secretary, Charles, willing to become martyrs.

Mrs. Henpeck receives George very coldly, and, as he finds poor Henpeck as much a worm as ever, suggests that they freeze her with the new serum and then have a high time. The temptation is too great to be resisted, and together they go in search of her. However, Charles has overheard the plot, and, thinking to win Mrs. Henpeck's favor, he warns her. She substitutes water for the serum and when the two conspirators appear seems an easy victim to their wiles. By pretending they have a cure for rheumatism they manage to give her an injection of the supposed serum, which, through Mrs. Henpeck's actions, seems to have the desired effect. She freezes up slowly, and when convinced of their success they proceed to cut loose. Cigars, heretofore prohibited, are lighted, and then they steal her keys to the wine cellar, where they proceed to diminish the supply.

Mrs. Henpeck suddenly comes to life and plans revenge. With the aid of her daughter and Charles, she disguises herself as a ghost and when the two conspirators return from the cellar and find Mrs. Henpeck gone, there appears gliding into the room a ghost. In their efforts to escape the ghost is upset, disclosing Mrs. Henpeck. On bended knees Henpeck implores his wife's forgiveness, while George is shown the door and the two young lovers are made happy.

CODFISH INDUSTRY, NEWFOUNDLAND (Jan. 5).—A fair conception of the magnitude of the codfish industry is given in a view of many ships engaged in the trade, as they lay at anchor on the placid waters of a snug little harbor.

There are many other views of interest—especially the drying process, in which thousands of fish are spread on huge frames and allowed to dry in the sun, after which they are ready for transportation to various parts of the world.

PLEASE REMIT (Jan. 6).—The editor of a small newspaper in a little town, through his unwillingness to employ as bookkeeper, Orphan Annie, has his troubles in collecting money due him for subscriptions, advertising, etc., and starts out to try and minimize the outstanding amount. His attempts at collection are futile and he spends his last penny on a postal card, saying to one of his principal creditors that he is unable to pay and is desperate. The postmistress reads the card and soon circulates the message around the village.

On his way home the editor sees an Indian bargaining for a second-hand shotgun. As the editor has a gun which is not useful to him, he strikes up an acquaintance with the Indian and agrees to sell his gun to him, offering to bring it to the village store. The village gossips recognize a man coming across the street carrying a gun as the editor. When he enters the store everybody, having heard that he is desperate, gives him some coin. He shrewdly collects it and then hies himself back to his office.

The villagers hold an indignation meeting over the editor's way of obtaining money which is overheard by Annie, who immediately informs him. They promptly leave the town and when the villagers arrive at the editor's sanctum they find a notice that the paper is for sale and that the shotgun for collection purposes will be thrown in. To say they are dejected is putting it mildly.

MELIES.

ROPED IN (Jan. 11).—Fair Anne, from the East, is accompanied by her eccentric and old maid aunt, Miss Simpkins, arriving at the Bar X Junction where the stage coach suffers a breakdown. To employ the several hours necessary to make repairs the younger maid takes a horseback ride, when lo! maid and horse are suddenly and unexpectedly divorced, the latter escaping. "Big Bill," a chance witness to the maid's discomfiture, whirls his lassoo with determination and brings rebellious beast to time, whereupon there follows a romance in which "Auntie" is given the slip and the lassoo ties a knot that no man is supposed to put asunder.

Scene from "Roped In" (Melies).

BIOGRAPH.

THE BABY AND THE STORK (Jan. 1).—Bobby's love for his mamma and papa is so great that he even fears they might die and be taken from him. On the other hand, he is his parents' only thought and care. However, some time later a new baby arrives at the home, and Bobby is told that the stork at the park brought it. It isn't long before he realizes that the baby is everything now, and he is "left out in the cold." This treatment fires the youngster with jealous rage, and remembering the story of the stork, takes up the baby from its crib, puts it in a basket and carries it out to the stork's cage in the park, exclaiming, "Here, Mr. Stork, take your old baby, we don't want it." Meantime, his parents are wild with anxiety over the disappearance of the baby, believing it to have been kidnapped. Their fears are relieved later by the appearance of the park officer with Bobby and the baby.

WHO GOT THE REWARD? (Jan. 4).—His wife gives him her necklace to have it fixed. On the way down town he stops in at the club and plays the wheel, losing all his ready money. Believing his luck will change, he pledges the necklace for $50, and loses that. To square himself, he buys an imitation to give her until he can redeem the real one. How he is to get the money he doesn't know, as their bank account is a joint one and checks require both signatures. Meanwhile, Mrs. E. orders a fifty dollar hat, and she is in just as great a quandry when he refuses to pay for it. Well, the wife evolves a plan, and while it doesn't work out as she expected, still it results in her getting the hat and his redeeming the necklace.

THE JOKE ON THE JOKER (Jan. 4).—A flypaper salesman, who is everlastingly playing jokes upon his friends, becomes such a pest that a couple of his victims vow to turn the tables on him. While off on a business trip, they cause to be published an article to the effect that he had met with a fatal accident. The article was given such credence that his wife, believing herself a widow, was about to marry again, when he reappeared.

PATHE.

PATHE'S WEEKLY NO. 49, 1911 (Dec. 4).—St. Cloud, France.—Nine balloons participate in the "Landing Contest" organized by the Aero Club of France.

London, England.—The survivors of the famous charge of the Light Brigade, the remnant of the "Six Hundred," who rode to death at Balaclava, meet and drink the new King's health.

Constantinople, Turkey.—The Italo-Turkish War. The Turkish fleet leaves the "Golden Horn" with sealed orders.

Lisbon, Portugal.—The Republican soldiers conduct their Royalist prisoners to the Fortress del Duque.

Janesville, Wis.—A cyclone traveling from southwest to northeast leaves a trail of devastation across Rock County from a quarter of a mile to four miles wide. Anton Schmitt's home was entirely destroyed. Four people were killed here.

Charkoff, Russia.—The holy image of the Virgin Azieranskaya is transported from the Kouriajskij monastery to the Pokrovskij monastery.

London, England.—The Super-Dreadnaught "George V." is launched. The monster battleship is 600 feet long and cost $10,000,000 and is twice as powerful as the original "Dreadnaught."

Tripoli, Tripoli.—Italian Turkish War: 1—The field artillery disembarks. 2—While awaiting orders to advance into the interior, the Italian troops are encamped on the edge of the desert. 3—General Caneva and Rear-Admiral Borea Ricci, the new Governor of Tripoli, returning from a tour of inspection.

Havana, Cuba.—How the work of raising the Maine from the mud in Havana Harbor looks to-day.

SPECIAL FOR THE LADIES.

Paris, France.—The fashions in hair dressing for this winter are exceptionally pretty.

And many others.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, No. 51—1911 (Dec. 18).—Middlesborough, England.—Prince Arthur of Connaught formally opens the Transport Bridge, costing $400,000, over the River Tees.

Sebnitz, Germany.—King Frederick August of Saxe visits the city.

Melbourne, Australia.—The funeral of the Honorable Egerton Lee Batchelor, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Federal Australian Government.

Peterhof (near St. Petersburg), Russia.—The Czar inspects the Guard of Honor.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The Annual Hungarian Fest proves an interesting event.

Aachen, Germany.—The monument erected to the memory of Frederick III is unveiled in the presence of Emperor William II. The Emperor witnesses the ceremony from the balcony of the City Hall, with the Mayor.

Brazil.—The dog show presents some fine specimens of canine aristocracy.

Aldershot, England.—An exciting experiment. Deflating a Military Airship by means of the "ripping valve."

Tripoli, Tripoli.—Italo-Turkish War. The military aviators just arrived are received by General Gazzola. The Captain Miozzo is seen on his Nieuport Monoplane over Tripoli. After a severe battle, the wounded are carried into camp and immediately operated on.

Jersey City, N. J.—The paper stock in a paper box factory burns fiercely for twenty-four hours, resulting in the destruction of an entire city square.

Comic Section of Pathe's Weekly.—The Question of the Day, and many others.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, No. 52—1911 (Dec. 25).—Havana, Cuba.—The New York Giants win the first baseball game of the series with the Havana Baseball Club.

Atlanta, Georgia.—The Great Corn Festival draws crowds from every city in the State. Governor Harmon, of Ohio, and Governor Slaton, of Georgia, review the parade.

Havana, Cuba.—The funeral of the widow of Maximo Gomez, the Liberator of Cuba, is witnessed by the entire population of Havana, who line the streets in respectful silence.

Tripoli, Tripoli.—The Italo-Turkish War. The Court-Martial convenes to try the servant of the German Consul who killed an Italian artilleryman already fatally wounded.

Thorpe, England.—A house is lifted from its foundation and is driven down a hill by a terrific storm.

Brighton, England.—Colonel Seeley, Under Sec-

WARNING!

THE TWO AND THREE REEL FEATURE FILMS OF THE GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

are

COPYRIGHTED!

No one can rent, use or exhibit them, or copies of them, without our authority, without violating the law.

This applies to imported as well as American made copies.

Infringers lay themselves liable to the full penalty of the law.

Only those films supplied by us, or some one having authority from us, are genuine.

The Monopol Film Company of New York now have our authority to handle the subject entitled "Temptations of a Great C[illegible] and the Feature and Educational Film Company of Cleveland, Ohio, the subjects entitled "Love and Aviation," and "Lady Mary's Love.

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO. 7 EAST FOURTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK

The Buckeye-Lake Shore Film Co.

Independent Film Service

Special attention given to each customer's needs and to all the little details.

We buy all the good Independent film released.

Good service and right treatment at the right price. Is there any good reason why you should not give us a trial?

422 N. High St, Columbus, Ohio

A GUNDLACH PROJECTION LENS

Will Certainly Improve Your Picture

will make it sharp, clear and brilliant, and if you give the height and width of the screen and the distance from the Lens to the center of the screen we can furnish a Lens to make the picture just the right size.

Gundlach Projection Lenses are furnished to order with Powers and Motiograph Machines. They are sold by all Film Exchanges subject to approval.

Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Company
808 Clinton Ave., So. Rochester, N. Y.

THE CARL BARCKHOFF COMPANY

Builders of PIPE ORGANS

with or without self playing attachment

POMEROY, OHIO, U. S. A.

ESTABLISHED 1819

Over 3,000 Barckhoff Organs in use in the United States which testify to their superiority and durability in construction, workmanship and character of tone.

We make a specialty of Organ Chimes manufactured from the choicest Bell Metal. Not made by any other builder.

Cines War Picture Complete, all releases. Original and no dupes. Tripoli Searchlight, just out, now open for booking. Many other live features of from 1000 to 3000 ft. of film. Full lobby display free. Keep in touch with us. All inquiries promptly answered.

Phone 2430 Stuyvesant — B. B. FEATURE FILM CO: J. E. Burns, Mgr.

46 East 14th St: New York City

retary of War, inspects the Cadet Corps.

Lisbon, Portugal.—A great civic parade takes place in honor of the first anniversary of the Republic.

Wilhelmhaven, Germany.—The new German Dreadnaught "Ersatzingen" leaves the port.

Briceville, Penn.—A terrific mine explosion imprisons or kills approximately 150 miners. The Government Rescue Crews are doing what they can to reach the imprisoned men who may be alive.

Paris, France.—Fine examples of the hairdressers' art and many others.

THE PROFESSOR'S DAUGHTERS (Jan. 3).—Professor Popkins has seven daughters who love seven boys and to the professor's disgust and anger. Finally the boys decoy the professor to a distant town and while he is away marry all his daughters. The professor never gets over the blow until his whole family returns with seven little grandchildren to make his life miserable.

THE REBUKED INDIAN (Jan. 4).—This is a story of the Revolutionary War, in which an Indian who has been brought up with white people plays a heroic part: therefore at the crucial moment he is refused a commission by the commanding officer because of his Indian blood. This leads to serious complications, which makes the film one of unusual interest.

THE COWBOY'S SISTER (Jan. 6).—Jim Blodgett, a cowboy in love with an Indian maid of exceptional beauty, is permitted to marry her, but the Indian brave who also loves her tells Boldgett that unless he treats her right the Indians will avenge her. Later, the cowboy's sister visits him and his Indian bride, who does not know of the relationship existing between the two, runs away to her tribe and complains about the treatment which she received from her husband. This leads to serious complications until the matter is finally straightened out by the charming little sister herself, who reconciles everybody.

C. G. P. C.

INFANCY OF MOSES (Jan. 2).—This story is too well known to need an extended description. The dramatic incidents surrounding the infancy of the great Jewish leader are faithfully and beautifully portrayed in this magnificently colored film.

THE ICE FORMATIONS AT ODESSA, RUSSIA (Jan. 2).—A beautiful picture of the glistening mountains of ice formed where the thermometer is at 31 degrees below zero.

BETRAYED BY A PARASOL (Jan. 5).—A remarkably funny film featuring a man foolishly fond of fair femininity. Fortune does not favor him however, and his final overthrow is due to his trying to hide a lady's parasol down his trousers leg.

VITAGRAPH.

A ROMANCE OF WALL STREET (Jan. 1).—Laura Taylor has the approval of her godfather, Mr. Benson, for becoming engaged to Philip Linton, a struggling broker, but not the good wishes of her father, who thought a middle-aged broker named Lawrence Burke would have been a better life partner. Burke threatens to ruin Phillip if he does not relinquish his claim on Laura.

Laura, after hearing of her sweetheart's troubles, goes to her godfather's office and apprises him of Burke's intentions. Mr. Benson, who is a figurehead in Wall Street, soon turns the tables on Burke, reducing him to abject poverty.

A RED CROSS MARTYR (Jan. 2).—Lieutenant Troyano, a young Italian officer, bids his sweetheart, Marie Petrini, a fond farewell and then rushes to war.

In reading a detailed newspaper account of the battle, Marie sees an appeal for Red Cross nurses. Leaving her luxurious home and arriving at Tripoli, she takes up the duties assigned to her. She is beloved by all who require her services, and as the Italian detachment is passing through one of the streets in Turkey, a bullet pierces her heart. When news of his sweetheart's death reaches the ears of Troyano (who was not aware of her doings), he almost succumbs to grief. He bathes her face with kisses and tears.

The commanding general gives instructions to the army aviator to put the aeroplanes into play. Lieut. Troyano begs for and is granted permission to manipulate the air craft. He drops bomb after bomb and soon has the city in ruins. Inspired with the desire to grapple hand to hand with those who took the life of his loved one, he descends nearer to earth. The Turks fire at him and he falls lifeless to the ground. He and his sweetheart are buried side by side with military honors.

THE HEART OF THE KING'S JESTER (Jan. 3).—The Jester falls in love with the Princess. The Princess cannot abide him and when he declares his love, she laughs derisively and points to the water of the fountain at which he is sitting, telling him to gaze into it and behold the reflection of his unattractive countenance. He recognizes the hopelessness of his suit, and when he discovers the Princess in tryst with the handsome young Shepherd, the Jester is filled with jealous rage and at once notifies the King. The Shepherd is arrested and brought to the King, who pronounces a sentence of death upon him.

The Princess throws herself upon the neck of her lover and clings to him, while she implores her father to spare his life. The King's Jester is touched with remorse. He immediately sets about freeing the Shepherd and helping the young couple to escape from the kingdom. He goes to the chamber of the Princess and tells her of his plans, then hastens with his dogs to the King's court, where he finds the young Shepherd bound before being led to the scaffold. At once the Jester starts his pranks, putting his dog through many tricks and setting the whole court in roars of laughter, and entirely absorbing their attention. Passing behind the Shepherd, he cuts his bonds and tells him to hasten forth into the garden, where he will find the Princess and two horses waiting for him and to make haste across the borders of the kingdom, while he holds the audience.

Upon discovering the escape of the Shepherd, all is excitement. Search is made for his whereabouts, but too late. The Princess and the Shepherd are far beyond their reach.

DESTINY IS CHANGELESS (Jan. 5).—Pierre LeNoir and High MacDonald are both in love with Maimie Cameron, but she favors MacDonald. LeNoir calls on her and MacDonald comes in while they are together, and this causes LeNoir to understand why it is that Maimie is indifferent to his (LeNoir's) attentions. They fight in Maimie's presence and in order to avoid murder, she says she will marry the one who will bring her the first silver-fox skin.

They both set out together, LeNoir with a bitter hatred in his heart for MacDonald, but MacDonald has a kindly feeling for LeNoir. MacDonald sets out in a canoe, while LeNoir is stealthily following the canoe by lurking among the trees and bushes along the water front. After a while, MacDonald sees a place in the beach which he thinks will be suitable and he lands there, not knowing that every movement he makes is being watched. LeNoir, on the opposite shore, sees MacDonald, and swims across the stream. MacDonald is leaning over a piece of venison when he sees a shadow. He springs up to find himself face to face with LeNoir, who has the knife poised to strike at him. As they are locked in each other's arms in a hand-to-hand fight, they suddenly spring apart as they hear or see the approach of Indians. MacDonald three times saves LeNoir's life, but after the fight LeNoir shrinks from the hand MacDonald offers him and skulks away in the woods.

A few weeks later MacDonald is seen with a silver-fox skin in his possession. He puts it inside of his blouse and prepares to gather some leaves, preparatory to going to bed, but he is caught in a bear trap. LeNoir finds him in a helpless condition and assists him, after deciding whether to take the silver-fox's skin and get the reward he so desired, but he becomes conscience-stricken and helps MacDonald to Maimie's door, where he leaves the two to their happiness.

THE PATH OF TRUE LOVE (Jan. 6).—Among the green hills and running brooks, we follow the country boy and girl, who are happy in the contentment of their hearts and a ripening love for each other. In contrast we see another picture of a city boy and girl with entirely different surroundings, at odds with each other and the boy disturbed by the coquettishness and indifference of the girl. To assuage his wounded feelings, he tells her he will go away to the country where, among far different scenes, he will die of a broken heart. While "dying" he meets the young country girl and soon forgets all about his city sweetheart. He makes love to the girl. To further his interests and make her succumb to his blandishments, he tears his clothing, puts blackberry stain upon his face and lies down at the foot of a cliff, where the country girl, on return from milking, finds him. She helps him to her home, where the young man is attended by her father and the rest of the family.

The rustic youth is almost forgotten. And we have almost forgotten the young city girl, who now makes her appearance in the country. The country lad readily sees through and exposes the ruse by which the city chap has been trying to gain sympathy. While this is taking place the city girl confronts her erstwhile lover and he, forgetting all about his pretended pain, clasps her to his arms. At the close we are brought back to a scene similar to the first one. The country maiden, all forlorn, is plucking the petals from a bunch of flowers which she holds in her hands, repeating, "To-day, to-morrow or never," when her country lover softly approaches her and folds her in his arms, saying, "To-day."

LUBIN.

THE OYSTER INDUSTRY (Jan. 1).—An educational film, showing the interesting process of oyster fishing, from the planting of the beds, dredging, loading of the boats, unloading at the wharf, shucking, canning and shipping. The last scene shows a man devouring with gusto a juicy bivalve.

OBJECT MATRIMONY (Jan. 1).—Tom and Nancy, both close to middle age, insert matrimonial advertisements, which are answered by Jack and Bess, a younger couple. Jack flees from Nancy's endearments, and Bess runs away from the elderly Tom. They meet and pursue their flight together until they outdistance the pursuers. Jack persuaded Bess to accept him in place of Tom and they look up a minister. As they are about to enter, Tom and Nancy come down the steps and the interrupter flight is resumed, but Tom explains that he is married to Nancy, and the advertisements are shown to have been of use after all.

A VILLAGE ROMANCE (Jan. 3).—John Cummins, a wealthy society man, while out in his auto, discovers he is out of gasoline. He stops at a country store and meets Flo Page, the daughter of the proprietor. It is a case of mutual attraction, causing many a heartache to Si, the clerk, who adores Flo. Cummins manages to have sundry excuses for visiting the little general store, and finally realizes he is head over heels in love with the girl. Cummins, while purchasing cigarettes from Flo, so arouses the anger of Si, who is carrying a bag of potatoes, that he deliberately drops the bag upon Cummins' foot, and that worthy gentleman proceeds to make capital of the injury to remain with the Pages for a week, nursed tenderly by Flo. Si, finding an envelope dropped by Cummins, calls at his (Cummins') club, and asks if he lives there,—that he has stolen his sweetheart. Cummins' friends accompany Si back to the village and find Cummins sweeping out the store, having usurped the clerk's position. Cummins is unmercifully "kidded" by his fashionable friends, and Flo and her father, imagining that Cummins has been deceiving them, become very indignant, and he is ordered out, but eventually succeeds in proving that he is genuinely in love with Flo, who reciprocates.

A NOBLE ENEMY (Jan 4).—Clara Morgan, daughter of a prosperous New York banker, is spending time at Newport, and is much sought after by the men and very popular with the Naval officers belonging to several U. S. vessels, which are temporarily stationed there. Aboard the Connecticut, Lieut. Gray, who is in command of the forward turret of that ship, and Lieut. Ward, are active rivals for the young lady's favor. Gray has occasion to punish a Japanese Steward aboard the ship for some infraction of discipline, and places the man under arrest. In an effort to get even, the Japanese, when released, sneaks into the forward turret and disables the breech mechanism of one of the big guns, his idea being that when next the gun is discharged, Gray will probably be injured or killed, and he will thus get revenge. Lieut. Ward learns of the Japanese's treacherous action, but as he has become convinced that Gray has outdone him in Miss Morgan's favor, he keeps the information to himself. One day Gray saves Ward's life, as the result of an accident in which Ward is thrown into the water. Gray going overboard after him. Ward is carried to his stateroom in an unconscious condition. In the meantime, Clara and her father, with several other guests, have come aboard the ship, and are being shown around by Lieut. Gray and other officers. When taken into the gun turret, she expresses great interest in the mammoth guns and asks Lieut. Gray to load and fire one of the blank shells as a favor to herself. This request Gray is obliged to refuse, but Clara, who is accostumed to having her own way, appeals to the commanding officer of the ship, who gives Gray the necessary authority to oblige the young lady. Ward has recovered consciousness in his stateroom, and is told that Gray has saved his life. He learns also that Miss Morgan is on board in the forward turret, with Gray, and that they are about to fire the big gun. Realizing that this will probably cause the death of the entire party, Ward springs from his bed, rushes up the companionway and down the deck to the turret arriving just in time to prevent the gun from being fired. Startled at Ward's manner, Gray hastily examines the breech of the gun and discovers what has been done, and accuses Ward of being a party to the treacherous action. Ward thereupon confesses the accident of his guilt, and at the intercession of Clara, Gray not only forgives his enemy, but promises him that what has transpired shall ever remain a secret between the three.

Among the Exhibitors

Spring Valley, Minn.—Improvements are to be made in the Elite Theater by H. J. Ricker, the owner.

Pine City, Minn.—J. G. Heywood and J. M. Callins have bought Fred Norton's moving picture theater.

Duquesne, Pa.—A moving picture theater will be built on North First Street, between Grand and Hamilton Avenues, by the Merlin Amusement Company.

Dillon, Mont.—Extensive improvements are being made in the Scenic Theater, of which Earl Wheat is the manager.

Breckenridge, Minn.—A motion picture theater will be opened on the first floor of the Mangakau Building by Bert Smith.

International Falls, Minn.—H. H. Foles will open a moving picture theater here.

Vandeville Theater has just been opened.

Newark, N. J.—A one-story brick building, to contain two stores and a moving picture theater, is to be built by Bernard Gluck, at 648 Springfield Avenue.

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING CO.

145 West 45th Street, NEW YORK, U.S.A.

21 Reels Every Week

7 Days—3 Reels Daily

For the National Programme call at any National Exchange and first review the programme for yourself.

This Is The Way We Do Business We Show You

We have preached National to you for months.
We have promised you relief in your hour of need.
We are making good each and every promise.

NOW

If you do not avail yourself of the opportunity to be your own manager, it is because you have ignored the WARNING in not availing yourself of the EXCLUSIVE PROGRAMME.

Have you investigated our exchange franchise? We are prepared to award these exclusive exchange franchises in states not now being served. The only requirements we ask is that you be a responsible business man in your community. We are pleased to receive applications.

Watch Our Weekly Releases

A critical review published in all leading trade journals. We offer the following programme:

Exclusive Film Service Every Day	Monday,	"Plantation"	"Clarendon" "Mono"
	Tuesday,	"Rose"	"Deu. Biograph" "Helios
	Wednesday,	"Mohawk"	"Latium" "Mondia"
	Thursday,	"Washington"	"Hepwix" "Film D'Art"
	Friday,	"Wrytograph"	"Cricks & Martin" "Aquila"
	Saturday,	"Oklahoma"	"Deu. Bioscope" "Savoy"
	Sunday	"California"	"Messters" "Comerio"

Demand National Programme Your House

While several of these productions are of European make, we wish to acquaint you with the fact that our products are strictly American and nothing distinctively European being shown on this market. We are showing the greatest assortment of comedies that has ever been seen in America. To substantiate this statement we refer you to the critical reviews. We give you short travel stories which goes far to interest your patrons. We are turning out more educational films than has been on the American market in years.

We know that you can hardly believe that we have accomplished so much in so short a time, but the most skeptical must believe when they are shown.

7 Days—3 Reels Daily

National Film Distributing Co.

145 West 45th Street, NEW YORK, U.S.A.

Independent Film Stories

MAJESTIC.

WILL YOU MARRY ME? (Dec. 31).—George at last has Mabel's word to become engaged to him. While buying flowers for her, George, notices outside the florist's door a white glove, which had been dropped by Mabel's cook. He picks it up and gives it to a lady who thinks that he is trying to flirt with her. She places him in the custody of a policeman, who after hearing his story, liberates him.

Willie Le is at Mabel's home, one of her friends is announced, and proves to be none other than the lady he met at the florist's. She tells Mabel of George's behavior, whereupon Mabel promptly returns his ring and orders him from the house. He writes a note to Mabel telling her that he is going to marry the first girl that accepts him. Mabel writes that he is at liberty to do whatever he likes.

He sallies forth and proposes right and left, but is refused. At last, Mabel's cook coyly accepts him. She returns to her mistress, who recognizes the engagement ring. Explanations follow, which brings out the fact that the glove belonged to the cook, and that George's story was true. Mabel and George are thus brought together again, are married and lived happily ever after—maybe.

THE CADDY'S DREAM (Dec. 31).—Mr. Browntop and Miss Kelsomine go out to play golf. They engage Andrew McTavish, a long, lean Scotchman, as caddy. After tieing the ball, Browntop hoists it with a tremendous drive into the atmosphere. They search and search, but still no ball. At length, wearied with the quest, they lie down in a haystack to sleep. They wake 20 years later, aged and forlorn, but still pursue the search through all sorts of places.

The caddy, feeling the need of a wee drap, has sneaked off under a tree and fallen asleep. Mr. Browntop indignantly awakens him, telling him that he has searched half an hour and found no ball. The caddy wakes up, looks around wonderingly, and as he understands the circumstances, chuckles to himself, saying, "Mon, but it was a funny dream."

REX.

AN UNWELCOME SANTA CLAUS (Dec. 28).—Mrs. Burton decides to spend Christmas with her family, and Mr. Burton is all alone. Mr. Burton is a New York clubman, and you know what that means. He selects the choicest lot of the four thousand and eighty chorus girlies and general scandal manufacturers that he knows, and just enough of his male friends to still have the girls know he is present and arranges to beat old Parent Time to it and celebrate New Year's Eve a week in advance. He gets the butler to impersonate Mr. Claus.

Mrs. Burton misses the train and comes home. She enters the house! The butler confesses, and is forthwith assigned a new and less strenuous role—to play part of the wallpaper in the background. Mrs. Burton dons the Santa Claus costume, and there never was a more cheerless Santa since he first got the job. Instead of the costly gifts Mr. Burton had intended for his guests, Mrs. Burton substitutes old shoes, old corsets, and items of the same gender, and after the irate and insulted guests fall upon the stunned Burton to do a few stunning stunts on their own account, Mrs. Burton uncovers the Santa clothes and reveals—the true situation. Confronted with the awful reality, Mr. Burton gives an infant gasp, and his heart migrates to his thorax. Suffice it to say that Burton saw more than the Star of Bethlehem that night, but of the dire happenings and dismal details, let no cruel chronicle be made.

POWERS.

LIFE'S SUPREME TREASURE (Jan. 2).—To each of us life holds some one supreme joy—something in the light of which all the other pleasures of existence dwindle into insignificance. In the case of Mrs. James McIntyre, her domestic happiness and her home are her all—and his, too. So one can imagine how happy she is when her husband is chosen to run for Mayor of their native city. And even more so when, after an exciting campaign, he is elected to that high office.

All goes well until it is found that his time is severely taxed—so much so, in fact, that he is almost a stranger to home and wife. Also, the political life has won him enemies, the kind any honest official would incur, so that when his term is up he is facing a crisis. He has refused to be the willing tool of the unscrupulous bosses, and now the very men who endorsed him have arrayed their powerful political machine to defeat him.

The campaign is a hotly-contested one. He fights hard with his personal record as his paramount issue, but in present-day politics that is a weak weapon, and the well-organized machinery of the professional politician overwhelms him at the polls.

Then the great light dawns on him—that the patient neglected little wife at home, the cozy little apartment and the delightful rest of the evening hours—with her—those are the real pleasures and treasures of life, which only God's own political machine can defeat.

WITH THE TIDE (Jan. 6).—Notwithstanding the terrible grip of old Neptune, here and there a man with a strong guiding star will cheat him, as did Peter Wall, whose parents had long since mourned him as dead. Urged on in erring ways by the irresponsible hallucinations of youth, he had betrayed his business trust, and his loving ones at home, forgiving him for their disgrace, had written him often to come back. But meanwhile the wanderlust had seized him and the great call of the water with it. And though those "that go down to the sea in ships" oft feel the grip of the watery grave, it is doubtful if any have the experience that befell Peter. The settling hulk of the wrecked vessel is washed by the heavy tide, forcing him higher and higher, until at last all that holds him to this world is the rope by which he is lashed to the top-mast. But Providence intervenes and the wandered returns.

COMET.

SIMPLE LIVES (Jan. 1).—Jewel Mason is an inveterate reader of cheap novels. It has fired her with numerous false ideals and she longs for the big city where she believes her ideals exist; so she hies herself to New York and secures a position as waitress in a large lunch room. Her first customer is William Carleton, a young artist, who asks her to pose for him. She comes to his studio and is so successful that she is regularly employed. Jewel has a sweetheart in the country named Raymond. Raymond imagines that he is cut out to be a painter and comes to the city to have his ambitions realized. He visits various artists and by a singular coincidence calls on Carleton. Jewel has just finished posing and is behind the screen dressing for the street. Raymond shows Carleton a sample of his work, which the latter condemns forthwith. He tells Raymond to immediately give up the idea of becoming an artist as he does not possess any talent and that further attention to the profession would be a waste of time. When Jewel hears this she steps out from behind the screen and confronts Carleton. She is taken aback by his heartlessness and decides that the best place for herself and sweetheart is back in the country amid the flowers and fields and far from the glamours of the city. They depart together and when last seen are strolling arm and arm on the road, agreeing that the simple life is the best after all.

TEMPERAMENTS (Jan. 5).—Hans Mabler, a musician of great talent, comes into the life of Mrs. Hahn, a rich widow. She learns to love him through his wonderful playing on the violin. Hans lives next door and the widow spends most of her time listening to the strains of his wonderful melodies. Mrs. Hahn has a daughter, Gretchen. Gretchen is blind, but just the same her soul longs for music and she also finds infinite pleasure in listening to Hans. Unconscious of each other both fall in love with Hans and both elect to win him. But Gretchen cannot see, so she asks her mother what he is like. The widow naturally tells her that he is very ugly and Gretchen is inclined to believe her. Despite this she keeps on loving him. The girl is having her eyes treated and her sight is eventually restored. Then for the first time she catches a glimpse of the world and Hans. What a transformation? What a disillusionment? Hans is not ugly. On the other hand he is handsome, and so manly. When she realizes that her mother has lied to her she reproaches her for her perfidy and there is a good-sized row in the family. The pair meet Hans and there is a struggle between the two women to win him. He repudiates them both and leaves the house. Hans has found his ideal and she is little Martha, the maid, who is employed in his humble abode. She, too, has been enraptured by his playing and when he confesses his affection Martha is only too glad to accept him. To add insult to injury Hans then sends a curt note to Mrs. Hahn and her daughter, apprising them of the fact and when they learn that their hero is to be married to the maid their feelings are better imagined than described.

ECLAIR.

A HEART BOWED DOWN (Dec. 21).—The boy was in love with a girl of the middle class. His father, having aspirations for the future of his son turned the boy away in anger when he found love's chain could not be broken. Years pass and the old man begins to realize his error of judgment. Old age finds him alone.

Little children often played near where he sat in the park, but he never noticed them until one day a little girl, accidentally fell, awakening him from his brooding by a piercing scream. Hurrying to her side, the old man found the child in great pain. Tenderly he lifted the child and carried her home, guided by the little one's sister.

That the mother of the children should prove the wife of his boy, now dead, is part of the story that every one in Edgewater knew at the time. That she should deny him forgiveness proved another blow.

The injured child recovered quickly. Her heart was touched by the old man's sorrow and she went to look for him. Can't you guess what happened after that?

A SILENT CALL (Dec. 28).—Overpowered and deprived of her valuables, a young girl is bound and left helpless under the seat of the vehicle where she is able to release one of her hands only after a family of travelers have seated themselves therein and are happily enjoying their lunch.

The hand appearing so suddenly in their midst, apparently from nowhere, naturally startled the occupants, but they were more than eager to assist the poor girl when they found she was a helpless prisoner in their midst.

LITTLE WILLIE'S CURE FOR UNCLE (Dec. 28).—Uncle was nervous and Willie, little shaver though he was, very wisely decided on a method of treatment. He selected NOISE!

Well sir, you never saw such a mess in your life when that rascal finished his task. Was he punished by his father? Oh, no. Uncle interfered and saved the child a well deserved spanking.

(See also page 1100.)

IMP.

BROKE (Dec. 30).—Poor old Timothy finds himself in his hotel unable to pay his bill. Vulgarly speaking, he is broke. He tries to beat it, but is prevented. In sheer desperation he evolves a bright, bold scheme for ending his troubles.

He writes himself a letter (in a feigned name) appointing himself manager of a restaurant. Showing this document to the servants he obtains money from them on the promise of giving them good positions.

Timothy's ingenuity is only commencing. He invites them all to a jolly good dinner and while they are enjoying it he returns to his room, secures his grip and escapes. He is pursued, of course, by the deluded servants, but triumphantly vanishes in a fast automobile. (Copyrighted, 1911, by Imp Films Co.)

A LESSON TO HUSBANDS (Dec. 30).—Jack Armstrong's affections for his wife have cooled of late. One morning he leaves home in no particular good humor with things in general. While he is in this mood Mrs. Aubrey calls upon him at his office. She is a charming woman and Jack is easily influenced by her. She wants him to grant her a little favor which he does. He cashes a check for the lady, and he is so charmed by her that he improves upon the acquaintance. He escorts her home, on the way giving her another check for a new hat. They part. Jack Armstrong goes home elated with his success in making a conquest of a pretty woman. Of course, in his new found happiness he shows indifference towards his wife, and the domestic atmosphere is therefore cool. But at the dinner table Jack Armstrong takes up a paper and reads a graphic account of the doings of a woman who is victimizing business men by persuading them to cash worthless checks. This bring him to his senses: he is a good fellow at heart and realizing how badly he has behaved towards his wife resolves to have nothing more to do with Mrs. Aubrey and takes every pains to reinstate himself in the good graces of his unsuspecting wife. (Copyrighted, 1911, by Imp Films Co.)

HIS NEW WIFE (Jan. 1).—Ebenezer Sage after a year of widowerhood decides to marry again. When the lady of his choice arrives in Eben's home town she is received with acclamation by Eben's fellow townsmen; but she has barely established herself in her new home before she evinces signs of bohemianism. She is musical and she likes cider not wisely, but too well, so well indeed that she succumbs to the influence of it.

Eben's straight-laced neighbors are somewhat scandalized by the lady's free and easy manners. Eben himself finds it hard to tolerate them. However, in the long run the wife is cured of her propensity for cider and peace reigns in Eben's home. (Copyrighted, 1911, by Imp Films Co.)

THE TRINITY (Jan. 4).—The Trinity is a comedy drama which tells the sweet story of the attachment of an old taxidermist for a young artist, both Germans, who are inseparable companions. The old man receives a letter from a life-time friend in the Fatherland telling him he is sending him his baby and to take care of her. A child in the household is not desired, but the friends go to the depot to meet her. They are surprised to find her a handsome and buxom young German woman, lovable and sweet of disposition. The friends are again in a quandary, but they make a place for her. They believe the intrusion will interfere with their household comfort, and are ill at ease. The artist finally solves the difficulty by making love to the girl, and the old man is disconsolate, for he thinks he will lose them both. He finally conceives a plan and makes preparations to enlarge the house to accommodate the two families and "the trinity" is complete.

THANHOUSER.

THE PASSING (Jan. 2).—The husband had a loving wife and a child of whom he was fond. But he saw very little of them, social engagements taking up most of his time, while the two were left to live their lives together.

G. W. Bradenburgh
233 North Eighth St.
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

WE undertake anything—provide everything pertaining to the motion picture industry. Expert Camera Operator at your service for Special work, Developing, Printing, and Tinting. Nothing too large, nothing too small. Write for prices and samples.

Over 2,000,000 feet of first class films for sale, prices ranging from ½ cent per foot to 10 cents per foot for "Big Hits." All films sold with return privilege.

POSTERS PROVIDED GRATIS on any film over $10.00 per reel.

WHO started a $30.00 SPECIAL SERVICE? include FEATURE FILMS in same? make a SPECIALTY of TOP LINERS?

WE are the Pioneers. DO NOT COPY OTHERS.

ARE you receiving satisfaction? you having Personal and Prompt Attention?

IF NOT, APPLY FOR SUGGESTED WEEKLY PROGRAMME SERVICE

Independent Film Service
231 North 8th Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS
Theatres Designed Everywhere
Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
2549 Archer Avenue, :: CHICAGO, ILL.

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing
Why don't you send it to us?
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.
We buy second hand machines.
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

WHILE THEY LAST
I still have a choice lot of
PHOTOPLAYER SLIDES
They are yours at 30c. each.
Cash with order
JAMES L. HOFF
Box 70, Madison Square Station NEW YORK CITY

[illegible] came into the wife's life. He [illegible] died, as she sat at his [illegible] to and him. The husband was not home at the time, having spent the evening with some friends outside, only returning with them at a late hour.

The wife, alone in the world, although not a widow, passed a life of misery. The husband easily recovered from his grief, which was short-lived, and they were farther apart than ever. Then happiness re-entered the wife's life. The vision of her son appeared to her. He shrank from the mourning she wore, and to please him she arrayed herself in garments like those she wore when he was alive. And the happy hours of her life were those passed with him.

As the years passed, the child from the spirit world grew up, or so it seemed to her, and the mother grew old with him. She watched him progress as a child, until finally he became a young man, but no one else ever saw him. And the woman jealously guarded her secret.

When the time came for her to pass to the other world, her husband was at her side, but not in her thoughts. She stretched out her arms, but they were not for him. Her dying remarks were addressed to her child in the other world, and she thankfully welcomed the chance to join him there, where they could never be parted.

The husband grieved when his wife died, but he never dreamed for one moment that they had been separated for many years, and that her life had been passed, not with him, but in the spirit land.

A COLUMBUS DAY CONSPIRACY (Jan. 5).—An Italian nobleman, famed for his family and wealth, is among those invited to attend the Columbus day celebration in New York. A bright young girl reporter is assigned by one of the newspapers, to learn from the count what he thinks of the city and its inhabitants. She calls at his hotel, and is graciously received. Her visit is paid very shortly after the nobleman arrives, and while they are talking, one of the hotel porters enters with a trunk belonging to the count. When he sees the owner, he drops it with agitation, and there is mutual recognition.

The reporter learns that the porter was formerly a servant of the count in Italy, but had been discharged for dishonesty. She is suspicious of the man, and is convinced that he means to harm his former employer; she warns the count, but he laughs at her fears.

When the porter is discharged, she follows him from the hotel. She sees him enter an Italian restaurant in the poorer section of the city.

Disguised as an Italian dancing girl, she enters the place, and finds the former porter, slightly intoxicated and in a garrulous mood. He gladly tells her his troubles, and boastfully declares that he will get even. He means to blow up the count with a bomb while he is seated on the grand stand during the parade, and is indifferent as to whether any other persons are injured or not.

She goes to police headquarters and tells her story. The girl is stationed on the roof of a low building near the grand stand. It has been arranged that when she locates the man she will give a signal, and indicate the criminal.

Her efforts are crowned with success. The half crazy foreigner is neatly captured, and taken away by the police. Later they bring him before the count for idfentification, and the story of the girl's heroism comes out, and the count and his friends realize what she has done for them.

The count takes from his coat a decoration that has been awarded him by his king for bravery, and pins it on the girl's breast. The others applaud and drink the young woman's health. And the girl? Well, she has a "dandy story" to tell the crowd in the "city room" when she returns to her office.

NESTOR.

THE BEST MAN WINS (Dec. 25).—Gordon, the foreman of Bassett's fifty-acre farm, is in love with Dottie Bassett. The girl, however, fails to reciprocate. The big farm has to be ploughed, and Bassett urges his daughter to smile on Gordon's suit. Dottie, however, fails to see things through her papa's glasses.

A barn dance is about to be held; it is the event of the year. All the boys fight for the privilege of taking Miss Bassett to the dance. She decides to give every one an equal chance, and incidentally have the farm ploughed. The man who wins the ploughing shall take her to the dance. This makes Gordon happy, so sure is he of victory.

Harold, a young man from the Agricultural Department, at Washington, makes his appearance and is promptly smitten by Dottie's charms. This time the girl does not fail to reciprocate.

While going to town, the horse takes fright and runs away. Gordon jumps out of the carriage, leaving Dottie at the mercy of the maddened animal. Harold dashes to the rescue and saves the girl in the nick of time. Papa Bassett is still obdurate and favors Gordon.

The ploughing bee proves both amusing and exciting. The race finally lies between Gordon and Harold; it is stubbornly contested to the finish, but Cupid is with Harold, who is acclaimed the best man. He has won fairly and claims the prize. At the barn dance the climax is reached, and Harold gains the old farmer's consent to the marriage of his daughter. Gordon acknowledges defeat and steals away from the lovers, who are happy in each other's arms.

A WESTERN GIRL'S LOVE (Dec. 27).—For her daughter Edna, to refuse wealthy Godfrey Ainslee, and accept a poor Pony Express rider like Ned Hayden, appeared to Mrs. Nolan, to be the height of folly.

Firmly determined to marry the girl at any price, Godfrey, accompanied by Bert Hill, galloped after the Pony Express rider, overtaking and attacking Ned as he reached the most dangerous part of the road. Then followed a hand to hand conflict between the two men, ending in Ned being forced over the edge of the cliff.

As Pete, the half-breed, to whom Bert had readily disposed of Ned's horse, rode past the scene of the struggle, he spied the young man's hat, and going to the edge of the cliff, was astonished to behold its owner, whose fall had been broken by the ledge below, holding his head and staring around in a bewildered condition. Hurrying down on the other side, he helped Ned to mount his horse, then taking the wounded man to his cabin, Pete offered the Pony Express rider what humble hospitality lay in his power.

Here, physically recovered, but with memory gone, Ned remained for two months, and the time might have run into two years, had not Sheriff Nolan and his men recognized Ned's horse, followed his tracks, and discovered their lost friend in Pete's cabin, from whence he hurried them to Nolan Hotel, where the sight of Edna and Godfrey (who had spread the report that Ned had been seen in another part of the country), completely restored his memory, enabling him to give a full account of Godfrey's treachery, to the horror of foolish Mrs. Nolan, who at that moment had the minister ready to make her daughter Mrs. Ainslee.

Without loss of words, Sheriff Nolan hustled Godfrey off to prison, while Ned, greatly to the satisfaction of all present, quietly took his place as the bridegroom.

MUTT & JEFF BREAK INTO SOCIETY (Dec. 30).—Mutt and Jeff decide to go to work. Automobile driving seems to appeal to their roving dispositions. Mutt and Jeff accordingly take automobile lessons. The former successfully passes the examination and poor Jeff is told to "try again."

The lanky chauffeur answers an advertisement and makes a decided hit with Banker Russell and his family.

Mutt appears to have settled the ticklish problem of making a living by becoming chauffeur for Mr. Russell. With little Jeff, things are quite different. He roams about the streets in an aimless fashion.

Helen Russell, who owns autos of every description, is a good pedestrian. She takes a ramble in the park and for a moment rests upon a bench. When she leaves, she forgets her well-filled purse. Jeff, still wandering, finds it. The young lady's visiting card leads Jeff to her palatial home, where he is received with joy. Helen takes him for a spin in her auto, with Mutt doing the "wheeling." Fifty miles from the city limits, the snorting thing stops and Mutt makes a tour of investigation. When under the auto, Jeff decides to take the wheel in his own hands. He does and the "Yellow Dash" zig-zags away, leaving Mutt behind.

Helen and Jeff reach home safe and happy. Mutt manages to reach a pole bearing the legend, "Ten miles to the city limits," and collapses.

THEIR AFTERNOON OFF (Dec. 30).—Jack is off and so is Mary. Both being off, they go for a stroll. Jack and Mary have never met. They meet now at the fountain. Jack is kind and Mary promises to see him on her return from abroad. Next morning Mary is told by her mistress that a new milkman is coming. The milkman is John. Jack and Mary decide to deceive each other no more.

AMERICAN.

A MIDWINTER TRIP TO LOS ANGELES (Jan. 1).—Marengo Avenue in Pasadena, is first on the canvas. Its over-arching pepper trees make a sight not equalled elsewhere in America. Westmoreland Place, Pasadena, is followed by a view of the famous Busch gardens, property of the wealthy St. Louis brewer. Then follows delightful glimpses of the ascent of Mt. Lowe. This journey takes in the longest curving trestle in the United States, the "Gate Above the Clouds," and finally we reach the top of Mt. Lowe, 6,100 feet above the level of the sea and 2,000 feet higher than Lick Observatory.

The world-famous Cawston ostrich farm is next where we see the visitors feeding Mr. and Mrs. Taft, largest ostriches in the world, with oranges. Also, the California alligator farm, with its 1,00 alligators of varying years and sizes. We see Okeechobee, 500 years old and over 16 feet in length.

Then we are taken to the famous California oil well, where we note with amazement that oil is being pumped even in the front yards of residences. Historic San Gabriel Mission is next. We observe that magnificent home of Paul de Longpre, America's most famous flower painter. Then for the Los Angeles pigeon farm, where 500,000 white pigeons make a fairy snow storm as we stroll through the yard.

THE MISADVENTURES OF A CLAIM AGENT (Jan. 4).—When Jack Neivell found the evidence of pay dirt while prospecting he decided at once to purchase the claim lease from the owner. He called at the office of the landman and by turning over his savings obtained the leases from the owner. Jack pitched his camp on his claim and started work. He soon made a respectable showing. It happened that Dad Curtis, the land owner, was also enamoured of Williams and he called to pay his respects and urge her to become Mrs. Curtis, on the morning that Jack struck a pay streak. In his excitement Jack hurried to Tess's home to tell her of his success and incidentally hers if she so willed. Tess so willed—and poor old Dad returned home to cook a scheme to neutralize Jack's success. He payed a visit to Jack's camp and secured the lease that the young prospector had carelessly left, and employed a bunch of squatters to work the claim for him. When Jack returned from his successful wooing, he was ordered off his claim by the squatters unless he could show his lease, and as it was resting in the inside pocket of Dad Curtis, poor Jack was compelled to return to Tess empty-handed. Tess did some rapid thinking and then some rapid work. She called on Dad Curtis, not conventionally, but through the window incog, and requested the return of the lease at the point of a gun. She notified the sheriff and by her efforts the claim was promptly restored to Jack, and Tess then agreed to fight his battle for him for the rest of his life.

BRONCHO BUSTING FOR FLYING "A" PICTURES (Jan. 4).—Showing Hiney Snow, the champion broncho buster of the State of California, and a Flying "A" cowboy, breaking an outlaw horse for use in Flying "A" pictures. Full of excitement from the moment the saddle touches the back of the wild horse, until Mr. Snow has conquered the vicious animal.

RELIANCE.

BROTHERLY LOVE (Dec. 27).—John Ford and Charles Winters are such close friends that their acquaintances call them "the brothers." John falls in love with Marjorie, who is jealous of his affection for Charles, though she hides her resentment. After the marriage John insists on Charles coming to live with them, and Marjorie finds herself neglected for the chum. Her anger is aroused when Charles becomes shiftless and imposes on John's hospitality, making him believe he is ill when in reality he is only lazy. After John has gone to his work Charles tries to make love to Marjorie, who orders him to leave the house. He goes to a nearby saloon and spends the money John has given him for liquor. He writes a note to Marjorie asking her to meet him, and fearing to tell her husband, Marjorie tells him he must choose between her and his chum. A bitter quarrel arises, and Marjorie leaves the house. John finds the note Charles wrote in a book where Marjorie had hidden it, and a realization of the situation kindles his wrath to the boiling point. Charles, coming in at that moment, is given the benefit of it, and a terrific fight takes place in which the room and furniture is demolished and the door burst open. Terror-stricken, Majorie watches the combat, and after Charles had received a good beating and been kicked out of the house, John takes his wife in his arms and is forgiven.

THE BIRTHMARK (Dec. 30).—Destitute, the grief-stricken man decides to go West to build up a fortune. His little babe in arms he leaves on the door-step of a mansion. The child has a

EUGENE GAUDIO.

Experienced laboratory man desires position with reliable concern. Have had ten years' experience in the manufacturing of moving picture films. Developing of negative and positive film thoroughly understood. Perfect formulas. Toning and tinting a specialty. Have been foreman of developing and tinting departments of the Independent Moving Picture Co. for the past two years. Results Guaranteed. Address: 2432 Beaumont Avenue, Bronx, New York City.

LISTEN

Mr. Theater Manager and Exchange Man—why don't you yourself buy the greatest Christmas present your town, your customer, your patron and your hearth desires. Buy a local Motion Picture Making outfit and photograph your town occurrences; photograph the one who has a grouch against you, show him on the sheet and he will smile and be your friend. This local picture outfit has been reduced from $800 down to $395, for real professional work, guaranteed, no toy. Outfit comprises camera, with lens, tripod, printer and developing racks, trays, winder and drying drum. Send for catalogue at once and rush your order. I keep supplies for the trade, best lenses, all machine repairs have great original specialties. I have the projector all others have been copied from

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER, 219 Second Ave., New York

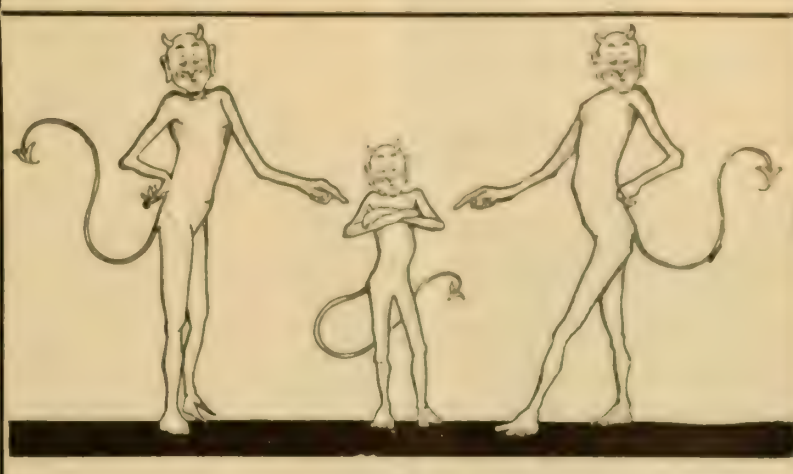
20,000 roll tickets, $1.40; 50 5-8 cored carbons, $1.15; stereopticon objectives, 50c to $3.00; stereopticons, $15.00; rheostats, $3.00 to $5.00; arc lamps, $1.75, $2.50 and $3.75. Condensers, 50c; calcium jets, $2.80; acetylene jets, $2.50; gas generators, $3.50; moving picture objectives, $2.75; jackets, $2.75. List of moving picture repair parts at fair prices. Sprocket wheel, 85c; films, 1c a foot. Catalogue on request. L. METZ, 300 E. 23d St., N.Y.

FREE

Send postal card with name and address plainly written and receive free of charge sample pages of "Orpheum Collection" of Moving Picture (dramatic and descriptive) music. Until further notice these splendid collections will be offered at the following special prices:

No. 1 (post paid).....58 cts.
No. 2 (post paid).....58 cts.
Both numbers post paid for $1.15.

Clarence E. Sinn
1501 Sedgwick St. Chicago, Ill.



Growing, Growing, Growing!!!

Heavens, how that "third Imp" is growing! A mere baby a few weeks ago, he is strong and husky now. Within another week or two he will be as big and popular as "Monday Imp" and "Thursday Imp." The widespread and insistent demand for all three Imps every week is proving irresistible. Keep at it, gentlemen, and make sure of at least three good houses every week by showing at least three Imps every week. D. R. Whitman, Doan Theater, Cleveland, Ohio, says: "I wish there were many times three Imps a week. Whatever success we have achieved I unhesitatingly give Imps a large share of the credit."

"HIS NEW WIFE"

Copyright 1911, INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES COMPANY. Released Monday, Jan. 1. A rapid-fire story involving a woman who loves hard cider too well. Book it!

"THE TRINITY"

Copyright 1911, INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES COMPANY. Released Thursday, Jan. 4. In which you see King Baggot, your one favorite, at his best. Book it!

"PLAYING THE GAME"

Copyright 1911, INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES COMPANY. Released Saturday, Jan. 6. A fat man plays golf by proxy. It's terribly, terribly, terribly funny. On the same reel you will get "BACK TO HIS OLD HOME"

Copyright 1911, INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES COMPANY. Everybody who has seen advance exhibitions of this film says it is without exception the

"FUNNIEST IMP EVER MADE"

The above "Saturday Split Imp" will simply coin money for you. Will you take the necessary steps to get it? No film maker in the world is producing such rollicking comedies. Think what such pictures will do toward increasing the popularity of your house!

Independent Moving Picture Co.
CARL LAEMMLE, President
102 West 101st Street New York

BIGGER and : : BETTER

SEND YOUR SUBSCRIPTION
TO-DAY FOR
The Moving Picture Paper That Is Worth While

Domestic	-	$3.00 Per Annum
Canada	- -	3.50 " "
Foreign	- -	4.00 " "

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Box 226 Madison Sq. P.O. N.Y. City

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

Fort Wayne Electric Works
of GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA

Import Department

International Film Traders

5 West 14th St., New York

Weekly Importations

Feature Films

Masterpieces of the World's Greatest Producers ranging in length from 1000—4000 ft. selected by our own European Agents.

Artistic Posters 3 Sheets and more.

Features sold outright without restriction.

Correspondence solicited.

birth mark on its arm. A thief picks it up from the door-step and takes it home, and his childless wife adopts it. The girl is made to follow the vocation of its foster parents, and grows to womanhood. She meets a wealthy young man and the two fall in love. Her father has a "job" on and insists that she go with him. Reluctantly she does so, but tells him it is the last time. The "job" happens to be the rooms of the girl's lover, and she compels the crook to leave without touching anything. She is prevented from following by the young man's entrance. He mistakes why she is there, but when he seeks to take advantage of it she repulses him, and, ashamed, he apologizes. She refuses to tell him why she is there, and he, having faith in her, does not insist upon further explanations. He calls at her home after that and asks her to be his wife, and she refuses, though admitting her love. The thief seeks to take advantage of the rich young man by blackmailing him, and in a heated quarrel she discovers that he is not her father and runs away. Starving and destitute she falls into the temptations of one more theft, and it proves to be the home of her father, who has grown rich and has been futilely searching for his daughter. After entering she has a revulsion of feeling, and decides to depart without taking anything, but her father discovers her. He disarms her and gets part of her story, despite the sobbing that overwhelms her. Instinctively feeling that it is his child, he seizes her in his arm and roughly tears the dress from her shoulder, disclosing the birth-mark. After the reunion she is seen very happy in her father's love, and joyful in the knowledge that she can with a clear conscience marry the young man who has returned to her side.

BISON.

THE RUN ON THE BANK (Dec. 26).—After serving five years in the penitentiary for forgery, Jim goes into the world resolved to live honestly in the future. Few business men care to harbor an ex-convict, however, and he is almost driven back to crime by the rebuffs he receives. Penniless, disheartened and shabby, he rides the bumpers of a freight to a Western town and is given employment through the intervention of the pretty daughter of a ranchman. Several months elapse, and by hard work Jim is promoted to the position of foreman. The boss goes away and directs Jim to deliver a check to a neighboring ranchman as commission on a cattle sale. The neighbor refuses to accept the check, stating there is a run on the bank. Jim verifies this, and gallops home, and finds from the account and check books that the boss has nearly $10,000—his entire fortune—in the tottering institution. A wild idea seizes him, and a tremendous conflict of emotion is depicted, including a dissolving scene of Jim in convict's garb, manacled in his cell. The sight of the tearful girl whom he loves decides him, and he forges a check for the entire amount of the deposit. By hard riding, he gets to the bank at five minutes to three. The mad mob, fighting for preference, tries to keep him out but he tears through them with the fury of a maniac, gets to the paying teller's window, forces payment of the check and goes to the ranch, where he secrets the money on the mantel. With breaking heart he writes a farewell letter to the ranchman, telling him the story and that he must know no one but an expert forger could have turned the trick. A pathetic scene takes place as the rancher returns, believing himself bankrupt, and is met by his daughter. The film closes with a magnificent scenic view at break of day showing clearly the rising sun illuminating the sparkling water and castings its warm rays upon Jim's bent figure as he moodily plods along seeking a place of abode to which the curse of his past career will not follow.

GETTING HIS MAN (Dec. 29).—Dodging in and out the massive rocks, with pistols blazing leaden messengers of death at every opportunity, the relentless sheriff pursues his man. With spurs plunged into the horse, the man thunders down the mountain trail. A sharp turn in the road causes the noble steed to brace its strained limbs. Too late! The rider is flung from the saddle, and horse and man tumble down the steep mountainside.

Staggering from the bank, the wounded cashier fires his pistol. From the neighboring houses men and women, rudely disturbed from their slumbers, come forth. The story is quickly told, and the sheriff's posse starts in pursuit of the daring man who has vanished with the funds of the bank. The sheriff gets the man and the money, loses the money at faro, and the bandit gives up his life getting it back for the sheriff. In the end the sheriff has the money and the man.

GREAT NORTHERN.

A REALISTIC MAKE-UP (Dec. 30).—Mr. Boig, an actor, has to study for the part of a burglar in a new drama. Whilst engaged in making up, his apartments are invaded by a genuine burglar. The latter is of small stature, while Boig is of huge proportions, yet the burglar ties Boig's hands behind him, eats his dinner, drinks his wine and annexes his clothes, afterwards reposing on his bed. Boig manages to use the telephone and summons the police, but on their arrival, the burglar assures them that Boig is the one they want, and he is lead captive away. In the street, however, he convinces the custodians of law and order that he is the tenant of the premises, and eventually the tables are turned on the real burglar. Boig, however, is generous and buys him off as recompense for the service rendered him in showing him what a real burglar should be like.

SEA AND LANDSCAPES, DENMARK (Dec. 30).—A charming selection of views of scenes by sea and land. Most remarkable are the series of wave pictures, which show what great strides have been made in presenting the restless ocean on the kinematograph. Views of yachts in full sail, of cliffs, and inland hills and valleys are included, and finally is given a picture of an aeroplane and sunset.

REPUBLIC.

IN THE DAYS OF THE SIX NATIONS (Jan. 7).—Escorted by a lieutenant of the army, the two daughters of the Major have no fear as they make a long journey across a country swarmed with war-maddened Indians and quite a large number of renegades.

Several of the Indians appoint one of their number to act as escort for the party and betray them into their hands at the first opportunity. The treacherous Indian guide leads the party astray in the woods and, but for the fortunate appearance of a famous trapper, the sisters would undoubtedly have become captives of the Indians. The trapper's shrewdness for a time overcomes the craftiness of the redmen, but the odds prove too great against him and in order to save the daughters of the Major and their escort, he leaps into the raging torrent below the cave where the party have sought refuge, and begins a dangerous trip to the fort to seek aid. The party is captured by the Indians in spite of the brave fight made by the Lieutenant and bound hand and foot they are brought to the Indian village. Indian runners are sent forth to notify the chiefs that a special council is to be held, and soon the famous council of the six nations is in session.

The Lieutenant is condemned to the stake and after a war dance preparations are made to execute the order, when Providence, in the shape of a body of mounted militia, led by the trapper, interferes with the plans, and the Indians, in their eagerness to escape from the merciless fire of the army men, forget all about their victims, who are rescued and are safely escorted to their destination.

ECLAIR.

American Make

A TRAGIC JOKE (Dec. 19).—When Fred Perry made up is mind to follow the uncertain life of a detective, little did he think his first case would involve the girl of his choice. Fate must have decreed that the old broker's double life be exposed by no less a person than his prospective son-in-law. At any rate, a desperate gang of counterfeiters were run to earth and turned over to the law. The leader escaped. Fred Perry, acting on information presumably furnished in a mysterious letter by a disgruntled member of the gang, but in reality written in the spirit of fun by his chum, actually discovered the false coiners' den. Here he found a clue to the identity of the chief through a cigar case identical with one he had seen presented to the father of his intended bride by the girl herself.

Imagine Fred Perry's condition of mind about this time. Here he was facing a duty he dreaded to perform. Just how Providence intervened to make his task easier the picture itself must tell.

THE WRONG BOTTLE (Dec. 26).—Just picture, if you can, a young man bidding his betrothed good-by as he goes away to begin his struggle with the world in his honest effort to provide a home before marriage.

That he became a drug clerk, eventually, is neither here nor there. Just the same, another man came into the life of the little girl back home; a man of affluence, whose wealth contrasted strongly with the meagre income of the far-away drug clerk.

That his life of dissipation made hers one of sorrow and shame after their marriage every one knows and her surprise was felt when he died suddenly of heart failure in a gambling den after losing his all. Then poverty came to the wife and she sought work, and found it, in a factory. The grind was too much for her delicate system. One day they carried her home and the doctor came. To the druggist ran her child with a prescription. Not a moment should be lost. The young clerk had prospered, for he now owned a business. Realizing from the actions of the child that life or death depended on him, the druggist hurriedly grasped a bottle and filled the prescription. The wrong bottle! "God! what have I done?" The policeman could not say where the child had gone. A few moments' search seemed ages, but the house was finally located. The child approaches her stricken mother with a spoonful of liquid from the bottle. A sharp, nervous knock at the door. The child stumbles and falls as an excited man rushes into the room.

There is little more to tell here. We leave the picture to unfold the best part of the story.

(See alro page 1096.)

AMBROSIO.

THE WAR IN TRIPOLI (Dec. 20).—This film shows actual scenes of Turkish spies and Arab traitors escorted to be shot; Italian warships in Tripoli Harbor; troops crossing the market place; sailors behind the trenches; the day before the battle of Sidi-Messri; the 11th and 84th Regiments in action; the Hamidje Fort after bombardment; the mess at the outposts; Red Cross Hospital; officers on guard; an oasis camp.

TWEEDLEDUM MARRIES AN AMERICAN GIRL (Dec. 20).—An amusing comedy, in which Tweedledum weds an athletic American girl who routs him out of bed at unearthly hours to take a shower bath, and wears him out with strenuous athletics. She takes him riding and motoring, and poor Tweedledum is hurled through a brick wall. In the end, however, he concludes that his wife is worth all the trouble he has gone through.

CHAMPION.

THE BLOOD OF THE POOR (Jan. 1).—We see the young girl in her father's tailor shop, sharing the meagre morsels of bread with her little brothers and sisters; and the old father, toiling on the bench, striving to earn a scanty subsistence.

The constable serves notice on him to pay his rent or get out on the morrow. Outside the shop the poor man's daughter is sweeping when an automobile happens to pass by, carrying no other than the owner of the house. The daughter of the rich man is so impressed with the beauty of the poor girl that she says to her father she would like to employ the girl as her maid. By his daughter working for the rich man the rent is paid.

While working at the rich man's house, the poor girl falls victim to the wiles of the son of the millionaire and in making appeals to her mistress to have justice done her for the heinous crime she is driven out of the house.

Meanwhile the poor tailor is working hard on a dress suit to be worn at a reception by the rich man's son. The job is finished and the tailor expires. Another tailor, accompanied by the rich youth, appears at the squalid tailoring shop for the suit. The young scion is startled by the girl he has ruined and offers her money. She refuses and he betakes himself to the grand reception, leaving misery behind him.

THE KID OF ROARING CAMP (Jan. 3).—First and foremost, John Carrol betakes himself to the Western wilds for the sake of his wife's health. Carrol is a miner, and we do not see that he has a cinch of the good things of life. But yet he is happy with his wife and little one—and who could not be happy with that youngster about.

One day something went wrong and Carrol was killed by an explosion. His wife soon succumbed to the shock and the little girl was left an orphan.

Robert Page, a young miner, found the little one in her dilemma of grief. Robert adopted the girl and struck rich dirt in "Roaring Camp." He saw to it that the girl was placed where she would get a good education. It is needless to say that in future years "The Kid of Roaring Camp" was made his life partner.

I WON'T!

I won't promise any customer anything unless I KNOW I can make good on it. I'd rather give you more than I promise than less. If this sounds good to you, if it's something different than you're accustomed to, hook up immediately. Write this very day. Try Laemmle films, Laemmle service and "Laemmle luck."

Carl Laemmle, President

The Laemmle Film Service

New Number:
204 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1517 Farnam St., Omaha, Neb.
421 Walnut St., Des Moines, Iowa
1110 Wyandotte St., Kansas City, Mo.

The BIGGEST and BEST film renter in the World

(My Free Employment Bureau is yours to command, always and forever.)

Solved at last REID'S DIFFUSER

Gives DISSOLVING EFFECT with SINGLE STEREOPTICON

Every Operator—Every Exhibitor—should have one. Can be used with any machine. Prepaid for $2.00 bill

Reid Diffuser Co., 26 Waverly Ct., Chicago, Ill.

ITALIAN-TURKISH WAR (Cines)

Our Features are Rented Without Restriction, to any Exhibitor.
Large Posters Supplied Free of Charge

ITALIAN-TURKISH WAR (Cines) 1,000 ft.
THE SEARCHLIGHT (Cines) An episode of the Italian-Turkish War 1,000 "
CARDINAL RICHELIEU'S RIVAL 2,000 "
NAPOLEON AT ST. HELENA - 2,000 "
LIFE AS IT IS (The Outcast) - 3,000 "
PASSION'S SLAVE - - 3,000 "
THE WAY TO RUIN - - 3,000 "
DUKE OF GRANADA - - 2,000 "

A New One
PETER IVANOFF'S SACRIFICE 2,000 ft.

There are FEATURES
EXTRAORDINARILY ATTRACTIVE, TRAGEDIES
UNDENIABLY REMARKABLE, EVIDENTLY

FINE, INIMITABLY LAUDABLE,
MAGNIFICENTLY

COLORED,
OSTENSIBLY

NATURAL,
EXCEPTIONALLY WONDERFUL.

YES,
ORDINARILY RENTABLE, KINDLY

Call or Write
FEATURE FILM CO.
108 East 12th Street NEW YORK

Watch this space for Future Features

YOU MR. EXHIBITOR, ARE THE MAN!

LISTEN WHY:

Every move that every director or actor in my new makes, is decided on from only one point of view—the Exhibitors'! If you were right here, alongside of my camera man every day, and on my pay roll, you could not more accurately direct the execution of the Exhibitors' View in film-making than I do in the pictures we're making now.

DUPLEX STUDIO

Personally, I'm stuck on emotional work of a certain type. But the fact that I like it is no reason why I should expect you to like it—see my point? I'm giving you what I know you and your audiences want! And I can do it well now because I've got the facilities. Make your exchange show you the Picture Plays and then let my Boost Department help you. Write in for that free weekly envelope.

TWO GOOD STARTS FOR 1912:

Saturday, January 6. Life's Supreme Treasure. | Saturday, January 2. With The Tide.

Read the Synopses in this issue—then demand!

POWERS MOTION PICTURE CO.
511 West 42d St., New York City

THE ENTERPRISE (Portable) CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Price with carrying case, $35.00

Is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the

ONLY SATISFACTORY PORTABLE OUTFIT

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most satisfactory for the production of oxygen gas.

For Sale by Dealers Everywhere.

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS 564-572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

SOLAX.

WHEN MARIAN WAS LITTLE (Dec. 27).—Marian's brother Rob invites home with him his chum at college, Dick Morton. Little Marion, Rob's sixteen year old sister, when she learns that her brother's chum is expected, decides on a plan by which she may captivate him.

A part of her plan is to "primp up" as a "big girl." She gets long skirts, rats for her hair, corsets and such other accessories which help to emphasize feminine charms.

Then Marian begins to lay siege to Dick's unwary heart. She practices her alluring coquetries on him with such telling effect that before long Dick is entirely submerged. But he receives a jolt when he attempts to kiss her. She boxes his ears good and proper. She shows him, as any big girl would, how entirely improper are stolen kisses.

Years later when Marian has blossomed out as a young lady of winsome personality and charm of manner, she meets Dick again. This time his compelling and eloquent professions of undying affection, he wins her consent to become his wife.

THE DIVIDED RING (Dec. 29).—Two children are left orphans. They become a public charge and are sent to an orphan asylum. When they grow up and reach the age of 12, they are adopted by two different families, and thus are separated. Before they are parted, they break in half a ring which their mother had left them as a keepsake and each pledge to wear the divided ring in a chamois bag around their neck.

The little girl is adopted by a wealthy family and is reared in an environment of refinement and culture. The boy is adopted by a thoughtless and ill-tempered farmer, who treats him cruelly and imposes on him the labor which would naturally revolve upon a much older man.

The boy revolts and makes a break for freedom. The farmer intercepts all of the boy's mail and withholds all of his letters from him. In this way, when the boy's sister moves to another city, se loses all trace of her.

The boy, after he runs away, gets free passage on a freight train and before long finds himself in a small town. He falls in with a robber. The robber treats him royally. One night, the robber decides to rob a dwelling. He uses the boy as his helper. The house which is being robbed is the home of the boy's sister. She interrupts her brother while he is in the act of rifling a desk. He struggles with her and during the struggle she tears from his neck the half of the divided ring. Brother and sister are then brought together after years of separation.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS (Dec. 31).—Widow Johnson is "up against" a hard struggle for existence. She and her little wide-eyed daughter are followed by a relentless nemesis until the spirit of Christmas, with its joyousness and good cheer spreading over God's world, brings happiness into her home.

The widow seeks work, but luck being against her, she does not secure a position. During her wanderings she is falsely accused of theft by an irascible and insistent old miser, but with the aid of a good-natured sergeant she escapes the indignity of false imprisonment.

Her little daughter, like more little girls, wanders off to see the big Christmas displays in the shop windows. While gazing with hungry and envious eyes upon dolls and houses and toys, she makes the acquaintance of a benevolent woman of wealth. This woman is moved by the child's longing glances, and so buys for her a big French doll.

The plot is complicated by a dull-headed policeman who arrests the child, but it all turns out happily at the widow's humble home on Christmas eve, for Santa Claus is the harbinger of hope and love, besides material gifts.

LUX.

MAKING PIANOS (Dec. 29).—An interesting industrial, describing the complicated processes involved in the manufacture of pianos. The film follows the course of construction from the very beginning, and we do not leave the piano until it is ready for a tune.

CAUGHT BY CINEMATOGRAPHY (Dec. 29).—Whilst a company of actors are playing a drama before the camera of a Cinematograph company, a thief breaks into a farmhouse nearby. He beraks open a cupboard and steals a large sum of money. Hearing footsteps, he makes a hurried exit by means of the window. The following scene, in which one of the trusted servants of the household is suspected and arrested, is cleverly conceived and well carried out. The magistrate dealing with the case, learns of the presence of the camera men at the time of the crime, and asks to be shown the film which they were taking. Upon seeing the film, he observes a figure emerging from the window of the house. Thus the all powerful cinematograph is again instrumental in establishing the innocence of the servant and assisting justice to gain its end.

NATIONAL FILM DISTRIBUTING COMPANY.

Monday, Dec. 25, 1911.

Plantation—"Bill Sharkey's Last Game" (W. Dr.) 1000
Clarendon—"Lieut. Rose Series" (Milit. Dr.).. 1000
Mono—"The Magnetic Squirt" (Com.)..... 840
Hepwix—"Proud Clarissa" (Dr.)..... 525
Hepwix—"A Horse & Mrs. Grundy" (Com.)... 475

Tuesday, Dec. 26, 1911.

Rose—"Gypsy's Warning" (Dr.)..... 1000
D. Biograph—"The Spider" (Dr.)..... 980
Helios—"The Necklace" (Dr.)..... 975

Wednesday, Dec. 27, 1911.

Federal—"Where There's Life There's Hope" (Dr.) 1000
Mondia—"Servant's Devotion" (Dr.)..... 998
Latium—"Anniversary of Mother's Death" (Dr.) 920

Thursday, Dec. 28, 1911.

Washington—"Man That Came to Kill" (Dr.).. 1000
Clarendon—"Didum's Christmas Pudding" (Com.) 955
Hepwix—"A Touch of Nature" (Com.)..... 920
Film d'Art—"Wild Fire" (Dr.)..... 2000

Friday, Dec. 29, 1911.

Mohawk—"Squatter's Daughter" (W. Dr.)... 990
Cricks & Martin—"Scroggins Visits a Palmist" (Com.) 880
Acquila—"Night of Waiting" (Dr.)..... 512
Acquila—"Coming Back" (Dr.)..... 469

Saturday, Dec. 30, 1911.

Oklahoma—"Escaped Convict" (Dr.)..... 916
D. Bioscope—"Grey Toy Hat" (Com.)..... 890
Savoy—"Views of Copenhagen" (Scenic)..... 880

Sunday, Dec. 31, 1911.

California—"Cupid & Cowboy" (W. Dr.)..... 1000
Messter—"Hidden Treasure" (Dr.)..... 1000
Comerio—"Lamp Industry" (Edu.)..... 880

Among the Exhibitors

Goshen, Ind.—The Lyric Motion Picture Theater has been bought from William Evert by Hiram Powell.

Washington, Ia.—J. O. Canfield, proprietor of the Star Theater, has leased the American Theater premises and will conduct his motion picture show therein after November 11.

Newark, N. J.—The Broad Street Theater opened under new management last Monday with a full bill of moving pictures.

Atlantic City, N. J.—The Sea Shell Moving Picture Theater on the Boardwalk has opened.

Norridgewock, Me.—Howard Smiley has purchased a moving picture show here.

Seattle, Wash.—A permit was issued to G. E. Hansen for a moving picture theater to cost $3,200.

Cleveland, Ohio.—Contracts have been let for a moving picture theater at Woodland Avenue and East 31st Street. About $10,000 will be spent in alterations of the building. The seating capacity is to be 500.

Danvers, Mass.—Louis Brown, manager of the old Berry Tavern, has let contracts for a moving picture theater on the hotel land on High Street. It will seat 500 people.

Wheeling, W. Va.—J. B. Cotts has purchased J. W. Gamerdinzer's moving picture theater.

Ladysmith, Wis.—Alterations and improvements are being made in the Elite Theater by T. J. Johnson, the proprietor.

Montezuma, Iowa.—Another motion picture theater will be opened here by J. Phippen.

Tipton, Iowa.—R. E. Kent will open a motion picture theater here.

Washington, Iowa.—A moving picture theater will be opened by Guy & Arnold.

Des Moines, Iowa.—C. F. Mitchell will open a moving picture theater in the Gordon Building.

Cleveland, Ohio.—A moving picture theater to cost $5,000 is to be built by the R. & F. Company.

Asheville, N. C.—The Greenland Moving Picture Theater is now open in the quarters formerly occupied by Burton & Holt.

Chillicothe, Ill.—N. W. McGowan purchased a moving picture theater here formerly belonging to R. E. Lawrence.

Augusta, Me.—E. J. Kellar will operate a moving picture show in Water Street.

Pittsburg, Pa.—The Consolidated Moving Picture Company has bought the Geyer Opera House property, at Scottdale, Pa., the Lyric Theater, at Coraopolis, the Star Family Theater, at Tarentum, and the Arcade Building, at McKeesport. The property will be constructed into a high-class picture house.

Matteawan, N. Y.—The Hippodrome has been leased by George Cohen.

Guthrie Center, Ia.—Parod McLuen will build a moving picture theater here.

Freeport, Iowa.—August Bosson has bought the Bijou Theater here.

Mason City, Ia.—P. E. and H. E. Johannsen will build a motion picture theater in the Majestic Theater.

Clinton, Ia.—The Bright Spot Motion Picture Theater has been opened at 1008 South Fourth Street by E. L. Rowland and Bruce Quick.

Beverly, N. J.—The Beverly Moving Picture Show will hereafter be under the management of Messrs. W. L. Marter and George W. Addis.

Marquette, Mich.—Manager Woodworth, of the Grand Theater, has leased a store in the Vierling Block and will conduct a moving picture theater.

Preston, Iowa.—A new moving picture theater is about to be built here by Milton Stamen.

Ilasco, Mo.—Peter Sirbu is having plans made for a moving picture theater.

St. Joseph, Mo.—A $20,000 moving picture and vaudeville theater is to be built here by the Saxe Amusement Company.

Merrill, Wis.—Another moving picture theater is to be built here by Charles Staehle, proprietor of the Cosmo and Cozy Theaters.

Gibbon, Minn.—Ludcke Bros. have opened their new moving picture theater here.

Portland, Ore.—A motion picture theater is to be opened in the new building being erected at Peninsula Avenue and Lombard Street, by L. McIntosh.

Watertown, Wis.—Paul Bitz and H. Wener, of Milwaukee, have purchased the Majestic Moving Picture Theater here.

Wheeling, W. Va.—The new National Moving Picture Theater will be opened in a short time.

Villisca, Iowa.—J. M. Drury intends building a moving picture theater here.

Rice Lake, Wis.—A moving picture theater will be erected by J. M. Paul.

Ada, Minn.—A motion picture theater and vaudeville show is to be conducted here by Mrs. E. S. Bryant and Thomas Qumme.

Biddeford, Me.—Plans are being made for a motion picture and vaudeville theater for F. X. Cote.

Chicago, Ill.—A motion picture theater costing $1,000 is to be built by Gottschalk & Kusel at 2801 Sheffield Avenue.

Shawnee, Okla.—The Folly Theater has been purchased by H. E. Kyler.

Rock Island, Ill.—A motion picture theater is to be erected here by Geo. Millhouse.

Dayton, Ohio.—The moving picture theater at Third and William Streets has been purchased by James Hamman from the former owners, Messrs. Seely & Brabec.

Detroit, Mich.—A large moving picture theater is to be built here in the near future by Hart Bros.

Rhinelander, Wis.—Messrs. Hanson & Taylor, proprietors of the Grand Opera House and the Bijou Theater, have bought the Majestic Moving Picture Theater.

Minneapolis, Minn.—A one-story brick moving picture theater costing $4,000 will be built by W. M. Koom, at 1347 Nicollet Avenue.

Tarentum, Pa.—The new Star Family Theater, on Corbet Street, which will present motion pictures and vaudeville, has opened under the management of D. O. Robinson, who has purchased a considerable amount of stock in the enterprise.

Washington, D. C.—The Howard Theater, in T Street, has reopened under the management of Andrew Thomas, a colored man. This is said to be the largest theater for colored people in the country.

Allentown, Pa.—The Item Building is being remodeled for a moving picture theater, by Oliver Follweller.

Algona, Iowa.—C. M. Stevens and Roscoe Call will open a moving picture theater in the Call Opera House in a few days.

Bellaire, Iowa.—Work is progressing on the new moving picture theater, built on Belmont Street by the Spragg Amusement Company.

Arctic, R. I.—S. St. Onge has purchased the Gem Theater from George W. Bullock.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The Fairview Amusement Company has purchased a site at Warner and Flora Streets, Fairview Heights, and will build a moving picture theater there with seating capacity of 300.

Kansas City, Mo.—A moving picture theater building is being erected by John Rhode, at 3700 East 27th Street, to cost $5,000.

Richmond, Ind.—Robert Boyle and Howard Aker are now operating a moving picture show here.

Royal Center, Ind.—A moving picture show is to be opened by George Bush.

Marion, Ind.—Miss Orpha Mossman has assumed the management of the Starette Motion Picture Playhouse.

St. Louis, Mo.—The St. Louis Film and Supply Company has been incorporated, with a capital of $2,000.

Utica, N. Y.—The Dreamland Theater, exhibiting motion pictures, has opened at 324 Varick Street. The seating capacity will be 550.

Valdosta, Ga.—The Montgomery Amusement Company, operating shows in Atlanta and Jacksonville, have secured the Lyric Theater quarters and will spend $10,000 in equipping it as a moving picture show.

Trenton, N. J.—James Gill is having the store at 862 East 8th Street remodeled and will open it as a motion picture theater.

Binghamton, N. Y.—The building in Main Street adjoining the Yaeger store is being remodeled and will be opened as a moving picture theater about November 15.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Many improvements have been made in the McCabe Moving Picture Theater, in Marshall Street, which was reopened recently.

Musicians Wanted! "Knack" Reading Music at Sight" booklet, mailed for 10 cents. Celebrated Knack System of Playing Vaudeville and Dramatic Music—Transposing—Faking—Arranging—taught by mail. Particulars Free.
KNACK STUDIO Dept. 4 DANVILLE, ILL.

We Offer 300 more to the Trap Drummers

Get your order in at once. At our special offer price—$10.0.

This high-grade Orchestra Drum, 10 thumb screw rods, transparent drum heads, solid shells, maple, rosewood, walnut.

Size, 3 x 14—3 x 15—4 x 15—4 x 14. This offer for September and October.

E. P. Zeidler Drum Co., Cleveland, O.

MIRROROIDE · SCREENS · & · CURTAINS

THE CROWNING ACHIEVEMENT, IN PERFECT PROJECTION

SOLD UNDER A POSITIVE GUARANTEE

Why experiment with aluminum screens long ago discarded by exhibitors who know. Aluminum screens produce a haze, glare and eye-strain. It cracks, peels, deteriorates, turns black.

MIRROROIDE

Is a scientifically coated canvas drill. A four-ply flexible coating of mercury foil. Of pure silver white brilliancy that will never peel, crack or tarnish. Its brilliancy lasts forever. Haze, glare and eye-strain entirely eradicated.

MIRROROIDE

Will give you more detail, better perspective, brighter and clearer projection at a saving of one-third in your juice bill, besides permit you to keep your theatre brightly illuminated.

LET US SHOW YOU

Samples, endorsements, circulars, etc. Free demonstration samples 50 cents stamps. Mirroroide is the world's best, besides the cheapest.

From Watts & Hullinger
Crystal Theater,
Marshall, Mo., Dec. 14th.

After using your Mirroroide screen thirty days, we wish to say it's a dandy; and we are now showing the best pictures ever shown in this section.

Majestic Theater,
F. L. Kopelberger, owner.
La Crosse, Wis., Dec. 15th.

Your Mirroroide screen [illegible] When the film was [illegible] on the screen I could not [illegible] myself, nor any of us for that matter. It is simply immense.

[illegible]

How the agent with the best screen was shown. Also an endorsement from Porto Rico and elsewhere.

The J. H. Grester Co.
[illegible] N. Y.

To the trade: We manufacture the world's celebrated Mirroroide and Imperial brands of artificial leather. Guaranteed. Recover your worn seats. Special embossed leathers for walls, etc. Any color. Any grades to meet your pocketbook. Free samples on request. Film Exchanges, write us.

REP

RELIANCE

$500.00 REWARD

FOR INFORMATION LEADING TO THE ARREST AND CONVICTION OF ANY PERSON DUPING THE FILMS OF THE MANUFACTURERS WHOSE TRADE MARKS SURROUND THIS NOTICE

WILL BE PAID BY THE

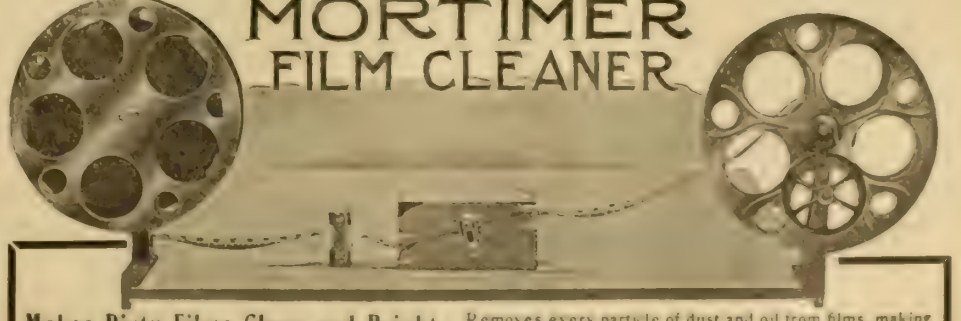
MOTION PICTURE DIST. AND SALES CO.

111 EAST 14th STREET NEW YORK

NESTOR

THE COMET

MORTIMER FILM CLEANER



Makes Dirty Films Clean and Bright. Removes every particle of dust and oil from films, making them show CLEAR AND BRIGHT. No trouble to operator—cleans while film is being re-wound. Used and endorsed by leading exchanges and theatres. SIMPLE, PRACTICAL and positively GUARANTEED NOT TO INJURE THE FILM. Price of machine, $10.00; pads $1.00 per hundred. Send for illustrated booklet and testimonials. Mortimer Film Cleaner Co., 704 Fidelity Bldg., Portland, Me.

INDEPENDENT Release Dates

AMERICAN.

Dec. 4—The Angel of Paradise Ranch (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 7—The Smoke of the Forty-five (Dr.)...1000
Dec. 11—The Man Hunt (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 14—Santa Catalina, Magic Isle of the Pacific (Scenic and Educational)..1000
Dec. 18—The Last Notch (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—The Gold Lust (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 25—The Duel of Candles (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 28—Bonita of El Cajon (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 1—A Midwinter Trip to Los Angeles (Sc.).1000
Jan. 4—The Misadventures of a Claim Agent (Com.-Dr.) .....
Jan. 4—Broncho Busting for "Flying A" Pictures .....

CHAMPION.

Dec. 6—The Indian Fortune Teller (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 11—A Traitor on the Staff (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 13—The Saving of Dan (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 18—The Coward's Flute (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 20—By Decree of Fate (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 25—Bonnie of the Hills (Dr.)..... 950
Dec. 27—The Doctor's Close Call (Dr.)..... 950
Jan. 1—The Blood of the Poor (Dr.)..... 950
Jan. 3—The Kid of Roaring Camp (Dr.)..... 950

COMET.

Dec. 4—Billy's Letters (Com.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Dead Canary (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 11—The Ups and Downs of Rafferty (Com.)
Dec. 15—Just In Time for Dinner (Dr.).....
Dec. 18—A Game of Bridge (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 22—The Man With the Camera (Dr.).... 985
Dec. 25—The Tie That Binds (Com.).....1000
Dec. 29—The Crude Miss Prude (Com.).....1000
Jan. 1—Simple Lives (Dr.).....
Jan. 5—Temperaments (Dr.).....

ECLAIR.

Nov. 30—Gussy's Congratulations (Com.).....
Dec. 5—In Humanity's Cause (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—There Fell a Flower (Com.)..... 660
Dec. 7—Manners and Traditions of Piedmont (Educational) 660
Dec. 12—The Musician's Daughter (Am. Dr.)..
Dec. 14—Her One Day's Dream (Japanese Dr.)
Dec. 19—A Tragic Joke (Am. Dr.).....
Dec. 21—A Heart Bowed Down (Dr.).....
Dec. 26—The Wrong Bottle (Am. Com.-Dr.)....
Dec. 28—The Silent Call (Dr.).....
Dec. 28—Little Willie's Cure for Uncle (Com.)
Jan. 2—Divorcons (Am. Dr.).....
Jan. 4—Old Papers, Old Souvenirs (Dr.).....
Jan. 4—Charley's Holiday (Am. Com.).....

GREAT NORTHERN.

Nov. 18—High Scotland (Scenic) .....
Nov. 25—The Theft of Mona Lisa (Com.).....
Dec. 2—The Penalty of Her Ambition (Dr.)..
Dec. 9—Buttons and Hooks (Com.).....
Dec. 9—Winter In Switzerland (Scenic).....
Dec. 16—His First Monocle (Com.).....
Dec. 16—Greece (Scenic) .....
Dec. 23—The Twins (Com.).....
Dec. 23—From Ostersund to Strolein (Sc.).....
Dec. 30—A Realistic Make-Up (Com.).....
Dec. 30—Sea and Landscapes, Denmark (Sc.).

IMP.

Dec. 11—Why the Check Was Good (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 14—The Little Stocking (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 16—Billy's Seance (Com.)..... 500
Dec. 16—The Bungalow Burglars (Com.)..... 500
Dec. 18—The Girl and the Half-back (Dr.)... 700
Dec. 18—Chinese War Cruiser "Hai-Chi" (Naval) 300
Dec. 21—The Professor (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 23—A Pair of Gloves (Com.)..... 600
Dec. 23—Niagara Falls Celebration (Topical)... 400
Dec. 25—On the Stroke of Three (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 28—The Portrait (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 30—Broke (Com.) 600
Dec. 30—A Lesson to Husbands (Dr.)..... 400
Jan. 1—His New Wife (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Jan. 4—The Trinity (Com.-Dr.)..... 700
Jan. 6—Playing the Game 600
Jan. 6—Back to His Old Home Town..... 400

LUX.

Nov. 24—A Passing Cloud (Dr.)..... 655
Nov. 24—Bill and Bertie's Wedding Day (Com.) 325
Dec. 1—Bill As a Veterinary Surgeon (Com.) 488
Dec. 1—The Making of An Aeroplane (Ind.).. 419
Dec. 8—The Man In the Auto (Dr.)..... 650
Dec. 8—The Adventures of an Amateur Hypnotist. Com.) 350
Dec. 15—Bill and His Chum Tire of Married Life (Com.)..... 521
Dec. 15—Mistaken for the Culprit (Dr.)..... 459
Dec. 22—A Japanese Love Story (Dr.)..... 977
Dec. 29—Making Pianos (Ind.)..... 344
Dec. 29—Caught by Cinematography (Dr.).... 636

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

BISON.

Nov. 21—The Broken Trap (Dr.).....
Nov. 24—White Fawn's Escape (Dr.).....
Nov. 24—A Bad Man (Com.).....
Nov. 28—A Western One-Night Stand (Com-Dr.)
Dec. 1—An Easterner's Peril (Dr.).....
Dec. 5—The Empty Tepee (Indian Dr.).....
Dec. 8—A Range Romance (W. Dr.).....
Dec. 12—Bar Z's New Cook (Com.).....
Dec. 15—The Foreman's Courage (Dr.).....
Dec. 19—Cowgirls' Pranks (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 22—An Indian Martyr (Dr.).....
Dec. 26—The Run on the Bank (Dr.).....
Dec. 29—Getting His Man (Dr.).....

AMBROSIO.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Nov. 29—The Little Duke (Dr.) .....
Nov. 29—Tiny Tom, Apache (Com.).....
Dec. 6—Jorio's Daughter (Dr.).....
Dec 9—Tweedledum Goes Into High Life (Com.) .....
Dec. 9—The Accusing Dog (Com.).....
Dec. 13—The Marquis of Lantenac (Dr.).....
Dec. 13—The Launching of Two Italian Dreadnaughts (Naval).....
Dec. 20—Tweedledum Marries an American Girl (Com.) .....
Dec. 20—The War in Tripoli (War).....
Dec. 27—Tweedledum In Love With a Singer (Com.) .....
Dec. 27—Tiny Tom's Exploits (Com.).....

ITALA.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Nov. 18—Foolshead, a Professor of Innocence (Comedy) .....
Nov. 18—The Life of Bees (Edu.).....
Nov. 25—The Tailor Wants His Pay (Com.)..
Nov. 25—The King of Noose Throwers.....
Dec. 2—Severed from the World (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—An Up-to-Date Doctor (Com.).....
Dec. 23—Foolshead's Christmas (Com.).....
Dec. 16—Fog on Lighton Mountains (Sc.).....
Dec. 30—A New Year's Quest (Com.).....

MAJESTIC.

Dec. 3—Love Heeds Not Showers (Com.)....
Dec. 10—Keeping Mabel Home (Com.).....
Dec. 17—Little Red Riding Hood (Juvenile.)
Dec. 24—The Actress (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 31—The Caddy's Dream (Com.)..... 385
Dec. 31—Will You Marry Me? (Com.)..... 615
Jan. 7—Training a Husband (Com.).....1000

NESTOR.

Dec. 11—Only An Iceman (Com.).....
Dec. 13—The Law of the Range (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—In the Early Days (Com.).....
Dec. 16—Mutt & Jeff Make the Feathers Fly (Com.) .....
Dec. 18—The Love Chase (Com.).....
Dec. 20—The New Ranch Owner (W. Com.)...
Dec. 23—Desperate Desmond Foiled by Claude Eclair (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 25—The Best Man Wins (Com.).....
Dec. 27—A Western Girl's Love (Dr.).....
Dec. 30—Mutt & Jeff Break Into Society (Com.)
Dec. 30—Their Afternoon Off (Com.).....
Jan. 1—An Unlucky Present (Com.).....
Jan. 3—The Tenderfoot's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Jan. 6—Desperate Desmond Fails (Com.-Dr.)...

FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL FILM CO.

Nov. 20—Love and Aviation (Dr.).....
Nov. 20—Zigomar (Dr.).....
Dec. 18—The Love Chase (Com.).....

POWERS.

Nov. 21—Views of Montserrat, Italy (Sc.).....
Nov. 25—Jug o' Rum (Dr.).....
Nov. 28—Too Much Injun (Com.).....
Nov. 28—The Lineman and the Girl.....
Dec. 2—The Wanderer's Return (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—Views of Lake Como (Scenic).....
Dec. 5—The Little Thief (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 5—The Secret Order of Horns (Com.)..
Dec. 9—Two Men and a Girl (Dr.).....
Dec. 12—The Little Chaperone (Com.).....
Dec. 12—Views of Genoa, Italy (Scenic.).....
Dec. 16—When Heart Wires Cross (Com.-Dr.)..
Dec. 19—Cupid's Big Sister (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 19—Touring Brussels (Scenic) .....
Dec. 23—Hearts of Italy (Dr.).....
Dec. 26—The Sign of the Helmet (Com.).....
Dec. 26—Where Steel Meets Cloud (Industrial)
Dec. 30—A Mail Bag Romance (Dr.).....
Jan. 2—Life's Supreme Treasure (Dr.).....
Jan. 6—With the Tide (Dr.).....

RELIANCE.

Nov. 25—A Daughter of Italy (Dr.).....
Nov. 2—A Happy Thanksgiving (Dr.).....
Nov. 29—A Happy Thanksgiving (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—The Poison Cup (Dr.).....
Dec. 6—The Turn of the Wheel (Dr.).....
Dec. 9—The Turnstile (Dr.).....
Dec. 13—Love and Charity (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—The Playwright (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—Just Smile (Com.).....
Dec. 20—Locked in the Vaults (Dr.).....
Dec. 23—The Doctor's Dilemma (Dr.).....
Dec. 23—A Pair of Shoes (Com.).....
Dec. 27—Brotherly Love (Dr.).....
Dec. 30—The Birth-Mark (Dr.).....
Jan. 3—Resignation (Dr.).....

REPUBLIC.

Dec. 5—The Savannah Auto Races (Topical)..
Dec. 24—Before Yorktown (Hist.-Dr.).....
Dec. 31—The Pride of Lexington (Hist-Dr.)..

REX.

Oct. 12—Chasing a Rainbow (Dr.).....
Oct. 19—Her Sister (Dr.).....
Oct. 26—A Breach of Faith (Dr.).....
Nov. 2—The Tale of a Cat (Dr.).....
Nov. 9—Saints and Sinners (Dr.).....
Nov. 16—The Return (Dr.).....
Nov. 23—The Price (Dr.).....
Nov. 30—The Strangers (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—The Measure of a Man (Dr.).....
Dec. 14—Logging Industry in the Northwest (Ind.) .....
Dec. 21—The Martyr (Dr.).....
Dec. 28—An Unwelcome Santa Claus (Com.)..

SOLAX.

Dec. 1—A Revolutionary Romance (Mil.-Dr.)..
Dec. 6—Baby's Choice (Com.).....
Dec. 6—The Paper Making Industry (Ind.)..
Dec. 8—The Little Shoe (Dr.).....
Dec. 13—Fickle Bridget (Com.).....
Dec. 15—The Little Kiddie Mine (Dr.).....
Dec. 20—Love, Whiskers and Letters (Com.)..
Dec. 22—The Violin Maker of Nuremberg (Dr.)
Dec. 24—Christmas Presents (Dr.).....
Dec. 27—When Mary Was Little (Com.).....
Dec. 29—The Divided Ring (Dr.).....
Dec. 31—Christmas Presents (Dr.).....
Jan. 3—His Musical Soul (Com.).....
Jan. 5—Our Poor Relations (Dr.).....

THANHOUSER.

Nov. 17—A Mother's Faith (Dr.).....
Nov. 21—A Master of Millions.....
Nov. 24—The Baseball Bug (Com.-Dr.).....
Nov. 28—The Tempest (Dr.).....
Dec. 1—Beneath the Veil (Dr.).....
Dec. 5—The Newsy and the Tramp (Com.-Dr.)
Dec. 8—Brother Bob's Baby (Com.).....
Dec. 12—The Lady from the Sea (Dr.).....
Dec. 15—Deacon Debbs (Com.).....
Dec. 19—The Tomboy (Com. Dr.).....
Dec. 22—Cinderella (Juvenile) .....
Dec. 26—She (2 reels) (Dr.).....
Dec. 29—The Expert's Report (Dr.).....
Jan. 2—The Passing (Dr.).....
Jan. 5—A Columbus Day Conspiracy (Dr.).....

YANKEE.

Nov. 3—At Daisy Farm (Dr.).....
Nov. 6—A Coward's Regeneration (Dr.).....
Nov. 10—He Didn't Like the Tune (Com.)...
Nov. 13—Into the Light (Dr.).....
Nov. 17—The Two Rooms (Dr.).....

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000 - -	$1.25	20,000 - -	$4.60	50,000 - -	$7.50
10,000 -	$2.50	25,000 - -	$5.50	100,000 - -	$10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

THE MAJESTIC

Announces Two Releases A Week!

SUNDAY, JAN. 7th
"Training A Husband"

A high-class comedy. The husband complains of his wife's and mother's cooking—gets his stenographer to cook a meal, then claims he cooked it himself—gets caught in the act—wife and mother then cook a meal and make him eat it to his sorrow.

ASK YOUR EXCHANGE FOR THIS REEL

FRIDAY, JAN. 12th
"Gossip"

A DOUBLE EXPOSURE COMEDY FILM, showing interior and exterior scenes at once on the screen. A story of an innocent escapade grown to large proportions as told by one to another, and so on, until it reaches the sweetheart —then the trouble begins.

ASK YOUR EXCHANGE FOR THIS REEL

REGULAR SUNDAY AND FRIDAY RELEASES THEREAFTER

TO THE EXHIBITORS!

¶ Majestic Pictures are at least the equal of any in the Independent market.
¶ With each new picture you will see entirely new stage settings.
¶ The finished product is the result of a carefully selected scenario with a new and novel plot, capably portrayed, and—perfect photography.
¶ If your exchange will not supply you with our pictures, you are being deprived of one of the best available, and you are entitled to the best for your money. ALL YOU HAVE TO DO IS TO DEMAND THEM and you will get them.

CAUSE———and———EFFECT

MAJESTIC RELEASES.

Sunday, Nov. 26—The Courting of Mary (Com.).
Sunday, Dec. 3—Love Heeds Not Showers (Com.).
Sunday, Dec. 10—Keeping Mabel Home (Com.).
Sunday, Dec. 17—Little Red Riding Hood (Juvenile).
Sunday, Dec. 24—The Actress (Dr.).
Sunday, Dec. 31—The Caddy's Dream (Com.).
Sunday, Dec. 31—Will You Marry Me? (Com.).
Sunday, Jan. 7—Training a Husband (Com.).
Friday, Jan. 12—"Gossip," Double Exposure Comedy film.

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD SAYS:

"Sheer merit compels us to again notice the product of The Majestic Motion Picture Co."

"If Independent Exhibitors are looking for good comedy, they will find it in the releases of the Majestic Company."

TO THE EXCHANGES!

¶ If you will take the time to display our pictures on your screen, you will see why we respectfully solicit your standing order on both the Sunday and Friday releases.

PLEASE WIRE YOUR ORDERS TO THE SALES CO.

The Majestic Motion Picture Co.

145 W. 45th ST. NEW YORK CITY

Sold through the Sales Co.

LICENSED Release Dates

BIOGRAPH.

Nov. 27—Sunshine Through the Dark (Dr.).....
Nov. 30—A Woman Scorned (Dr.).....
Dec. 4—Why He Gave Up (Com.).....
Dec. 4—Abe Gets Even With Father (Com.)..
Dec. 7—The Failure (Dr.).....
Dec. 11—Saved from Himself (Dr.)..... 999
Dec. 14—Taking His Medicine (Com.)..... 673
Dec. 14—Her Pet (Com.)..... 323
Dec. 18—As In a Looking Glass (Dr.).....
Dec. 21—A Terrible Discovery (Dr.).....
Dec. 25—Caught With the Goods (Com.).....
Dec. 25—A Mix-up in Rain Coats (Com.)....
Dec. 28—The Voice of the Child (Dr.).....
Jan. 1—The Baby and the Stork (Dr.).....
Jan. 4—Who Got the Reward (Com.).....
Jan. 4—The Joke on the Joker (Com.).....

EDISON.

Nov. 29—The Troubles of A. Butler (Com.)..1000
Dec. 1—Pull for the Shore, Sailor (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 2—A Man for All That (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Awakening of John Bond (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 6—John Brown's Heir (Com.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Heart of Nichette (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 9—The Daisy Cowboys (Com.)..... 990
Dec. 12—Buckskin Jack, the Earl of Glenmore (Com.-Dr.) 1000
Dec. 13—An International Heart Breaker (Com.) 700
Dec. 13—Eskimos In Labrador (Edu.)..... 800
Dec. 15—Brockton Fair & Horse Show, Brockton, Mass., Oct. 3rd to 6th, 1911 (Topical) 990
Dec. 16—Stage Struck Lizzie (Com.)..... 650
Dec. 16—A Trip from Colorado Springs to Cripple Creek (Scenic)..... 350
Dec. 19—Santa Claus and the Clubman (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 20—The Sign of the Three Labels (Com.).1000
Dec. 22—How Sir Andrew Lost His Vote (Com.)1000
Dec. 23—Pat Clancy's Adventure (Com.).....1000
Dec. 26—Papa's Sweetheart (Dr.)..... 625
Dec. 26—Modern Weapons for Fighting Fire New York City (Vocational)..... 375
Dec. 27—The Stuff that Dreams are Made of (Com.) 1000
Dec. 29—A Romance of the Cliff Dwellers (Dr.).1000
Dec. 30—Uncle Hiram's List (Com.).....1000
Jan. 2—Eleanore Cuyler (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 3—The Two Flats (Com.)..... 995
Jan. 5—Freezing Auntie (Com.)..... 660
Jan. 5—Codfish Industry, Newfoundland (Ind.) 340
Jan. 6—Please Remit (Com.)..... 995

ESSANAY.

Nov. 30—'Twas Ever Thus (Comedy).....1000
Dec. 1—The Quinceville Raffle (Com.)..... 750
Dec. 1—The Girl In the Taxi (Com.)..... 300
Dec. 2—The Mountain Law (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Madman (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 7—The Long Strike (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—Getting Even With Emily (Com.).....
Dec. 8—Stray Bullets (Com.).....1000
Dec. 9—A Frontier Doctor (W. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 12—The First Man (Com.).....1000
Dec. 14—The Hack & Schmidt Bout (Com.).....
Dec. 14—A Polished Burglar (Com.).....1000
Dec. 15—A Goodfellow's Christmas Eve (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 16—The Cowboy Coward (W. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 19—The Three Bears (Juvenile).....1000
Dec. 21—Winning An Heiress (Com. Dr.)..... 300
Dec. 21—The Foiling of Red Dugan (Dr.)..... 700
Dec. 22—The Millionaire Barber (Com.).....1000
Dec. 23—Broncho Billy's Christmas Dinner (Dr.)1000
Dec. 26—A Story of the West (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 28—For Memory's Sake (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 29—A Bird In the Hand (Com.).....1000
Dec. 30—Broncho Billy's Adventure (W. Dr.)..1000
Jan. 2—The Mail-Order Wife (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 4—The Valley of Regrets (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 5—For the Love of Mike (Com.).....1000
Jan. 6—A Child of the West (Dr.).....1000

GAUMONT.

Nov. 25—The Escape from the Dungeon (Dr.).. 825
Nov. 25—Cave Homes on the Canary Isles (Sc.) 180
Nov. 28—A Busy Cupid (Com.)..... 758
Nov. 28—Review of the Austrian Army (Sc.). 232
Dec. 2—The Promoter (Dr.).....1140
Dec. 5—Jimmie Tricks the Landlady (Com.).. 475
Dec. 5—The Challenge (Dr.)..... 525
Dec. 9—Camoens, the Portuguese Shakespeare, Lisbon, 1578 (Hist. Dr.)..... 610
Dec. 9—Important Scenes in Paris, France (Sc.) 320
Dec. 12—Heroism (Dr.) 610
Dec. 12—Arabian Customs (Ind.)..... 366
Dec. 16—A Queen's Treachery, or the Betrayal of Charles VI of France (Hist. Dr.)1000
Dec. 19—Through the Enemy's Lines (War Dr.) 985
Dec. 22—The Maid of Argos (Dr.)..... 980
Dec. 26—From Pity to Love (Dr.)..... 826
Dec. 26—Scenes of the Coast of North Africa (Sc.) 124
Dec. 30—Curing a Reckless Student (Dr.)....1010
Jan. 2—A Royal Romance (Dr.)..... 975
Jan. 6—Evils of Impure Literature (Dr.).....1035

KALEM.

Nov. 29—Among the Irish Fisher Folk (Edu.).
Nov. 29—The Franciscan Friars of Killarney, Ireland (Top.) .....
Dec. 1—How Betty Captured the Outlaw (Comedy) .....
Dec. 1—A Glimpse Into the Yellowstone National Park (Scenic).....
Dec. 4—Arrah-Na-Pogue (3 reels) (Dr.).....3000
Dec. 6—The Long Arm of the Law (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—Too Much Realism (Com.).....1000
Dec. 11—Molly Pitcher (Historical-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 13—Norma From Norway (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 15—Bill's Flute (W. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 18—He Who Laughs Last (Com.).....1000
Dec. 20—The Flash In the Night (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 22—Between Father and Son (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 25—The "Revenue" and the Girl (Dr.)...1000
Dec. 27—The Higher Toll (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 29—The Maid's Double (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 1—Driving Home the Cows (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 3—The Cowboy Artist's Jonah Day (W. Com.) 1000
Jan. 5—The Dude Cowboy (Com.).....
Jan. 5—The O'Kalems' Visit to Killarney (Sc.)

LUBIN.

Nov. 29—The Crab Industry (Ind.)..... 400
Nov. 30—A Nicotine Conspiracy (Com.).....1000
Dec. 2—Western Chivalry (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 4—A Head for Business (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 6—Sins of the Father (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 7—Love's Labor Lost (Com.).....1000
Dec. 9—The Teamster (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 11—A Girlish Impulse (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 13—Mr. and Mrs. Suspicious (Com.)..... 400
Dec. 13—Quick! A Plumber (Com.)..... 600
Dec. 14—The Substitute (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 16—A Timely Lesson (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 18—Love Decides (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 20—Art versus Music (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—Kiddies' Christmas (2 reels—Xmas Dr.) 1800
Dec. 23—The Sergeant White's Peril (Military Dr.) 1000
Dec. 25—One Way to Win (Com.).....1000
Dec. 27—The American Girl (Com.-Dr.).....
Dec. 28—The Soldier's Return (Dr.).....
Dec. 30—Father and the Girls (Dr.).....
Jan. 1—The Oyster Industry (Ind.).....
Jan. 1—Object, Matrimony (Com.).....
Jan. 3—A Village Romance (Com. Dr.).....1000
Jan. 4—A Noble Enemy (Dr.).....1000

MELIES.

Nov. 16—The Miser Miner (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Nov. 23—An Oil Country Romance (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—The Reason Why (Com.).....1000
Dec. 7—A Western Girl (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 14—The Better Man (Com.-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—The Mission Father (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 28—The Ranchman's Debt of Honor (Com. Dr.) 1000
Jan. 4—A Woman's Gratitude (Dr.).....1000
Jan. 11—Roped In (Dr.).....1050

ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

Nov. 22—Guy Fawkes or the Gunpowder Plot (Dr.) 1010
Nov. 29—The Mysterious Stranger (Dr.)..... 610
Nov. 29—Salt Industry in Sicily (Ind.)..... 372
Dec. 6—The Luckless Banker (Dr.).....1002
Dec. 13—The Tragedy of Old Age (Dr.)..... 798
Dec. 13—Harbor of Marseilles, France (Sc.)... 215
Dec. 20—The Miracle (Dr.) 1040
Dec. 27—The Stolen Treasure (Dr.)..... 680
Dec. 27—Fair Exchange is no Robbery (Com.).. 322
Jan. 3—True to Their Trust (Dr.)..... 656
Jan. 3—A Cotton Goods Factory in France (Ind.) 325

PATHE.

Nov. 25—The Lost Necklace (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 27—Pathe's Weekly No. 48 (Topical)....1000
Nov. 29—Incendiary Indians (Dr.)..... 745
Nov. 29—Glimpses of San Francisco (Scenic).. 250
Nov. 30—Oh! What a Thanksgiving Day (Com.) 775
Dec. 2—Bear Hunt Romance (Dr.)..... 980
Dec. 4—Pathe's Weekly No. 49 (Topical)....1000
Dec. 6—Hobo Luck (Am. Com.).....
Dec. 7—The Poisoned Arrow (Am. Dr.).....
Dec. 9—Her Little Slipper (Am. Dr.).....
Dec. 11—Pathe's Weekly No. 50 (Topical)...1000
Dec. 13—The Flower Girl of Los Palmas (Am. Dr.) 990
Dec. 14—An Episode of the Early Mormon Days (Am. Dr.) 820
Dec. 14—The Magic Suit Case (Trick)..... 150
Dec. 16—A Mother's Remorse (Am. Dr.)..... 995
Dec. 18—Pathe's Weekly No. 51 (Top.).....1000
Dec. 20—The Fatal Posing (Am. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—Dad's Smash-Up (Am. Com.).....1000
Dec. 23—Actors' Hearts (Am. Dr.).....1000
Dec. 25—Pathe's Weekly No. 52 (Topical).....1000
Dec. 27—The Mother-in-Law Raises (Com.)....1000
Dec. 28—His Daughter's Bracelet (Am. Dr.)..
Dec. 29—Yann, the Troubadour (Dr.).....
Dec. 30—The Doll (Am. Dr.).....
Jan. 1—Pathe's Weekly No. 53 (Topical).....1000
Jan. 3—The Professor's Daughters (Com.-Dr.).1000
Jan. 4—The Rebuked Indian (Indian Dr.)....1000
Jan. 6—The Cowboy's Sister (W. Dr.).....
Jan. 6—The Chillouks (Edu.) .....

C. G. P. C.

Nov. 28—Picturesque Hungary (Scenic)..... 290
Nov. 30—A Life-Saving School in Australia (Educational) 220
Dec. 1—Rover is Jealous (Com.)..... 560
Dec. 1—Capturing Polar Bear Cubs (Adv.).. 290
Dec. 1—Examination of the Stomach by X Rays (Educational) 150
Dec. 5—The Secret of the Confessional (Dr.)..
Dec. 6—Fishing in the Ceram Islands (Sc.)..
Dec. 7—French Cuirassier Maneuvers (Military)
Dec. 8—Eva's Faithful Furniture (Com.)....
Dec. 8—Gathering and Preparing Cocoanuts in the Philippine Islands (Ind.).....
Dec. 12—Youth versus Age (Dr.)..... 795
Dec. 12—Small Trades in Malacca (Edu.).... 200
Dec. 15—In the Grip of Alcohol (2 reels) (Dr.).2000
Dec. 19—Princess Charming (Juvenile).....
Dec. 19—Landscapes in Japan (Scenic).....
Dec. 22—Providential Bread (Dr.).....
Dec. 22—In Japan—Nara (Scenic).....
Dec. 26—The Burglar's Hard Luck (Com.).....
Dec. 26—Aboard a French Battleship (Naval)..
Dec. 26—The Kromats (Acrobatic).....
Dec. 28—Mushroom Culture (Educational).....
Jan. 2—Infancy of Moses (Biblical).....
Jan. 2—The Ice Formations at Odessa, Russia (Sc.) .....
Jan. 5—Betrayed by a Parasol (Com.).....
Jan. 5—Dr. Twostep's Prescription (Trick)....
Jan. 5—A Malay Village During the Rainy Season (Sc.) .....

SELIG.

Dec. 1—In Japan (Scenic)..... 500
Dec. 1—Seeing Cincinnati (Scenic)..... 500
Dec. 4—A Diamond in the Rough (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—A Frontier Girl's Courage (Dr.)....1000
Dec. 7—The Maid at the Helm (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—The Plumber (Com.)..... 600
Dec. 8—A Day With a Circus (Novelty)..... 400
Dec. 11—The Chief's Daughter (Dr.)..... 500
Dec. 11—April Fool (Com.)..... 500
Dec. 12—A Romance of the Rio Grande (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 14—George Warrington's Escape (Hist.-Dr.) 1000
Dec. 15—Industries of the South and West (Edu.) 1000
Dec. 18—Evangeline (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 19—For His Pal's Sake (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 21—Brown of Harvard (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 22—The Little Widow (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 25—A Modern Rip (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 26—The Bully of Bingo Gulch (Com.-Dr.)..1000
Dec. 28—Paid Back (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 29—Their Last Chance (Com.).....1000
Jan. 1—Cinderella (3 reels—Juvenile).....3000
Jan. 2—The Cowboy's Adopted Child (Dr.)...1000
Jan. 2—He, She and It (Com.)..... 150
Jan. 4—The Mate of the Alden Besse (Dr.)..1000
Jan. 5—The Other Fellow (Com.)..... 500
Jan. 5—Hutchinson, Kansas, Semi-Centennial Celebration (Topical) 500

VITAGRAPH.

Nov. 28—The Fresbet (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 29—The Voiceless Message (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 1—The Last Cent (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 2—The Husking Bee (Comedy).....1000
Dec. 4—Saving the Special (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Hypnotist (Com.).....1000
Dec. 5—A Slight Mistake (Com.).....1000
Dec. 6—The Black Chasm (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 8—War (Historical-Dr.).....1000
Dec. 9—His Wife's Secret (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 11—One Touch of Nature (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 12—The Military Air Scout (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 13—The Ventriloquist's Trunk (Com.)....1000
Dec. 15—Love at Gloucester Port (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 16—The Sick Man from the East (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 18—Vitagraph Monthly of Current Events (Topical) 1000
Dec. 19—Vanity Fair (3 reels—Dr.).....3000
Dec. 20—Fires of Driftwood (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 22—A Reformed Santa Claus (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 23—The Old Doll (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 25—Some Good in All (X-Mas Dr.).....1000
Dec. 26—The Younger Brother (Military Dr.)..1000
Dec. 27—Testing His Courage (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 29—A Doubly Desired Orphan (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 30—In the Clutches of a Vapor Bath (Com.) 1000
Jan. 1—A Romance of Wall Street (Dr.).....
Jan. 2—A Red Cross Martyr (Dr.).....
Jan. 3—The Heart of the King's Jester (Dr.)...
Jan. 5—Destiny Is Changeless (Dr.).....
Jan. 6—The Path of True Love (Dr.).....

Among the Exhibitors

Pierre City, Mo.—Ray and George Mullen have purchased the Star Moving Picture Theater, from Vernon Wright.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The American Moving Picture Theater will soon be opened at 14-16 East Lake Street.

Morton, Kan.—A motion picture theater will be opened here by Will Parrott.

Rockford, Ill.—A moving picture theater will be built here by George B. Peck.

A Merry Xmas

to all the Exhibitors of the United States, and our sincerest thanks for the interest you have taken in our proposition.

Many of you we know; many more we would like to know, as we would like to tell you of the many exhibitors who are making a great success by featuring our Musical Novelty Instruments.

You all know of our famous

Musical Electrical Bells

They are the peerless attraction for the Moving Picture Theatre, and are used by a thousand or more exhibitors from coast to coast.

We make these bells in various sizes, from

$40.00 up

The most popular set of bells we are now making is the

No. 310 Outfit

25 Bells, 2 Octaves, Chromatic C to C

Complete with resonators, keyboard and all electrical apparatus.

Price of this Outfit is $75.00

Will be shipped to you for examination and trial on receipt of $5.00 to guarantee express charges.

Every set of Bells guaranteed one year.

Our

Aluminum Chimes

Are sweet and mellow in tone, like a pipe organ, but they cost less than one-tenth of the cost of this instrument. We make these chimes from

$40.00 up

Our Set No. 21, which consists of 25 Chimes, two Octaves, Chromatic C to C, is the most popular set we manufacture, and the price of same is

$125.00

We manufacture a great number of other instruments which are suitable for picture theaters. Write for circulars and descriptive matter.

J. C. DEAGAN

3800 N. Clark St. Chicago, Ill.

HEADQUARTERS FOR ASBESTOS
Curtains and Picture Booths
SEND FOR BOOKLET
C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
39 Pearl St., BOSTON

McKENNA

BRASS RAILINGS
EASELS
GRILLES
CUSPIDORS
BRASS
KICK PLATES
STAIR TREADS, DOOR SILLS

McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH, PA.

$285.00
IN CASH PRIZES
FOR SCENARIOS

The "Imp" Company wants the best 500-foot comedy scenarios it can buy for its third release. To stimulate the interest of the best writers we offer special prizes for the four best comedies received at the "Imp" office before the first of the year. Names of winners will be used on title of prize films as well as advertised in the papers. Address scenarios to Carl Laemmle, "Personal," care of "Imp" Company, 102 West 101st St., New York City.

1st Prize, $100.00
2nd Prize, 75.00
3rd Prize, 60.00
4th Prize, 50.00

The "Imp" Company will unhesitatingly pay the highest prices for all other scenarios submitted during this contest and found available by Mr. Laemmle. We want to be known as the company that makes the best comedy films on earth—and we are willing to pay for it! Lets have the best you've got—and quickly!

The "Imp" Company
102 W. 101st St., New York, N.Y.
Carl Laemmle, President

EXHIBITORS OF Massachusetts

ATTENTION!

Write or wire at once for early bookings on the greatest feature film in the world,

"The Crusaders"
Or Jerusalem Delivered
(Four Reels)

I have bought the State rights for the New England States from the World's Best Film Co., and have given it the most severe possible test and can recommend it as the BIGGEST DRAWING CARD AND QUICKEST MONEY MAKER EVER SHOWN IN ANY THEATRE!

Big supply of beautiful one-sheet, two-sheet, three-sheet and eight-sheet posters, circulars, dodgers, banners and all other ad matter

Don't Forget! Do It Now! Be An Early Bird!

JOS. SPERO
320 Fuller Building Springfield, Mass.

In answering advertisements kindly mention the Moving Picture World

A Good Chistmas for Your Operator

A MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK
Price $1.50 Postage Paid

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 EAST 23rd STREET :: :: NEW YORK CITY

WURLITZER

World's Largest Mfrs. Established 1856

Wurlitzer PianOrchestra in Oriental Theatre, San Francisco.

Write for 32-page booklet, showing

Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments

in the leading picture theatres of the country.

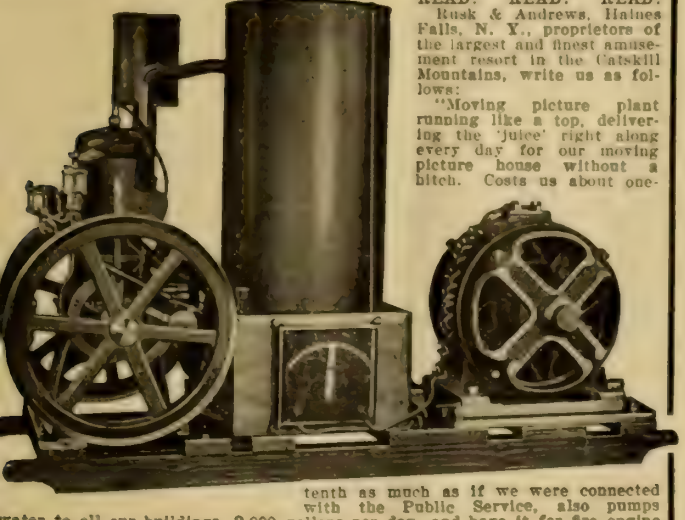
The Wurlitzer Instruments furnish better music than musicians and reduce expenses. 50 different styles; time payments; big catalog free. If you can't call, write to our nearest branch.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company

CINCINNATI 117-121 E. 4th — NEW YORK 25-27 W. 32d — CHICAGO 329-331 S. Wabash — PHILADELPHIA 1835 Chestnut

ST. LOUIS 912 Pine — CLEVELAND 800 Huron Road — BUFFALO 701 Main — LOUISVILLE 426 W. Green — COLUMBUS, O. 57 E. Main

The Biggest Sensation Yet is the $250.00 Detroit Moving Picture Electric Light Plant



READ! READ! READ! Rusk & Andrews, Haines Falls, N. Y., proprietors of the largest and finest amusement resort in the Catskill Mountains, write us as follows:

"Moving picture plant running like a top, delivering the 'juice' right along every day for our moving picture house without a hitch. Costs us about one-tenth as much as if we were connected with the Public Service, also pumps water to all our buildings, 2,000 gallons per day, and have it for fire engine in case of fire."

Used and highly endorsed by the U. S. Army.

Many write us that the total cost of light for running their show for a week is less than one dollar. Think of it.

Gives you better light than you can buy. Gives you the same light in the afternoon as at night. Can be operated by a boy ten years old.

Larger sized plants at proportionately low prices. THE SALVATION OF THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS. Write for Bulletin No. 101. You will find it the most intensely interesting little book you ever read if you are interested in moving pictures.

IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT. Wire your order and let your remittance follow by mail.

DETROIT ENGINE WORKS, Dept. No. 102, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A. Sole manufacturers of the best and only real moving picture electric light plant in the world.

WE WILL PAY YOUR FARE TO DETROIT to see this wonderful plant in operation if there does not happen to be one of them at work in your immediate vicinity, the fare to be deducted from the purchase price. Write for full information regarding this liberal offer.

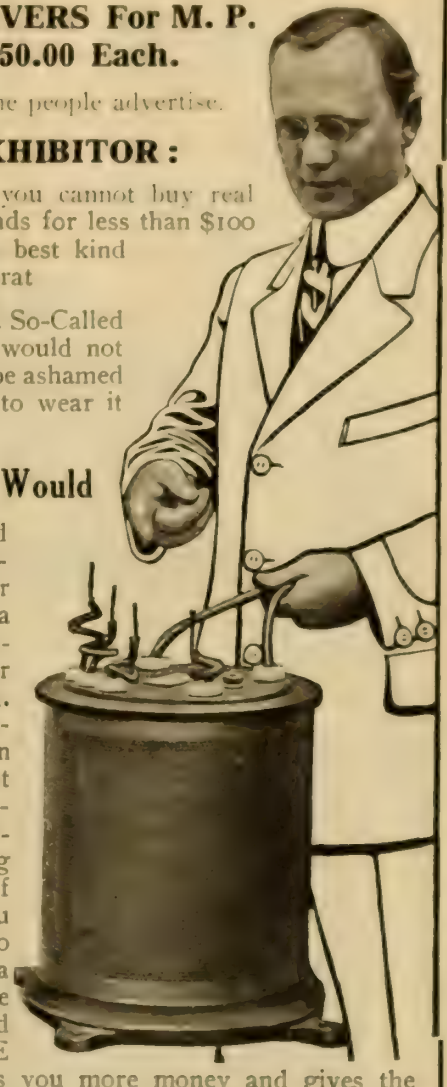
DIAMONDS !!!

¾ KARAT $29.00

That is what I just saw in an Advertisement in a New York Daily paper.

CURRENT SAVERS For M. P. Lamps, $50.00 Each.

That is what some people advertise.



NOW, Mr. EXHIBITOR:

You know that you cannot buy real and perfect Diamonds for less than $100 per karat, and the best kind sell for $200 per karat

The $29 may be a So-Called Diamond, but you would not buy it. You would be ashamed to give it away or to wear it yourself.

You Know You Would

Now, why should you let the unscrupulous M. P. Dealer offer and sell you a SO-CALLED CURRENT SAVER for $50? It isn't real. It is a cheap imitation. It may save on the electric bill, but if you saw a HALLBERG ECONOMIZER operating alongside of one of the $50 kind, you would be ashamed to exhibit such a DULL picture as the $50 kind gives; and besides, THE HALLBERG saves you more money and gives the brightest pictures. IT IS WONDERFUL. WRITE ME TO-DAY. GET WISE, and improve your pictures. You can put your competitors in the shade.

I make allowance on your old Saver in trade for a HALLBERG.

GUARANTEED TO SAVE

On 100 to 125 Volts A.C., 60 to 70%.
On 200 to 250 Volts A.C., 75 to 85%.
On 100 to 125 Volts D.C., 50%.
On 200 to 250 Volts D.C., 70%.
And To Improve Your Light 50% Over Use On Rheostat.

Over 2000 in use for A. C. as well as D. C. and my G. E. Mercury Arc Rectifier is the thing for those who want D. C. at the arc on A. C. circuits

J. H. HALLBERG

36 East 23rd Street - - NEW YORK

"We recommend to the chemical men in the Moving Picture trade who are having difficulty in securing good negative films, the following formula for tank development:

Distilled Water	60 gals.
Sodium Sulphite Anhyd	½ lb
Sodium Carbonate "	2 lbs.
Agfa Glycin	½ lb.

Time 20 mins., temperature 70°. Thoroughly wash the film after development before placing in the fixing bath.

The above formula will be found to give very brilliant negatives, and will entirely overcome any danger of fog." Yours very truly,

Berlin Aniline Works, 213-215 Water St., N. Y. City

LAST 25 to 40% LONGER THAN THE ORDINARY SORT

FOR . . . BETTER MOTION PICTURE PROJECTIONS USE THE . . . BIO

BIO RECOGNIZED BIO CARBONS BRAND STANDARD MIL CARBONS

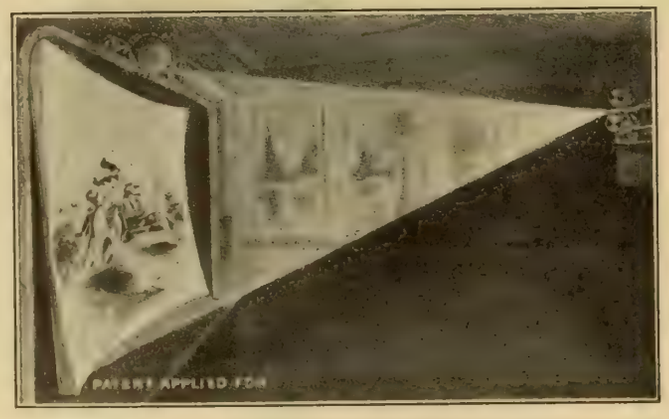
BIO

THERE IS ONLY ONE "BIO" --- TAKE NO SUBSTITUTES

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO. AND ALL LIVE FILM EXCHANGES

New York: 165 Greenwich St. Milwaukee: 114 Huron St. San Francisco: 19 Sutter St.

GIVE ⅓ MORE LIGHT THAN ANY OTHER ON SAME CURRENT



You spend all kinds of money on the appearance of your stage to secure

INDIVIDUALITY

You secure it without extra cost when you buy our

"Perfection Concave Screen"

Each screen being made to order, allows of an Endless Variety of mountings. We have one of the Most Proficient Artists and Sculptors in the west, who has charged of that portion of our establishment, which enables us to follow out Any Idea You May Submit for side columns, or top or corner ornaments.

Do not judge our productions by above cut, as it was necessary to detach screen from mounting to illustrate the concavity.

Send us size and description of your stage with size of picture projected, and we will submit a sketch suggesting style of ornamentation. All mountings made of Metal or Plastic Relief.

No two screens with like mountings sent to the same town.

Write for booklet and prices.

INVENTORS SPECIALTY MFG. CO., 401 Ashland Block, CHICAGO, ILL.

REMEMBER

We have the Best Commercial Independent Film Service in the World. Our Film List Tells the Story. Film Renters to His Majesty the Wise Exhibitor

National Film Brokers
186 N. La SALLE ST., CHICAGO

H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wis.

THE TOURNAMENT FILM CO.
TOLEDO, OHIO.
Owners of the following feature films:
1911 Cheyenne Cowboy and Indian Frontier Celebration.
Fall Round-Up on the Y-6 Ranch.
State Rights for These Films for Sale.
Bookings Can Be Made by Writing Us.

15,000
Managers and Operators Wanted
on our new mailing lists catalogue.
Now ready.
LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS
2940 Herndon Street - CHICAGO

If you are in the Market for
SECOND HAND FILMS
Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the United States
International Film Traders
Incorporated
5 West 14th St., New York City

FOR SALE
Wolgast-Moran Fight, three reels, $150. Johnson-Ketchell Fight, three reels, $100; condition first class; also Italy-Turkey War, one reel, new, only used three days, including fifty lithographs, $75. The Great Bull Fight in Mexico City, about 500 ft., new, $40., lithographs, one and six sheets, 8c a sheet. Apply
W. MORRIS
5 W. 104th ST. NEW YORK

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
Stereopticons, Slides, Accessories

CHAS. M. STEBBINS
1028 Main St.
KANSAS CITY, MO
Large Line of Edison Goods
Established 1899

FREE
To Operators and Managers (15c to anyone else) 100 Pointers on Machine Repairing and Adjusting and how to get and keep a Steady, Clear, Sharp and Flickerless Picture.
50% to 75% Saved on your repair bill by using Lavezzi Improved Hardened Repairs.
Write for Testimonials and Catalogue
Lavezzi Machine Works., 2940 Herndon St., Chicago

INDEPENDENT
SERVICE FROM THE
Swaab Film Service Co.
is an improvement over your present service. Try it and be convinced.
Motiograph and Power Machines always on hand, and General Supplies.
129 NORTH EIGHTH STREET
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

"Mr. Moving Picture Operator"
You surely value your own life as well as the lives of men, women and children who visit your show. Be on the safe side. Get a copy of the New Edition of

Modern Electrical Construction
By Henry C. Horstmann and Victor H. Tousley

A perfect guide for the beginning electrician, giving him all the theory needed in practical work in addition to full practical instructions. For the journeyman electrician it is no less valuable, because it elaborates and explains safety rules in vogue throughout the United States.

The National Electric Code, or Chicago rules governing electrical construction in all its phases, are given in full, and will be found to be an indispensable guide for the moving picture operator and also for the electrical worker. Numerous illustrations are interspersed throughout this section, showing correct methods of wiring and electric contruction.

New Revised and Enlarged Edition 16mo, 358 Pages, 173 Diagrams, Pocket Size, Full Leather Limp, Price . . $1.50

Sent postpaid to any address upon receipt of price. Your money back if you are not satisfied.

CATALOGUE FREE UPON REQUEST

FREDERICK J. DRAKE & CO., Publishers
1325 S. Michigan Avenue Chicago, Ill.

Wanted Wanted Wanted
Films---Films

I will pay spot cash for new or second-hand films, for any quantity. If you have one film or one thousand films, or more, and you don't know how to get rid of them, here is your opportunity. I am open to buy 10,000 films, trust or independent, new or second-hand, for export (not to an English-speaking country). Exchanges, do you want to get rid of your surplus stock of films? Act quick, as I will not buy two films of the same subject. Western pictures preferred. Manufacturers, Trust or Independent, send your bargain lists in; will take all you have, if price is right. I know the film game from A to Z, so don't ask $10 for a film if it's only worth $2. All business strictly confidential.

APPLY
HYWINK
3 W. 104th St. New York City

American Moving Picture Machine Co.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE

STANDARD

Automatic Moving Picture Machine

101-102 Beekman Street New York

ILG ELECTRIC VENTILATING COMPANY

Manufacturers of Ventilating Apparatus and Experts in Theatre Ventilation

160 Whiting Street :: Chicago

ANTI-TRUST FILM CO.
28
W. LAKE
ANTI-TRUST FILM CO.
ANTI-TRUST FILM CO.
In order to show appreciation of the fine film service he recieved, Old Man Sprockits and family have come to Chicago to pay their respects to the Anti-Trust Film Company, The house of Good Sprockets
ALL RIGHTS RESERVED A T F CO

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and any one can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of three dollars ($3) cash with order, we will send by express, charges not prepaid, or $3.50 by registered mail, prepaid, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

To Obtain the Best Result You Must Use the

BEST CARBONS

Motion Picture Machines require Carbons that are particularly adapted for the purpose.

Use "Arco-Biograph" Brand

The Distinguishing Mark of our Specially Manufactured

CARBONS

for Motion Picture Machines

CARBONS for all Makes of Flaming Lamps Carried in Stock.

L. E. Frorup & Co., Importers

232-234 Greenwich St., New York

LUMIERE'S METHYNOL A PEER OF DEVELOPING AGENTS

(USED SAME AS METOL)

Special Prices $4.50 a pound in Lots 10 lb. (in Tin)
$4.25 a pound in Lots 20 lb. (in Tin)

Sold only by LUMIERE JOUGLA CO. Phone
75 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK Stuyvesant 531

FEATURE FILMS

We buy them all—Dante, David Copperfield, Romeo and Juliet, Fall of Troy, Clio and Phyletes, Train Robbers, The White Slave, All Prize Fights, Passion Play and thirty others.

Today is the time, before your competitor beats you to it. Heralds—Colored Announcement Slides, Banners and Lithographs sent in advance. Send for description now.

THE FATURE FILM COMPANY, Toledo, Ohio

We Buy More Features than any firm in the U. S.

FOR SALE Special films Custer's Last Stand, 1,000 ft., including 120 lithographs, seven styles, one, three and eight sheets, price $110. James Boys in Missouri, 1,050 ft., including fifty lithographs, one, three and six sheets, $100. White Caps, about 1,000 ft., including sixty lithographs, five styles, one, two and three sheets, $100. Italy-Turkey War, about 1,000 ft., including forty lithographs, $70. The original Edison Great Train Robbery, including lithographs, $75.

The Paris, Rome, Chicago, New York, Black Hand, two reels, including 150 lithographs, nine styles, one and three sheets, price $350; these films are new, have been used only three times at the San Juan, Porto Rico Fair, Dec. 9, 10, 11, 1911. A good opportunity for some one to make big money, anywhere. Apply W. MORRIS, 5 W. 104th St., N. Y. C.

NEW FIELD
BIG MONEY
EASY WORK

Why don't you think up plots for Motion Picture plays? It's easy, and pays well. We teach you by mail how to write and sell your plots. Many successful graduates.

DEMAND UNLIMITED. FULL DETAILS FREE.

ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE SCHOOLS
631 Sheridan Road CHICAGO

ZIGOMARI
"The King of Mystery Pictures"
Write for Booking—Write for State Right Prices
FEATURE & EDUCATIONAL FILM CO., Cleveland, Ohio

INDEPENDENT FILM SERVICE
STATE YOUR WANTS.
We'll make the RIGHT PRICE and give the RIGHT SERVICE.
Have little used Powers No. 6 fitted with new 1912 Model Motiograph Lamp House to sell. Low Price.
Bargains in Tickets and Carbons. All kinds of Machines and Supplies.
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO., 105 N. Dearborn Street, Chicago

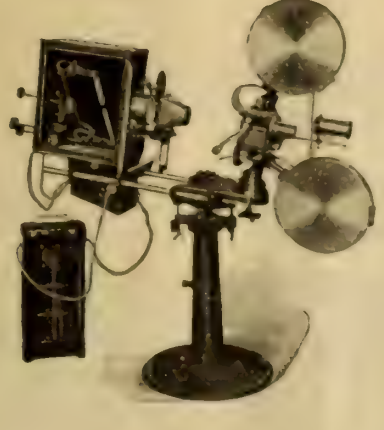
THE E-Z SLIDE
MAKE THEM YOURSELF
CLEAR AS GLASS — WILL OUTLAST GLASS
You can write or print on them as easily as on a sheet of writing paper
Ask your Film Exchange for them or write to
BATTERSHALL & OLESON 39 W. Adams St. Chicago, Ill.

KALEM'S "THE O'NEILL"

SPECIAL THREE SHEET posters for the great Kalem film, "The O'Neill," which was produced in Ireland, have been issued by the A. B. C. COMPANY, as well as the usual one sheets. These one and three sheet posters are of different subjects, and are especially fine. They may be secured from the licensed exchanges or direct from the

A. B. C. COMPANY :: :: CLEVELAND, OHIO

One Hundred and Fifteen Thousand People in the First Fifteen Days



was the attendance at the lectures of the Southern-Union Pacific Railway System at the Land Show, Chicago, November 18th to December 9th, 1911.

This great railway system has given most substantial proof of their unbounded faith in the moving picture through the expenditure of more than Twenty-five Thousand Dollars for a three weeks' exhibition of the wonders lying along the roads controlled by them. This company had erected for their purpose two complete moving picture theatres seating about 500 people in each and conducted alternately one-half hour lectures.

The Machines used were one 1908 Model Motiograph and one 1910 Model Motiograph—"Nuf Sed."

1912 MODELS NOW BEING SHIPPED

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY
564-572 WEST RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO
For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere

RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREENS

THE ACME OF PERFECTION

The Only Roll Curtain That Gives Entire Satisfaction

DAYLIGHT PICTURES—SAVES HALF YOUR JUICE BILL—NO EYE STRAIN—GLARE OR VEIL TO MAR THE PERFECT SURFACE

5 Years' Experience We are the Largest Manufacturers of Screens in the World Today

Curtains Made Without Seams | 5 STORY BUILDING DEVOTED EXCLUSIVELY TO OUR PRODUCTS

OUR PRICE Less Than Many Inferior Curtains Now on the Market—Write Today for Particulars

AMERICAN THEATRE CURTAIN & SUPPLY CO., Main at Chestnut St. Louis, Mo.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY

"Das Lichtbild-Theater"

The most up-to-date and most comprehensive Journal of the Cinematograph Industry in Germany.

Editor-Proprietor: LUDWIG BRAUNER

BERLIN SW 68. MARKGRAFENSTRASSE 92/92.

Annual subscription abroad, $3.00. Write for specimen copy.

"LOVE and AVIATION"

Beautiful three reel feature, with ginger and a moral.

Write for Booking—Write for State Right Prices

FEATURE & EDUCATIONAL FILM CO., Cleveland, Ohio

Advertising space in the Moving Picture World costs less than that in other publications, considering our guaranteed circulation. Write for rates.

FOR SALE

For quick and positive results, advertise in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD 125 East 23rd St. New York

AN INVITATION TO EXHIBITORS

Exhibitors from coast to coast are cordially invited to visit the exhibition rooms of the Western office of the Moving Picture World, Suite 306, 307, 309, No. 167 West Washington Street, Chicago, Illinois, or the Home Office, 125 East 23rd Street, New York City.

Representatives of the paper will be glad to extend every courtesy, and give information in regard to the various propositions advertised through the columns of the Moving Picture World.

CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

INFORMATION BUREAU, MOVING PICTURE WORLD

125 East 23rd Street, New York City. 167 West Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

Advertisers, send us samples of your product and a liberal supply of catalogues

DIRECT Jobber for Powers, Edison and Motiograph Machines

WHOLESALE

EVERYTHING IN MOTION PICTURE EQUIPMENT EXCEPT THE FILM

MACKIE HAS IT

H. A. MACKIE, Inc., 851-853 Broadway, Corner 14th Street, NEW YORK CITY

RETAIL

PEARL WHITE CONDENSERS 65c. EACH. [SOLD ELSEWHERE FOR $1.

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

VOLUME X

October-December, 1911

Edited by
J. P. CHALMERS

PUBLISHED BY

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING CO.

125 East Twenty-third Street, New York

Index to Volume X.—October to December, 1911

A

Active Organizers 277
Advertising for Exhibitors. By Epes Winthrop Sargent. III.....26-27
" " " " " " " " IV 111-112
" " " " " " " " V 193-194
" " " " " " " " VI 279-280
" " " " " " " " VII 360-361
" " " " " " " " VIII ...456-457
" " " " " " " " IX 540-541
" " " " " " " " X 625-626
" " " " " " " " XI 711-712
" " " " " " " " XII 806-807
" " " " " " " " XIII ...888-889
" " " " " " " " XIV ...979-980
Advertising for Exhibitors 1060
Added Attraction, The (Article 1). By W. Stephen Bush..... 533
Added Attraction, The (Article 2). By W. Stephen Bush..... 617
American Eclair Studio 24
American Films Abroad 375
Among Chicago Houses 1065
Antidote to Panics, An 106
Another "Taft" Picture 372
Another Picture Ordinance 891
Artistic Direction of the Photoplay..... 369
Ataxia Shown by Cinematograph..... 137
Author and the Press Clipping, The..... 190

B

Ben Hur Case, The. By Epes Winthrop Sargent..... 793
Belasco of the Motion Picture Presentations. By James L. McQuade 796
Bison Company Get 101 Ranch..... 810
Boston Invasion 628
Broadway Theater, Everett, Mass. By Henry..... 459
Bunny, John, Vitagraph's Funny Man..... 112

C

Campbell, Harry F., By Henry..... 1061
Canadian Censorship 25
Canadian Censors and the U. S. Flag..... 795
Champion Enterprise, The 542
Child, The. By Louis Reeves Harrison..... 705
Children's Theater, The. By Louis Reeves Harrison..... 793
Commissioner Thompson Heard From..... 198
Crook No. 2. By the Tadpole..... 368
Credit Where Credit Is Due. By Epes Winthrop Sargent..... 106
Cup Presentation by the Bison Stock Co. to J. Fred Balshofer at Los Angeles 987

D

Dante's Inferno Stereopticon Lecture..... 138
Dante's Inferno in New York State..... 978
Dangers of the Foreign Market..... 877
Death of Oscar B. Kleine 894
Do Longer Films Make Better Show. By W. Stephen Bush..... 275

E

Education and the Cinematograph..... 973
Educational Reels for Independent Exhibitors..... 973
Edison Camera Patent Re-Issues..... 878
Eloquence of Gesture, The..... 375
Essanay Company Plans Greatest Baseball Film..... 144
Essanay Leading Woman a Real Heroine..... 894
Exhibitors' and Lecturers' Key to Dante's Inferno..... 110
Exhibitors' Association Secretaries..... 277

F

Films of the Future, The. By William H. Kitchel..... 811
First Christian Martyr for Moving Pictures..... 898
Friendly Legislation 451
Future of the Scientific Film, The..... 618

G

Gaumont Program 1081
Going About Kansas. By Nelson G. Stephen..... 720
Gordon Sackville 908

H

Hasty Judgment 1053
History and Technique of Motion Pictures..... 358
How the Picture Causes Juvenile Delinquency..... 534
Hollaman in Educational Film Company..... 978

I

Importance of Sound Effects..... 46-47
Incentive and Development. By Harrison DelRuth..... 625
Indiana M. P. Exhibitors' League..... 1056
Indiana Exhibitors Organize 978

K

Kalem Sends Company to the Orient..... 880
Kennedy Combines with Harry Davis, A. M..... 196
Keith's Bijou Theater, Boston, Mass. By Henry..... 804
Kleine, Death of Oscar B..... 894
Kleine Retires, C. B..... 371

L

Lecture on the Three Reel Production "Foul Play" (Edison). By W. Stephen Bush 28
Lectures on Moving Pictures..... 457
Learning History From Motion Pictures. By Mary Chamberlin..... 974
Letter of an Old Exhibitor to a New Film Maker..... 107
Live Wires, by Louis Reeves Harrison..... 1053
Lowbrow, Mr. By Louis Reeves Harrison..... 21
Los Angeles Tragedy, The 455

M

Margaret Fisher, Miss 983
Majestic Enterprise 388
Mayor's Picture Theater, Committee Reports..... 983
Marion Swayne, Miss 893
Mabel Taliaferro Talks About Pictures. By Ashton Stevens..... 971
Mercury Arc-Rectifier, The. By C. L. Mosely..... 134
Minneapolis Situation. By James S. McQuade..... 631
Mildred Holland in Pictures..... 881
Montgomery Looking Round 276
Motor Generators and Economizers..... 276
Motion Picture Affairs in St. Louis. By James S. McQuade..... 362
Moving Picture Elopements Condemned..... 878
Moving Picture as a Necessity (Article 1)..... 882
Mr. Critic. By Louis Reeves Harrison..... 274
Must We Buy Our Peace. By W. Stephen Bush..... 450

N

National Film Distributing Company..... 628
New Aspects of the Motion Picture. By W. Stephen Bush..... 105
New England Invasion. By Henry..... 718
New Great Northern Star, Carl Alstrup..... 461
New Kalem Company for Jacksonville..... 880
New York Picture Theater Ordinance Discussed..... 543
New York Exhibitors Facing Trouble..... 983
New Star in the Picture Firmament, A..... 720
Notable Event Filmed 34

O

On the Road 805
Operators' Law Unconstitutional..... 34
Overproduction of Western Pictures, The. By W. Stephen Bush..... 189
Over Their Heads. By Louis Reeves Harrison..... 449

P

Peace or War—the Cinematograph an Important Factor 371
Pennsylvania Exhibitors Win Victory..... 701
Pennsylvania Station Filmed in Its Natural Light..... 908
Penn Square Theater, Cleveland, Ohio..... 998
Picture as a Teacher, The..... 193
Picture in Montclair, The..... 459
Pictures for Churches. By W. Stephen Bush..... 701
Picture in the Insane Asylum, The..... 710
Pictures in Kansas City 717
Pictures and Popularity 795
Picture Theater Not a Theater..... 1054
Playmaking. By Louis Reeves Harrison..... 191
Problems in Pictures. By W. Stephen Bush..... 877
Practical Solution of the Sunday Problem, A. By W. Stephen Bush. 969

R

Reviews of Notable Films:
Aggressor, The (Imp) 23
Auld Lang Syne (Vitagraph)..... 366
Awakening of John Bond, The (Edison)..... 535
Arrah-Na-Pogue—Three Reels (Kalem) 536
Actress, The (Majestic) 886
Black Arrow, The (Edison)..... 192
Battle, The (Biograph) 367
Carr's Regeneration (Vitagraph) 108
Chain of an Oath, The (Vitagraph)..... 453
Courting of Mary, The (Majestic)..... 619
Cinderella (Selig) 704
Evils of Impure Literature, The (Gaumont)..... 452
From the Bottom of the Sea (Imp)..... 454
Golden Wedding, The (Ambrosio)..... 799
Goodfellows' Christmas Eve (Essanay)..... 855
Human Sacrifice, The (Reliance)..... 109
His Vacation (Nestor) 536
Hands Across the Sea (Eclair)..... 620
In the Grip of Alcohol (C. G. P. C.)..... 707
Last Days of Henri III of France (Eclipse)..... 22
Lost in the Jungle (Selig)..... 109
Life in the United States Army (Edison)..... 367
Notre Dame de Paris (C. G. P. C.)..... 884
Politician's Dream, The (Vitagraph)..... 622
Raffles Caught (Pathe) 24
She (Thanhouser)—Two reels 976
Sheriff's Sisters, The (American) 619
Uncle Ned's Diplomacy (Gaumont)..... 802
Vanity Fair (Vitagraph) 886
Violin Maker of Nuremberg, The (Solax)..... 800
Water War, The (American)..... 192
"War" (Vitagraph) 800
Zigomar (Eclair)—Three reels 108
Random Shots of a Picture Fan, The..... 198
Random Shots of a Picture Fan, The..... 451
Random Shots of a Picture Fan, The..... 553
Random Shots of a Picture Fan, The..... 880
Record Breaking Performance by the Lubin Company..... 119
Reliance Under New Management..... 135
Real Esperanto, The. By W. Stephen Bush..... 273

S

Sales Company Employees' Ball..... 284
Scenario Writer, The. By Epes Winthrop Sargent..... 895
Scenario Writer, The. By Epes Winthrop Sargent..... 981
Scenario Writer, The..... 1062
Situation in Macon 33
Simplifying the Teaching of History. By W. Stephen Bush..... 199
Something New. By Louis Reeves Harrison..... 970
Splendid Example, A 450
Staging the Passion Play..... 1055
Stingy Leaders. By Epes Winthrop Sargent..... 534
Suggestions to a Worried Critic. By W. Stephen Bush..... 794

T

Talk on Vaudeville in Picture Theaters..... 216
Taming an Audience 617
Test of Taste, A..... 190
Technique And The Tale..... 541
Teacher of Teachers An Aid to the Teachers, The (Article 1)..... 882

V

Vaudeville Picture Theater 120
Visit of a Royal Film Maker..... 48

W

Wants Projection for Scenario Writers. By Leonard L. Hess..... 122
What Lecturing to the Pictures Means. By Prof. Preston, Boston, Mass. 978
What Was Her Object..... 972
Wheeler Slide and its Making, The 392
Where to Send Your Scenarios..... 1063
Wisconsin Exhibitors Organize 34

Index to the Stories of the Films.

For the benefit of t[he] dates which have been rele[ased] indicate that the synopses [appeared] ers of the Moving Picture World we have compiled a complete list of films with their ring the past three months. Some of the films listed, and which have no page numbers, t furnished by the manufacturers.

Licensed Relea[ses]

A

Abe Gets Even With Father—R[el'd] (Biograph) ....
Actor in a New Role, An—Re[l'd] 4 Lubin) 746
Actor's Heart—Rel'd Dec. 23 (Es[sanay]) 29
Adventures of Billy, The—Rel'd [Dec.] graph) 656 Aeroplane Elopement, An—Rel'd [Dec.] graph) 924
Ajaccio, The Birthplace of Na[poleon]—Rel'd Oct. 10 (Gaumont) 148
American Insurrecto, The—Re[l'd] (Kalem) 412
American Girl, The—Rel'd Dec. [5] 27
Among the Irish Fisher Folk—[Rel'd] (Kalem) .... [Dec.] 656
Answer of the Roses—Rel'd Oct. [29] 1008
April Fool—Rel'd Dec. 11 (Sel[ig]) 656
Arabian Customs—Rel'd Dec. 1[9] graph) 66
Arbutus—Rel'd Nov. 8 (Vitagr[aph]) 832
Arrah Na-Pogue—Three reels—[Rel'd] (Kalem) 827
Art vs. Music—Rel'd Dec. 20 [Dec.] 412
Artist's Sons, The—Rel'd Oct. [4] 748
As in a Looking Glass—Rel'd [Nov.] graph) 924
Astis, The—Rel'd Nov. 10 (Pa[the] 8 (Bio-
At the Stroke of Twelve—[Rel'd] (Essanay) 918
At the Threshold of Life—Nov. 24 (Edison) 570
Athletics vs. Giants—Rel'd Oc[t.] Oct. 13
Aunt Hulda, The Matchmak[er] 64
(Vitagraph) .... [Essanay] .. 280
Aunt Jane's Legacy—Rel'd [Nov.] Oct. 25
Auld Lang Syne—Three re[els] 228
(Vitagraph) .... [Lubin] .. 408
Awakening of John Bond, [The—Rel'd] Nov. 7 (Edison) 412

[Rel'd] Dec. 5

B 746

Baby and the Stork, The—[Rel'd] graph) ....
Bandit's Bride, The—Rel'd [Dec.] n. 1 (Bio-
Battle, The—Rel'd Nov. [6] 1092
Belgian Cavalry at Exer[cise] (Pathe) 408
(Gaumont) .... [Rel'd] 412
Bear Hunt Romance—Rel'd [Rel'd] Nov. 4
Betrayed by a Parasol—R[el'd] 312
P. C.) .... (Pathe) 658
Between Father and Son—R[el'd] 5 (C. G.
Better Man, The—Rel'd D[ec.] 1094
Betty's Boat—Rel'd Oct. 22 (Kalem) 922
Birth of a Flower, The—[Rel'd] Melies) 744
P. C.) .... [Rel'd] ....
Bill Bumper's Bargain—Rel'd [Nov.] 14 (C. G.
Bill's Flute—Rel'd Dec. [7] 496
Bird in the Hand—Rel'd [Dec.] 3 (Essanay) 314
Black Arrow, The—Rel'd (Lu[bin]) 828
Blackbeard—Rel'd Nov. 9 (Essanay) 1096
Blind Deception, A—Rel'd (Edison) 410
Black Chasm, The—Rel'd (Sel[ig]) 570
Bootlegger, The—Rel'd [Dec.] 28 (Lubin) 572
Bo'sun's Watch, The—Re[l'd] (Vitagraph) 830
Brother in Arms, A—Re[l'd] (Selig) 492
Brockton Fair and Horse [Show] 22 (Edison) 574
—Rel'd Dec. 15 (Pathe) 496
Broncho Billy's Christm[as] rockton, Mass. 28 (Essanay) 828
Broncho Billy's Adviser—Rel'd [Dec.] (Essanay) 918
Brown of Harvard—Rel'd [Rel'd] Dec. 30
Busy Cupid, A—Rel'd 1096
Buckskin Jack, the Ex[pert] (Selig) 348
Dec. 12 (Edison) .... (Gaumont) 654
Burglar's Hard Luck, The—[Rel'd] Lenmore—Rel'd
P. C. 827
Burlesque Bull Fight, A—[Rel'd] Dec. 25 (C. G.
P. C.) 1010
Bully of Bingo Gulch—[Rel'd] Oct. 30 (C. G.
(Selig) .... [Rel'd] ....
By Way of Mrs. [Rel'd] S Dec. 26
(Vitagraph) .... [Rel'd] Christ[mas] Oct. 14
[Rel'd] Oct 68

Cabin Boy, The—Rel'd [Dec.]
Captain Brand's Wife—[Rel'd] Dec.
Captain Barnacle, [Rel'd] ....agraph) 148
(Vitagraph) .... [Rel'd] Oct 4 (Selig) .. 312
Cattle Rustler's Fa[te]—Rel'd Oct. 30
(Essanay) .... [Rel'd] Conne[ct] 316
Cain and Abel—Rel'[d] .... Nov. 18
Cave Homes in the [Rel'd] of Nor[th] 492
25 (Gaumont) .... [Rel'd] P. C.) .. 570
Camoens, The Port[uguese] —Rel'd Rel'd Nov.
1578—Rel'd Dec 572
California Revolut[ion] [Rel'd] Nov. [6] Lisbon.
(Kalem) .... [Rel'd] I 744
Carr's Regeneration—Rel'd [Rel'd] Oct. 6
Caught With the [Rel'd] .... graph) .... [Rel'd] nal—Rel'd tagraph) ..
Challenge, The—Re[l'd] .... 25 (Bio-
Chief's Daughter, [The—Rel'd] Oct 1008
Child of the West, [The—Rel'd] Nov. 9 (Pat) 744
—Rel'd Oct (Selig). 832
—A—Rel'd Essanay) .. 1096

Circus In Australia—Rel'd Oct. 4 (Pathe) ...
Cinderella (3 reels)—Rel'd Jan. 1 (Selig) 1099
Cinta, A Picturesque Town of Portugal—Rel'd Oct. 7 (Gaumont) ....
Codfish Industry, Newfoundland—Rel'd Jan. 5 (Edison) 1092
Colleen Bawn, The—Three reels—Rel'd Oct. 16 (Kalem) 144
Conspiracy Against the King, A—Rel'd Oct. 20 (Lubin) 152
Coals of Fire—Rel'd Oct. 23 (Selig) 226
Cotton Goods Factory In [Rel'd Jan. 5 (Lubin) 1099
Coward, The—Rel'd Nov. 4 (Pathe) 318
Coquette, The—Rel'd Nov. 6 (Selig) 408
Convert of San Clemente, The—Rel'd Nov. 20 (Selig) 570
Cowboy's Sister, The—Rel'd Jan. 6 (Pathe) 1094
Cowboy Coward, The—Rel'd Dec. 16 (Essanay) 827
Cowboy Life—Rel'd Nov. 23 (Pathe) 570
Cowboy Artist's Jonah Day, The—Rel'd Jan. 3 (Kalem) 1099
Cowboy's Adopted Child, The—Rel'd Jan. 2 (Selig) 1099
Come Games In Singapore—Rel'd Nov. 24 (C. G. P. C.) ....
Cross of Pearls, The—Rel'd Oct. 19 (Melies) .. 150
Crab Industry, The—Rel'd Nov. 29 (Lubin) 656
Crazy Dope—Rel'd Oct. 4 (Pathe) ....
Cure of John Douglas, The—Rel'd Oct. 18 (Lubin) 144
Curing a Reckless Student—Rel'd Dec. 30 (Gaumont) 1094

D

Daddy's Boy and Mammy—Rel'd Oct. 9 (Vitagraph 64
Daniel Boone's Bravery—Rel'd Oct. 18 (Kalem) 144
Day at West Point Military Academy, New York—Rel'd Oct. 24 (Edison) 228
Day With a Circus, A—Rel'd Dec. 8 (Selig) ... 744
Daughter of the Clown, The—Rel'd Nov. 17 (C. G. P. C.) 496
Dan, The Lighthouse Keeper—Rel'd Nov. 20 (Kalem) 572
Daisy Cowboys, The—Rel'd Dec. 9 (Edison) 748
Dad's Smash Up—Rel'd Dec. 21 (Pathe) 924
Deacon's Reward, The—Rel'd Oct. 15 (Essanay) 64
Desert Well, The—Rel'd Nov. 15 (Kalem) 494
Desert Claim, The—Rel'd Nov. 25 (Essanay) ... 570
Destiny Is Changeless—Rel'd Jan. 5 (Vitagraph) 1094
Diamond in the Rough, A—Rel'd Dec. 4 (Selig) 744
Done Brown—Rel'd Oct. 17 (Eclipse) 150
Doll, The—Rel'd Dec. 30 (Pathe) 1010
Dooley's Scheme—Rel'd Nov. 13 (Biograph) 494
Doubly Desired Orphan, A—Rel'd Oct. 29 (Vitagraph) 1096
Dr. Bill's Patient—Rel'd Oct. 20 (Essanay) ... 148
Driving Home the Cows—Rel'd Jan. 1 (Kalem) .1099
Dude Cowboy, The—Rel'd Jan. 5 (Kalem) 1099

E

Eleanore Cuyler—Rel'd Jan. 2 (Edison) 1092
Empty Saddle, The—Rel'd Nov. 10 (Essanay) .. 408
Engineer's Daughter, The—Rel'd Nov. 10 (Kalem) 410
Episode Under Henri III, An—Rel'd Nov. 3 (C. G. P. C.) 318
Episode of Early Mormon Days, An—Rel'd Dec. 14 (Pathe) 332
Escape From the Dungeon, The—Rel'd Nov. 25 (Gaumont) 572
Eskimos in Labrador—Rel'd Dec. 13 (Edison) .. 828
Eugene Wrayburn—Rel'd Oct. 2 (Edison) ....
Evil Power, An—Rel'd Nov. 30 (Selig) 654
Eva's Faithful Furniture—Rel'd Dec. 8 (C. G. P. C.) 750
Eva Moves In—Rel'd Oct. 20 (Pathe) ....
Evangeline—Rel'd Dec. 18 (Selig) 918
Eye for an Eye, or The Last Days of King Henry III, France—Rel'd Nov. 8 (Eclipse) 412
Evils of Impure Literature—Rel'd Jan. 6 (Gaumont) 1099
Excess Baggage—Rel'd Nov. 17 (Essanay) 492
Esra and the Fortune Teller—Rel'd Oct. 4 (Eclipse) ....

F

False Suspicion, A—Rel'd Oct. 17 (Essanay) .. 148
Fairyland of Frost and Snow, A—Rel'd Oct. 17 (Eclipse) 150
Fair Exchange is no Robbery—Rel'd Dec. 27 (Eclipse) 1094
Fairies' Banquet, The—Rel'd Oct. 25 (Edison) 228
Family Pet's Revenge, The—Rel'd Oct. 24 (Essanay) 230
Failure, The—Rel'd Dec. 7 (Biograph) 827
Father and the Girls—Rel'd Dec. 30 (Lubin) ..1010
Fighting Schoolmaster, The—Rel'd Oct. 16 (Vitagraph) 144
Fishermaid of Ballydavid, The—Rel'd Nov. 17 (Kalem) 494
First Man, The—Rel'd Dec. 12 (Essanay) 827
Fires of Driftwood—Rel'd Dec. 20 (Vitagraph) 920
Flower Girl of Las Palmas, The—Rel'd Dec. 13 (Pathe 832
Flash in the N[ight] The—Rel'd Dec. 20 (Kalem) 922
Fluta—Rel'd Oct. 6 (Pathe) ....
Forgiveness of Jealousy, The—Rel'd Oct. 13 (Vitagraph) 230
Forester's Fate, The—Rel'd Oct. 28 (Essanay) ...
Football Hero, A—Rel'd Nov. 28 (Essanay) .. 654
Foiling of Red Degan, The—Rel'd Dec. 21 (Essanay) 918
Four Pay (Three Reels)—Rel'd Oct. 9 (Edison)
For the Flag of France—Rel'd Oct. 11 (Kalem) 64
For the Love of Mike—Rel'd Jan. 5 (Essanay) ....
For His Father's Sake—Rel'd Dec. 10 (Selig) ....
For Mercy's Sake—Rel'd Dec. 28 (Essanay) ....
For Her Brother's Sake—Rel'd Oct. 20 (Kalem)
For Mercy's Sake—Rel'd Dec. 28 (Essanay) ....
Freezing Rescue—Rel'd Oct. 28 (Gaumont) 312
Frances Ann Frears of Kinnarney, Ireland—Rel'd Nov. 29 (Kalem) 656
Frescati, The—Rel'd Nov. 28 (Vitagraph) 658
Freezing Auntie—Rel'd Jan. 5 (Lubin) 1092
Frontier Girl's Courage, A—Rel'd Dec. 5 (Selig) 744
Fearless Doctor, A—Rel'd Dec. 5 (Essanay) ... 744
From the Land to the Cradle—Rel'd Oct. 7 (Lubin) ....
From Fay to Love—Rel'd Dec. 26 (Gaumont) ..1094
Funeral in Annam—Rel'd Oct. 27 (Pathe) ....

G

Gambler's Influence, The—Rel'd Oct. 13 (Lubin) 62
Gardener's Dream, The—Rel'd Oct. 16 (Pathe) 150
Gay Time in New York City—Rel'd Nov. 1 (Lubin) 514
Get Rich Quick Hall and Ford—Rel'd Oct. 12 (Essanay) 64
Gee Whiz—Rel'd Nov. 9 (Essanay) 408
Getting Married—Rel'd Nov. 24 (Selig) 572
Getting Even With Lucy—Rel'd Dec. 8 (Essanay) 744
George Washington's Escape—Rel'd Dec. 14 (Selig) 832
Get a Horse—Rel'd Oct. 19 (Lubin) 144
Girl and the Motor Boat, The—Rel'd Nov. 3 (Edison) 314
Girl and the Sheriff, The—Rel'd Nov. 14 (Vitagraph) 496
Girlish Impulse, A—Rel'd Dec. 11 (Lubin) 828
Glimpse Into the Yellowstone National Park—Rel'd Dec. 1 (Kalem) 656
Glimpse of San Francisco—Rel'd Nov. 29 (Pathe) ....
Gossip, The—Rel'd Nov. 3 (Vitagraph) 316
Goodfellow's Christmas Eve, A—Rel'd Dec. 15 (Essanay) 827
Greatest of Engineering Feats, The—Rel'd Nov. 1 (Kalem) 312
Grandfather's Violin—Rel'd Oct. 29 (C. G. P. C.) 318
Grandma—Rel'd Oct. 2 (Essanay) ....
Grand Chartereuse, The—Rel'd Oct. 4 (Eclipse)
Grouch Cure, The—Rel'd Nov. 21 (C. G. P. C.)
Guy Fawkes, or The Gunpowder Plot—Rel'd Nov. 22 (Eclipse) 572
Guerrero Troops—Rel'd Oct. 13 (Pathe) ....
Gypsy Bride, A—Rel'd Oct. 26 (Melies) 230

H

Hack and Schmidt Bout, The—Rel'd Dec. 14 (Essanay) 827
Half-Breed's Daughter, The—Rel'd Nov. 22 (Vitagraph) 574
Harbor of Marseilles, France—Rel'd Dec. 13 (Eclipse) 827
He Fought for the U. S. A.—Rel'd Nov. 7 (Essanay) 408
Head for Business, A—Rel'd Dec. 4 (Lubin) 746
Heart of Nickette, The—Rel'd Dec. 8 (Edison) 746
Heart of the King's Jester, The—Rel'd Jan. 5 (Vitagraph) 1094
Her Cowboy Lover—Rel'd Nov. 6 (Vitagraph) .. 412
Her Exclusive Hat—Rel'd Oct. 21 (Lubin) 144
Her Little Slipper—Rel'd Dec. 9 (Pathe) 750
Her Mother Interferes—Rel'd Nov. 23 (Biograph) 572
Heroes of the Mutiny—Rel'd Nov. 20 (Vitagraph) 574
Heroism—Rel'd Dec. 12 (Gaumont) 827
Her Pet—Rel'd Dec. 14 (Biograph) 832
He Who Laughs Last—Rel'd Dec. 18 (Kalem) 922
Her Wedding Ring—Rel'd Oct. 14 (Edison) 64
Hi Feathertop at the Fair—Rel'd Nov. 2 (Essanay) 314
Higher Toll, The—Rel'd Dec. 27 (Kalem) 1094
Hindu Jewel Mystery, The—Rel'd Nov. 15 (Eclipse) 492
His Better Self—Rel'd Oct. 20 (Selig) 148
His Brother's Double—Rel'd Nov. 25—(Lubin) 574
His Chorus Girl Wife—Rel'd Nov. 13 (Lubin) .. 492
His Daughter's Bracelet—Rel'd Dec. 28 (Pathe)1010
His Incarceration—Rel'd Oct. 5 (Lubin) .....
His First Long Trousers—Rel'd Nov. 3 (Selig) 312
His Last Cent—Rel'd Dec. 1 (Vitagraph) 658
His Stubborn Way—Rel'd Oct. 3 (Lubin) .....
His Wife's Secret—Rel'd Dec. 9 (Vitagraph) ... 830
His Luck—Rel'd Dec. 4 (Pathe) 750
Home—Rel'd Nov. 24 (Edison) 574
Her Fate in Atlantic City, A—Rel'd Oct. 14 (Lubin) 62
Hour of Execution, The—Rel'd Nov. 11 (Gaumont) 412

House of Education—Rel'd Nov. 11 (Gaumont)
House That Jack Built, The—Rel'd Nov. 11 (Lubin) 410
How Betty Captured the Outlaw—Rel'd Dec. 1 (Kalem) 656
How Mrs. Murry Saved the American Army—Rel'd Oct. 10 (Edison) 64
How Sir Andrew Lost His Vote—Rel'd Dec. 22 (Edison) 922
How Texas Got Left—Rel'd Nov. 23 (Kalem).. 572
How the Telephone Came to Town—Rel'd Oct. 25 (Edison) 228
How they Stopped the Run on the Bank—Rel'd Oct. 19 (Selig) 148
Hubby's Scheme—Rel'd Nov. 14 (Essanay).... 492
Hutchinson, Kas., Centennial Celebration—Rel'd Jan. 5 (Selig) 1090
Hypnotist, The—Rel'd Dec. 5 (Vitagraph)..... 830

I

Ice Formations at Odessa, Russia, The—Rel'd Jan. 2 (C. G. P. C.)..... 1094
Icebergs off the Coast of Labrador—Rel'd Nov. 11 (Edison) 510
Idle Boast, The—Rel'd Oct. 4 (Lubin).....
Important Scenes in Paris, France—Rel'd Dec. 9 (Gaumont) .....
Incendiary Indians—Rel'd Nov. 29 (Pathe).... 658
Indian Flute, The—Rel'd Oct. 11 (Vitagraph).. 66
Indian Vestal, An—Rel'd Oct. 9 (Selig)..... 62
Industries of the South and West—Rel'd Dec. 15 (Selig) 832
Infancy of Moses, The—Rel'd Jan. 2 (C. G. P. C.) 1094
In Frontier Days—Rel'd Oct. 26 (Pathe)..... 232
In Japan—Rel'd Nov. 24 (Selig)..... 572
In the Clutches of a Vapor Bath—Rel'd Dec. 30 (Vitagraph) 1008
In the Days of Gold—Rel'd Nov. 13 (Selig).... 492
In the Grip of Alcohol (Two Reels)—Rel'd Dec. 15 (C. G. P. C.)..... 827
Inner Mind, The—Rel'd Nov. 2 (Selig)..... 312
Innocent Burglar, An—Rel'd Nov 24 (Vitagraph) 574
International Heartbreaker, An—Rel'd Dec. 13 (Edison) 828
Inventor's Secret, The—Rel'd Oct. 23 (Biograph) 226
Island Comedy, An—Rel'd Oct. 27 (Edison)... 228
Italian Blood—Rel'd Oct. 9 (Biograph)..... 62

J

Jack's Umbrella—Rel'd Nov. 9 (Lubin)..... 410
Jealous Wife, A—Rel'd Oct. 4 (Eclipse).....
Jesting Princess, The—Rel'd Nov. 4 (Gaumont) 312
Jimmie and His Country Uncle—Rel'd Nov. 14 (Gaumont) 492
Jimmie in Love—Rel'd Oct. 24 (Gaumont).... 230
Jimmie's Midnight Flight—Rel'd Oct. 10 (Gaumont) .....
Jimmie Tricks His Landlady—Rel'd Dec. 5 (Gaumont) 744
John Brown's Heir—Rel'd Dec. 6 (Edison).... 746
Josh's Suicide—Rel'd Oct. 12 (Biograph)..... 62
Joke on the Joker, The—Rel'd Jan. 4 (Biograph) 1092

K

Kid from the Klondike, The—Rel'd Oct. 28 (Edison) 228
Kiddies' Christmas, The (Two Reels)—Rel'd Dec. 20 (Lubin)..... 924
Kiddy and the Cowboys—Rel'd Oct. 27 (Vitagraph) 230
Kioday Tribe Equilibrist, The—Rel'd Nov. 23 (C. G. P. C.).....

L

Lady Godiva—Rel'd Oct. 21 (Vitagraph)..... 148
Launching of the Battleship Revadavia, Quincy, Mass.—Rel'd. Oct. 18 (Edison)..... 152
Leaves of a Romance—Rel'd Oct. 7 (Edison)..
Lieutenant Grey—Rel'd Nov. 10 (Selig)..... 408
Life Boat, The—Rel'd Nov. 25 (Vitagraph)... 574
Life in the United States Army—Rel'd Nov. 21 (Edison) 574
Little Animal Trainer—Rel'd Oct. 9 (Pathe).. 68
Little "Injin"—Rel'd Oct. 30 (Selig)..... 312
Little Spy, The—Rel'd Nov. 17 (Vitagraph).. 495
Living Peach, The—Rel'd Nov. 15 (Edison).... 494
Little Red Riding Hood—Rel'd Nov. 30 (Essanay) 654
Little Widow, The—Rel'd Dec. 22 (Selig)... 918
Little Moritz is too Short—Rel'd Oct. 3 (Pathe)
Life Saving School in Australia—Rel'd Nov. 30) C. G. P. C.).....
Logan's Babies—Rel'd Nov. 8—(Edison)..... 410
Logging and Milling in Sweden—Rel'd Oct. 27 (Pathe) .....
Long Arm of the Law, The—Rel'd Dec. 6 (Kalem) 748
Long Road, The—Rel'd Oct. 26 (Biograph).... 226
Long Stride, The—Rel'd Dec. 7 (Essanay).... 744
Love and Hatred—Rel'd Nov. 4 (Edison)..... 316
Love at Gloucester Port—Rel'd Dec. 15 (Vitagraph) 830
Love Decides—Rel'd Dec. 8 (Lubin)..... 924
Love in the Hills—Rel'd Oct. 30 (Biograph).. 314
Love Moulds Labor—Rel'd Nov. 1 (Pathe).... 316
Love's Labor Lost—Rel'd [illegible] (Lubin)... 746
Love's Renunciation—Rel'd Nov. 11 (Pathe).. 408
Love's Victory—Rel'd Oct. 28 (Lubin)..... 226
Lost Freight Car, The—Rel'd Oct. 25 (Kalem).. 226
Lost Necklace, The—Rel'd Nov. 25 (Pathe)... 570
Luck of Reckless Reddy, The—Rel'd Nov. 6 (Kalem) 410
Luckless Banker, The—Rel'd Dec. 6 (Eclipse).. 744
Ludwig from Germany—Rel'd Nov. 4 (Edison) 494
Lure of the City, The—Rel'd Nov. 28 (Edison) 494

M

Madeira, Portugal—Rel'd Oct. 18 (Eclipse).. 150
Madge of the Mountains—Rel'd Oct. 31 (Vitagraph) 316
Madman, The—Rel'd Dec. 5 (Essanay)..... 744
Mac's Suitors—Rel'd Oct. 11 (Edison)..... 64
Maid's Double, The—Rel'd Dec. 29 (Kalem)..1004
Making a Six-Ton Cheese—Rel'd Oct. 13 (Selig) 62
Making Cheddar Cheese—Rel'd Oct. 11 (Eclipse) 68
Making of a Man—Rel'd Oct. 16 (Selig)..... 148
Maid at the Helm, The—Rel'd Dec. 7 (Selig).. 744
Maid of Argod, The—Rel'd Dec. 23 (Gaumont) 918
Mail-Order Wife, The—Rel'd Jan. 2 (Essanay).1090
Marooned—Rel'd Oct. 14 (Pathe)..... 68
Man for All That, A—Rel'd Dec. 2 (Edison).... 660
Maniac, The—Rel'd Oct. 16 (Lubin)..... 144
Man in the Taxi, The—Rel'd Nov. 27 (Lubin) 656
Manress, a Spanish Town—Rel'd Nov. 11 (Gaumont) 412
Masked Huntsman, The—Rel'd Oct. 21 (Gaumont) 150
Master Cupid, Detective—Rel'd Oct. 5 (Essanay)
Mate of the "John M," The—Rel'd Oct. 4 (Biograph) .....
Mate of Alden Besse, The—Rel'd Jan. 4 (Selig) 1090
Maud Muller—Rel'd Oct. 6 (Selig).....
Marvelous Transformation—Rel'd Oct. 9 (Pathe)
Making Artificial Flowers—Rel'd Nov. 7 (C. G. P. C.).....
Mesquite's Gratitude, The—Rel'd Oct. 20 (Kalem) 144
Mexican, The—Rel'd Nov 4 (Lubin)..... 314
Message From Beyond, A—Rel'd Oct. 4 (Vitagraph) 316
Mexican as it is Spoken—Rel'd Nov. 2 (Melies) 318
Mistress of the Hacienda Del Cerro, The—Rel'd Oct. 9 (Kalem)..... 64
Missing Will, The—Rel'd Oct. 10 (Vitagraph) 66
Mix-up in Raincoats—Rel'd Dec. 25 (Biograph).1008
Mike's Hero—Rel'd Oct 18 (Edison)..... 152
Miser Miner, The—Rel'd Nov. 16 (Melies).... 498
Miser's Heart, The—Rel'd Nov. 20 (Biograph) 572
Mission Father, The—Rel'd Dec. 21 (Melies).. 827
Military Air Scout, The—Rel'd Dec. 12 (Vitagraph) 830
Millionaire Barber, The—Rel'd Dec. 22 (Essanay) 918
Mother is Strong on Hypnotism—Rel'd Oct. 27 (Essanay) 232
Modern Rip, A—Rel'd Dec. 25 (Selig).....1008
Modern Cinderella, A—Rel'd Nov. 7 (Edison). 410
Modern Weapons for Fighting Fire, New York City—Rel'd Dec. 26 (Edison).....1006
Mountain Law, The—Rel'd Dec. 2 (Essanay).. 654
Molly Pitcher—Rel'd Dec. 11 (Kalem)..... 828
Mother's Remorse, A—Rel'd Dec. 16 (Pathe).. 832
Mother-in-Law Raises—Rel'd Dec. 27 (Pathe).1010
Mr. and Mrs. Suspicious—Rel'd Dec. 13 (Lubin) 828
Mr. Bragg, a Fugitive—Rel'd Oct. 3 (Biograph)
My Brother Agostino—Rel'd Nov. 20 (Lubin).. 570
Mysterious Stranger, The—Rel'd Nov. 29 (Eclipse) 654

N

New Superintendent, The—Rel'd Nov. 16 (Selig) 492
Newsboy's Luck, A—Rel'd Nov. 16 (Lubin)... 492
Night Herder, The—Rel'd Nov. 21 (Selig).... 750
Nicotine Conspiracy, A—Rel'd Nov. 30 (Lubin) 656
Noble Enemy, A—Rel'd Jan. 4 (Lubin).....1094
Norma from Norway—Rel'd Dec. 13 (Kalem).. 828
Nomadic Tribes in El Kantara, Algeria—Rel'd Oct. 23 (Pathe).....

O

Object Matrimony—Rel'd Jan. 1 (Lubin).....1094
Oh! What a Thanksgiving Day—Rel'd Nov. 30 (Pathe) 658
Oil Country Romance, An—Rel'd Nov. 23 (Melies) 498
Old Sweetheart of Mine, An—Rel'd Oct. 16 (Edison) 152
Old Fidelity—Rel'd Nov. 23 (Essanay)..... 750
Old Billy—Rel'd Nov. 9 (Selig)..... 408
Old Doll, The—Rel'd Dec. 23 (Vitagraph)..... 920
One of the Mashers—Rel'd Oct. 11 (Pathe).... 68
On Separate Paths—Rel'd Oct. 17 (Selig).....148
One on Reno—Rel'd Nov. 2 (Lubin)..... 314
One Way to Win—Rel'd Dec. 25 (Lubin).....1008
On His Knees—Rel'd Dec. 2 (Vitagraph)..... 658
One Touch of Nature—Rel'd Dec. 11 (Vitagraph) 830
Opening Flowers—Rel'd Oct. 21 (Gaumont).... 150
Ordered to Move on—Rel'd Oct. 18 (Eclipse)... 150
Ostrich Plume Industry, France, The—Rel'd Oct. 24 230
Other Fellow, The—Rel'd Jan. 5 (Selig).....1090
Out Generaled—Rel'd Oct. 12 (Selig)..... 62
Outwitting Papa—Rel'd Oct. 11 (Essanay)..... 312
Outlaw Deputy, The—Rel'd Nov. 4 (Essanay).. 314
Outskirts of Paris, The—Rel'd Nov. 14 (Gaumont) 492
Our Navy—Rel'd Oct. 3 (Vitagraph).....
Oyster Industry, The—Rel'd Jan. 1 (Lubin)..1094

P

Pardoned by the Governor—Rel'd Oct. 11 (Eclipse) 68
Paid Back—Rel'd Dec. 28 (Selig).....1008
Path of True Love, The—Rel'd Jan. 6 (Vitagraph) 1094
Pathe's Weekly No. 40—Rel'd Oct. 2 (Pathe)..
Pathe's Weekly No. 41—Rel'd Oct 10 (Pathe) 150
Pathe's Weekly No. 42—Rel'd Oct. 17 (Pathe).. 232
Pathe's Weekly No. 43—Rel'd Oct. 23 (Pathe).. 316
Pathe's Weekly No. 44—Rel'd Oct. 31 (Pathe)... 408
Pathe's Weekly No. 45—Rel'd Nov. 6 (Pathe).. 496
Pathe's Weekly No. 46—Rel'd Nov. 13 (Pathe)
Pathe's Weekly No. 47—Rel'd Nov. [illegible] (Pathe).. 658
Pathe's [illegible]
Pathe [illegible]
Pathe's [illegible]
Pathe [illegible]
Pathe [illegible]
Papa's [illegible] Make Feathers Fly—Rel'd Dec. 932
Painter's [illegible]
Pals—Re[illegible]ost .....
Pat Clan [illegible]Daughter, The—Rel'd Dec. 12 834
Peril of [illegible]merican) .....
Perilous [illegible], Alufort Grange, The—Rel'd Nov. 578
Phoney [illegible]ke .....
(Kale[illegible] N
Pinch of [illegible]. A[illegible] Encampment at Fort Riley, Oct. 9 (Champion)..... 72
Picturesquiun [illegible] A—Rel'd Oct. 14 (Reliance).. 154
P. C.)[illegible] Oct. 6 (Lux) 74
Plot Agai[illegible]ert Tramp, The—Rel'd Dec. 5
Plumber, [illegible]Re 754
Please Re[illegible]-Re[illegible]wners, The—Rel'd Dec. 20
Point of [illegible]—R[illegible] 1012
Politician' [illegible]eam Celebration—Rel'd Dec. 23 graph) 1016
Poisoned Ax[illegible]— A—Rel'd Oct. 24 (Bison)..... 322
Polished B[illegible]ar, ...
Price of A[illegible]tion, ...
Priniepality [illegible] N
(Gaumo[illegible] O
President T[illegible]at [illegible]eam, The—Rel'd Nov. 20 (Essana[illegible] 584
Promoter, [illegible]Re[illegible]—Rel'd Nov. 18 (Powers)... 504
Princess Ching—[illegible]l'd Nov. 17 (Solax)..... 580
Providential [illegible]ead—Rel'd Dec. 11 (Nestor)..... 930
Prisoner of [illegible]xico[illegible]el'd Nov. 30 (Imp)..... 664
Professor's [illegible]ught[illegible]Dec. 4 (Champion)..... 756
(Pathe) [illegible]s .....
Puritan Courip[illegible]an .....
Pull for Shor[illegible]Sa[illegible] P
[illegible]Rel'd Nov. 24 (Lux)..... 564
Quniceville Re[illegible]el'd Dec. 23 (Imp).....1016
Queen's Treasury[illegible]'d Dec. 23 (Reliance).....1014
VI of Fra[illegible]—Rel'd Nov. 15 (Champion). 498
Quick! A Plum[illegible]-[illegible]ustry, The—Rel'd Dec. 6 837
[illegible]uaw—Rel'd Oct. 25 (Solax). 320
Raffles Caught[illegible]Rel[illegible]of the Theater—Rel'd Oct. 322
Ranch Girls [illegible]rib[illegible]. .....
(Pathe) [illegible]—Rel'd Dec. 2 (Imp)..... 754
Ranchman's Daughter[illegible]bition, The—(Rel'd Dec. 2 mont) 756
Ranchman's Dt [illegible]ne—Rel'd Oct. 10 (Bison).. 154
(Melies) [illegible]l'd Dec. 6 (Reliance).... 926
Rangoon, India-Rel'[illegible]irs, The—Rel'd Nov. 23 660
Rebuked Indian The[illegible] .....
Red Cross Mart[illegible]. A—[illegible]el'd Dec. 2 (Reliance)... 754
Reparation—Rel[illegible] Oct.[illegible]ent, The—Rel'd Oct. 31 "Revenue" and [illegible]e Girl) 324
Renegade Broth[illegible], The[illegible]e—Rel'd Nov. 4 (Powers) 324
Regeneration—R[illegible]'d Oc[illegible]v. 23 (Rex)..... 666
Revolution in [illegible]e Ba[illegible]Rel'd Dec. 31 (Republic).1012
Oct. 25 (Pathe)[illegible]ting the National Train-
Reform Candidat[illegible], The[illegible]icago, Ill.—Rel'd Dec. 2
Reckoning, The—Rel'd [illegible] 754
Reporter, The—Rel'd No[illegible]ec. 28 (Imp) 1016
Reason Why, The—Rel[illegible]
Resourceful Loves—Rel[illegible]
Review of the [illegible]ustrian Q
Duke Francis Ferdi[illegible]
(Gaumont) [illegible]'d Oct. 4 (Reliance)... 70
Reformed Santa Claus, A graph) .....
Revenge is Sweet—Rel'd [illegible] R
Right John Smith, The—R[illegible]Rel'd Nov. 7 (Bison)... 498
Rise and Fall of Wear[illegible]aw, The—Rel'd Nov. 17 Nov. 1 (Edison)[illegible] 576
Right or Wrong—Rel'd N[illegible]ct. 6 (Bison)..... 70
Right Name but the Wr[illegible]'d Dec. 8 (Bison)..... 838
27 (Selig) [illegible]d Dec. 30 (Gt. North.).1100
Rival Stage Lines, The—R[illegible] The—Rel'd Oct. 3
Romance of the Desert—R[illegible] 70
Romance of the 60's, A—R[illegible]
Romance of the Mummy—[illegible]Case, The—Rel'd Oct. P. C.)[illegible] 236
Romance of the Rio [illegible]d, The—Rel'd Nov. 13 (Selig) 498
Romance of the Cli[illegible]16 (Rex)..... 580
29 (Edison) [illegible]hen Buck, A—Rel'd Nov. 18 380
Romance of Wall [illegible]The—Rel'd Dec. 1 (Vitagraph) [illegible] 752
Roped In—Rel'd Jan[illegible]Otowers)..... 580
Royal Romance, A—[illegible]'d Oct. 14 (Nestor) 156
Rover is Jealous—Rel[illegible] 21 (Imp).....
Rural Conqueror, A—[illegible]The (Ar[illegible]Dec. 26 (Bison).1100
[illegible]el'd Oct. 14 (Powers) 72

Salt Industry in Sicily
Santa Claus and the [illegible]
Saved by the Flag—R[illegible] .....
Saving the Special—R[illegible]-Rel'd Oct. 20 (Than- 158
Saved from Himself—I[illegible] 322
(Edison) [illegible]ard L(Ambrosio)..... 500
Saving Sign, The—Rel[illegible]Prof. Pr[illegible]Nov. 9 (Rex)..... 578
Scandal Mongers, The[illegible]the Alps—Rel'd Nov.
Scenes on the U. S. Sh[illegible] .....
11 (Pathe) [illegible]—Rel'd Dec. 5 (Re- 752
Scenes off the Coast [illegible] .....
Dec. 26 (Gaumont)[illegible]e of the Pacific— 836 Selecting His Heiress[illegible]an) ..... graph) [illegible]Dec. 13 (Champion) 836
Seeing Indianapolis—R[illegible]oark—Rel'd Jan. 7
Sergeant White's Peril[illegible] 1100
Sealed Confession, The[illegible]Oct. 9 (Imp)..... 76 mont) [illegible]The—Rel'd Dec. 5 758
Secret of the Confessio[illegible] .....
P. C.) [illegible]assage—Rel'd Oct.
Seeing Washington—Rel[illegible] .....
Showing Uncle—Rel'd [illegible]: (Yankee) (Vol. 9) 998
Sheriff's Decision, The—[illegible]26 (Thanhouser)..1014
Sioux Lover's Strategy, [illegible]The—Rel'd Dec. 26 1018
[illegible] (Eclair)..... 1096
[illegible]Comet) 1000

Society Hero—Rel'd Oct. 13 (Yankee) 72
Stronger Man, The—Rel'd Oct. 30 (American) 416
Stranger, The—Rel'd Nov. 30 (Rex) 758
Struck Gold—Rel'd Dec. 6 (Nestor) 834
Suitcase Mystery, The—Rel'd Nov. 4 (Nestor) 416

T

Tale of a Cat, The—Rel'd Nov. 2 (Rex) 418
Tailor Wants to Be Paid—Rel'd Nov. 26 (Italia) 70
Tempter and Dan Cupid, The—Rel'd Oct. 13 (Thanhouser) 584
Tell-Tale Parasol, The—Rel'd Nov. 14 (Powers) 1026
Temperaments—Rel'd Jan. 5 (Comet) 234
Temptations of St. Anthony, The—Rel'd Oct. 18 (Ambrosio) 690
Temptest, The—Rel'd Nov. 28 (Thanhouser) 320
Test of a Man, The—Rel'd Oct. 28 (Reliance) 580
Test, The—Rel'd Nov. 20 (American) 72
Then She Not Steal—Rel'd Oct. 10 (Powers) 236
That Blessed Baby—Rel'd Oct. 21 (Nestor) 1098
Their Afternoon Off—Rel'd Dec. 30 (Nestor) 1100
The Blood of the Poor—Rel'd Jan. 1 (Champion) 1096
The Passing—Rel'd Jan. 2 (Thanhouser) 320
Their Burglar—Rel'd Nov. 3 (Thanhouser) 418
Three Shell Game, The—Rel'd Nov. 6 (American) 238
Three Daughters of the West—Rel'd Oct. 16 (American) 582
That Kid From the East—Rel'd Nov. 18 (Nestor) 666
Theft of Mona Lisa, The—Rel'd Nov. 25 (Great Northern) 758
There Fell a Flower—Rel'd Dec. 7 (Eclair)
Those Jersey Cowpunchers—Rel'd Oct. 4 (Champion)
Through the Air—Rel'd Oct. 5 (American)
Tie That Binds, The—Rel'd Dec. 25 (Comet) 1016
Town Marshal, The—Rel'd Oct. 18 (Nestor) 236
Tommy's Camera—Rel'd Nov. 3 (Lux) 416
Too Much Indian—Rel'd Nov. 28 (Powers) 666
Tony and the Stork—Rel'd Dec. 7 (Imp) 756
Touring Brussels—Rel'd Dec. 19 (Thanhouser) 926
Tom Boy, The—Rel'd Dec. 19 (Thanhouser) 930
Trapper's Daughter, The—Rel'd Oct. 18 (Reliance) 234
Trail of the Eucalyptus—Rel'd Oct. 26 (American) 324
Track Walker, The—Rel'd Nov. 11 (Reliance) 498
Trust Eye, A—Rel'd Dec. 19 (Eclair) 1100
Tricky Trio—Rel'd Jan. 4 (Imp) 1096
True Westerners, A—Rel'd Nov. 8 (Nestor) 590
Troublesome Picture, A—Rel'd Nov. 29 (Solax) 752
Traitor of the Staff, A—Rel'd Dec. 11 (Champion) 838
Turn of the Wheel, The—Rel'd Dec. 6 (Rex) 834
Turntable, The—Rel'd Dec. 9 (Reliance) 834
Tweedledum's Monkey—Rel'd Oct. 14 (Ambrosio) 234
Tweedledum and One of His Tricks—Rel'd Oct. 4 (Ambrosio) 234
Tweedledum Marries an Actress—Rel'd Dec. 20 (Ambrosio) 1100
Tweedledum's Motor Car—Rel'd Nov. 8 (Ambrosio) 498
Two Rooms, The—Rel'd Nov. 17 (Yankee) 500
Two Bessies, The—Rel'd Nov. 29 (Champion) 662

U

Uncle Pete's Ruse—Rel'd Oct. 16 (Imp) 158
Ups and Downs of Rafferty, The—Rel'd Dec. 11 (Comet) 840

V

Van Osten Jewel, The—Rel'd Oct. 30 (Yankee) 320
Vicissitudes of Fate, The—Rel'd Oct. 28 (Great Northern) 326
Views of Montserrat, Italy—Rel'd Nov. 21 (Powers) 580
Views of Lake Como—Rel'd Dec. 2 (Powers) 666
Views of Genoa, Italy—Rel'd Dec. 12 (Powers) 842
Violin Maker of Nuremburg—Rel'd Dec. 22 (Solax) 1014 Victim of Competition, A—Rel'd Nov. 11 (Great Northern)

W

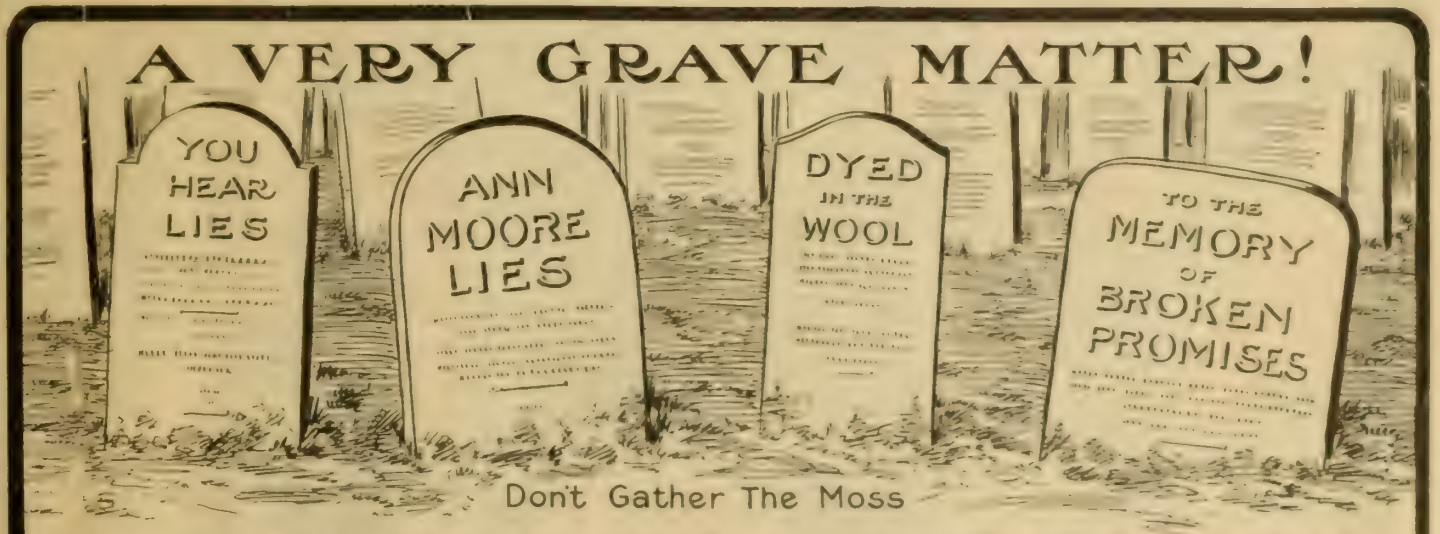
Waif, The—Rel'd Oct. 26 (Imp) 232
War in Tripoli, The—Rel'd Dec. 20 (Ambrosio) 1100
Warrior's Treachery, A—Rel'd Oct. 20 (Bison) 234
Waiting at the Church—Rel'd Nov. 6 (Imp) 414
Water War, The—Rel'd Nov. 2 (American) 416
Way of the West, The—Rel'd Nov. 16 (American) 500
Wanderer's Return, The—Rel'd Dec. 2 (Powers) 666
Weighed in the Scale—Rel'd Sept. 30 (Reliance) 70
Wenona's Broken Scheme—Rel'd Nov. 10 (Bison) 498
Western Bride, A—Rel'd Oct. 17 (Bison) 234
Western Love, A—Rel'd Dec. 2
Western One Night Stand, A—Rel'd
What
When Duke Was Mad—Rel'd Nov. 11
When Mandy Was Lonely—Rel'd Dec.
When the Sheriff Got His Man—Rel'd Nov. 22 (Champion) 676
When the West Was Wild—Rel'd Nov. 29 (Nestor) 752
When Uncle Wilson Came—Rel'd Dec. 16
When Sweet Maria Sounds—Rel'd Dec. 26
White Moonbeam Mine, The—Rel'd Nov. 15 (Nestor) 580
White Lodge's Inspector—Rel'd Nov. 24 (Eclair) 622
White Tulips, The—Rel'd Oct. 7 (Great Northern) 72
Who Was Good—Rel'd Dec. 4 (Imp) 808
Wife's Awakening, The—Rel'd Nov. 9 (Imp) 414
Wife of Pierpoint, The—Rel'd Nov. 24 (Nestor) 666
Will You Marry Me—Rel'd Dec. 23 (Melies) 1096
Wife of Sycamore—Rel'd Dec. 9 (Nestor) 840
Wedding of Willie, The—Rel'd Nov. 14 (Rex) 576
Wilson Peace Convoy—Rel'd Oct. 4 (Rex)
Will, The—Rel'd Jan. 6 (Powers) 1096
Woman's Wit, A—Rel'd Nov. 11 (Great Northern) 502
Wedding and Wooing—Rel'd Oct. 4 (American) 70
Wrong Bottle, The—Rel'd Dec. 26 (Eclair) 1100

Y

Yarn of a Baby's Shirt—Rel'd Oct. 17 (Powers) 154
Yankee Doodle—Rel'd Dec. 4 (Champion) 756
Young Queen of Hearts—Rel'd Oct. 28 (Eclair) 922
Young Squaw's Bravery, A—Rel'd Nov. 3 (Rex) 416

Z

Zigomar—Rel'd Nov. 20 (Feature) 758



WE KNOW WHAT WE'RE UNDERTAKING

THE RESURRECTION OF A DYING HOPE!

SAVE YOUR SOLES and just after Church on Sunday, January 21, 1912, GO TO YOUR EXCHANGE for the first release of

THE GEM MOTION PICTURE CO.

Yes, the Sales Co. has decided that all Independent exchanges deserve Gems! P. S. The Sales Company is preparing for an increase in sales.

Ventriloquist's Trunk, The—Rel'd Dec. 13 (Vitagraph) 830
Vendetta—Rel'd Nov. 14 (C. G. P. C.) 1094
Village Romance, A—Rel'd Jan. 3 (Lubin) 1092
Vitagraph Monthly of Current Events—Rel'd Oct. 17 (Vitagraph) 144
Vitagraph Monthly of Current Events—Rel'd Nov. 18 (Vitagraph) 496
Vitagraph Monthly of Current Events—Rel'd Dec. 18 (Vitagraph) 920
Victim of Circumstances, A—Rel'd Nov. 2 (Biograph) 314
Voiceless Message, The—Rel'd Nov. 29 (Vitagraph) 658
Voice of the Child, The—Rel'd Dec. 28 (Biograph) 1008

W

War—Rel'd Dec. 8 (Vitagraph) 750
Wager, The—Rel'd Oct. 2 (Vitagraph) 21
Western Redemption, A—Rel'd Oct. (Essanay) 148
Western Hearts—Rel'd Nov. 7 (Selig) 408
Western Postmistress, A—Rel'd Nov. 16 (Pathe) 496
Western Girl, A—Rel'd Dec. 7 (Melies) 654
Western Chivalry—Rel'd Dec. 2 (Lubin) 656
What Will Be Will Be—Rel'd Oct. 9 (Lubin) 62
Why the Sheriff Is a Bachelor—Rel'd Oct. 24 (Selig) 226
Who Owns the Baby—Rel'd Nov. 8 (Lubin) 410
Who Got the Reward—Rel'd Jan. 4 (Biograph) 1092
White Brave's Heritage—Rel'd Nov. 8 (Kalem) 410
Who's Who—Rel'd Nov. 10 (Vitagraph) 412
When California Was Won—Rel'd Nov. 15 (Kalem) 494
Why He Gave Up—Rel'd Dec. 4 (Biograph) 746
Willie's Conscience—Rel'd Oct. 21 (Lubin) 144
Wig Wag—Rel'd Oct. 24 (Vitagraph) 228
Widower, The—Rel'd Oct. 31 (Gaumont) 312
Willie Wise and His Motor Boat—Rel'd Nov. 11 (Edison) 410
Wistaria—Rel'd Nov. 21 (Vitagraph) 574
Winning an Heiress—Rel'd Dec. 21 (Essanay) 918
Woman's Slave, A—Rel'd Oct. 25 (Eclipse) 230
Woman's Gratitude, A—Rel'd Jan. 4 (Melies) 1004
Won Through a Medium—Rel'd Nov. 13 (Biograph) 494
Woman Scorned, A—Rel'd Nov. 30 (Biograph) 656

Y

Yann, The Troubadour—Rel'd Dec. 29 (Patha
Young Men's Christian Association, Silv
Lake George, N. Y.—Rel'd Nov.
Youth vs. Age—Rel'd Dec. 12 (C.
Younger Brother, The—Rel'd
(Vitagaph)

Independent Rel

A

A Lesson to Husbands—Rel'd Dec
A Columbus Day Conspiracy—
(Thanhouser)
Actor as a Soldier—Rel'd Nov. 4
Actress, The—Rel'd Dec. 24 (Ma
Adventures of an Amateur H
Aggressor, The—Rel'd Oct. 19
An Unwelcome Santa Claus—
(Rex)
Anonymous Letter, The—Rel'd O
Angel of Paradise Ranch, The
(American)
Apples and Destiny—Rel'd Oct.
As Things Used to Be—Rel'd O
At Daisy Farm—Rel'd Nov. 3
Awakening of John Clark, The
(Powers)
Aviator, The—Rel'd Nov. 20

B

Baseball Bug, The—Rel'd Nov.
Baby Needs Medicine—Rel'd
Bad Man, The—Rel'd Nov. 2
Baby's Choice—Rel'd Dec. 6
Bar Z's New Cook—Rel'd De
Barbara Frietchie—Rel'd O
Barcelona—Rel'd Oct. 7 (Gr
Better Way, The—Rel'd Oct.
Better to Have Remained
(Eclair)
Bertie and His Rivals—Re
Best Man Wins, The—Rel
Before Yorktown—Rel'd
Bill Has a Bath—Rel'd
Bill, Police Cyclist—R
Bill Pays His Debts—
Bill, His Wife and
(Lux)
Bill and the Bear—
Bill Taken for a
Bill and Bertie
(Lux)
Billy's Le
Bill
Bill
Bir
Bit
Bo
Bu
Bo
Br

Breach of Fate, A—Rel'd Oct. 26 (Rex)
Breaking the Seventh Commandment—Rel'd N
16 (Imp)
Broke—Rel'd Dec. 30 (Imp)
Broken Trap, The—Rel'd Nov. 21 (Bison)
Broncho Busting for Flying "A" Pictur
Rel'd Jan. 4 (American)
Brother Bob's Baby—Rel'd Dec. 8 (Thanhou
Brotherly Love—Rel'd Dec. 27 (Reliance)
Branded Indian, The—Rel'd Oct. 7 (Powe
Broken Trip—Rel'd Nov. 21 (Powers)
Buttons and Hooks—Rel'd Dec. 9
Northern)
Bungalow Burglars, The—Rel'd Dec.
By Decree of Fate—Rel'd Dec. 20 (C

C

Caddy's Dream, The—Rel'd Dec. 31
Caught by Cinematography—Rel'
(Lux)
Caves of La Jolla, The—Rel'd O can)
Cattlemen's War, The—Rel'd O
Call of the Hill, The—Rel'd O
Chasing the Rainbow—Rel'd
Charley Buys an Automatic Lig
23 (Eclair)
Chinese War Cruiser Hai-
Christmas Presents—Rel'd
(Imp)
Cinderella—Rel'd Dec. 22
Circumstantial Evidenc
(Champion)
Cowboy and the Outla
(American)
Corner in Criminals,
Copperhead, The—Rel
Cowboys' Pies, The—
Coward's Regene
(Yankee)
Convict's Son
Cowboy Pu
Cowgirl's
Courtir
C
of
Prude, The—Rel'd Dec. 29 (Comet)..1016
Sister—Rel'd Dec. 19 (Powers)... 926

D

Almost Succeeds—Rel'd
Claude Eclair 500
Claude Eclair 662
Rosamond—Rel'd
(Thanhouser)
Meddling
Mexican,
Measure of Midwinter
(American)
Miner's Wife,
Misadventures
Jan. 4 (An
Missing Heir, Th
Up in Sui
Mix (Reliance)
Miss Masquerader—
American) The—L
Miner's Wife, The—Re
Motor Chair, Trail,
Moonshiner's
(Champion)
Mobilization of the Ameri
(Powers) A—Rel'd No
Mother's Faith, A—Rel'd
Moonshiner, The—Rel'd
(American) Series,
Mother Goose
(Champion)
Mutt and Jeff Break Into Soci
Mutt and Jeff Spend a Quiet D
30 (Nestor)
Mutt and Jeff Oct. 7 (Nestor
Mutt and Jeff and the Black try—Rel'd
Mutt and Jeff
14 (Nestor)
Mutt & Jeff Join the Oper
Oct. 21 (Nestor)
Mutt and Jeff Discover a
Rel'd Oct. 28 (Nestor
Mutt and Jeff Nov. 4 (Nestor
Mutt and Jeff and the
Nov. 18 (Nestor)
Mutt and Jeff Scheme
2 (Nestor)

Make Feathers Fly—Rel'd Dec.
ghter, The—Rel'd Dec. 12
erican)
ufort Grange, The—Rel'd Nov.

N

Encampment at Fort Riley,
Oct. 9 (Champion)
A—Rel'd Oct. 14 (Reliance)..
Oct. 6 (Lux)
Tramp, The—Rel'd Dec. 5
Celebration—Rel'd Dec. 23
A—Rel'd Oct. 24 (Bison)....

O

eam, The—Rel'd Nov. 20
Rel'd Nov. 18 (Powers)...
l'd Nov. 17 (Solax).....
Rel'd Dec. 11 (Nestor).....
el'd Nov. 30 (Imp).....
Dec. 4 (Champion).....

P

Rel'd Nov. 24 (Lux)..... el'd Dec. 23 (Imp)..... d Dec. 23 (Reliance).....
—Rel'd Nov. 15 (Champion).
ustry, The—Rel'd Dec. 6
aw—Rel'd Oct. 25 (Solax).
f the Theater—Rel'd Oct.
-Rel'd Dec. 2 (Imp)..... bition, The—(Rel'd Dec. 2
Rel'd Dec. 6 (Reliance)....
rs, The—Rel'd Nov. 23
panics.
el'd Dec. 2 (Reliance)... gent, The—Rel'd Oct. 31
le—Rel'd Nov. 4 (Powers)
v. 23 (Rex).....
Rel'd Dec. 31 (Republic).
nting the National Trainhicago, Ill.—Rel'd Dec. 2
Dec. 28 (Imp) .....

Q

'd Oct. 4 (Reliance)...

R

Rel'd Nov. 7 (Bison)... aw, The—Rel'd Nov. 17
Oct. 6 (Bison).....
l'd Dec. 8 (Bison).....
d Dec. 30 (Gt. North.).
The—Rel'd Oct. 3
Case, The—Rel'd Oct.
, The—Rel'd Nov. 13
16 (Rex).....
k, A—Rel'd Nov. 18
The—Rel'd Dec. 1
owers).....
l'd Oct. 14 (Nestor)
Nov. 21 (Imp).....
Dec. 26 (Bison).
el'd Oct. 14 (Powers)

Rel'd Oct. 20 (Than-
(Ambrosio).....
Nov. 9 (Rex).....
the Alps—Rel'd Nov.
—Rel'd Dec. 5 (Re-
le of the Pacific—
an).....
Dec. 13 (Champion)
ark—Rel'd Jan. 7
Oct. 9 (Imp).....
The—Rel'd Dec. 5
assage—Rel'd Oct.
(Yankee) (Vol. 9)
26 (Thanhouser)..
The—Rel'd Dec.
(Eclair).....
(Comet).....

H. And

Prices

You B

ing Plan styles and prices. Large Stocks

rican Seating Company

218 S. Wabash Ave., CHICAGO 19 W. 18th St., NEW YO

MÉLIÈS

PEDRO CANNOT BLUFF THE POSTMISTRESS

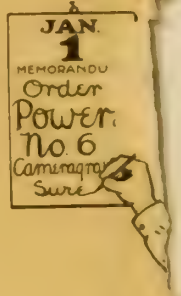
A WOMAN'S GRATITUDE

FAR WEST, in the Copper Country, in the days when a man made his own laws, Tom Brown, a young prospector, saved Sylvia from a brutal attack by her half-breed husband, Pedro. Later, when Tom struck a rich mine, the half-breed sought for complete revenge by throwing the prospector off a high precipice and "jumping" his claim. How Sylvia frustrated his sneaking plot, and to what extent a woman's gratitude can carry her, are the features of this tensely dramatic, thrilling subject.

1-4-12

APPROX. 1000 FT.

G. MELIES, 204 EAST 38th ST., NEW YORK CITY



START THE YEAR RIGHT!

THERE ARE TWELVE MONTHS OF SUCCESS IN THE NEW YEAR FOR THE MAN WHO FORMS A PARTNERSHIP WITH

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6

Profit by the experience of thousands of users of Power's Cameragraph No. 6—the machine that is built like a rock, the machine that runs like a clock, with freedom from noise and absence of flicker.

It is the machine the wise ones are buying. That's why its sales exceed the combined sales of all other machines on the market. Would this be so if it were not the best machine in the world today?

Power's No. 6 has found a home in every corner of the civilized world, and is recognized everywhere as the very highest standard of motion picture machine construction.

You must "deliver the goods" in order to keep your house full, and the only machine for this purpose is Power's Cameragraph No. 6.

Write for catalogue G and special proposition

NICHOLAS POWER CO.

115-117 NASSAU ST. N. Y. CITY

For fourteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines

CAREY PRESS, N. Y.